Alaska to near perfection in Wisconsin, with Idaho and nine other states following closely-behind.

The states, under new federal Taw, must make public the percentage of classes taught by "highly qualified teachers" — that is, teachers who have a bachelor's degree, state certification and demonstrated mastery of every subject they teach.

All states must use that framework, which means the figures-released in response to a Freedom of Information request from The Associated Press – present the first benchmark of the country's teaching corps under the 2002 law, Still national comparisons are imperfect because states set their own standards for licensing and subject mastery by veteran teachers.

Experimental device gives stroke victims hope

Corkscrew pulls blood clot out of the brain

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - One minute Gary Formanek was hitting balls at an Oregon driving range. The next, he was lying on the ground, his left side paralyzed from a stroke.

The only drug that treats strokes didn't help. So doctors snaked a tiny corkscrew into Formanek's brain and pulled out the stroke-causing clot.

The device that saved Formanek from disability, if not death, is generating excitement among brain experts who say the novel technology might finally offer hope for the most devastating strokes.

House GOP promotes progress in Iraq The Washington Post

House Republicans are doing their best to tout good news in Iraq. House Majority Leader Tom DeLay, R-Texas, is announcing a new Web site, which will capture the "real stories and provide one-stop shopping for the media, people interested in what is really happening in Iraq and military groups," said DeLay spokesman Stuart Roy.

The site (http://tomdelay.house.gov/IRAQ/ iraqindex.htm) includes pictures of lawmakers standing by newly minted schools, visiting Iraqis in new hospitals and posing with military personnel from their home states. The site has the headline "Victory in Iraq" and includes sections such as "How Media Deceive You About Iraq" and "Reconstruction in Iraq" and Winning War on Terror."

Alpha Company, 1st Battalion, 505th Parachute Infantry Regiment - were escorting 15 children to school at about 1 pm. when they got out of their Humwees to check a large, trouble-prone intersection for roadside bombs, said Staff Sgt. Rodrick Stallings, a public affairs officer with the 82nd Airborne. "They got ready to remount and there was an explosion," he said. "We're not sure what it was."

Another ambush on the same highway in Fallujah, about 35 miles west of Baghdad, was launched Sunday on a brokendown U.S. ammunition truck. No casualties were reported in the attack, which caused explosionand attracted a cheering crowd.

The unidentified slain soldier to die since U.S. and British forces invaded Iraq on March 20. Elsewhere in Iraq on Monday, soldiers from the 4th Infantry Division beat back an ambush near Hawija, about 5 miles north of Baghdad, and killed three Iraqis.

The U.S. command said there were 15 attacks on U.S. forces in the 24-hour period ending at noon

Monday. On average, there were 17 daily attacks last week and 22 the week before that.

It remains unclear who is behind the continuing attacks in central and northern Iraq and to what extent the attacks are regionally coordinated. Most observers attribute the resistance to diehard Saddam Hussein loyalists and non-Iraqi Arabs who have entered Iraq.

While violence has continued in the so-called Sunni Triangle, the area west and north of Baghdad that has a large concentration of the minority Sunni Muslims who were favored under the old regime, the capital itself has been relatively calm after a spare of suicide bombings. There have been om major incidents since a bombing at the Turkish Embasey killer and wounded eight Oct. 14.

Advocacy group documents civilian deaths

The Washington Post

BACHDAD, Iraq – U.S. forces have killed at least 94 civilians in Baghdad since May 1 "in questionable circumstances" but faced, investigation in only five incidents, encouraging soldiers to believe they can fire with impunity, a human rights group said in a report released today.

"Soldiers need to know that they will come under review in legally questionable situations, and without that in their minds creates an atmosphere where they said Fred Abralians of Human Rights Watch, the New York-based advocacy group. "That accountability helps protect civilians.

"At the same time, this over aggressive behavior and the lack of targeted response in the end makes; throre difficult for U.S. soldiers, because, these civilian sallilips breed such resentments and feelings of revenge." Although the Pentagon and Western news media keep a close count of U.S. casualties, no authority tallies civilian deaths, indig those caused by occupation troops. Human Rights Watch tallied 34 "credible reports" of civil ian deaths from May 1 to Sept. after the deaths from May 1 to Sept. from Iraqi police records, tallies made by other human rights groups and Western news reports that named the dead. The report confirmed 20 of the deaths through direct interviews with relatives and witnesses.

Most of the civilian deaths documented in the report occurred at checkpoints, during raids or when troops opened fire after an ambush.

In one incident, a 20-year-old Iraqi man celebrating good exam scores with a carload of friends ran a checkpoint he could not see because the power had failed. Over his blaring stereo, he did not hear a warning shot or the shouts of pedestrians, a researcher found. He was shot and killed.

In other cases, U.S. soldiers fixed without warning, witnessess said. For example, soldiers mistock; a boy of 11 carrying a bedroll for; a man carrying an AK-47 assault rifle and killed him. In another case, soldiers at a Special Forces checkpoint killed a boy, 14, in one car, and 30 minutes later opened fire on a second car, killing three people inside, including a woman, 75.

A Pentagon spokesman quoted by the Reuters news agency said that U.S. forces went to "extraordianay lengths to avoid civilian cashalites, even at the risk of their own lives" and that "even one innocent death is a sad fact.

Justices revive conviction overturned by 9th circuit

WASHINGTON – A lawyer who told a jury that the man he was representing may well have been a "bad person, lousy drug addict, stinking thief (and) jailbird" did not fall in his duty to present his client's defense, the Supreme Court ruled Monday, thereby reviving the conviction of a Los Angeles man for stabbing his pregnant girlfriend.

The unanimous unsigned ruling was the latest reversal for the 3th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, based in San Francisco.

Circuit Court of Appeals, based in San Francisco.

Repeatedly, the liberal-leaning appeals court has reversed criminal convictions based on a claim of a constitutional violation, only to have the more conservative high court revive the original conviction.

The ruling Monday focused on a lawyer's role in defending his client. The Supreme Court has said that the Constitution guarantees criminal defendants a right to a lawyer, and not just a warm-body. The lawyer must present a reasonable argument in defense of his client, the court has said.—The California state courts said the unnamed public defender for Lionel Gentry met that duty, but the 9th Circuit disagreed. On an April night in 1994, a building security guard at an apartment complex in Los Angeles heard two people arguing outside a nearby building and saw a man stab a woman. A second man fled, and when the guard arrived, he grabbed the knife from Lionel Gentry.

After his arrest, Gentry claimed that he had struggled with the other man, who was a drug dealer, and that he had sunintentionally stabbed his griffriend, who recovered. The trial revealed that Gentry had a long criminal record and had lied about it.

CSI construction projects progress

By Lorraine Cavener Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS - Construction can be seen nearly everywhere on the College of Southern Idaho on the College or souncer.

That construction is just one sign of growth discussed by CSI board members Monday.

After being put on hold for two years because of state budget problems, the Fine Arts Building's 57 million expansion started earlier this month.

A chain-link fence almost totally surrounds the building and a large perimeter of the grounds around it. Access to events in the Fine Arts Auditorium and the class and practice rooms on the building's north side is through the doors at the back or west side of the building. The main front entrance is closed.

The 34,000-square-foot addition will nearly double the building's size.

tion will nearly double the build-ing's size.

Mike Mason, chief financial officer for the college, reported that college officials were overly optimistic about when the proj-ect will be completed. The Fine Arts Building expansion is now scheduled to be completed in February or March 2005. The work is funded by bonds issued by the state of Idaho. The 2,700-square-foot Rick Allen Hall at the Herrett Center or Arts and Science, which will be used for lectures, meetings dinners and other events, is scheduled to be completed next week.

The $500,000 hall is designed to accommodate 260 people in auditorium-style seating, or 230 at round tables for dining. The hall is named in memory of Rick Allen, former president and CEO

The archive and observatory portion of the Herrett Center portion of the Herrett Center project is scheduled to be completed Dec. 15, with the exception of installation of the new telescope. The 24-inch, research-grade telescope, scheduled to arrive in March, will be the second-largest in the state and one of the world's largest handicapaccessible telescopes in the world.

Anderson said the camera will also be a boon to local audiences. The camera will allow images to be sent in real time to people gazing at the dome in the Herrett Center's Faulkner Planetarium or to television audiences. That will make it crucial, Anderson said, for events of short duration such as eclipses, Jovian movents, and the search for extrasolar planets.

TWIN FALLS) The Norman Herrett Observatory, under con-struction at the College of Southern Idaho's Herrett Center

struction at the College of Southern Idalio's Herrett Center for Arts and Science, has received a gift from a Twin Falls couple that will help people enjoy southern Idaho skies.

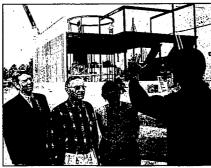

Dick and Jody Shotwell have paid for a highly specialized camera to be mounted on the telescope at the observatory, according to a news release from the college. The Apogee Alta E47 is built specifically to provide research-grade telescopes the ability to send pictures of their images to local or worldwide audiences.

The Shotwells expressed their longtime interest in astronomy as well as their association with the Herrett Center as their motivation for the $10,000 gift.

"This is our way of giving back for all the wonderful education Mr. Herrett provided to the children in our community." Jody Shotwell said.

Crash near Hailey claims two men, horse

HAILEY—Two men and a horse died in a horrific head-on collision of two vehicles on Idaho Highway 75 between Hailey and Bellevue, nine days after a similar head-on crash that killed a school teacher south of Bellevue.

The latest accident occurred about 8:45 p.m. Saturday, Blaine County Chief Deputy Sheriff Gene Ramsey said.

Gene Ramsey said.

Rescue teams worked for three hours before freeing the two dead men from their vehicle, Ramsey said. Meanwhile, traffic was backed up for miles. Darkness also hampered rescue efforts. The accident was caused by a 1970 Chewrolet Impala headed north at speeds estimated by Ramsey at 60 mph or more when it veered into the southbound lane and collided with a 1990 Chewrolet 350 pickup pulling a trailer with four horses. The trailer broke away, ejecting and killing one horse, injuring the other three.

Within seconds, a third vehicle, a 1997 Chevrolet Malibu, glanced off the collision debris.

Ramsey identified the dead as Wayne M. Rahn, 24, of Hailey, apparently the driver of the northbound car, and a passenger, Cumercindo Egoavil, 43, of Hailey, Occupants of the pickup were Clint S. Russell, 24, of Duvall, Wash.; Danny M. Russell, 18, also

ule One in the high-stakes game of college football coaching:
If you're collecting a thick paycheck, you'd better have thick skin.

Coaches and student leaders at Boise State University and the University of Idaho haven't yet figured that out.

Meanwhile, in Moscow, the student-led homecoming committee has put the Ph Delta Theta fraternity on Idaho's version of Double Secret Probation. Members had performed a skit spoofing U of I head coach Tom Cable and the school's notoriety for cloning mules. (We'll let you guess the details.)

Fans by nature are fickle.
And vocal. Armchair quarterbacking is what they do. If fans can't second-guess players, referees and coaches, they might as well take up checkers.

Meanwhile, UI student

Maybe it's tasteless to com-pare Cable to a mule. But with an annual salary of $135,000 before booster contributions, Cable isn't a sacred cow, either. Same goes for Hawkins and any other prominent college coach.

If you're king of the jungle, expect some catcalls.

Asia may rocket to new power

That's the big story of the moment? The latest car bombings in the Middle East? Whether Wesley Clark can hold his lead as the Democratic presidential front-runner? The World Series? If the past is any called the most important centre. World Series? If the past is any guide, the most important events often get little coverage in their own time. To take a most extrem example, consider what was happening 60, years ago this week in he Pacific theater of World War II. In October 1943, U.S. forces, having defeated the Japanese at Guadalcanal, were alogging through the rest of the Solomon Islands.

But unbeknownst to most, America's ultimate triumph was being secured back home in the United States, in well-guarded places, far from the public eye. At that time, late 1943, scientists at the University of Chicago were tweaking their technique for setting off a nuclear chain reaction. Other scientists in Oak Ridge, Tenn., were starting to process uranium into plutonium, and still others were in Los Alamos, N.M., preparing for the Big Test. That first atomic explosion occurred July 16, 1945 – and the rest is history. It's no slam on U.S. combat forces to observe that victory over Japan was clinched by nerds in secret labs back home.

Secret labs back home.

the most consequential events receive relatively little attention, at least at first. One might consid-er two events involving rockets in Asia.

-First-Pakistan recently test First, Paisstan recently test-fired a missile that can travel an estimated 400 miles. Scanty news reports suggest the Pakistanis will soon test a missile with triple the range. In the meantime, mated to contain some 75 nulces. Put the two together atomic weapons, plus a long-range missile program. Oh, and by the way, Osama bin Laden is hiding somewhere in the region.

Pakistan is the only Muslim country with an atomic arsenal, estimated to contain some 75 nukes.

The second Asian serial event was China's success in orbiting a man around the Earth, becoming only the third country to do so. Who knew, back in 1955, that a Chinese-born rocket scientist, one size HSue-sen, a founder of Chinese-born rocket scientist, one risen Hsue-sen, a founder of NASAS Jet Propulsion Laboratory, would prove to be such a fateful figure? Tsien was accused of being a communist sympathizer – and maybe he was. So the United States sent him back to China – and got the worst possible outcome. He took all his knowledge back home, becoming the father of Beijing's rocket program. Thus did a thry story then became a big story today –

gram. Thus did a tiry story then became a big story today – although still not big enough. The potential danger to the United States from sophisticated rockerry plus nuclear weapons in obvious, although one can hope that the Chinese, despite their surging capabilities, have no mon interest in a nuclear war than do Americans.

Americans.

But there are other things a country can do with a rocket – things perhaps even more consequential in the long run. China has said it wishes to build an inhabited base on the moon by 2010, but some Chinese go much further: "Increasing population and decreasing resources on the further "Increasing population and decreasing resources on the Earth," argues the Xinhua news service, "have made it necessary to seek new living space and resources in outer space." If the Chinese are serious about exploring what they call the "fourth frontier," then the human race could be in for an acceptal shift in newer relation.

the "fourth frontier," then the human race could be in for an epochal shift in power relationships. In the Middle Ages, China was the leading sengoing nation, sending ships as far away as India and Africa. But then, in the mid-15th century, China canceled its expeditions; the emperor feared foreign influences. So we can only imagine what the world would look like today if the Chinese had voyaged to the new lands of Australia and the America, planning their flag ahead of the Spanish, Portuguese and English. So now, maybe, the Chinese, having made the colossal blunder of the second millennium by foreign antional expansion, are determined to make up for that mistake in the third millennium for the heavens of course, Chinat space ambitions could be a bluff, merely an excuse for a more powerful missile offense/defense program.

But either wax too few gram.

But either way, too few Americans are paying attention to other countries' advances. And not watching others, and what they do, is a formula for rude surprise. We surprised the Japanese with our 1945 wonder-weapon, but history has proved that we but history has proved that we also can be surprised.

Well, I had to learn more. I found the National Academy of Sciences had warned Congress of the need to upgrade our transmission grid, but the warning fell on deaf ears. I found articles on the Ohio company that reported Euron types of overspending and huge political donations, but no word on Craig's claim of environmentalists causing the problem. So I called Sen. Craig to learn more. I was told that Sen. Craig denies saying these statements, but blamed "environmental regulations in general." Humm, I had to ask which regulations stoppe upgrading to more efficient grids, which would actually save energy. I am still waiting for a response to that.

The Bush administration just rolled back the Clean Air Act for its money donors. What does that mean to you? Well, more than you might think. The coal fire plants were due for cleaner emission upgrades. It is well documents.

Duke Morton can work with citizens of Gooding

Election Day is fast approachin It is time to make decisions bout who will be in charge of about who will be in charge of local government in the coming years. I urge you to attend forums, read campaign brochures, talk to the candidates and generally educate yourself about the candidates running in your local elections. When you have done this and have made your choice, then, get out and support those individuals. With that in mind I would like to lend my support to Duke Morton who is a candidate for Gooding City Council.

No better example of misinformation can be shown than the front page of the Aug. 22 Times-News. Sen. Craig was at the Republican fund-raiser cagerly promoting more nuclear power experiments in Idaho. The article started saying. "The environmentalist community in Ohio is at the root of last week's north-east blackouts, Sen. Craig, R. Idaho, said Thursday during a speech in Twin Falls." The story continues, "Craig explained that Ohio environmentalists prevented an energy company from investing in and constructing a facility that would have prevented the entire region from going down." The Chiefs gave Dick Vermeil a win in his first appearance on Monday night as a head coach since his Philadelphia Eagles played in Miami in 1981.

For the Chiefs, this win took some of the sting out of an embarrassing 24-0 loss in Oakland last Dec. 28, the first time in 88 meetings between the former AFL loes that the Raiders shut them out.

That game, played in a steady downpour, gave Oakland the top seed for the AFC playoffs, as well as a much-needed bye, and eliminated the Chiefs from making the postseason for the fifth straight year.

BOSTON - Police have decided to seek assault and battery charges against Yankees reliever Jeff Nelson and right fielder Karim Garcia for a bullpen brawl with a Red Sox employee. David Procopio, a spokesman for the Suffolk County district attorney, sald police would ask a clerk-magistrate on Tuesday to schedule a hearing to determine whether there is probable cause to charge the players.
He said the hearing would probably be scheduled for November.
Paul Williams, a part-time grounds keeper at Fenway, contends the two Yankees attacked him for cheering for the Red Sox while he was working in New York's bullpen during the Oct. 11 game in the AL championship series. He was treated and released from a hospital after the fracas.
The Yankees have said Williams provoked them.

For Julie Liedman, who runs a free-lance writing and publishing business from her Queen Village home, a high-speed Internet connection has become indispensable. "When I did have a phone connection a few years ago, it was virtually impossible, a nightmare, she said. Her dial-up connections would routinely fail as she was transmitting important documents to printers and clients. When she got a high-speed DSL (digital subscriber line) connections from Verizon Communications inchree years ago, "it made such difference," she said. Swapping huge files was no longer a nail-bit ing experience. ice during the tax filing season that begins Feb. 1.

Jim Todd, AARP Tax-Aide state director, said the organization will help the Idaho State Tax Commission attempt to find more than 180,000 current or former Idaho residents, or their heirs, for whom the state is holding unclaimed property.

"The commission will provide each of our Tax-Aide electronic filing sites with software," Todd said. 'As clients sign in for our assistance, their names will be cross-checked with the state's unclaimed property lists. If a connection is made they will be advised on how to file an appropriate claim."

The tax commission charges owners nothing to claim that property, such as the contents of forgotten bank accounts or refunds of one kind or another that were undeliverable. Meridian, Caldwell, Twin Falls, Pocatello and Idaho Falls are competing with its landline service. But commissioners said cell phones are not the functional equivalent of Operats basic service, and that wireless plans range from nearly $4 to almost $50 higher than (west's basic local rates. Owest officials said they were disappointed and that the decision effectively maintained monopoly ear regulation.

"It's puzzling that anyone would deny, that cellular service comperes with traditional wireline service," said Jim Schmit, Owest president for idaho. "We're frustrated and disappointed because we believe that povertument regulation should not be based on the type of technology used, but rather on the service provided."

Commissioners said deregulation would put the public interest at risk because Owest never contended it would lower basic rates because of the competitive pres-decrease rates without commis-sion approval.

After the official case record had-closed, Qwest officials withou-tered to forgo rate increases through 2004 and then limit increases to $5.60 a mouth for res-idential customers and $9.49 a mouth for business customers through 2007.

But if competitive forces truly existed, commissioners said,

Federal Communications Commission that shows up to 5 percent of phone users are replacing landline phones with wireless phones. Local numbers also show an increase in cell phone users and a slight decrease in local service lines in southern Idaho, Qwest officials said.

It may not hurt to shop around for insurance

Question: I've often heard that it's best to stay with one insurance company so you can build up loyalty and a good record (as in not filling any claims). Is this an myth? Would it be to my benefit to shop around and move occasionally to companies that may seem less expensive?

Answer: Loyalty just isn't what it used to be. When profits crashed in the last few years, many insurers looked for reasons to dipp even longtime customers, particularly those who had filled too many claims or the wrong kind of claims. THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOOK WORT

Nothing seems really to matter, hat's the charm of it. —Kenneth Grahame neth Grahame

Do duplicate bridge players make good rubber bridge players and vice versa? Cood flayers succeed at all forms of the game, but there is more to it than that. We all know that overtricks really matter at pairs scoring, but at rubber bridge, nothing matters more than hausting the success or failure of the contract.

more han insuring the success or failure of the contract.

Take today's deal, where in three no-trump declarer wins the third spade, throwing a club from table. A duplicate player, searching for the overtrick, will tackle diamonds by leading out the suif from the top and cry into his beer afterwards, bewailing his bad luck. Who on earth would have expected East to be long in both spades and diamonds?

By contrast, a rubber bridge player carefully leads a heart to dummy's jack and next plays a low diamond from dummy. If East plays low, South's diamond nine wins the trick, and declarer makes 10 tricks. If East plays the diamond lack or 10, declarer takes his acc, crosses to dummy's play the diamond to his nine. Again, he collects his overtrick.

If West had more than one diamond, the contract would be secure on this play, for if East followed to the second diamond and West could beat the nine with the 10 or jack, the diamond suit would be splitting 3-2. Even after a third round of hearts, the diamond suit would provide an entry to dummy's diamonds, and declarer would provide an entry to du my's diamonds, and declar would have nine top tricks.

ANSWER: Rebid two hearts. Yes, you have a maximum and poor hearts, but you really do not have enough in high cards to invite, and bad things happen to people who rebid five-card suits instead of supporting their partners.
