New program opens private lands to sportsmen

Ilmes-News writer

BLISS - Thousands of more acres to hunt and fish in Idaho have been socured this year.

Access Yest is new to the Idaho Department of Fish and Game. The program has guaranteed sportsmen access to nearly 62,000 cares of private land across south-central Idaho and more than 100,000 acres statewide.

In turn, access is secured for at least 240,000 acres of public land that can be reached only by traversing private property.

A single road leading to three excellent: sturgeon fishing holes on public land runs through Martin Holland's runch on the south side of the Snake River near Bliss. Many people enjoy the setting there inside the Snake River Canyon and underreath the wide-

"I could just put an end to it and put a gate up, but that's the last ching I want to do. ... I think the ground belongs to every citizen to use and enjoy," Holland said.

He asked Fish and Game about options and decided to try Access Yes! Not only can sportsmen continue to drive through his ranch, they also can hunt on 40 acres of his private property. Two small bucks were harvested this year, he said.

said.
Access Yes! property owners may place restrictions on access. All Holland asks is that people pack out their trash.
The program works this way.

Landowners submit bids to Fish and Game, offering seasonal or annual access to their property for a peracre fee.

• A sportsmen's committee of five members evaluates bids to decide if prices are worth the sporting opportunities the land can provide-The committee also considers other factors, such as regional recreation needs.

• Lundowners may stipulate any restrictions, such as limiting the number of hunters at a given time or prohibiting overnight camping. Landowners are shielded from liability.

Landowners are squeet from tability.

Sportsmen are responsible for observing landowner restrictions.
Money to pay landowners has been funded this year by interest earned on a depredation account used to assist landowners faced with property damage by wildlife.

Iraq aid pledges fall short of target

Countries pledge $13B to help country recover

The Associated Press

MADRID. Spain - Iraq's postwar. reconstruction received a boost Friday as nations from Japan to Saudi Arabia pledged $13 billion in new aid on top of more than $20 billion from the United States. But the figure fell well short of the estimated $56 billion needed to rebuild the country, and much came in the form of loans that could sadde Iraq with new debts.
Secretary of State Colin
Fowell and U.S.
Treasury Secretary John Snow

Powell and U.S.
Treasury Secretary John Snow promised to immediately campaign to convert the loans into outight grants. "The United States will work paign to convert the loans into outright grants.

"The United States will work with other nations to get the level down," Snow said at a news conference, while Powell acknowledged the contributions were solicited so arduously it was not clear how many were in loans and how many grants.

Iraq already has a debt of $120 billion, with annual servicing charges of $7 billion to $8 billion.
The Bush administration, mindful of the burden, planned all U.S. and to be in grant form, but Congress is still weighing that. Some U.S. lawmakers favor loans based on the prospect that Traq will be cilich in a few years and able to pay its debts with oil revenue.

Some of the pledges were unusual. Victnam offered rice Iraq, and Sri Lanka gave closed.
Spanish Finance Minister Rodrigo Rato said it raised $33 billion in pledges, including the American money, a figure that did no include export credits, technical assistance or other non-cash aid.

European Union official ChrisPatten noted that past fund-raisrest have experienced long delays in making good on pledges. "We need to get the money out of the banks and into Iraq as soon as possible," he said.

Judge admonishes parents as Utah drops final charges

The Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY – Utah dropped a case of medical neglect Friday against the parents who refuse to give their son chemotherapy for cancer, but not before a judge admonished them for risking the boy's life.

Authorities relinquished all legal action over 12-year-old Parker Jensen after earlier surrendering legal custody of the boy and kidnapping charges against his parents, Duren and Barbara Jensen, for taking him out of Utah.

"If Parker loses his life, you have no one to blame but yourselves," Juvenile Court Judge Robert Yeates told the parents, according to lawyers in the closed hearing. Yeates could have used the medical neglect complaint to renew a chemotherapy order, but closed the case for good.

Still, Yeates said the parents "poisoned his mind" to reject chemotherapy recommended by a string of doctors. Daren Jensen turned back the criticism on authorities while speaking to reporters after the hearing. "The odds are extremely against them," said Mark May, head of the attorney general's child protection division, who explained "you just can't force 11 months of treatment"

Yeates canceled a medical neglect trial that had been set for Nov. 17-19, leaving the boy's far in his parents' hands. The Jensens say the boy' is receiving preventative care from a doctor whose name was kept confidential inside court.

Daren and Barbara Jensen insist the boy is cancer-free after doctors removed a tiny tumor from the soft palate of his mouth doctors removed a trily tumor from the soft palate of his mouth last May. The tumor tested positive for Ewing's sarcoma, an aggressive form of cancer doctors say could reappear and spread rapidly through his body, even though he seems healthy now. The Jensens took Parker to stay with relatives in Idaho to avoid surrendering him to Utah custody and court-ordered chemotherapy. But when hundreds of family supporters marched on the state Capitol, authorities dropped those sanctions.

The percentage of women 40 to 44—those at the end of their child-bearing years—who have not given birth has hovered around 18 percent since 1994, but that's up from 10 percent in 1976.

Non-high school graduates and those with bachelor's degrees were most likely to be childless. Also women with higher incomies had the highest childless rates, in part a reflection of the increased professional options available to them, said David Popenoe, "co-director of the National Martlige Project, a research group" it Rutgers University.

Amy Caizza, study director for the Institute for Women's Policy Research, a Washington thillies thank, said society's attitudes about childless women also hive changed. "Economic reasons are part of it, but it's also the effect of the women's movement, that you don't have to be a mother to be a complete woman," she said.

The Senate Intelligence Committee is preparing a report evaluating why U.S. intelligence about the threat that Saddam Hussein's Iraq posed to U.S. interests exaggerated the severity of the threat. Sen. Pat Roberts, R. Kan., the panel's chairman, was quoted Friday as saying the White House was served badly by the CIA, which provided "sloppy" prewar intelligence.

After the attack, television footage showed U.S. troops detaining several Iraqi civilians, with one soldier dragging a man from his vehicle and punching him repeatedly in the abdomen as he fell to the ground. Another soldier could be seen kicking a detainee in the leg before hauling him from the pawement and leading him away.

Internal Army report details intel problems

The Washington Post

The Washington Post

The U.S. n.ilitary intelligence gathering operation in Iraq is being undercut by a series of problems in using technology, training intelligence specialists and managing them in the field, according to an internal Army evaluation.

A report published this week by the Center for Army Lessons Learned at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., uses unusually blunt language to identify the intelligence problems and to recommend solutions. In discussing the training of intelligence specialists, for example, it states that commanders reported that younger officers and soldiers were unprepared for their assignments, "did not understand the targeting process" and possessed "wery little to no analytical skills."

In a related assessment, the report also states that reserve troops specializing in civil affairs and psychological operations sent earlier this year to Afghanistan received "marginally effective" training before their deployment.

- Report by the Center for Army Lessons Learned,

"The poor quality of mission preparation was inexcusable given that the operation was over a year and a haff old," it concludes. The Army critique of U.S. intel-ligence efforts in Iraq is especially noteworthy because the Bush administration and senior military commanders have maintained for months that more U.S. troops aren't needed in Iraq, and that what is needed, instead, is better aren't needed in Iraq, and that what is needed, instead, is better intelligence.

The report discloses, for example, that the intelligence teams already operating in Iraq have been far less productive than the Army expected them to be. The 69 "tactical human intelligence teams" operating in the country at the beginning of the summer, should have been producing "at least" 120 reports a day, but instead were delivering an average total of just 30.

It attributes that apparent underperformance to "the lack of guidance and focus" from the intelligence efficie overseeing the teams' work.

The report also says that some key intelligence machinery has been misused in Iraq, which raises questions about the high-fect solutions that some at the Pentagon are advocating to improve the US. military's performance in Iraq.

Most notably, it's critical of how unmanned aircraft have been used in recent months. At one point, it notes that one such "unmanned aerial vehicle," or UAV, was assigned to find buried aircraft. Also, a major UAV system, the Hunter, was kept idle for 30 days because it hadn't been assigned an operational frequency.

Managers of UAV operations

Managers of UAV with tasks Managers of UAV operations were "overshelmed" with tasks and were "lucky" to have their air-cruft in the right place at the right time, the report says. UAVs fly so slowly, it adds, that they couldn't get to where they were needed. So, while the planes were employed to try to locate Iraqi fighters attacking U.S. military convoys, "the daily mortar and rocket attacks on bases and convoys became virtually undetectable to the UAVs," the report says.

of Fairfield seriously injured a passerby, officials said.
After hearing testimony during a lengthy preliminary hear-ing Thursday, 5th District Magistrate Judge Jack Varin did not find enough evidence to send the felony case to District Court. Varin did, however, view the evi-dence to be sufficient to support a misdemeanor charge.

dence to be sufficient to support a misdemeanor charge.

After the hearing, Larison was a continued to the Gooding County Jail, where he had been held since his arrest, and was officially booked out and released. He was then rearrested by a Camas County deputy on the misdemeanor charge of injuring another by discharging a firearm.

Camas County Prosecutor
Calvin Campbell put out the warrant for the second arrest and Varin signed it after Larison was released.
Meanwhile, the victim, Donald Ciancio of Redding Calif, was discharged Friday from Saint Alphonsus Regional Medical Center in Boise. According to witnesses, Ciancio – who was in the area hunting with family and friends – sustained a gunshot wound to the neck and suffered paralysis on his right side.

According to court docu-m e n t s , Larison admit-ted he had been shooting a .22-caliber a 22-caliber semiatucmatic semiatucmatic handgun the night of Oct. 7 outside be cabin. He said a vehicle was shooting and that he later realized a window must have been hit.

Among those testifying at the hearing was Camas County Sheriff Dave Sanders, who said police waited outside the cabin the night of Oct. 7 before making contact with Larison and a companion the next morning. Police used a thermal imaging camera provided by the Idaho State Police to confirm the location of the men in the cabin.

Police to confirm the location of the men in the cabin.

Larison's defense attorney argued that evidence obtained by way of the special camera should be suppressed, on the basis that police needed a warrant to use it for obtaining evidence.

Larison was rearraigned and appointed the same public defender, Dan Dolan. Bond was set at $10,000. A hearing on the misdemeanor charge is scheduled Oct. 30 at 9 a.m.

The book is expected to be such a big seller – Doubleday has printed 250,000 copies – that Mormon church-owned Deseret Book on Friday was busy ordering more, said Boyd Ware, the bookstore's retail director. "It is faith-promoting and a tender look from inside the family," he said.

Ware wouldn't release specific numbers, but said the company ordered more than twice the number of books they usually do with a predicted best seller.

In the early hours of June 5, 2002, Elizabeth, then 14, was abducted from her bedroom at Knifepoint. Last March 12, she was found in a Salt Lake City suburb with her alleged kidnappers.

Prosecutors say Mitchell, 50, a drifter and self-styled prophet who claimed God spoke to him, and his wife, Wanda Barzee, 57, held Elizabeth against her will as Mitchell's second "wife" at a crude campsite in the dry foothills above the Smart home until Oct. 8. Elizabeth, who turns 16 on Nov. 3, is in 10th grade at Salt Lake City's East High. For those less interested in reli-gion than new details about the story, there are some intriguing revelations:

Appeals court upholds drug search

BOISE (AP) – The Idaho Court of Appeals on Friday reversed a lower court order suppressing evidence in a drug case because the drugs were discovered through an allegedly illegal the drugs were uscovered through an allegedly illegal search.

The three-judge panel ruled that 4th District Judge Dark Williamson made a mistake when she said prosecutors could not use the cocaine they found in a backpack belonging to Benjamin Reed LaMay.

Boise Police officers went to a local hotel room to arrest LaMay on two outstanding misdemeanor warrants after learning that he was registered in the room. When the door was opened, there were seven people in the room and drug paraphernalia on a table in plain sight. The officers selved all seven to identify themselves, and LaMay initially said his name was Jack Tuttle.

To maintain control of the situation, the officers moved the seven people into the hall, where they continued questioning them and LaMay finally admitted his real identity. Other officers continued to search the room.

Once he admitted his identity, LaMay was arrested on the outstanding warrants. Within minutes, the backpack was found by another officers about 15 feet from where police had directed LaMay to sit in the hall.

LaMay claimed that the search securing the backpack was illegal because it was not in his immediate control at the time it was discovered.

But the appellate court ruled that the officers had justification to arrest LaMay as soon as they opened the door and saw the drug paraphernalia.

A 1996 federal appellate court ruling held that a circumstance justifying arrest "allows a search of the area within the immediate control of an arrestee without regard to whether or not any con-tainers within that area area tainers within that area are known to the officers prior to the

A Mohave. County deputy transported Holm to the county courthouse in Kingman, Ariz, for air appearance before a judge Thursday. Holm was returned to jail and released under a judge's order at 12:07 pm. that same day.

Attempts to contact Holm were unsuccessful. A telephone number for Holm has been disconnected.

Earlier this year, Holm, who has 14 children living at home, and her husband, Milton, won a court battle with the FLDS church, which wanted to evict Holm and her family on grounds that she did not own the land the house was built on. Most residents of the Colorado City and its twin city of Hildale, Utah, are followers of the polyamist church.

A Mohave County judge ruled the FLDS church must allow the Holms to remain in their home of 23 years or compensate them for improvements made to the property. An appeal of the judge's decision is pending. Holm said she left the FLDS church after leaders wanted her then-16-year-old daughter to marry an already married man more than twice her age. When Holm refused to give her consent, an eviction notice was issued to the couple and they left the church, she said. Church officials denied there was any connection between the property issue and her daughter, who married the man after she turned 18.

Firefighters supported by water-dropping aircraft battled flames in back yards in Rancho Cucamonga, where four houses was destroyed Friday.

The fire also reached the outskirts of Fontana and Rialto in the sprawling suburbs about 50 miles east of downtown Los Angeles.

The flames were fanned by hot, dry desert winds of 25 mph and higher, and temperatures reached into the 90s. The fire was only 17 percent contained.

Forecasters said the wind would only get stronger with sustained winds of up to 35 mph Saturday and up to 40 mph Sunday, with higher gusts.

LOS ANGELES (AP) – Wary of powerful gusts fueling wildfires across the region, Southern California Edison warned Friday it may cut power to nearly 31,000 customers in San Bernardino and Riverside counties to protect them from the potential of dead treaffling into utility lines.

The blaze began Tuesday near San Bernardino National Forest and arson was suspected, fire officials said.

and aron was suspected, life offi-cials said.

The utility's emergency plan was necessary because the winds might knock over trees or limbs plagued by bark beetle infesta-tion, which has turned tens of thousands of trees into dead wood and created a major fire hazard. SoCal Edison said it would only cut off power if there were high winds, low humidity and fires were burning near power lines, company spokesman Gil Alexander said.

If the plan were activated, the utility would try to target specific

A modest number of nadleeh have lived openly as transvestites on the reservation for generations, said Harry Walters, an anthropologist who teaches Navajo culture at Dine College in Tsaile, Ariz.

Some in the community now see "nadleeh" as an early manifestation of homosexuality, and use it as a broad term for anyone who isn't heterosexual.

Yet Thomas and Walters said the "Ten years ago, 15 years ago, then years ago, 15 years ago, there was no place for these individuals to go," Harrison said. That the big change I've seen is that we have people who come to our office just to get a hug, to laugh, to wear makeup. Then they wash up and go home and be their other selves."

To celebrate National Coming Out Day earlier this month, the networks office in Gallup, NM, organized a coming out parry at a nearby state park. More than 50 people showed up for the third annual event, which included a drag show and a dance.

No one can remember a formal organization that served homosexula, bisexual or transgender Navajos before the network's formation in 1990. Homosexuality is simply not discussed within the traditionally discreet Navajo Nation.

"It's always been accepted, but deep down it's seen as something that's not normal," Walters said. Some credit the traditional nadleeh teachings for greater tolerance among older generations. Joe said his grandmother, for instance, always knew he was different but never judged or ostracized him.

Still, the homophobic attitudes

Still, the homophobic attitudes that first emerged with the decline of the nadlech pernist today, although tribal members disagree to what extent. Pernall Sam, a transgender Navalo from the small town of Many Parms near Chinle, said the two-inch sear on his back is painful proof. The 28-year-old was stabbed at a party seven years ago by a man who he said used to call him fag" and "quoer" in high school. "They never caught that guy," Sam said. "I still see him around." Countless tribal members stay in the closet, fearing that kind of backlash, Harrison and others said, As a restruction. Joe helped organize the Nas Trillid Hohn, or Beauty Rainbow Project. The HIV prevention group, which is part of the Navajo Callo Sherwork, targets the homozona, bisecual and transgender community. The rainbow is a symbol in both Navajo religion and the Western gay movement.

Beauty Rainbow Project is both important support network. "As far as the gay community of the rainbow and the support network." As far as the gay community of Canyon de Chelly in Chinde.

Pernell Sam said he revealed his identity 10 years ago and will not go back in the closet. "It's too hard," he said.

Sam is dressed in a plain gray cotton top and white pants, his face flawlessly smooth with strong feminine lines defining his check-ones. "all changes from homones he's taking in the hopes of someday getting a sex change. His personal mission is to help other Navajos miderstand. "I have nothing to hide," he said.

Truth can be potent weapon in war on terror | German authors write

se are questions that weren't i discussed two years ago, now they are, thanks in large uure to Steve Schwartz's 2002 , "The Two Paces of Islam: House of Sa'ud From The Ho Tradition to Terror." And now Schwartz expresses further con cerns about the direction of American policy in the Middle East.

JAMES P. PINKERTON

For half a century, Americans lived with the idea that Saudi Arabia was a moderate ally, first in the Cold War, then in the struggle against Islamic millitance. To be sure, there was always evidence to the contrary, such as the 1973-74 Saudi oil embargo against the United States. But for the most part the reality of the Saudis enormous oil wealth, which the United States. But for the most part the reality of the Saudis enormous oil wealth, which the United States had to have access to, and a megabucks public relations operation – which Schwartz calls "the Wahabi lobby" – soothed and smoothed American feelings. So who are these Wahabis, and what's their relationship to the Saudi government? In his book, Schwartz delives deeply into the history of Wahabism, a radically puritancial sect of Islam that came to power in the Arabian peninsula in the 18th century. The Wahabis enacted harsh Sharia law, enforced by amputations, stonings and beheadings. In the 20th century, the discovery of oil within the Saudi kingdom made these medieval minded Muslims into wealthy players on the world stage – without changing their essential mind-set. As Schwartz details, some in the Saudi troyal family, an estimated 15,000 individuals, are notoriously dissolute and decadent in their private lives. But in their public For half a century, Americans lived with the idea that Saudi

U.S. needs to steer away from Bush blunders

Are we to .ake the historic path of other great societies who have fallen by weaknesses from within and later were defeated by vastly inferior enemies? I go that there will always be wars and rumors of wars. Some radicals teach that Americans are conquering infidels and those who die attacking us become holy marryrs. Surely our founders never intended for us to be perceived as such, much less police the world.

By the recent fiasco in Iraq, we alienated the United Nations, causing little and slow world support. Our brave soldiers' role as policemen there place them as fixed terrorists' cargets. Without clear rules of engagement with an enemy, they are too often unable to quickly identify. Their dedication and morale must already be very low as they daily encounter death for a yet-tob-determined time frame.

death for a yet-to-be-determined time frame. We must learn to limit and only participate with the United Nations in future invasions. Worldwide, we must strategically withdraw and more wisely use all our wealth, industry and military forces for our own national securicy. World freedom directly depends on our ability to survive and unite all nations to become free. By squandering our resources, we invite militants such as Syria, Iran, North Korea and others to exploit our wealchesses. Americans will soon you've and, hopefully, remove those responsible for all the many Bush blunders, foreign and domestic. We lives they pose as rigorous, even righteous, defenders of Muslim radition, including the holy places of Mecca and Medina. But wait, there's more. He extreme dysfunctionality of the hypocritical Riyadh regime has forced the Saudis in effect to export their problems by exporting Wahabi ideology around the world. That is, the malcontents in the kingdom – appalled by the royal wastrels, ruling over a sullen but swelling under-population of some 20 million with no rights and not much wealth – have been encouraged to make trouble elsewhere. Case in point Osama bin Laden.

What the Saudis didn't forese was bin Laden's taking on the United States – and that 15 of the 19 attackers on 9/11 would be Saudis. But Schwartz has connected all the dots, accusing the Saudis of being "the real exporters of international Islamic extremism and terror." And since then a spate of articles and books have reinforced his argument; belatedly, Uncle Sam is now scrutinizing the kingdom's reach into the United States, especially its promotion of Wahabi – as distinct from other denominations within Islam – Muslims to be chaplains for our military and also for our prison system. Yet, despite all his success in shifting the paradigm of U.S.-Saudi relations, Schwartz is troubled by other trends he sees here at home. He worries about witch-hunting against innocent non-Wahabi Muslims in the United States; interestingly, Schwartz himself, whose father was Jewist, a convert to Suffsin, a gentle and poetic sect within Islam. And so Schwartz finds himself in an intriguing midpoint. On the one hand, he is fiercely critical of the Saudi-funded apologists who congregate on Washington's K Street; yet, on the other hand, he opposes hawkish neconservatives, eager for war against Syria, Iran and/or Saudi Arabia. Schwartz stands against more fighting. He has a different idea: a truth offensive. He wants the Saudi Arabia to cooperate fully with the ongoing federal 9/11 investigation; the Riyadh regime has so far flasly refused to do so far flasly refused to far so far flasly refused to far flasly refused to far flasly so far flasly for significant to flasly so far flasly for a transformation of Saudi Arabia, but also flasm. But instead the Bush apost-Wahabi renaissance for all of Islam. But instead the Bush deministration, still eyeing Saudi oil and petrodollars, seems blind to the Saudi's continued coverupping. Yet, even so, Schwartz is putting too much faith in the power of truth to combat evil dogmas. But his book is proof that ideas can have more positive impact than guns – which, of course, is a lesson for the United States, too.

No one has come close to Woods' consistency in today's game. The second-best cut streak in the last 20 years belonged to Singh, who made 53 in a row from 1995 to 1998. On the current list, Ernie Els is second with 26. Singh, the hottest player in golf with seven top 10s in his last eight tournaments, overcame his first tournaments, overcame his first tournaments overcame his first bogge of the tournament on No. 9 by playing his next seven holes in 7 under par, including an eagle on No. 7 on the Palm course. Singh finished with a 65 and was at 15-under 123. Singh had a one-stroke lead over Bob Estes (63), while John Rollins (65) and David Peoples (66) were another stroke back.

Korean Tour

YONGIN, South Korea – Se Ri Pak became the first woman to make the two-round cut in a men's golf tournament since Babe Zaharias in 1945.
Pak, the latest in a series of female golfers to play against men this season, shot a 2-over-par 74 on the Korean tour. She is at 2-over 146 halfway through the $250,000
SBS Super Tournament.
Pak, a four-time LPGA Tour major champion, had a 72 in her opening round at the 7,052-yard Lake Side Country Club course.
Pak was tied for 29th place, six strokes behind leader Cho Hyonjoon. Of the 115 players that starred the second round, 63 made the

Champions Tour

SONOMA, Calif. – Jim Thorpe had another record-setting round at the Charles Schwab Cup Championship, shooting a 5-under 67 for a three-stroke lead over

Tom Jenkins and the two-day record for the Champions Tour's season-ending event.

At 14-under 130 entering the weekend, Thorpe bested the tournament's previous record of 131 set by Dale Douglass in 1992 – but the couldn't shake Jenkins or Tom Watson, who remained within striking distance while the rest of the field fell seven strokes back.

With a hole-in-one on the 183-yard 17th, Jenkins leapfrogged Watson for second place with a second-round 67. Watson, still bemoaning his inability to read any greens at Sonoma Golf Club, shot a 66 to remain third, four strokes behind Thorpe. Tom Kite (68), Craig Stadler (68) and Graham Marsh (67) were at 7, under 137.

Funny Cide is no shoe-in at Santa Anita

By Richard Rosenblatt Associated Press writer

ARCADIA, Calif. – Kentucky Derby and Preakness winner Funny Cide is far from a clear-cut favorite for America's richest race. The same could be said of defending Breeders' Cup Classic champion Volponi or Travers Stakes winner Ten Most Wanted. And Mineshaft, the leading Horse of the Year contender, isn't even running.

• Medaglia O'ro, who has done little wrong in taking three of four starts, with a runnerup finish to Candy Ride in the Pacific Classic.

• Perfect Drift, who beat Mineshaft in the Stephen Poster Handicap and has five victories in seven starts in 2003.

Congarce is another horse to watch. Trained by Bob Baffert, the Syear-old son of Arazi won the Hollywood Gold Cup and was sent on the Perfect Drift in the Kontrow Park.

While a speed favoring track, hot weather and possible heavy smoke hovering overhead from nearby wildfires might affect racing conditions, Baffert said the key to victory is simple: "Who has the heart and the ability. To win it, you have to throw in a huge performance."

Divisional titles are also on the line, starting with trainer Barclay Tagg's quest to snare the 3-year-old male championship for Funny Cide, the popular New York-bred gelding who hasn't run in nearly three months.

Weiss wins title; Cohen cruises in short program

READING, Pa. (AP) – Michael Weiss used the system to win Skate America on Friday night.

The three-time U.S. national champion has discovered that the new judging system in use for the Grand Prix series this year rewards conservatism. So he loaded up his free skate with triple jumps and even improvised in the air, cutting a quad-triple combo to a triple-triple.

It was enough to finish second to Takeshi Honda of Japan in the free skate, but with the lead he built by winning the short program. Weiss handily captured his first Skate America title.

"It was definitely different than normal out there tonight," Weiss said. "Doing a triple toe-triple toe is worth only a little less than a quant one triple toe. It's surprising.

"So when I opened up in the air on the quad toot justife Grant for the Honda, fourth attent program, and his spins and footward the short program, and his spins and footward the short program, and his spins and footward the short program. When Cohen heard the other women. But he had too far to go to catch Weiss and wound up at 1992.7 points to Weiss' 206.94.

Earlier, Sasha Cohen won the women's short program.

When Cohen heard the introduction and the applause, left the sideboards - and tripped.

Nice way to begin the season, Sasha. The rising American star quickly made up for her misstep with a fast-paced short program that easily outdistanced a so-so field at Skate America on Friday, Cohen wasn't great, but her combination of speed and precision was more than enough to build a large lead. "My legs and brain were not working together," she said with a laugh of her bobble before the routine began. "But I had the bettine just skating and having fun out there."

out there."
Performing to "Malaguena," Cohen built up speed almost from the first chords and never really slowed. Although she struggled with the landing on the second half of her riple lutz-double toe loop combination, Cohen flew through the rest of her program.
That was plenty strong enough to build a 7.44-point lead over Japan Shizuka Arakawa heading into Saturday nights free skate at the first Grand Frix event of the season.

Cohen, who turns 19 Sunday, took two Grand Prix events last season and then won the circuit's overall championship. She was third at nationals and fourth at worlds, both of which were won by Michelle Kwelzen.

Cohen received 66.46 points under the new judging system being used in the series: 32.50 for her performance. Arakawa was at 59.02, followed by American Jennifer Kirk at 58.68.

Earlier Friday, Tanith Belbin and Ben Agosto of the United States moved into first place in dance. They finished second to France's Isabelle Delobel and Olivier Schoenfelder in the original dance and, combined with a runner-up to Ukraine's Elena Grushina and Ruslan Goncharov in the compulsories, Belbin and Agosto moved up.

Biffle will lead field at Busch event

HAMPTON, Ga. (AF) – Greg Biffle extended his tear through the Busch Series, winning the pole for the Aaron's 312 on Friday at Atlanta Motor Speedway. Two weeks ago, Biffle bilistered the field at Lowe's Motor Speedway in Charlotte, N.C., win-ning by more than 12 seconds, the largest margin of victory this sea-son. He has the same Chevrolet this weekend, and so far, so good – he set a track record with a lap of 192.300 mph. He edged fellow Winston Cup driver Kevin Harvick by 0.037 seconds, and it's the second straight pole for the No. 7 car owned by Joe Nemechele.

David Reutimann accomplished the feat last week at Memphis, with Biffle in Martinsville for the Winston Cup event.
"When Kevin laid down that lap, I didn't think anybody would beat it," Biffle said. "Twe been pretty fortunate to drive a car that handles that well."

David Green, who trails Brian Vickers by 23 points in the chase for the title, qualified third, followed by Casey Mears and Vickers. Bobby Hamilton Jr., Jason Leifler, Hank Parker Jr., Kyle Busch and Todd Bodine rounded out the top 10.

Stocks tumble as Microsoft disappoints

NEW YORK (AP) – Wall Street sold off Friday after a cautious outlook from Microsoft Corp, increased investor concerns that quarterly earnings don't justify current stock price levels. Tech stocks suffered the greatest loss-es, but all three major market indexes notched losses for the week.

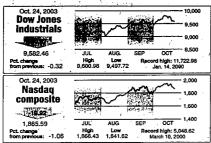

The Dow Jones industrials fell as much as 115 points before rebounding somewhat on a burst of late-day buying. Analysts said investors were looking to cash in gains but were remaining largely upbeat about the economic recovery.

"Microsoft disappointed ... and that took the market down," said Larry Wachtel, market analyst at Wachovia Securities. "That's not to say many companies' earnings came in line or exceeded, but those got a 'so what' response. Those that disappoint, that becomes larger than life to investors."

The situation has only worsened since summer began. What was a labor force with 9,000 more people working in June than a year earlier became one in September with 100 fewer workers on the job than the year before. There were also 5,500 fewer people working than in June.

State economists estimated a 2.2 percent drop in nonfarm employment during the January-March quarter. Analysts said that based on the timing of job losses, their impact on unemployment compensation checks was delayed until the spring, and the spring quarter saw essentially no growth in the ranks of the employed.

A new state economic forecast

"Weaker job growth or actual declines, leading to slower income creation and lesser fyfail-spending, has a negative impact upon Idaho's small businesses," Zions Bank economic consultant Jeff Thredgold concluded in his latest assessment issued earlier this month.

Thredgold expects it will be next year before the Idaho economy resumes creating new jebs, assuming stronger U.S. and global conomic growth. He also suggested that California's financial problems could lead to another flight of businesses from that state and 'Idaho's economy is likely to attract its share of those people."

Many California high-cch companies are expanding in India, China, Russia and Southeast Asia. According to the research firm Gartner Inc, about one in 10 technology jobs will move overseas by the end of next year.

In the past four years, Intel has opened facilities in Russia, China and India totaling nearly 3,000 employees.

"We've said in the past five years that strategically we must invest in those markets that are growing," Mulloy said. "The U.S. work force will remain relatively flat, but we will invest overseas."

Schwarzenegger, who ran on a pro-business campaign, may help reverse the perception that the state is bad for business.

couple of years if all things remain normal.

"Although in this business, things are rarely normal," he said. "But unless something really shocks the system, prices could likely stay strong."

Since 9 percent of America's beef consumption came across the border from Canada, the border closure to Canadian beef and beef products has had a significant impact on the U.S. market.

"A3 percent to 4 percent maket change is considered big," Robb said. "U.S. producers have been given the task of filling that 9 percent."

And producers have risen to the occasion by moving U.S. cattle steadily through the markets.

And, according to Robb, as the market supply begins to tighten, consumers begin to feel the pinch of higher prices at the meat counter.

"Retailers have been able to absorb high cattle prices for a while but just last week, whole-sale prices went to record highs which means retailers will be passing those prices down to consumers."

Robb said he expects consumer demand for beef to remain high.

"Higher prices may affect demand somewhat, but it doesn't mean consumers wouldn't prefer beef," he said. "It's just that they may not be able to afford it. That's when we'll see some shifting over to pork and chicken."

Alaska collects WPA art from the Great Depression

ANCHORAGE, Alaska – With paints and sketchbooks in hand, a dozen artists were sent to the territory of Alaska during the Great Depression to showcase what truly was the Last Frontier.

The federal government wanters to lure more homesteaders and tourists to the territory, which was then a vast mix of wilderness, isolated villages where mail was then a vast mix of wilderness, isolated villages where mail was then a vast mix of wilderness, isolated rillages where mail was then a vast rais of wilder and prometrist prepared to make them an extra set of glasses.

Under a Works Progress Administration program, the artists toured the territory in 1937 – Alaska wouldn't become a state until 1959 – coming up with hundreds of works that were largely forgotten until the Anchorage Museum of History and Art began tracking them down.

Museum of History and Art began tracking them down.
The museum's WPA Alaska Art Project collection has grown from a half-dozen paintings to between 1,500 and 1,800 prins, paintings, drawings and sketches.
"We have most anything we could get our hands on," said Walter Van Horn, curator of collections for the museum. "It is an interesting view of what this place was."

interesting view of what this place was."

Alaska didn't have the professional artists needed for the project, so they were imported from the Midwest, New York and New England, arriving by ship in Ketchikan in June 1937. They were paid a travel advance of $100 and $135 a month.

In an interview before he died in 1996, artist Merlin Pollock said the territory seemed spared by the Great Depression.

"Everyone seemed to be busy

Great Depression.
"Everyone seemed to be busy with the hustle of the fishing industry along the coast, the mines at Juneau and Fairbanks, the farms in the Matanuska Valley, and even the tourists. To me, there was ne oridence of the deep depression that had gripped the continental U.S., "Pollock said.

While Follock tended to focus on the grandeur of Mount McKinley and sport event clint and the state of the said of the grandeur of Mount McKinley and sport event clint and the said of the said to the grandeur of Mount McKinley and sport event clint of the said towns more interesting. One of his works shows docks and fishing boats in a canstral village. Another shows a sailor walking alongside some topsytury shacks in a cannery town. Artist Karl E. Fortess also was more interested in people than beautiful landscapes. He photographed Anchorage's back alleys. He drew fishing shacks with nets drying on a beach.

The body of work produced by WPA artists during the Depression is unique, said Kesler Woodward, professor of art emeritus at the University of Alaska Fairbanks.

"It is a snapshot of American art a very interesting and particular period in history. Artists like everyone else were having a hard time making a living," he said.

Portess reminisced on the trip for the Anchorage muscums Solia naniversary show in 1987.

"Whether we were the right people to send up to document a territory," think, is questionably in a called studie painters, people who worked in their own homes and did things out of their heads."

The artists spent most of their mine in Southeast Alaska and the Interior. After arriving in Ketchikan, they divided up into groups of three. One group went from Ketchikan to Wrangell to Petersburg, before arriving in Juneau. They continued north a Cordova and Valdez, then up the Richardson Highway to Paxson. The group stayed two weeks in Fairbanks and hitched rides up the Steese Highway to see the gold dredging. They got as far as Circle. The group then headed to what was then Mount McKinley National Park, where they stayed 10 days, before leaving for Anchorage where two went on to Seward. One group ended up walking out of Fairbanks because the road was washed out and they needed to get a bus to the McKinley park.

It isn't known how many works the artists completed. They were required to submit a list to the WFA central office. Some of them listed about 70 works, while one artist did not complete any until getting back to his studio.

The works were never exhibited in what is a strange twist given the project was intended to lure homesteaders and tourists to Alaska.

This year, it boasted its collection by acquiring nearly 40 of Pollock's works from a New York art dealer.

Van Horn said during the early part of the search some of the artists were still alive. But later on it involved finding obituaries on the Internet and calling up surviving relatives. He said he's not aware that any of the artists are still alive.

What Time IE 187" isn't just a great song by Chicago. It's the story of our lives.

Come to think of it, so is Chicago's follow-up question: "Does anybody really care?"

Of course, some people do. Keeping accurate track of the time is an obsession with some folks. Keeping accurate track of the time is an obsession with some folks. We way, just in case you were currous, a quick visit to Greenwichmeantime.com reveals that it is, officially and accurately, 630-840, which means that it is 908 here, which means that it is 908 here, which means that it is 908 here, which means that the computer and my watch are precisely correct – if anybody really care, 15 is Anita's obsession with being on time that prompts her to set her alarm clock fast.

"You know that I don't like to be late," she tells me whenever I point out the discrepancy between Anita Time and Real Time.

"Yeah, but you KNOW that you've set your clock ahead." I point out. "I mean, it's not like you've go man trick yourself. So what good does it really do?"

She shrugs and sets her alarm 1ch it is actually 26 minutes earlier than she needs to get up, according to Anita Time.

And so it does. I've never known her to be late for anything. In fact, she's usually early.

she's usually early. About II minutes early, come to think of it. All of which creates a dilemma. At 2 a.m. on Sunday, Oct. 26, Daylight Savings Time will end, which means we "fall back," as opposed to "springing forward," which is what we do in April when Daylight Savings Time starts. Not only does this give us the intoxicating feeling that we are getting an extra hour of aleep (which we all know is a lie because we stay up a couple of hours later than we normally would because we KNOW we get that extra hour), but it also gives us Something Important To Do.

Sometime, either before we go to bed or right after we get up, someone has to roam around the house and set all the clocks back. With all of the electronic girmos of modern living early this good produced the control of the locks back. With all of the electronic girmos of modern living early with its goom IED clock.

living, each with its own LED clock, this job can take well into November. As the family's self-annointed clock adjuster, I usually spend 20 minutes or so planning my strategy. Should I just set the clocks back an hour, or should I set them back to the CORRECT time? This is, after all, my opportunity to make things right, to restore order to clock chaos and, get everyone on the RIGHT time, which just happens to be MY time. But then I think about the confusion that could follow if every clock in the house had the exact same time. Think "Stepford Clocks." Why tamper with a system that, for whatever reason, works? So I'll just move the clock back an hour on Sunday, Period. No tumpering with the delicate balance of time and truth. And if anybody wants to really know what time it is ask.

If anybody really cares.

ATLANTIC HIGHLANDS, N.J.—
Growing up on the shores of Sandy Hooke Bay Mona Elgohull always loved the sea and was delighted to win a slet at a special high school for the study of marine sciences. But the 14-year-old eventually dropped out of the Marine Academy of Science and Technology because of a conflict between her Islamic faith and the school's requirement that all students take part in Naval Junior ROTC training.

As a devout Muslim who will observe Ramadan next week, Elgohal insisted on wearing her hijab, the head scarf encouraged by the Quran but prohibited by the Navy. The school tried to work with her on alternatives—and even exempted her from the ROTC requirement in the end – but she dropped out of the school as a matter of principle.

Barbara Hall, who created "Joan of Arcadia," links the trend to the aftermath of the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11, 2001, which "not pally caused people to start thinking about things in their own lives but about the fact that we were engaged in this sort of battle of religions." The 2003 TV season is the first that was fully developed after the attacks, when writers and networks had had time to mall over both their own feelings and what Hall calls "the parious".

Now, after years in which television danced around the subject of religion, characters in prime-time of masses are tableing to God as well-and they a getting and the processon. CBS "Jonn of Aradia" 16-year-old Joan Girardi (Amber Tamblayn) learns that God (who appears in guises ranging from a cut guy to a cafeteria worker) has plans for her. Thanks to plenty of volunteer labor, the church has been able to hold remodeling costs to around $100,000, Adams said.

$100,000, Adams said.

The workers, many of them retired and able to work on the building every day, have added a 65-by-64-foot addition and a 14-by-38-foot entrance area. About 20 feet was added to the auditorium, noted Adams, who once worked for a contractor in Oregon.

A kitchen stove and chandeller at Community Christian were paid for by recycling aluminum. The rest has been pay-as-you-go, with the church borrowing some money to pay for big-ticket items like carpet and lighting.

These days, people are still contibuting regularly to a church building fund.

is the first that was fully developed after the attacks, when writers and networks had had time to mall over both their own feelings and what Hall calls "the national Zeigeit."

Jegular culture's burgeoning faccination with religion and spirituality extends beyond television. Ministers are preaching from Marix Pinsky's book "The Gospel decording to the Simpsons." Mel Gibson's controversial movie "Pussion" depries the last 12 hours in the life of Jesus, Mitch Albom's following to "Thesdays With Morrie" is set in heaven, and Jennifer Lopez reportedly consulted a practitioner of the Caribbean religion Santeria before deciding

But the new crop of series delving into spirituality are different in tone from both "7th Heaven" and previous dramas dealing with the subject of God, such as CBS "Touched by an Angel." In that long-running, feel-good hit, traveling angels used heavenly persuion and common sense to help mortals turn their lives around. By contrast, the new shows are far heavier on questions than answers.

"Ministers tell me they're loving it," Hall said of her "Joan of Arcadia."

But Linda Holtzman, a professor of journalism and communication at Webster University, thinks TV may be getting into "a little bit of a dangerous area" in featuring so many young people who hear otherworldly voices or even the voice of God: "Kids can be so impressionable. These shows, being so specific about these messages, could be confusing to them."

Some critics have even suggested that by making it seem normal to hear voices, the shows may actually mask or endorse real psychological problems, such as schizo-firenia.

The complaint alleges the school board

Loranger United. Methodist Church sold shirts Friday saying, "Yes, 'Il pray,' school board member Sandra Bailey Simmons said. Louisiana ACLU director Joe Cook said, "The message that was sent that night was 'only Christians are welcome here at this event.' It also sends a very bad message to students that the majority can trump the rights of those in the minority or those who believe in the separation of church and state."

Amy Grant's new CD pleases with well-crafted songs

The Dallas Morning News

"Simple Things," Amy Grant

(A&M) She divorced singer-songwriter Gary Chapman, then married country star Vince Gill. Her opening track, "Happy," conveys how she feels about her new life. It's giftish pop, sweet and upbeat. The title track likewise captures Grant's new outlook: "I dream of simple things I can believe in true love and the miracle of forgiving." Gone is the brooding, conflicted heart heard on the 1997 CD, "Behind the Eyes." This recording offers pleasing melodies and welloffers pleasing melodies and well-crafted songs, though at times the production is glossy. Vocally, Grant relies on style more than power. But it's her candid, often confessional lyrics that hook listeners. "Innocence Lost," with its overnones of a Celtic hymn, explores regret - the pain of mistakes that can't be undone. "After the Fire" is a gentle song about persevering through the trails of life. The fasterpaced "Eye to Eye" captures the difficulty of living out one's faith in the midst of interpersonal conflict. Most of the songs explore deeply spiritual themes without being overrly Christian. This approach makes her music accessible to a wide audience.

Christian CDs

- Susan Hogan/Albach

"Throne Room," CeCe Winans (Wellspring Gospel/INO/Epic)
We get the rationale behind the title of gospel legend CeCe Winans' latest CD. The songs, she said, are intended to "usher his people into the throne room of God." But the name could also be a nod to Winans' status as modern-day queen of gospel. The CD, a beautifully crafted worship project, is the first fruit of a new agreement she has with her label, Wellspring. As a laways with Winans' works, the hallmark of the album is the clear, precise richness of her voice. This comes across vividly, for example, on a raditional rendition of "How Great Thou Art." Tracks 1 through 8 deliver a serving of "worship and reflection," while 9 through 16 are "praise and adoration." Included in the second half is a nifty little ditty called "Hallelujah Praise," a foretaste of the next project on her label, a pop record slated for release next spring. She says "Throne Room" is a concept the Lord put in her heart. "If you are a worshipper, it will take you into worship. If you are not, it will bring you peace."

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

The indefatigable pursuit of an unattainable perfection... is what alone gives a meaning to our life on this unavailing star."

— Logan Pearsall Smith

Sometimes the fates seem to take it into their heads to produce a deal that could have been taken straight from the textbook. In the North American Swiss Teams from a few years ago, this deal was played around the room. It had the aura of a contrived hand about it, with the opponents' cards for once cooperating to the full.

about it, with the opponents cards for once cooperating to the full.

In four spades doubled, the North hand was one card away from a genuine Yarborough, but declarer, Steve Levy of Las Vegas, exploited dummy's meager assets to the full. The defense led two rounds of hearts. Levy ruffed and returned the spade jack!

This puts East in a dilemma. If he ducks, he allows declarer to cash the diamond ace and exit with the 10 to East's king, If East plays another heart, it would be ruffed in dummy. On a passive exit of the spade queen, declarer has just enough spades left to draw his opponents trumps and be able to cross to dummy with his diamond two to play a club toward his king. East actually took West's spade jack with his queen and exited with a second trump.

Levy now won in dummy, finessed in diamond, and drew trumples. At this point he had one trump left. Ace and another diamond to dummy allowed him top play up to the club king for his contract. As North proudly pointed out, his hand had been good for two tricks, "But not quite enough to redouble, partner."

WEST EAST ♠ Q 6 5 ♥ A J 4 2 ♦ K J ♣ A Q 10 4

SOUTH ♠ A K J 9 3 ♥ Q ♠ A Q 10 9 2 ♣ K 3

Vulnerable: North-South

The bidding:

South West North East 2 ♥ Pass 4 ♥ 4 ♠ Pass Pass Dbl.

Opening lead: Heart seven

BID WITH THE ACES

South holds:

West North East 1 ♥ Dbi. Pass Pass 2 ♥ Pass

ANSWER: Bid three clubs. Your ANSWER: Bid three clubs, Your partner's sequence shows a great hand. He is asking you whether you have anything more than what you have shown so far. Without that, you must retreat by rebidding your suit, hoping to get out alive somewhere. Be thankul you have five of them.
