The end of a four-year federal grant to HealthNet will mean organizations like the Boys and Giris Club will have to look elsewhere for funding for creative activities.

Groups try to carry on without grant "Shop with a YAC" (Youth Action Council) program, a spin off of the "Shop with a Cop" program and an arm of the Health Net Coalition. "The family we sponsored did-n't have a financial need,"

"More kids are involved, and we're getting more money from our fund-raising activities," she said. "We've made a lot of improvements over the years." "Shop with a YAC" is just one of many programs that direct benefit from money that flows from the Health Net Coalition, a regional association with six local arms. South Central District Health financially managed the programs etting grants and distributing the money among agencies.

Four years ago, the organization got a four-year federal grant of $350,000 per year from the Office of Juvenile Justice and Designation of Juvenile Justice and $100,000 grant from the Regional Substance Abuse Authority. The regional Health Net organization disbanded last month when funding ran dry. The six local coalitions, including ones in Mini-Carsia, Gooding, Jerome, Lincoln, Twin Falls and Blaine/Camas.

Holcomb, 30, was attached to an Army National Guard unit in Montrose, Colo. that was called up to serve in Iraq. Her husband, Vaughn, an Army tank platoon sergeant, also was sent there. His mother quit the rjob and moved from Akron, Ohio, to Fort Carson to care for their seven children.
After about six months in Iraq, the couple learned that trouble was brewing at home. Vaughn Ilolcomb's exwife was trying, to gain custody of 'two of the children.
They requested an emergency leave. After successfully fending off the custody challenge, an even bigger problem: surfaced. Susan Bearer, Vaughn's mother, no longer could care for the children.
"She came to me and cried. She felt she was neglecting her husband who was having serious health problems," Holcomb said. "She has watched the kids for eight months and uprouced her whole life. I told her I knew the children were my responsibility."

ROCK ISLAND, III. – A bagpiper played "Amazing Grace"

On a gray, damp Sunday morning punctuated by bright flashes of the Confederate flag, visitors to the Rock Island National first monument to 1,950 Southern soldiers buried on Arsenal Island.

"I feel it is something that has been long overdue," said Loretta Finnegan, a member of the United Daughters of the Confederacy and a coordinator of the event. "This is not about hatred or bigotry or poltics or anything like that—It'sabout honoring soldiers, who died lonely and sick after defending their homes. They never even knew who won the war."

The honored dead were among more than 12,000 Confederate prisoners held during the Civil War in the Rock Island Prison Barracks, which opened 140 years ago last month. Many died of smallpox brought to the prison by the first soldiers to be incarcerated there. Pneumonia and dysentery were common.

Conditions in the barracks were brual. Shivering, through harsh winter weather, sleeping three to a bunk in shifts and eating rations that were minimal at best, imprisoned soldiers found life could hinge on the mere possession of a wool blanke, a speaker at the dedication event said. The disease rid, dean facility averaged nearly alundred deaths a month during its two years of operation.

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia — Saudis blamed al-Qaida militants Sunday for the suicide car bombing of a Riyadh housing complex that killed 17 people, declaring it proof of the terror network's willingness to shed Muslim blood in its zeal to bring down the U.S. linked Saudi monarchy. "We have ceremonies there all the time, but this is the first time we've ever had anything like (the dedication of a monument) in our confederate cemetery," said Richard C. Anderson, director of the Rock Island National Cemetery facilities. "Sometimes you get people who want to make an issue of things, and there's been controversy over the flag and other things, but 1-thought this went off well. We're not into rewriting history here."

Finnegan and the Chicago area chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederate army, navy or civil service, spent three years raising funds for the 6-foot-high engrwed granite memorial to the dead soldiers, and saw the project through considerable federal bureaucracy. "We started our chapter three years ago and, from the start, our goal was to have some sort of memorial erected at this certy," she said. "That's all this was about."

The Rock Island cometerers are tery," she said. "That's all this was about."

The Rock Island cometeries are listed on the National Register of Historic Places and maintained by the Department of Veterans Affairs' cometery administration.
The regulations are strict – and identical – for both cemeteries. They govern details ranging from the types of plants that can be left at the individual, uniform head-stones to forbidding anything "degrading to the country." The U.S. flag flies from the main pole at both cemeteries, and all other flags – American or otherwise –

The Daughters of the Confederacy submitted the monument's design and inscription to Anderson for approval lie says he forwarded it to the Veterans Affairs' general counsel.

"This is more than wed ordinarily do before approving a group's plans," Anderson said "I' did it because we'd never had a Confederate ceremony before, and wanted to be sure of everything, but, as far as we're concerned, the group that did it is a perfectly viable organization with a solid charter."

"The monument's wording reads: "In memory of the Confederate veterans who died at the Rock Island Confederate Prison Camp. May they never be forgotten. Let no man asperse the memory of our sacred dead. They were men who died for a cause they believed was worth fighting for and made the ultimate sacrifice. Ernetted by The Seven Confederate Confederate ceremony, Anderson said he urged the UDC chapter to be as inclusive as they could with the inscription. He also had the entire ceremony videotaped, "It's for our archives, because it was so are at Rock Island," he said. "It thought it went off really well."

Some states cancel primaries

Several states have moved to drop their presidential primaries next year, worried about costs in still-tight financial times and wondering if the political exercise. Some say they can't afford the millions of dollars it costs to put on an election. Others say the decisions reflect the lopsided nature of modern primaries: The front-run-ner gets anointed by the media and campaign donors after the first few state primaries and the rest of the primaries are formalities.

The decisions add fuel to the argument that the primary system is in dire need of repairs. In most states forgoing a primary, party-run caucuses will be used instead to choose delegates to the national

Black media barons back Sharpton's presidential bid

The Washington Post

Al Sharpton's bid for the Democratic presidential nomination has so far attracted little support from voters, but plenty of financial backing from a loosely unit coalition of wealthy African-American media barons and impresarios.

Sharpton, the fiery and colorful New York preacher, has been the candidate of choice for business executives such as billionaire cable TV mogul Robert L. Johnson of Washington, Cathy Hughes of Radio One Inc. in Maryland, and hip-hop enterpreneurs Russell Simmons and Scan (P.P. Diddy' Combs. Each has given Sharpton the maximum permitted, $2,000.

Indeed, if not for the financial contributions of the black media establishiment, Sharpton's under-contributions of the black media cestablishment, Sharpton's under-dog candidacy would be even harder pressed for funds. According to records his campaign filed with the Federal Election Commission, Sharpton had spent almost all of the $283,530 had haraised by the end of September. He had just $24,070 cash at that bare, more than three months before the first Democratic caucus vote in Iowa. Sharpton's 5283,530 total puts his campaign in the fund-ratising basement among the nine Democratic contenders.

Up one step from the basement is former U.S. Sen. Carol Moseley Braun, Ill., also African American, who has raised 5341,669. Both Sharpton and Moseley Braun are barely registering in polis in Iowa and New Hampshire, the first two primary states, which have few minorities.

T.F. looks at lowering golf fees

Proposal aims to lure back enthusiasts

An incrosse in fees two years ago at the Twin Falls Municipal Golf Course might have scared some of those customers away.

A proposal by the city's golf advisory board, scheduled for consideration at tonight's City Council meeting, seeks to lower those fees in an effort to lure some afficionados back.

In November 2001, the City Council voted 5-2 to hike some greens fees and surcharges at the golf course to pay for a new sprinkler system and other improvements. The fee increase was supported by the golf advisory committee. Higher fees didn't result more revenue, however.

The golf course has run deficit for six easons, the red ink averaging about $30,000 per year.

Ethanol plant plans proceed

By Lorraine Cavener

DECLO - The outcome of the energy bill being debated in Congress will not affect an Idaho company's plans to move forward with building an ethanol plant, backers of the plan say.

company's plans to move forward with building an ethanol plant, backers of the plan say.

A compromise reached last week by congressional negotiations would give ethanol producers a tax credit while ensuring that the nations highway trust fund doesn't see a reduction in revenues from gasoline taxes. The bill would double the use of corn-based ethanol in gasoline to 5 billion gallons a year, a goal that has the backing of the White House and Farm Belt senators.

"This puts the tax incentive for ethanol on equal footing with every other energy tax incentive," Sen. Charles Grassley, R. Howa, said. "It guarantees that purchasers of ethanol will pay the whole gas tax, making the highway trust fund whole."

But the tax incentive for ethanol producers does not have a bearing at all on whether Magic Valley Energy Cowill go ahead with plans for an ethanol plant in the Magic Valley, compay officials say. Magic Valley Energy is owned by Intrepid Echnology & Resources of Idaho Falls and the Magic Valley Energy Goulton LLC, based in Declo.

SPLIT SHIFT

Rick Baird, airport manager of Feidman Memorial Airport in Halley, has also sorved the past six years as mayor in his hometown of Carey.

Baird shares time between two important public identities

By Pat Murphy Times-News correspondent

HAILEY - For six years, it can be said that Rick Baird has led a double life with two government labs jobs.

He "moonlights" at one job, but, good as he is at it and as much as he likes the work, he's not about to give up the day job.

One reason surely is the pay difference: the moonlight job pays zero, the day job $76,714.

On the third Tuesday evening of each month, Baird, 53, presides as mayor of the city of Carey - population 450 - and as a member of the city council. He relies on a staff of two part-time employees

(a clerk and planning and zoning administrator) for handling day-to-day details from an office in the community center on Main Street that's also used by other

Inc Communa, Street that's also used by other organizations.

Ilis other full-time job is the demanding one – manager of the Wood River Valley's Friedman Memorial Airport, ranked the second busiest commercial airfield in Idaho (Boise's Gowen Field is first), with a staff of 10 and an operating budget of $5.5 million. Ironically, Baird finds thinself involved in growing pains in both jobs.

Carey, an otherwise subdued cluster of homes and a few bustnesses straddling U.S. highway 20 near the southern boundary of Blaine County that became a city just seven years ago, is poised to benefit from an expected boom in tourism created by nearby Cratters of the Moon National Monument, Baird believes.

Monument, Baird believes.
But there's more: Baird, a Carey native, sees the town's demographies changing dramatically.
The significant numbers of senior citizens are being gradually displaced by commuters to jobs in Halley and Ketchum, and Baird sees more families moving to Carey because of its isolation as well as affordable home prices. A growing city means demands for services.
So, while dealing with Carey's mushrooming growth and accompanying issues, Baird is steeped in even larger growth problems at Friedman Memorial Airport the field's governing body is studying whether to build a new $100 mil. It is a studying whether to build a new $100 mil. It is a studying whether to build a leaf studying whether to build a fine to the present Hailey site as well as dealing with demands of a vocal group that want the present field be kent open.

that want the present near or kept open.

But Baird is known for his calm, and juggles both the Carey and airport roles with aplomb.

Gooding gets nearly $400,000 grant for sidewalks, footbridge

By Mickey Walker Times-News correspondent

GOODING — Persistence does pay off, at least it has for the city of Gooding. The city has been awarded a $395,000 Department of Transportation Enhancement Program grant for a project that will begin in 2005.

The project, scheduled to begin in the fall that year, will provide sidewalks along Seventh Avenue West from Main Street to Gooding's high school and middle school on both sides of the street. The grant also will provide for a footbridge on the south side of the canal that crosses Seventh Avenue West.

It was the third time city super-intendent Todd Bunn had applied for the grant.

for the grant.
Gooding will have to contribute in kind matches of $23,000 cash and $21,000 in labor as its share.

Grant applications are judged on the level of safety concerns and the requirement of being in the right-of-way along a road of highway, Bunn said.

"There's quite a bit of competition for the money," he said. "And funding availability depends on how many projects will be select

Many areas along Seventh Many areas along Seventh Avenue West have no sidewalk at all, Bunn said. The winter months are the most dangerous time for students walking to and from school. Bunn said snow is ployed to the side of the road forzing children to walk on the edge of the street on slick roads. The city has known about the conditions for some time, Bunn said, but the money just wasn't available.

Mayor: Don. Danner said he plans to appoint Bruce Bristol the chief of police, effective Jan. 1. Bristol recently retired after working for the Cassia sheriffs office for 24 years.

A number of citizens complained they didn't know about the city's plans for a police chief. Council members said the plan was discussed at several City Council meetings and explained during a gem community team meeting in Sentember. Articles about council meetings when the topic was discussed were also published in newspapers. Citizens also expressed some concern about the cost to hire a police chief. Others wondered if the position is really needed in Albion.

Plans call for reaching an agreement with the sheriff's office to use its dispatch center and nationwide law enforcement services, for example, to check if someone has outstanding arrest warrants in other states.

Danner and others said a city police officer is needed in part because of an increase in midemeanor offenses in recent years and the need for equal, if not more, law enforcement coverage.

"The budget requirement for the community" Danner said. "The plan has city and county support. The appointee is an individual who has the experience and credentials required for the position. Further, he lives here, knows our people, and has been a respected participant in community affairs for years."

First spouse leans toward simpler title of 'Mr. Walker'

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) – Myron Walker is still trying to figure out what he should be called after his wife of 49 years, Olene, was sworn in last week as Utah's new governor. When speculation first hit that he would be flung into the role of the husband of a governor, a first in Utah, he was asked what people should call him. With his wry humor of 75 years, he told the world to call him "husband and lovers had and lover." On Thursday, his wife's first full day in office as Utah's first female governor, Myron Walker tinkered with the idea of hanging onto the romantic "first lover" title but ultimately rejected it.

Staff members at the state Capitol thought they would help his dilemma by removing the "yr" from the spouse's office door to read "First Lat!"

But Walker has now decided on a simpler title: "Mr. Walker."
More than likely, he says, that is what will wind up on the office door for the duration of his wifes

Walker, a retired businessman, joins just three other men across the United States as the husband of a sitting governor.

While the roles of other first the proper of the political involvement, Walker sees his role somewhere in the middle. He said he would be willing to take up a leadership role if an issue sparks his interest.

"I am both ready and capable to serve," he said, stressing he is sensitive to not only the needs that might arise in this new role but the opportunities.

That may mean he embraces a cause in the next 14 months, but for now, he is content to be the No. 1 supporter of his wife, who spent "umpteen" years supporting him. "Olene and I have had a wonderful 49-year relationship," he says. We both, over the years, have had the ability and sensitivity to fill that kind of relationship with support."

Boise planners will consider expanded airport parking

BOISE (AP) - Planners want to secure funding for a proposed expansion to the Boise Airport's parking garage by going to a judge rather than holding a bond abortion.

The process – called judicial confirmation – allows cities to bypass elections if projects are deemed to be "ordinary and necessary" city business.

In the past, the technique has drawn criticism from some judges.

Judges.

Last year, 4th District Judge Cheri Copsey rejected the city's judicial confirmation request for a new $15 million police station. The parking garage project is different, airport officials said, and they have history on their side. Planners said debts for the original garage and new $100 million terminal expansion were both approved by judges. Most importantly the project is an expansion, not new construction, airport finance manager

Mike O'Dell said. And it will be paid off with user fees, not property taxes.

Boise City Councilman Jon

Boise City Councilman Jon Mason opposed using judicial confirmation for the police headquarters but agrees with O'Dell.
"I don't have a problem with that," he said.

"We are 1,000 miles close to California han any other market." Frazec said.

About 70 ethanol plants are in operation in the United States, but those plants are all located in the Midwest or the East, he said. Sixty new jobs paying close to S20 per hour, a $2 million annual payroll and an extra $750,000 annually in tax revenue are also reasons to support an ethanol plant here, Frazec said.

While the cost of initially importing corn from corn-producing states would not be offset by consumption of distillers' grain by dairies in Magic Valley, that would be a great value to the community, he said. Distillers' grain – a byproduct of ethanol production—would not have to be imported by local dairies, if they could get it from an ethanol plant, in their back yard.

Being able to sell the distillers grain quickly should be one incentive to investors, said, Frazee, who spent all day Thursday in meetings in Salty Lake City with a financing company. "They have projected the values Lake City with a financing com-pany.

The governing board's monthly meeting also showcases Baird's style. He provides an excruciatingly organized and detailed agenda, is prepared to provide minutia to any question, and remains unlappable when confronted by occasional controversy.

He's unbowed, for example, by a major lawsult in federal court by California mega millionaire Ronald Tutor, whose 737-size-Booing-Business-Jet-has-been-barred from Friedman Memoriable and the size in the litigation has already cost seven-bundred thousands of dollars and is being watched carefully by aviation interests nationally.

However, complaints have dropped dramatically since Baird introduced a voluntary, but aggressive, noise abatement program that discourages landings and takeoffs during curfew hours between 11 p.m. and dawn.

Baird once the ratened to write a complaint letter to President Bill Clinton if the pilot for Joint Chiefs of Staff Gen. John Shalikashvili took off from the airport during curfew Faced with such a complaint, the pilot delayed his takeoff and four-star Gen.

Shalikashvili cooled his heels. The drive from Carey to Hailey each day may also contribute to Baird's signature temperament — "the 33-mile drive gives me time to put my airport manager face on" and "the drive home to leave the airport behind. I hope doing one job makes me a better airport manager."

But Baird has a reputation from never leaving the airport behind; he's even been known to interrupt a vacation to return to deal with airport problems.

This attentiveness to detail has had a dollar and cents effect on Friedman Memorial's operations,

Baird said that the two air carriers serving Hailey, Skywest and Horizon, have one of the nation's lowest perpassenger-boarded costs of operations – $2.24 versus $16 in some other cities. An example of Baird frugality his weathered 1994 Ford Explorer airport car was traded in for a used 1937 Ford Expedition costing $14,999.

Baird's managerial skills as well as the model noise abatement project haven't escaped notice of peers around the country. Baird has been elected vice president of the Idaho Airport Management Association, is vice president of the National Contract Tower Association (a group whose airports use private companies to man control towers) and is on the policy board of the American Association of Airport Executives. "We've made it a goal," Baird says, "to have an impact on the (airport) industry," noting he doesn't consider Priedman Memorial "just a little airport." Baird's managerial skills as well

Carolina silences braggart Bucs, seize control of NFC South

The Associated Press

CHARLOTTE, N.C. - The Carolina Panthers refused to talk any trash before their game against Tampa Bay After beating the Super Bowl champions for the second time this season, they wouldn't shut up.

Jake Delhomme's 5yard touchdown pass to Steve Smith with 1:06 remaining overcame a late Tampa Bay rally and lifted the Panthers to a 27-24 victory Sunday in the matchup of two suddenly bitter rivals.

The victory silenced the Bucs (4:5) and dropped them three games behind the Panthers (7:2) in the NFC South and Carolina holds the tiebreaker.

"I'll say it! I can't stand them," said defensive tackle Kris Jenkins. "When they pull on their red and we pull on our blue, it's like the Bloods and the Crips. They talk too much, they want to flash Tm a superstar." Well, now that talk don't mean nothing. "We beat them not once, but twice, and I'm going to celebrate while they go home to watch TV."

Defensive end Simeon Rice guaranteed a Buccaneers victory carlier this week, but the defending champions are now left with a rody, road ahead to even make the playoffs.

Süll, not even their third division loss of the season – the Bues lost to New Orleans last week – silenced Rice.
"There's said, "No situation is going to break me," Rice said, "No situation is going to break me," Rice said, "No situation is going to break me," "They thought they were going to win and we thought otherwise," "They thought they were going to win and we thought otherwise," "They thought they were going to win and we thought otherwise," But it was difficult, especially when Tampa Bay tackle Kenyatin Walker called his battles with Carolina defensive end Julius Peppers" (personal)."
"I pay him as little attention as

I pay someone walking down the street," Peppers said, "They were the world champs last year and now they-have five losses. Maybe now we won't have to hear all the talk, talk, talk that they do."

But the Bucs almost backed up their words with a late rally behind Brad Johnson, who threw two-fourth quarter touchdowns to lift them out of a 20-13 bhote. His 23-yard touchdown pass to Keyshawn Johnson made it 20-14 with 10:19 to play On the next possession, facing fourth-and-1, Brad Johnson dumped off an 18-yard pass to Warren Sapp to keep the drive alive.

Keenan McCardell then made a one-armed circus catch at the edge of the end zone for a 36-yard touchdown and a 21-20Tampa Bay lead with 44-44 to play.

The Bucs seemed to put the game away when Delhomme was intercepted for the second time by Tim Wansley, who returned the first one 23 yards for a touchdown in the second quarter. Wansley set up Martin Gramatica's 39-yard field goal for a 24-20 lead.

Surely that would be enough against a team admittedly not built to for comebacks.
Not this time against a Bucs defense that has failed to come up with many big stops this season.
"I'm not going to put the defense on trial anymore," coach Jon Gruden said. "Obviously we let the game slip away at the end." Already playing without Stephen Davis, the NFC's leading rusher and the only real pulse in Carolina's offense, the Panthers had to rely on Delhomme and a suspect passing game to win it. Delhomme stayed calm, throwing a 29-yard pass to Ricky Prochl and then holding steady in a quickly collapsing pocket to throw a 22-yarder to Mulsin Mulammad as he was getting hit. As both teams hurried back to the line, Delhomme quickly hit Smith on the edge of the end zone. Smith was in the air when he made the catch and was flipped over the line by a defender for the go-altead score.

SAN DIEGO - Doug Flutie roved there's no age limit on proved there's no age limit on margie.

The 41-year-old Flutie juked his way to two touchdowns and threw for two more in his first start in nearly two years, leading the San Diego Chargers to a stumping 42-28 win over the Minnesota Vikings on Simday.

The big performance from the pint-sized Flutie and two touchdown runs by LaDainian Tomlison-including a 73-yarder, his longest career TD—injected some excitement into an otherwise dismal season for the Chargers (27).

NFL—A8 It might have also made coach Marty Schottenheimer wonder why be took so long to bench the ineffective Drew Brees in favor of the energetic Flutie, whose scrambling ability has kept him playing pro football for 19 years despite being just 5-foot-10. Flutie's second rushing touchdown might have been his most impressive moment of the day. On second-and-7 from the Minnesota 13, he fumbled the snap, picked it up and ran straight up the middle before sidestepping safety Brian Russell and diving into the end the fourth of the Chargers since they beat Miami 45-20 on Dec. 27, 1993, a span of 153 games.

Minnesota (6-3) lost its third straight game. Danute Culpepper completed 32 of 44 passes for 370 yards and four touchdowns. Flutie was 21-fot-29 for 248 yards and 15 carteries. Fluties first scoring run Sunday was pretty impressive, too. On third-and-goal from the 3 in the second quarter, Flutie dropped back, dodged defensive end Lance Johnstone and then broke for the end zone. He put a Tomlinson-like move on Kevin Williams at the 2 and scored for a 21-7 lead.

HOUSTON - The only thing the Tour Championship settled was what everyone knew all along: Chad Campbell has the game to beat the best.

Chai Campben has the game to beat the best.

Campbell became the first player to make the 1-th Championship his first victory, closing with a 3-under 68 on Sunday to break a tournament scoring record in the PGA Tour's version of the All-Star game.

Campbell finished at 16-under 268 – the lowest score in relation to par in the history of the Tour Championship – to win by three shots over Charles Howell III.

Howell had a 70, ending his

'Skins slip up Seahawks

LANDIOVER, Md. (AP) – Paid to carch passes, Rod Gardner won the game for the Washington Redskins with a touchdown toss. Laveranues Coles, also paid to carch passes, rescued the Redskins as well when he forced a fumble that Randy Thomas recovered in their own end zone in the first half. rst nan. Gardner took a lateral and red in their owar and constructions that.

Gardner took a lateral and threw a 10-yard pass to a wide open Trung Canidate with 1:57 to play, giving the Redskins a 27-20 victory over the Seattle Seahawks on Sunday and calming – at least for a week – the turmoil surrounding the future of Washington coach steve Spurrier.

The trick play wasn't the only audacious call Spurrier made on the winning drive. The coach went for a fourth-and-inches at his own 25, and full-back Rock Cartwright barely made it after a huge hit by line-backer Anthony Simmons.

Coles caught five passes for 125 yards and a touchdown for the Redskins (4-5), who broke a four-game losing streak. Cartwright rain for a career-high 81 yards—including a tough 21-yard rain after breaking a tackle at the line of scrimmage on the winning drive.

Mauresmo, the only player to defeat both Vonus and Serona Williams this year, covered her face with both hands after Heninardenne's backhand sailed wide on her fourth match point. "It is one of my biggest wins, like the way I finished it off and the way I handled the loss of the second set against a top player like Justine," Mauresmo said.

Mauresmo has endured a series of injuries in the last year, including right knee inflammation that forced her to miss last year! WTA Championships and the first two months of this year.

Capriati has been bothered by a hip injury this week, and the pain traveled to her back Leading 3-2 in the second set, Capriati called for a trainer. She received a massage. But she wasn't the same after the medical timeout.

Agassi among elite entering Masters Cup

HOUSTON (AP) – At 33, Andre Agassi refuses to set a timetable for retirement.

He could have one year left or litree. Perhaps more, perhaps less or somewhere in between.

And, frankly, why should he set a limit? Agassi is still among the clitre, ranked fifth heading into Monday's start of the Tennis Masters Cup.

"Every year it gets tougher and tougher. If I can keep myself in a position where my best tennis can still win, that's everything I need to continue," he said Sunday.

"So I get a lot of weeks to try to prove that, and this week would be the greatest proof of it, because you have to beat the best players in the world."

He'll get to work Monday night at the eight-player, season-ending tournament against No. 3-ranked Roger Federer, the Wimbledon champion.

In May, Agassi became the oldest man to hold that spot, thanks in part to winning his eighth Grand Slam tournament title at the Australian Open. But his last half of the year wasn't nearly as productive as the first. All four of Agassi's titles in 2003 came by the spring.

Agassi's titles in 2003 came by the spring.

He hasn't played a competitive match since early September, when he lost to Ferrero in the U.S. Open semifinals. One reason for taking time off: Agassi's wife, Steffi Graf, gave birth to their second child, daughter Jaz, last month.

- SPORTS LETTER

College football coverage last Sunday was poor

Great coverage Sunday, Nov. 2, on one of the biggest days of the season in college football.

No. 2 team in the nation gets beaten, no story; No. 4 gets beaten, no story; Michigan upsets

Michigan State, no story; Notre Dame gets hammered, no story. Nice coverage, guys and gals.

We did, however, enjoy the fullpage ad in the Sports section making the case for dairy.

about 345 million through the primaries.

Dean is well on his way to raising more than that. On Saturday, he decided to decline federal matching funds and spend as much money as he can get his hands on from his contributors

That would make him the first Democrat to follow President Rush in rejecting-public financing. Dean quite likely would not be the last, judging by the way in which the spending demands of presidential campaigns have been growing. No serious candidate wants to handcuff his or her ability to spend money in the late innings of the primary race when that extra boost might mean the difference between victory or defeat.

Money, the political reformers have long argued, is the enemy. It makes candidates beholden to those who raise the cash. But Dean's campaign has shown how a resourceful outreach can turn a political outsider into a major contender of er. Will supporters of Dean be turned off by the rejection of spending caps and public financing? That's unlikely. The public has been casting thumbs down on public funding for years. The number of taxpayers who check the box to have a few dollars contributed to the fund for matching campaign grants has been in decline.

The only galling thing about Dean's decision is how he made it - by polling his supporters by e-mail, regular mail and phone, and doing whatever they tell him to do. One can only hope President Dean won't conduct an Internet poll when it's time to send in the Marines.

Cheney could be a liability for the president s Vice President Dick Cheney an electoral liability for President Bush? Some top Republicans are reportedly wor-ried that Cheney's actions might threaten Bush's bid for re-elec-tion in 2004.

MARY LYNN F. JONES AND THOMAS F. SCHALLER

The dump-Cheney talk proba-bly originated with disgrunded State Department folks, who would like nothing better than to undermine the neocon foreign policy cabal headed by Cheney and Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld. The movement's underlying premise is that the vice president's hawkish posi-tions and statements related to terrorism, Iraq and foreign policy have pur Bush at risk. But even as more Republicans leaves the president vulnerable next year.

Chency is the diministration's chief legislative officer, responsible for shepherding its priorities through Congress. He's a regular presence at the weekly Senate Republican policy lunches. He also is the first wice president to maintain offices in both chambers. As a former House minority whip, Chency is surpassed by few in knowing what makes the institution run.

tution run.

Despite Cheney's unprecedented ties to the other end of Pennsylvania Avenue, Congress has publicly rebuffed the administration on a series of legislative matters. Barring late reversals, the White House defeats will include changes in overtime reg-ulations, the Federal Communications Commission's Communications Commission's ruling on media consolidation and the end of the ban on travel to Cuba, despite veto threats from the president.

Other bills, such as school vouchers for Washington, D.C., and funding for Head Start, have passed the House by a single vote. Several judicial nominees, such as Charles Pickering, have yet to win Senate confirmation. Cheney's role in pushing the administration's agenda isn't likely to get any easier. As Cheney's batting average on Capitol Hill administration's agenda isn't like ye oget any easier. As Cheney's batting average on Capitol Hill drops, moderate Republicans are straying from the White House line. Even reliable members of the GOP caucus are abandoning ship on issues such as the Cuba bill. When that happens, the White House knows it's in trou-ble. Of course, not all of the fault lies with Chency. The White House dispatches other advisers to make its case on Capitol Hill. Party leaders such as Bill Frist in the Senate and Tom DeLay in the House share the blame. But Cheney's own actions have made him an unusually inviting target. He snubbed Congress and the General Accounting Office by refusing to answer questions about his energy task force. The panel, which came under fire for meeting with industry groups, helped shape the administration's energy agenda. The unconhelped shape the administra-tion's energy agenda. The uncon-tested bid by Cheney's former employer, Halliburton, to restore Iraq's oil industry left a bad taste in the mouths of lawmakers whose districts contained other whose districts contained other energy companies. Democrats have attacked Cheney's nearly $500,000 in deferred compensa-tion from Hallburton. The vice president's experi-ence in Washington was sup-posed to balance Bush's lack of expertise in that area. If Cheney, who was elected six times to Congress, can't hold together a GOP Congress for a Republica

Congress, can't hold together a GOP Congress for a Republican president, perhaps Bush needs to tap someone else for the job. In the campaign, Bush needs to be able to point to accomplishments other than his management of Iraq, especially if the death toll continues to rise and his approval ratings continue to drop. With Cheney focusing somuch of his attention on terrorism and Iraq, perhaps the vice president has lost sight of Bush's legislative agenda. If so, Cheney may prove to be a bigger domestic liability to Bush than he is a foreign-policy burden. Bush will have to decide whether he can afford both worries.

'Reagans' furor shows media anemia

The CBS decision to drop the "The Reagans" is more than the story of one misbe-gotten miniseries. It also reveals changing power dynamics within the media.

changing power dynamics within changing power dynamics within the media. In the 1970s, when broadcast TV was at the peak of its power, TV was assumed to the peak of the TV was assumed to the the TV was at the TV was a the TV was a

First came talk radio, then the internet, then the prolif-eration of cable news channels. And it's not just the Fox News Channel (where I am a contribu-tor) that's had an effect. Years before Fox debuted in 1996, CNBC was showcasing different faces, such as Chris Matthews and Call Thomas, talking heads of the type that would never have been hired at the Big Three net-works. The new formula worked; viewers voted with their clickers, migrating from broadcast to cable.

And so the Old Media has continued to shrink. Thirty years ago, one-third of TV viewers watched "CBS Evening News." Today, about one viewer in nine watches the Eye's news.

about one viewer in nine watches the Eye's news.
Enter "The Reagans" into this dramatically changed media environment. From all accounts, the movie, as filmed, was Oliver Stone-like in its distortion of reality. It was filled with lines. "Those that live in sin shall die in sin," "I am the anti-Christ", that not only did Reagan never say, but that were completely out of character for the Gipper. To borrow a plurase, it was not "fair and balanced."

And the new fairs and balanced."

And the new fair-and-balanced cethos holds that if the media can't be trusted to chronicle central to the trusted to chronicle central to the trusted to chronicle central central to the left, as well as the right, agree that it can't – then the best solution is to put opposing voices on the air, so that the audience can pick and choose for itself. A CBS statement declared that the dropped film "does not present a balanced portrayal of the Reagans."

IAMES P. PINKERTON

There's nothing new about boycotts and pressure campaigns. In the late '76s, anti-gay crusader Anita Bryant was hounded out of show biz by liberal protesters. But now, the New Media – more populist, more interactive – have strengthened the activist arsenal. So will agitators of one ideological stripe or another seek to kibosh, or at least reshape, all future biopies? Probably. An incomp of 'The Reagans' controversy is that one of those attacking the movie is a man who once used his own impeccable Reagan reduntials to launch an attack of his own against the real Reagans, Ron and Nancy.

That man is Michael Reagan, the adopted son of the 46th president and his first wife, Jane Wyman, Michael's 1988 memoir, 'Michael Reagan: On the Outside Looking In,' provides a disturbing, albeit perhaps self-pitying, look at his childhood, much of which was spent in boarding school. On Page 89, for example, he recalls a painful confrontation with his stepmother, Nancy, in which the second Mrs. Reagan, brandishing his birth records – which had been sealed by the courts, but which she had nevertheless gotten hold of – sug-gested that Michael abandon his gested that Michaei abanuon i Reagan surname and leave the family home. He was 16 at the gested that Michael abandon his Reagan surrame and leave the family home. He was 16 at the time.

Later in the book, Michael describes how his father didn't even recognize him at his own high school graduation. If the filmmakers had relied solely on such material rather than making stuff up, they would have ham had ing stuff up, they would have hand an easier time defending that an easier time defending their work against the critics.

The Reagans' is headed for The Reagans' is headed for a first, but, given its notoriety, it might well goin cut status in Reagan-hating circles. Indeed, VCRs, DVDs and the Internet could give the film plus outtakes, which might be even more lurid - a long life, and greater cultural influence than it would have had without the controversy.

So it goes with the media: as would have had without the cor troversy.

So it goes with the media: as long as technology changes, the power relationships also will keep changing.

Not only that, but according to Sandberg, most office thermostats are also dummies: They're there, but they do nothing. Clanted, this is also true of some office workers, but that is not the point. The point is that we, as a nation, have been duped long enough by plinny controls.

I have a friend named Ted Habte-Gabt, who – after overcoming a tragic childhood accident that required surgeons to remove several of his vowels—worked for a while in the elevator business (or, as Ted calls it, the "vertical transportation industry"). Ted says that one of the industry's major headaches is the following scenario, which, according to Ted, "usually involves lawyers".

ARMING TO WOOL

High-end fibers could give Idaho's struggling sheep industry a boost

and the Battlmore Sun

BUHL - As she runs her hands across two fine-woolen women's jackets, Rosie Pierce wonders aloud if someone who didn't know better would even guess this fabric came from a sheep.

"It's very soft," said Pierce, seamstress and longtime sheep department superintendent at the Twin Falls County Fair. "At the Twin Falls County Fair." At 259 a yard, it should be."

Pierce may have good news for Idaho's long-struggling sheep industry at her fingertips. This is merino wool, very dense and very soft fibers from animals raised in Texas. New Mexico and New Zealand. There are few merinos in Idaho, but there are plenty of their first cousins, the rambouil-lets, and their wool also is attracting attention.

wool is making a comeback.

"It's been an almost painless

"We've seen wool prices improve recently, and one of the reasons is the appeal of fine wool to manufacturers of outdoor clothing," said Stan Boyd, executive director of the Idaho Wool Growers Association. "They're finding that fine grades of wool are warm, durable and versatile."

"What's old is new," said Pete

That new spin is courtery of merinos, which generate a wool fiber that is less than one-third the diameter of a human har. Merino wool fibers don't have the barbs of traditional wool fibers, which cause the prickly sensation we all learned to hate.

Contipanies that use merino wool won't discuss their processing techniques beyond the arguest terms, but whatever it is they do creates a spun fiber that is machine-washable and doesn't shrake in dryers.

Athletes and hikers were warned that wet cotton clothing wicked away body warmth, which could lead to hypothermia. "Cotton kills," became the anti-natural message, and wool was somehow implicated.

Gardner Flanigan, a spokesman for Smartwool, a spokesman for Smartwool and Spokesman for Smartwool and Spokesman for Smartwool and produced outdoor clothing maker, admits wool clothing manufacturers "dida" do a good job of marketing against synthetics. DuPont and others made people believe they can't live without synthetics. But the synthetics have their own dark side, and you can smell it a mile away. Plastic fibers wick sweat away from skin, and while the moisture evaporates, the malodor lingers.

Of course, wool isn't without its problems either – for one thing, clothing made from merino and rambouillet wool is about 30 percent more expensive. Cheaper grades of wool remain, somewhat blurring the differences between the itchy stuff and merino. But most manufacturers who use merino wool trumpet the fact, reducing the chance that consumers will have the wool pulled over their eyes.

N. Mexico textiles inspire

Out of the arid ground of New Mexico emerges some of the best fiber art in the country. I, along with 30 members of the Creative Clothing Club of Michigan can attest to that, having just returned from a trip to Santa Fe full of new ideas and inspiration.

First we were treated to a presentation of jackets by prize-winning artist and teacher Jan Brooks of Prickly Pear Artwear in Rio Rancho. She described the varied sewing techniques used in her colorful work, many with Southwestern motifs. Included were serging, quilting, Seminole patchwork, cauching, Sashiko stiching and machine embroidery. Her e-mail is pricklypear-artwear@msn.com.

At the Blue Rose Studio in Madrid, we saw a demonstration of silk-screening on cotton. The shop has custom-printed fabrics, garments and accessories. For more, contact bluerose? 89 juno.com.

One of the most interesting visits was at Tierra Wooks, a co-op company set in the historic village of Los Ojos. We watched weavers, spinners and dyers at wook, preserving an old Hispanic tradition. Their yarns, and woven products, from the Spanish Churro sheep, are available through www.handweavers.com.

At the wonderful Museum of International Folk Art in Santa Fe, we viewed a private collection called a Gathering Threads. These textiles showed a variety of materials, colors and designs in work from around the world.

Two outstanding fabric stores (we had to bring home some new fabrics to sew!) were Common Threads in Taos, specializing in silks, velvets and batiks, and Creative Textiles in Santa Fe, with superior fabrics, trims and buttons.
Galleries and wearable art shops were abundant, too. On Canyon Road we all loved the Thirteen Moons Gallery, a century old adobe with a superb exhibit of contemporary fiber art. There were art quilts, fiber vessets, beaded pieces, wall hangings and more. Click on www.thirteenmoons.gallery.com.

The state is a meat producer, and wool accounted for less than $1.5 million in sales in 2002, the last year for which statistics are available. "It's a niche market, and the buyers are likely to be foreign mills," Boyd said.

That's because fewer than a -half dozen domestic woolen mills remain. The big players in the woolen textles industry nowadays are China and India.

But companies like Woolrich, Patagonia, Ibexwear and Smartwool are scouring the globe for the golden fleece, and happy to pay when they find it.

"I can't foresee a time when Idaho won't be predominately a meat-raising state," Boyd said. "But there's no question that

"Free" TRUST SEMINARS

QUESTION: What do you think of the "free" trust semi-nars that roll through town every now and then?

Almost invariably, traveling trust vendors play on their atten-dees' fear and lack of information on how ideho's legal system ruly works. Trust promoters have one objective – to soil trusts. Those operations run much like the traveling medicine show of days past.

Those operations run much like the traveling medicine show or days past.

Trusts have their place in estate planning, but they should be utilized only after a judicious weighing of true needs and objectives. Unlike California, Idaho jass an griciont system (probate) for settling estates simply and inexpensively. There are no percentage fee schedules for lawyers or executors.

Modicial? Trusts are no paneces for Modicial eligibility and long-term-care cost concerns. Death Taxes? individuals dying in year 2004 with an estate valued at less than one and a half million döllars have no doath tax concerns unless they have made substantial lifetime gits.

For helpful pamphiets on cautions when buying trust kits from trust vendors call the CSI Office of Aging (738-2122) or he Idaho Attorney General (1-800-432-4345). Call our office for a copy of a Reader's Digest article describing idaho's innovative probate registern.

Like my buddy Arnold Taylor. He danced through what must have been two of the grimmest periods of his youth the Great Depression and World War II.

been two of the grimmest periods of his youth the Great Depression and World War II.

But when he tells stories about his past in his usual animated fashion, he's generally talking about how he and his sister showed off their dance moves in the Grange halls of western Massachusetts during the 1930s. Or about spending weekends in England in the 1940s hitting on girls at dances featuring the music of Tommy Dorsey and Duke Ellington.

Who knows why some things—dance steps or brain power—come back, while others never do?

While science tries to identify whether it's the drugs we take, the diet we eat or the dances we do, maybe the sensible thing to do to stave off dementin is to hit the dance floor. It may not work, but it's lots of fun.

new staff members

Buhl High School continues its tradition of excellence this fall with more than 10 new additions to our staff.

Some call home as far away as Pennsylvania, while others have moved across the state. They all share one thing – the love of teaching.

Mitch Oparnico, the new P.E. teacher and assistant football coach at Bull; said that he loves everything about Bull. But the one thing he notices the most is the good attitude each student shares.

the good attitude each student shares.

"They always come to class with a pleasant face, willing to try something new," he said.

Other new staff members include Jon Bair, physical science; Candy Atkins, band; Davm Bunn, sophomore English; Holen Cutler, home economics, Aracelly Hodge, English as second language; Angela Hoops, counselor, Andrew Moretto, Spanish; Karen Peterson, US, historyleconomics; and Phyllis Quayle, biology, A very important new face is our principal, Gary Moon, Mr. Moon was the athlehet director at Buhl for one yean and then took over the reins after Terry Adolfson took a job in Meridian. Mr. Moon has been working vigorously these first months. He displays an unsurpassed amount of leadership for students and staff to follow. Not only a true leader, but a friend. We feel lucky to have him.

We welcome all of our new staff. They are all helping to continue the tradition of Tribe Pride.
Fall sports wrapped up for this 2003d4 school year. That means that winter sports are just around the comer. Remember if you need any new Indian Ian gear, contact the high school because seat cashions, pennants, foum hands aim megaphones are all available from the student council.
The Club of the Month for October is the FFA. The president this year is Tyler Minc. Other officers are vice president Garrison that year is Tyler Minc. Other officers are vice president Garrison Fleringer, secretary Anthony Tomkins, student adviser Wayne Hanock, sentinel Casey Fairchild, treasurer Shawn Carter, Far activity during October was its annual haunted house. Earlier this fall, the chapter placed second in state as a team in the focusty competition. Bulh had a vector of the adviser.

Hansen students make a trip back into history HUSKIES UNLEASHED

The state of Idaho requires eighth-grade social studies classes to take an exploratory approach to learning. Part of this approach is to visit a local historical sight. Hansen's eighth-graders plan to visit the Stricker Stere, which is 6 miles out of town, to help with community service work later this month.

"For hundreds of years, pio-Jessica Johnson neers have passed through this area. It used to be a part of the area. It used to be a part of the Oregon trail as a store and stage stop. At one point, almost every western culture passed through this area: the Chinese, Native Americans and America's east-ern and mid-western people," said Principal Rick Abel about esite. The Friends of the Stricker

The Friends of the Stricker have made it possible for the eighth-graders to help with minor maintenance, ground keeping, helping set up and clean up after special occasions, create a video or digital presentation to advertise the store and a complete historical research on the site. This project will present history in a real way, provide community service opportunities and show the students the significance of the Stricker Store.

Hansen High School student Jessica Johnson initiated and pub-lishes the school newspaper.

Friend bearing bad news seems too eager

DEAR ABBY: My close friend, "Denise," tells me when others say something derogatory about me. Some examples:

say something usonomme. Some examples:
Denise was recently in a restaurant with "Martha," a mutual friend, when bappened to enter. Denise said that Martha laughed and made fun of me when she saw me. Another time, a woman I'll call Lorraine invited Denise to a party but didn't control to the control of the told the control of the contr awoman Til call Lorraine invited Denise to a party but didn't invite me. Denise said she told Lorraine she wouldn't attend unless I were also invited. Lorraine relented and reluctantly invited me, although Denise said she really didn't want to. There have been other incidents when people said unflattering things about me to Denise, and Denise reported them to me. Why? I never tell her when I hear, something uncomplimentary about her because I don't want to hirt her feelings. Why do you suppose she feels compelled to bring me "bad news" about myself? Your opinion is appreciated.

—HURTING

- HURTING IN MINNEAPOLIS DEAR HURTING: She does it

DEAR HURTING's She does it because she gets, a perverse pleasure out of hurring you. A more important question is: Why do you folerate it? So-called "friends" have been known or make, up unkind things out of whole cloth in order to isolate people from their other friends. If I were you, I'd start asking the individuals she reports are badmouthing you if what she said is a large individuals she reports are badmouthing you if what she said is I advise you to keep Denise at arm's length. She personifies the old saving, "It takes an enemy and a friend working together to hurry you length you and the friend to get the news to you."

DEAR ABBY: All my life, I have been unbearably shy. I have porting to me, you have already taken the first step in copin with your problem - so don't be stby. You're on the right track.

I have several suggestions to offer. The first is simple. Write down, in advance, some topics to discuss with your co-workers and take the list with you.

If your mind goes blank, consult the list. Believe me, you are not the only person to whom this happens.

not the only person to whom this happens.

If that isn't enough to get the ball rolling, consider that you might suffer from a social anxiety disorder.

A psychologist can help you overcome it with counseling and medications. Enough people suffer from social anxiety disorders that online support groups have been formed to provide help. Members. and. com/cybernetur/shy mess. huml offers information to help overcome shyness, as well as tips on job hunting, assertiveness and dating.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

Bobby Wolff-

"The test of a real comedian is whether you laugh at him before he opens his mouth."
— George Jean Nathan

The Fall Nationals start this week in New Orleans, and to mark the occasion, here are some deals from last year's event in Phoenix.

Dave Treadwell and Paul Soloway won the first pairs event of the championships, and Treadwell, a stand-up comedian by temperament, said today's deal was his idea of a well-defended hand. "I had a two-count and followed suit nine times, then declarer led a card to me, and I claimed the rest."

suit nine times, then declarer ica a card to me, and I claimed the rest."

Of course there was a little more to the story than that. South declared one no-trump, and Soloway, West, led the heart king, ducked all around. His spade shift went to the queen and king. Declarer now played a low club to dummy's jack, and another club went to declarer's queen and Soloway's acc. Soloway continued with a spade to dummy's ace. A diamond went to declarer's queen and Soloway's acc.

Soloway now led his last spade and declarer won his jack. Declarer cashed the club king and led a diamond, at which point Soloway made the critical play for the defense when he rose with his jack to avoid getting endplayed to open up hearts. Declarer took dummy's diamond king and now could have easted his heart bee to make his contract. However, since it was a pairs event. South longed that Soloway held the diamond to and would be forced to add into the heart tenace. Accordingly, declarer led dummy's last diamond, and Treadwell claimed the last four tricks. His wo diamonds, spade 10, and club nine were all high.

ANSWER: Lead the spade four. The spade suit looks like your side's best shot to beat the game side's best since dummy figures to produce four spades, you cannot afford to lead a top spade and crash partner's singleton or dou-bleton honor.
