CHICAGO – Women with common, usually nonfattal forms of skin cancer face double the risk of having unrelated canners, according to a large study, suggesting that the initial diagnosis may be more worrisome than previously thought. The skin cancer link was found for several malignancies, including cancer of the brain, breasts, lung, liver, ovaries and uterus.

Previous studies have shown that men and women with skin cancer face an increased risk of skin cancer returning. Some studies also have found that people with non-melanoma skin cancer are prone to later developing non-skin cancers.

BAGHDAD, Iraq - Police Gen.
Ahmed Ibrahim gathered hundreds of his men at a ceremony at the Police Academy here last week to tell them a few truths about the enemy they face. The Saddam Hussein regime let its people suffer, he reminded them, cheers. But the subtext of the pep talk was disturbing: Seven months after Saddam's fall, the top local police leader still believes his men need to be con-vinced that they are on the right side.

That's part of the reality facing the United States as it seeks to launch a program of rapid "Iraqification" – turning over increasing security responsibility to Iraqis aimid a wave of anti-American attacks.

The project to "Iraqify" the conflict got fresh imporus Saturday with an announcement that the United States will relinquish power by June to a provisional Iraqi government. If the plan works as envisioned by political leaders here, Iraqi forces gradually would take over dayto-day security in the country while U.S. troops would step into the background, concentrated in a few bases, and some Americans would start going home.

But there is no indication that

Students and the public will get a look at the proposed schedule this week. It would need to be presented at the December School Board meeting in order to be ready by spring. That way students could register for fall 2004 classes, said Shawna Obenchain, chairwoman of the schedule change committee which includes parents, students and staff members, the students and staff members with the schedule is the result of two years of planning, Obenchain said. Last spring, teachers proposed a 4-by-4 block schedule, under which students would take fewer classes for longer periods of the day and finish classes in half the time, but they could not get it passed by the board because of opposition by parents.

MOSUL, Iraq — The deadliest single incident for U.S. forces in Iraq began with a drive-by shooting at a bank.

Someone in a sedan had fired at the Industrial Bank in the Sinjar Gate neighborhood of Mosul early Saturday evening, according to accounts by U.S. officials and Iraq witnesses. American troops were guarding the bank, and one soldier was wounded in the leg. Thoops called in a roving, rapid-reaction UH-60 Black Hawk helicopter to pursue the attackers.

Then something went very wrong, U.S. military officials said Sunday. The quick-reaction chopper struck another Black Hawk, which was transporting troops between bases, and both crashed onto residential rooftops, crupted in flames and exploded. In all, 17 soldiers from the 101st Airborne Division died and five the school would need to hire at most four new teachers, said Linda Baird, the district's human reliations director. The hope is that the new schedule would help decrease the dropout rate by helping struggling students catch up and providing a better feeling of community with the common funch period. With increased period, ment, the school would receive more money based on average daily attendance, Baird said.

How it would work

The proposal includes space for three types of classes and a flexible, extended lunch hour that students could use for activities such as clubs, intramurals, tutoring, copps, College of Southern idahociasses or religious release time. 'Skimiy' classes would meet every day for 52 minutes and would be before and after the traditional school day as well as before and after the funch period.

The lunchtime "skinnijes" could after the lunch period.

The lunchtime "skinnijes" could be replaced with one of two types of block periods. The 4-by4 block consists of 90-minute periods that meet each day for a semester. The classes would move at twice the regular piace, allowing students to take different classes.

90-minute classes the next semester. The AB block alternates 90-minute classes every other day in a two-week cycle that lasts the whole year.

Right now the school has 38 stu-dents doing co-op work for class credit, 12 students taking one or more classes at CSI and about 450 students taking daily release time. Under the proposed schedule, release time, which is often used for LDS seminary classes, would be on an AB schedule, said Magic Valley LDS Church spokesman Brad Hobbs.

Principal Allen said about 80 Percent of his staff members support the schedule change.
However, not everyone is happy with the proposal.
Gwen Jones – a parent of 11 children, one of whom attends the

"I have an opportunity to make a difference," she said.
She has her own proposal for a schedule that could include combi-nations of AB, 4-by-4 and skinny periods at any time of the day. She said the AB and 4-by-4 schedules are not suitable for every learner, because many students do not have long enough attention spans to make it through 90-minute peri-ods.

Jones said block periods have their places, especially for courses such as physical education and home economics. Jones was trained as a home economics teacher and raught art in Delta, Utah.

She also said the 4-by-4 schedule is appealing for remediation. When a student fails a class, he could start over at the semester and catch up at an accelerated rate,—"Treally feet like this is the way.

and catch up at an accurance, rate, really feel like this is the way America's education needs to go," Jones said.

She said the committee's proposed schedule is OK, but there need to be more zero-hour and after-hour classes, which the district does not have enough teachers to teach. Another problem she sees with the proposed schedule is the single long lunch period, which she said could crowd both the cafe-teria and local businesses.

The department is seeking public comment on changes considered for 2004 hunts:

*Access Yes – This is the first year of the Access Yes program, which compensates landowners for allowing hunters access to their property either to hunt or to reach public hunting opportunities landlocked by private ground. Long-term funding options include a raffle of Idaho's best deer and eld ktags or increasing sportsmen licensing fees.

The visit was part of an ongoing effort by the school and Friends of Stricker Inc. to expose students to the history of the area, particularly the Oregon Trail.

With snow turning into rain, 27 students experienced firsthand what early pioneers might have dealt with as they traveled across Idaho to reach Oregon.

According to school Principal Richard Abel, the adopted curriculum focuses on the role the country's westward migration played in the development of the Magic Valley.

The Federal Highway Administration has signed off on proposed enhancements to Utah Highway 36, clearing the way for the Utah Department of Transportation to begin the second phase of road-widening, from Mills Junction to the city of Tooele.

The two-lane roadway will be widened to four lanes with a center turn lane and wide shoulders. The stretch of highway from Interstate 80 to Mills Junction already has been widened to four lanes with a center turn lane, but traffic now bottlenecks at Mills Junction during the evening commute.

many as Agassi.

Agassi is 33, Federer 22, and it didn't help Agassi's cause that all four of his previous matches went the distance, including a roundrobin loss to the Swiss star.

Agassi was the event's oldest finalist since 1978, and was attempting to be its oldest champion—lie Nastase was 29 in 1975. He also was hoping to set the mark for longest gap between tiles at the tour championship, having won it in 1990.

But Federer just was too good, before and after a 2.5-hour rain delay. He served strongly, got the best of baseline rallies, and every so often won a point with a shot that didn't appear to be an option. Repeatedly, Federer would drive a ground stroke to a corner, forcing Agassi wide, and then deposit his next shot into the open court for a clean winner.

Rain fell until about a half-hour hefore the match started and returned after 38 minutes of play. By then, Agassi was in serious trouble, as a quick glance at the statistics made it clear. Federer owned edges of 23-6 in total winners, 7-0 in aces and 39-25 in points. He also won four of the five points with 10 or more strokes—an area normally ruled by Agassi, the consummate baseline artist.

Hyde's resignation will hurt rural Idaho

here's more to Idaho than Boise. Just ask LeMoyne Hyde. The Idaho Falls based director this week indicated he'll resign his position by the end of the year, mostly because he doesn't want to move to Boise to do his job. For those of us living in Idaho's hinterlands (read, No. Their view: This guest editorial from the Idaho State Journal in Pocatello says Idaho was lands (read: Not well-served by a state Hyde's decision commerce director who admirable. isn't isolated to Boise

Unfortunately, that admiration

Unfortunately, ISIT I Solated that admiration comes with a price. His replacement will likely be someone more tuned into Ada County (or at least someone who'll be willing to move to the state capital and promote business and economic expansion from an office there). That Hyde believed he could perform the duties of his job from an office in Idaho Falls is a sign of promise. That he felt the pressure for him to move to Boise was so great he had to resign is a sign of the status quo. Idaho's butter is on the western side of the bread. Hey, there's no doubting the convenity in programs of Brice recognitic in programs of Brice recogni

But that doesn't make it any less unfortunate for the rest of us, the folks who know what Hyde means when he says, "There's more to the state than just Boise."

And, were I in the U.S.
Senate, I would woife against at least one of President George W. Bush's nominees to the federal judiciary, But Bush's nominees to de tought to get that straightforward upor-down vote; they should not be detoured by Democrats into an unconstitutional procedural limbo limbo.

If Bush's judges are blocked, a precedent that disrupts our two-century-old system of checks and balances will have been established. And the inevitable future turnabout - when Republicans block the effort of a Democratic president to get his or her judges confirmed - will be fair play.

JAMES P. PINKERTON

A little background: The Republicans control the Senate, 51-49, and can count on a few Democratic votes as well. But, in the current judge struggle, the Democratic votes as well. But, in the current judge struggle, the Democratic leadership has resorted to fillibusters - talking a nomination to death – in order to thwart the will of the majority. It takes 60 votes to bust a fillibuster, and the GoP doesn't have that many. So far, four nominees have thus 1-d the kibosh put on them, and as many as nine more face the same fate. So the Republicans launched a talkathon scheduled to last 30 hours, a postudo-fillibuster of their own, all to draw attention to their cause. Will this '90-to-the-mattresses' strategy work? Probably not. Indeed, it's easy to mock this Republican "all-nighter," but the underlying purpose of this blather is to reaffirm a vital principle—that the majority, not the fill-bustering minority, should rule. The architects of the Constitution determined that there should be momentous occasions in the bistory of their future republic in which, a super-majority, should he tory of their future republic in which, a super-majority should be required for legislative action. But they understood that these occasions should be rare. As Alexander Hamilton wrote in Federalist Paper No. 22, a supermajority scheme "contradiets the fundamental maxim of republican government, which requires that the sense of the majority should prevail." Article II, Section 2 of the Constitution demonstrates the nuanced thinking of Hamilton & Co. The advice and consent of two-thirds of senators present is needed for foreign treaties, it reads, but only simple majorities are needed for gresidential appointments, including judges. Boyden Gray, counsel to former President Gorge II.W Bush, explains the Founders' reasoning. To require a supermajority shifts the balance of power from the executive branch to the legislative branch. So if this filibuster precedent holds, all future judicial nominations will be products of the worst kind of backroom logrolling." In other words, the presidency as an institution will have ceded much of its power to the Senate. That might please anti-Blush Democrats today, but how will they feel when one of their own is nominating judges from the White House?

The word "filibuster," of course, does not appear in the Constitution. Its first recorded use was not until 1841. And until the past three years, it has never been used to block a judicial appointment. (As a minor footnote, it is true that in 1968 Democratic President Lyndon Johnson's nomination of Supreme Court justice Abe Fortas to be chief justice was blocked for four days by a Democratic controlled Senate. Lawmakers on both sides of the aisle thought that Johnson, who was retiring from the White House in just a few months, should not be allowed to fill such an important post with a crony, In any case, Fortas withdrew his name before the fillbuster issue came to a head,)

OK, enough nitpicking, What came to a head.)
OK, enough nitpicking. What about the merits of the Bush nominees? Some have mostly demerits. William Pryor, for ... example, the attorney general of Alabama, has made a career ... Alabama, has made a career opposing abortion. He calls the Supreme Court's 1973 Roe vs. Wade decision" the worst abornination of constitutional law in our history. On really Worse than the Supreme Court decisions that endorsed slavery? A man such as Pryor ought not to be on any federal court. That's my opinion, and I feel strongly about it. But I wouldn't want to get my way, and neither should the Democratis in the Senate. If they keep it up, the next Democratis citing to indicate the first work of t

Heavy sentencing isn't always the answer

fter two decades of being "tough on crime" by "look ing them up and throwing bway the key" – to recall two of the effective political slogans of the past – the bill has come due. Many states have become incapable or unwilling to pay the cost of housing record numbers of inmates. Twenty-five states have already passed laws easing or climinating the minimum senten ing requirements that were political to the control of the cost of the co ing requirements that were politi-cally popular in the 1980s and '90s. They are also considering early parole for nonviolent, non-dangerous offenders to ease overcrowding and he cost of ware-housing so many convicts. Joseph Lehman, secretary of the state of Washington Department of Corrections, told the New York Times (Nov. 10) that the people behind liberaliz-ing the tough laws "are not all advocates of a liberal philoso-phy." Indeed, they are not. I am one of them. According to the Bureau of Justice Statistics (BJS), the U.S. prison and jail population exceeded 2 million for the first time in June, 2002. By the end of last year, 33,000 more inmates had been added to the total. That means one out of every 142 resicrowding and the cost of ware-dents is incarcerated in this country. The average cost to states per immate per day is $57.92, according to the 2000 Corrections Yearbook. In Georgia, where about 35,000 citizens are behind bars, it costs taxpayers more than $20,000 per year per inmate and each jail cell costs $60,000 to build.

each jail cell costs Sou, and to build.

What are taxpayers getting for their money? They get a false sense of security, as if putting current criminals behind bars insures there won't be furure criminals. If locking up everyone now committing crimes would eliminate crime, I'd be all for it, but new criminals are born, or made, every day. Something is wrong with the system.

Violent and dangerous oftenders should be locked up and, in capital cases, executed. But violent offenders are just 49 percent of the prison population. Again, according to BJS, the rest of the prisoners are behind bars for property crimes (19 percent), drug crimes (20 percent) and crimes affecting the "public order" (11 percent). This half of the prison population ought to be doing something else besides sitting in prison and costing the lawabiding money. We do retribution well. We should be focusing on restriction. If I steal your TV set putting me in prison won't get it be. Making me pay a fine to the government (whose TV set was not stolen) won't restore your set.

Making me pay a fine to the gow-ernment (whose TV set was not stolen) won't restore your set, unless you have a very low deductible on your homeowner's insuriance, which will undoubted-ly go up if you file a claim. It would be better if the law required me to work to earn the money to buy you a new TV set and to pay you, not the govern-ience and trouble. I should also be forced to pay court costs. Such an approach would have a number of benefits. First, you would get your TV back. The vic-tim should always be the law's primary concern. Second, forcing me to acknowledge that I have wronged a person and not the state (which is a non-person) can help change my view of other people's property. Third, it would save taxpayers the cost of incar-cerating me. And, fourth, making me pay the person I haves wronged is a far better and more proven method for changing my life and behavior than putting me in prison where statistics show I am more likely to become a better criminal than a better critizen.

tizen. If the objective of criminal If the objective of criminal laws is to reduce crime, the laws currently on the books are clearly not achieving it. The corporate monsters who rob stockholders and employees of their jobs and career shouldn't go to jail. They should be forced to work to pay off as much as they receible or the corporate of the c should be forced to work to pay off as much as they possibly can to those they have wronged. That is redemptive for them, and it is redemptive for them, and it is restorative to the victims who lost their retirement and their paychecks to greed.

Republicans, who were behind many of these "tough on crime" laws, have an opportunity to fight crime in ways that will actually work and save the taxpayers lots of money. That is supposed to be the Republican way. It is certainly the only way that will succeed.

Be thankful for public lands – and oppose fees
In between football games and before Turkey Day, please remember an important issue, and that is these oppressive fees to hike or ride your mountain bike or saddle up your horse on many of the most popular Sawtooth National Forest trails. every campaign stop that the United States needs fresh leader-ship. But millions of voters aren't about to consider that.

With a year to go until the election, a solid core of Americans emphatically back George W. Bush for a second term – no matter who else is on the ballot. They approve of his conservative values. Mostly, though, they admire his character.

Simply put: They trust him. "Even if I don't line up with him exactly on all his policies, I want a president who stands up for what he believes in," said Robert Koerper, 44, a restaurant owner. "You always know where he's caming from. That's the kind of leader I want."

National polls conducted in recent weeks have found a majority of Americans skeptical about on the president's actions on such pivotal issues as taxes, the economy, health care, social security, foreign affairs and the war in Iraq. Still, about 55 percent say they approve of the way Bush has handled the presidency overall.

An AIR ONessYwashington Post poll late last month found that just 40 percent of Americans thought Bush understood the problems they face in daily life. By large margins, they expressed concern about the cost of the Iraqi campaign, anger at the number casualties and anxiety that the United States would get bogged down in a long, expensive mission. They also overwhelmingly expressed frustration with the economy.

One flu – over the cuckoo's nest

Winter's here, and you feel lousy; You're coughing and sneezing; your nuscles ache; you rnose is an active mucus wolcano. These symptoms of amiliar at this time of yoar – can mean only one thing; tny fanged sails are eating your brain.

No, seriously, brain snails are involved only about 35 percent of the time. More likely what you have is a coll of flu. (The word "flu" is short for "the flu.")

Colds and flus have plagued humanity for millions of years, but in primitive times, nobody knew what, caused them, because every-body was stupid. Then, in the 17th century, scientists began to suspect that colds were caused by a creature called a "germ" living inside human nasal passages. But they never found it, although they searched relentlessly, using a painful procedure that involved an instrument called the "nostril torch."

HUMOR Dave Barry

The big breakthrough came in the 1930s, when scientists invented a device called the electron microscope. At least they claimed they invented it. Laypersons would come around to look at it, and they'd say, "Where's the electron microscope." And the scientists would roll their eyes and – in the tone of voice you'd use to talk to a Labrador retriever—they'd say, "You can't see it, for heaven's sake! It's made of electrons!" And the laypersons, out of pure embarrassment, would give the scientists funding. (This is also how scientists paid for the "radio telescope.")

that biologists call "playing the snot trombone."

So we know how viruses operate; what we don't know is how to kill them. After trying many unsuccessful methods, including timy hammers, medical researchers determined that the only sure way to kill a virus is to heat it to 7,000 degrees. This led to an experimental cold-and-flu treatment known as the "microwave sunna," which produced a 100 percent cure rute, but had the unwanted side effect of turning the patients into human card dogs. At that point, medical researchers gave up on curing colds and flus, and devoted all of their efforts to making sure there is no lupe for cold and flus sufferers. But that doesn't meant there's no hope for cold and flu sufferers. Go to any dengistore or supermarket, and

DEAR ANNIE: The study you mentioned from Dr Gan-Wong was a 12 minute presentation at the March 2003 meeting of the American Academy of Dermatology. It is not a published paper so there are many details of the study that we don't know. For example, what else was in the green tea product? What cles was in the benzoyl peroxide product contained alcohol or harsh cleansing agents in may account for the irritation and dryness the participants experienced. It would also explain why those who used the green tea cream might have had an improvement in their complexion because alcohol and other skin irritants that are usually used in benzoyl peroxide products would have an overall negative impact on the skin's complexion and appearance. Further, the paper is not clear as to which product had the most reduction in arene lesions or blackheads.

"If someone has a cough that's worse after a week, they need to seek medical care," said Backer. "If you wait too long, antibiotics have minimal effect." The only antibiotics effective against it are crythromycin and other macrolides, including azithromycin (Elatromax) and clarilhromycin (Blaxin). An alternative is a combination antibiotic, trimethoprim-sulfamethoxazole, (Bactrin, Sepra).

List your holiday

On Thanksgiving Day, TheTimes-News will publish a free listing of charities and groups that help others at holiday time.

The list will include descrip-tions of items that the groups are asking people in the community to donate. If you would like to have your holiday provider group included in the list, send your name, address and phone num-ber, along with some information about the items you need for dis-tribution, to Denise Turner. Fax the list to 734-5538. Or e-mail to denise@magicvalley.com

QUESTION: How can I be sure that my last will and testament will be located and brought forward at the time of my death?

will be located and brought forward at the time of my death?

Several options: first, let your chosen personal representative (executor) know whore your will is and how to get access to it when the time comes to have it probated. Give your personal representative a copy of the will. A copy of a will can serve in place of the original if it comes up missing.

Second, consider feating the original of your will with your tawyer. This was once a more popular option than it is today. These days people tend to want more control over their own affairs, are more mobile, and tend not to leave wills with their lawyers.

Third, file information concerning the whereabouts of your will with the Idaho Secretary of State in what is known as the "will registry." As of July 1, 2000 persons making a will can file basic information about the will (the name of the person, the date the will was created, and its location) so that the will can be oasly found, or at least its existence be known. The registration is entirely voluntary and failure register with the Secretary of States office does not have any effect on the validity of the will. ## Study links faulty sense of smell to illness

The Baltimore Sun

A new study has found that a faulty sense of smell may predict precisely the risk of schizophrenia, months or years before obvious symptoms appear. Until now, doctors have had no reliable way to make an early diagnosis of the debilitating inental illness, which afflicts more than 2 million Americans.

"This is the first time we've found a potential marker specifically for schizophrenia. It's a promising diagnostic tool," said University of Melbourne meuropsychologist Warrick Brewer, one of the study's coauthors.

Early detection of schizophrenia can be key, Brewer said, because schizophrenic patients who get prompt treatment generally do better in the long run. A psychotte episode can cause permanent brain damage, increasing the chance of subsequent attacks. Catching the illness early might reduce later problems.

Published in The American Journal of Psychiatry, the study examined 81 people at high risk for developing schizophrenia. The subjects had all shown early subtle signs of the disease; genetic risk, distributions or delusions. Disease and the subjects had all shown early subtle signs of the disease; genetic risk, disease and the subjects had all shown early subjects and all signs of the subjects to smell an odor and then identify it. The smells included blubble gum, gasoline, Jemon and licorice.

theritty it. The smean includes und-ble guin, gasoline, lemon and licorice.

Twelve of the 81 subjects scored very low on the smell test. Over the next two years, only those 12 devel-oped schizophrenia. Ten other patients also had psychotic episodes, but their symptoms were caused by mental illnesses other than schizophrenia.

Schizophrenia researchers praised the study. The fact that they could use offaction to differentiate schizo-phrenia, that's a very exciting find-use in the study of the study warn-ing system, said University of Pennsylvania psychiatris Bruce Turetsky, who also has studied the connection between smell and schiz-ophrenia.

ISTANBUL, Turkey - Two Arabic-language newspapers received separate statements Sunday claiming the Al-Quida terrorist network carried out the car bomb attacks that killed 23 people in two Istanbul synagogues.

A statement received by the London-based daily Al-Quds Al-Arabi, a copy of which was obtained by The Associated Press, said a unit of al-Quida executed the attack on Saturday because it learned that agents of the Israeli intelligence agency Mossad were in the synagogues.

Abdel Bari Atwan, the newspaper's editor, told the pan-Arabicable station Al-Jazeera that the cabim was received by e-mail from the Abu Hafs al-Masri brigades, which is suspected of links to Al-Quida and which has sent at least three similar claims to the paper regarding previous attacks.

"The Mujshedeen of Abu Hafs al-Masri Brigades... after monitoring Mossad agents and confirming that five of the agents were present in two synagogues in central Istanbul, carried out their deadly blow," the statement said.

Another e-mailed claim of responsibility sent to the London-based weekly Al-Majalla said al-Quida carried out their deadly outside Italian police headquarters in Nasariyah, Iraq, on Nov. 12 that killed 19 Italians and more than a dozen Iraqis.

U.N. employee from France dies in Afghanistan attack
KABUL, Afghanistan – One of two Afghan men on a motorcycle opened fire Sunday on a marked United Nations' car, killing a French aid worker, the first international U.N. staff member slain in postwar Afghanistan. Police identified the captured assailants as Taliham militants.

Bettina Goislard, 29, an employee of the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees, was shot at close range at a shopping bazaar in Ghazni, the capital of Ghazni province in central Afghanistan. Her Afghan driver was wounded.

In Genezu, where the UNHCR is based, Refugee High Commissioner Ruud Lubbers said Goislard's death was "yet anollter dastardly assault on an innocent humanitarian-worker." He said doislard's death was "yet anollted the U.N. agency was suspending its work in Ghazni and would be conducting a review of its work in Afghanistan.

Cabinet secretary Hassan Abu

Palestinians can halt three years of fighting very soon. Whether a cease-fire can hold, he cautioned, will depend largely on Israel.
Abu Libdeh's boss, Prime Minister Almed Qureia, hopes to reach a cease-fire as a first step of reastming talks on the US-backed Egyptian, who has helped mediate past cease-fires, is coming to assist Qureia in talks with Hamas and Islamic Jihad.

It was unclear whether the two groups, responsible for dozens of suicide bombings over the past

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

"Surrender is a perfectly acceptable alternative in extreme circumstances." — Leigh Brackett, George Lucas and Irvin Kershner

Plenty of academics will advise pupils learning bridge to count losers or winners. However, it is a fallacy, to imagine that a slavish approach to either philosophy will result in a winning strategy on every hand.

In today's example, declarer has to develop 10 winners, but that is not sufficient — the timing its critical.

has to develop 10 winners, but that is not sufficient— the timing—is-critical.

On the lead of the club queen against four spades, South has since top tricks and must set up the diamond suit. The right way to do that is to take the club lead and duck a diamond at once. East wins the trick, cashes a club winner, then leads a heart.

Now declarer wins the heart ace, leads to dummy's diamond ace, and ruffs a diamond high. Then he cashes the spade queen, crosses over to the spade 10, ruffs a diamond high, and leads to the spade king, drawing the last trump in the process. With the lead in dummy, South can cash the 13th diamond, finally discarding a heart loser. He must still lose a heart, but has his 10 tricks.

This hand demonstrates that when you need to set up a suit, there may be merit in ducking the trick you have to lose as early as possible. In other words, surrender can be the best policy. If you the first id amond with the ace and play a second diamond, the citries to dummy are not suffi-
