Cheese company agrees to consider pretreatment plant for its wastewater

By Jennifer Sandmann Times-News writer

GOODING - The region's largest cheese-maker has agreed to consider pretreating its waste-water before irrigating its farm acreage in Gooding County, Such a move could help resolve disputes over Glanbia Foods Inc.'s plan to expand wastewater application from its Gooding cheese plant, something the company says is important to the plant's operation.

operation.

It is clear that pretreatment is what the county and neighbors want, said Jeff Williams, executive vice president of Glanbia Foods. Glanbia wants to operate a sustainable plant in Gooding for the long term, he said.

Williams' statement followed a ruling by 5th District Judge Monte Carlson in Burley denying Glanbia's request to overrule Gooding County's contention that Clanbia must obtain a county permit and meet county requirements for an expanded waste-water site. Carlson's written opinion was signed Thursday.

"We're going to explore the possibility of putting in a pretreatment plant. We need some time to do it, and that will require some compromise," Williams said.

For more than a year neighbors have opposed Glambia's efforts to expand its wastewater site onto 500 acres known as the Wolfe property. The opposition is based on ador and permit violations at

Sparks fly as Dems debate Iraq, spending

Los Angeles Times

DES MOINES, Inwa - Under fire from Rep. Richard A. Gephardt and Sen. John Kerry over lis spending priorities, Howard Dean renewed his criticism of the lawmakers for voting last year to authorize war with irru during a debate Monday that shappened the arguments dominating the Democratic presidential contest. In a series of pointed exchanges that highlighted the two-hour session, Gephardt of Missouri and Kerry of Massachusetts accused bean of following a Republican approach to balancing hudgets, while the former Vermont governor responded by tying the two to President Bush on the war in Iraq. The debate underscored the intentions of Gephardt and Kerry-Dean's principal rivals in the Iowa mary, respectively - to challenge Dean's hold on liberal voters by questioning his commitment to traditional Democratic spending programs.

At the same time, the encounter highlighted Dean's belief that the war in Iraq remains his hole card in the race – and the principal vulnerability for the other top-tier candidates.

All eight of the Democrats who participated in the debate, sponsored by the Democratic National Committee and MSNBC, denounced the Medicare-reform package that is moving toward a final congressional vote. Kerry and

Sen. John Edwards of North Carolina spoke via satellite transmission from Washington, where they had remained to oppose the bill.

The debate participants were ferret in denouncing Bush's foreign policy, with retired Gen. Wesley K. Clark perhaps the most emotional. "I warmed that we were going to war without a real plan of what to do next and without adequate resources. Now we see the consequences."

MOSUL, Iraq — The killings of two U.S. soldiers, who witnesses said were dragged from their car and pummeled with rocks, offended some in this neighborhood of diapidated houses and potholed streets where the deaths occurred. But few Iraqis were shocked by the brutality, and some even gloated.

"They are occupiers, and this is their punishment," truck driver IIsham Abed said Monday of the soldiers. "The Americans make nothing but empty promises. There's no electricity, no gasoline and no work."

Gunmen ambushed a U.S. patrol here Monday, wounding one soldier. Nevertheless, Mosu, Iraq's third-largest city, was been among the safest areas for American soldiers, a place where U.S. troops could stroll bustling streets and frequent stores and cafes.

However, anti-American feeling still simmers beneath the surface. It exploded Sunday, when assailants shot two U.S. soldiers driving through the working class meighborhood of Ras al-jadda, sending their whiche crashing into a wall.

According to witnesses, an Iraqi mob, most of them teenagers, dragged two bloodied soldiers from the car, threw them to the ground and pummeled their bodies with concrete blocks - scenes reminiscent of the savagery in Somalia against American troops a decade ago.

A few accounts said the soldiers' throats were cut – either by the attackers or by the mob, But witness Bahaa Jassim said the wounds appeared to have come from bullets.

Others, however, had little sympathy for the Americans.
"They kill people and barge in on families at night," Abdullah al-Mulla, who works in a gas station, said of U.S. forces. "If an American came to my house at night and took me away in front of my children, I would have to take revenge."

Such feelings are deeply held in a culture steeped in traditions of vendetta. Revenge killing is considered a moral act, even if the victim had committed no offense and was marked for death simply because of his identity.

In practice, the Kaiser Family Foundation estimates that the typical senior will spend $1,454 out of pocket in 2006, when the plan would take effect.

"I think it's going to be really tauch for some people," said

"I think it's going to be really tough for some people," said Ronald Fatoullah, who has an elderlaw practice in New York City and Great Neck, N.Y. "For those seniors who really need prescription drugs, and it's a real burden for them, this still really won't cut it."

those seniors win reamy neces prescription drugs, and it's a real burden for them, this still really won't cut it."

The part of the plan seniors may see sooner is a Medicare drug discount card, which could give seniors a discount of 15 percent or more on their drug costs beginning in about six months. The card, however, is similar to a host of other cards already available from government and other groups that already offer similar discounts.

"The name Medicare carries a good seal of approval," said Tricia Neuman, the director of the Medicare Policy Project at the Kaiser Family Foundation. "But whether or not it will bring greater savings than are currently available is an open question."

Neuman also noted that the list of medicarious covered by the card and pricing could change over time.

Fatoullah and other experts suggested that seniors should maintain whatever alternative means they may have of paying for prescription drugs, especially if they participate in an employer-based plan, which Neuman said might be more generous.

Many advocates and experts suggested that seniors should not jump immediately from Medicare to a health maintenance organization or other private insurer. Said Howard F. Angione, an elder care lawyer in New York: "I wouldid't be the first one in line to sign up for new coverage."

WASHINGTON - With the pending approval of the Medicare bill, President Bush has made a bid to break the historic political alliance between Democrats and alliance between Democrats and senior citizens – a feat that could change the dynamics of next year's election and perhaps long-term partisan patterns in this country.

But some Democrats, reeling from defeat on an issue they long saw as their own, said a voter backlash against a measure they consider deeply flawed could still work to their benefit.

sweeping changes in Medicare since the program was created in Defiant in defeat, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D.Mass., said the legislation "starts the unraveling of the Medicare system," and he accused the Republicans of planning a follow-up attack on Social Security after the next election.

A final vote on the bill was set for today, and even opponents cunceded the outcome was not in doubt.

At its heart, the legislation was

At its heart, the legislation was designed as a compromise of sorts, new drug coverage for all Medicare beneficiaries long gought by Democrats, combined with a Republican-backed plan to give private insurance companies a wast new role in health care for the program's beneficiaries.

The scope of the bill goes far beyond that, though, including an additional $25 billion for rural hospitals and health care providers, a requirement for higher-income seniors to pay more for Medicare Part B coverage and billions of dollars to discourage corporations from eliminating existing coverage for their retirees once the new government program begins.

The bill would satisfy other age tor their retirees once the new government program begins. The bill would satisfy other goals of conservatives, including creation of tax-preferred health savings accounts, open to individuals who purchase high-deductible health insurance policies.

Most controversial of all, the legislation would create a limited program of direct competition between traditional Medicare and private plans, beginning in 2010. Conservatives argue that would help bring down the cost of Medicare over the long run, while critics say it would privatize the program and lead to rising premiums for seniors who remain under the government-designed benefit. "Modernizing Medicare will make the system better and enable us to say to seniors we kept our promise," President Bush said after visiting Army troops in Colorado.

after vising Army troops in Colorado.

Over and over, supporters of the bill stressed that after years of gridleck, the opportunity to act was at hand.

"If we don't do this at this time, it may be years" before another opportunity comes along, said Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Jowa, an architect of the bill. "There will never be total agreement," added Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont., Grassley's partner in bipartisaship for months on the issue. Critics were unmoved. Senate Democratic Leader Tom Daschle called the bill a "bailout for the IMOs and insurance companies," and Sen. Hillary Rodham (Clinton, D-N.Y., said the well-being of seniors had been "trumped by the interests of those who have money to make and are taking advantage."

through Congress.
The Senate approved the bill Priday, after extensive bipartisan discussions that included Idaho Sen. Larry Craig. The president is expected to sign it. Say what you want about California, but Golden State news unfolds on the world stage. Media coverage of the fires raised the stakes for passing the bill.
Forest Service fire experts report that approximately 190 million acres of federal forest land is at unnatural risk of burning, with 70 million acres at extreme risk. Some of that forest land has been hit with insects, such as the red pine beetles attacking the Sawtooth National Recreation Area.
Overgrown vegetation and insect-ridden trees stand ready to go up in fames. Yet much of the Forest Service's time is spent dealing with environmental appeals of forest-thinning measures.

The Healthy Forests Restoration Act should change that drastically. The bill eliminates many of the administrative roadblocks that allow rabid environmentalists to sandbag forest thinning proposals that reduce wildfire hazards.

The bill would reduce the number of alter-number of alter-native plans the Forest Service has to put out for each of its forest mand of its forest health proposals. These alternative plans are the legal weapon environmental activists use to stop thinning. Under current law, agencies must submit seven to 10 alternative plans. The number will fall to three. In forests facing the most extreme danger, or near homes, the number of alternative plans is limited to only one or two.

(every 60 days) rather than later.

And in spite of environmentalists' whining that the public comment process has been cut off, the public retains opportunities for input.

The bill requires that litigants make a legal challenge early in the developmental stage – not at the 11th hour. That way, if the project does move forward, the major concerns already have been addressed. Most importantly, the ability to sandbag a forest proposal is gone.

The new law should help restore sensible management of our national forests, Idaho's congressional delegation deserves praise for working with Western Democrats to get the deal done.

Attack calls for global response

The Times-News

The terrorism that took place Saturday in my country and again Thursday morning should not be classified as actions against a certain group, a particular people or religion, or political decisions and choices that Turkey has made. Rather, these are acts against all humanity, bearing the apparent signature, once again, of al-Quaida.

ENGIN ANSAY

Terrorism is unfortunately not Terrorism is unfortunately ne new for Turkey. Like the Americans, Israelis and the British, we have been through this before and we understand well how it feels to be the vic-tim. We know how painful it when lives are lost senselessly. Each time, for instance, a suicide bomber kills Israelis just because they were sitting at a cafe, going to school in a bus or celebrating a Jewish holiday, Turks understand what it means the horror of losing loved ones for nothing.

Turkey lost almost 40,000 lives to terrorism during the course of 15 years in the 1980s and 1990s, and finally came out victorious, But at what cost? The fate of all those innocent victims – children, women, men, teachers, civil servants, young soldiers felled by terrorists – only strengthened our determination to defy terror.

The cowardly acts of recent days will also receive the appro-priate response and the hand of justice. The perpetrators' only achievement is an evil, criminal notoriety and worldwide con-demnation of their actions.

Turkey, like Israel, is a democracy in an otherwise extremely volatile and unstable region. Last month, we celebrated the 80th anniversary of the foundation of the republic by Kemal Asturk. We take pride in our democracy and in our secular way of life. The Turkish Republic is a living testimony to the idea that a country with a majority Muslim population can be a strong democracy.

We regard the bombings of the synagegues, and Thursday's double bombing in Istanbul, as hor-rific attacks aimed at undermining our country. Who would be poisoned and naive enough to think that such an act of inhumanity would make a country do or not do something?

If we unlucky we are to witness the horror of ignorance that culminates in an act of despair such as this one. But we will not give up. Such events will only strengthen our resolve.

The fight against terrorism must be an international campaign. It is not a problem of one single country or a region; it is the words.

Effort to remove religion is unconstitutional

Is unconstitutional

As Décember approaches, I am concerned about confusion over what is and is not acceptable religions expression in our communities. Over the past few years, there is prave misunderstanding of the origin and meaning of the phrase, "separation of church and state," As a result, many government officials are of a mission to remove references to religion from government buildings, public property and schools.

The phrase, "separation of church and state," doesn't appear in the Constitution. It originated in 1802 in a letter from Thomas Jefferson to a group of Baptist ministers in Dambury, Conn. Since then, courts have ruled that climitating all signs of religion from the public square is unconstitutional. In response to recent efforts to censor Christmas in our communities, perhaps it would help to clarify the forms of religious expression that are legal under the Constitution. Students are free to express their religious beliefs in school. As long as it's not materially distriptive, students may express their beliefs verbally with phrase slike "Merry Christmas"; through clothing that conveys religious messages with words, colors or symbols; or through written materials like school assignments, religious cards, gifts or tracts given to teachers and classmates (Westfield High School LIFE Club vs. City of Westfield, 249 F.Supp. 2d 98)D.Mass. 2003)).

At school, students can sing Christmas carols at concerts, teach the biblical origins of Christmas and perform the Christmas story of Mary, Joseph, Jesus and the shepherds. The Constitution does not require the exclusion of religion from public institutions. Christmas is part of our beritage and ingrained in our culture; therefore, expression of it through art and music. Teaching of it as history serves both a religious and secular purpose (Stone vs. Gruham, 449 U.S. 39 (1980)).

The Pentagon claims that by 2004, 105,000 troops will be in Iraq, down from the current 130,000. Just over a third of those will be reservists – nearly three times as many as now.

Reservists disproportionately make up the forces used in peacekeeping and nation building. Ninety-seven percent of the army's civil affairs specialists are reservists; 22 percent of public affairs specialists are reservists. The figures are only slightly higher for military police, intelligence, and special forces.

As reported in The Times-News, Since November 2001, the number of golf rounds played at Muni has dropped from 43,111 to 31,031 - that's a consumer decrease of almost 40 percent over two years." The point I want to make is either The Times-News or its source is in need of some remedial work in junior high school math. In this case, the difference of 12,080 should be compared to the beginning number -43,111. This gives a percent of 28. This does change the spin a little bit - 12,080 compared to 31,031 gives a percent of 38-9, but that was not the correct solution. The Times-News should review its number reporting operations! short, which could be disas-trous.

Our current predicament is a legacy of the cold war, when it was assumed that reservists would be needed only for a short period and most likely in friend-yl locales, such as mopping up operations in West Germany nfer a hypothetical Soviet inva-sion.

The situation has flip-flopped. The part of the war-that combat forces perform is brief. But the operations in which reservists specialize-the war after the war-can take ten times as long.

Because we are likely to see this pattern repeated, we need to rethink our force structure. We may need to add more active-duty-forces in-noncombatunt-spec-duty-forces in-noncombatunt-spec-clatties or use more reservists in combat. Or we may need to spend more on defense.

Those are the costs of leading a-war on terrorists and rogue states. The alternative is to rely on other countries or the U.N.— both of which have been unwill-ing to act decisively, Or we could hunker down and risk another attack like September 11. Today's debates over military reserve pol-icy are really debates over America's role in the world.

Albino gorilla dies of skin cancer-in Spanish zoo

RARCELONA, Spain (AP) – Snow-flake, an extremely rare albino gorilla and the most popular resident of Barcelona Zoo, died of skin cancer early Monday morning, zoo officials said. Zoo officials put the elderly gorilla to sleep after his health deteriorated in recent days, 200 officials said. Snowflake had been dying of skin cancer since 2001. "Until the end Copito enjoyed a fan-tastic quality of life, interacting normal-ly with his children and grandchildren," said the 200's chief and veterinarian,

-Jesus Fernandez.

"Lately though, he deteriorated quick-ly. In the past four or five days we noticed signs of pain and suffering and so decid-ed to practice euthanasia."

The gorilla was thought to be between.

Officials: Pilot hit below sum

HAILEY - Had he been flying higher, pilot-businessman James J. Woodyard wouldn't have died Wednesday night on a Blaine County mountainside, officials County mountainside, officials say.

As details of the fatal plane crash were pieced together dhonday, it was apparent that when Woodyard, 61, radioed the Friedman Memorial Airport control tower for landing clearance at 6:18 p.m. Wednesday and reported he was "five (miles) out," he wasn't prepared for what was to come in the next few minutes.

Woodyard's body, and the wreckage of his white, single-engine Cessna 210 were found at the 7,500-foot level on the north-cast corner of the 7,739-foot Lookout Moore of Friedman Memorial's runway and perhaps 1,000 yards east of the approach path lee had been flying from Boise the Hailey.

Blaine County Sheriff Walt Femling theorized – and was supported by pilots who'd taken part in a four-day search — that Woodyard fell victim to sudden, bewildering circumstances. First, Woodyard suddenly encountered strong, gusting winds estimated to be 100 mg/s and 40 mg/s and pated.

By the time he discovered his plight, the sheriff said, Woodyard apparently made a left-hiand, descending, 180-degree turn back south to realign himself for a northwesterly landing at Friedman Memorial's single run-way.

In so doing, Femling Iold news reporters as he charted Woodyard's course on a search map of rugged terrain bordering the airfield, Woodyard apparent-ly could not see Lookout Mountain in the darkness and slammed into the side below the summit.

Buhl suspect goes to jail on probation violation

By Rebecca Meany Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - His charges related to a May 16 shooting haven't yet been resolved, but a Buhl man is already going to prison partly as a result of that incident.

Fifth District Judge John Hohnhorst Monday sentenced Michael Kral, 21, to a minimum of four years in prison for violating terms of his probation related to 2001 convictions of grand theft and escape.

to 2001 convictions of grain times and escape.

"You are every judge's worst nightmare," Holinhers told Krail. Krail had been sentenced to jail for grand theft in 2001 but managed to escape from the Mrain Falls County Jail a few months later. He was caught within hours.

Falls County Jail a few months later. He was caught within hours.

Kral had an original sentence of two 5-year terms, but Holnhorst let him out on probation. The judge restored those sentences Monday. He will now serve the two 5-year sentences consecutively, with the possibility of parole in two years for each, meaning the will serve a minimum of four __ass.

While out on probation tor the cases of burglary and escape, Kral and Dustin Hunt. 22, were involved in a shoating nacident in May, prosecutors say, Mari House was shot nitie times in her home. She was hospitalized with multiple guishot wounds to the had, neck, shoulder and leg, but she survived. Charges against Kral and Hunt related to the shooting are still moving through the court.

said. "But you were one or the bad guys."

Kral responded in a meek voice.

"Tim sorry for the duings I've done," he said. "I just want to get some help."

Prosecuting attorney Jill Sweesy told the judge Kral was on a 30-day methamphetamine high when the shooting occurred.

The best way to get help, Hohnhorst said, is in the correctional system.

With too many sick kids, six | Court says age of suspect voids Cassia County schools close

BURLEY – So many kids were absent Monday because of the flu or some similar virus that Cassia County School District Superintendent Mike Chesley decided there would be no classes Tuesday or Wednesday at six schools.

Those students may get an early start on the Thankspiving break, but medical personnel told Chesley the symptoms last about three days, so many of the kids probably worlt have much fun during their extra two days of vacation.

About 25 percent of the students at the Cassia Education Center, Raft River Elementary School and Mountain View Elementary School were absent Monday, Chesley said.

On any typical day, about 5 percent of the students are absent from any given school, he said. Attendance at all the district's other schools was down between 10 and 12 percent Monday.

Chesley doesn't recall Cassia County schools ever having to close because so many kids were sick. He spent much of Monday reviewing attendance figures and talking to local attendance figures and talking to local physicians.

"I had doctors call me, and that was a big part of the reason we decided to close the schools," Classley said.

Cassia County schools were scheduled to close early Wednesday because of the Thanksgiving holiday and no school was scheduled for Thursday or Friday, so the early closure shouldn t cause any problems with having kids in class enough days this oar. Chesley said.

with having kids in class enough days this year, Chesley said.

"We're in pretty good shape for lost days, unless we have a bunch of snow days this winter," he said. At this point there are no plans to make up this week's missed days.

If enrollment at any of the other schools is drastically off today, it's possible more schools could be closed Wednesday, he said.

BOISE - The Idaho Supreme Court on Monday overturned the sexual misconduct convictions of a Gooding County man because he was apparently too young at the time of the alleged crimes to be charged with felonies.

Chief Justice Linda Copple Trout, writing for the unanimous court, ruled that state law prohibits juveniles under 14 from being charged with felonies except in specific cases that did not apply to James Kavajecz. TWIN FALLS - The city will use chicanes, or concrete barriers, instead of speed bumps to prevent speeding on two blocks of Shup Avenue East in a temporary measure to test their effect on speeders. Meanwhile, the City Council decided Monday not to lower the speed limit on Eastland Drive South.

Speed mint on Eastanta Drive South.

The city studied the traffic on Theorems Cast and found sporadic speeding at different times of the day on the street, which has no posted speed limit. The barriers would narrow the street and force traffic to slow down, but they would be less permanent than speed bumps.

"This is theoretical at this point, and if it doesn't work, we are prepared to take other measurus," City Engineer Gary Young told the City Council Monday, About 18 people attended the council meeting, several of whom were neighbors from the 1800/1900 block of Shoup who signed a petition to have speed bumps installed.

Linda Braley, who lives on the street, said she did not believe the barriers would have any effect on speeds. Instead, they would impede the path of trucks with trailers trying to turn around on the dead-end street. They could also trap leaves and water, worsening a drainage problem, she said.

Several people expressed concern over whether the city would evaluate the barriers' effectiveness after they were in place for 30 days.

The City Council approved the ness after they were in place for 30 days. The City Council approved the placement of the barriers with speed himit signs on them. Young said the barriers would be placed in two to three weeks, giving the city time to acquire enough reflective tape to make the barriers visible at night.

Regarding "Eastland Drive South, the council had considered unopping the speed limit from 45 to 35 mph. But after hearing a report on a traffic study, the council decided not to lower the limit. Young said the report found few accidents and a majority of vehicles following the speed limit.

The ruling came in the claim of physical therapist Susan Daleiden, who suffered a back injury while assisting a Jefferson County school district student in a wheelchair off of a bus.

Daleiden sued the district for damages, claiming it negligently failed to fit the bus with a wheelchair lift. But 7th District Judge Brent Moss threw the suit out, saying it was precluded by workers compensation, which covers on the job injuries.

Moss based his ruling on a provision extending workers compensation coverage to "every person in the service of a county, city, or any political subdivision thereof,

Feds deny request to halt wetlands jurisdiction

RUPERT - Minidoka County's

RUPERT - Minidoka County's request to have a pond and nearby property at Interstate 84's Ed8 no longer listed as wetdands has been denied by the U.S. Anny. Corps of Engineers.

In a Friday letter to county officials, Peter Gibson, chief of the corps' operations division in Fortland, Ore, said the county's appeal of the wetlands designation does not have merit. The decision states the corps has provided sufficient evidence to support its determination that the pond and wetlands are waters of the United States and are subject to corps' jurisdiction.

County officials have the opportunity to appeal the decision.

Minidoka County officials don't want the pond and property next to it designated, as a wetland because they say that designation limits use of the land, which is sowned by the country. County commissioners have said they want to sell the property, although it's not being advertised for sale, nor has anyone expressed an interest in bying the land. They worry that the wetlands designation will himder their ability to sell the property.

Corps of Engineers Review Officer Mores Bergman pointed out in the decision that the corps continues to disagree with the compt about "interstate com: merce" at the site.

Based on information from the Idaho Department of Fish and Game, the corps says non-residents fish and boat at the pond, establishing the interstate commerce designation, which means the corps has jurisdiction of the pond. Because the wedands are contiguous to the pond, that land also falls under corps jurisdiction, corps officials say.

Fish and Game personnel them, corps officials say.

Fish and Game personnel them, solves have used boats on the pond, demonstrating the pond "is navigable by small craft," Bergman wrote. As well, Fish and Game has an easement on the land which allows recreations use by the general public; the agency stocks the pond with trout for public fishing; and the agency has made improvements for public fishing and the general publics the last of the pond. Anglers have used four tubes on the pond, the report states.

The corps' position is it has provided sufficient evidence that the pond is used for – and will continue to be used for – "fishing, boating and other recreational activities by interstate travelers."

County officials also cite the pond's isolation, as 1 reason, to remove it from the corps' jurisdiction. In the appeal letter sent by former Minidoka County Prosecuting Automer Rick Bollar to the corps, Bollar said the pond is not in the flow of the Snake River or any other waterway.

The Corps of Engineers became involved-in-the-pond discussion in-pluly 2002 when a corps employee submitted a wetland delineation report on behalf of Minidoka County officials who were then discussing selling the land. That report determined the pond and wetlands were waters of the United States and subject to the corps jurisdiction, as provided in the Clean Water Act.

Recall effort against Nevada governor fails

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP)—An anti-tax group trying to recall Nevada Gov. Kenny Guinn gave up Monday, acknowledging not enough signatures were gathered to qualify for the ballot.

Chris Hansen of The Committee to Recall Gov. Guinn said more than $1,000 signatures were gathered by volunteers—far short of the 128,109 needed to force a recall vote next year.

The recall leaders filed their petition with the secretary of state's office a day ahead of the Tuesday deadline, listing only three names — Hansen, Tony Dane and Ron Wade, all of Las Vegas.

"Many people were afraid of retailiation, so we're not going to retailiation, so we're not going to retailiation, so we're not going to have them worry about that," Hansen said. "We just decided we're not giving all the information out."

Never chew gum, Olympic consultant advises boosters

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) - Just

SALF LAKE CITY (AP) – Just as this city's bid campaign dispensed cash and jobs to influence international delegates who award the Olympic Games, so did the U.S. Olympic Committee, its former international relations director testified Monday. Alfredo La Mont, a key prosecution wincess in the bribery trial of the two Salt Lake bid leaders, conceded under defense questioning that the USOC awarded sports equipment or grants to "friendly" foreign Olympic officials and reimbursed their travel and other expenses, often in cash. Lawyers for bid chief Tom Welch and deputy Dave Johnson are trying to depict the gift-giving as so commonplace among competing cities that Salt Lake had to match the best of them. Former IOC President Juan Antonio Samaranch had to be addressed as "Your Excellency" while two other delegates went by the honorific "Your Royal Highmess," La Mont taught.

La Mont's testinany described a now-reformed world of Olympic bidding where it was common for bidding where it was common for bidding where it was common for wheel famey gifts into the rooms of delegates at 10°C functions. A secret Salt Lake consultant during five of his 15 years with the U.S. Olympic Committee, La Mont had the ear of Samaranch, spoke his language and could influence other key delegates.

La Mont, who owns a Colorado Springs, Colo, health chib, is testifying as part of a government agreement after pleading guilty to a pair of felony tax-ceusion charges for failing to report his Olympic consulting income. He resigned from the USOC in early 1999 when the Salt Lake bid scandal uncovered his monolighting.

Brown confronted La Mont with evidence showing the USOC itself tried to be helpful when Atlanta was bidding for the 1996 Summer Games by employing the daughter of 10°C director; general Francois Carrard and the niece of a Guatemalan delegate.

The Blackfoot Reservoir, which provided adult rearing habitat for the wild Yellowstone cutthroat trout that spawn in the upper Blackfoot River, was drained to just 4 percent of capacity for the winter, which is insufficient to support the fish until spring.

In the Upper Snake River region, catch rates were down and some fisheries lost access and aesthetics as water managers spretched supplies for irrigation. The reduced river flows are also weakening reproductive rates for citthroat in the South Fork of the Snake River.

"There are some socioeconomic implications," Demuth said, "The idea that this is tampering with nature, for instance, or liability issues over whether rain or snow should be made to full in a certain spot. Another issue, that has been brught up is a basic environmental issue, on putting a product into the environment that naturally doesn't belong."

Some groups believe that that cloud seeding denies some regions of rain or-snow-by forcing the precipitation to fall earlier than it normally would have, Demuth noted. Sniper-victim's father in Idaho says verdict offers relief

BALTIMORE (AP) – For Marion Lewis, whose daughter was slain during last year's sniper shootings, the relief that Virginia jury decided John Allen Muhammad should die on Monday was tempered by a lingering sense of pain and loss. Idaho panel warns about heating bills

BOISE (AP) – As cold weather finally settles over the state, regulators are warning residents that their heating bills will reflect significantly higher natural gas charges.

intors are warming to their heat significantly higher natural gas charges.

The higher rates have been in effect for some months, and Public Utilities Commission officials believe the rates will remain high for some time.

"It seems that the gas 'bubble' that kept gas prices quite low, almost in defiance of forecasts of looming shortages and higher prices, has finally burst," Commission President Paul Kjellander said on Monday.

Increasing demand on a natural gas production sector that has not keep pace combined with a colder than normal winter last year on the East Coast has squeezed supplies and driven up prices. Idaho customers today are paying as much as 80 perent more for gas than they did just five years ago.

"Unfortunately, the recent price levels don't seem to be an isolated event that vill go away in a lew months or even a year," Commission member Marsha Smith said, adding that the commission has no choice but to allow gas utilities to pass the higher prices on to customers.

Customers can sign up for equal-pay plans that spread the coxt of high winter bills over the entire year while low-income households can qualify for some energy assistance.

BOISE (AP) - A coroner's inquest is set for Dec. 2 into the deaths of a Boise couple during a shotout with police at the city airport.

Milton and Melody Sanchez, suspected in a string of armed orboberies, were found dead in their bullet-riddled was after leading police in an early-morning chase that ended on an airport runway.

Ada County Coroner Erwin Sonnenberg, said the jury will hear from witnesses to the chase and officers involved in the pursuit and shootout before deciding whether further investigation is required or any crimes were committed.

The Boise Police Department has been conducting its own investigation to determine whether officers followed policy.

Officers fired 30 shots at the van as the Sanchezes drove it on to the airport runway on April 9. One bullet hit Melody Sanchez, 32, in the leg and four hit Mitton Sanchez, 40, in the upper body.

But forensic tests indicated that both died of gunshort wounds to the head from a 38-caliber bullet. A . 38-caliber Rossi revolver was found in the Sanchezes' van.

TAMPA, Fla. - The Tampa Bay

Matt Beyant kicked a pair of 30-yard field goals for New York, which trimmed a 17-6 deficit to four points when Frank Walker intercepted a pass intended for Joe Juvercitous and returned it 56 yards for a touchdown with 12-42 remaining in the fourth quatter.

But instead of wilning down the stretch, as they did in falling to New Orleans, Carolina and Green Bay during the three-game losing streak, the Bucs held on this time. The Giants took an intentional safety with 157 te ps, then failed to recover an onside kick.

Collins' fumble spoiled a promising drive in the first quarter and Tampa Bay would not have scored its first touchdown without help from three penalties on the New York defense, which was Hagged for grabbing Brad Johnson's lacemask twice.

The costliest of the penalties was a facemask infraction on Keith Hamilton, which wiped out a third-down sack that would have forced Tampa Bay to settle for a field goal. Instead, the drive gained new life with a first down

remains mostly unchanged
NEW YORK - The opening of the regular season brought little change to the Top 25.

After a week in which 14 ranked teams played their for games of the season, the only changes in The Audiciated Press' weekly poll Monday were a couple of position swap.
The first 17 teams held their spots from last views were Wiske Forest and Cincinnate at 18 and 19 and Oldchomat State and San Commerciae.

Diske, which beart Detroit was No. 1 on one bullet and 1,566 points. Michigan State, as one opener, also had a first place vote and was third.

Arizona and Missouri werrourth and fifth respectively, while Kansas, the only other team with a No. 1 vote, was sixth.

NFL admits officiating blunder in Seattle game

blunder in Seattle game
NEW YORK - An officialing blunder Sundag gave Balumore critical extra time in its fourthquarter cumeback victory over Seattle, the NFI, said Monday
NFI. supervisor of officials like Percira said both the 40second clock and the game clock should have been retarted after an officials' contervore over a penalty call with 38 seconds left in regulation. The Seathawks had the ball and led 41-38.

Because the clock wasn't onds left in regulation. The Seahawsk had the ball and led 41.38.

Because the clock wasn't started, the Ravens had 39 seconds left instead of four or five when they got the ball back on downs at the Baltimore 33.

They ended up tying the game on Matt Stover's field goal following a key 44-ward passinterference penalty. Baltimore won 43-41 in overtime.

The mistake came after the clock stopped with 58 seconds left when head linesman Ed Camp threw a penalty flag. He Camp threw a penalty flag He Camp three or searthe on a second-down play on which Shaan Alexander sained 3 yards to the Baltimore 33.

The Ravens called their final timeout at that time, but the clock was stopped for the officials' conference in which it was determined Womack had reported as eligible. The flag was picked up.

Sir Walter Scott

— Sir Walter Scott

By opening one club and then jumping to two no-trump at his second turn, South shows 18-19 points. Gnore than the 16-17-required for a one-no-trump opening, and less than a two-no-trump opening. Six nortrump without delay, since he can count at least 33 points between the two hands, and he knows that South has shown a balanced hand.

On the lead of the spade jack, South can see only 11 top tricks and must find his 12th ione of the red suits. The diamond finesse is even money, whereas the chance of a 33 heart split is only about a one-in-three shot. Does that mean South should play on diamonds? No! The right play is to combine the two chances by ducking a heart at once. South wins the spade return and only now cashes the ace and king of hearts. If the hearts split evenly, there are now 12 tricks available without risk, If hearts fail to behave. South tries the diamond finesse.

Notice the important difference between ducking the first heart as opposed to playing off the ace and king at once. The former line allows you to test both red suits. Playing off the top hearts and then a third heart down you at loss in diamond? I have a diamond finesse would leave you with no way to develop a 12th trick without losing a second trick first.

ANSWER: Raise to three notrump directly without using Stayman. When you have more than enough high cards for game, sometimes the only danger is finding a tump suit that is about to split badly. Here, with your honors outside hearts, what can the opponents possibly do to hurt three no-trump? The answer? Nothing.

Some local consumers, nowaver, must have been confused by the news.

U.S. Cellular spokeswoman Holly Mendel on Monday said she had received calls from a couple of local retail managers who said customers came in requesting to transfer numbers. The customers had to be told to wait six months.

Project Mutual Telephone, mean-while, issued a press release to clear up some of the questions surrounding local number portability, dubbed LNP.

"PMI has been anticipating LNP for some time." Project Mutual's statement said. "We are working with other communication companies to overcome the technical aspects and make it possible in our area. We expect LNP to be available in 2004 but it is not clear when it will happen."

Sprint will lay off 2,000 workers by end of year

KANSAS CITY, Mo. – Sprint Corp. will lay off 2,000 workers, or nearly 3 percent of its work force, by the end of the year as part of an effort to cut operating expenses over the next three years.

The phone company said Monday the job cuts will involve both its wireline and wireless divisions. It employs about 70,000 people over-all.

An expanding rivalry with FedEx and Deutsche Post is holding back UPS price increases scheduled to go into effect Jour.5.

"You can't look at the 1.9 percent increase in isolation," said Morgan Stanley analyst James Valentine. "But it does demonstrate there is more intenso pricing pressure in the ground market than there has been any time in the past decade."

The moves make UPS rates more attractive for packages shipped to and from major markets. The vast majority of the 13 million shipments UPS handles every day are business-to-business shipments that ravel in such high-volume lanes.

ITPS rates tumped 3.9 percent

UPS rates jumped 3.9 percent this year for ground shipments as the company adjusted to competsate for wage and benefit increases for its 230,000 Teamster employees.

Answer Just one: Get real.
You're probably going to live a lot longer than you think, and you don't have nearly enough money to stop working even if you do keel over at 51.
At today's interest rates, you can expect your nest egg to throw off 58,000 annually, more or less, if you don't touch your principal.

MONEY TALK Liz Pulliam Weston

If you have to dip tinto the principal to pay living expenses, the money might last until, the year, you think you're going to die leaving your wife to face several decades of an underfunded retirement. That's not something you want to do to someone you love.

Just how did you come up with that life expectancy, anyway? The fact that other members of your family have died young doesn't mean you will. More likely you'll be the living embodiment of the bumper sticker that says, "iff I had known I was going to live this long. I would have taken bette care of myself."

So unless you've been told you have a terminal medical condition, you're going to have to get tion, you're going to have to get back out there and find a job, or learn to live on a lot less than you learn to twe on a nature.

There is, by the way, a whole movement of people who are doing just that - radically reducing their expenses so they can work a lot less, if at all. The bible of this group is "Your Money or Your Life," by Joe Dominguez and Vicki Robin (Penguin, 1999). You might find strategies in the book to fielp you with your goal. But make sure your plan has a reasonable chance of succeeding before you start.

Q. Years ago I advised my daughter not to take any of the many offers she would receive in college—from_credit_cards were dangerous. She listaned to me.

Now she's a young adult who has been employed by the same company for three years in a managerial position. She has her cash very well. What she doesn't have is a credit card. She just gets an immediate "no" when she applies because she has no credit history. What now?

A. You meant well – you really did. And you were right that credit incorrectly handled is dangerous. Too many students are graduating with enormous credit card debts (usually supplementing their enorms student loan debts).

But it's a rare person who can gredit. Most home buyers can't pay cash for their houses and need mortgages, which require credit histories. Your credit history also can be used by employers, landlord's and insurance companies to evaluate you and determine whether you get the job, the apartment or the coverage.

On top of that, it's never easier to get a credit card than when you're a college student. Credit card issuers are much pickier once students graduate, perhaps because parents are a lot less willing to bail out graduates who get into trouble than they are college students.

It's not too late for your daughter-though. There are plenty of ways to establish credit. She can get a small loan from her bank or credit union and repay it over time. She can apply for gas or department store cards, which are typically easier to get than major credit cards. She can get as secured credit card, which would give her a credit line equal to the amount of money she deposits with the issuing bank. You can add her as an authorized user on one of your credit cards.

When she gets some plastic, she should be sure to charge a little something every month, but not so much that she can't pay off the balance when the bill comes. She doesn't need to pay interest to establish a good credit history. One or two years of on-time payments should be all it takes for her to qualify for a regular credit card.

"Today, it's just much easier and much quicker and much cheaper to wire money from Los Angeles to Guadalajara (Mexico) or from New York to the Dominican Republic than it was to send it to Italy or Poland 100 years ago," Suro said.
The study found people receiving money from U.S. relatives are

"He might be thinking it's the best benefit for the company."
Ray_Neidl_an_analyst_with-Blaylock & Partners in New York, said of Mullin. "He had the run-in with his executive compensation. You're kind of not in the best light for negotiating (for pilot concessions) when you go through something like that."

Veteran Delta board member Gerald Grinstein, 71, who is taking over for Mullin as CEO, has a good record of negotiating wage concessions dating back to his days as head of Western Air Lines from 1985 to 1987, said Neidl.

"He did a commendable job in getting their cost structure down," Neidl said of Grinstein. 'He saved Western Airlines. Theywould have gone bankrupt if not for him.' Grinstein, of Bellevue, Wash, has been on the Delta board since 1987, when the company acquired Western Air Lines has merger.

since 1997, when the company acquired Western Air Tinds The amerger.

Delta also said Monday that John F. Smith Jr., a former chairman and CEO of General Motors Corp., would take over as chairman of the board at the April shareholders' meeting.

Mullin's decision to step down followed discussions he initiated with Delta's board earlier this year regarding his desire to retire, the company said in a statement.

Mullin and the board finalized the move at a meeting on Sunday.

Going wireless? Expect some glitches Online retailing continues

Problems include getting different systems to 'talk' with each other

The Associated Press

After a hard day's work as a grocury store manager, the toughest decision Joe Swantack has so make is where he'll relax while surfing the Internet graden and butterfly buskes? By the fireplace? Or should he open his laptop in the hubbut of his kitchen, where he can keep an eye on his three kids?
No longer confined to the deskupe computer in the basement of his home in Perrysburg, Ohio, Swantack is enjoying newfound freedom. And he's not alone—after his price drops, the market for wreless home networking products is sizzling.
The average price of a wireless home "access point" dropped from $140 in 2002 to $88 in recent months, and is expected to fall to about $50 next year. Even discount retailer Wal-Mart sells the gear that once belonged only to the technophile set.
But unimitated computer users hoping to go wireless this holiday season should be aware that setting up an unterhered network—like many computer-related

It works similarly to a cordless phone setup. The base station that your computer network needs is a device known as an access point, or sateway, that plugs into your cable

If any installation problems arise, they usually occur in getting the devices to communicate with each other. The newest computer operating systems – Windows XP and Mac OS X – have made the configuration process simpler, but the industry is still far from being able to say the majority of setups occur without a hirth, said Craig Mathias, a wireless industry analyst with the Farpoint Group.

Users can find themselves trapped in a jumble of unfamiliar computer and radio networking lines Product manuals can be confusing, and even people who pride themselves as being somewhat tech-savey have issued online pleas for help.

Swintack remembers the agony that preceded his wireless joy.

"It's not nearly as troubbefree as often times it's touted." Swantack said: It thought you'd plug it in and turn it on, and it would work hut it was more complicated than that."

Too proud to ask for sales help at less thus, Swintack purchased only an access point, not knowing he needed a router to network multi-

He was stuck again after setting it up. After frustrating hours of fitt-dding, he finally called his cable provider. A service representative walked him through the process over the phone and got the vireless network, including his printer, working as it should.

Interest in wireless home networking has soared now that a third of the nation's households are equipped with more than one computer and high-speed broadband intermet access. Faster wireless could bring major changes

The Hartford Courant

Say what you will about the con-venience of wireless technology, but good old-fashioned copper wires are tough to beat.

When it comes to moving data, hard wires simply do it faster and more reliably than wireless connections.

After all, when was the last time your landline telephone dropped a call, as your cell phone frequently does? And if your TV picture is bad, it's probably because you does land how eable. bad, it's probab don't have cable don't have cable.

Even 30, wireless connections have steadily improved in speed and quality. Now it looks as if wireless is poised to make yet another leap forward. And this one could permanently cut a lot of cords in the more.

leap forward. Ann time of permanently cut a lot of cords in the process.

The newest technology is known as ultrawideband, or UWB for short. Think of it as WiFi on steroids, a wireless standard capable of transmitting data at speeds that were previously only dreamed of ~55 megahits per second.

Though it's only about half as star as conventional business networks, which run at 100 megabits per second, it's still plenny speedy enough to handle most multimedia applications. That's what really counts.

dia applications. That's what reany counts.

And its'avast leap over the top WiFi speed of 11 megabits per second, especially when you consider the real-world WiFi speeds are only about half that.

So what can you do with a puiced-up wireless standard? The natural application is a wireless home network. Not only will your PCs talk to each other more quickly, but for the first time you can realistically pull other equipment into the network.

Want to suck digital video out of

into the network.

Want to suck digital video out of your capacorder without having to fuss with wires? No problem with ultrawideband. Ready to send photos from your PC to your television? Again, no problem.

Or how about music? With ultrawideband, you can easily send data from your PC to your stereo, regardless of where in the house those two devices sit.

That, in fact, is another key advantage of the new standard. Earlier Wil's revisions had a fairly limited range, but ultrawideband promises solid connections and speedy transfers over distances of 50 to 100 meters.

Add it up and ultrawideband looks like the "killer app" for home networks.

With it, the long-awaited convergence of personal computing and consumer electronics can take place in earnest. When computers, cameras, TVS, stereos, DVD players and telephones can communicate wirelessly, new horizons open up.

and why stop there? Link the stove, the fridge, the furnace, the lights, the alarm clock, the cof-feepot and the garage door open-er. Ultrawideband supports as many as 245 devices on a single home network.

Better yet, all of it happens with-out wires (well, except for the power cords, which we'll still need).

Alas, ultrawideband won't be home for Christmas, For one thing, there's the usual standards fight going on among tech companies. For another, there's certain to be a few bugs in the earliest products. But you're save to see the first ultrawideband equipment hir the market over the next year. Watch out when it does. If ultrawideband delivers on its promise, it will change your life.
