According to 2nd District Judge John Bradbury, that's not kosher. Bradbury ruled in the case after the attorney general's office sued Cottonwood/School District for general's office sued Cottonwood School District for its unsafe conditions.

Bradbury said that by authorizing him to levy taxes for school repairs, the stater is asking him to violate the Idaho Constitution. Under the constitutional doctrine of separation of powers, the Legislature cannot delegate its taxing authority to the courts.
(A note: The 2nd District rulling. is. separate from 4th.
District Judge Deborah Bail's recent ruling on the same law Bail ruled HB 403 unconstitutional in October, for unfairly hitting property tax owners and for violating the prohibition agains laws targeting specific cases. The state has already appealed Bail's decision.to. the Supreme Court.)
Bradbury, however, has a point. Judges have no place, and no authority to determine taxation. But the judge didnote that the-Legislature-candelegate taxing authority to delegate taxing authority to local school districts. "Had the Legislature required the school district to impose the levy to fund school repairs and asked the court to enforce that mandate, then the court would be enforcing the law and honoring its constitutional rule by doing so. But that is not what HB 403 does."

Lawmakers may need to follow Bradbury's strongly word ed counsel and amend HB 403 in the coming session. That ways, school districts can legally request—higher—taw-levies—for fixing unsafe school facilities—rather than relying on a judge to do it.

Chool — Even-then, the——Even-then, the handful of school districts pursuing this case won't be satisfied. They will continue to argue that the state Legislature – not local school districts – has the

That argument

fix schools.

That argument will not fly with Idaho taxpayers. Few will accept the notion that Wendell taxpayers are responsible for school repairs. In Lapwai, Particularly since the tax rates in the pleading districts aren't out of line with others in the state.

As we've noted before, this case lives on because a few north-Idaho-districts,-led-by-Democrat lawyer Robert Huntley, are trying to get the rest of the state to fund their schools when they don't want to do it themselves.

When taxpayers in some communities responsibly pay for their own local school facilities, it's unjust to make them also the guardians for other districts. We don't ask taxpayers in Rupert to pay for their own local school facilities, it's unjust to make them also the guardians for other districts. We don't ask taxpayers in Rupert to pay for local guardians for other districts. We don't ask taxpayers in Rupert to pay for local gardians for other districts. We don't ask taxpayers in Rupert to pay for local gardians for other districts. We don't ask taxpayers in Rupert to pay for local gardians for lawnakers.

Fortunately for lawmakers to agree

Maries.
Fortunately for lawmakers, Bradbury appears to agree that the rest of HB 403 still works. The law, he says, "is a constitutional delegation to the school district of discretionary power to impose an educational necessity levy."

But the state needs to clearly give that duty to districts -not to judges. That way, when local voters neglect their duty to fix schools, the rightful authority can take steps to get it done.

There is also a suspicion that polling data overstate the support for gay marriage, much like surveys on black candidates often show more strength than appears on Election Day.

Unknown is how this issue will influence voting decisions. Worth noting is that opposition to gay—marriage is strongest, among the less affluent and educated, typically Democratic voters—and weaker among those with college degrees and higher incomes, a GOP group.

Idaho can't afford a renewed nuclear mission

nuclear mission

I was appalled when I heard they almost got an energy bill passed which included putting a nuclear plant at the Idaho National Engineering and Environmental Taboratory. The bill passed the House where our Rep. Simpson voted for it. Fortunately, in the Senate, it failed to be forced through because the vote of 57 for and 40 against did not meet the necessary 69 votes to pass, despite the fact that our Sens. Craig and Crapo voted for it. After years of fighting to have the nuclear waste existing at the INEEL removed, I can't believe our representatives would sell us down the fiver and allow "production" of nuclear waste as never be complete.

believe our representatives would sea us down the river and allow "production" of nuclear-wasto-at-the-site. Nuclear waste can never be completely contained. It can be stored, but there is no way known to "dispose" of it. Producing energy in nutlear power plants is not economically sound due to the cost of transport, storage and monitoring radioactive waste. The cumulative effect of radioactivity causes early death, and disease even if a puteliar actident. does not occur, which makes our area uninhabitable and spreads radioactivity around the globe. The only real solution to nuclear waste is to quit producing it. Please write to your Sens. Larry Caig and Mike Crapo and Rep. Mike Simpson before they reconvene in January and tell them we do not want nuclear power plants. The bill should be rewritten because it does not serve the purpose that was intended: energy independence. See www.environmentaldefense.org for details.

Iraq-stopover adds to Bush's political edge

A s historian Doris Kearns Goodwin pointed out this Week on NBC's "Meet the Press," there is nothing unusual or unprecedented about presidents visiting the troops during warrime. Lincoln did it several times during the Civil War and FDR managed it during World War II. More recent presidents have shared meals with the military in Korea, Vietnam and Kosovo.

David S. BRODER

So, despite the stealth and drama that marked President Bush's flight into Baghdad, he bush flight into Baghdad, he was doing what the commander in chief often does, and his visit, brief as it was, clearly cheered the troops. Democrats, properly, refrained from criticizing the trip.

But the absence of controversy does not diminish the political significance of the journey, which dominated television coverage and newspaper headlines over Thanksgiving weekend. My own view of its importance differs from many of the reactions I have read and heard. It may be politically risky, even some Republicians suggest, because it strengthens the link between Bush and an increasing ly uncertain venture in Iraq.

because it strengthens the link between Bush and an increasingly uncertain venture in Iraq. I am skeptical of that argument, because the president is so thoroughly identified with the decision to go to war that he could not shed that label if he wanted to – and there's no sign that he does. True, Congress and the United Nations, played supporting roles in throwing down challenge to the Iraqi regime. But both were responding to Bush's, initiative, and no one doubts he was the moving force—the will—behind the decision. Another theory is that the photo of Bush at the mess hall in Baghdad was designed to wipe out memories of his flight onto the deck of the carrier USS Abraham Lincolm, where he stood on May 1 under a banner prematurely claiming "Mission Accomplished." The video clips of that day have become and satil remain a symbol-of-the. Bush administration's hubris and lack of planning for the postwar problems of Iraq.

Those problems were only momentarily disguised by the excitement of the president's visit. November was the deadliest month of the year for U.S. casualties, with 79 American dead. In addition, seemingly coordinated attacks have target ed British, Italian, Spanish and Japanese personnel working for the coalition in Iraq.

At the moment, many.

that the administration really knows what it is doing now that Saddam Hussein is out of power or-has-a-strategy to accomplishet transition to Iraqi self-rule. Serious criticism has been heaped on the Bush team over its lack of postwar planning, and the questioning is coming not just from Democrats but from credible Republicans - Sens. Dick Lugar and John McCain, for example. It is no wonder that voters are confused and increasingly skeptical.

As Election Day approaches, Bush will face increasing political pressure to demonstrate that its strategy is working. The agenty awaited hallmarks of success would be significant cuts in U.S. troop strength in Iraq and/or the creation of a representative Iraqi government.

Absent either of those thing, Iraq is likely to be a political drag on the president next.

November.

But the visit to Baghdad and the resulting coverage are reminders of the huge advantage Bush holds as the incumbent over any Democratic chal lenger. Because he is the head of state, the man who speaks and acts for all Americans in his ceremonial role, he has a claim on the voters' emotions that no challenger can match. The opportunities for that bond to be strengthened are endless – and as he has demonstrated, notably during the 10 days following the Sept. 11 attacks, Bush can rise to the occasion.

The contrast is clear. The Democratic aspirants are debating in serious and sensible terms whether further international help can be obtained in Iraq and whether current troop levels are adequate. They are challenging the administration's policy judgments. It is all very rational—and appropriate. But none of it packs the emotional wallop of the president's flying visit to the troops.

By occupying the symbolic heights as commander in chief, Bush puts himself in the cathird seat politically. And the Democrats can't even complain.

Americans – probably most – still respond favorably when Bush vows, as he did in Baghdad, not to retireat from "a band of thugs and assassins" but to stay "until the job is done." That kind of muscular rhetoric still elicits cheers, but it does not offset the negative trends in public opinion. Two things are costing Bush at home: the almost daily casualty reports and the growing uncertainty

Gay marriage critic ignores

Gay marilage critic ignores science of the womb

I am responding to Father Parrick O'Grady's letter on same-sex marriage that appeared on Nov. 24.

At first, I intended to dispose of each of his arguments, but then I realized he ignores the formation of fetal gender in the mother's womb – else why would he declare that gays are unnatural. Fill help you out, Father.

At the instant of conception, the mess of cells have no gender, but a little later the embryo becomes female. That's correct—we, all of us, starned as a female. If the embryo has genes for testicles, then it is should be accepting a blast of testosterone. That blast will "sex" the mind of the embryo. If the embryo accepts the emplete blast of testosterone, then at puberty, the resultant.

male will accept another blast - and we, all of us, know what a young man in puberty acts like. However, if the genes for testiles do not properly accept the blast of testosterione, then at puberty the young male probably will not accept any or all of the second blast.

of God, out the specific of the complete blast of testosterone, then in life he will be attracted to males and not females.

There are, of course, variations.

A fetus that accepts more testosterone than one that accepts very little or none at all will probably be a biseval male But, Father, he too is a natural person.

Other variations occur with females in the womb, Lacking the generafor testicles, a female—embryo or fetus could still accept part of the blast of testosterone—and, consequently, will be born female and be bissoxual and/or manishly lesbian.

Another variation is the intersender-baby-The-baby is-born-with indeterminable genitalia. Usually, these babies are very quickly made into females.

But they are all natural and should have the same rights as every American. And, Eather, they are not a threat to dur national security or our culture—they are part of them.

TWIN FALLS - City leaders need to research the wisdom of moving the airport north of the Snake River, one City Council north of the Snake River, one City Council member says.

"When people say, 'Let's build a new airmort, we will have enough facts in hand as to whether or not we should,' Councilman Chris Talkington said Tuesday.

Talkington raised the issue at a meeting of the Joslin Field, Magic Valley Airport Advisory Board, of which he is a member. Though Talkington desart advocate moving the airport, he said details should be-known in case someone makes a proposaldetails such as weather patterns in various areas, what would have to be done about Federal Aviation Administration grants and what airlines want.

The board made no decisions about the airport siting issue on Tuesday. But board members said one of the topics they want to address is the misconception that a new airport would nutomatically be successful.

"We need to challenge those assumptions," Talkington said. "Twe seen no evidence that relocation of an airport north of the canyon rim could be feasible or economically viable. But I wouldn't want toclose-the-door-H-some-group-came-up-with.

new information, we'd look at it."

The impetus for the discussion came from the recent actions of the Friedman Memorial Airport Authority, which is studying the feasibility of building a new airport south of the current one in Halley, board members said.

Magic Valley Airport Manager Bill Carberry underscored that it's premature to discuss a new airport at length since anythinges are so far down the road.

"We shouldn't be reactive because we don't know what they're proposing," he cautioned. "Right now it's intangible and it's emotional."

Board members agreed that taking the emotion out of the issue will prepare everyone to make the best decision.

Talkington recalled how divisive the issue was 30 years ago, when communities were deciding where to locate the airport.

"The last thing I wan is for Ir to Boronte

Magic Valley Airport Advisory Board, members are concerned about knee-jerk reactions-to-topics-that are merely-being discussed informally now.

But Talkington said, "Long-range planning is one of our charges. The quicker we identify questions and salient points, the better."

RUPERT — Norman Seiboldlived such an interesting life that one local author decided to write a book about part of it.

The story of how Seibold, a former Minidoka County commissioner who died Friday at 88, helped evacuate Mormon missionaries from Western Germany in 1939 is captured in the book "Mine Angels Round About." — "Norm had his own moral compass," said Ferry—Montague, the author that got to know Seibold while writing her book. "He determined what was the right thing to do and he did it."

The book tells the story of how Seibold helped find missionaries and get them safely out of Germany as war was breaking out.

Seibold helped find missionaries and get them safely out of Germany as war was breaking out.

Seibold went to train stations, and employed a code often used by missionaries to call to each other. He climbed atop a baggage car and whisted the first five notes of the Mormon hymn "Do What is Right."

Soon, several missionaries would gathered around him-Infive days he rounded up all 85 missionaries in the country. They all—were evacuated safely.

While his missionary service characterized Seibold during the mid-1930s, it is his service to the Mini-Cassia community that many remember.

J. Weldon Beck, a former Cassia County commissioner, worked with Seibold on a number of committees including one dedicated to solving one of the area's most difficult questions of the time where to put the landfill.

"We were trying to solve the garbage problem," Beck said.
Commissioners allowed an incinerator to be built in Heyburn and later bought a plot of ground on the Burley Butte for the landfill. Garbage from eight different counties is brought to the landfill. Seibold, Beck and the rest of the committees wrestled with the sandfill question for several years before settling on the Burley Butte.

Later in the day, expansion and relocation were the topics of discussion at the Friedmani Memorial Airport Authority meeting in Hailey.

The airport's governing body has aiready approved a study of whether to build a $100 million airfield.

"The recommendation is to meet-FAA-standards-and-future-demand at a new site," said Rick. Baird, Friedman's manager.

"That is the preferred alterna-tive of the board."
Friedman Memorial is ranked behind Boise as Idaho's second busiest commercial airfield, with a staff of 10 and an operating budget of 55.5 million. Friedman Memorial is limited in expanding because of border-ing high terrain and runway length.

St. of I win Falls, returned to his Ileawenly Father, Saturday, Now. 29, 2003. I from Magic Valley, Regional Medical Center in Twin Falls; Idaho. Wayne was born Aug. 7, 1947, in Rupert, Idaho, the son of Jake and Virginia Stemm Ellers. As a young man, he served his country—in-the-National Guard. During his Ilfe, his work experience ranged through many different fields. He worked for over nine years at Clear. Springs Foods in Buhl, where he worked in production, on the fish lines and in the ponds. For the past year, he had been employed as a bar assistant with Cactus Pete's Resort and Casino. Wayne in his off hours enjoyed tinkering: with cars—You-could-always find him with the hood up. When not tinkering, with cars—You-could-always find him with the hood to listen to his police scanners and his-GB. He-never knew a stranger and always had. a smile, and a helping hand for exeryonic. He was dedicated to his family aid friends and could always be counted on to offer love and support. He was a good and decent man who made friends wherever he went... In fact, he got his nickname from a little girl who could-nit say Wayne and she called him "Wing." The family from then on affectionately called him their right "wing." One of Wayne's other favorite pastimes was to have coffee at the Rancher, And when he could get away he loved to go out to Miracle Hol Springs. when he could get away he loved to go out to Miracle Hot Springs. His family and friends knew Wayne as a Prayer Warrior. There-was-ulways-a-need somewhere, and he would often ask them to join him in prayer for someone or something.

He was very active in his Home-Bible Study Group and was also a member of the Twin Falls. First. Baptist Church. He will always be remembered for his friendship and love, and those who knew and loved Wayne will miss him very much.

Surviving Wayne are his son, Matthew Eilers of Kimberly, Idaho, Riis mother, Virginia Eilers of Rupert, Idaho, and two grandchildren, Preston B. Eilers and Donovan M. Eilers. Also surviving is his dear friend, Laura Aguirre of Gooding, Idaho.

John Weston had planned to follow in his father's footsteps and make the Army his career. But on the eve of his induction, he mangled his hand in a food-grinder. So-he-went-to-the-college of Southern' Idaho and studied accounting, then went to work at Albertson's in Builey as an apprentice baker.

work at Albertson's in Burley as an apprentice baker.

Twenty-four years ago, he started working at Smith's grocery in Twin Falls and eventually became head-baker. He is glad, he said, even if he chose his career by default. Eventually, he studied under a Waldorf Astoria pastry chef and got his master pastry chef certificate.

When he is not baking, he enjoys working, with youth, and, has worked in Scouting for about 10 'years, having earned 'the Silver Beaver, the highest Scout award an adult can receive. Weston also shoots clay pigeons, was president of the Jerome Rod and Gun. Club and likes to hunt and fish. He often bakes pies, cakes and cookies for Jerome Booster Club fund-raisers and for other clubs to which he belongs. He even studied martial arts for a while.

Weston and wife, Bonnie, have five children and four grandchildren, with one on the way. His extended family built a cabin together mear Mackey, and Weston likes to spend time there, in the mountains.

At home, he does a lot of Dutch-oven, Cajun and Oriental cooking.

Old-fashioned. from-scratch

Old-fashioned, from-scratch baking is fast becoming a lost art, weston said. With a little experience, a good scratch cook can tell by the feel of the dough if it needs more sugar, more flour oil iquid or when the bread dough has been kneaded enough and is ready to let rise.

Weston can even tell, by the sound the dough makes in the bread mixer, when the dough has been kneaded enough.

He said using the right flour is crucial to succ asful scratch baking. Gluten allows the bread dough to be pulled to a very thin texture before it comes apart, he explained.

All-purpose flour is a good Old-fashioned from-scratch explained.

All-purpose flour is a good bread flour. But for cakes, you need to use cake flour because it has no gluten in it. Cake flour makes cakes fine-textured. If you use an all-purpose flour. on a cake, you will get a tough-textured cake.

The right-tree: You'd-better-shop-around

Santa has already made his first appearance at the end of the Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade, and that means you're going to be putting up the Christmas tree any time now.

Here are a few tips to make sure the holiday season goes smoothly at your house:

• Choose a transition

Choose a tree like you do Choose a tree like you do fresh carrots. Give a potential Chrismas tree—the carrot test this way. Bend a needle between your, thumb and forefinger. If it snaps before it bends, it's probably fresh. Unless, of course, it's frozen so solidly that it has no choice.

Make it go bumpity-bump bump on the asphalt. Pick the tree up by the trunk and thump it solidly on the ground a couple of times. If enough needles fall out of it to weave baskets with, choose a fresher one.

· Measure twice. Whether you

Measure twice. Whether you choose your tree from a tree lot or fresh from a tree farm, know ahead of time exactly what will fit in your living room. Measure the area first, and take a tape measure shopping with you.
Once home, keep, it cool. While you scrounge for and untangle last year's lights, give the tree a rest. Cut a couple of inches off the trunk and stand it up in a big bucket of water in the garage, or someplace where it won't have to stand in the sun.

Set he's straight. Cut the end of the trunk straight across. Be sure to cut to white, moist wood.
To make sure it does not dry out, plunge it right into the biggest container you can find. The cells on that cut end seal up within 20 minutes of being exposed to dry air. After that, you'll have to re-cut the end and start all over again.
Hefore that reper will drink. before that tree will drink

She's a heavy drinker. And you want a long winter's nap. A 6-foot evergreen van easily suck up robably don't want to get up in the middle of the night to refill the tree stand reservoir, make sure i', holds that much. Remember the 20-minute rule.

· For a short time only. If it's a the holidays, make sure it doesn't stay in the house more than a week. Any more than that and it will come out of dormancy. Leave the tree, outside (in a container that assures it gets enough water), the tree, outside (in a container that assures it gets enough water out of the sun as long as you possibly can. You might even consider leaving it outdoors, bedeeked with lights, where you can enjoy it through the window. If the ground—is-not-frozen-you-can—plant-the-tree right after Christmas. Some folks pre-dig the hole where the tree will go before the ground freezes. If that didn't happen, your tree can stay in its container till spring. Just make sure it has adequate water.

Missouri nuts gain accolades

By Jill Wendholt Silva The Kansas City Star

You know you've entered pecan country when you spy a hand-lettered sign with the word "Pecans" hastily scrawled on it. In the fall months, a drive from Kansas City, Mo., to Nevada, Mo., is punctuated by these home-grown signs. Pulled to the side of the road, someone with a pecan tree on their property is sure to be selling sacks of native nuts from the back of a pickup truck. For years roadside vendors were about the only, way, to, crack into the local Missouri Northern pecan crop. But in the fall of 2000, into the local Missouri Northern pecan crop. But in the fall of 2000, five "Vernori" County produces formed a partnership to build a processing plant to shell and package the nuts in larger quan-

package the nuts in larger quan-tities. When you buy nuts in plastic bags, spread them out on truys as soon as possible to air dry to avoid mold growth. Store unshelled nuts in airtight con-tainers in a cool, dry, dark loca-tion below 70 degrees for up to four months. Whole, shelled nut-meats remain fresh longer than nuts in pieces, so chop the nuts just before you plan to use them.

QUICK AND EASY ROASTED AND SALTED PECANS

Makes 14 to 16 servings 14 to 16 ounces pecan halves or eces 1 1/2 tablespoons melted butter

the name "throwed rolls."
On our way, home, my sis and I stopped in Murfeesboro Ark, on the day that the Arkansas quarter was launched - and I walked around Diamond Crater Sate Park looking for shiny rocks.
Found a couple of sand-sized crystals, but I need a magnifying glass to see them. I imagine they are probably quartz or silicon. I'm not planning to retire yet, but it was fun looking.

TWIN FALLS - What's old is new in this year's Sawrooth Central Idalio Conference basketball race. Familiar Jose shifted positions, known names are moving up, and everyone is looking for a 3A playoff spot. With 13-year assistant Dennie Smyer stepping into role of Dechoed coach, last year's state champions are looking to fill more than just the spot former coach Loyd Garey left. The Hornets lost seven seniors from last year's 22.2 squad. Filling in those spots will be seniors Bret Wardle and Nick Ramsey, along with juniors Bjorn Christiansen and Auron Edgar.

With an athleticism Smyer hopes will carry over from this year's state-qualifier football ream, the Horners will look to wear down their copponents with a transition attack.
"We want an up and down game," Smyer said. "Put pressure on all sides of the court at all times."

times.

Filer has to fill the holes left by nine graduations off last year's state-qualifying team. Senior point guard Cody, Ehrmantrout will be looked to for scoring and floor leadership, but a core of junior players will need to step up their game to give coach Jim Annala' the depth the Wildcats will need to make a run at state. "Anyone who wins at home has a great opportunity to win at the end of the year," said Annala. Coming off a 12-10 season, the Kimberly, Bulldogs, return, four, the league title. While they don't have great team-size, 6-foot-l-senior Rocky Zodrow gives the Bulldogs an inside presence. If coach Roger Keller's team can find bench depth behind the returning Zodrow, Andy McGrew, Jace Dille, and Dustin Lammers, Kimberly will be tough. "I like the chemistry and attitude of this team. We have decent quickness and shoot the ball fairly well," said Keller.

Dotting the rest of the Sawtooth landscape will be Buhl, Gooding, and Wood River.

"We had a chance. It came down to maybe one or two plays at the end and we didn't get it done," Ilasselbeck said. "Those. wins would be huge right now." "Wend build rounder of the Mid-Continent Conference."

Wendell is looking to take things a step farther than last year's second place finish in the Canyon Conference. Led by 6-foot-8 senior Kael Pope, the Trojans are quick and experienced. Pope - who averaged 15-points and 12 rebounds last year - has verbally committed to Southern Utah University and is expected to sign a letter of intent to play NCAA Division 1 hops for the Thunderbirds of the Mid-Continent Conference."

"We'll build around Kael," said

"We'll build around Kael," said Wendell coach Allen Kelsey. "Going to him gives us a high percentage look."

Soing to him gives us a high percentage look."

Supporting Pope will be a trio of athletic guards from this year's state champion Wendell football feam. Seniors Tyrul Davis, Cody Howerton, and Jysen Lancaster will look to prove they're as good on hardwood as they are on turf. "We're confident, but we realize we'll have to play every night," Kelsey said.

The Valley Vikings will have something to say about the outcome of the Canyon Conference.

Last year's conference champi-ons return 6-foot-2 senior: Mike Grant, who averaged 18 points and seven rebounds per game last season.

year, the Vikings look to have the weapons to make another run ai state.

"The juniors were a big part of the second place finish and a great championship game with Wendell," said Mussman.

Glenns Ferry returns a small but experienced team that is looking to improve on last year's third-place finish in the Canyon Conference. With only four place restaller than six feet, the Pilots will look to run and pester opposing teams into turnovers. However, going up against the likes of Wendell's Pope and Valley's Grant will be a tall order. Chancie fluxs, a 6-foot-2 returning post, will need to find a way to give the Pilots an inside presence against taller conference opponents.

Use holiday season to teach responsible spending, shopping

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—The snowman bucket is out at Jody Lowe's house in Wauwatosa, Wis.
From Thanksgiving until Christmas Eve, Lowe, her husband and two young children will dutifully 'throw their spare change in the plastic bucket each day. "We might throw in a buck if someone. has a special_accomplishment;" said Lowe.
It's a family ritual that began a few years ago to encourage the charitable spirit of the season and to help make the holidays a little less gift-focused in the Lowe household. The ritual extends. to Lowe's three sblings and their children, and her parents.

KIDS AND BUSINESS Steve Rosen

At a big family gathering on Christmas Eve, all the children's name are placed in a hat. One name gets drawn, and the lucky child gets to choose which charlty will receive the money that's been collected in all the buckets.

"We've raised several hundred dollars over the last few years," said Lowe. For many families, rituals like said Lowe.

For many families, rituals like this are a great way to inoculate lids against holiday greed and the gimmies. As many young children get consumed by visions of tearing open stacks of colorfully wrapped packages, it can be a real, challenge for parents and grandparents to survive the next few weeks without succumbing to spending pressures.

How can you keep your sanity and avoid breaking the bank?

Regardless of whether money is no object or the budget is tight, use the holiday season to teach your kids responsible spending and shopping, and the joy that comes from assisting those who are less fortunate.

One approach we take is to invite each of our three kids to create wish lists. Faster than the time it takes to clear away the Thanksgiving feast, the kids' notes go up on the refrigerant. They know they won't get everything they wish for—that's made-clear. Sometimes they even rank their-most desired two or three gifts.

gifts.

It's a good way for us to establish some priorities, and it cuts down on some of the frivolous spending and unrealistic gift ideas.

Several readers, such as Lowe, whom I've conversed with in recent weeks through e-mails, also shared suggestions on how parents - and their children - can avoid going overboard during this season of conspicuous consumption.

Besides the snowman buckets,

The country produces the same amount of clothing as it did three years ago, but with 20 percont-fower-workers, said Henzy-Fransen, director of the Honduran Apparel Manufacturers Association, which represents nearly 200 export factories. "We're earning less and producing more," he said, "following the Wal-Mart philosophy." That's harsh medicine for a developing country. The clothing industry is one of the few sources of decent jobs for unkilde workers in this nation of 6 million. Many of those jobs depend on Wal-Mart. "You could be looking at a government meltdown if something were to happen to this industry," said Raja Rajan, a factory manager active in the apparel association. In Rajan's view, Wal-Mart is so important to the stability of Honduras that leaders should cultivate stronger ties with the company, almost as they would a foreign country. He has lobbied the government to send high-level envoys to Wal-Mart's Arkansas headquarters, something Bangladesh and other countries already do.

1,300 employees will be among the casualties. He manages a factory on the outskirts of San Pedro Sula that cranks out clothing for Wal-Mart, Target Corpand other retailers.
Wilburn's employer, Oxford Industries of Atlanta, once owned 44 factories in the American South. It shuttered them all in the last 15 years and moved the work to cheaper locales. That's how Wilburn found himself in Honduras.
He is proud of his clean, modern factory. "It's nicer than the one I ran in South Carolina," Wilburn said.
Still, he has had trouble turning a profit. He laid off 500 employees two years ago. Even here, it's hard to meet Wal-Mart's prices. Wilburn expects that Oxford will close his factory—in the next-few-years-and-move—on to another country where on to another country where basic cotton clothes, such as Wal-Mart's Old Glory khaki pants, can be produced for less.
"Our business is a lot of twill stuff," he said. "That will be gone."

It was it long ago that WalMart was fighting to keep manufacturing jobs on U.S. soil.

In 1985, founder Sam Walton launched his "Bring It Home to the USA" program. "Wal-Mart believes American workers can make a difference," he told his suppliers, offering to pay as much as 5 percent more for U.S. make products.

In his 1992 memoir, "Made in America," Walton claimed that the program had saved or created nearly 100,000 jobs by using "the power of this enormous enterprise as a Torce for change."

But the late Walton's muchtrumpeted effort soon was overtaken by the rise of the global economy. The spread of the Internet and other technology, —long—with-U.S.-led-efforts-tocar down trade barriers, made it easier to move goods and capital across borders.

To maintain its edge on price.

To maintain its edge on pric-ing, Wal-Mart quietly joined other retailers in a worldwide search for the cheapest sources of production.

In apparel, the process begins with Celia Clancy, From a renovated warehouse near the company's headquarters, the Wal-Mart executive vice president oversees the world's largest clothing budget, estimated at $35 billion in 2000.

Clancy gives her buyers a "Plus One" mandate every year. For each item they handle, they must either lower the cost or raise the quality.

To demonstrate, sho pulled a pair of girls' shorts off the wall of her craimped office and gave them a tug.

"This was a dumb little knit pullon short," Clancy said. "We improved the fabric, put some more fashion in it and are selling it for the same price as last year $$5.19."

Keeping prices low like this means squeezing costs at every step. Clancy and her buyers have trimmed back the number of brands, styles and color schemes. That allows Wal-Mart to consolidate its purchases of fabric, accessories and thread and to wrangle steep discounts from suppliers.

Clancy's buyers used to rely on a Hong Kong company and other intermediaries to find baron a Hong Kong company and other intermediaries to find bargains overseas.

This year, Wal-Mart established its own global procurement division to hunt for the cheapest raw materials, manufacturers and shipping routes. Last year, for instance, the company rerouted cargo from a port in Hong Kong to the southern Chinese province of Guangdong, where shipping rates were lower. The savings 5650,000.

In purchasing fabrics such as denim and khaki, Wal-Mart plans to approach three to five mills around the world and pit them against each other. "We'll be putting our global muscle on them," said Ken Eaton, head of the global procurement division, which has 21 offices in 18 courties.

Eaton believes he can reduce costs at least 20 percent by cut ting out the middleman and buying directly from foreign factories. He feels a sense of urgency about his mission, in part because he believes the company's "Buy American" focus left in playing catch up.

"Honestly, we're kind of late to the party," he said. "There are a lot of companies out theze that have been direct-importing and understanding the global aspect of sourcing for a long, long time."

As late as 1995, Wal-Mart said imports accounted for no more than 6 percent of its products. Today-consulting firm-Retail-Forward estimates that 50 percent to 60 percent of the merchandise in the company's U.S. stores is imported.

Wal-Mart Chief Executive H. Lee Scott Jr. said in an interview that the trend reflected an inescapable reality: U.S. consumers aren't willing to pay even a little extra for a "Made in America" label, "The customer ultimately drives that," he said.

■ Wal-Mart audit stance generates controversy

Los Angeles Times

Safe working conditions...
Reasonable hours. No child labor.
These are among the rules that Wal-Mart Stores Inc. and other retailers imposed on their foreign contractors after a series of scandals in the 1990s.
Yet just how well Wal-Mart's contractors abide by its standards is something of a mystery – and a source of controversy.
Unlike other retailers, WalMart reluses to open its suppliers' factories to independent inspections.

U.S. factory_closes shutters as garment orders head overseas

Sewing contractor Rob Reed shut down his factory in Commerce, Calif., this summer after 17 years, laying off 100 workers and adding his name to a long list of bankrupt U.S. manufacturers.

list of bankrupt U.S. manutacturers.

-He isn't shy about assigning blame for what happened.

-We've been forced out of business, No. 1, because of the likes of Wall-Mart Was once a solid account for his company, Stitches. But every season, Reed said, the retailer demanded a lower price, shrinking his profit to the point that an unexpected expense could push him into the red.

-In January, he lost money on a Wal-Mart order. A few months later, he was asked to make 10,000 intricately worked cardigans for the retailer within a week. The sample already bore a Wal-Mart price tag: $8.47. "You can't make it here at that price," Reed said at the time. "Not legally, anyway."

Reed said at the time. "Not legally, anyway,"

Although desperate for work, he tumed the order down.
Reed, 61, now works as a consultant and dreams of opening another contract shop thair can focus more on quality and still succeed.

He isn't terribly hopeful, however, "The thing is," Reed said, "with so many contractors on the verge of extinction, there's always someone willing to do it cheaper."

"When we first made the transition," Lowe said, "there was a little grumbling. But now we all feel like our Christmas Eve gettogethers have become so much more family focused."

Suzanne Short, a children's money author from Dallas who also has 13 grandchildren, said, kids-regardless of age should be encouraged to make gifts for a parent, grandparent or sibling overrything from cookies to jewely to a painted rock for a paperweight, She also suggested adopting a needy family and letting kids spend their own money on some of the gifts.

Several parents also said it's instructive, to tell kids point.

blank what presents may not be in the cards this year. "Kids can be realistic if you give them accurate information," said Barbara Williams, a mother of two boys now in their early 20s. "The key is starting them young to not expect that their every wish will be granted."

On the other hand, the Virginia woman noted, "my observations seem to point to the fact that many parents haven't figured this out."

Lenny desires his future to include a 'cool' family

"I like to do fun stuff like play with friends and have fun with my bike.
"I would like a family that is cool, likes to hang out and travel and does a lot of fun stuff. I want to be the only child. I would like my dad to be a fun person who likes. to hunt, and, likes to gp places. I also would like a momento is a carring person. I hope she likes to have fun and do all kinds of things as a family.
"Id like a dog or a cat because I enjoy playing with them when I'm bored and they could keep me safe. I like dogs because you can play with them all the time and have fun."
Lenny's caseworker describes him as someone who is polite and well-mannered, who cares about his appearance; someone who stands up for other people and is protective of people he cares about. Lenny is a guy who likes to know what the future brings. That's difficult for a teenager living in foster care. He is ready and motivated to have a permanent family. He would like to be an only only do have in the family, some times they get more respect and that's not fair."

Teens-who threaten suicide sometimes do more than talk

DEAR ABBY: My son, "Sean," is only 13; but he will be attending his best friend's funeral. "Frank" died by his-own-hand. Apparently he had told many of his friends that he was going to kill himself, but no one took him kill himself, but no one took him seriously. I am writing in the hope that my letter will alert children and adults that children and adults that children and adolescents-sometimes mean it when they threaten suicide. I pray parents will instruct their children to always tell an adult if one of their friends talks about suicide. I have done that now, but unfortunately it is too late to help Frank.

DEAR GRIEF-STRICKEN: Please extend my deepest sympa-thy to the parents of your son's friend.

friend.

And thank you for giving me the chance to point out that threats of suicide, and repeated comments about suicide, can be symptoms of serious illness and should be taken seriously.

taken seriously.

Many young people are reluctant to "rat" on their friends, but when it comes to talk of suicide, experts say that keeping a secret can result in losing a friend.
Skilled professional help is needed for intervention.

DEAR ABBY Abigali VanBuren

Professional counseling should also be made available to the survivors of the suicide – and that includes family members and friends – to help them cope with their own feelings of guilt and depression.

DEAR ABBY: Two years ago, I retired from my teaching job so I could travel with my husband, "Bill," on his international business trips. At the time, Bill earned a very high salary. Since then, Bill has been laid off and beat taken a verber time.

then, Bill has been laid off and has taken an early retirement. He, now putters around the house, painting the shutters, working in the yard-and thoroughly enjoying himself. This is not the life I expected, and I am becoming increasingly depressed. I was never much of a housewife and wouldn't have left my job had't known this would be the outcome.

I have a paratime is him description.

the outcome. I have a part-time job in a dress shop, but it's hardly a challenging career. I want to travel. I want to have fun.

We have a net worth in excess of $1 million, but Bill has always been concerned about our finances and—wants to managethem so that we can set up college funds for our grandchildren, leave a substantial amount to our children, and budget $7,500 ayear for vacations, including trips to visit family. This doesn't leave much.

much.
If I tell my husband how I feel it will hurt him terribly. What should I do?

RELUCTANTLY RETIRED IN ILLINOIS

DEAR RETIRED: Before you

DEAR RETIRED: Before you become more depressed, have a frank talk with your husband. Explain that you were not prepared for his early retirement.

It may be time for you to return to teaching on a part-time basis or to find another job that will enable you to earn the kind of money you need to travel more extensively. If your husband doesn't want to go, there are travel clubs and tours for "singles."

You and Bill also need to reach a meeting of the minds about how money should be allocated. If you can't manage to agree, then thetwo of you should seek professional counseling. Please, don't put it off.
