Environmental group says others should do otherwise; industry says it's not required

FILER - Dairyman Hank Hafli-ger has reported to the federal government air emissions from his dairy after the Idaho Conservation League threatened to sue if he didn't. What that means for dairies and the public over the long term is unclear. For now it is a success in the Conservation League's first attempt to get a large-scale dairy to report emissions.

The group threatened to sue Hank Halliger if he didn't report emissions from his Desert Rose Farms dairy to regulators just the same as factories are required to do.

"I was chosen as I'm always cho-sen," said Hafliger, whose farm has been at the heart of Idaho's dairy odor controversy for several years.

odor controversy for several years. Filing the emissions report was considered the best thing to do in this case, Hafliger said.
"It's not a requirement with the EPA that dairies file," he said.

Hafliger said he is not planning to sell his dairy or leave Idaho but that he sees this issue as one more thing that will limit the industry's growth in the state or prompt producers to chose other states to set up business.

Industries are promised to many the state of the sta up business.

Industries are required to report emissions to a federal toxic release inventory, if they produce more than 100 pounds of pollutants daily. The Conservation League is pushing for regulators to extend the requirement to dairies. By the group's calculations, dairies with 450 or more cows should be required to report emissions. Hafliger's report is the first for a dairy nationwide, the organization

"He is not going to have to change any operations at his facility as a result of the report," said Justin Hayes of the Conservation League.

The reporting requirement will give the public access to informa-tion about pollutants in their neighborhoods, Hayes said. Desert Rose operates with more than 8,000 cows, according to its state nutrient management plan. The dairy reported nearly 435 pounds of ammonia emissions daily from two of its largest facilities – a waste storage basin and a heifer lot. The report prepared by consultants Dairy Strategies LLC of Madison, Wis. included emissions estimates from all of the dairy's facilities but said that the buildings producing emissions of less than 100 pounds a day do not require reporting.

Judge tosses lawsuit against Hailey airport

By Pat Murphy Times-News correspondent

BOISE – In a ruling watched by small airport operators throughout the nation, Federal District Judge Lynn Winmill on Ruesday summarily rejected a lawsuit aimed at opening Halley's airport to heavy Boeing' 737-sized jets. In a sweeping 30-page order, Judge Winmill dismissed one-byone a litany of claims by California multimillionaire construction tycoon Ronald Tutor that his rights were being violated by Friedman Memorial Airport refusal to allow his large and heavy Boeing Business Jet to operate from the single-runway field.

The order was greeted late Tuesday with jubilation by airport officials, who've been watching their legal bills in the case climb past $200,000. Final costs are expected to be much higher. "I can breathe again," said Mary Ann Mir, chairwoman of the Friedman Memorial Airport Authority. We're so happy the judge saw fit to rule for the little folks. We recognize the gentlemen (Jutor) could appeal to a higher court of file another suit. The airport staff has worked so incredibly hard. We're happy for them."

Friedman Manager Rick Baird, customarily sparse with worst.

bly hard. Wo're happy for them." Friedman Manager Rick Baird, customarily sparse with words, was more restrained. "We're obviously ecstatic," Baird said, but declined further comment until he could digest the Judges order.

One of Tutor's attorneys, Jonathan Morse, said late Tuesday that he had no comment on Winmillis order and said any appeal of the declasion would be "the clients call."

The signed order was issued a week after attorneys for the airport and Tutor presented oral arguments to Judge Winmill in his Boise courtroom.

Although Winmill's ruling focused narrowly on the issues involving only Halley's airport, federal district court decisions often become precedents for application elsewhere.

"They walk in and say, I want to go somewhere warm early next month," Carruthers said. "They literally have no idea where they want to go they just want to be out of the cold." While fog and temperature inversions aren't unheard of in the Magic Valley, the current string of cloudy days is unusual for an area prone to wind, said meteorologist Jack Messick of the National Weather Service in Pocatello. He explained that high pressure and a lack of wind have kept the air sugmant throughout the region, and evaporation from the snow that fell over the holidays is feeding the low Gouds and fog at lower elevations.

Still, south-central Idaho has it good compared to areas such as the Sait Lake and Treasure valleys, where air quality has suffered because of the inversion. Steve VanZandt, an air quality Please see WEATHER, Page A2

BAGHDAD, Irnq – For the second day in a row, Shiite Muslin demonstrators took to the streets here Tuesday, this time demanding that U.S. officials allow outside the president Saddam Hussein to be tried and executed in Iraq rather than treated as a prisoner of war. About 5,000 protesters, mostly followers of Shiite cleric, Mugnada Sadr, staged a peaceful, highly discipilined rally in central Baghdad. They also called on U.S. officials to resist efforts by Iraqi kurds, to divide the country under an ethnically oriented federal systems.

"We want Iraqi to be a peaceful, nited nation for all ethnic groups – Shiites and Turks," said Karim Darani, 43, a marcher from the large, impowerished Shiite community in northeastern Baghdad known as Sadr City.

During the day, smaller protests were held in the southern, largely Shiite cities of Najaf, Karbala and Basra in what appeared to be a coordinated series of demonstrations.

Although smaller than the march held in Baghdad on Monday, in which tens of thousands of Shiites domanded direct elections for a new Iraqi government, Tuesday's protest reinforced a sense of growing pressure on American officials as they struggle to win support among Iraq's Shiite majority for the U.S. plant hold transfers sovereignty by June gle to win support among Iraq's Shiite majority for the U.S. plan to hold transfer sovereignty by June

In speech, Bush shifts from war to work against terror

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — President Bush acknowledged Tuesday night that "the work of building a new leaf is the property of the property of the Union address to portray the war in Iraq as part of a broader success story that has put dictators and rogue states around the world on notice. The president_placed a broad array of issues — from North Korea's nuclear ambitions to Libya's decade-long effort to win the lifting of U.S. sanctions — under the rubric of "the offense against terror." For instance, the president claimed credit for Libya's decision to strike a deal to give up its weapons programs, signer. Labya's decision to strike a deal to give up its weapons programs, sug-gesting that Libyan leaded Moammar Gadhafi was Ingihtened by the example of what happened to former Iraqi president Saddam Hussein.

Analysis

Much of the president's language was also designed to shift the focus away from the uncertain and messy effort to re-create Iraqi sovereignty and away from the rituless search for Iraq's alleged weapons of mass destruction. The success of his presidency depends in large part on whether the campaign in Iraq is a success – and whether it is seen as a success by the American people.

last year also suggested that U.S. forces would be greeted as liberators, not mired in a deadly conflict with insurgents. Thesday night, Bush acknowledged a "serious, continuing danger" in Iraq. Bush offered a defense of the war, saying that "had we failed to act, the dictator's weapons of mass destruction programs would continue to this day."

The Libya case increasingly has become a central feature of White House rhetoric on the war on terrorism, with aides noting that Libya reached out to the Americans and the British on the eve of the Iraq war. Experts, however, point out that for the past decade Libya had been trying to reform and reintegrate with Europe. Gadhafi turned away from radical Arab nationalism of the 1970s and 1980s, toward programs geared toward economic development that require Western investment.

Moreover, much of the diplomatic groundwork was faid by the Clinton administration, which offered Libya's needy government a diplomatic carrot if it agreed to accept responsibility for the 1988 bombing of Pan Am Flight 103, end its support of terrorism and surrender weapons of mass destruction.

"It's a process that has been actively underway for at least five years," conceded one U.S. official

Although critics, especially Democrats, say that the adminis-tration has bungled the postwar-period in Iraq and let Afghanistan slip back into the grip of warlords, Bush Tuesday night declared that progress in being made in both countries.

The United States faces tough deadlines over the next six months in Iraq, with mounting obstacles, where U.S. policy has been

The U.S. led Coalition Provisional Authority is due to hand over power to a new Iraqi government by June 30, but the U.S. plan faces opposition over the basic question of how a new Iraqi government is selected. A power struggle is unfolding between the United States and its Iraqi allies on one side, and Grand Ayatollah Ali Sistani, Iraq's most popular religious - leader, on the -other. Sistani is demanding elections before June; the United States says there is not time.

The -United - Nations - now appears ready to try to help salvage the U.S. plan, which instead of elections calls for a complex series of caucuses in Iraq's 18 provinces. The White House now acknowledges that the plan needs to be modified to ensure broad participation in the selection of a new national assembly.

With the U.S. military stretched thin by its engagements in Afghanistan and Iraq, further military action around the world is not on the agenda. Clark rises to the unknown candidate

I'M MAD

PEMBROKE, N.H. – A New Hampshire Republican who walked into the gymnasium at the Pembroke Academy on Saturday afternoon and saw the crowd assembled to hear retired Gen. Weely: K. Clark - had a one-word-reaction: "Wow!" — At least 1,000 people had jammed the building in this Concord suburb (Clark's Web site estimated it at 2,000) for a rally. 10 days before the Jan. 27 New Hampshire primary.

John McCain was the last person to draw crowds of that size as he moved toward a 18-point win over George W. Bush in New Hampshire four years ago. That Clark has star power is clearly shown by the passion he has ginited here. Whether he has staying power – as McCain ultimately did not – remains to be sen.

Although he cast himself as the maverick challenging the Republican stablishment in 2000, McCain was a veteran politician with a long record of vinning tough.

ambitions unless they can take him down.
While they have been busy in the cornfields, Clark has been camped here, polishing what now has become a very effective stump speech. It is Reaganesque in tone - consigning most of the policy specifics to the Web site and focusing on what he calls the core values of his campaign: patroitism, faith, family and leadership. Each of them, while evoking universal approbation, is given a sharp partisan edge. True patriotism, the wounded Vietnam veteran and retired four-

True patriotism, the wounded Vietnam veteran and retired four star general says, is the opposite of the spectacle of George Bush "dressing up in a flight suit and prancing around on the deck of an aircraft carrier."

True faith, says this son of a mixed marriage of a Jew and a Methodist, who now considers himself a Catholic but attends a Presbyterian church, consists of heeding the religious obligation to help lift those who are in need—"and the only parry that does that is the Democratic Parry."

All this is red meat for the rabidly anti-Bush Democrats, many of whom were first attracted to Howard Dean, the early favorite to win New Hampsline. But Clark's, Arkanass base (and his backing from the Clinton crowd), his military background, and his mastery of Reaganessque rhetoric convinces one pragmatic Democrats that he would run better against Bush than Dean could do.

Dortha Morrils of Merrimack, a transplanted Mississippian, said the was first inclined to support Dean but has decided on Clark.

"He has a better chance of beating Bush, because he understands the Southern mind. And he is a little softer around the edges than Dean."

But the dilemma for the Clark campaign is that the things that might enable him to wrest the win from Dean in New Hampshire are not the things that would help him later on in the South.

Dean's support here is skewed liberal – not just on the war but on social issues as well. As Clark competes for that vote, he finds himself moving left. He implied, for example, that he favored the right to abortion throughout pregnancy — and then corrected himself. He promises not only to cut taxes for the working poor and middle class but to raise them for "the super-wealthy."

He has surrounded himself here with super-liberals and people whose rhetoric about Bush makes Dean seem like a pussy. cat. Civil rights activist Mary Frances Berry told the rally here that as a "peacentik," she believed Clark was the last person who would take the country to war. Decumentary filmmaker

Michael Moore called Bush "a deserter" for his unexplained absences from Viernam-era Texas Air National Guard duty and said he loved the fact that Clark's tax plan "sticks it to the rich." On Sunday, Clark welcomed the endorsement of George McGovern, the symbol even to many Democrats of the political ruin that can result from veering out of the mainstream.

What makes all this odd is that Clark, more than anyone else in the field, may have been positioned to challenge Dean on Feb. 3, when the battle shifts to Sontioned to challenge Dean on Feb. 3, when the battle shifts to Sont Carolina, Arziona and a batch of border and rural states. Can the four stars on his uniform and the Reagan-like values pitch be made to complement his left-leaning policies and endorsements —or will they feed the doubts his opponents want to sow about the true identity of the man who became a Democrat only when he announced for president? He is a hot candidate — but also the real mystery man in this Democratic field.

A vocal minority makes a poor patriotic move

a poor patitotic inflove
The Time-Naus editorial on Thesday, Jan. 13, "Guardsmen deserve local support, not petty griping," was preity much right on. Not only did the griping reflect poor patriotism but was just one more example of an issue that is affecting the American way of life at all levels – and that is political correctness?
We have spawmed a generation of so-called leaders who are so afraid of offending someone or a group or political party that they sell out for a vocal minority.
Instead of doing what is right,
they do what is politically correct
We see this at all levels – school boards, school administrators, county commissioners, our court systems, legislators, congressmen, the list goes on and on! 8o, a few people griped and Master Sgt.
Butterfield did what was politically correct and canceled the streetto-street, house-to-house drills that have become the major gome plan in modern warfare!
Ok, so not everyone knuckles under to a vocal minority. The Twin Falls School District passed a resolution to randomly drug test participants for extracurriculiar extivities. High schools are supposed to prepare students on the right track. After all, if home health or genizations and thousands of companies nationwide do drug testing, why not in high schools?

I am in no way being critical of the folks who showed up at the board meeting to voice their opposition to the resolution. That is a freedom we enjoy in America, although Fm almost certain those folks who disagreed with the policy do not fully understand the internal operation of a modern-day high school, but so be it.

To Sor Butterfield and a series of the school of the scho tion of a modern-day high school, but so be it.

To Sgr. Butterfield and everyone in a decision-making capacity (which sooner or later includes just about everyone). I heartily encourage you to follow Davy Crockert's philosophy: "Be sure you're right and then go straight ahead!" (And political correctness be dammed!)
God bless America and God bless our men and women in uniform who are serving at home and in foreign lands!

Self-supporting hospital deserves to be private

Maybe the College of Southern Idaho should offer a course like Economics 1-A (Remedial) titled "Depreciated Worth." Whatever you paid for any item has no bearing on what it's worth today. In fact, it's possible to have nega-

The dive worth.

Case in point: The '34 Chevy I drove to Kimberly High wasn't worth what I gawe for it a short time later because I had to pay good money to have it hauled away, and I still owed money on it. It wasn't "free" when I gave it on yo cousin, either, because he had to do a lot of work on it to make it co a stain.

had to do a lot of work on it to make it go again.
When I was doing architectural work on hospitals in the northern Sacramento Valley in the '60s, we came to the realization that they needed replacement or major renovation about every 20 to 25 years or face deterioration of services and loss of doctors, patients and accreditation. I'm sure Idaho is no different, because Magic Valley Regional Medical Center has been in a continual state of upgrading ever since it began, as nearly as I can see.

since it began, as nearly as I can see.

Now, if the hospital hasn't received any tax dollars for the last 25 years, where is the remaining value of the county hospital that justifies the commissioners (with the political bagage they have to carry) continuing to exercise overriding control of the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center Board? If the hospital is self-supporting, it should be self-governing. NORMAN TILLEY

Board's actions raise questions of the law

pueuts actions raise questions of the law Whoa, what is going on with the hospital board? According to state law, the duties of the hospital board do not say anything about recommending chances in governances. Why did they vote to recommend a not-for-profit SOI(c)(3). The commissioners do not even have to acknowledge the recommendation. The fact the Mikesell even voted on the issue, to me is a conflict of interest, as it left him with little room to evaluate the issue at the commissioner level.
This brings me to another point of interest. I, at first, thought that a commissioner with voting rights on the hospital board was a good idea. However, it puts the commissioner in a compromise on any recommendations that would go to the board of county commissioners. Such as selecting hospital board member, toxing requests, ambulance service, etc.

The hospital board has overstepped its authority by approving the appointment of Tom Mikessell to a three-year term Under state law the beard of county commissioners has the sole authority to appoint a commissioner as an ex officio or voiing member with no term of appointment (Ch. 36 31-3603);
this must be done at the time of appointment (Ch. 36 31-3603);
this must be done at the time of appointment.

Have the commissioners or the hospital board violated state law?
Did the commissioners appoint
Mr. Mikesell or did the hospital board? Now let's look at the hospital board.

According to state law as listed previously, the members of the board shall be selected as nearly as practicable from the several localities of the county. The hospital board consists of Twin Palls city residents; all but one of the law a business in the city.

Commissioners, where is the representation from the rest of the cities in the county? The commissioners and the hospital board may be in direct violation of the law by failure to appoint countywide representation. While the hospital board has done a good job of keeping the hospital in the profit column, they seem to have lost track of who they represent.

That way, officials will have less reason to issue the orange alerts and general alarms that are far too vague to be of any use but can cause serious damage.

Americans are inundated with useless warnings. We're accustomed to seeing ordinary tools, even simple hammers, festooned with labels identifying all the injuries that they implicated a present of the injuries that they implicate the injuri accusations of negligence.

Where any analogy with the labeling of hammers utterly breaks down, of course, is in the cost—monetary and otherwise. Every tifne a terrorist warning is issued, a chain of negative economic consequences follows—from the obvious, like airline and hotel cancellations, to the ones harder to estimate, such as psychological effects. International consequences also range from the measurable loss of tourism revenues to more subtle but probably much larger repercusations on foreign investment.

The purely economic costs are reason enough to do away with the useless public warnings, but the external and domestic political costs are even more important. By projecting images of a fearful United States, these recurrent glasms diminish American persiste and therefore the leverage of U.S. diplomacy. Worse still, they encourage after their old that the U.S. remains highly vulnerable.

to create fear, in the hope that this will induce Americans to accept terrorist demands. Homeland Security's color-coded alert system is utterly inappropriate, even for small embattled countries, let alone for the United States. The department is happy with the alert system, but perhaps our new bureaucrast should pay more attention to the practices of those far more experienced in countering terrorism. The Israelis have never seen a need to broadcast ulert levels to the general public, not even when at wat. Nor did the British see any advantage in acting as if the United Kingdom was "Battlestar Galactica" when under attack by the bombs of Irish terrorists.

under attack by the bombs of Irish terrorists.
Nothing prevents the implementation of the security measures associated with each threat level, without any need to broadcast frightening yet meaningless warnings to the public. In the past, the British contacted police forces by telex and telephone, as did the Israelis, who also used messengers to mobilize each neighborhood's reservists. Nowadays with the Internet, one keystroke can alert our thousands of different police forces and other security professionals.

Nor should anyone worry about a relaxation in the useful vigilance of the public if the alert system is dropped. On the contrary, simply by becoming routine, the alerts now issued are endding the potential value of a nationwide call to the public, in the event that theat information could truly justify mobilizing all of us.

Some would claim that it is not just the self-protection and self-aggrandizement of the security bureaucrust stat are needlessly tormenting us, rather that there is a conscious political design at work to enhance the appeal of the experienced incumbents in this election year. If so, that is all the more reason for both sides in Cangress to act now to shut down the alert system, thus proving that neither Democrats nor Republicans are playing politics with terrorism.

The Founders believed recessappointment power was necessary because they envisaged large gaps of time between congressional sessions, and presidents would need the power to make appointments for federal posts. Oh, would those days of infrequent congressional sessions return!

There is some hypocrisy on both sides of the Senate aide. Sen. Orm. Hatch (R-Utah) said in 1997 about the possibility of a recess appointment, then I have to say, it's a finger in the eye of the Senate. I think you'd find there would be an awful to for repercusions from that." President Clinton makes in a continuous and the senate of the Senate in the senate of the Senate in the senate of the Senate. It think you'd find there would be an awful lot of repercusions from that." President Clinton made quite a few recess appointments for controversial and non-controversial posts. President Bush has done the same. If the Senate would stop resorting to flibusters (whether by Democrats in the matter of Pickering or Republicans in the matter of Lee), then the number of recess appointments would be greatly diminished. But don't lock for that to happen as political tensions remain higher than terror allerts.

for that to happen as political tensions remain higher than terror alerts.

Bush's naming of Pickering to the federal bench was the first time since President Jimmy Carter that a recess-appointment procedure has been used to appoint someone to an Article III judgeship, according to the Congressional Research service, an arm of the Library of Congress. The action by the president escalates to new levels the battle for control of the federal judiciary, which both liberals and conservatives see as the main sourcer solver in an age when engreed and the courts have increasingly legislated from the lower than the properties of the courts have increasingly legislated from the lower to impose policies and an ideology on the country they know would never make it through Congress (and if it did, it might cost legislators reelection), are now in a panic because they who have lived by the courts may be about to die by the courts as more judges who believe in the "original intent" of the-Counders make it in filterating appointment is good only until the end of this Congress. preoccupation with politics is an indication Bush feels increasingly confident about his political strength and his ability to stand up to the Democratic leadership and its civil rights lobby.

Pickering was unfairly smeared as a racist for simply following the law in a civil rights case liberals thought should have turned out differently, and for a 40-year-old article he wrote defending Mississippi's anti-miscegenation laws, when the state was a different palace and Pickering was a different person. This disagreement should not have been enough to deny a highly qualified judge the federal bench. Thanks to President Bush, Pickering has the job, at least for most of this year. If the Senate doesn't confirm him - it seems unlikely that it will - he will have to leave the bench.

The president should use the Pickering case and the reshaping of the judiciary (not to mention his need for more Republican senators) as central parts of his reelection campaign.

there will be irrigation shortages this summer.

Snow fell heavily in late December and early January, putting Idaho drainages at 100-150 percent of normal snowpast by Jan. 7. But the high-pressure system fixed on the area and lack of new snowfall have the comparative totals dropping by one or two percentage points a day. Idaho has reached the halfway point of the water year, which ends April 1.

Hospital hosts talk about-low-carb diets

TWIN FALLS—The Magic Valley Regional Medical Center will hose a free community education session about low-carb, high-protein diets at 7 pm. Jan. 27 in the lower level conference room at the hospital's downtown campus at 660 Shoshone St. E.

Low-carbohydrate, high-protein diets are all the rage these days. Many fast-food chains are even modifying their menus to accommodate the needs of dieters, according to a news release from the hospital.

These diets reverse decades of dietary advice by saying the way to lose weight is to cut out carbohydrates in favor of more protein, including red meat, the news release said.

Over the past year, several small studies have shown, to many experts' surprise, that the Atkins approach does work, at least in the short run.

Dieters lose more than those on a standard American Heart Association plan without driving up cholesterol levels, as many doctors say they're encouraged that any significant weight loss means less risk of diabetes, heart disease, cancer and other diseases, according to the news release.

Dr. Daniel Brown, a cardiologist affiliated with Magic Valley Regional, will present the latest medical information about these-diets and discuss the advantages, disadvantages and differences diets like South Beach, Atkins and The Zone.

County sets out to collect debts

By Sandy Miller Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - If you haven't paid the fine for that speeding ticket, take notice.

Those judges weren't kidding when they said you had to pay fines and restitution as part of fines and restitution as part of your sentence.

Now, Twin Falls County wants those who've put off writing those checks to pay up. And thanks to a new law that went into effect this month, the county will get some help in doing just that.

The law allows counties to contract with collection agencies to collect on outstanding debts and allows collection agencies to add 33 percent to cover their cost of services.

Collecting some $1.7 million has been one of County Clerk Kristina Glascock's goals since she was sworn into office in July Earlier this month, she received approval from 5th District Administrative Judge Barry Wood to contract with: a collec-tion agency, and last week coun-ty commissioners signed on the -dotted—line—with—Advanced-Collection Technology to collect those debts.

"If people owe the courts money and they're delinquent, those debts.

"If people owe the courts money and they're delinquent, now is the time to come in adastisty their debt," Glascock said.
The law allows counties to contact with collection agencies to collect on "debts owed to the courts." Those debts includifines, court costs, surcharges, penalties, fees and money expended in providing counsel and other defense services. It also includes restitution, which means many victims of crime might still get what's owed to them after all.

And it won't cost the county a penny. Debtors who don't make good within 30 days will be charged the extra 33 percent to cover collection fees.

"We'll get the whole amount—due to the county, and collections—will get one-third above that," County Commissioner Bill Brockman said.

The money will be distributed among city, county and state agencies, depending on where the infraction took place and which agency handled it, People can pay their debts at the Court Services office inside the Theron W. Ward Judicial Building at 427 Shoshone St. N. For more information, call the office at 736-4025.

Burley debates centennial money

BURLEY - Lacking a firm plan of how money would be spent, City Council members deferred action Twesday on a request to provide funds for the committee planning the city's centennial, which will be celebrated in 2005.

Dennis Dexter, chairman of the Burley Action Feam, said the committee members think they's continued between now and Oct. 1 to work on the centennial celebration. The centennial committee is a subcommittee of the action team, Dexter said.

The centennial committee hasn't met yet, Dexter said, so there is no plan nor budget in place. The first meeting of that committee is set for 7 pm. Thursday at City Hall. Anyone interested may attend the meeting.

when the council approves the 2004-05 budget this fall, Dexter said, the committee is hopeful twould include money for centennial events.
Councilman Dave Ringle said the council needs to "step up" regarding the centennial, noting it's one-time occurrence.
He and Councilman Dennis Curris said the council would give the committee money, but they need at least a prelliminary budget before allocating any funds.
The committee should "go ahead with this Thursday meeting knowing well support it," Ringle said.

Senator leaves iustice race

BOISE (AP) - State Senate Republican Floor Leader Bart. Davis on Tuesday removed himself from the race to replace Justice. Wayne Kidwell on the state

Supreme Court.
Davis, 48, an Idaho Falls attorney, said the killing of his son less than a year ago and his political position in the Legislature precluded a campaign against former Republican Attorney General andd Jerome resident Jim Jones for the seat.
"Such a race requires more time."

"Such a race requires more time and energy than we feel is appropriate for our family this year," Davis said.

His role as Senate floor leader, he said, "requires that I advocate and defend certain positions that are politically charged. That political advocacy or defense, proximate to a judicial election, may detract from the nonpartisan approach that such elections are entitled."

Jones who served two terms in the 1980s as attorney general before staging an unsuccessful bid for the U.S. Senate in 1990, is the only formally announced candidate for the seat.

Anderson and City Administrator Mark Mitton discussed recent correspondence and conversations they've had with Environmental Protection Agency officials regarding the city's sewer system. The city has violated conditions of its sewer discharge permit and nearly 3,000 such violations have been noted by the EPA in letters to the city dating back to April 1998. However, Anderson said if the city violates its discharge permit on one day in any month, that counts as a 30-day violation in the EPA's accounting methods. Anderson said because Burley voters have agreed to pay for a new sewer plant and the master plan for that project is well under way he thought EPA officials understood that the city is working to correct the problems. SALT LAKE CITY (AP)—
Three teenage girls have run away in the past two weeks from the nation's largest polygamise reclaive straddling the Utah-Arizona border.

Eight others briefly left the Fundamentalist Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints last weekend but there was disagreement whether they were running away from the twin border town of Hildale and Colorado City, Ariz., about 300 miles south of Salt Lake City.

Two 16-year-old girls ran away Jan. 10 after FLDS prophet Warren Jeffs excommunicated about 20 men, including the mayor of Colorado City.

The girls were taken to Phoenix, where a juvenile court ruled they would be allowed to remain in foster homes instead of state custody. A third 16-year-old girl also has run away and is in the protection of the Utah Division of Child and of the Utah Division of Child and Family Services.

Critics of the polygamist havens say the FLDS shake-up rould prompt a mass exodus of children, mainly girls, who feared they would be married or "reassigned" to other families.
Anti-polygamy advocate Flora Jessop, who drove the first two girls to Phoenix, said eight others ran away last weekend but returned to their homes the next day because the youths feared that state officials would treat them as criminals – an idea she says their parents have stressed.
But Bob Curran, with the St.
George group Help the Child

Brides, said the eight teenagers - a mix of boys and girls - were actually out for a joy ride Saturday night. When they determined that they would not make it back to their homes in time for curfew, they stayed overnight at a private residence in St. George and returned home the next day, said Curran, whose group helps runaways from polygamist homes. Jessop said Tuesday she has heard of four more children who have left the enclave, but they have gone to private homes in the St. George area. That has not been confirmed by Unah authorities. Polygamy is banned by the Utah Constitution but by itself is not a reason to remove a child

BYU-Idaho students put on MLK celebration

REXBURG (AP) – After realizing they were attending the only four-year university in Idaho nothonoring Martin Luther King Jr. Day on Monday, a handful of students at Brigham Young University-Idaho took matters into their own hands.
Student Ray Brown organized a concert, which featured a dozen string musicians, one marimba player and a conductor, to honor the slain civil rights leader.

Other events Monday were held at Idaho State in Pocatello, Boise State and the University of Idaho in Moscow.

BYU, which has it's main campus in Provo, Utah, also has a satellite campus in Hawaii.

All three are affiliated with the Sait Lake City-based The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, which did not allow black men to hold priesthoods until 1978.

Präsident Jerry Meyerhoeffer presented a plan to alter the main entrance roads so that they would match up with an intersection at Quincy Street, where a stoplight could be installed. Long-range plans for expansion call for a half-circle of classroom buildings north of North College Road, leading to students crossing it on a regular basis. Meyerhoeffer said he met with Twin Falls engineers and determined that higher speed traffic could be routed around the campus starting after Frontier Road and curving around to connect with Cheney Drive

West at Washington Street.

Dale Riedesel, representing engineering consulting firm Riedesel & Associates Inc., estimated the project could cost between $55,000 and $51 million for the road, infrastructure, and traffic-calming measures on the existing North College Road. Meyerhoeffer said this road project could happen in about five years.

A wide range of critics say the No Child Left Behind Act passed by Congress in 2002 is enormous broad mandates on schools and hinges their federal funding on meeting those requirements; which include having highly qualified teachers in all core classes and expanding standardized test-

EROME - Here's a cook who claims cooking is in her genes Lisa Dolcíni's maternal grandfather was a talented chef who owned three restaurants in the San Francisco Bay area. Her paternal grandmother was a great Mexican cook. Her mother prepared great meals, too, and allowed Dolcini into the kitchen for hands on experience early on.

At home in the Bay Area, Tuesday evening was reserved for family, Dolcini recalled. Everyone would gather for a big dinner, and lots of neighborhood children would show up to Dolcini also grew up watching an older Italian-woman-cooking-authentic-Italian-food. The woman showed her how to use skinded Italian sausages in spaghetti sauce, for great taste, she said. And Dolcini's husband, This Swiss/Italian, so the early tutelage has come in Dolcini thinks cooking is fun, and likes to have friends over for meals. She always gravitates toward the kitchen when she visits others, too, she said.

And when people come home from work or school on a cold winter day, they usually enter her house and smell something good cooking. Dolcini carefully follows recipes for baked foods, but otherwise uses recipes more for ideas

Try some 'Stone Soup' with an Asian twist

Remember the children's fable
"Stone Soup"? A hungry drifter wanders into a small town and befriends an elderly woman. She offers him some hot water because he is cold. He tells her that if she puts a stone in the water, it would add flavor. Then the drifter asks her to add a carrot, an onion, a potato, etc. By eadof the story, he has tricked her into making a beef and vegetable stew.

... This is kind of what happened to me recently. I was shopping at a local flea market where they have a great selection of fruits and vegetables. I couldn't resist the seasonal produce, and I kept throwing stuff into my basket: green beans, lecks, cabbage, Yukon gold potatoes and more. I wanted to buy enough vegetables and fruits to last me the week. I loaded my SUV with my purchases and headed home. But my favorite Asian market was on the way.

and talk about food. I piled all my food treasures on the kitchen counter and we started to chat as I began to make soup.

I sauteed onions, added celery and carrots. My friends suggested that green beans and perhaps a sweet potato would add subtle sweetness.

I began adding some of this and some of that – all the things that were supposed to list me the week. And soon, we didn't have soup anymore; we had stew.

Learn to make perfect pan sauces step-by-step

By CeCe Stillvan The Scattle Times

Pan sauces have a forgiving nature. If the sauce is too thin, it can either be reduced further or thickened with a starch. Or maybe the sauce has been reduced so much, it needs loosenmayor the sauce has overing up.

Just correct the consistency with a tablespoon or two of water or other liquid. The foundation of pan sauces are the crusty juices that form on the bottom of the pan when food is browned, sauteed or roasted. Here's how to construct an elegant sauce.

1. Saute: Meats should first be patted with paper towels to absorb excess moisture. Choose a heavy-bottomed saute or frying pan. In "Sauces: Classical and Contemporary Sauce Making." James' Peterson writes, "When meats are sauteed, they should fit neatly into the saute pan with no extra room.

neatly into the saute pan with no extra room.

If the pan is too large, so thatpart of its surface is exposed during sauteing, the meat juices, which are essential to pandeplazed sauces, will burn.

An overcrowded pan, on to the pandeplazed saute, will pure.

An overcrowded pan, on to the pandeplazed saute it to release its juices too quickly, so that it simmers in its own juices, rather than browns."

browns."

Heat the pan over medium to medium-high heat. (Some burners are hotter than others.) Add the oil or other fat called for in the recipe. When hot, add food the oil or other fat called for in the recipe. When hot, add food and cook without moving until a crust is formed, which should release easily from the pan. Then turn and finish cooking. The food should be a rich brown, but should not blacken.

2. Degrease: After sauteing and removing meat from pan, pour off the fat. (If aromatics are going to be added, a thin glaze of fat can be left on the bottom of the pan.)

3. Deglaze: After degreasing pan, put it back on the heat. Now add aromatics such as minced garlic and shallot, or a mirepoix – a tiny dice of carrot, celery and onion.

nion. Saute about 30 seconds. Pour Saute about 30 seconds. Pour liquid into the pan; it should come to a boil quickly. Use a spatula to loosen the browned juices, which become the bridge between the meat and sauce, adding lots of flavor and rich color.

adding lots of flavor and rich color.

Deglazing liquids can be wine, broth or stock, or even water, which can be used in combination or alone. For instance, add a small amount of wine to deglaze the pan, then add stock or another liquid. Use a good stock or another liquid. Use a good stock or broth, preferably homemade.

But even canned broth can be made richer and more flavorful-yo simmering for 30 to 45 minutes with aromatics such as onion, garlic, carrot and celery.

4. Reduce: The deglazing liquid is cooked down by at least half, which concentrates and thickens. As the liquid cooks down, it will become saltier, so season the sauce after it has reduced. Prepare reductions in advance. Reduce stock or wine by half, or cream by about a third, and store in the refrigerator until ready to use.

5. Bind or thicken: Pan sauces

5. Bind or thicken: Pan sauces are thickened most often by reduction. But when a lot of liquid is added, as for the gravy made from the drippings of turkey, one of the following binders may help:

binders may help:

• Beurre manie: With a fork, blend until smooth 1 tablespoon each of softened, unsalted butter and flour for each cup liquid.

Add slowly to the simmering sauce, whisking until smooth, and simmer about 5 minutes. Slurries, made with a starch and cold water, are sauce savers that have differing qualities and cooking times.

You may be taking a chance with arrowroot, or any starch, that's been pushed to the back of your cupboard for several years, as its thickening ability will weak-

It's a good idea to date the packaging when purchased so you'll have a fresh batch on hand when needed.

when needed.
Sauces can be strained after reducing and thickening. But many benefit from the texture given by aromatics, vegetables and herbs.

and herbs.
In fact, vegetable or even fruit purees can also be used to thicken sauces. Peterson writes, "Some purees, such as those made with tomato or green vegetables, contain so little starch that they thicken a sauce simply by adding a large bulk of fine solid particles to a liquid medium." When left to sit, the sauces may separate, but can be pulled back together, by whisking.

6. Finishes: Some wonderful demi-glaces (stocks that have been reduced to a concentrated gelilike paste) are available in many supermarkets.

A teaspoon added to the finished sauce can add color, flavor and richness. The juices that have gathered around the cooked meat can also be put into the sauce and simmered briefly to thicken.

For a glossy sheen, about 1 tablespoon cold, unsalted butter can be swirled into 1 cup squise. On medium-low hear, whisk manual pieces at a time, swirling the pan in a circular motion. When melted, add another bit of butter. Remove pan from heat-before the last piece of butter has melted completely.

Natural light spills in through sidelights and an arched, multipaned window at the second, story-level, On, the right, decorative columns flank a wide arched opening that leads into a roomy parlor with tall windows on two sides. On the left, double doors open into what could be a guest room, study, or home office. Straight ahead is an even brighter and more spacious two-story family living area. The rustic stone fireplace serves as a warm and colorful focal point, and a home entertainment center fills the cabinetry next to it. This large room is open to the kitchen, as well. Storage and work space is abundant, including a large work island and a walk-in pantry. Siders in the dining room and kitchen provide double access to a deck that wraps around the side and reat. Reclaim your two-car territory sans the mess

By Alan J. Heavens The Philadelphia Inquire

You've probably seen the commercial: A couple, looking exhausticed, stand in their relatively empty, garage, pleased they can fit a car inside again. Then they head to their kitchen, to debate the merits of canned soup.

The fantasy: Folks argue over soup.

The reality: There's a world full of messy garages out there. People would "really like to fit their cars in the garage," said Mike. Franks, of O'Sullivan Furniture in Lamar, Mo. "But not that many can do it, because of all the clutter." Getting rid of a percentage of what's in the garage, even if means filling a dumpster, is a crucial first step to getting it organized, said Leslie Robison, of Simple Systems Organizing, in Green Lane, Pa.

More and more manufacturers have gotten into the garage game, sharing their organizing wonders with the world through stores such as Home Depoi, Low's and Sears. ClosetMaid (www.closetmaid.com), offer advice and storage plans on its Web site.

Modern heat pumps are efficient and environmentally friendly.

Modern heat pumps are efficient and at the low-output mode and switch to high output only on very cold or hot days. At the low level, they run for longer cycles so the indoor air temperature stays more constant and air quality is better.

Most two-level heat pumps use a variable-speed blower motor in the indoor air handler. When the heat pump is running at low level, the blower motor slows down. This reduces the noise level and eliminates the gust of chilly air each time it starts.

Within just the past year, effi-

These have few moving parts eliminating the need for pistons, valves, etc. so they operate quietly and reliably. They also use new ozone-friendly R410A refrigerant instead of older R22 freon. Other two-level compressor designs use either two separate small compressors or ones which

If you cannot afford an expensive two-level model, select a zingle-level scroll compressor model which use R410A refrigerant. This is what I use at my home. For a little extra initial cost, consider an optional variable-speed blower motor with it. Summertime confort will be particularly improved.

Add tasty, wholesome leeks to your diet

By Cindy McNatt The Orange County Register

Leeks are available in the mar-ket year round. But from the gar-den, leeks taste best when they've been nipped a bit by frost. No matter where you get your leeks, they are definitely a cool-weather plant. If you grow your own, hill them up as they come along in the garden. Hilling means to grab a hoe and pile up the soil around the base of each leek to blanch the bases to keep them white and ender.

Because the white area of the leek is what you'll use for cooking, the higher you hill the soil, when the more usable area your leek swill have. Harvest leeks as you need them. They'll store perfectly in the ground otherwise, but don't want until they are large and woody. As with many homegrown vegetables, small and tender is better. If your leeks are gaining on you faster than you can use them, har-vest them all at once and store them in the freezer in a freezer

With a light onion flavor, leeks can be a healthy addition to soups and stews. Thim the bulk of the green tops, leaving no more than an inch. Also trim the root area and wash the under crops well before using.

Rodick, Agassi make their way to third round at Australian Open

The Associated Press

MELBOURNE, Australia – Top-ranked Andy Roddick and defending champion Andre Agasis breezed into the third round of the Australian Open by winning in straight sets Wednesday over Czech rivals. Agassi had a 6-0,6-2,6-4 win over 18-year-old Tomas Berdych, closing with an ace in 1 hour 22 minutes. Roddick fired 20 aces and didn't lose a point on his first serve in the third set of a 6-2, 6-2, 6-3 win over Bohdan Ulhrach.
Roddick set up triple match point with a curling forehand winner down the line and finished it off in 1:13 with a booming first-serve winner.
Justine Henin-Hardenne, ranked No. 1 and winner at Wimbledon and the U.S. Open in 2003, had a 6-1, 6-4 win over childhood friend Camille Pin of France in her second-round match, and fourth-seeded Amelie Mauresmo advanced in straight sets.

The 33-year-old Agassi, an eight-time Grand Slam winner, hasn't dropped a set in the tournament.

Agassi took the first set in 18 minutes and herdych did not win a game for 27 minutes, until he held serve for the first time in five attempts to close the gap to 21 in the second set.

"Today felt really good. I think there was a lot of quality ball striking going on, from both sides," said-Agassi, who has won his last 23 consecutive matches at Melbourne Park.

Berdych had more winners than Agassi, 27-23, and had more aces, 127, but was much more inconsistent, committing 35 unforced errors to just 10 for Agassi. Agassi next plays Sweden's Thomas Enqvist, a 7-5, 4-6, 5-3, 6-4 winner over Slovakian Karol Beck.

Roddick moved into a showdown with fellow American Taylor Dent, seeded 27th, who overane Juan Ignacio Chela of Argentina 36, 64, 46, 76 (4), 75 in 330.

Dent, frustrated after mixing 83 winners with 71 unforced errors, stool behind the baseline and screamed "Yeah" to punctuate his match when Chela netted a backhand volley on match point.

'Playoff' now gears up to be 10-race dash

By Mike Brudenell Knight Ridder News Service

CHARLOTTE, N.C. – Whoever wins the NASCAR Nextel Cup championship this year will have to do it in a dash to the finish line in the last 10 races. The driver also will need to be in the top 10 in points after the 26th stop on the 36-race schedule or be within 400 points of the leader at the time.
NASCAR announced significant changes Tuesday in the way the champion of its premier series is determined. The moves are aimed at giving more incentives to win and attracting more attention in the fall. The former system rewarded top-10 consistency more than victories.

The biggest change will come in the last 10 races, called the Chase for the Championship. Points of the top-10 drivers through 26 races will be adjusted, with the leader given 5,050. Five-point increments will separate the other drivers, which would include anyone else within 400 points of the leader.

The series champ will come from that group.
Throughout the season, each race winner will earn 180 points instead of 175, widening the gap between first and second place from five points to 10. Five additional points still will be awarded for leading a lap and five more for leading the most laps.
"Our aim is to create more interest in the sport and make raing better," NASCAR chairman Brian France said at the UAW-GM Motorsports media tour. "Drivers want the ball in the last two minutes. They want a chance to win."

Last year, Matt Kenseth won the championship although he won only one ruce. Ryan Newman

Despite the play of Arnolds "iron five" and the return of Sawyer. Even this season, two players — David Sills (violation of tetin rules) and Clint Gulley (academics) – were dismissed from the souad. rutes) and Clint Gulley (academics) – were dismissed from the squad. But while many incidents in the past have been handled internally by the team, Arnold, in his flayer at CSI, hasn't been sthy about bringing the team's problems, to some extent, into the open. "We have team rules and they cover a lot of things," Arnold said. "What they basically come down to is being good character kids oh and off the floor. INDIANAPOLIS – The best team in the Eastern Conference kept the Detroit Pistons from establishing two historical bests.

Jermaine O'Neal had 28 points and 15 rebounds to help the Indiana Pacers snap the Pistons 13-game winning streak with an 31-69 victory Tuesday night.

The Pistons are trying for the longest winning streak in franchise history and the longest in the NBA this season. Instead, they were held to nine points in the first quarter and lost to their former coach, Rick Carlisle, for the third time this season.

Reggie Miller had 22 points in another strong performance for the Eastern Conference-leading Pacers, who have won five in a row and 12 out of 13. That success has helped keep the hard-charging Pistons from overtaking them in the Central O'Neal had eight points and 10 rebounds in the first quarter as the Pacers took a 20-9 lead. The strong start set up a relatively easy win for Indiana, which never mailed.

After shooting 19 percent in the first quarter, Detroit shot 77 percent in the second and closed the half with a 100 run to pull to 44-40. But that would be as close as the Pistons would get.

Cortiss Williamson led the Pistons with 17 points and Richard Hamilton added 15.
Detroit couldn't find an answer for O'Neal, who had his way with Ben Wallace, last year's defensive player of the year, and Mehmet Okur. O'Neal wasted no time going right at Wallace, driving to the basket and pulling up for short jumpers.

Belichick reaps rewards of time off

By Dave Goldberg Associated Press writer

NEW YORK – Bill Belichick is pleased his New England Patriots have two weeks to prepare for the Carolina Panthers in the Super Bowl. Even though he wan a tile two years ago with a short break. "Last time, there was so much urgency, playing one day and flying down to New Orleans the next day," the coach says. "It totally changed the scope of time that we had to work with. Now we have more time. We will try to use it wisely." Players might worry about breaking momentum," and fansmight wonder why they have to wait so long for The Big Game. The delay is just fine with coaches and television executives: Coaches like the time to plan; TV types like the time to plan; TV types like the time to plan. TV types like the time to plan. TV types like the time to plan.

Super Bowl in 1967. This is the 38th Super Bowl, and 31 have been played after a two-week break; three of the last four were played only one week after the conference title games, however. Two of the seven one-week breaks weren't scheduled. One was in 1983 after the players' strike shortened the season and extended the playoffs; the other was two season ugo after the season was pushed back by the Sept. It terrorist attacks.

Recent history makes the longer time off seem a little strange:

But not-to-the networks, who need the time to prepare and familiarize the nation with the teams and players. This time, CBS wants to spread the word about the Panthers, a small-market team with few recognizable stars.

"It helps when you have to get ready for seven hours of programming, including features on two teams that weren't identified until Sunday," Sean McManus, president of CBS Sports said Monday. "It especially helps with Carolina, a team that most people don't know much about."

Bellchick actually has been very successful with one-week breaks. He's been to four previous Supen Bowls, three as an assistant, and has done two of his best coaching jobs when he had only one week-as defensive coordinator of the Giants in 1991, and as head coach of the Patriots two seasons ago. In the Giants-Bills game 13 years ago, he designed a defense-with-just-two-down-linemen-and-six or seven defensive backs to slow down Jim Kelly and Butfalo's no-huddle offense. New York was a 6-point underdog but wor 20-19 when Bills kicker Scott Norwood's 47-yard field-goal attempt sailed wide right with seconds left. New England, a 14-point underdog, sen 20-17 on Adam Vinatieris 48-yard field goal as time expired.

"It is a little tougher with the one-week break," said Marv Levy, who coached those Bills teams.
"You're working on contingency plans, because you don't know if you're going to play or who you're going to play. And you've got to have someone dealing with all those distractions: tickets for players, getting their families to the site, all the rest of -those-things—That-works—better-with two weeks."

It will stay this way, the next four Super Bowls all have been scheduled with two-week breaks. The first two will be in February and the two after that probably will be – the league decided to extend the season after playing in February for the first time two years ago.

Certainly, the setback must have motivated the Patriots. Some good must have me from such a problem-filled opener.

"Good?" coach Bill Belichick said. "No. No."

In the four months since, Buffalo faltered and missed the playoffs while the Patriots went 16-1. They take a 14-game winning streak into the Super Bowl against Carolina on Feb. 1 in Houston.

"We knew from Week 1 to Week 1."

The pain of the rout was compounded by linebacker Ted Johnson's broken fort – the first of many scrious injuries to key players that began with that game.

In the second game, linebacker

"This is the ultimate team defense and this is the ultimate team defense and this is the ultimate team," Law said after intercepting three passes in Sunday's 24-14 win over Indianapolis in the AFC title game. "If we play togethen we feel like we can beat anybody."

The only other team they failed to beat was Washington and they came very close, losing 20-17 in the fourth game, but outgained the Redskins 387-250.

Since then, New England is perfect.

Since then, New England is per-fect.

The streak started on Oct. 5 with a 38:30 win over Tennessea and continued with victories over the New York Giants, Mianti, Cleveland, Denver, Dallas and Houston.

They won their last four regular-season games by a combination of the committing just four turnovers, then bear four turnovers, then bear frennessea and Indianapolis again in the playoffs.

The Patriots kept winning behind Brady's steadiness, the defense's stinginess and the entire team's selflessness.

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP)—A team that looked like an NFL power emerged from New England's season opener. No, not the Patriots. They lost 31-0 to the Bills, who lived up to glowing preseason predictions in that game. The Patriots, meanwhile, gave no indication that they would start an amazing Super Bowl run. The loss came five days, after the surprising release of star safety Lawyer Milloy, who signed with Buffalo and played against the Patriots.

Parents must say no to child's money woes

Question: Is there any way to stop subsidizing adult offspring? We are drowning in our "grown-up" child's debt.

We thought things would improve with time, but it just isn't happening. We are ready to move to another state, change our names and never have contact again.

Can one – when faced with another sad tale of disaster and woe – just say "I am very sorry" and hang up the phone?

MONEY TALK Weston

Answer: Of course you can. In fact, you must if you want to retain your sanity, repair your finances and give your child an all-important chance to stand on his or her own two adult feet.

Your inability to say no – and stick to it – is what brought your family to this pretty pass. Why should your offspring ever learn to manage money if mon and dad are always there for a bailout? It's one thing to step in when a grown child faces an occasional, real emergency, or to share your largess if you're flush and the child is fiscally responsible. It's quite another to drain your resources to placate someone who refuses to take charge of his or her own life.

Mad cow scare hurts Midwest meatpacking belt

The Associated Press

The Associated Press

FREMONT, Neb. — Candy Nysingh still cuts and past at Fremont Beef Co., but with jobs in America's meatpacking belt being lost to mad cow disease, she isn't sure for how long.

"It is scary," Nysingh said. "It just happened so fast."

On Dec. 23, the U.S. Department of Agriculture announced that bovine spongiform encephalopathy, or mad cow disease, had been discovered in a Holstein cow in Washington state. More than 30 countries barned U.S. beef products, including Japan and Mexico, and slaughter cattle prices dropped about 18 percent. Meatpacking plants from Minnesota to Texas and from Iowa to Idaho have since cut jobs because some of the "secondary" meats they produce – such as beef tongue and Intestines – primarily go to international markets.

Overall meat industry job losses connected to mad cow disease have been relatively few, mainly because domestic demand for steak and hamburger has remained strong, said Ted Schroeder, an agricultural economist at Kanass State University. About 10 percent of U.S. beef is exported.

"The total number of cattle here, the number processed, those things are unchanged," Schroeder said.

amus are unchanged," Schroeder said.

But Excel Corp. of Wichtta, Kan, laid off 700 workers at five plants in Texas, Kansas, Colorado and Nebraska because of the loss resport markets for secondary meats, spokesman Mark Klein said.

Swift & Co. cut 140 jobs in Colorado, Nebraska, Texas and Idaho for much the same reason, spokesman Jim Herlihy said.

Swift idaho plant is in Nampa.

Gary Mickelson, a spokesman for Tyson Foods Inc., said his company laid off about 40 workers at its smaller slaughterhouses in Iowa, Nebraska and Idaho. Tyson's Idaho plant is in Kuna.

If export markets don't open within a year, job losses could grow and spill over into feedlots, equipment and supply companies for meatpacking plants and retail businesses in Midwest towns, Creighton University economics professor Erne Goss said.

Nebraska would be hit particularly hard if exports don't plck up soon. The beef industry is the largest industry in Nebraska and more cattle is slaughtered here than in any other state.

About 7.8 million head of cattle went through Nebraska's meatpacking plants in 2002, followed by Kansas with 7.4 million head and Texas with 6.4 million.

Nebraska could lose 21,000 jobs, Kansas 17,000, lowa 6,800 and Please see COW, Page E2

Martha Stewart

Faithful fans decide to stand by their woman

As barbs and jokes about Martha Stewart ricocheed around her. Catherine Moellering could think of only one things her mandoline.
She'd used the kirchen gadget to slice the scalloped potatoes that the guests at her dinner party houd so effusively praised. And the only reason Moellering owns a mandoline – even knows what one is - is Martha Stewart.
So Moellering let her investment banking and high-tech engineer friends have it.
"This meal that you guys have been complimenting me on exorbitantly," she remembers telling them,
"that was all Marthay." As the domestic diva's stock trading trial begins in New York City this week, Moellering and fans across the world are stendfastly standing by their woman. In the can-do fashion of their heroine, they've volunteered for a dizzying array of assignments.
Moellering, 30, the Harvant-educated director of financial malysis for Lis Claiborne in Manhattan, offered through the grassroots SaveMartha.com Website to talk to the media about why she thinks Stewart is being unfairly persecuted and prosecuted.

Other Stewart faithful are taking on courthouse duties, carrying giant paper-doll cutoust, supportive signs and kitchen utensils.
"The paper didll is a reference to Martha Stewart and her crafts, and her ability to make simple things beautiful," says John Small, SaveMartha.com creator.
The faithful have given Martha Stewart Living magazine subscriptions to friends for the holidays. They we been buying her tarnished company stock and wearing. Sawe Martha aprons, This sawe Martha aprons, This share and boxer shorts. They have valunteered to be "Secret Spopers," going to Kmart to buy Stewart's line of merchandise. They religiously tape her to the SaveMartha.com Web site and Marthatalks.com, the site Stewart herself launched to present her side of the story and provide up-to-date information on court proceed "ings.

Fans from Copenhagen, Denmark; to Ottawa; to Jalisco, Mexico, have sent e-mails of support to the Web sites. Small, who became a fan when he ran a now-defunct wedding-planning Web site, says that on a good day, SaveMartha.com gets between $0,000 and $250,000 hits.

The IRS does not want one cent more than they're entitled to, and the taxpayer is entitled to all legitimate benefits. Nonaggressive tax preparers take the easiest way out in determining tax implications of client transactions, often to the detriment of the client.

Aggressiveness does not mean skating on thin ice or cheating. It means being a complete advocate for the tax client.

subordinate to tip off Stewart about the Waskal sales.

While Stewart fan Stacie Brewster, 30, of Newport Beach, Calif., could not make it to New York for the trial, she said she. Ikke other geographically challenged fans, planned to monitor the proceedings steadily, checking online for updates between her children's sessions with Elmo and "Baby Einstein." "My husband jokes, "Do I need to stay home and watch the kids because you're flying to New York?" Brewster said. She didn't like the "Saw Martha" Tshirts offered on the SaweMartha com site, so Brewster made her own for herself and her two daughters, ages 2 and 10 months. She said Stewart helped her move from "chips to diapers" when she quit her job with a semi-conductor company to become a stayachome mom.

The faithful have not been entirely successful in their supportive endeavors – they had hoped to raise enough to pay for a billboard in Times Square admonishing: "If her stock sale was legit, you must acquit." But they fell short, says Small, a self-employed Mambattan marketing and business consultant who also ran a SaveRosie.com Web site when Rosie O'Donnell faced-a court battle. "Folks have to realize that famous people are real people, too," he says. "Famous people do have feelings."

NEW YORK (AP) – Hip-hongul Russell Simmons and artists including Ll. Cool J, Rev. Run and Jadakiss kicked off an initiative to register millions of young people to vote.

The "One Mind. One Vote" campaign aims to register 2 million voters ages 18-34 by the November presidential election and 20 million voters total over the next five years.

"We have a powerful, powerful initiative," said Simmon, chairman of the Hip-Hop Summit Action Network, an organization that educates young people about politics. "Politicians are starting to recognize that."

The nonpartisan campaign plans to read out to hip-hop fans through the syndicated radio show hosted by Doug Banks and through voter registration booths set up on the 2004 Doug Banks Jam Session concert tour.

Hot-tempered lovers look to cool down

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend and I have been seeing each other for three years. We moved in together eight mouths ago and have been talking about marriage as soon as we for financially stable. Abby, we both have hot tempers. We don't get violent, but we flare up at the drop of a hat. We tend to take things personally and become defensive. When we fight, it's all-out wan Neither of us seems to be able to stop until it's too late, and by then, we have usually said hurful things for which we're sorry.

Another technique that can avert mismaderstanding is to "mirror" what the other person has said. ("I heard you say you didn't like my outfit-Did you mean I'm getting fat?" In other words, the person might not have liked the color or style, but how will you know if you don't ask?

Another helpful technique is to ask yourself, before venting, "Is it true? Is it kind? It is huirful? Is it helpful?" A trial lawyer once told me, "You can't unring the bell."

This holds true in relationships as well as courtrooms.

DEAR ABBY: I am a gospel minister and members of the con-gregation are divided over whether to hold a baby shower for whether to hold a baby shower for an unwed mother who is a mem-ber of the congregation. I have been told that it "is just not done." The expectant mother has made it right by repenting and asking for prayer. Is there any rule of etiquette that prohibits having a baby show-er for an unwed mother?

I want to help the young woman because the long road ahead will be difficult. But I also want to keep the congregation from dividbecause your congregation seems to have forgotten a principle of their religion: Love one another.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"You're only here for a short visit. Don't hurry, Don't worry, And be sure to smell the flowers along the way."

- Walter Hagen

Consider today's four-spade contract as a defensive problem for East. Partner has elearly led a singleton heart. You could give him a heart ruft, but the trouble hat you have no immediate re-en-try in a side suit. Your trump ace is an entry—but by the time you get-on-lead-with it, partner-figures— to be out of trumps. So where is your fourth defensive trick to come from?

In he out of trumps. So where is your fourth defensive trick to come from?

The easy way to get a fourth defensive trick to beat the contract would be for partner to give you a diamod ruff, but if you lead a heart for him to trump straight-away, the ruff is not yet available. The answer is not to give him a heart ruff just yet. After all, there is no hurry, since the Stayman auction has told you that partner has precisely two trumps. You have the ace of trumps, so you are confident that you can give your partner his ruff when you get in with that card. At trick two you switch to your singleton diamond rather than give partner the ruff. No doubt declarer will win and play a trump. Only now do you hop up with your ace und play the nine of hearts for partner to ruff. In return, he will give you a diamond ruff for one down. Note that you play your highest heart to ask him to play the higher of the two side suits diamonds and clubs) when he gains the feel.

(diamonds and clubs) when he gains the lead.

ANSWER: Pass. Partner has denied even moderate heart support. Though you might want to try to defend against two clubs doubled, a doubte here by you would be takeout, not penallies. If you act, you KNOW partner will rebid diamonds — and even spades won't thrill you! Settle for the best result possible, not the best possible result.
