STARTING FROM SCRATCH

The view of the Twin Falls County Courthouse parking lot as seen from the roof of Monday afternoon. County commissioners will take the time for more parking into consideration during the search for a new building to house county offices.

Commissioners say they'll study space needs, get public involved

By Sandy Miller
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS— Now that plans to buy the former Anderson Lumber building have fallen through, county commissioners agreed it's time to put together a comprehensive plan for finding more county office space.

It's also time, they agreed, to involve the community in the decision.

"We need to sit down with the community and get their input," commission Chairman Gary Dunning said Monday during a meeting with city officials and members of the city's Urban Renewal Agency.

Please see COUNTY, Page A2

The search for space

Here are some of the options Twin Falls County commissioners are considering to expand and consolidate county offices:

- Former Twin Falls Clinic and Hospital property
Acquired in 2001 by Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, the three-floor, 80,000-square-foot property is referred to as the hospital's downtown campus. It houses Women's Services, a sleep lab, some physicians' offices and some administrative-related services. It has about 300 parking spots. The clinic building is located on Shoshone Street, just across from the courthouse. And be-considered a county asset. The hospital could give the county space on the first floor and possibly more space, perhaps even the entire building later.

From what I've learned

- Former Swift's Cheese Property
The building at 264 Fourth Ave. S. lies in the middle of the warehouse district. It's occupied by a nearby parking lot and an available warehouse across the street. But the building's size — between 20,000 and 25,000 square feet — might not accommodate the county's office consolidation plans.

- Building from the ground up
The Urban Renewal Agency owns 15 acres between Rock Creek Canyon and the railroad tracks next to the city Parks and Recreation building. Though not smack dab in the middle of town, it's still considered part of downtown.
- The two local Rotary Clubs
In Twin Falls have taken the Magic Valley Arts Council under their wings and are helping to get the council a new building on the site. But there's plenty of room left for a county building on the property.

U.S. announces warrant for Shiite cleric's arrest

By Hamza Drowal
Associated Press writer

BAGHDAD, Iraq — U.S. administrators in Iraq declared a radical Shiite cleric an "outlaw" Monday and announced a warrant for his arrest, heightening a confrontation after battles between his supporters and coalition troops killed at least 52 Iraqis and nine coalition troops, including eight Americans.

American officials would not say when they would move to arrest Muqtada al-Sadr, who is held up in the main mosque in Kufa, south of Baghdad, guarded by armed supporters.

"We don't fear death and martyrdom gives us dignity from God," said al-Sadr, a 30-year-old firebrand who has frequently denounced the U.S. occupation in his sermons.

The Americans "have the money, weapons and huge numbers, but these things are not going to weaken our will because God is with us," he said in a statement sent to the Arab TV station Al-Jazeera, which provided a copy to The Associated Press.

L. Paul Bremer, the top U.S. official in Iraq, cancelled a trip to Washington this week, a Senate aide said Monday. The aide said Bremer was to have given a closed-door briefing Thursday to the full Senate on the situation in Iraq, but Senate officials were informed Monday morning that the visit to Washington had been put off. No reason was given for the postponement, the aide said.

The showdown with al-Sadr threatened to heighten tensions with Iraq's Shiite Muslim majority at a time when U.S. troops are burdened by the Sunni guerrillas' bloody insurgency. But American officials apparently hope the Shiite public — many of whom distrust al-Sadr — will not rally around the cleric.

T.F. quadriplegic teen will meet Kobe Bryant today

TWIN FALLS — Sandi Muminovic has two wishes: meet Kobe Bryant, and regain the full use of his arms and legs.

One comes true today. Sandi will meet the Los Angeles Lakers star before watching tonight's game live in Sacramento.

The Twin Falls teenager's other wish will take a lot more than the efforts of the Wishin' Star Foundation.

Study will track 100,000 kids from birth to age 21

By Laurin Neegaard
AP Washington writer

WASHINGTON — Does a pregnant woman's exposure to certain chemicals put her child at risk of learning disabilities? Do genetics and pollution interact to cause autism? What's the real impact of TV on toddlers?

The government is preparing the largest study of U.S. children ever performed — it will track 100,000 from mothers' wombs to age 21 — to increase understanding of how the environment affects youngsters' health.

It's called the National Children's Study, and pediatric specialists say it's coming at a crucial time. Rates of autism, asthma, certain birth defects and other disorders are on the rise, as is concern about which environmental factors play a role. And technology has finally advanced enough to allow study of multichemical and gene-environment interactions that might explain why some children seem at greater risk.

The study "really represents our generation's best hope of coming to learn the environmental causes of these conditions," says Dr. Philip Landrigan, an expert on children and the environment at New York's Mount Sinai School of Medicine.

It's a quest to prove both what's harmful, and what's not.

"There are things we probably should be worrying about that we're not worrying about enough, and there are things we're worrying about too much," adds Landrigan, who is advising the National Institutes of Health on the study's design.

But four years of drought, groundwater pumping, and conversion of gravity irrigation to sprinkling are reducing the Blue Lakes spring source, upon which the city relies for 60 percent of its water.

In addition, the Environmental Protection Agency has a new mandate for the city to lower its arsenic levels in its drinking water.

"I suspect water will be the most important issue facing the city for years to come," City Manager Tom Courtney told the council.

Last summer residents used more than 30 million gallons of water on the hottest days. In contrast, during an average winter day the city uses only about 12 million gallons.

The city has already begun implementing a pressurized irrigation system using Twin Falls Canal Co. water for parks, the golf course and new subdivisions.

Councilman Lance Clow acknowledged most city residents probably overwater their lawns.

Water measures

The City Council unanimously adopted the following regarding water issues Monday:

- Education - The city will step up efforts to focus the public's attention on conservation.
• Cooperation - The city will work with the Blue Lakes County Club...

higher water rates might encourage residents in older neighborhoods to get together and put in the systems.

"Closing a street won't create a whole lot of parking, and the public wouldn't go for it," Clow said.

"We still want people to take pride in a green lawn," Courtney said.

Reducing the amount of water Twin Falls residents use isn't necessarily a difficult feat, "overall," Idaho's residential water consumption is greater than any state in the nation.

"I think the word 'abuse' is more for residential use than industrial," Clow said.

Brig. Gen. Mark Kimmitt said the potential for violence depended on "whether (al-Sadr) decides to come peacefully or whether he decides to come not peacefully."

"The brain injury wasn't as severe as suspected, and a long recovery began."

"He has feeling in his entire body but can only move his hands a little bit, Sandi said. His parents hope his month-long stay at the Shriners Hospital for Children in Sacramento will help him.

Bryant's off-court legal problems haven't diminished him in Sandi's eyes.

It's a happy coincidence that Sandi is in an NBA city such as Sacramento. Specialists at the hospital have been working with him since last Monday.

"I was expecting to be better," he said. "I'm making progress, but it's slow to come."

Muscle spasms have hampered him, and tests continue to determine what can be done.

"We don't know still," Vera said. "Hope is always with us. We always hope."

Before the accident, Sandi would play hoops in the back yard, using a regulation one for shooting and a children's one to practice his dunks. Sandi said.

"The always playing every free minute," Vera said. "Go into the back yard and he'd be playing in the rain or anything."

That may never happen again. But then after 8 tonight, one of Sandi's unfulfilled wishes will already have come true. Why not another?

Court will decide on drug dogs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Roy Caballes was pulled over for speeding and was just about to get off with a warning when another Illinois trooper pulled up with a drug-sniffing dog.

The dog indicated drugs were in the trunk of Caballes' car. Police searched it and found $250,000 worth of marijuana, transforming a run-of-the-mill traffic stop into what Monday became a Supreme Court case.

The high court said it will use Caballes' case to clarify when police can use drug-sniffing dogs to check stopped cars whose drivers have given police no particular reason to suspect illegal activity.

Lower courts have been divided ever when police must show such specific suspicions before allowing a dog to sniff around a car during an ordinary traffic stop.

The case is another in a long line of Supreme Court cases involving cars, traffic stops and the Constitution's ban on unreasonable searches or seizures, but it deals with a situation more common than many of the high court has reviewed recently.

Low cost carrier tops airline list

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three of the top four airlines in 2003 were low-cost carriers, with Jet Airways leading the pack with the best overall performance, according to an annual study released Monday.

The study's authors say the report showed why low-fare airlines are gobbling up market share from traditional carriers: They're "on time" more; they bump fewer passengers; they mishandle less baggage and they generate fewer complaints.

The report adds further evidence to the emerging performance gap between the legacy carriers and the no-frills network carriers," said Brent Bowen, director of the University of Nebraska.

Study

The study, ordered by Congress in 2000, is in its late planning stages. The time pregnant women is set for 2006, although proponents hope three pilot sites could begin work late next year. Already, families alerted by interested patient-advocacy groups are asking how to participate.

The last major child-health study in the 1960s, tracked the children of 55,000 pregnant women until age 7 to learn the causes of cerebral palsy. It also yielded other important discoveries, such as that doctors at the time weren't properly treating infants' fever-caused seizures.

The National Children's Study is to be far more encompassing. Among its overall aims, says director Dr. Peter Scheidt of NCIH's National Institute of Child Health and Human Development:

- To measure environmental exposures of concern and hunt differences by degree of exposure.
- To study health problems specifically suspected of environmental links, in hopes of pinpointing risk factors.
- Storing genetic and other health and exposure data long-term to test future questions without starting from scratch.
- The kinds of information we'll be collecting... will provide an enormously valuable resource for doing this kind of research for decades to come," Scheidt says.

Scandals rock voucher program

MILWAUKEE (AP) — One school that received millions of dollars through the nation's oldest and largest voucher program was founded by a convicted rapist. Another school reportedly entertained kids — with Monopoly — while cashing $330,000 in tuition checks for hundreds of no-show students.

The recent scandals have shocked politicians, angered parents and left even some voucher supporters demanding reforms.

The troubles have helped lead to passage of a state law requiring voucher schools to report more financial information to the state. Democratic Gov. Jim Doyle signed it last month.

But so far, efforts to impose more rigorous academic standards on voucher schools have failed.

Milwaukee's 14-year-old voucher program has served as a model for others around the country. It dolos out state money to allow poor parents to send their children to private schools. Wisconsin will spend $75 million this year on vouchers for more than 13,000 students.

The schools are required to report virtually nothing about their methods to the state, except what the students' parents do. Proponents say that frees the schools from "onerous bureaucracy." But some say the lack of oversight makes them a prime target for abuse.

At the Mandella Academy for Science and Math, school officials admitted signing up more than 200 students who never showed.

Vouchers historically rejected by voters

In 22 referendums since 1967, voters have consistently voted against aiding private schools with public funds.

Mars rover finishes primary mission

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — NASA's Spirit rover wrapped up its primary mission to Mars on Monday as it continued to roll across the planet's surface on an extended tour that could last through September.

The unmanned robot, marking its 90th full day on Mars, didn't accomplish all of its tasks NASA considered essential to declare the joint mission a success. Its twin rover, Opportunity, was getting close to achieving the same.

"Spirit has completed its part of the bargain, and Opportunity doesn't have much left to do," said Mark Adler, manager of the $620 million mission.

The mission's key tasks included a requirement that one of the rovers travel at least 1,580 feet — a mark Spirit surpassed on Sunday.

Between the two of them, the rovers also had to take stereo and color panoramas of their surroundings, drive to at least eight locations and operate, simultaneously for a minimum of 30 days.

NASA assumed technical and other problems would ground the rovers fully one-third of the time they operated on Mars.

Despite computer memory problems that left Spirit sidelined for 2.5 weeks, it has still spent more days at work than expected.

"It's better than we could have possibly imagined," Adler said.

L.A. Times wins five Pulitzers

N.Y. Times picks up public service award

NEW YORK (AP) — The Los Angeles Times captured five Pulitzer Prizes on Monday for coverage ranging from devastating wildfires in its backyard to a civil war on the other side of the globe — the second-most awards ever won by a newspaper.

Coverage of the war in Iraq led to two prizes: Anthony Shadid of The Washington Post for international reporting, and David Leeson and Cheryl Diaz Meyer of The Dallas Morning News for breaking news photography.

The New York Times won the public service award for a story by David Barstow and Lowell Bergman about worker safety at a company where lax enforcement allegedly contributed to thousands of injuries and some deaths. The Wall Street Journal claimed a pair of Pulitzers: one for explanatory reporting and a second for best reporting.

As news of the Pulitzers reached the Los Angeles Times' newsroom, staff members erupted in cheers and applause.

"My feeling is this reflects the depth of talent at this paper and the depth of dedication across all departments," Times editor John S. Carroll told the staff.

The newspaper's five prizes were exceeded only by The New York Times' seven awards in 2002 — most of those related to the Sept. 11, 2001, terrorist attacks. Prior to that, no publication had ever won more than three Pulitzers in a single year.

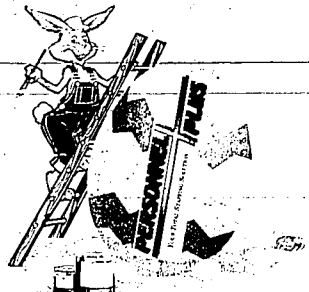

Security needs private funds

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The federal government cannot afford to pay for the increased security needed to protect U.S. ports from terrorists, Homeland Security Secretary Tom Ridge said Monday.

"We need to talk to the private sector," Ridge said. "We don't have enough public money to do everything that needs to be done."

Ports and shipping companies are facing a July 1 deadline to have security programs in place for their docks and vessels or face potential fines.

The programs are based on regulations developed by the Homeland Security Department and the Coast Guard under the Maritime Transportation Security Act of 2002.

Coalition forces plan crackdown

FALLUJAH, Iraq (AP) — Hundreds of U.S. and Iraqi troops in tanks and armored Humvees surrounded the city of Fallujah on Monday, ready to launch a crackdown on insurgents after a mob killed four Americans and mutilated their bodies.

U.S. Sgt. Jahmal Guy Of Marletta, Ga., with the 2nd Battalion 1st Marine Regiment rides on a military truck Monday through the town of Fallujah, Iraq.

Explosions and gunfire were heard from the city center as troops briefly exchanged fire with gunmen on Fallujah's outskirts in the evening. It was not clear if there were any casualties, though a U.S. Marine was killed in the area early Monday.

U.S. commanders have vowed a massive response to pacify Fallujah after the murder Wednesday of the four American civilians, who were under contract to the U.S. coalition as security guards.

Scores of Iraqis dragging the four bodies through the streets and hanging two of the charred corpses from a bridge showed the depth of anti-U.S. sentiment in the city. The images caused reaction around the world, and even Shiite clerics in the city condemned the mutilations as un-Islamic, though they didn't criticize the killings.

Fallujah, 30 miles west of Baghdad, is one of the most volatile cities in the Sunni Triangle, the heartland of the anti-U.S. insurgency north and west of the capital.

U.S. forces blockaded roads around Fallujah and stopped all traffic in and out. Military patrols entered the city's outer suburbs on reconnaissance missions and broadcast warnings on loud speakers to residents to stay indoors until Tuesday. The streets were largely deserted.

Iraqi police dropped off U.S. leaflets at city mosques, announcing a daily 7 p.m. to 6 a.m. curfew and ordering residents not to carry weapons. They instructed people to gather in one room if U.S. forces enter their home and to put their hands up if they want to talk to the troops.

About two miles from the city's northern outskirts near a Muslim cemetery, Marines dug trenches in the desert and sharpshooters took position on the roof of a mosque.

Nearby, several Abrams tanks, armored troop carriers, Humvees and trucks waited ahead of the planned operation, dubbed "Vigilant Resolve."

"The city is surrounded," said Lt. James Vanzant, 2nd Battalion, 1st Marine Expeditionary Force. "We want to make a very precise approach to this ... We are looking for the bad guys in town."

Some 1,200 U.S. Marines and two battalions of Iraqi security forces will be involved in the operation, he said.

Troops will target the killers of the four Americans as well as guerrillas who have attacked U.S. forces and Iraqi police.

French police net 13 terror suspects

PARIS (AP) — Authorities detained 13 suspected militants, including one about to flee the country, in a dawn raid Monday stemming from deadly terrorist attacks in Casablanca, Morocco, police said.

Agents raided eight locations in search of suspects connected to last year's bombings in Casablanca, police sources said. Morocco had issued arrest warrants for three suspects.

U.S. showdown with top Shiite cleric threatens extended fight

By Hamza Hendawi
Associated Press writer

Analysis

BAGHDAD, Iraq — In taking on a radical Shiite cleric, Washington risks sparking a prolonged fight with his anti-American supporters. But Muqtada al-Sadr is not popular with most Shiites, and by acting now, the United States could silence him and shut down his militia, scoring key victories ahead of the transfer of power to Iraqis on June 30.

Militiamen loyal to al-Sadr killed eight American soldiers and wounded 40 in clashes Sunday. On Monday, L. Paul Bremer, the top U.S. official in Iraq, declared him an "outlaw," and a coalition spokesman announced a warrant for his arrest for the killing of a rival cleric last year.

Even President Bush is working against democracy.

The crackdown on al-Sadr's movement could spark further violence, and members of his "al-Mahdi Army" militia are vowing to resist any attempt to arrest their leader or dismantle their movement. U.S. action could also push more young Shiites — already disillusioned with the American occupation — into supporting the 30-year-old al-Sadr.

But mainstream Shiite leaders and older clerics, who have often been vilified as traitors by al-Sadr, followers for their more moderate stance toward the Americans, would likely be glad to see him silenced.

Al-Sadr's popularity is largely confined to several Shiite neighborhoods in Baghdad and a scattering of southern cities. Many Shiites view him as lacking the wisdom that comes with old age.

U.S. officials appear to be betting the wider Shiite community won't side with the cleric's clerics as they try to remove him. The U.S.-led coalition's timing for a confrontation with al-Sadr and the cleric's choice of response — a series of peaceful demonstrations followed by Sunday's deadly clashes — are evidence of the mounting tensions in Iraq as the scheduled June 30 transfer of power to a sovereign Iraqi government draws closer.

Political, ethnic and religious groups are jockeying for position. With a general election due no later than Jan. 31, a silent but an incensed al-Sadr would be a relief to many local politicians.

The showdown with al-Sadr began when Bremer ordered the movement's weekly newspaper closed for two months for inciting violence. On Saturday, coalition troops detained one of his closest aides, Mustafa al-Yacoubi.

Al-Yacoubi and al-Sadr face murder charges in the gruesome killing last year of rival cleric Abul-Hasan al-Majidi in the holy city of Mecca.

Iraq's Shiite majority — unlike Sunni Arabs — has generally refrained from attacking U.S. forces despite misgivings about American intentions.

Saudi police kill militant

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Saudi Arabian police killed a wanted militant and injured a second in a shootout Monday in a suburb of the capital, Riyadh, security officials said.

The officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, said police patrolling the affluent suburb of Roda, east of Riyadh, fired at a car that refused their order to stop.

The officials told The Associated Press that police fired at two "wanted militants" who were in the car, killing one and wounding a second.

Eyewitnesses said the militants fired first.

Officials said the ensuing gun battle injured three other people, but it was not clear if they were police or bystanders.

A Patient's Perspective

Professional Hearing Aid Services

Tenny Garner Did!

When Tenny Garner, one of Twin Falls' top loan officers and a mother of three children, needed a hearing aid, she turned to one of the town's top hearing aid practices, Professional Hearing Aid Services.

"After saying "what" and asking people to repeat themselves for 10 years, I finally made the decision to get a hearing test," she says. "Not to mention, my littlest daughter, now 11 years old, kept saying to me, "Mom, I don't want to have to say it three times."

"For years, my kids kept telling me to get a hearing aid. My hearing aids stopped that irritation in my family."

Tenny, age 56, has been wearing her hearing aid for a high-frequency hearing loss for nearly a year. "My hearing loss was embarrassing," she explains. "But now I hear everything. I no longer have to ask people to repeat themselves." Like many people who have had others tell them about their hearing problems or who have recognized their hearing difficulties on their own, Tenny started with an inexpensive hearing enhancer. She then moved on to the more advanced hearing aid technology. "I'll wear them the rest of my life," she proclaims, "and upgrade to more advanced hearing aid technology as I need to."

She is so pleased with the hearing aids provided by Professional Hearing Aid Services, she tells everyone. "I even take them out to show people and say, see how small? And ask them to try it!" She also tells everyone to go to Professional Hearing Aid Services for their hearing healthcare. "They take care of you!"

Historical Society hears from Forest Service

JEROME - The Jerome County Historical Society will meet at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the Jerome Public Library meeting room, 100 I Ave. E. A representative from the Forest Service will speak. Refreshments will be provided. The public is invited to the free meeting. Low Pence, a retired Wood River Conservation officer, spoke at March meeting about the role the beaver plays in recent history in southern Idaho. His slide presentation showed the restoration of creeks and meadows in the high desert region. In the 1800s the beaver were all trapped out of central and southern Idaho by the Hudson Bay trappers, he reported. The wooden dams on the beaver ponds eventually were washed out and the once lush meadow grass dried up. Then the sagebrush took hold. In recent years, small concrete, wooden and dirt filled dams have been used in the local area to help restore the meadows, although many were unsuccessful, he reported. Beaver have been reintroduced and are building back the ponds to flood the meadow lands. "Since sagebrush does not like to 'get its feet wet,' the meadow grass and aspen-trees are regrowing and the meadows are returning to the area, he said. Blaine Williams has completed 60 colorful hats to donate to those in need.

SAVANA WISKEYVA/The Times-News

Local man caps community service by making hats

By Sandra Wisecaver
Times-News correspondent

BUHL - A Buhl man knits for the needy. Blaine Williams has made 60 knit hats since mid-December and he's still knitting.

He uses a loom to spool knit the hats, wrapping the yarn around the pegs and entwining it. When he completes an approximately eight-inch tube, he ties it all together and adds a tassel to some.

The loom has 36 pegs, which makes a youth-size hat. A family member has found him a 41-peg loom so he will soon be able to make hats for adults, also.

"I started making these hats to give to humanitarian service, and the hats go wherever they are needed," Williams said. "It's almost addictive. You think I'm just going to wrap one more round before I quit for the night. You just keep going like the Energizer Bunny."

Williams is doing the project through "The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints humanitarian aid program. The program operates in a cooperation with the Red Cross, Red Crescent Societies, Salvation Army, Catholic Relief Services, CARE and civic groups, including Rotary."

Williams came up with the idea of knitting hats after reading about humanitarian services. Then he learned how to knit. His wife, Moiba, lends a hand at times, although she typically knits using needles instead of a loom.

Williams started by asking for donations of yarn. And he has lots now - enough for probably 400 more hats.

Williams and his wife live southwest of Buhl, where he operates an irrigation bubble-screen cleaning business. He also works part-time at an irrigation company and drives the Buhl School District bus for preschoolers.

Not much of a television fan, making the hats gives him something to do - something he knows will warm others, he said.

Anyone interested in learning about the project can call Williams at 643-5864.

Tax breaks aren't just for the rich

I really need the help of the Democratic Party. I've been able to use the Democratic mantra, "Bush's tax breaks for the rich," to make my wife believe we are among the wealthy, and she should be very thankful.

For the first time since we've been married, we received money back from our income taxes. We also received an $800 child tax credit check last year. Only the rich get this kind of treatment.

I'm not sure I'm going to be able to keep her fooled much longer. I really need some more Democratic crapola. Please help!

On another subject, I really want to like John Kerry, but anybody with a more liberal voting record than Nancy Pelosi, Ted Kennedy and Barbara Boxer - well, let's just say something smells under the skin.

JOHN FLORA Gooding

Affluent Democrats are welcome to join in

In response to Emma Robinson's article about the Democrats being rich, rude, haters of America, I am a Democrat and I do not hate anyone. I have many friends who are Republicans, and I even love them.

If you know of any rich Democrats out there, please let us know because we don't have any of them in our Mini-Cassia group of Democrats. If there are any of you out there in Mini-Cassia, please come to our meetings the third Thursday of the Month at 7 p.m. at the Paul Fire Station.

You don't have to be rich to come to our meeting; however, because if you aren't, you will fight in with the rest of us poor and middle-class citizens. As far as letting you rich Republicans keep your money, that is all right.

We just object when you take the money out of the government for refunds and tax cuts targeted to the richest of our country.

We object to the war in Iraq that lines the pockets of some rich citizens while privatizing Medicare, cutting down on benefits for the retired military. I am one, cutting down on Medicaid and all programs to help our citizens who are struggling to pay their power bills and keep their farm operating to make a living.

The very businesses that need help to build our Idaho economy, the Republicans pick to cut down. Now they want to cut down on the cost-of-living raises to the senior citizens, and we only got a 1 to 1-1/2 percent raise on our last checks.

We object to the rebuilding of Iraq schools and hospitals while cutting down on our schools and medical benefits.

We do not object to the war in Afghanistan, because that is where the terrorists are, but they were not in Iraq.

The weapons of mass destruction were not there and they were not an eminent threat to us as we were told by President Bush.

We do believe in the United Nations and think that it would have been better to take the time to work with the United Nations. The way President

Bush handled the situation lost a lot of credibility with the other nations. OK, all you rich Democrats, if there are any of you out there, please come out to our meeting. If there are any out there, I have not met them yet. THOMAS IOBE Burley

Smokers have no right to puff on me

This is a response to the letter that was in the March 27 paper written by Judy Barnard regarding smoking.

When we are born, the first thing that we do is take a breath of air (oxygen). It's what the human body needs to survive. It's a God-given right.

Smoking on the other hand, is a choice. You choose to purchase cigarettes and you choose to smoke them. That is your choice for yourself.

I don't remember giving you or any other person the permission to make that choice for me. When you sit in a restaurant and smoke (even if I am in the non-smoking section), your smoke travels through the air and into the lungs of many non-smokers, children included, endangering their lives because, as you know, second-hand smoke is worse than first-hand smoke.

You compared your smoking in a restaurant to someone having a glass of wine with dinner.

That glass of wine is only affecting the person drinking it, and if they choose to have a few too many and become bothersome and start affecting other patrons, they are asked to leave.

So why is it that they should have to leave when their choice becomes bothersome to others and smokers are not.

You said let's all enjoy life as we choose, and I agree with you as long as we are not breaking the law or harming others in the process.

I choose to live a smoke-free life and hope in the near future that I will be able to sit with my husband and children in a smoke-free environment when we go out to dinner.

And you will still be able to smoke before and after dinner - outside. AMANDA REVELS Wendell

Sharon: Withdrawal will hurt Palestinians

JERUSALEM (AP) — A unilateral Israeli withdrawal from the Gaza Strip and four West Bank settlements could delay Palestinian elections of statehood for many years, Prime Minister Ariel Sharon said in interviews Monday.

Israel also is no longer bound by a pledge to the United States not to harm Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat, Sharon said. The White House said killing Arafat was "not part of the solution to the situation in the Middle East."

In Gaza, soldiers killed three Palestinians, ages 18 and 19, near the fence with Israel. Troops fired during the night at three figures they deemed suspicious, the army said.

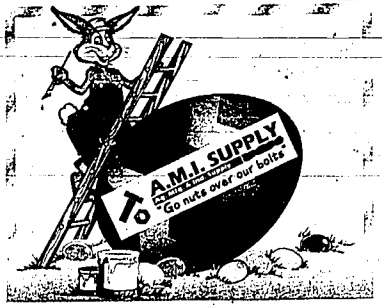

Israeli forces also set up a new security position east of the Rafah airport, Palestinians said. The Israeli army said it was checking the report.

Israeli security forces were on high alert for possible attacks by Palestinian militants during the weeklong Passover holiday, which began at sundown Monday. Police urged all licensed gun owners to carry their weapons, and security forces deployed reinforcements to synagogues and malls.

Israel also maintained a tight closure of the West Bank and Gaza, barring all Palestinians from entering Israel. The closure, imposed after Israel's March 22 assassination of Hamas founder Sheik Ahmed Yassin, will remain in effect until at least April 27 — Israel's independence day. Israel's outgoing air force chief, Dan Halutz, said the nation's targeted killings of wanted Palestinians have hampered the ability of militant groups to carry out attacks. Halutz told the Ma'ariv daily newspaper that Israel has launched 110 airstrikes in the past three years, hitting its targets 80 percent of the time. Sharon gave wide-ranging interviews to Israeli daily newspapers and radio stations Monday, a Passover tradition.

Powell urges disarmament, assures Haiti of support

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — Secretary of State Colin Powell gave assurances Monday of full U.S. support for Haiti's interim government but said democracy cannot flourish until politically motivated private armies lay down their weapons.

Haiti's interim prime minister Gerard Latortue told Powell that all Haiti's political parties agree that municipal legislative and presidential elections, initially planned for next month, should be held in 2005.

Powell said prospects are good for sending a U.N.-sponsored peacekeeping force to replace the U.S.-led multinational force that arrived shortly after the Feb. 29 departure of President Jean-Bertrand Aristide.

Almost 2,000 U.S. troops are serving in Haiti and are expected to leave in June, along with Canadian and Chilean troops. Their combined total is about 3,600 troops.

Afghan farmers protest destruction of poppy crop

KABUL, Afghanistan — Hundreds of farmers demonstrated in eastern Afghanistan on Monday against a government plan to destroy fields of opium poppies in an effort to curb drug production, police said.

About 300 farmers gathered peacefully near the town of kappu in Nangarhar province, a miles east of Kabul, said Ajib Shah, a senior provincial police official.

The government plan calls for the destruction of 75 percent of the opium crop in Nangarhar and two other key opium-producing provinces. Opium is used to make heroin.

Russian researcher gets convicted of espionage

MOSCOW — Researcher Igor Sutuyagin was found guilty of espionage on Monday, Russian news agencies reported, in a case that raised fears of a resurgence of Soviet-style tactics.

Sutuyagin, a scholar at Moscow's respected USA and Canada Institute, was jailed in October 1999 when arrested on charges he sold information on nuclear submarines and missile warning systems to a British company that Russian investigators claim was a Central Intelligence Agency cover.

Sutuyagin maintained the analyses he wrote were based on open sources and that he had no reason to believe the British company was an intelligence cover.

Flash flood in northern Mexico kills at least 21

PIEDRAS NEGRAS, Mexico — A flash flood swept through a border town in northern Mexico, forcing a river over its banks, and washing away houses and cars. At least 21 were reported dead, and dozens more missing, officials said Monday.

The U.S. Border Patrol sent two helicopters to help locate survivors stranded on rooftops after floodwaters rose over the only bridge that connects Piedras Negras with other towns in northern Coahuila state.

Thousands pay respects to dead whale in Vietnam

HANOI, Vietnam — Thousands of Vietnamese are making pilgrimages to a beach in southern Vietnam to worship a dead whale.

More than a thousand people — many from hundreds of miles distant — have journeyed to burn incense near the whale carcass discovered on the beach Friday, said a police officer in the Thanh Phu District of Ben Tre province.

Chemical spill shuts down traffic

KIMBERLY—A liquid fertilizer spill disrupted traffic in and around Kimberly for close to two hours Monday night.

The nitrogen phosphoric liquid apparently spilled from a truck that had left the Agrilliance chemical plant in Kimberly, said Jerry Morton, Kimberly's materials commander for the Rock Creek Fire Department. He estimated 50 to 70 gallons spilled at three intersections: Monroe and Main streets, Highway 30 and Main, and at Highways 30 and 50, also known as Red Cap Corner.

Traffic was shut down from Red Cap Corner to Center Street in Kimberly after the spill was discovered about 7:30 p.m.

The fertilizer is considered nontoxic, but it can be a big problem if it spills into waterways, Morton said.

Crews kept that from happening and used kitty litter to soak up the liquid, then bagged it and returned it to Agrilliance for disposal.

Morton praised both the company and firefighters for their response.

"They've done a fantastic job," he said. "The guys did a good job of keeping this stuff confined."

Assisting at the scene were the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Department, Idaho State Police and Kimberly police.

Castleford receives grant for water study

BOISE—The Idaho Department of Environmental Quality announced Monday the award of a $9,780 drinking water planning grant to the city of Castleford.

The money will be used to determine how best to upgrade the city's water system to meet future state requirements, particularly reduction of arsenic levels.

The purpose of the project is to assure an adequate supply of safe drinking water for the city.

Total eligible cost of the project is $18,960; Castleford is providing a 50 percent match.

Cities must have arsenic in their drinking water below a level of 10 parts per billion by 2006. Castleford's water has been measured to have levels of arsenic at 22 ppb.

The cost of building a facility to remove the arsenic has been estimated at $200,000, and operating it could cost the city $104,000 annually. Castleford's city budget is about $175,000 this year.

CSI offers ropes course classes

TWIN FALLS—The aerial Challenge Course at the College of Southern Idaho is offering a series of limited-space, open-enrollment classes starting Wednesday.

Wendy Davis, course facilitator, said many education, business and athletic groups use the course throughout the year for leadership training, team building and personal enrichment.

People usually sign up through one of these entities; however, each year enrollment is open CSI students and the community to come try one or all of the low and high aerial elements.

Classes will be held from 4 to 7 p.m. Wednesdays, with the following schedule:

- April 7 — Ships Crossing and Burma Bridge.
- April 14 — Balance Log and the Wild Woody.
- April 21 — Dangle Duo and the Pamper Pole.
- April 28 — 60-foot climbing wall.
- May 5 — Zip Line.

All sessions are professionally supervised with all safety gear provided.

Cost is $10 per class, and students can take any or all classes. Participants will be asked to sign a liability waiver. Students under 18 will be required to have a parent or guardian's permission to participate.

For more information or to sign up, call 732-6221.

Wolf state management nears

Commissioner doesn't see wolf sport hunting coming very soon

The Associated Press

BOISE—The Idaho Fish and Game Commission has officially designated the gray wolf as a big game animal in the state, but a commissioner said Monday it will be a long time before anyone actually hunts wolves for sport.

The commission—unanimously voted late last month to change the official status of gray wolves from "endangered species" to "big game animal," bringing any killing of the species under commission regulation.

Commissioner Cameron Wheeler, whose eastern Idaho district encompasses part of the wolf recovery area in Idaho, said any wolf season in Idaho would be tightly restricted, perhaps even as a once-in-a-lifetime experience. It would likely attract trophy hunters, he said.

"I grew up in a rural part of eastern Idaho, where part of hunting legacy, if you harvest it, you eat it," Wheeler said. "I don't know if I'd want one stuffed sitting in my den."

Many elected state officials, resentful over having wolves forced on the state, have resisted cooperating with the federal government on wolf management. But Wheeler said it is more productive to work with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

"We have to deal with the reality of the situation," Wheeler said. "I'm looking for ways to manage the wolves, and I'm saying, 'Let's manage them in the best possible way for the people.'"

Wolf reintroduction in Idaho, Montana and Wyoming started under the Clinton administration in 1995, when about 30 animals were transplanted from the Canadian Rockies. There are now an estimated 760 wolves in the three-state recovery area, including 360 in Idaho. Wolves now live throughout central Idaho and have come as far south as Hammett in Elmore County.

The federal government says it is ready to begin the process. Please see WOLF, Page B3.

The wolf reintroduction program in Idaho is becoming one of the great success stories in wildlife conservation. The Landmark Pack, shown in Oct. 1997 in the wilds of Idaho, started with a pair of reintroduced wolves in 1996.

BURNING DITCHES

Fifth-generation rancher and farmer Todd Billington, 20, burns out a ditch while his father, Tom Billington, follows in a tractor with water to extinguish the fire along the edge of their property south of Twin Falls Monday. Farmers around the valley burn their ditches so water can flow without grass and other debris blocking the headgates.

Buhl, school district near easement deal

By Mickey Walker
Times-News correspondent

BUHL—An agreement between the Buhl School District and the city of Buhl appears to be close at hand regarding an easement that runs along the east side of the new high school parking lot.

The easement itself is not the issue, but the water line's repair and maintenance is—particularly the section that will flow under the school's parking lot from the city water tower north toward Sawtooth Avenue.

Without an agreement, the city would be responsible to repair the line and put the lot back as it was in the event of a problem, but the school district would be accountable for the final grade and re-asphalting.

"We don't want to use education dollars to resurface a parking lot," school district Superintendent Rick Hill said.

Provisions in the agreement also address a proposed subdivision located north of the school.

"If that subdivision really takes off and the city needs a bigger water line, we don't think the school district should have to pay for tearing it up, putting in a new line and resurfacing," Hill said.

The school district agrees that the easement belongs to the city, allowing access to the line, but more clarification was needed to outline responsibility for repair and replacement costs.

"We feel the city should pay for the whole thing, including restoring the parking lot," Hill said.

A companion issue included in the agreement is a triangular piece of ground annexed into the city located along Seventh Avenue North to Sawtooth.

"We want to make sure that the city will never extend the streets of Linden, Birch, Oak and Pine into school grounds," Hill said.

City of Jerome eyes remote meter reading

By Dixie Thomas Reale
Times-News correspondent

JEROME—The city meter reader may soon be able to aim a radio gun at a water meter and read the numbers without ever getting out of the vehicle.

The public works department is requesting permission from the City Council to buy a Sensus metering system at a cost of $29,300.

For the radio read system to work, each meter will be required to be connected to a radio.

With the continued growth expected in the city, the public works department wants to start installing radio read meters now, rather than having to go back and replace new meters later. Gradually the city will replace the existing meters with radio meters, so that eventually all meters in the city will be connected to a radio.

Radio reading of the meters will eliminate the need for snow removal, problems with access to meters, potential injury and the need for rereads of meters. It will also reduce the time required to read the meters.

Public Works Director Bob Culver said.

In other business tonight, a public hearing is scheduled to take comment on a preliminary/final plan for a subdivision to be located at 505 E. Ave. E. and 604 S. Davis. Planning and zoning considered the subdivision on Feb. 10, determined it was zoned correctly for the proposed development and sent the subdivision request on to the City Council.

Paul Lloyd, developer of the subdivision, told the Planning and Zoning Commission in February that although the land is large enough for 11 homes, he plans to build two initially. The houses will be around 1,200 square feet, with three bedrooms and two baths. He will build additional houses in phases as financing allows.

A private road to be built in the proposed subdivision will be maintained by a homeowners association, Lloyd said.

Police seek driver in fatal crash

By Rebecca Maany
Times-News writer

ROGERSON—Police were looking for information Monday about a driver who might have been involved in a fatal crash Sunday three miles south of Rogerson.

Paula Dee Crossley, 35, of Idaho Falls died when the car she was in rolled over and she was ejected. Driver Effie P. Marquez, 60, Crossley's aunt, suffered two broken arms. Passenger Alice E. Darling, 58, Crossley's mother, received non-life-threatening injuries. Both women, also of Idaho Falls, were transported to Magic Valley Regional Medical Center and were released late Monday afternoon.

The women were traveling northbound on U.S. Highway 93 around 11:06 a.m. in a white 2000 Chevrolet Blazer, according to a news released issued by Idaho State Police.

An oncoming vehicle, reported as a mid-sized tan sedan, perhaps a mid-1990s Oldsmobile, swerved several times into the northbound lane, said Sgt. Douglas McFall of the ISP.

Marquez drove into the other lane in an attempt to get out of the way. After a few attempts to avoid the car, Marquez lost control of the Blazer, and its tires left the highway on the left side of the road, causing the vehicle to roll.

After the accident, one of the injured passengers looked up and saw the suspect's car, which had stopped, McFall said. By the time police arrived on the scene, however, the car and driver were gone.

Traffic came to a standstill for 45 minutes. Passage was limited to one lane for an hour. "We have some witnesses, but we have not totally identified a suspect at this time," McFall said Monday.

One vehicle police are examining is out of the Magic Valley, he added.

The accident remains under investigation.

Government says protecting bull-trout will cost big money

The Times-News and The Associated Press

BOISE—Reductions in timber harvest along with planned fishery studies and irrigation system changes account for much of the $6 million expected to be spent annually to protect bull trout in central and southern Idaho.

The federal government Monday released an analysis showing that it will cost between $230 million and $300 million over the next decade to protect bull trout under the Endangered Species Act in the Northwest

Want to comment?

The draft economic analysis regarding the critical habitat proposal for bull trout is available for public comment until May 5. Find it online at pacific.fws.gov/bulltrout/. Seven public hearings will be held between April 17-21 to gather reaction. Here are the times and locations of two of them:

- Boise — 1 to 3 p.m. and 6 to 8 p.m. April 14, Boise Centre on the Grove, 850 Front St.
- Salmon — 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. April 16, city chambers, 200 Main St.

The economic analysis, prepared by Bioeconomics Inc. of Missoula, Mont., said that most of the estimated costs of protecting bull trout habitat already are being incurred due to the listing of that fish in 1998, and because of protective measures already in place for endangered salmon and steelhead in the same river basins.

The government's bull trout plan would give additional scrutiny to human activity along 8,957 miles of streams and 205,639 acres of lakes and reservoirs in Idaho. Among them are dozens of streams and lakes in the upper Salmon River drainage, including Redfish and Alturas lakes, along with streams and reservoirs in Camas and Elmore counties that are part of the Boise River basin. Not included in the plan is the Jarbidge River drainage in northern Nevada and southern Idaho, site of confrontations between environmentalists and the U.S. Forest Service. A separate proposal will be released for that area in June, the Fish and Wildlife Service says.

Of the estimated $230 million to $300 million price tag for bull trout efforts in the four states, 70 percent of the costs are estimated to come from the expense of consulting with the agency and making needed modifications.

Jimmy Neil Harris — Twin Falls

Jimmy, Neil Harris, 69, passed away April 4, 2004, at his home in Twin Falls.

Idaho, surrounded by family and friends.

He was born Nov. 21, 1934, to Dave and Marie Harris in Nebraska. He attended Caldwell Schools beginning with the Lake Lowell grade school. After graduating from Caldwell High School he attended the College of Idaho.

He served his country for eight and one-half years in the Army, Air Force and National Guard. Soon after, he married Florine Wirta and raised six children in Caldwell. In 1961 Jim started with Crookham Seed Co. after returning from the service.

Jim started out in the field managing crews and eventually became a manager at the production facilities. In his last years at Crookham's, Jim worked in sales and his favorite, the nurseries, selecting lines of corn germplasm to improve the traits or production.

He retired from Crookham's in 1985. Since 1985, Jim and Florine have managed Shilo Inns in Oregon, Wyoming, Georgia and Idaho.

The past eight years they have managed the Shilo Inn at Twin Falls, Idaho. Jim had a great love of the outdoors and enjoyed hunting, fishing and rock hounding.

One of his greatest joys in life was watching his children participate in their many activities.

He also loved history and visited many Civil War sites while living in Georgia. He also was enjoyed visiting with family and friends.

Jim was a loving husband, father, grandfather, brother, uncle and a friend to many. Known for his bear hugs, he will be remembered as a compassionate, strong and loving man who always put others before himself.

He is survived by his loving wife and best friend, Florine Harris of Twin Falls; children Todd Harris and wife, Mary, of Eltopia, Wash., Shane Harris and wife, Holly, of Walla Walla, Wash., and Lisa Layher of Meridian; sisters, Lila Manning of Lewiston, Karen Molina of Sterling, Norma Potter of Caldwell and Karla Matlock of Caldwell; 12 grandchildren; and four great-grandchildren.

A graveside service for family and friends will be held at 11 a.m. Friday, April 9, 2004, at Hillcrest Memorial Gardens in Caldwell.

The family suggests contributions to Hospice Visions, 308 Shoshone St. E., Suite One, Twin Falls, Idaho. Arrangements are under the direction of White Mortuary "Chapel by the Park."

Kenneth Gayle Kossman — Rupert

Kenneth Gayle Kossman, 58, of Rupert, passed away April 4, 2004, at Minidoka Memorial Hospital.

Kenneth was born March 12, 1946, in Burley, Idaho, to Richard and Ella Adams Kossman. He was raised in Malta and lived in the Mini-Cassia area most of his life. He received a certified welding degree from Idaho State University.

He served in the U.S. Army as a heavy wheel mechanic and trained and served in Fort Hood. He did one tour in Vietnam. After the military, he worked for Hiral farms, Wes's Welding, and G&L Metal Fabrication.

He married Patricia Jordan and was later divorced. He then married Dixie Falls.

Kenneth belonged to the Back Country Horsemen and enjoyed horseback riding, team roping, hunting, fishing, camping, farming and raising cattle.

He is survived by his wife, Dixie Kossman of Rupert; his children, Matthew Kossman of Eagle Mountain, Utah, and Darwin (Teresa) Kossman of Twin Falls; stepchildren, Kevin (Liz) Watson; Travis (Samantha) Watson and Trena (Mike) Phillips; 10 grandchildren; brothers, Richard (Nancy) Kossman, Glen Kossman, Kerry (Kathy) Kossman and Dwayne (Joy) Kossman and Marvin Kossman; sisters, DeeAnn Kossman Hammond and Eloise (Kent) Hammond; and numerous nieces and nephews.

He was preceded in death by his parents and sister, Wanda Hutchison.

A funeral will be held 11 a.m. Thursday, April 8, 2004, at Hansen Mortuary Chapel, 710 Sixth St. Burial will follow in the Sublett Cemetery with military rites by the local veterans.

A viewing for family and friends will be held from 6 to 8 p.m. Wednesday, April 7, 2004, and one hour before the funeral on Thursday.

Park's west entrance gets facelift

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. (AP) - Building a new entrance station at Yellowstone's west gate, the park's most popular portal, will not significantly affect the environment or cultural sites, officials concede.

The $2.4 million structure will be more pleasant for employees and visitors, protect workers from vehicle exhaust fumes and provide wider lanes to enhance safety and traffic flow.

An automatic identification scanning system to speed Park Service vehicles through the gate also will be installed.

Forty percent of Yellowstone's visitors, or 1.2 million, enter the park through the west entrance, which was built in 1969.

On typical summer days, 3,000-4,000 vehicles use the gate. In the winter, as many as 1,400 snowmobiles enter with workers must wear respirators.

Plans also call for expanding a building in West Yellowstone, Mont., that, the National Park Service shares with the chamber of commerce.

The hope is that tourists will stop there for information instead of questioning workers at the gate and holding up traffic.

Last evacuated residents return home as Colorado fire weakens

LAPONTE, Colo. (AP) - The final residents forced to flee a 9,155-acre northern Colorado wildfire were told Monday they can finally go home by officials who hope to have the blaze contained within two days.

Residents of about 140 homes were urged to leave as the flames approached last week. The final evacuees, from about two dozen homes, were told they can go home late Monday.

Cooler, wetter weather allowed firefighters to dig lines around 50 percent of the blaze 70 miles northwest of Denver. Full containment was expected Wednesday.

Scattered weekend showers and forecasts for rain and snow this week have done little to dampen fears that 2004 could be a devastating fire season. Less than an inch of rain fell on the fire near here.

Rist Canyon resident Patti Rosenfelder hugs Allen Storis, a fire information officer, near the entrance to Bonner Peak near Fort Collins, Colo., Sunday.

"A lot of areas in Colorado didn't get a lot of moisture over the weekend, so it's not going to change our forecast that much for April," said Larry Helmerick, spokesman for the Rocky Mountain-Area Coordination Center, a federal agency fire cache in Lakewood.

Officials pick train to move waste

LAS VEGAS (AP) - Radioactive waste bound for a planned national nuclear dump in Nevada would be transported by trains on a 319-mile rail line to be built across the state, the federal government announced Monday.

Alan Benson, spokesman for the project, said the Energy Department believes the rail line starting near Caliente, 150 miles northeast of Las Vegas near the Utah line, will cost $800 million and take four years to build.

"Of the alternatives, this is the most feasible route," Benson said.

The department has made no announcement about the routes it intends to use to transport the waste from 127 sites across the nation to the Caliente railhead.

Nevada officials and anti-dump activists have decried the Caliente-Yucca Mountain route -- which loops around the vast Nevada Test Site and Nellis Air Force Base bombing range -- as unreasonably expensive, circuitous and dangerous.

Senator wants to split 9th Circuit into three

WASHINGTON (AP) - A Nevada senator proposed splitting up the federal appeals court with jurisdiction over much of the West, saying rulings by the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals are too liberal and its caseload too large.

Sen. John Ensign, R-Nev., has proposed a bill splitting the circuit into three separate circuits. With 23 judgeships, the 9th Circuit is by far the largest of the nation's 11 circuits, most of which have about a dozen judges. It oversees nine Western states from its base in San Francisco.

Ensign told reporters breaking up the circuit was justified both by "some pretty outrageous decisions" - he cited the court's ruling that the phrase "under God" in the Pledge of Allegiance was unconstitutional - and by the heavy caseload of the circuit.

While conservatives have long railed against what they call the 9th Circuit's left-leaning tendencies, numerous proposals to realign the court have gone nowhere.

Under Ensign's proposal, a reconfigured 9th Circuit would oversee California, Guam, Hawaii and the Northern Marianas Islands.

Rowland waives preliminary hearing

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) - The woman charged with murder for ignoring doctor's advice to get a Caesarean section to save the lives of her unborn twins waived her right to a preliminary hearing Monday.

Melissa Ann Rowland's decision clears the way for a hearing Wednesday during which she's expected to enter a plea in the case.

Third District Court Judge Paul G. Maughan asked Rowland during her brief court appearance if she understood what waiving the hearing meant.

"Yes, your honor," replied Rowland, wearing handcuffs and a yellow prison jumpsuit.

A preliminary hearing determines whether there is enough evidence to bring Rowland's case to trial. Prosecutors must show probable cause that the crime was committed by the accused.

Rowland's attorney, Michael Sikora, declined to comment on the decision.

If Rowland pleads innocent on Wednesday, a trial would have to be scheduled within 30 days under Utah law, said Kent Morgan, a spokesman for the Salt Lake County District Attorney's office.

The time frame could be extended if Sikora requested more time to prepare, Morgan said.

Opening Day — again

President Bush throws out first pitch in St. Louis

The Associated Press

Wearing a red Cardinals warmup jacket, President Bush strolled out to the mound and waved to a sellout crowd in St. Louis.
For the third time in a week, it was opening day in baseball.
This one finally felt right.
Greeted by a mixture of cheers and boos on a crisp Monday afternoon, Bush threw an inside strike to catcher Mike Matheny before the Cardinals' game against Milwaukee.
"It just goes to show you a guy can get lucky occasionally," Bush said.
St. Louis was the site of one of nine games around the majors, highlighted by Barry Bonds and the San Francisco Giants playing the Astros in Houston.

In Cincinnati, the Reds opened with a tribute to former owner Marge Schott, a ceremonial first pitch by Vice President Dick Cheney and a 7-1 loss to Sammy Sosa and the Chicago Cubs — Schott died last month at age 75, ending a tumultuous chapter for baseball's first professional team. Instead of Schott opening the piren to start the annual opening day parade in Cincinnati, an elephant did it using its trunk.
Meanwhile, Cheney got a loud oration when he walked onto the field. Standing in the grass in front of the mound, he threw a right-handed strike to crouching Reds catcher Jason LaRue.
"It turns out we don't need a radar gun on him either," Bush joked.
Hometown hero Ken Griffey Jr. was out of Cincinnati's lineup, reluctantly taking a few more days to rest a strained calf. The injury-prone outfielder paced in the dugout with a bat in each hand.

CONNECTICUT 82, GEORGIA TECH 73

Title goes to the dogs

Huskies cruise to NCAA crown

The Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — The Connecticut Huskies really do have it all: the All-America center, the flashy guards, the coach who gets everything right, and now a national title won with ease.

Led by 24 points from Emeke Okafor and 21 from Ben Gordon, the Huskies outclassed Georgia Tech 82-73 on Monday night to win the championship many predicted they'd get from the very start of the season.

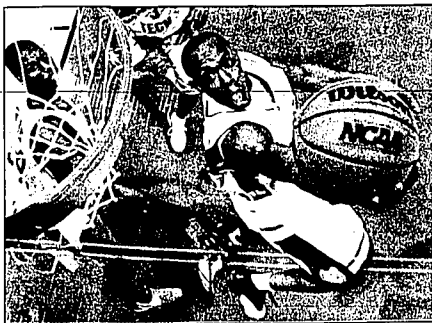

They looked like champions from beginning to end, nipping when they wanted, controlling the middle at other times, grabbing just about every loose ball and making the Yellow Jackets look ordinary.

UConn became the first team since the 1996 Kentucky Wildcats to win the title after being ranked first in the preseason. The Huskies wound up on top of the college basketball world, thanks to a tall, quick, deep and talented roster put together by Calhoun.

"Going wire-to-wire is one of the hardest things you can do, and it wasn't just the beginning of the year for us," Coach Jim Calhoun said. "This wire-to-wire went September to April, and that's as hard as it gets."

The 32-year coaching veteran missed making the Basketball Hall of Fame by one vote this week. After the way he built and guided this team, it's hard to imagine why. He coached UConn to its second championship in six seasons and joined Mike Krzyzewski and Bob Knight as the only active coaches with multiple titles.

On Tuesday, tiny Storrs, Conn. — the home of the Huskies — could become the undisputed capital of the basketball universe. The women's team takes on Tennessee in the title game in New Orleans, and with a win, Connecticut would become the first school to sweep both championships.

"It was a great season," Okafor said. "We had our ups and downs. This moment makes it all worthwhile."

Some say the Huskies' success starts with Okafor, the Final Four's most outstanding player. He also had 15 rebounds for his 24th double-double of the season, which was marked by persistent injuries. Proving the lane on both ends, using his lanky 6-foot-10 frame to block two shots and alter dozens more, he dominated on offense and negated Tech's Aussie center, Luke Schenscher.

Early in the second half, Okafor kept his hands straight up and denied three straight Tech attempts to get the ball toward the basket. Yellow Jackets coach Paul Hewitt buried his head in his hands and turned around toward the crowd. He couldn't believe there wasn't a foul — or maybe he just couldn't stomach what was happening.

Okafor is at center of victory

The Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — Emeke Okafor powered inside, slammed home a rebound and, got the Connecticut cheering section to go crazy.

At the center of everything, Okafor put on an All-American performance in the biggest game of his life, punctuating it with a rim-shaking dunk late in Monday night's 82-73 win over Georgia Tech for the NCAA championship.

And somehow, up in the stands, Plus Okafor managed to stay relaxed. With fans around him standing and shouting, he politely applauded his son's stuff while 10 other family members looked on.

"I'm very calm," Okafor's father said in the closing minutes. "I'm so proud of him and so excited that he's playing at this level."

Oh, and this from Dad: "He's played better than this."

Maybe, but certainly not in a game of this magnitude.

The most dominant player in college basketball was picked as the tournament's Most Outstanding Player after scoring 24 points and getting 15 rebounds. Okafor raised his arms high after corraling the final carom. He controlled the glass at both ends by setting up shots on offense and altering attempts on defense.

"It was a great season," the 6-foot-10 center said. "We had our ups and downs. This moment makes it all worthwhile."

"We came out and smuck by Duke. Then we came out and grabbed the national title," he said.
Behind Okafor, it was never as close as the end result indicated as UConn won its second crown in six seasons. The Huskies' 15-point lead was the biggest in an NCAA title game in 37 years, and Okafor never let Tech get near until the outcome was decided.

Magic vs. Bird

It was the game that changed college hoops

The Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — The 1979 national final was the day Magic Johnson and Larry Bird gave college basketball a permanent spot among America's top sports events. It was also the day Bob Heaton got "posterized."

Heaton was a forward for Indiana State — one of those "other guys" — when the Sycamores played in the famous championship game against Michigan State. He stood under the basket, seemingly in good position, waiting to take a charge from Johnson.

Instead, Johnson dunked over Heaton, knocked him to the ground and pointed at him for emphasis. It was a signature moment in a signature game that found its way onto the cover of Sports Illustrated — and the walls of kids' bedrooms nationwide.

"I didn't realize exactly what had happened until I saw all the replays," Heaton said.
Twenty-five years later, as Georgia Tech and Connecticut prepared for their title game Monday night, many of the players involved in the Magic-Bird matchup concede they didn't realize they were part of history at the time.

In 1979, Bird and Johnson were already stars, and the game was hyped as a showdown between them, but cable TV hadn't yet saturated the country with college hoops. In fact, several Indiana State players said they never saw Johnson play until the Final Four that year.
"The idea that Larry and Ben went on to have such great careers, and that the rivalry did not stop there, is what made it

New Tigers rough up Halladay

TORONTO (AP) — Ivan Rodriguez and Rondell White homered in Illinois' Detroit debut to back the pitching of Jason Johnson, another new addition, and the Tigers beat the Toronto Blue Jays 7-0 on Monday.

Last year, Detroit began 0-9 and set an American League record with 119 losses.

Rodriguez, a 10-time All-Star who helped Florida win last year's World Series, homered in a three-run sixth inning. White, who finished last year with Kansas City, added a three-run homer off Roy Halladay in the seventh.

Johnson, signed by the Tigers as a Baltimore cast left, got allowed four hits in six innings and got the win. Al Levine, Jamie Walker and Esteban Yan combined for four-hit relief for the Tigers, who had just five shutouts last season.

Royals 9, White Sox 7

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Carlos Beltran hit a game-winning two-run home run in the 10th to give the Royals a come-from-behind victory.

After Angel Berroa singled, Beltran hit Marte's 2-2 pitch over the wall in left-center, giving the Royals a 9-7 victory.

Bonds one shy of Willie Mays' homer mark

HOUSTON — Hey Willie, here comes Barry.

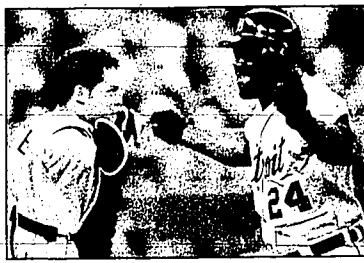

San Francisco slugger Barry Bonds hit his 659th home run Monday night, helping the Giants begin the season with a 5-4 comeback victory over the Houston Astros.

With Willie Mays in attendance, Bonds moved within one homer of his godfather for third place on the career list. Bonds lined a first-pitch fast-ball from Ray Gwynn over the right-field fence in the eighth inning for a three-run shot that tied it at 4.

San Francisco completed the comeback in the ninth against loser Octavio Dotel, now the Astros' closer after the offseason trade of Billy Wagner to the Phillies.

It was Bonds' sixth opening day homer, and it came in the same building where he tied Mark McGwire's single-season mark of 70 in 2001. Bonds' homer is only to set his own standard at 73.

homers among active players.

Brewers 6, Cardinals 6

ST. LOUIS — Scott Podsednik drove in four runs and Milwaukee opened the season by beating St. Louis. It's the first time the Brewers have been over 500 in two years. They haven't finished with a winning record since 1992.

Ben Griewe hit a two-run homer and Podsednik had a tiebreaking, three-run shot off Matt Morris in the sixth inning for the Brewers, who began last season with six straight losses and never recovered in a 68-94 season.

Cubs 7, Reds 4

CINCINNATI — Sammy Sosa couldn't get a hit. Kerry Wood couldn't get past the fifth inning.

Big problems? Not for these newly confident Chicago Cubs. Corey Patterson homered and Moises Alou doubled with the bases loaded, leading the defending NL Central champions over Cincinnati.

UConn women go for three straight

Only Tennessee stands in the way

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Everyone, it seems, has a spin on this latest national championship game between Connecticut and Tennessee. Jessica Moore's is unique.

When Connecticut goes for its third straight NCAA title in women's basketball Tuesday night, the last obstacle for the Huskies is the only school that has won three in a row.

"I was comparing me to Miss America," said Moore, UConn's 6-foot-3 center. "After she is done reigning, she goes back to the crown down to someone else. It's like if we win it (Tuesday) night, then they will be passing the crown down to someone else."

Jessica Moore

"So it's just the way it seems to work out doesn't it? Aurimura said, 'I feel real good that three out of the four (championship) games, we have beat the team that everybody associates with the best team, the best program over the last 20-some years.'"

Actually, that crown or torch or whatever you want to call it already has been passed. With its two straight championships and three in the past four years, Connecticut clearly has supplanted Tennessee as the nation's pre-eminent program in the women's game.

Tennessee has won six titles, but none since 1998. Even Tennessee's Shanna Zolman said this is "Geno's era," a reference to UConn's coach, successful coach, Geno Auriemma.

That's what gives this rivalry a buzz, no matter how many times they meet in the finals. This will be the second straight year the schools have played in the women's championship game and the fourth such meeting since 1995. Connecticut won the three previous games and beat the Lady Vols in the semifinals en route to the 2002 championship.

Yes, there's a pattern here. And after all the talk this season about parity and balance in women's basketball, the two giants again are the last ones standing.

"That's just the way it seems to work out doesn't it? Aurimura said, 'I feel real good that three out of the four (championship) games, we have beat the team that everybody associates with the best team, the best program over the last 20-some years.'"

"So it's just the way it seems to work out doesn't it? Aurimura said, 'I feel real good that three out of the four (championship) games, we have beat the team that everybody associates with the best team, the best program over the last 20-some years.'"

The Lady Vols are looking to do just that. They've got some turf to protect, after all. They like being the only program with three straight titles, which Tennessee accomplished from 1996 to 1998.

"We don't want UConn at all up there in the ranks with us," Zolman said. "We would love nothing more than to be able to not only get a ring ourselves, but also not allow them to get three in a row. We're going to be working hard for that, I guarantee it."

Connecticut (30-4) kept its title hopes alive with a 67-58 victory over Minnesota on Sunday night, giving the school two teams in championship games.

Thirty years ago, the 'Hammer' passed the Babe

The Associated Press

ATLANTA — Thirty years later, Hank Aaron is a bit fuzzy on the pitch Al Downing threw that night in Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium.

"Downing was more of a finesse pitcher," Aaron said. "I guess he was trying to throw me a screwball or something. Whatever it was, I got enough of it to get the ball sailed over the left-field fence, the Hammer trotted into history, having passed the Babe as the greatest home-run hitter."

No. 715. It's a figure that still resonates as one of sports' magical milestones. Aaron would go on to hit 40 more homers before he retired in 1976.

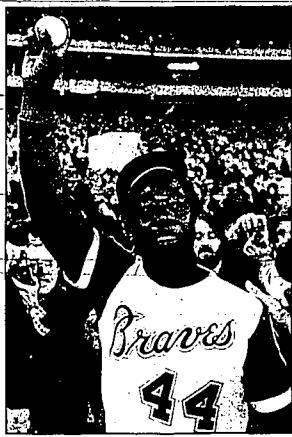

While 755 is the target that Barry Bonds chased, it was 715 — struck against Downing and the Los Angeles Dodgers on April 8, 1974 — that stands as the seminal moment for Aaron.

Babe Ruth's 714 became a relic of history, cast aside by a quiet, black man from Mobile, Ala., who endured death threats during his quest.

Aaron spent most of his 23-year career with the Braves, first in Milwaukee, then in Atlanta. The team will host the 30th anniversary Thursday night before its game against the New York Mets.

"Oh, it really doesn't seem like it's been 30 years," Aaron said in an interview with The Associated Press. "Time really creeps away from you, doesn't it?"

He's 70 now, a landmark reached a couple of months ago, accompanied by reminders of his advancing years, four of his seven siblings have died. Another is crippled by a stroke. Aaron Hank Aaron looks back on his 715th home run in Atlanta, Ga., on April 8, 1974. With the 30th anniversary coming up on Thursday, the hit still resonates as one of sports' magical milestones.

— but he enjoys getting out to the ballpark.

He went to see Pedro Martinez pitch. Ditto for Randy Johnson.

While Aaron played on just one team that won a World Series, the 1957 Milwaukee Braves, his only regret is failing to capture the Triple Crown.

"Other than that," he said, "everything else was completed."

Aaron's role with the Braves — senior vice president and assistant to the president — is largely ceremonial, but that hasn't stopped him from speaking out on some of the game's most pressing issues.

He's against putting Pete Rose in the Hall of Fame. He wants baseball to adopt a tougher drug-testing policy. He called for more blacks in upper management. He doesn't believe the New York Yankees are assured of a championship "just because they spend more."

When it comes to steroids, Aaron would rather speak in generalities than focus on anyone — especially Bonds, who begins the season with 658 homers.

Aaron is dismissive of the current testing system, which allows for a one-year suspension only after the fifth positive test for a banned performance-enhancing drug.

"It's got to be much more serious about what we have now," Aaron said.

Dusty Baker watched the homer from the on-deck circle, shooting a fist in the air when the ball left the bat. As Aaron rounded second, two young fans sprinted in from right field, starting No. 44 when they patted him on the back before racing back to the stands in left.

"I guess that will always be a part of me running around the bases," Aaron said. "I never had anyone run with me before. They were just kids having a good time."

Aaron never hit more than 47 homers, but he reached 20 for 20 consecutive seasons. He won a batting title and averaged just 63 strikeouts a year. He led the National League in homers and RBIs four times each.

For good measure, Aaron won three Gold Gloves in the outfield and averaged more than 20 steals during a nine-year stretch.

That was a killer, and it allowed the Huskies to push the lead to double digits much more easily than they might have.

Huskies

By that point, the lead had grown to 20, and although Tech's furious rally cut the deficit to seven in the final seconds, the outcome was never in doubt.

Of course, UConn has more — much more — than Okafor, and every element was working.

Gordon, a junior who led the team in scoring, hit all three of his 3-pointers during the first 20 minutes to help the Huskies take a 15-point lead at halftime.

Anderson celebrated at the end of the game by running around the court with the game ball, laughing and holding his index finger in the air as Okafor chased him. They eventually hugged — a fond farewell for Okafor, a junior who earned his degree in three years and will most surely leave for the NBA.

The two hooked up beautifully just before halftime, when Okafor snatched a missed free throw, turned and, while still airborne, threw to Anderson, who dribbled to the top of the key and swished a shot at the buzzer. The Huskies pulled it off in five seconds, and looked as if they were the only ones on the floor, instead of playing against five Yellow Jackets.

Tech got nine points and 11 rebounds from Schenscher. Will Bynum led the Jackets with 17 and B.J. Elder had 14, but they simply couldn't shoot on this night. That they shot just 38 percent from the field was understandable, given they were going against Okafor and a lineup that included two more 6-10 guys.

But 12-for-21 from the free-throw line? That was a killer, and it allowed the Huskies to push the lead to double digits much more easily than they might have.

Several other injured stars were missing on opening day, including Normar Gordon, Mark Prior, Jason Schmidt and Larry Walker.

At Dodger Stadium, Don Newcombe, winner of the first Cy Young Award in 1956, presented Los Angeles reliever Eric Crabb with his plaque for earning last year's honor.

Detroit looked like a different team, roughing up American League Cy Young Award winner

Roy Halladay in a 7-0 win in Toronto.

The Tigers, who started 0-9 last season and set an AL record with 119 losses, got home runs from newcomers Ivan Rodriguez and Rondell White. Jason Johnson, also signed in the offseason, pitched six impressive innings for the win.

"We're 1-0. At no time last year were we over 500," Detroit manager Alan Trammell said. "Play it up. It's an excellent start for us. It gives us a little momentum."

Association plans meeting on ethics

TWIN FALLS—The Southern Idaho Association of Insurance and Financial Advisors, Life Underwriters, plans its April meeting on the topic of law and ethics.

Seminar speakers will be Dale Freeman and Eileen Munderoff of the Idaho Department of Insurance. Attendees can receive four continuing-education credits to meet license requirements in law and ethics.

The meeting is set for 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. April 20 at the Loong Hing restaurant on Kimberly Road in Twin Falls. (That's later in the month than usual for the association's meetings.)

Cost is $30 for members of Magic Valley Insurance Professionals, Southern Idaho Health Underwriters and SIAIFA, and $40 for nonmembers. Lunch is provided.

For information, call Bill Hall at 324-0014.

Penney's sells chain of drugstores to CVS

DALLAS—Retailing giant J.C. Penney Co. Inc.—which has department stores in Burley and Twin Falls—is selling its struggling Eckerd drugstore chain for more than $1.5 billion in cash to rivals CVS Corp. and Canada's Jean Coutu Group Inc.

The deal announced Monday will make CVS the biggest U.S. drugstore operator as measured by the number of stores, leapfrogging the industry leader Walgreen Co., which has a Twin Falls store.

Rhode Island-based CVS and Montreal-based Jean Coutu Group, which owns the Brooks Pharmacy chain in the U.S., will split the 2,800 Eckerd stores in 23 states in the deal reached after the conclusion of a lengthy auction process.

Under the deal, CVS of Woonsocket, R.I., will get about 1,200 Eckerd stores and support facilities in Texas, Florida and the remaining southern states, as well as Eckerd's pharmacy benefits management and mail order businesses, for $2.15 billion.

The deal will build CVS past Walgreen with more than 5,000 stores in 36 states and the District of Columbia. Walgreen is currently the biggest with 4,336 stores as of the end of February when CVS had 4,179 as of early January.

Company officials said the deal is subject to regulatory approvals, but is expected to be completed by the end of July when its second fiscal quarter concludes.

Rexburg newspaper expands publication

REXBURG—The Rexburg Standard Journal, which has published in eastern Idaho's Upper Snake River Valley since 1907, will expand publication from three days a week to five days on May 1.

"We believe the upper valley is about to reach a level of sophistication where a five-day-per-week paper no longer meets the needs of our readers and advertisers," Publisher Rich Ballou told readers in a column published April 2.

The decision to publish Tuesday through Friday mornings comes 1.5 years after the newspaper was purchased by Pioneer Newspapers, which operates daily papers in Nampa and Pocatello as well as dailies and weeklies in Utah, Oregon, Washington and Montana.

Ballou said the new daily will provide more local news, including additional feature coverage as well as expanded regional, national and international coverage.

THE PRICE OF A MERGER

John Thain, left, New York Stock Exchange chief executive officer, speaks with Kenneth D. Lewis, right, chief executive officer of Bank of America, as Katherine Kinney, NYSE president and co-chief executive officer, center, watches, as they tour the floor of the New York Stock Exchange, Monday. Bank of America announced it will cut 12,500 jobs.

Bank of America will cut jobs

The Associated Press

CHARLOTTE, N.C.—Bank of America, the newly merged with FleetBoston Financial Corp., said Monday it will cut 12,500 jobs—or nearly 7 percent of its work force—as a result of the combination that created the nation's third biggest bank.

Approximately 30 percent of the cuts will come through attrition, said the Charlotte-based bank, which has branches in Magic Valley. The reductions will occur over the next two years and begin this month.

Spokeswoman Eloise Hale said the bank would not specify where positions would be eliminated, saying only that they will take place "corporation-wide."

The company has a combined total of about 181,000 workers. The completion last week of Bank of America's merger with Fleet created a bank with assets estimated at $966 billion, about 35 million consumer and small-business customers and about 5,700 branches from California through the South and up to New England.

Its assets trail only those of Citigroup and the company being created through the planned merger between Bank One and J.P. Morgan Chase.

Bank of America chief executive Ken Lewis has said he wants to achieve about $1.6 billion in cost savings by the end of 2005. The banks don't have a large number of overlapping branches that can be closed, which is a major source of savings in many bank mergers.

Instead, the bank has said it expects to get about $650 million in savings from trimming overlapping operations and processes. For example, the bank will be able to consolidate headquarters for combined business lines, Lewis has said.

"When we discuss job reductions, we are talking about positions not necessarily people," Marc Oken, transition executive for Bank of America, said Monday. "As a large employer, we will continue to create jobs over time. These are difficult decisions and we are committed to supporting our associates during this time."

The announcement came only minutes before the close of trading on the New York Stock Exchange. Bank of America shares rose 71 cents to close at $81.25.

Gas prices could boost ethanol sales

The Associated Press

OMAHA, Neb.—More motorists may soon be trying ethanol-blended fuel—not because of its concerns about the environment, but because of concerns over their wallets.

Ethanol industry leaders say the recent sharp rise in gasoline prices could prove to be a boon for ethanol-blend gasoline, which is as much as 5 cents per gallon cheaper than regular gas at pumps around the Midwest.

"It's true that the economy of ethanol makes it more attractive to consumers financially than straight gasoline," said Ron Lambert, market development director of the American Coalition for Ethanol in Sioux Falls, S.D. "If there's an upside to higher gas prices, I guess that's it."

In the competitive market around Omaha, some gas stations offer E-10 gas—90 percent gasoline blended with 10 percent ethanol—at prices a cent or a gallon cheaper than regular.

One of those is the Fantasy station in Papillion, where a gallon of E-10 sold Monday for $1.64, compared with $1.68 for a gallon of regular blend gas.

While motorists haven't exactly abandoned conventional gasoline, sales of E-10 "might have jumped a little bit," said station manager Lorrie Handels. "Most people who buy un-leaded are die-hard unleaded fans who want nothing to do with ethanol," Handels said. "Then you have those who just want the cheapest gas they can get."

One reason there may not have been a drastic spike in E-10 sales at Fantasy's is that the ethanol-blend fuel is already the station's top seller, Handels said. But if gas prices continue to climb, Handels expects to see even more people switching to the cheaper ethanol blend.

Toad Sneller, administrator of the Nebraska Ethanol Board, said gasoline blended with ethanol—made mostly from corn—holds 55 percent of the fuel market in Nebraska. It hovers around 30 percent nationally.

There are several reasons ethanol-blended gas can be offered cheaper. One is that regular gasoline, Sneller noted. One is that the industry is aided by a federal tax break that cuts 51 cents from the sale of each gallon of ethanol—or 5.1 cents from every gallon of gasoline containing 10 percent ethanol.

Several ethanol-producing states, such as Iowa, South

Happy Meals turn 25 and go healthier

Hartford-Courant

A quintessentially American meal is celebrating a big birthday this year, but it's not meatloaf or spare ribs or Mom's apple pie.

It is the humble Happy Meal, rolled out 25 years ago under the Golden Arches in a campaign to build loyalty among the youngest of McDonald's customers.

It is not the Happy Meal's culinary contributions that make it a national classic. Rather, the original kiddie meal was a place in American gastronomy because it has consistently reflected so much of American culture, from the crowning of convenience to the troubling rise in marketing to children to, most recently, the deep concern over nutrition and childhood obesity.

That's a lot of weight for such a little bag.

McDonald's did not set out to create a cultural icon when, in 1977, a franchisee in St. Louis asked his advertising agency to come up with a bundled meal—with maybe a cheap toy thrown in—that could be pitched to kids.

Two years later, the concept was rolled out across the United States. It featured a burger, fries and a soda, housed in a thin cardboard box made up to look like a circus wagon and decorated with games and puzzles.

The McDonald's restaurants in Magic Valley are franchisee-owned.

The chain's Happy Meal soon became a mealtime staple among hurried families—the on-the-go version of the TV dinner. It also symbolized the decline of the traditional family meal, as parents and children spent fewer and fewer nights gathered together around the dining room table.

Happy Meals, selling by the hundreds of millions every year, became an all-purpose juvenile pacifier. And McDonald's soon lit on a way to keep kids coming back, at a cost of just a few cents plastic.

The earliest Happy Meal toys were decidedly lame—a plastic ID bracelet with stick-on letters, a puzzle lock, a Mr. Spock secret compartment ring. But then came a 10-year exclusive deal with Disney Characters from "The Little Mermaid," "Aladdin," "The Lion King," "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," "Hercules," "Mulan," "Tarzan," "Monsters, Inc.," "Lilo & Stitch" and "Finding Nemo" were all miniaturized for Happy Meal bags.

Keep a spotless credit record; fees can get incredibly high

Question: My granddaughter failed to make a payment on her computer. She is charged a late fee of $29 and is paying more than 22 percent interest on her purchase.

I realize she should have made her payments on time, but isn't that bordering on usury? Are there no laws limiting what can be charged in interest?

Answer:—Laws regarding usury pretty much went out of the window in the wake of a 1978 U.S. Supreme Court decision. The justices decided that interest rates should be governed by the laws of the state where the lender, not the borrower, is located.

Many lenders responded to the ruling by moving their operations to states that had high or nonresident ceilings on interest rates.

This decision, by the way, helped fuel the rise in lending to people with less-than-spotless credit. Because lenders could charge more, they thought they could take on more risk. It's no exaggeration to say that millions of people have credit cards and other loans today because of loosened laws on usury.

Because interest rates can spiral so high, however, it's even more important that it was a generation ago to keep a spotless credit record.

Your granddaughter has just experienced a "teachable moment" regarding her personal finances. You can rail about the injustice of it all, but make sure she knows that other lenders are lying in wait to do exactly the same thing—which is why it's important to pay all her bills on time, all of the time.

Investors look forward to earnings

NEW YORK (AP) — Investors' growing optimism carried Wall Street's rally into a new week Monday with stocks gathering momentum and stung higher last week's session despite the absence of market-moving news.

Many investors opted for blue chips and tech stocks over small-caps, although the latter rallied with the rest of the market by day's end. Interest-rate-sensitive sectors, including banking and construction, fell on fears that last week's strong employment figures could signal sooner-than-expected rate hikes from the Federal Reserve.

Despite those concerns, the major indexes continued to recover from March's correction. The Dow Jones industrial average gained 87.78, or 0.8 percent, to 10,558.37, after rising 2.5 percent last week. The index closed above that level on March 5.

Other stock indicators also advanced. The Standard & Poor's 500 index rose 8.76, or 0.8 percent, to 1,550.57, also its best close since March 5. The gain followed a 3.1 percent rise last week.

The Nasdaq composite index was up 21.95, or 1.1 percent, at 2,079.12, its highest level since Feb. 17. Last week, the Nasdaq climbed 5 percent.

There was no major news to influence trading, but that didn't matter to investors. Wall Street was coming off its best week of 2004, fueled by government reports that showed the economy created 308,000 jobs in March.

The reading helped the markets move back into positive territory for the year.

"The jobs data last Friday has provided the missing ingredient that many people have been looking for over the last several months," said Michael Sheldon, chief market strategist at Spencer Clarke LLC in the short term, but I think investors are encouraged by the bounceback in the markets over the past few weeks.

However, some investors remain concerned that if job growth remains at such a high level, that could spur the Fed to raise interest rates earlier than expected to ensure that the recovery doesn't fall victim to inflation.

Jury deliberates in trial of former Qwest execs

DENVER (AP) — A federal jury began deliberations Monday in the trial of four former Qwest executives accused of improperly booking nearly $34 million in revenue and then lying to auditors and the FBI.

Prosecutors say the four created false statements to record revenue for equipment that had not been purchased as part of the $100 million deal to link Arizona schools to the Internet.

Defense attorneys said the executives were being sacrificed by higher-ups in the telecommunications company.

They insisted the men were not fully informed or did not fully understand the accounting principles in the deal.

Prosecutors say the four executives were accused of 11 charges each, including fraud and conspiracy, and could spend years in prison if convicted.

It is the first trial stemming from investigations that prompted former Qwest chief executive Joseph Nacchio to quit in 2002 and ultimately led the company to remove $2.5 billion in revenue from its books.

During the seven-week trial, prosecutors said the defendants were motivated by the potential of substantial bonuses and by a "cultural imperative" Qwest to meet revenue targets.

Happy

The deal drove business into McDonald's, helped promote Disney's animated movie franchise, and, for-better-or-worse, taught Madison Avenue a thing or two about the value of the pre-pre-pre-teen market.

For some kids, the food undoubtedly became secondary to digging down for the prize. And the supremacy of the toy reached absurd proportions in 1997, when McDonald's started selling Beanie Babies.

Happy Meals became the place where parents and kids were gleefully walking out of restaurants, carrying the plastic bag of toys and stuffing the meal into the nearest garbage can.

and Taco Bell — which had extraordinary success with toy versions of its talking Chihuahua.

McDonald's rings up more than $3 billion in Happy Meals every year, and they have traditionally been a moneymaking driver. But the company has been struggling to keep those numbers up. And the company's biggest challenge today comes not from its competitors, but from its customers.

Kids may still love Happy Meals, but they typically need mom to get them to the Golden Arches: and more and more, mothers are balking.

McDonald's recognized it had two problems — moms found nothing on the menu they wanted to eat, and they weren't too thrilled with what their kids were being served either. So the company in the past year has had dramatic menu changes to attract mothers and fend off complaints that its food is making American children, even infants, fat.

Around the world, the company is introducing healthier — or at least healthier-sounding — Happy Meal options in response to a growing trend toward better nutrition.

Australia is trying toasted chicken and veggie sandwiches. The United Kingdom is getting organic milk. Italian kids can choose fruit cups. And in America, the Happy Meal menu will include low-fat milk, apple slices — slices of apple were earned, piggy bank.

And to make mothers willing to stand in line, McDonald's has heavily promoted its line of Premium Salads, and is experimenting with a "Go Ape" adult Happy Meal that includes a salad and bottled water, as well as a pedometer and fitness guide.

It's a long way from the burger-and-fries trifecta. "Our goal is to get Larry Light, McDonald's global chief marketing officer, speaking in perfect brandspeak, "is to make the Happy Meal experience even happier."

Ethanol

Dakota and Idaho, also offer state incentives that range from 1 cent to nearly 3 cents per gallon...

Ethanol's profile has exploded nationally in recent years, thanks to the tax breaks of those savings are often passed on to consumers in corn-producing states, Sneller noted.

That opened up once-neglected markets on the West Coast and in the Northeast, where the density of vehicles makes a clean-air fuel additive like ethanol a necessity.

Subsequently, ethanol production in 2001 to 2.81 billion gallons last year, with 535 million gallons of that coming from Nebraska. Production is expected to reach 5.5 billion gallons this year, industry leader says.

"We're literally seeing unprecedented demand for ethanol," Sneller said. "Ethanol producers are selling every gallon they make."

Coastal retailers, however, have not generally seen the savings they get from selling ethanol-blended fuel to consumers. Sneller said, "It's not unusual to see California stations selling ethanol blends for as much as 10 cents more a gallon than regular."

The reason is that ethanol-blended fuels has a higher octane - 89 - than regular unleaded gas, allowing retailers to market it as a higher quality product.

But with gas prices threatening to break the $2-a-gallon average this summer, even some those motorists could change their ways, Lambery said.

"I wouldn't rule out the coasts," he said, explaining that retailers there could pass on the tax breaks they get on ethanol-blended fuel to try to draw customers from competitors.

If gasoline prices climb high enough, even those reluctant to buy ethanol-blended gas might be willing to give it a try to save some money, Lambery said.

"That's exactly what we're hoping for," he said. "People are creatures of habit, and ethanol is a good product. If they try it, they'll keep buying it."

HP aims at printing from cellphone camera

By Dean Takahashi
Knight Ridder News Service

With all the craze about taking pictures with your cell phone, it's about time you could actually do something with those pictures. So Hewlett-Packard has taken a step to letting you print from a camera phone.

Theoretically this is a wonderful idea, but practically it has a way to go. So far the cameras on the phones don't take sharp enough pictures, and the printing results reflect that. The printers also don't work with very many phones right now.

I tried out HP's mobile printer, the HP Deskjet 4500wb. This small mobile printer was launched in October. It has a wireless connection that uses the Bluetooth standard, which can transfer data at a megabyte a second to devices in a 10-meter range. It has a battery that changes in an hour and a half and lasts for 350 page prints, so you can take it on the road with your camera phone. You can also print from a phone to HP's Deskjet 9550CK model.

The $349 printer works with only a few models of Nokia's Series 60 phones today, the 3650, the 6600 available only in Europe, the 6620, and the 7650. With the Nokia phone, you snap a picture at VGA resolution, which can display about 288,000 pixels. That's far grainier than most digital cameras today, which display more than a million pixels.

Once you take the picture, it saves it to a folder in the phone. You navigate to the folder, click on an image, hit the options button and hit "send." You indicate you want to send to a Bluetooth device. The phone and printer do a handshake to find each other, and then the printer starts spitting out the image.

What comes out looks OK. If you were a really agent taking a picture of a house, it would be detailed enough to give you the right idea. But at this resolution, they won't be keepasaps.

Over time, it's going to get better, says Aaron Weiss, director of strategic alliances for consumer imaging and printing at HP Standards should be ready by the end of 2004 so phone makers and printer manufacturers can make image printing painless.

"I wouldn't say the industry is behind, but this area is moving very fast," he said.

Self-configuring chips becomes part of IBM's vision for processor family

By Brian Bergstein
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Future microprocessors from IBM Corp. will optimize their performance by altering themselves, adding memory or removing unneeded bits of circuitry on the fly, the company's chief technologist said Wednesday.

The self-morphing chips, still in development, were disclosed as IBM revealed wide-ranging plans for the company's current generation of chips, the Power5.

Big Blue hopes to work with outside technology developers to make Power chips a flexible, widely used driver of several kinds of computing systems, from high-end corporate servers to video game consoles and handheld devices.

For decades, microprocessors have gotten ever faster by cramming more and more transistors onboard, but the physical limitations of the materials involved is making it harder to shrink the dimensions much further.

Instead of relying on continual improvement in chip speed, future chips must be more cleverly designed to combine more computing functions, said Bernard Meyerson, IBM's chief technologist. The self-altering chip is one means of achieving that.

How it would work. Cautiously, the self-altering chip would work through a tiny circuit can cause its materials to erode, as individual atoms get stripped and dragged away by the electricity. Eventually the metal breaks.

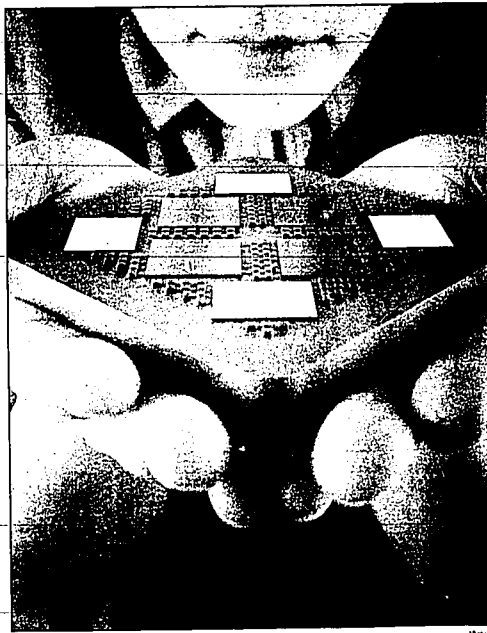

Chip designers got around the problem by carefully choosing a blend of metals. Now, Meyerson said, IBM has developed a way to make the metal erosion happen at will — when software running the chip determines that part of the circuitry needs "cutting" or tuning.

"It's a bit frightening to the typical designer," Meyerson said. He said early versions of the self-changing chips have been tested at IBM, which, like other computing companies, is pursuing means of making systems "autonomic," self-healing and self-regulating. Meyerson said fully realized versions of the morphing chips would emerge in the next decade.

Of course, IBM has high expectations for its chip business right now. The division has struggled with soft demand and lost money, which includes chips, was recently merged with the systems unit to accentuate their shared aims.

One goal announced Wednesday is for Power's underlying architecture to be customized by developers of other systems, much as the open-source Linux operating system can be configured by its users. For example, a Chinese company, CultureCom

IBM Power5, for the first time, demonstrated POWER5, the world's most advanced microprocessor. POWER5 will be the "brain" of a new line of powerful computer systems that will be introduced in 2004. The module pictured holds several POWER5 chips on a single ceramic package. Collectively, these chips contain more than 2.8 billion tiny transistors and miles of copper wiring.

IN POWER5

Holdings Ltd., has tinkered with Power chips to get them to understand Chinese characters, removing the need for translation software.

Some analysts said IBM seemed to be making a more forceful attempt to compete against leading chip maker Intel Corp.

But IBM executives played down that suggestion, saying IBM would continue to sell servers with Intel chips because the market is big enough for both kinds of systems.

Apple's new 20-inch iMac takes beautiful step forward

Knight Ridder News Service

With computers now maxed out with more speed and power than most users will ever need, the battle for your personal computer business is in the display.

Think of it as eye candy; big, flat screen monitors with lots of resolution that take up minimal space on the desktop.

That's why the new 20-inch Apple iMac widescreen is such a head-turner. The display is bright and bold and breakthrough — 20 inches on a screen less than an inch wide that means on this ingenious arm that lets it be easily moved up or down, back and forth or side to side to the user's personal taste.

It has the illusion of just sitting there in space, an immense monitor that is — here's a term I've never used about a display — convertible to watch.

The 20-inch iMac costs

Product review

$2,199. But let me tell you what a bargain that is.

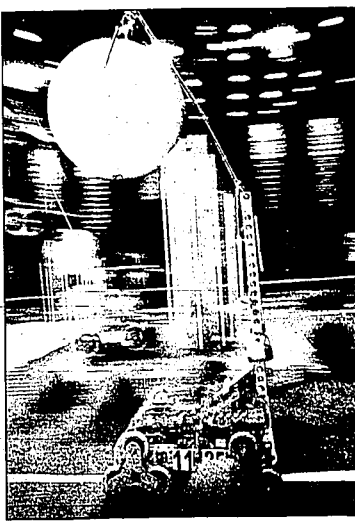

The 1,680-by-1,050-pixel resolution iMac monitor specs out almost exactly like Apple's 20-inch Cinema Display. That monitor is intended for professional users, like video editors and graphic artists. It sells by itself — with no computer — for $1,699.

So for $2,199 you get this breathtaking giant LCD monitor and a very slick computer, built into the unique half-dome shaped package that has become the mark of the iMac.

Sitting on a desk, it looks like half a basketball contained in a 10.6-inch-wide white plastic shell.

Inside is a 1.25 GHz G4 processor, an 80 GB hard drive and Apple's SuperDrive that writes and plays both DVDs and CDs, plus plenty of USB 2.0 and FireWire ports.

Tweaking tool helps speed up Windows

By James Coates
Chicago Tribune

Q. Even though I'm the only one that uses it, Windows makes me log on every time I start up. There is a fix that eliminates my having to do that, but I can't find it. I recently upgraded from Windows 98 to XP Professional.

A. Your question is among dozens of other issues about the various versions of Windows that can be resolved by tweaking a utility called iWeekUI. The software was created by Microsoft programmers, but the company does not support the utility.

In your case, Mr. S., iWeekUI includes a routine that will stop Windows from asking for passwords at login as it does by default.

The iWeekUI tool is included in what Microsoft calls PowerToys that allow users to customize their machines. iWeekUI handles everything from the auto logon you seek to letting users remove programs from the list at the Start menu. You can use it to change the browser so it always caches history files whenever you close the browser. A second browser tool lets you choose any search engine you want as the default.

Computers Q & A

Microsoft has reduced the existence of external hard drives connected to the machine and alter the way the mouse works among other tweaks.

My favorite iWeekUI feature is one called Tips that is listed at the top of the program's display and contains dozens of very useful insights into things like keyboard shortcuts and finding files, changing icons and defragmenting drives.

So let me answer your question by pointing you and other readers to a tool that keeps busy long into the night. It's at [www.microsoft.com/windows/asp/pro/downloads/power](http://www.microsoft.com/windows/asp/pro/downloads/power toys.asp)

MSN searches for advantage

Knight Ridder News Service

Expect a next-generation search engine from Microsoft within the next year.

"We think the sun has not set on even the first day of the search opportunity," Yusuf Mehdi, corporate vice president in charge of running MSN, told CNET. "We certainly envision a world where we can answer persons' questions much, much better."

Microsoft's anticipated online music service will be similar to Apple Computer's iTunes, Mehdi said. "You can purchase songs in the form you want as opposed to a subscription service."

He revealed that Microsoft's deal to offer MSN subscribers live video streams of Major League Baseball games this year includes rights to insert video advertising. "Broadband video advertising is one of the things that will kick off the next wave of brand advertising," he said in the interview. "So we now have a very obvious property to go to talk to Fortune 500 accounts about doing brand advertising in a way you cannot do anywhere else."

Hits to Froogle Jump when link is added

Traffic to Froogle tripled this week after Google added a link to the comparison-shopping site on its home page. A report by iThrive.com said a 319 percent increase in visits to Froogle pushed it into the top 10 shopping sites. The move by Google followed Yahoo's recent purchase of Kelcoo, a comparison-shopping site in Europe.

"Yahoo and Google's recent actions indicate that the next battlefront in the search engine war will be comparison shopping," said Bill Ince, iThrive.com president of research, in a statement. "It's also interesting to note that competitive lines are blurring between these two major players," he added. According to Monday's clickstream data, on Thursday the number one domain visited after Froogle was Yahoo's Small Business. This indicates that a good portion of the products featured on Froogle are being sold by small businesses on Yahoo's small business service.
