Tears flow as Idaho soldiers leave for training

The Associated Press

BOISE — The first wave of Idaho National Guard soldiers departed Gowen Field Thursday with a flood of tears from family members and well-wishers.

The 714 soldiers — including nine from south-central Idaho — represent about a third of the full complement of 2,000 officers and enlisted personnel who will undergo several months of combat training at Fort Bliss, Texas, before shipping out for a one-year tour of duty in Iraq.

Three chartered airliners sat on the tarmac while the troops of the 116th Combat Brigade assembled inside a large hangar.

On one side, the soldiers shared lingering hugs with husbands and wives, fathers and mothers, sons and daughters. On the other side, troops and their gear were lined up in neat squads, awaiting the signal to board the planes.

Sgt. Heather Saunders of Richfield stood in line, talking and joking with her buddy, Sgt. Jane Sullivan.

Saunders, a marksmanship trainer, carried four M-16 rifles with the rest of her military gear. Each member is taking extra arms for the training.

"I weigh 256.4 pounds with all this," Saunders said proudly.

Although Saunders' job is listed as an administrative specialist and Sullivan's is a fuel specialist, the training they receive in Texas will teach them to carry out close urban combat missions in Iraq.

"We're trained to be soldiers first, to carry this weapon," Saunders said, pointing to the guns on the floor. "Our assigned job is really second in line."

As the morning flight times drew nearer, the troops packed on more gear onto their bodies — chemical defense masks and

Jury clears terror suspect

The Associated Press

BOISE — A Saudi national studying at the University of Idaho was acquitted Thursday on charges that he used his computer skills to foster terrorism in a case that first Amendment against the government's war on terrorism.

Sami Omar Al-Hussayen, 34, the son of a prominent Riyadh family, was cleared on three charges that he created an Internet network to help finance and recruit terrorists. He also was acquitted on one count of making false statements and two counts of visa fraud.

The jury of four men and eight women, returning the verdicts on the seventh day of deliberations following a trial that spanned seven weeks, was deadlocked on eight other false statement and visa fraud charges. U.S. District Judge Edward Lodge declared a mistrial on those counts.

Al-Hussayen, the bearded and bespectacled computer whiz who has made no public statements since his arrest and jailing on Feb. 25, 2003, remained confident throughout the 30-minute hearing, revealing little emotion as the verdicts were read. But it was left to him to help his tensed-up defense attorney, David Nevin, once their victory was clear.

"What he said to me was, 'Calm down, it's going to be OK,' Nevin told reporters just after the verdict was read. 'But that's Sami. That's the way he's always been.'"

The 34-year-old Ph.D. candidate will remain in custody as the federal government moves to deport him, but his defense is also appealing, that order—His family returned to Saudi Arabia early this year rather than fight their own deportation.

John Dickinson, a University of Idaho professor who served as Al-Hussayen's academic adviser, hopes the acquittal "puts an end to a long and terrible aspect of Sami's life, and I hope he will be reunited with his wife and three children."

Al-Hussayen was accused of providing material support to terrorist groups — not with cash or arms, but with computer expertise. He set up and ran Web sites that prosecutors said were used to recruit terrorists, raise money and disseminate inflammatory rhetoric.

"But the jury did not buy it. 'There was a lack of hard evidence,' said John Steger, a retired U.S. Forest Service employee who was the only juror to

TWIN FALLS — It's a day this mother will never forget.

On Monday morning, Diana Engmark said goodbye to her 26-year-old daughter, Kim Frost, who was on her way to Gowen Field in Boise to be deployed with other Idaho National Guard troops to Fort Bliss, Texas. It was the first leg of a tour that will eventually take them to Iraq.

That evening, Engmark's son, Craig, was in a Boise hospital fighting for his life.

Area residents pick up the pieces following fire

By Rebecca Meany Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — It took a lifetime to build, and a moment to lose.

The Buhl house that held the Hiatt family's memories was razed by a fire of unknown origin Wednesday.

"I was there and I haven't seen it," Julene Hiatt said. But that didn't stop a barrage of images from flooding her mind.

"She and her husband just had two new toilets, a sink and faucets installed in the house they'd lived in for nearly 25 years. 'It's just so interesting what

Many Americans lean on Reagan for comfort

The Dallas Morning News

WASHINGTON — As in life, Ronald Reagan in death has become an unexpected source of comfort for many Americans who see their nation suffering a period of duress.

The 40th president's death last Saturday was expected to be a momentous event. Comparisons to Abraham Lincoln, Franklin Roosevelt and John F. Kennedy were waiting to be exploited.

But no one could anticipate the dining — or the relevance of his words from two decades ago. "It is a reminder that the U.S. has faced very difficult situations in the past and the country ultimately did well," said Kathleen Hall Jamieson, dean of the Annenberg School for Communication.

Wildland fire prevention tips

Keep a "green space," or an open area such as a lawn or bare ground where fire cannot spread to defend a structure. Clear sagebrush and tall grass from areas around structures. A minimum of a 30-foot space around a building is preferred. "Educate yourself or contact us and we'll come out and help develop a wildland fire protection plan around your home," said Bull Fire Chief Mark Grimes.

Shiite gunmen raid Najaf police station

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Shiite gunmen loyal to radical cleric Muqtada al-Sadr ransacked an Iraqi police station Thursday in the holy city of Najaf, threatening a truce that had held for nearly a week. U.S. troops refused to intervene in the fighting, in which six Iraqis died.

American soldiers clashed Thursday with al-Sadr militants in Baghdad's Sadr City. At least one militant was shot and killed by a U.S. tank as he prepared to rocket-propelled grenade at the Americans.

Gunfire and explosions were heard late Thursday in central Baghdad, and red tracers were seen soaring into the night sky. The U.S. command had no comment, but residents said a U.S. Army Humvee was attacked by a rocket-propelled grenade.

Elsewhere, Iraq's new prime minister, Iyad Allawi, blamed foreign fighters for recent attacks on Iraqi infrastructure, including an oil pipeline that cut nationwide electricity output by 10 percent. The extent of foreign involvement in attacks has been disputed in the past, and Allawi offered no evidence to back up his claim.

In Najaf, U.S. troops refused to intervene because the reason for the clashes was unclear and because the fighting was too close to Shiite shrines, said Maj. Gen. Martin Dempsey, commander of the 1st Armored Division.

Dempsey told CNN that Iraqi police who deserted when al-Sadr's rebellion began in April, fought well Thursday despite losing control of a station. Dempsey said it was too early to tell whether the truce, mediated last week by Shiite clerics and politicians to end nearly eight weeks of fighting, had collapsed.

Reagan

Indeed, when Reagan came to power the nation appeared on a difficult course.

Lines at gasoline stations, inflation and unemployment dogged the economy, measured by an indicator that even carried a narrative name, the misnamed Index. Americans saw their blindfolded countrymen held hostage and paraded before television cameras abroad, putting U.S. power and influence in question.

"In the 1980s, America had lost its confidence in itself, its confidence in its core beliefs," said former Republican Sen. Phil Gramm of Texas. "And Reagan came with a strong heart. And his strong heart gave America heart and it changed everything."

Ordinary Americans lining up at the Capitol to see the former president lying in state agreed. "He was the right man at the right time," said Bill Burns, 55, of Bedford, N.H., who visited the rotunda with son Robert, 26. Before Reagan's election, "it seemed that everything that went wrong in the world was somehow our fault. Reagan let us know that we were good to the core."

Today, some experts see parallels with the past and skepticism in the timing of Reagan's demise.

The nation is engaged in a difficult struggle with terrorism and a conflict in Iraq. Americans have witnessed chilling images of a young countryman about to be beheaded by terrorists. And there is lingering doubt about the economy and jobs.

Bush doesn't expect new NATO troops in Iraq

SAVANNAH, Ga. (AP) — President Bush said Thursday it is unrealistic to expect NATO to send more troops to Iraq but suggested European countries might expand their role by training Iraqi forces.

"I don't expect more troops from NATO to be offered up. That is an unrealistic expectation," Bush said at a news conference concluding a three-day summit of the Group of Eight powerful countries.

A U.N. Security Council resolution on Iraq approved earlier, this week will have the "practical effect" of allowing the leaders of countries with troops already in Iraq to persuade their governments to keep them there, Bush said.

French President Jacques Chirac, who had a one-on-one meeting with Bush on the summit's final day, has expressed reservations about deploying further soldiers from NATO in Iraq, as has German Chancellor Gerhard Schroeder.

Asked about a Justice Department memo that said the United States could use torture to interrogate prisoners in the war on terror, Bush said that he cannot recall if he saw the memo.

The president said that his instructions for interrogations were to "conform to U.S. law" and to act "consistent with international treaty obligations."

"What I authorized was staying within U.S. law," said Bush.

Photos of Iraqi prisoners being abused by U.S. soldiers have raised questions about whether the Bush administration's rules on interrogations created too lax of an environment.

"We're going to make sure we fully understand the veracity of the plot line," Bush said. "And so we're looking into it."

Rains leave behind floods, damaged homes in Texas

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Fort Worth residents surveyed damage Thursday as storms moved away from north Texas following days of widespread flooding, evacuations and hundreds of damaged homes.

More than 10 inches of rain fell in parts of north Texas from Tuesday to Thursday, following heavy rain over the weekend. No serious injuries were reported across the region.

Communities west of Fort Worth had some of the worst flooding, with high water sweeping into houses and flooding roads.

Ray Charles dies at 73

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Ray Charles, the Grammy-winning crooner who blended gospel and blues in such crowd-pleasers as "What'd I Say" and ballads like "Georgia on My Mind," died Thursday, a spokesman said. He was 73.

Charles died at his Beverly Hills home surrounded by family and friends, said spokesman Jerry Digney.

Charles last public appearance was alongside Clint Eastwood on April 30, when the city of Los Angeles designated the singer's studios, built 40 years ago in central Los Angeles, as a historic landmark.

Blind by age 7 and an orphan at 15, Charles spent his life shattering any notion of musical boundaries and defying easy definition. A gifted pianist and saxophonist, he dabbled in country, jazz, big band and blues, and put his stamp on it all with a deep, warm voice roughtened by a hearty bark from a hard-scrabble childhood in the segregated South.

"His sound was stunning — it was the blues, it was R&B, it was gospel, it was swing — it was all the stuff I was listening to before that but rolled into one amazing, soulful thing," singer Van Morrison told Rolling Stone magazine in April.

Charles won nine of his 12 Grammy Awards between 1960 and 1966, including the best R&B recording three consecutive years ("Hit the Road Jack" and "Busted").

When Reagan came to Twin Falls Reagan's heart was at his ranch

State Sen. Lalrd Noh, R-Kimberly, right, shakes hands with President Reagan at the Twin Falls airport on Oct. 31, 1986. Second from left is the late Idaho House Speaker Tom Silvers, and next to Noh is then-state Sen. Darrel McRoberts.

Then-Twin Falls Mayor Doug Vollmer greets President Reagan at the Twin Falls airport on Oct. 31, 1986. At center is U.S. Sen. Jim McClure.

President Ronald Reagan made his first and only presidential visit to Twin Falls on Oct. 31, 1986. He was in the middle of a campaign swing through the West and gave a speech at the College of Southern Idaho on behalf of U.S. Sen. Steve Symms. Crowds lined Washington Street to catch a glimpse of the president.

Reagan breezed into the Twin Falls airport at around 2:25 p.m. on a sunny Halloween afternoon, according to accounts in The Times-News archives. After riding to CSI in the presidential limousine which had been flown in the night before, Reagan entered the Expo Center Western-style on a mule-driven antique ice wagon. The Burley High School Band greeted Reagan with "Hail to the Chief" as about a dozen Western riders accompanied Reagan and Symms into the arena, where the president delivered a 20-minute speech.

Reagan also met with 20 local supporters at the Herrett Museum for half an hour. The attendees paid $1,000 each for the opportunity. He departed at 4 p.m.

This is how some Times-News readers remember President Reagan's visit to Twin Falls:

Precious pictures
I've never enjoyed waiting in long lines, but this day was different. While waiting to see the president at the CSI Expo Center, I visited with many of my friends of various religious and political persuasions, and we all had a sense of pride that such a powerful man would take the time to visit our small city.

I was finally located in the approximate center of the building next to a very short man who kept jumping up to get a view of the president, as he was at least a head shorter than all the people surrounding him. My heart went out to him when in his desperation to get a glimpse of his president, he raised his camera to hopefully get a snapshot of the president.

I volunteered to take a couple of pictures for him with his camera, which he eagerly accepted.

Also, took a couple with my own camera, which was too far away to show much detail. But for all of us who took pictures with little detail that day, they are still a treasure because we know the subject of those photos is one of the greatest Americans and presidents of all time.

A phone call from the candidate
My memory is not from the Reagan visit in 1986 but from August 1976. I was working as a personal secretary to Congressman Phil Crane of Illinois.

One day I received an urgent call from one of the Capitol operators who said, "Some joker who says he is Ronald Reagan is trying to get through on your line to speak to the congressman." I asked her to go ahead and put through the call. I can still hear the voice of Ronald Reagan on the phone.

I didn't embarrass the operator by telling her it really was Ronald Reagan.

Reagan's presidential record gets mixed reviews

The Washington Post
WASHINGTON — As the nation mourns the passing of its 40th president, much is being made of Ronald Reagan's role in restoring U.S. Soviet relations and dramatically redefining the terms of the political debate over tax policy, defense, domestic priorities and social justice. The outpouring of flattery, tributes and eulogies is a conservative iron diet Saturday is what presidential historian Robert Dallek described Tuesday as "hagiography" of an immensely popular political leader.

Reagan-era nostalgia plays well in time of strife

NEW YORK (AP) — In his reassuring voice, Ronald Reagan spun a simple tale of two Americas: a southcoast 1980s nation where the enemy was obvious and victory was certain, and the bygone land of traditional values and individualism on which it was based.

World leaders react to Ronald Reagan

Former President Ronald Reagan was remembered across Europe for his role in breaking down Cold War divisions and for his leadership and humor.

AN OPTIMISTIC JOURNEY
His is career spanned a variety of occupations: including radio announcer, actor, governor and at age 69, the 40th president of the United States. Ronald Reagan held office from 1981 to 1989, the first in a generation to serve two complete terms.

Water creates lasting legacy for Twin Falls

In times past, water has oared over the cliffs of Shoshone Falls for an entire season. Come Saturday, the majestic spectacle will last as long as an episode of "Baywatch."

Yet even if only for an hour, the scene of water spilling over the Shoshone Falls cliffs and into the Snake River will be a treat for everyone.

With water, the land could become something much richer and more prosperous than a parched place that time appeared to have forgotten. The community they created grew into a blossoming Western city.

Of course, Saturday's blessing will also carry some irony. Water supplies are at some of their lowest levels on record.

Our view: A brief show of water at Shoshone Falls is a nice tribute to a precious natural resource.

What do you think? We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

Saturday's ceremonial Blessing of the Water at Shoshone Falls also serves as a fitting tribute to the prosperity and growth that have come from a abundant water in Twin Falls. It's entirely appropriate that in Twin Falls' centennial year, residents stop and recognize southern Idaho's most precious natural resource.

Southern Idaho residents would be destitute without the cycle of water flows from faraway springs and snowcaps. The Snake River and the Snake River Plain aquifer keep life and prosperity flowing across this entire half of the state.

Settlers who came to the Twin Falls Tract used abundant water, hard work, and the seed of vision to transform the barren land. Men such as I.B. Perrine saw that should occur at Milner Dam near Burley. Since that's where the river is diverted for irrigation, the structure has as much to do with Twin Falls' prosperity as the water itself.

But the centennial event seems to call for a grander backdrop. So we'll gather at the falls and cheer for the temporary torrent.

Regardless of where the event takes place, residents in the Magic Valley can give thanks for the prosperity that come from Idaho's working river. Blessed water? Yes, indeed.

Reagan's writings are the key to the man

I worked on Ronald Reagan's 1976 and 1980 campaigns. In the 1980 transition, and for two years as associate director of the Office of Management and Budget. During that time I saw Reagan fairly often in meetings and at receptions, and of course I was familiar with his public statements.

ANNELISE ANDERSON

Like most of us who worked in his campaigns and his administration, I was confident that I know him well enough to apply his principles and philosophy to the specific issues that happened to be my responsibilities of the day.

In recent years, I have gotten to know him in another way — by reading what he wrote over the years. The sheer quantity of his own writing is astounding. His handwritten speeches include 682 radio commentaries from the late 1970s on a wide range of policy issues, domestic and foreign; major addresses from his 1980 campaign; and many major speeches of his first inaugural address. His Feb. 5, 1981, address to that of other presidents, like John Adams and Abraham Lincoln, noted for their letter writing. Reagan wrote love letters to Nancy, but he also wrote letters to old friends, to his children, to clients with problems and questions, and to heads of state. He wrote humorous letters, letters of sympathy and encouragement, letters on complex policy issues, simple thank you letters, and letters about growing up and getting his first job.

The most important letter of his presidency was, I think, his first letter to Leonid Brezhnev, leader of the Soviet Union. The handwritten draft was found in the summer of 2003. Here is the story. A few weeks after Reagan took office — on March 6, 1981 — Reagan got a thundering letter from Brezhnev dealing with nuclear weapons and various international hot spots. The State Department, where Al Haig was secretary, and the National Security Council went to work drafting an answer. But Reagan was unhappy with the drafts he saw. When he was shot on March 30, Brezhnev's letter had still not been answered. Six days after Reagan got out of the hospital, sitting in the White House solarium still recovering from the assassination attempt, he picked up a yellow pad and drafted his own answer to Brezhnev. In his personal diary he wrote: "Don't know whether I'll send it, but I enjoyed putting some thoughts down on paper."

NICE GUY FINISHES FIRST

RONALD REAGAN 1911-2004
WON COLD WAR

Reagan sent his draft to Richard Allen, his national security adviser, who got it typed up and circulated it. The staff did not like it and did not think it should be sent. They tried to satisfy Reagan by adding a few paragraphs of Reagan's draft to the State Department draft. But Reagan was still not pleased, and he did not approve the combined draft. Reagan's diary says: "Won part of the battle with the diplomats — they drafted a letter to Brezhnev along usual lines... We sent it back for a rewrite including more of mine."

What was to be done? In the end, the formal State draft and Reagan's draft were not combined. The State Department draft was typed in final form without anything Reagan had written himself — and Reagan signed it. But he took his own apple-green presidential stationery and wrote out his own letter to Brezhnev in his own hand, largely as he had originally drafted it. Brezhnev got two letters from Reagan — one typed and one handwritten. And in Reagan's handwritten draft is the beginning of the end of the Cold War.

Here are several excerpts from the letter to the Soviet leader: "Is it possible that we have lot ideology, political and economic philosophy, and governmental policies keep us from considering the very real, everyday problems of the people we represent?" "May I say there is absolutely no substance to charges that the United States is guilty of imperialism or attempts to impose its will on other countries by use of force."

"Indeed the peoples of the world despite differences in racial and ethnic origin have very much in common. They want the dignity of having some control over their individual destiny."

Reagan was, indeed, a Great Communicator, and a man of decency, courtesy and humor. But behind the persona of Great Communicator was a thinker and a writer, and what he wrote tells us a good deal about him.

His writings reveal the thinking that drove his policies and strategies as president and earlier as governor of California. They reveal the knowledge, intelligence, determination and discipline with which he pursued both his career and his goals in public life. His writings are his most important legacy.

The Gipper leaves a legacy Bush wants to follow

To many Republicans, President Bush is more the political and ideological heir of Ronald Reagan than of his own father, the first President George Bush.

As the most conservative president since Reagan, the younger Bush has pursued similar goals on issues from tax cuts to abortion.

On foreign policy, Bush has likened his efforts to free Iraq and fight terrorism to the way presidents from Franklin Roosevelt to Reagan fought Nazism in World War II and communism during the Cold War.

But in recent weeks, a lively debate has developed in conservative circles over whether the aggressive aspects of the Bush policy continue Reaganism or break with it — and whether Reagan would have attacked Iraq.

Those stirring the debate see Reagan's methods as far more cautious than his rhetoric. They note that his 13 GOP critics who favored a more aggressive approach included many neoconservatives who have played a major role in driving the policies of the current administration.

"The neoconservative interpretation of Reagan's foreign policy is, to be blunt, a travesty of Reagan's record," contends Stefan Halper, a former Reagan policy aide, and former British diplomat Jonathan Wallison, in the April issue of The American Spectator from their forthcoming book, "America

CARL P. LEUBSDORF

Alone: The Neo-Conservatives and Social Order."

"Moreover," they add, "Reagan's historic achievement — the defeat of Soviet communism — was secured largely because he rejected neo-conservative policy recommendations rather than because he embraced them."

Reagan consistently took a cautious approach toward Eastern Europe, the Middle East and China, they write. And in combating the Soviet Union, he combined muscular diplomacy — with adroitly crafted negotiating positions designed to extract maximum American leverage.

He used U.S. troops only three times: in Beirut in 1982, in Grenada in 1983 and in bombing Libya in 1986, all "limited operations of short duration," they note.

Their arguments quickly attracted fire from critics who said they don't reflect reality. "Looking back on the 1980s, it seems far more likely that Reagan seldom used force because he could achieve his ends without it," writes another former Reagan aide, ex-White House counsel Peter Wallison, in the Spectator's June issue. He said there was little evidence Reagan "was averse to military action where it was truly necessary in the national interests of the United States."

The 2001 terrorist attacks changed everything, Wallison argues. Previously, "the United States dealt with nation-states that could be deterred by military force and compelled to negotiate on the basis of national interests." Bush faced foes who "could not be deterred by fear of retaliation. Because he favored bold policies to spread democracy abroad, while that doesn't prove he would have invaded Iraq, it shows they share "the major tenet of neoconservatism" that was the motivation for Bush's actions with respect to Iraq.

That analysis, Halper and Clarke respond, misses the point that methods "are every bit as important as objectives sought."

Reagan's inaction in Europe and Libya show "he would have moved much more deliberately" than Bush, attacking only if convinced that only military force could achieve his goals. The question of whether Bush's policies have brought nearer the goal of a more democratic and peaceful world will be a major focus of this fall's campaign, judging from these articles. The battle lines might display some unexpected alliances.

Intel czar must oversee all 15 agencies

Subscribe. Call 733-0931

George Tenet is out, and President Bush must find a replacement to lead the intelligence community through a thicket of challenges.

We are less than a month from handing over sovereignty to the Iraqis, with more violence sure to erupt. We are on alert for another possible terrorist attack on U.S. soil. We face the harrowing prospect that nuclear weapons will fall into the wrong hands. In the months ahead, the issue isn't Tenet and what he did or didn't do, it's his job.

The way it's currently structured, the director of Central Intelligence is supposed to do two jobs at once. He is supposed to be the CIA's chief and also the person with overall responsibility for the entire intelligence community -- all 15 agencies.

The problem with this arrangement is that the CIA director does not have true authority over the other 14 agencies, many of which fall under the Defense Department. There are also intelligence agencies within the departments of Justice, State, Energy and Homeland Security.

In reality, the director focuses overwhelmingly on his own turf, the CIA.

Without a single head for the entire intelligence community, our various agencies have evolved with different rules, cultures and databases. As a result, they do not always coordinate their efforts at collecting raw intelligence or analyzing it. This lack of coordination caused many of the mistakes we made before 9/11. Although U.S. intelligence was tracking two of the hijackers, the FBI and CIA didn't share information about their whereabouts. And although the CIA was warning the president that Osama bin Laden was determined to strike inside the United States, the agency didn't have information from the FBI indicating that al-Qaida operatives were on our soil training at flight schools. Lack of strong, integrated intelligence also contributed to our gross misreading of Iraq's programs for weapons of mass destruction.

What we need going forward is a single director of national intelligence who would have greater budgetary and statutory authority over the entire intelligence community.

The job would be a presidential-appointed post whose office would help fuse the collection and analysis functions in the same way our military services were transformed into

This lack of coordination caused many of the mistakes we made before 9/11.

An integrated fighting force nearly 20 years ago. This is neither a Democratic nor Republican idea. It is an opportunity for meaningful structural reform, and President Bush should seize it.

Jane Harman, D-Calif., is the ranking minority member on the House Intelligence Committee.

Patrolling Blue Lakes wastes officers' time

There are some things that seem to be going on around here that are very confusing.

The first is why are our police talking about really watching the kids on Blue Lakes this year? They watch them all the time! That seems to be their mainest thing to do! Watch the kids and arrest them for speeding or underage drinking or just about anything that you can think of. Which is OK to a point. But when you call in and report a knoww drug house, a house that is selling drugs, has more traffic than Blue Lakes on a Saturday night and you can't get the police to do anything about it makes me wonder -- do they only go after the easy, sure thing? The young kids are an easy target, right? Are the kids on Blue Lakes really that bad? Are they any worse than we were in the '70s or my parents in the '50s?

Sometimes I think that we forget what we did back then and expect our kids to sit around and do nothing. By the way, if we want to get the kids off Blue Lakes, then we need to give them a place to sit. Remember, not all kids are bad. If we have somewhere for our kids to go, maybe we could get our police to focus on some of the bigger crimes.

Proposal for county administrator has merit

Have a county administrator running the county instead of the county commissioners?

I have thought that for a long time but didn't know how to properly initiate the idea. Good going, Times-News. That was one of the best editorials I have seen -- anywhere!

As usual, you are not timid about putting forth what you think is best for our valley even if it may be unpopular.

I say put the county commissioners to a part-time status and hire a county administrator. One with several degrees that covers all the walls in his office. Degrees that prove to be an expert in all the problems we face here in our Magic Valley in these modern times. Time for the "good of boy" times to go. Our valley needs experts.

The county commissioners claim to follow and honor what the voters want?

Well, for all the reasons The Times-News wrote in its editorial (going after a new jail after it was let down, trying to buy Anderson without voter approval, etc.) proves to me one thing:

"Just because it is sitting in the hen house don't necessarily mean it's chicken." My Daddy used to tell us kids that a lot.

I think we need some changes here in our valley. I don't have a clue how we would get it changed over to a county administrator, but it needs done. Times-News, lead on!

I don't like my taxes raised, especially without my vote. For that reason, I didn't vote for any of the county commissioners. Left it blank.

In closing, I would like to thank all you folks that voted for my friend, Chuck Colner, in the May primary. I think we are sending the right person to the fall general elections.

Not all young men prey on women

In response to Ray Rogers:

It is evident from your letters that you're having a hard time dealing with something that has occurred in your life. However, it is not fair that you are taking your personal problems out on young boys who know nothing about.

The fact that a teenage daughter may have been hurt by a teenage boy does not give you the right to judge and misinterpret every other young boy. Just because one person may have made a mistake does not mean that everyone else should have to pay for it. That is both an imprudent and selfish way to think. You are very closed-minded and, I suppose, will always be. Do you think that every young boy that has consensual sex with a girlfriend should be in prison? Clearly, you are living in the dark ages.

You mentioned in your own letter about the little ones that are left behind wondering "Where is daddy?" You need to take a look at your own statement from a different point of view. I know that an 18-year-old boy was put into jail who wanted to support his 17-year-old pregnant girlfriend and their future baby. The girlfriend and her parents (who did not press the charges and could barely speak English) wanted him to be in the baby's life.

Where did the rights of the parents go?

Unfortunately, because of Idaho's laws (18-01-01) the baby may not have a father. Taxpayers pay to keep him in jail and for the girl to be on welfare. The couple is in love, but the state has a no contact order between them. What do you think about that?

It makes me sick and angry when you use the word "predator" when you speak of these young boys. I find your word choice to be very inappropriate. I know the truth about this whole situation as do many others out there, and I suppose that is what really counts. The truth can go on forever, but the lies will eventually have to come to an end.

When we read your letters, it only makes you look foolish. We do very much understand the problem--which is this law, and obviously it has been created and supported only by people who want to seek revenge for everything that has gone wrong in their own personal lives.

VIOLET AMEN
Rupert

Personalized bricks will return soon

TWIN FALLS — Don't be alarmed if you visit the new Centennial Plaza on the Snake River Canyon's south rim and don't see your personalized brick at the feet of the city's new I.B. Perrine statue, the Twin Falls Centennial Commission says.

The commission for months has been selling bricks to raise money for this year's centennial projects. The first 820 bricks have already been engraved, and they were placed around the plaza's Perrine statue for viewing at a late-May dedication.

But because ground preparation hasn't progressed far enough at that time, the bricks didn't have the concrete borders nor the sand filler that eventually will hold them tightly in place, the commission's Executive Director Bonnie Lezamis said Thursday. And centennial leaders didn't want to see the bricks vandalized.

So the personalized bricks have been removed and stored for safekeeping, "because they weren't installed permanently, and we were afraid we were going to lose them," she said.

Within a few weeks, she said, the bricks should be in their permanent spots, with safeguards in place.

'Box Set' will open Tuesday at CSI gallery

TWIN FALLS — "Box Set," the newest show at the Herrett Center for Arts and Science, opens Tuesday on the College of Southern Idaho campus.

A free, public reception for contributing artists will be held from 7 to 9 p.m. at the Herrett Center.

CSI Fine Arts Curator Mike Green, who is chairing the show, said "Box Set" should be a popular summer show, something the public hasn't seen displayed in a local art gallery before.

The concept, he says, came from a discussion several years ago with Rick Peterson, the Herrett Center's display technician and reptile specialist. In addition to his other talents, Peterson crafts finely made objects of wood and binding boxes.

Some of Peterson's best creations will be in the show along with those of nine other artists from Idaho and surrounding states. Exhibitors include George Schmitt of Twin Falls, Tom Goodman of Rupert, Gary Smith of Boise, Alan Johnson of Heyburn, Glen H. Peter of Caldwell, Jill Crozier of Jerome, John C. Lee of Meridian, John Michael Durum of Beaverton, Ore., and Charles B. Cobb of Santa Rosa, Calif.

Authorities warn of T.F. roofing scams

TWIN FALLS — Local authorities are asking the public to be on alert for roofing jobs that appear too good to be true.

The Twin Falls Police Department has received reports of people offering to repair roofs for a very low price. The discounts reflect the use of leftover, substandard materials, according to police. The workmanship that goes along with these deals is inferior as well.

Victims told police that when they called salespeople to complain, they were told that the agreement was civil, so there was no legal recourse available to them.

Anyone with information or questions about roofing scams is encouraged to call the TFPD at 735-4357.

Ice show season will begin on Saturday

ISP: I-84 pileup injured nine

One man remains in stable condition at Boise hospital

By Chip Thompson Times-News writer

BURLEY — A Nampa man remained in stable condition Thursday at Saint Alphonsus Medical Center in Boise 24 hours after thick dust caused a 21-vehicle pileup on Interstate 84.

Brent Wakeman, 63, was injured in the crash that occurred in westbound I-84 traffic seven miles west of Burley.

Wakeman was taken by a LifeFlight helicopter to Magic Valley Regional Medical Center Wednesday and then to Saint Alphonsus.

Idaho State Police Trooper Andrew Hilt said Wakeman's possible back injuries were the most serious of any sustained in the crash that occurred in westbound I-84 traffic seven miles west of Burley.

ISP also released Thursday the names of eight other crash victims who required medical treatment.

Wakeman's wife, Caroline, was treated and released from Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, as was Cindy Knopp, 21, of Paul, and Lucille Wayment, 64, of Twin Falls. Knopp suffered a broken arm.

Barbara Lankford, 58, of Burley, was treated and released from Cassia Regional Medical Center with minor injuries.

Those treated at Minidoka Memorial Hospital with minor injuries included Alice Nelson, 19, of Pocatello, Janet Houfburg, 73, Dan Walock, 37, of Rupert, and Jenny Fish, 52, of Rupert.

Hilt said that dust created by trench digging near the interstate was carried by heavy winds onto the freeway.

The dust created an area of zero visibility late Wednesday afternoon.

Hilt said high winds are common in the area and farming is part of the community, so authorities are not looking to point blame at the owner of the property where the dust originated.

"We're certainly not looking at anything criminal at this point," he said.

Hilt estimated the pileup caused more than $100,000 in damages.

Most of the cars were totaled but others sustained less than $500 in damage, he said.

High winds continued west of Burley Thursday, prompting the Idaho Department of Transportation to issue a warning to drivers to use caution and slow down in areas of poor visibility.

Platform work temporarily closes park

By Michelle Dunlop Times-News writer

HAGERMAN — People wanting to get a look at one of Idaho's newest state parks will have to wait for several weeks.

The Idaho Department of Parks and Recreation Thursday announced the Earl M. Hardy Box Canyon Springs Nature Preserve will be closed to visitors until the end of the month.

The reason? Construction of a visitors viewing platform near the falls in the picturesque canyon necessitates the move, said Lonnie Johnson, district park manager for the state agency.

"We just want to make sure it's up and safe for the public," he said.

The view of the falls in the Earl M. Hardy Box Canyon Springs Nature Preserve, as seen from a new visitor platform Thursday afternoon. The preserve is expected to reopen by the end of June, after construction is finished on the platform.

The Box Canyon preserve covers 350 acres and is located 20 miles northwest of Twin Falls in Gooding County. It is home to the 11th-largest spring in North America, pouring 180,000 gallons of water per minute into the Snake River.

The viewing platform is located about one and a half miles from the road and is near the falls in the canyon, Johnson said.

"We're going to be hauling things back and forth on that road," he said.

Although construction on the platform was nearly complete this spring, the department questioned the current height of the platform's railings, said Garth Taylor, Parks and Recreation's regional manager.

"The railings aren't tall enough," Taylor said.

As a result, construction on the platform will resume until the railings meet the department's standards for safety.

The state of Idaho, with the help of The Nature Conservancy and the Idaho Power Co., bought the preserve from the Earl M. and LaVane M. Hardy Charitable Trust and the Hardy Foundation for $5 million in 1988.

The state and the Nature Conservancy both own it, but we're in the process of purchasing it completely," Johnson said.

The park should reopen to the public by July 1, Johnson said.

Cotterel wind farm debate continues

By Chip Thompson Times-News writer

BURLEY — Mini-Cassia is blessed with wind and Windland Inc. plans to help turn the valuable resource into electricity.

At least that was how Mike Heckler, the company's marketing director, presented the proposed 200-megawatt Cotterel Mountains wind farm during a Mini-Cassia Chamber of Commerce luncheon Thursday.

"For better or worse you have a natural resource," Heckler told the audience, indicating that wind power is more economical than natural gas and is one of the only sources of power generation in Idaho needs to be developed across the ridge would ruin one of the most beautiful valleys in the state.

But there were some vocal opponents at the event as well, primarily Albion residents who said that 400-foot windmills across the ridge would ruin one of the most beautiful valleys in the state.

Heckler began his presentation by pointing out that in a typical year one-third of the power used in Idaho needs to be imported from other states and options for reducing this amount are conservation or increased generation.

"The Cotterel range is the perfect place for a wind farm, the technology improves.

"No wind farm ever started out large," Wahlgren said, "the were small and they grew."

Many who attended were interested in the economic benefits to the county.

Heckler said that construction would create 100-120 temporary jobs and that operations would require 12 technical employees.

The facility would increase the county's assessed value by approximately 20 percent.

Heckler said, amounting to roughly $2.4 million in property taxes annually.

Wahlgren said that had been told the permanent jobs would be filled primarily by people from Boise or Pocatello, so once construction was complete there would be no benefit to the citizens of Albion.

Opposition focused primarily on the size of the turbines and the effect on views in the valley.

"There's a 35-foot radio tower on the ridge which is visible any day of the year and a 400-foot tower would ruin the valley," Wahlgren said.

"No one in the world makes a 400-foot tower," Heckler responded. But he then admitted that the proposed towers and their attached blades are in the

Wahlgren said he could see the farm growing even bigger as

Investigators look for leads in teen's death

The Associated Press

MOUNTAIN HOME — Elmore County authorities say they have no significant leads in this week's murder of a teenage girl at a rural home.

"Usually we have an idea, but on this one we don't," Sheriff Rick Layher said.

Reports from investigators and the coroner show that Teresa Garcia was shot four times — once in the face and three times in the back — with a large-caliber gun while she was resting in a bedroom of her aunt and uncle's home.

"There were no signs of a struggle," Garcia managed to get outside the house, apparently in an attempt to get help, before she died from loss of blood.

Layher said the girl's aunt and uncle, who were not identified, dropped her off at their home to rest about 1 p.m. Tuesday while they went to Jerome for a previously scheduled appointment.

Her body was found less than two hours later by several children who were passing by.

Kraft says it will create 50 new jobs

Company attributes move to increased demand for product

The Times-News

RUPERT — Kraft Foods Inc. announced Thursday evening that it will create 50 new part- and full-time jobs at its plant in Rupert by fall.

In a press release issued shortly before 7 p.m., the company said it will hold a job fair Tuesday through Friday next week seeking prospective employees to fill the positions on short notice.

Kraft will announce the time and location of the fair through employment ads scheduled to run in The Times-News and the South Idaho Press Saturday and Sunday, the company said.

The announcement came as a surprise to Mini-Cassia Development Commission Director Bob Shepard, who said late Thursday he had no prior knowledge of the move. But it was a pleasant surprise nonetheless, he said.

"I just think that's absolutely great," Shepard said.

A Kraft spokesman could not be reached for comment Thursday, but the press release attributed the need for new employees to an increased demand for the company's "String Ums" string cheese product.

The announcement marks a continued rebound in job creation through Kraft.

Late in 2002, Kraft's Rupert workforce had been reduced to 80 full-time employees following the layoff of 50 workers — a move that was attributed to an excess in manufacturing capacity.

But last September the company was able to secure $105,000 from the state's Workforce Development Training Fund to train 35 new employees.

The additional 50 jobs announced Thursday evening

Richard Alywn Brizee - Twin Falls

Richard Alywn Brizee passed away on June 9, 2004, at his home.

Richard was born on March 10, 1925, in Twin Falls, Idaho, to General William Brizee and Mary Elizabeth Ellis Brizee. Dick grew up and attended school in Twin Falls.

Dick graduated from Twin Falls High School in 1943. He always looked forward to his high school class reunions and cherished seeing old classmates. He was inducted into the United States Marine Corps in the age of 17, on March 9, 1943, and then was sent to the University of Washington to further his education. After completing boot camp, he proceeded to Camp Brizee and then to Quantico, Va., and finally to Camp Pendleton as a second lieutenant.

Dick earned a Bachelor of Arts from the University of Washington in 1949. He was a member of the Delta Upsilon Fraternity. He remained an avid Husky fan, and faithfully read his alumni literature every year, often sharing it with his family and friends. Dick returned to Twin Falls to join his father at Brizee Heating.

Dick married Donna Jean Thompson of Moscow, Idaho, on June 21, 1957. They met when Donna moved to Twin Falls to teach home economics at Twin Falls High School. They were blessed with five children: Dan, Debbie, Dana, Diana and Dedra. Dick was very proud of his children and their accomplishments. He instilled in his children, by example, the value of honesty, loyalty and hard work. He was a father of enduring love. Never did he provoke during the worst of times. He was always there to love and nurture. He will long be remembered by his family as the keeper of the keys to the bumpy truck.

He was also very fond of the many hugs bestowed upon him by his eight grandchildren: Jennifer, Andrew, Jason, Kyle, Connor, Alexandra, Samantha and Mitchell. He enjoyed teaching his grandchildren about electrical systems. He loved math and was always willing to help his grandchildren with their homework. He enjoyed walking in the Rock Creek Canyon and watching the clouds, birds and nature. He was always willing to display his suspenders, knowing they would inevitably be "snapped" by his grandchildren.

Dick was very proud of the accomplishments of Brizee Heating, and the company's history as the oldest Lennox dealer in the western United States, and one of the oldest family-owned businesses in Twin Falls. Dick became proprietor of Brizee Heating in 1978 when his father passed away.

In 1997 he opened a fireplace store with his son, Dan. Dick served on the board of First Federal Savings Bank from 1966 through 1988. He is a past board member and Paul Harris Fellow of the Twin Falls Rotary Club. He also served as a member of the local Water Planning Committee.

Dick was diagnosed with Guillain-Barre syndrome this past winter, which resulted in progressive weakness. He passed away peacefully in his sleep, and we know he is now in a better place. He will be remembered as a man who gave his all to family, community and country.

He is survived by his wife, Donna Jean Thompson Brizee; Twin Falls; his sister, Marilyn Brizee Burge of Rancho Palos Verde, Calif.; his children, Daniel Brizee Brizee (Jennifer), Twin Falls; Deborah Ann Brizee, Boise, Dora Allan Brizee, Miami, Diana Marie Cyr, Minneapolis, and Dedra Lea Swanson (Todd); Twin Falls; and his grandchildren, Jennifer Lee Brizee, Andrew Douglas Bemis, Jason Burton Bemis, Kyle Jordan Swanson, Connor Lucas Swanson, Alexandra Lea Brizee, Samantha Jeanne Brizee and Mitchell Brizee.

A visitation will be held today, Friday, June 11, 2004, at Parkes Magic Valley Funeral Home. Friends may call between 6 and 8 p.m. A funeral will be held at 3 p.m. Saturday, June 12, 2004, at First Presbyterian Church, Twin Falls. Graveside service will follow at Sunset Memorial Park.

Special thanks to Ann McMurtry and Patrick Taylor, as well as to MVRMC—Home Health and Hospice, especially Dotie Taylor, Joy Crist and Tamara Diamond, for their loving care.

Memorial contributions may be made to the College of Southern Idaho Foundation, Richard A. Brizee Memorial Fund, P.O. Box 1238, Twin Falls, ID 83403.

Florence Marie Hollenbeck Hall - Wendell

Florence Marie Hollenbeck Hall, 66, of Wendell, died June 7, 2004, at her home, surrounded by her family.

She was born April 20, 1938, in Fairfield, Idaho, to Russell (Mildred) and Amelia (Bess) Hollenbeck. She married Paul Koonce in 1956 in Fairfield. They had two children and later divorced in 1959.

She married David Harvey Hall on Feb. 14, 1969, in Idaho. New Florence, her two children, David and his daughter, Patricia, lived in Twin Falls. Florence and David added three more children to their household.

In 1979, they moved to Hagerman where they raised their family. When David retired in 2002, David and Florence moved to a small acreage near Wendell where they built a new home. Florence worked many years as a potato inspector for the State of Idaho, retiring in late 2003.

Surviving are her husband, David of Wendell; two sons, Layne (Candy) Hall, Logan, Portland, and Ervin (Brenda) Hall, Wendell; four daughters, Patty Metzger, Glen Carmen, Jill, Robin (Michael) Larkin, Portland, Ore., Connie (Craig) Beliveau, Twin Falls, and Diane (Doreen) (John) Egan, Jr., prior or Nellie Hollenbeck, Fairfield; a sister, Florence (Harvey) McCammon, Fairfield; 25 grandchildren, 20 great-grandchildren and several nieces and nephews.

A service will be conducted at 3 p.m. Saturday, June 12, 2004, at the Demary's Wendell Funeral Chapel, 164 E. Main, Wendell, by the Rev. Greg Kistner of the Free Will Baptist Church, Jerome.

In lieu of flowers, memorial donations may be designated to: First Choice Hospice, 147 Main Ave. E., Twin Falls, ID 83401.

Laurel Sorenson - Malad

Laurel Sorenson, 91, of Malad, and husband of Arden (Lynn) Sorenson, passed away on Wednesday, June 9, 2004, in Malad.

She was born Oct. 9, 1912, in Downey, Idaho, a son of James (Mary) and Amelia (Bess) Sorenson. She grew up and was educated in Heyburn and later attended Lucy Nelson, June 21, 1936, in Elks. New Laurel served in the Army during World War II from 1942 until 1946. Following the war she returned to the Twin Falls area where she farmed for many years, raising potatoes and beets. Mildred passed away June 11, 1991. He married Ardele Parry Thomas, Jan. 14, 1955, in Malad, and they have resided in Malad and Twin Falls since.

He was a member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and was a high priest. He is survived by his wife of Malad; two daughters, Linda Canaday and Sandra Posthat, both of California; six grandchildren: several great-grandchildren, nieces and nephews; and a brother, Ned Sorenson of Orem, Utah. He was preceded in death by his parents, his first wife, Mildred; one sister and two brothers.

A funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday, June 12, 2004, in the Horsley Funeral Home, 132 W. 300 N., Malad. Friends may call from 9:30 to 10:45 a.m. Saturday at the funeral home. Burial will follow at 2:30 p.m. in the Sunset Memorial Park in Twin Falls.

Rodger Hall - Sisters, Ore.

Rodger Hall of Sisters, Ore. passed away on Sunday, June 6, 2004, at St. Charles Medical Center in Bend from complications due to his horse riding accident. He was 85.

A celebration of Mr. Hall's life will be held at 11 a.m. today, Friday, June 11, 2004, at the Sisters Christian Church. Burial will occur at Camp Park Cemetery in Sisters, following the service. Arrangements are under the direction of Autumn Funerals, 405 NW Larch Ave. in Redmond, Ore.

Mr. Hall was born on Nov. 16, 1918, in Oconto, Wis., to Everett and Della (Champagne) Hall. He moved to the Roseburg and Sutherland, Ore. area at age 5, where he was raised and educated. He started singing and recording on the radio at age 13 in the Roseburg area. He won many talent contests through-out California and Oregon and performed and recorded two-cks and guitars with the likes of Buck Owens, Ricky Nelson, Fats Domino and Wesley Tuttle. Rodger performed over 800 concerts and recordings between 1957 and 2003. He received many degrees in Christianity through correspondence with Moody Bible Institute and the American Assoc. of Christian Conductors. He was also the founder and pastor of Christ's Church of New Beginnings in Sisters, in 2003, and in 1969, he started the first school release time for religious purposes in Oregon.

In 1975 Rodger founded Christian Cowboys, a Sister chapter of Christian Cowboy Association. From 1969 to 1972 he was the evangelist for Revival First National Association.

Rodger recorded four gospel albums and was chosen Outstanding Recording Artist for Word Record Company.

In 1967 he became an ordained minister for the Christian Church. He started a church in Marcola, Ore., and then went on to pastor seven more churches from 1968 to 2004, in Missouri, Montana, Hawaii and Oregon. His first full-time pastorate was the Sisters Church of Christ from 1968 to 1994. He was preceded in death by his parents, a sister and a brother.

He is survived by his wife of 42 years, the Sister of Sisters daughter, Cheurice Rhoades of Sun River; sons, Rodger Halston of Mullumbidgee, Calif.; Joel Hall of Redmond, Ore.; and Shane Hall of Apache, Okla.; brother, Doyle Hall of Marcola, Ore.; and 10 grandchildren.

Memorial contributions may be made in lieu of flowers on his behalf at the Bank of the Cascades in Sisters or Redmond or U.S. Bank in Redmond or Bend.

Charity fires board, president

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Cameron J. Lewis, a charity official accused of cheating public schools across the country on sales of fitness gear, has been fired from his job. The Associated Press has learned.

The American Fork, Utah-based National School Fitness Foundation said Thursday it also had revamped its board of directors and filed a complaint alleging Lewis and his father misappropriated about $5 million from the foundation.

The 31-page complaint filed Wednesday in U.S. Bankruptcy Court of Utah, says Lewis used the charity to buy himself a small airplane and finish a half-million-dollar house in Highland, Utah.

Lewis, who was the foundation's president, also was accused of billing the charity $3,000 for scuba-diving training, $8,000 for an elk hunt and tens of thousands of dollars for political donations.

Lewis was fired May 31 during a board upheaval that was only made public Thursday by foundation attorney Grant Stinson. The complaint says Lewis promised to pay back the charity but hasn't done so.

Lewis, who hasn't yet been served with a copy of the complaint, couldn't be reached Thursday by The Associated Press. His cell phone has been disconnected and he has an unlisted number at home where the complaint says he hasn't been seen for weeks.

Nampa teen sends Iraq-bound guardsmen care packages

NAMPA (AP) — Zach Roberts' mother wanted him to finish his Eagle Scout project before he graduated this spring and then turned 18, but she wasn't sure how to motivate her son.

The answer turned out to be finding something he cared about — American troops.

For three summers, Sallie Roberts said her son planned to build a fence around a canal in Nampa near a park and school. But those summers came and went. Zach Roberts still needed to put together a service project to attain the highest rank in Boy Scouts.

In March, Roberts and some friends came up with the idea to put together care packages for some of Idaho's departing soldiers.

"When he decided on these boxes, it was like a light bulb went on," his mother said. "This was something he felt was very important."

In about 12 weeks, Roberts, with help from family and friends, put together 40 boxes full of practical items as well as a few that might not be as essential.

He researched the Internet for ideas on what to include.

A family support coordinator at Gowen Field suggested he include baby powder and international phone cards.

He also included sunflower seeds and candy. Departing soldiers will find Tabasco sauce and seasoning salt to help spice up meals.

Roberts passed the care packages out to soldiers this week as hundreds of service men and women of the Guard's 116th Cavalry Brigade left for training in Texas ahead of deployment this fall to Iraq. The teenager was thoughtful in determining what to include in the care packages.

"We have jerky — just because jerky's good," he said. "I'm sure if I was in their position, it would be neat to get something like this."

Roberts said his Eagle project has taught him several things, including the commitment the local community has to helping in times of need.

Assistance and donations came in from several local businesses and individuals, and a local printing shop donated fliers that were handed out during a parade in May, he said.

Grand Canyon condors appear to incubate egg

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz. (AP) — A pair of California condors appear to be incubating an egg in their nest on the South Rim of the Grand Canyon, biologists said.

The egg along with another belonging to a pair of condors at the Verrillion Cliffs would be among the first produced by condors since being reintroduced in the wilds of Arizona in 1996.

Last year, a pair of condors produced the first baby condor bred in the wild by the released birds.

Biologist Eddie Feltes of the Peregrine Fund, the nonprofit that spearheaded the reintro-duction project, said biologists still need to use a high-powered scope to make observations of the new nest about 1,000 feet from the Hopi Point overlook at Grand Canyon National Park.

The first baby condor produced by reintroduced birds was born in the Salt Creek drainage of the Grand Canyon last year. He's flying on his own now, and biologists spotted him Monday 40 miles from his nest.

The condors are frequently spotted at the Grand Canyon. They stay on ledges where they can't be bothered but apparently like looking at the tourists as much as the tourists like looking at them.

Mother of murdered girl sues Coeur d'Alene

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — The mother of a teenage girl who was raped and beheaded in the northern Idaho woods has sued the city, accusing police of ignoring her attempts to help her daughter.

Bonnie Heiland filed suit Monday in 1st District Court.

Fourteen-year-old Carissa Benway was killed in 2000 by a neighbor who had been classified as a sex offender in Washington State.

David "Cotton" Merritt is now

-serving a life sentence for murder.

Heiland's federal suit was dismissed last month when U.S. District Court Judge B. Lynn Winmill ruled that Coeur d'Alene police actions did not violate either Heiland or Benway's civil rights.

Winmill, in his May 12 ruling, noted the remaining claims in the suit are based on Idaho law and should be heard in a state court.

Heiland contends the police department ignored her attempts to report her daughter as a runaway and failed to run a background check on Merritt.

Merritt's son, Cody, 16 at the time Benway died in July 2000, was sentenced to five years in prison. Cody and Benway were friends and she often stayed at the Merritts' trailer when she ran away from home.

Kootenai County sheriff's detectives pieced together a case with little more than Benway's jawbone, which was found by grouse hunters in the Coeur d'Alene National Forest.

Benway's name lives on through "Carissa's Law" that Heiland and Kootenai County prosecutor Bill Douglas pushed through the Legislature last year.

It allows newspapers, broadcasters and police to make public the names, addresses and crimes of convicted sex offenders.

No date has been set in the federal claim.

LIVE HISTORY DAY FOCUSES ON A PERMANENT MUSEUM

By Steve Crump
Times-News writer

JEROME — The folks at the Jerome County Historical Society are hoping to cash in on blueberry and bull Saturday.

A picnic and the "jailing" of a well-known-but-as-yet-unnamed local citizen on the premises of the Idaho Farm and Ranch Museum will be prominent features of the 20th annual Live History Day, a seven-hour tour through the past that the historical society conducts every June.

Both events are fund-raisers for some of the $120,000 it would take to build a state-of-the-art, climate-controlled facility to house the historical society's artifacts, newspapers, photos and research library.

With volunteer labor and materials, about $40,000 would get the project started. Many of those pieces of the past are currently lodged in a basement in downtown Jerome.

"It's totally inadequate," said Linda Helms, publicist for Live History Day. "These materials are irreplaceable, and we need to get them into a climate-controlled building."

The proposed new structure, which would also house a classroom for events and programs, would be the centerpiece of the historical society's 27-acre site near the intersection of Interstate 84 and U.S. Highway 93 that now contains two of the original barracks from the wartime Minidoka Relocation Center at Hunt; many original Jerome County buildings, including a church that began in the Barrymore district east of Jerome and then moved to the Canyonville district; Jerome's first jail, and the Poor House, a prove-up shack, along with three other buildings from the Albert Lickley Farm.

There's also a paddletwheel

Blacksmithing will be one of many folk arts demonstrated at Live History Days on Saturday.

steamboat that transported tourists up the Snake River to Shoshone Falls at the turn of the century.

But Live History Day animates all that lore, with hands-on displays of equipment and folkcraft, including horse-drawn wagon rides, farming with horse and plow, spinning and quilt-making, bread- and butter-making, cream separating, apple-cider pressing, flintknapping, blacksmithing, horseshoeing corn-shelling, clothes-washing — on a washboard, broom-making, home canning and saddle-making.

A tractor-pull is scheduled for 2 p.m. with the Magic Valley Antique Pullers, and there will be a display of engines throughout the day.

The spectacle draws between 1,000 and 1,500 visitors. Food and souvenirs are available.

The fund-raising pie auctions for the new building will happen at 11:30 a.m. and again at 1:30 p.m. — and the scowfall will be behind bars at it takes him to cage ball from passersby.

"He asked us not to let anyone know in advance who he is," Helms said.

'Rumors' spread to theater

By Karen Bessick
Wood River Journal

KETCHUM — Rumor has it that Director Kathy Wylie has rented a laugh-o-gauge for Laughing Stock Theater's next production. Rumor also has it that the nuts and bolts on nextStage Theater's rafters have been loosened so the laughter can literally raise the roof when the play takes the stage.

Of course, all these rumors will pale in face of the gossip and innuendoes flying around stage when Neil Simon's comic farce, "Rumors," opens for a two-weekend run beginning tonight.

"Neil Simon is such a hysterical writer, and 'Rumors' is one of his funniest plays," said actress Jana Arnold, who recently moved here from Los Angeles to get back to her stage roots.

Don't look for any deep meaning or even inspiration in "Rumors." Rumor has it that the script was Neil Simon's comic for getting through his third divorce.

"What you can expect is a plethora of witty one-liners and slapstick comedy."

"This play is just for fun," Wylie said. "It's like a sophisticated sitcom. It's perfect for this town because this town has always supported comedy."

The play is set in an upper-class New York suburban home where attorney Ken Gorman and his wife Kris arrive at a 10th wedding anniversary celebration only to find the host with a bullet hole in his head and his wife missing.

Fearing the political ramifications and character assassinations that might occur should the news leak out, they try to it cover up.

That becomes increasingly difficult, however, as other guests arrive and no one can remember who's been told what about whom.

Among the other couples: Glenn and Cassio Cooper, a politician and his neurotic wife; Ernie and Cookie Cusack, a couple very much in love with each other; and despite Cookie's persona as an accident-prone cooking-show star, and Lenny and Claire Gans, a sarcastic, hypocritical couple who have just wrecked their new BMW.

No-nonsense Officer Welch and Officer Pudney arrive on the scene to take an accident report only to discover they may have stumbled onto an even bigger crime involving the deputy mayor of New York City.

Starring in the comedy are Steve D'Smith and Dana Dugan as the Gormans, Scott Creighton and Mary Lynn Cleary as the Gurnes, Rick Kessler and Page Klune as the Coopers and Bill Nagel and Jana Arnold as the Cusacks.

Matt Kirby plays Officer Welch and Kristy Kuntz, Officer Pudney.

Veteran Laughing Stock set designers Peter and Paul Ahrens are building the two-level set — a challenge in and of itself given nextStage Theater's limited ceiling clearance.

The show which opened in New York in 1968, takes split-second timing and an innate sense of comedy.

"Not everyone is cut out to be a comedian," said Arnold, who was fully immersed in comedy of the sitcom variety in Los Angeles. "Fortunately, I feel like I'm working with some of the most talented people I've worked with in years."

Ladysmith Black Mambazo will sing in Hailey tonight

The Times-News

HAILEY — Fame is a funny thing, and it finds you in the strangest places.

Ladysmith Black Mambazo, a 10-voice Zulu choir from backwater South Africa, got discovered by an America folk singer looking for some backup vocals.

Two cuts on Paul Simon's 1986 album "Graceland" were all it took for LBM to become the best-known African musical act in the world.

Since then LBM, which will perform in Hop Porter Park tonight in the first concert of the Sun Valley Center for the Arts' summer series, has been the marquee act for world music, lending its talent to Western artists ranging from Dolly Parton to Michael Jackson.

It all began more than modestly when a sharecropper near the town of Ladysmith in rigidly segregated South Africa formed a family-based choir in 1964. Joseph Shabalala's motives were purely economic: As the oldest of eight children, it fell to him to take care of his family after their father died.

Zulu mbube choirs had been singing across South Africa since Cecil Rhodes began digging for gold there. Iscahlambile, or "township music," was born in mining communities where black workers lived, far from home. They sang to pass the time, and eventually a style of competitive singing called Cochozo Mfana developed.

LBM turned out to be the best mbube choir of them all, winning contest after contest until they were banned from competitions. They finally got a record contract in 1970, and cut more than 30 albums in South Africa. Some of them found their way to the United States, where Simon and others influential in the music industry heard them.

Ladysmith's collaborations with Simon on "Graceland" — "Diamonds on the Soles of Her Shoes" and "Homelless" — introduced a much wider audience to their distinctive tenor/altor/bass harmonies. LBM's first American album, "Shaka Zulu," was produced by Simon and won a Grammy Award in 1987.

Jim Davis' extraordinarily-lazy comic-strip feline, voiced by Bill Murray, makes the move to the big screen. Breckin Meyer, Jennifer Love Hewitt and Stephen Tobolowsky co-star, with Debra Messing and Alan Cumming providing voices. Directed by Peter Hewitt.

"The Chronicles of Riddick"

Vin Diesel returns in this sequel to "Pitch Black," which finds Riddick imprisoned on the planet Helion under the control of an evil despot. Thandie Newton, Karl Urban, Colin Farrell, Linus Roache, Keith David and Judi Dench co-star. (PG-13 for intense sequences of violent action and some language.)

"The Reckoning"

Set in England during the late 1300s, Paul McGuigan's film follows Nicholas (Paul Bettany), a young priest literally running from his past. After encountering a band of wandering actors, Nicholas is surprisingly allowed into the fold by the good-natured Martin (Willem Dafoe). When the troupe reaches an impoverished village, they get word of a strange murder and look into the story as the basis for a new play. However, Nicholas and Martin uncover more than they'd expected, and soon a deeper mystery emerges. R.

"The Stepford Wives"

Nicole Kidman stars in this satirical take on Ira Levin's 1972 novel — previously filmed in 1975 as a thriller — about a creepy town with perfect, robotized women. Matthew Broderick, Bette Midler, Christopher Walken and Glenn Close co-star. Adapted by Frank Oz. (PG-13 for sexual content, thematic material and language.)

"Harry Potter and the Prisoner of Azkaban"

There are many reasons why "Harry Potter and the Prisoner of Azkaban" is the best of the three "Harry Potter" pics to date: It's shorter, it seems less like a theme-park ride and more like a real movie, and its heroes (and several assorted rogues) are beginning to feel familiar, like old friends. It is also, happily, not directed by Chris Columbus. PG (scars, creatures, violence)

"Home on the Range"

Call the U.S. Department of Agriculture, pronto. It needs to investigate Disney Studios for an incidence of mad cow disease. What else could account for "Home on the Range," a charmingly animated musical about a bovine trio riding herd on a rustler? PG (mild crudeness)

"Kitchen Stories"

This oddball bit of whimsy follows a Swedish researcher who's busy observing the culinary habits of a lonely Norwegian farmer. Matter-of-fact absurdism, with way-cool 1950s design elements to boot! No MPAA rating (adult themes, profanity)

"Laws of Attraction"

Pierce Brosnan and Julianne Moore star as dueling divorce lawyers in this lamentably unfunny screwball romance that tries to bring the Spencer Tracy-Katharine Hepburn/Rock Hudson-Doris Day formula into the 21st century. It does not succeed. PG-13 (sex, profanity, adult themes)

"Man on Fire"

Denzel Washington stars as a bodyguard out for vengeance after his charge — a precocious, too-cool rich girl — is kidnapped in Mexico City. Bloody killings and busy camerawork ensue in this over-long, over-stylized, Tony Scott-directed rampage. R (violence, profanity, adult themes)

Paul Bettany as Nicolas and Willem Dafoe as Martin in Paramount Classics' "The Reckoning."

"Mean Girls"

"Saturday Night Live" writer Tina Fey's "Mean Girls" is alternately intriguing then not, and, like its subject, features a lot of in-class and girl-on-girl zingers. And like most contemporary movies, "Mean Girls" — which reteams Lindsay Lohan with her "Freaky Friday" director, Mark Waters — has no ending. PG-13 (sexual content, profanity, skanky dressing)

"Raising Helen"

Mostly likeable dramedy starring Kate Hudson as a Manhattan fashionista who relocates to Queens to raise her sister's orphaned children and learns to care as much about making lunches as making the scene. PG-13 (sexual themes)

"Shrek 2"

During the course of its 93 galloping minutes, "Shrek 2" carries the standard for self-esteem while spoofing showbiz, fairy tales, self-help books, and every other cultural phenom from animal-testing to the Oscars. The movie is a dream, a sequel as exhilarating and riotously funny as 2001's top-grossing original. PG (brief drug reference, crude humor, discreet sexual humor)

"13 Going on 30"

Jennifer Garner in a star-making role as a 13-year-old who gets her wish to grow up into a cool chick — and then realizes that cool chicks are pretty shallow. PG-13 (sexual candor, drug references)

"Troy"

Battling around this epic with its commanding performances by Peter O'Toole as Priam and Eric Bana as his warrior son Hector is a bizarre turn by a bronzed Brad Pitt, who plays Achilles as a surfer dude trolling the Aegean for the perfect wave. Directed by Wolfgang Petersen. R (graphic violence, discreet nudity, sexual candor)

"Van Helsing"

Hugh Jackman stars as a fearless vampire hunter in this turgid gurgle of cheesy special-effects and monster movie mayhem. From "Mummy" director Stephen Sommers, who attempts to pull off a similar mix of larky humor and eye-popping fantasy adventure. He fails, miserably. PG-13 (violence, vampirism, monsters)

Pistons' defense tops Lakers

The Associated Press

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — As the entry pass floated inside to Shaquille O'Neal, Elden Campbell reached his left arm around and knocked it away. As O'Neal stood planted in the paint, Richard Hamilton picked up the loose ball and flung it forward.

The only player running downcourt was the 36-year-old Campbell, the backup center who was a rookie back in 1991 — one season after the Detroit Pistons were at the end of their glory years.

Campbell caught the ball and went flying in for a left-handed jam, and the decibel level at the Palace went off the charts.

The play early in the fourth quarter not only gave the Pistons an 18-point lead, it symbolized the way the entire night went Detroit's way in a 88-68 victory Thursday night over Los Angeles in Game 3 of the NBA Finals.

Detroit's defense was suffocating, its offense was opportunistic and its fans were in a frenzy.

Now, an NBA championship is very much within the Pistons reach, and it even seems like a distinct possibility.

No Eastern Conference team has won a title since 1998, but these Pistons are proving that the time may have arrived for that drought to end.

Hooping Kobe Bryant without a field goal in the first half and limiting the Lakers to the lowest point total in their storied franchise history, Detroit showed no aftereffects from their crushing Game 2 loss.

The Pistons regained control of a series they've dominated for all but a few minutes.

Hamilton scored 31 points and Chauncey Billups had 19 as Detroit's backcourt gave the Pistons just about all the offense they needed.

Defending the double-figure rebounding performances by Ben Wallace and Rasheed Wallace, three steals apiece from Campbell and Tayshaun Prince, and it all added up to a series that could even be called a mismatch in favor of the team that entered the series as huge underdogs.

Game 4 is Sunday night at

the arena where two championship banners hang in the north end zone.

And if form holds, this series might not even make it back to Los Angeles for a Game 6 or 7.

Nothing worked for the Lakers, from Bryant's offense to O'Neal's touch to Karl Malone's ailing knee to Gary Payton's slow feet.

Campbell's breakout dunk put the Pistons ahead 70-52, and Los Angeles never mounted anything even resembling a concerted comeback effort.

The crowd went wild with 2:10 remaining — when little-used rookie Darko Milicic got off the bench for his series debut.

Bryant finished with just 11 points on 4-for-13 shooting and O'Neal scored 14. No one else on the Lakers scored in double figures.

"We never get down. That was a heartbreaker in Game 2, and people thought we would be flat, but we were even more hungry," Billups said. "We just kept contesting everything. Tayshaun was great tonight contesting every shot Kobe took.

The Big Fella is a problem for us, but Ben and Rasheed are down there working, and so is Elden."

The Lakers grew increasingly frustrated by each botched possession. "The Pistons became more emboldened by their ability to create a quality shot," said Ekaterini Thanou, the defending Olympic silver medalist in the women's 100 meters. "We have two months more to finish some small things."

Organizers will use the three-day championships as a way to test the 75,000-seat stadium that will host the Olympic opening and closing ceremonies as well as track and field events. It will be a run-through for 700 volunteers, as well as countless police and other security personnel.

"Though organizers said they would have staffers purposely try to circumvent metal detectors during the championships to see if the security system works, there was little sense of urgency on a sun-swept Thursday morning.

ATHENS, Greece — From the air, the long-awaited Olympic stadium looks like a utterity. From the ground, it seems to need a little more time in its cocoon.

The unfinished centerpiece of the Athens Games got its first test Thursday, hosting the Greek track and field championships as bulldozers and cranes continued preparing the site for the Summer Olympics that begin in two months.

With construction workers in hard hats peering down from the baldyhood steel-and-glass roof and a handful of spectators sitting on pipes destined to become prime seats, the stadium hosted its first — and only — event before the Aug. 13-29 Olympics.

The pounding of jackhammers was interrupted by a starter's pistol. Temporary signs directed visitors to their "seats" and to a storage area for baby srollers. Six workers in overall's swept dirt off the marble steps leading to an entrance.

But the nine-lane track is in great shape, one of the two scoreboards is working and few athletes seemed bothered by the commotion surrounding the track. For many, it was the culmination of a long and anxious wait.

"I'm very impressed. It's almost done," said Ekaterini Thanou, the defending Olympic silver medalist in the women's 100 meters. "We have two months more to finish some small things."

Troy and Justin: Going to Athens in sync

The Associated Press

ST. PETERS, Mo. — For much of our lives, Troy and Justin Dumals were brothers in name only.

Even now, they must overcome the inevitable tensions that crop up when siblings spend too much time together. Which makes this development all the more remarkable: the battling Dumals brothers are proving to be quite a team, earning a trip to the Athens Olympics in synchronized diving.

"They've always been different," their mother, Kathleen, said Thursday while sitting in the stands at the St. Peters Rec-Plex in suburban St. Louis. "But they know they need each other. Regardless of their differences, they need each other if they're going to bring home a medal."

Troy, 24, and Justin, one year older, were the first American divers to claim a spot on the Olympic team when they easily won 3-meter springboard at the trials Wednesday night.

They performed with precise coordination, scoring a perfect 10 on one dive and not faltering until their last time off the slide-by-side boards. By then, their lead was so overwhelming it didn't matter — they had enough points to win without even making their final attempt.

Coming off a Grand Prix victory in Texas last month, the Dumals brothers are sure to be one of the medal favorites at the Olympics.

"They should win a medal," said their father, Marc. "I'm just not saying which color." Both brothers readily concede their relationship has gone through plenty of rough spots. Troy displays a steely intensity, approaching every dive like it might be his last. Justin is more thoughtful, showing a willingness to conserve himself in the early rounds.

"Before college, we were competitors with the same last name," Justin said. "Brothers was a stretch." Synchronized diving has brought them closer together, but it's not a cure-all. On Thursday, after pacing third in the preliminaries on the 10-meter platform, Troy was quick to point out that Justin had botched their fourth dive.

"He missed it," Troy reported to his parents, a disapproving tone in his voice. "His mother simply smiled. 'They'll work it out,' she whispered."

IRL uses softer tracks

The Associated Press

PORT WORTH, Texas — Kenny Brack's car disintegrated as it pinwheelled through the air after crashing near the end of the IndyCar Series finale last fall.

Instead of another exciting finish at Texas Motor Speedway, it was a horrific scene filled with agonizing moments as Brack was extracted from the driver's pod — the only part of the car still intact. He survived with multiple fractures and the race ended five laps short, under caution.

"The car went airborne after being bumped at more than 200 mph. It never hit the 39-inch concrete wall, instead slamming into and destroying a 12-foot steel catchline near a section of empty bleachers."

But since that terrifying crash, more than $1.7 million in safety improvements have been made in Texas.

The biggest change was the installation of SAFER barriers, or so-called "soft walls," that are in use for the first time this weekend when the IRL returns for the Bombardier 500 on Saturday night.

"Everybody's just glad to know they're up," said Eddie Gossage, the speedway's president. "There is a lot of peace of mind it gives drivers."

The catchline was also reinforced and a new crash fence was installed atop the inside wall.

"Nobody ever thought that a car would be up there in the fences. It's good they've made those changes," Penske driver Sam Hornish Jr. said Thursday. "I think having the SAFER barrier at the track is a great addition. There's just no much better it is for the driver."

The steel tube and foam barrier is designed to help absorb the impact of crashes. Texas is the eighth track to install the system.

Troy Hines became the first driver to hit the new barrier during a qualifying run Thursday for a NASCAR trucks race Please see TRACK, Page D4

Dumars and Detroit make a nice match

The Associated Press

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — After the Detroit Pistons drafted Joe Dumars in 1985, he was picked up at the airport by the team's trainer.

Dumars, a skinny, unknown shooting guard out of McNeese State, was dropped off at a hotel in suburban Detroit and has been a fixture in the city ever since.

First, as a six-time All-Star during a 14-year career — the longest any player has been with the Pistons.

Now, Dumars is in his fourth season as the president of basketball operations in the only NBA home he's had.

Fifteen years after the MVP of the NBA Finals led Detroit over Los Angeles, Dumars has built a team good enough to face the star-studded Lakers in the NBA Finals.

Four years to the day that Dumars started running the Pistons, they stunned the Lakers with a 47-75 victory in Game 1 of the NBA Finals.

"It's the ultimate thrill for me to be able to say I played for one team and worked for one team, especially these days when nobody seems to do that," Dumars said in an interview with The Associated Press. "The only comparisons I can think of is Jerry West, who was with the Lakers for a long time as a player and executive before he went to Memphis."

Like West, Dumars was a quiet star as a player and has a low-key style as an executive. "I'm not trying to be the story, and I didn't as a player," he said.

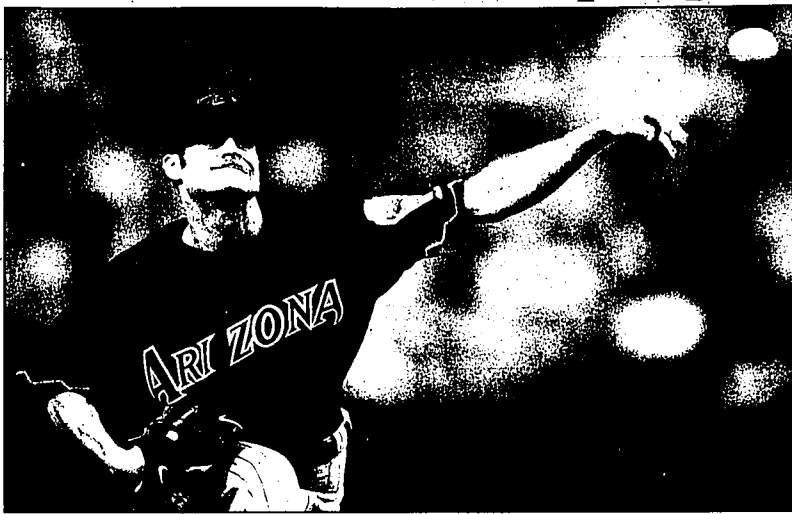

"I've always been cool with letting the results speak for themselves." The Pistons sunk to lottery-

Dumar has been criticized for some of his major moves: Hamilton for Stackhouse...

Dumar has put together a conference championship team even though only one player was in the All-Star game this year.

Rosales leads with Sorenstam close

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) — Annika Sorenstam got mad and finished with two birdies. Grace Park got a good break and then called her "round" with two bogeys. Both wrapped up chasing Jennifer Rosales, who played a steady hand Thursday with a 5-under-66 in the LPGA Championship.

Rosales, who picked up her first LPGA victory last month in Atlanta, took advantage of the par 5s and never came seriously close to a bogey at difficult DuPont Country Club to take a one-shot lead over Karen Supples, Gloria Park and Chiharu Yamaguchi.

"I hit a lot of fairways. That was the key," Rosales said. "I missed a lot of putts out there. I kept putting and putting until I made some, and kept going."

It took her to her first 18-hole lead on the LPGA Tour — at a major, no less. But the 25-year-old Filipino, who won the NCAA title as a freshman at Southern Cal, has been around long enough to know that doesn't mean much, especially with Sorenstam and Park only two shots behind at 68.

Sorenstam birdied two of her first three holes to make her presence felt quickly on a steamy day at DuPont, but she could have unraveled after chipping up the par-4 seventh, her 16th hole.

Singh leads Bulck Classic by one stroke

HARRISON, N.Y. — Vijay Singh took the pressure off his shaky putting game with solid driving and pinpoint short-iron play. Hitting it close on hole after hole, Singh shot an 18-under 63 on Thursday to take the first-round lead in the Bulck Classic, the final PGA Tour event before the U.S. Open next week at Shinnecock Hills.

Singh, seeking his third victory in the tournament, played his final nine holes — the front nine on the Westchester Country Club course — in 6-under 30 to take a one-stroke lead over Fredrik Jacobson.

David Frost, the 1992 winner on the hilly, tree-lined course, opened with a 66, and Fred Couples topped a large group at 67. There are two other bulck Classic champions coming off a victory Sunday in the Memorial, was five strokes back at 68 in a large group that included Davis Love III, David Tombs and Brad Herdington.

Irwin favors Watson while Watson picks Irwin

PARKVILLE, Mo. — Hale Irwin thinks Tom Watson is the favorite for the Champions Tour event that begins Friday at a course Watson designed.

"He knows this course better than any of us," Irwin said. "Tom will know when you might underplay a shot so you have a putt uphill. Those are things that we're still trying to pick out."

Watson, meanwhile, favors Irwin at the Bayer Advantage Invitational at the National in suburban Kansas City. "He's the man to beat. Every tournament he's in, Hale's the man to beat," Watson said. "Hale keeps himself in great shape. He hits the ball so straight that this course fits him."

"Whoever wins the tournament will likely have to shoot a low score to do it.

Steady rain on Wednesday and Thursday has left the course soggy and vulnerable.

"I haven't been out there (Thursday), but I've got to assume that it's very wet," Irwin said. "When it rains, the course plays longer, but also wider. The greens are more receptive, so the ball will stay where you put it."

Last year's winner, Jay Sigel, shot an 11-under 205. That might not be good enough this year.

Police promise extra security for Euro 2004

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — The police have cannons and 15,000 cans of pepper spray. NATO planes are patrolling the skies. Warships are guarding the coast, and border officers are carefully checking cars.

Welcome to Euro 2004. Portugal, the host nation of the European Championship starting Saturday, is assembling an unprecedented security operation for the three-week tournament to address the threat of terrorism and soccer hooliganism.

"Never in Portugal have we put so much into training and instruction," said Gen. Leonel Carvalho, the Euro 2004 security coordinator. "We are ready for everything we can be hit with."

Portugal has had no terrorist acts for 20 years and fan violence is rare at the country's soccer stadiums.

But more than 1 million fans are expected at the 16-nation tournament, the biggest international event ever in Portugal. Some of the teams are from countries that backed the U.S.-led invasion of Iraq, making them potential targets.

The terror threat, initially dismissed as unlikely at the event, became a real concern after the Madrid train bombings in March killed 191 people and injured some 1,800.

A recent police drill in a city subway focused on an unlikely — but chilling — scenario. Police were called to the subway station where dozens of other officers pretended to be rival fans involved in a brawl inside a train.

The rioting fans started shooting handguns. Then one of the fans, a Portuguese tourist, said he had a bomb, bringing police negotiators, the bomb squad and heavily armed special forces who blasted their way into the train.

Though just a drill, it was a disturbing scene for a people proud of their peaceful nature. This country of 10 million is steeling itself for the worst.

"We are not overly confident because, of course, things won't run perfectly. There'll be some violence, but we're ready for it," said Carvalho, a career army officer who in the 1960s led the Portuguese troops fighting guerrillas in the African jungle.

The Portuguese have never doubted they will have to handle drunken or rowdy fans at Euro 2004.

Problems with soccer hooliganism tarnished the last championship in 2000, jointly held in Belgium and the Netherlands, where hundreds were arrested after clashing in city streets and trashing bars and shops. Violence also tainted soccer's World Cup in Spain in 1982, in Italy in 1990 and in France in 1998.

The authorities have drawn up a strategy to contain hooliganism. The first step is keeping fans in a good mood, something they hope is accomplished by providing plenty of free entertainment in public parks.

There will also be a heavy police presence — both in uniform and in plain clothes.

Thirdly, riot police with dogs and horses, which will be kept out of sight on side streets, will move in to deal with large disturbances.

Another concern is the presence of English fans, who have a history of violence. About 50,000 are expected, many of them in the Algarve, a southern Portuguese vacation region of long beaches and late-night bars.

The British police are preventing about 2,500 known hooligans from traveling to Portugal. That compares with about 100 that were kept away from Euro 2000.

Alcohol will be banned around stadiums on game days, when up to 1,000 police will be deployed inside stadiums and 3,000 in the immediate area.

And fans will have to take alcohol and drugs tests if they misbehave.

Fans may be denied entry to stadiums if they are over the legal alcohol limit for driving.

Under special temporary laws passed by parliament, each of the eight cities hosting games will have 24-hour courts so that deportation procedures can be handled swiftly.

Authorities are organizing temporary accommodation centers and negotiating deportation services with air, rail and bus companies.

Although police say they have detected no terror cells in Portugal and have no indication an attack is being prepared, authorities fear Islamic militants in neighboring Spain could target the tournament.

To guard against that, the government has raised border controls — including passport checks and vehicle searches — that were scrapped in 1991.

Also, NATO granted Portugal's request to provide AWACS surveillance planes.

The planes are primarily used to detect suspicious aircraft and can spot low-flying planes at a range of more than 250 miles.

Navy ships are to support coast guard patrols, and port security is also being stepped up.

Haiti faces many obstacles in World Cup dream

MIAMI (AP) — Haiti's national soccer team knows plenty about overcoming obstacles. There are the daily issues, which on Thursday included being sent to the wrong hotel, having no one from Haiti's national federation organize meals or make payment arrangements, and having to scurry about at the last minute to find practice equipment.

Those hardly seem troubling compared to the real problems. Each player is owed months of back pay, the federation's friends back home are reeling from the bloody rebellion earlier this year, and often there seems to be no end in sight to the despair.

So they focus on an improbable World Cup dream, hoping success will unite their country. Haiti opens a qualifying series — purportedly one of the home-and-home variety — against Jamaica on Saturday.

The game is the only thing we have," said coach Fernando Clavijo, a former player for the United States men's national team. "Their motivation is to do well, to really bring some happiness to a country which probably will not see any happiness for many more years to come is overwhelming."

Haiti's designated "home field, Miami's Orange Bowl, is 700 miles from Port-Au-Prince, its war-torn capital city, which doesn't have a field for the team to play on. It has a fan base in Miami, home to a large Haitian community — 150,000 by official estimates.

The series shifts to Kingston, Jamaica, on June 20, with the winner of the two-game matchup advancing to a four-nation semifinal group likely to include the United States.

"In our country, the people are suffering," forward Marc Herold Gracien said. "When we think about it, that makes us more strong. We want to win for the Haitian people."

Haiti has reached the final Cup field only once (1974) and is 88th in the world rankings, 37 spots below the Reggae Boyz. Yet the Uruguayan-born Clavijo, who became Haiti's coach Oct. 15, sees constant improvement.

"At the beginning, it was a challenge. After looking at the players, it became a challenge with a purpose," said Clavijo, who earned 61 caps with the U.S. "I thought we had the material on the field to do things. Then it became an incredible challenge because of the state of the country."

He's spent thousands of dollars of his own money to cover bills the Haitian federation hasn't paid, including the lunch tab and equipment bill Thursday. "It would be crazy — justifiable perhaps — for him to cut his losses and quit.

"I didn't want to be one more of those who let these players down," Clavijo said. "I know they've been let down so many times by people walking away or lying to them. I didn't want to be one of those guys."

Playing an abundance of road matches isn't exactly a foreign concept to Haiti. Since last Aug. 31, Haiti has played nine matches — six in South Florida, one in Nicaragua, one in Guatemala and another in Houston.

Of the national team's 28 matches since April 2001, only two were played in Haiti. And it's probably no coincidence that in those 26 road matchups, the Haitians have posted a mediocre 9-10-7 record. But since 1985, when afforded the rare chance to play on home soil, Haiti has gone 16-2-6.

"We would like to play at home. Everybody would like that," said Non Jean-Baptiste, Haiti's Miami-based federation representative. "We did not have the power to change the official consensus. Our country is being rebuilt. We do not have any place to play the game. But we have a big community in Miami. We're lucky."

During a recent training camp in Cocoa Beach, Fla., the Haitians often slept four to a room and on bunk beds, sometimes not knowing where the money for the next meal would come from.

"They were persevered. They routed Turks and Caicos in the opening round of Cup qualifying in February, and are confident heading into this round.

Indianapolis Motor Speedway. "It still hurts," Herta said, "if the wall hadn't been there, and the Hans device, I have no doubt I wouldn't have been able to come back and qualify the next day."

The 1.5-mile, high-banked Texas track has become known for some of the closest finishes in IRL history and three-wild racing at more than 200 mph. The 30 inches of track taken away from the new safety walls shouldn't affect that.

didn't feel a need to be all that close. Diving has always been an individual sport, a dynamic that didn't change even with the emergence of synchro, over the past decade.

"You still have to do you thing," Troy said. "I have to do my dives, and I have to believe that when the time comes, he'll be ready. Because if you don't believe or don't trust him, then you're going to fall apart. You're going to fight and argue all the time."

As a kid, Troy used to do backflips into a friend's backyard pool. His father sent him for lessons, discovering he had a knack for the challenging sport. Soon, the entire family was diving in.

All five kids — Justin and Troy have two younger brothers and a younger sister — were steered into diving by their parents, who realized diving wasn't enough time to split their attention. The pool was 68 miles away from their southern California home. The children were given a choice: learn to dive or stay at the house.

"Our youngest son (Dwight, who is finishing up high school) really wanted to play ice hockey," Kathleen said. "But we convinced him that he needed to focus on liquid water instead of frozen water."

"That single-minded dedication paid off. The oldest four all went to college on diving scholarships, and Dwight is expected to follow the same path.

For Troy, this will be his second Olympics. He competed in two events at Sydney, finishing sixth in the springboard and fourth in the 3-meter synchro with partner David Pichler.

Justin made his first Olympic team on his last try. He will retire from diving after Athens to pursue a career in the Air Force or National Guard reserves.

It's not too concerned about going into the military while the country is embroiled in a potentially long-term war against terrorists.

Justin had to overcome a debilitating thyroid condition that struck in December, causing him to lose 15 pounds and making it difficult just getting out of bed.

The condition was initially diagnosed as Graves disease, a serious illness that also struck Dwight in the springboard. Justin and Dwight would have prevented Justin from joining the military.

But a change in diet cured the symptoms quicker than expected, so eight doctors are still trying to determine what went wrong. The illness also had an unexpected benefit, bringing the brothers closer together.

"We've had to learn to trust each other the last couple of months because I haven't been there physically," Justin said. "Finally, these brothers seem right in synch."

Friday night. Hines slammed into the wall coming out of the fourth turn. The impact severely damaged the truck, but the driver was released without needing treatment after a required trip to the infield care center.

Gossage said the safety improvements were being considered before Brack's accident. But the accident ensured the additional inside fence that protects people on the infield. "I saw Kenny's motor bouncing down the track," Gossage said. "It could have bounced over the wall and into somebody's lap."

Brack broke his back, a thigh, his breastbone and both ankles. He hopes to race this season, and got into a car for the first time Saturday during a test session at Richmond.

Texas didn't get specifications for the SAFER barrier until mid-March, so it couldn't be in place before the NASCAR Nextel Cup and Busch races at the track April 3-4.

After those races, 6,300 linear feet of the barrier was installed. It would be easy — justifiable through each turn along the front stretch and on a portion of the inside wall where several hard crashes have occurred coming out of the second turn.

Roddick reaches Queens quarterfinals

LONDON (AP) — Top-seeded Andy Roddick held off Mario Ancic 7-6 (3), 4-6, 6-4 Thursday and reached the quarterfinals of the Queen's Club tournament.

Roddick, the defending champion, was pushed to the limit in his second match on grass this summer in preparation for Wimbledon.

A crucial double fault by Ancic in the tiebreaker allowed Roddick to take the first set. Ancic came back to take the second, but Roddick's forehand winner with Ancic on the ground gave him a service break at 2-4 in the third and put him in control.

"That kind of match, you just have to stay the course and wait for an opening," Roddick said, "and had to wait a little bit today."

In other matches, former Wimbledon champion Lleyton Hewitt of Australia beat Murray of Britain 7-6 (2), 7-6 (8).

Hewitt saved five set points in the first set, then squandered two match points at 6-5 in the second. Murray led 6-7 in the tiebreaker before Hewitt won the final three points.

Prank has Utah players facing felony charges

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — What was intended as a prank in the Utah-Brigham Young rivalry has a group of Ute baseball players facing punishment much more severe than either school could dish out.

Painting red "U's" on the "Y" on the mountainside overlooking the BYU campus in Provo got the players charged with a felony. Defense attorneys are trying to get it reduced, but so far it's standing and a court hearing is scheduled for June 21.

"I'll be the first to admit we should be punished. There should have been something done," pitcher Ryan Breska said Thursday. "But a second-degree felony charge seems a little much."

Breska, a reliever who graduated last month, and seven others are charged with second-degree felony mischief, which carries a maximum sentence of up to 15 years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

Breska was arrested May 10 when he went to pick up pictures taken as the "Y" was painted April 30, the night before the Utes wrapped up a three-game series at BYU. "We did it in the hopes that it would be there for our next game on Saturday, just to add some fire to the rivalry — not that it needs much," Breska said.

The Utes saw the effort had failed when the "Y" was a crisp white again by game time the next afternoon. BYU also won 14-9, completing a three-game sweep.

Police were waiting for Breska when he went to pick up the photos and was taken to the Utah County jail, where he spent the night on the felony charge. Breska was released the next day and police called Utah coach Tim Esmay to identify the other players, who were suspended for a game and later charged.

Ryan Florence, Tyler Kmetko, Tyson Olson, Jacob Waldman and Eric Schuler, Jay Brossman and Jason Price are also charged. Schuler, a freshman pitcher, quit the team before the end of the season.

Jeff Buhman, a deputy Utah County attorney who is prosecuting the case, said the charge is a felony because the damage estimate was more than $1,000, the cutoff between a misdemeanor and felony. Pranks between the state's biggest rivals are common. Prosecuting them is not, Buhman said.

BCS will play five games at four current stadiums

Double-hosting model will start in 2006

NEW YORK (AP) — The Bowl Championship Series added a game without adding a bowl but is no closer to a playoff than before.

The BCS will play five games at the current four sites starting in the 2006 season, with the bowl that hosts the national championship game also holding an earlier postseason game.

A committee of school presidents unanimously approved the double-hosting model presented to them by the BCS conference commissioners. Oregon president Dave Frohnmayer said Thursday.

"This model is the least disruptive to current relationships between individual conferences — and the individual bowls," Frohnmayer, chairman of the Presidential Oversight Committee, said during a teleconference.

The changes follow a season in which the BCS was criticized for a system that led to co-national champions, Southern California and LSU. While the new model doesn't address the main complaints, the BCS is working on a new formula for the standings that it hopes will fix last year's problem.

Under the new model, the championship game will still rotate between the Sugar, Fiesta, Orange and Rose bowls, but it will be played about a week after the other four games. The name of the championship game has yet to be determined.

The approved model will be presented to the Rose Bowl and those who are set to begin negotiations on a television contract Friday.

By expanding the BCS is starting to give schools from smaller conferences greater access to the big payout games.

Big 12 commissioner Kevin Weiberg said the BCS looked into bringing in another bowl for the extra game.

The double-hosting model drew the support of the current BCS bowls, who were concerned they would host the championship only every five years, instead of every four.

"This is a new model that presents unique opportunities for the bowls hosting them. The feedback from our current bowl partners has been very positive towards it," said Weiberg, the incoming BCS coordinator.

Frohnmayer said the university presidents rejected the so-called plus-one model, which would have matched the top two teams after the four BCS bowls, because it would be a step toward creating a playoff system. He said there was "adamant opposition" among presidents for moving the BCS in that direction.

Both Frohnmayer and Weiberg said the BCS was looking to maintain and strengthen the traditional ties between conferences and bowls. Those ties have been loosened to help the BCS match No. 1 and No. 2, and has led to some nontraditional bowl matchups.

The Rose Bowl has been especially concerned with how its involvement with the BCS affects its long-standing relationship with the Big Ten and Pac-10 conferences. The Rose Bowl is the only BCS game with ties to two conferences.

Two years ago, Pac-10 champ USC and Big Ten co-champ Iowa played in the Orange Bowl, which rankled the Rose Bowl and left it with Pac-10 runner-up Washington State and Oklahoma of the Big 12.

While the possibility still exists that teams outside the Big Ten and Pac-10 will play in the Rose Bowl, game organizers are pleased with the change.

"It puts us back to a four-year cycle with eight potential visits by Pac-10 and Big Ten teams," said Mitch Dorgier, CEO of the Tournament of Roses.

It also creates the potential for the Rose Bowl to pit the Big Ten and Pac-10 champs one week and a national title game the next.

Sugar Bowl director Paul Hoolahan said he was supportive of the double-hosting model and wasn't troubled by the possibility of the Rose Bowl landing four marquee teams in one year.

"If that were to happen in the year that they were designated to host the national championship, so be it and more power to them," he said.

The BCS begins its television negotiations with ABC in the fall. Those talks will determine many of the details of the new-look BCS, such as sponsorship for the championship game, how the bowls set matchups and when the title game will be played.

Armstrong focuses on defending his sixth straight Tour de France title

SAINT-PAUL-TROIS-CHATEAUX, France (AP) — Lance Armstrong knows he's not riding the way he needs to win a sixth straight Tour de France. Still, there's three weeks before cycling's premier race and Armstrong is confident he'll be ready.

"I'm not pulling the fire alarm just yet," he said.

Armstrong finished an unimpressive fifth Thursday in a time trial in the Dauphine Libere race — a key mountain test before the Tour de France.

Testing a new, super-light bike, Armstrong crossed the line almost two minutes after Spain's Iban Mayo in the 13.4 mile time trial — and acknowledged he's not 100 percent just yet. "I probably expected to go a little faster," Armstrong said. "I knew Mayo would be tough. Clearly he is riding super."

But Armstrong insisted there's still a "long way" before the Tour begins July 3, and said he's not more worried about cycling's premier race any more this year than in the past.

The defending champion who comes back every year is the one who loses. "Armstrong said.

The Dauphine Libere, which Armstrong won each of the last two years, offers a good chance for riders to test out their health and mental toughness before the Tour.

'LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — Mark Martin's love of racing and cars took him away from his Arkansas hometown.

Now it's brought him back.

He opened a car dealership in Batesville, about 100 miles north-east of Little Rock, that eventually will include a racing museum and plans to build a home on the banks of the White River.

"Cars have been part of my life since I was just a kid. I mean an important part, not just a part," Martin said. "I have an enthusiasm and a passion for that that I haven't had for anything else other than racing."

With 34 career wins, Martin is tied for 17th on NASCAR's all-time victories list. He ended his 72-race losing streak last weekend by winning the MBNA 400 at Dover International Speedway, and he was 13th in the points standings heading into Sunday's race at Pocono.

Martin had wanted to open a dealership in his hometown for seven years but couldn't find time until now. So he and business partner Lance Landers bought an existing Ford dealership and spruced it up, even putting one of his race cars in the showroom.

"I had influences that were interested in me being a part of a dealership in big cities where it would stand to be more successful, a bigger draw, and I wasn't interested," Martin said. "I was only interested in the one in Batesville."

When it opened in April, some 3,000 fans waited for hours in the rain to get the racing star's autograph and snap photos of him. Winston Cup Champion Matt Kenseth and NASCAR owner Jack Roush also came to support Martin.

The community is really excited by what's going on," said Landers, who runs the dealership in Martin's absence.

"They've been really involved in helping us, anything we need."

During the next three years, Martin plans to add memora-billa from his three-decade long racing career.

"In the showroom we'll make a display of all my race car collection, all my trophies, all the great history of my career," said Martin, who drives for Roush

Stewart looks to win big again at Pocono Raceway

LONG POND, Pa. (AP) — Tony Stewart shouldn't be worried if 2004 begins to look a lot like last year, despite a problem off the racing surface that kept him from winning a week ago.

In 2003, Stewart caught at Pocono Raceway a week after piling slightly out of his stall at Dover International Speedway. That led to a penalty that wiped out what appeared to be a certain victory, and Stewart settled for fourth.

He immediately atoned for the miscue with a victory in the Pocono 500.

"We had all of the variables we needed to win," Stewart recalled. "We had good pit strategy, great pit stops and a great race car."

Last Sunday, Stewart was in control again at The Monster Mile, but missed the entrance to the pits and wound up second.

The 2002 series champion was fourth this year in the Nextel Cup standings entering Sunday's race. He trailed Dale Earnhardt Jr. by 226 points, and is hoped for only by the Pocono victory of a year ago but by consistently competitive runs on the 2.5-mile triangular layout.

"We'd been close a couple of other times at Pocono, but it seemed like late in the race other variables would creep up and we'd lose it," Stewart said. "But last year everything came together just right, and it felt good to finally finish one off."

Seven weeks later, he nearly made it a Pocono sweep, Stewart raced from 33rd to first, but on the 15th of 200 laps blew the engine in his Chevrolet.

Pocono is tough on engines because you're in the gas so long and you're shifting and you're up in that rpm range for a very, very long time," he explained. "It's definitely a place that makes the engine builders nervous."

They must make the engine last, but everything out of them. That increases the chances of a motor breaking, but without risk there is no gain.

"If you're down on power at Pocono, you're a mid-pack car at best," Stewart said.

Stewart's stiffest competition Sunday could be Ryan Newman, who lost any realistic chance of winning at Dover when he also missed the entrance to pit road.

Newman was the chief beneficiary when Stewart's engine expired last July at Pocono. Newman wound up with one of his series-leading eight victories after claiming one of 11 poles. That also set the NASCAR standard a year ago.

Not with more than a third of this season complete, neither has won Stewart. Newman is looking for his 18th career victory, Newman his 10th.

Stewart knows how the race probably will be won on the flat Pocono surface he likens to a road course. It has three distinct turns and requires drivers to shift on the track — as they do on the serpentine layouts in Sonoma, Calif., and Watkins Glen, N.Y. They are the only road courses on the NASCAR circuit.

"If there's a guy who can get all three of those corners right, then that's the guy who's going to win the race," Stewart said.

Another top candidate would be Stewart's Joe Gibbs Racing teammate, Bobby Labonte. He's a three-time Pocono winner, and in 1999 completed the most recent sweep of the two races held each summer on the mountaintop.

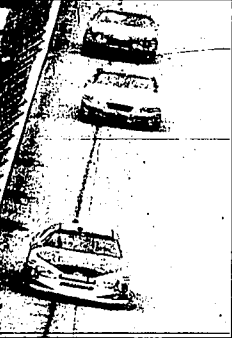

Labonte also realizes the difficulty of racing here.

"There isn't another track we race at that's quite like Pocono," he said. "The three corners are just so different."

"It's important to be open minded and get as comfortable as possible in the car knowing that in one of the corners you might be giving up a little speed in order to gain momentum on the other parts of the track."

Still, form isn't worth much at Pocono, where there have been eight different winners in the last eight races.

Jeff Gordon and Dale Jarrett also have done well at Pocono, joining Labonte as the only three-time winners here among active drivers.

NASCAR driver will moonlight in Sports Car Series

NEW YORK — NASCAR star Tony Stewart will co-drive with sports car champion Andy Wallace in the Ford Reserve 250 next month at Daytona and again in the Grand American Rolex Sports Car Series in August.

"I really feel like it will help me be a better road racer when it comes time to go to road course races with Cup this year," said Stewart, the 2002 Cup champion. "We learn so much from the guys who are professional road racers. You pick up little things here and there."

Stewart and Wallace combined with Dale Earnhardt Jr. in February at Daytona to finish fifth in the 24-hour race. Wallace is a former winner in the Le Mans 24-Hours, the Rolex 24 at Daytona and the 12 Hours of Sebring.

"I'm really looking forward to driving with Tony again in these two events," Wallace said. "Together with Dale Jr., we had a fantastic race as we battled it out for almost 24 hours at Daytona earlier this year."

Sauter will forego next three Nextel Cup races

TOO BUSY: Rookie Johnny Sauter will skip two of the next three Nextel Cup races because of conflicts with his Busch

Johnny Sauter
 Infineon Raceway in Sonoma, Calif.

He will race in the Busch events Saturday night in Nashville, Tenn., and again June 26 at the Milwaukee Mile in West Allis, Wis.

Former Cup regular Dave Blaney will sub for Sauter at Pocono. Richard Childress Racing hasn't picked a driver for the No. 30 Chevrolet for the road race in California.

Sauter is off to a slow start in his first Cup season. He is 28th in the points after 13 races and has no top 10 finishes.

Notes on the economy

Magic Valley report

Twin Falls costs

The American Chamber of Commerce Research Association compiles statistics on the relative cost of living in Twin Falls — compared with the national average for cities surveyed by the nonprofit organization.

The index is a comparison with like costs in other cities, not an absolute measure of dollars spent. ACCRA's report is based on 59 items priced in more than 300 urban areas of various sizes around the nation. Here's how Twin Falls costs looked in a recent study:

Category	Percent of national average for fourth quarter '03
Grocery items	92.0
Housing	78.3
Utilities	102.9
Transportation	111.9
Health care	93.2
Misc. goods and services	97.8
Composite index	93.0

For comparison, costs in the Boise-Nampa area clocked in at 98.3 percent of the national average, and costs in Idaho Falls at 93.7 percent of the average.

Firm gives gas bonus to workers

TWIN FALLS — Following months of rising gas prices, workers across the country are feeling a double hit — higher driving costs at home and at work.

Clark Electric Supply, which has a branch in Twin Falls and five branches elsewhere in Idaho, said it is trying to help its employees deal with the financial toll. All 775 employees of Platt received a bonus in the mail last month; now $50 bills to help offset soaring gas prices.

"We felt it was the right thing to do — our little part in helping something that none of us has control over," Chief Executive Officer Harvey Platt said. The one-time bonus totaled $38,750.

The Beaverfoot, Ore.-based electrical distributor has 74 locations in California, Idaho, Montana, Oregon, Utah and Washington.

FedEx raises outlook for quarterly profits

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — FedEx raised its fourth-quarter earnings outlook Thursday after seeing strong demand for domestic and international services.

The package delivery company with Magic Valley operations says it expects to report earnings of $1.36 per share for the fourth quarter that ended May 31. That estimate includes the costs of business realignment.

The results before the business realignment costs are estimated at $1.37 per share.

Memphis-based FedEx earlier had estimated earnings would come in between $1.20 and $1.30. Analysts surveyed by Thomson First Call had expected earnings of $1.25 a share.

Newspaper cancels one Money section

TWIN FALLS — The Times-News will cancel its Saturday Money section this weekend because of today's stock market closure.

The Money section will return to The Times-News on Sunday.

Most U.S. financial markets are closed today in observance of the national day of mourning for former President Reagan.

Agency will discuss property plan

By Megan Hinds Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls Urban Renewal Agency will discuss Monday an offer by the Department of Environmental Quality to perform an environmental assessment of land near Rock Creek off Maxwell Avenue. DEQ has offered to perform a level two assessment of the URA-owned land, which would be paid for by a government grant, said Dave McAlindin, Twin Falls' economic development director.

"It fits in with our goals of revitalizing downtown," he said. "The area is classified as a 'brownfield zone' due to its former use as industrial property," McAlindin said.

There are no plans to sell the property at this time, but an environmental quality assessment likely would be required as part of financing terms if the agency

The agency will discuss an agreement proposed by Dell, Inc. to install several surveillance cameras in a remote parking lot used by the company on Fillmore Street. The parking lot is owned by the agency.

• Equipment transfer — The agency will continue to discuss the terms of an agreement reached with the owners of Hydro Fitting Manufacturing Corp. The company will purchase several computer-numerical-controlled machines owned by the agency that are currently in use by the College of Southern Idaho's Machining Technology course.

PUBLISHING PRESSURE

Book designer Derek George, of Quincy, Mass., examines a color formula guide while designing a book jacket in his office at Massachusetts Institute of Technology's MIT Press, in Cambridge, Mass., May 18.

University presses face increasing economic problems

The Associated Press

BOSTON — The university publishing industry has long struggled to survive financially, but the announced closings of two small academic presses, this year reflect increased pressures just as publishers had begun to benefit from an improved economy.

Northeastern University has decided to close its 27-year-old press at the end of the year.

The University of Idaho is also shutting down its small press, which publishes eight to 10 titles a year. Northeastern published about 35 titles annually.

By the end of June, Idaho's press will have accumulated an estimated $385,600 deficit since 1999. A $600,000 deficit has already been forgiven.

Economics played a huge role in the university's decision to close, according to University of Idaho spokeswoman Kathy Bernard. "We're in a severe budget crunch institution-wide, and just in an effort to stop the bleeding, we made an effort to fix or close programs that were deficit spend," she said.

Those two closings represent a minority among the roughly 100 presses with a university afiliation, but the announcements were typical for the industry, said Peter Givler, executive director of the Association of American University Presses.

As academic publishing woes abated with cutbacks on spending at libraries, clipped budgets, lowered subsidies and even competition from online book stores, university presses are searching for other ways to bring in revenue.

One trend has been for large university presses to put less emphasis on the production of so-called "special titles" or "scholarship-plus," which are highly specialized books with limited appeal, and turn to the production of academic books on subjects with broader appeal.

At Harvard University Press, directors have been pushing titles that appeal to both general audiences and the academic world since the 1970s, but other institutions are also considering the option.

"If you get it right, it generates volumes of income that can help subsidize the books that are much more highly specialized and are aimed at the purely scholarly markets," said Bill Sisler, who has been the director of Harvard University Press since 1990.

Sisler estimates the press' total sales will be $25 million for the current fiscal year, which ends June 30.

In the case of Stephen Lahn's "A Nation Under Our Feet: Black Political Struggles in the South From Slavery to the Great Migration," best press published what became a Pulitzer Prize winner this year, demonstrating the scholarly publisher's crossover appeal.

At the Massachusetts Institute of Technology's MIT Press, about 20 percent to 25 percent of the titles are now marketed to a general audience, said spokeswoman Gita Manakata. She said commercial publishing houses are less inclined to sell nonfiction books that are unlikely to become best sellers, but university presses are in a better position to promote those academic books.

MIT and many other university publishers became the source of pertinent academic information for the general audience after the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11, 2001. Manakata said.

"After 9/11, people started reading university press books about the Middle East and people in the news."

"Thousands of readers bought 'Twin Towers: The Life of New York City's World Trade Center' by Angus Kress Gillespie, which was published by the Rutgers University Press."

The book debuted at No. 8 on The New York Times list of best sellers on Oct. 21, 2001, but the book was published in 1999, well before the attacks.

Rutgers sold a record 45,000 books from Sept. 11, 2001, through the end of the year, bringing in $1.2 million during that period, Rutgers University Press director Marlie Wasserman said.

"The book had been sort of moderately successful after it was published. It had done pretty well for us. But then after 9/11, there were people learning as much as they could about the World Trade Center, Michele Gisbert, Wasserman's assistant, said.

The same week "Twin Towers" debuted on the Times best seller list, Northeastern's 1999 release about the masterminds behind the 1993 World Trade Center bombings, "The New Jackals," also appeared on the list.

"After something like that happens, peoples attention really turns toward... information about topics that we didn't know enough about," she said.

Barrett and Egan appeared during this week's Ketchum City Council meeting where a public hearing to consider issues raised by the Bald Mountain Lodge application for redevelopment brought bad news for those wanting a new hotel in Ketchum.

In the past few years, several small hotels including the Christiania and the Heidelberg have closed. Barretti said he foresees a future with only Sun Valley Resort hotels operating in the area.

"We all love Ketchum but when these hotel groups are looking at projects, they decide to go into a bigger market," said Barretti. "They don't want to do a small town."

Barretti said estimated costs to erect a new hotel on the Bald Mountain Lodge property fell in the $35 million-$40 million range, making $400-a-night room rental a good scenario for return on the investment but an unlikely reality for Ketchum.

"You'd have to charge $150 a night in slack, and that's tough."

Target will focus on discount stores

Knight Ridder News Service

ST. PAUL, Minn. — When Target Corp. this week announced the tentative sale of its Marshall Field's department store chain, the Minneapolis-based retailer gained more than the prospect of reaping $3.2 billion from the deal. It took a giant stride toward being able to focus solely on its shining star, the company's Target Stores discount division.

"I don't see any drawbacks," Twin Cities retail consultant Stan Pohmer said of the tentative sale. "It will allow Target to focus on its flagship division without any distractions."

Another plus: Target will have less cluttered story for investors to follow, said Jeff Klueffler, an analyst at Piper Jaffray Cos.

chain, which includes a Twin Falls store, accounts for about 90 percent of the company's $48 billion in annual sales, far outpacing the contributions of the company's Fields and Mervyn's divisions. Both the 62-store Fields chain and the 266-store Mervyn's group have seen sliding sales and profits in the past several years, a trend that led Target Corp. in March to initiate a strategic review to possibly sell one or both divisions.

Retail pundits have contended that Target Corp. has had its hands full trying to rejuvenate both Fields and Mervyn's. Now with Fields out of its hair and Mervyn's expected soon to follow, the company can pour all of its energy into fine-tuning Target Stores so they more aggressively compete with chief rival Wal-Mart, consultants said.

"I don't expect to see a dramatic change in the Target stores," said George Whelan, president of Retail Management Consultants. Rather, the Fields' divestiture should give Target Corp. "a little more leverage on how to do things (for the discount stores) rather than spend time on a business that has not been good for a long time. It won't be a major breakthrough but the little things that will make them even stronger and better than before."

Pohmer agreed, saying that the "little things" include fine-tuning such operational aspects as distribution and other logistics. He also noted that Target Stores has unveiled a new prototype store this year that continues the chain's "cheap chic" identity but increases its floor space for food and other

H&R Block's earnings increase to $575.6 million

Knight Ridder News Service

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — H&R Block Inc. reported record-high fourth-quarter earnings that exceeded Wall Street expectations.

The Kansas City tax preparation giant with offices throughout Magic Valley said earnings for the company's fourth-quarter, which spans the peak U.S. income tax filing season, increased more than 16 percent to $575.6 million, or $3.23 a share. Quarterly revenue reached a record $2.2 billion. Those results compare with earnings of $494.6 million, or $2.71 a share, on $1.9 billion in revenues in the comparable quarter last year.

Wall Street analysts had calculated that H&R Block's fourth-quarter profits would be about $3.16 a share on $2.14 billion in sales.

Block also reported a record profit of $697.9 million, or $3.95 a share, for its fiscal year that ended April—30.

Revenues reached $4.2 billion for the year. The company earned $580.1 million, or $3.15 a share, on $3.7 billion in revenues in fiscal 2003.

Stocks edge higher on jobs picture

NEW YORK (AP) — A steady unemployment picture boosted Wall Street's confidence in the economy Thursday, lifting stocks moderately higher and giving the major indexes a gain for the shortened trading week.

Even though the Labor Department reported a slight rise in first-time jobless claims, the market wasn't alarmed, given that claims are still far lower than a year ago.

The Dow Jones Industrial Average gained 41.66, or 0.4 percent, to 10,410.10. The Standard & Poor's 500 index was up 5.14, or 0.4 percent, at 1,136.47, and the Nasdaq composite index gained 9.26, or 0.5 percent, to 1,999.87.

Broader stock indicators also closed higher. The Russell 2000 index was up 5.14, or 0.4 percent, at 1,136.47, and the Nasdaq composite index gained 9.26, or 0.5 percent, to 1,999.87.

All three indexes ended the day with a slight gain. The Dow Jones Industrial Average gained 41.66, or 0.4 percent, to 10,410.10.

Target Corp. is coming full circle from the time the company was known as Dayton Hudson. From its roots as a department store retailer, the company ventured into the discount end of the retail spectrum when it opened its first Target Store in 1961; then it bought Mercurys in the late 1970s to gain a foothold in retail's mid-price market.

Pohmer noted that for a while, Target Stores reaped synergies from Fields, giving the discount chain cash flow for expansion and access to upscale fashion trends and designers from such places as Paris.

Target would go offshore to look for low-priced knock-offs, he said.

But in recent years, Target has established its own merchandise and stable enough to easily attract the kind of equity market strategists for Ryan, Beck & Co. "You've got a very strong set of economic data out there, earnings are good. It's a good picture all around."

However, trading was sluggish and volume was light in advance of the three-day weekend. The markets were to be closed Friday in observance of the national day of mourning for former President Reagan.

What used to take the parent company three separate retail chains — Target, Fields, Mercurys and Target Stores — now being all done within the Target company, Pohmer said. He said that Target has captured upscale shoppers with trendy, exclusive clothing. The move is the same time reaching down to more price-conscious shoppers by matching low-price leader Wal-Mart on thousands of identical food and consumable items in similar geographic markets.

Target is in position to draw from the low and high end better than any other discountier," Pohmer asserted.

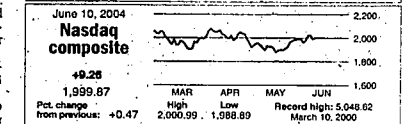

Despite being able to concentrate on the discount chain, Target Corp. isn't expected to accelerate its growth.

Last month, Chief executive officer Bob Ulrich insisted that his company has not been held back growing the Target Stores chain because of the softening retail market.

"Target is not capital constrained," Ulrich said in a media session after the annual meeting.

Ulrich added he's adding 10 to 15 percent net new square footage per year for the Target chain.

We don't see that changing," Ulrich added. "We have the ability to double our number of stores and triple our square footage in the next 10 years" in the United States.

The S&P 500 gained 1.2 percent — the third straight week of gains for both.

The Nasdaq reversed last week's slide, closing the week up 1.1 percent.

The Labor Department said there were 352,000 first-time unemployment claims last week, up 12,000 from the week before but down from 424,000 in the same week a year ago.

Martha Stewart seeks new trial due to witness

NEW YORK (AP) — Martha Stewart asked a judge Thursday for a new trial, citing allegations that a Secret Service ink expert who testified against her lied repeatedly on the stand.

The request, considered a long shot by legal experts, came four weeks before Stewart and former stockbroker Peter Bacanovic are to be sentenced for lying about a well-timed stock sale by the celebrity-homemaker in 2001.

"She argued that her conviction was tainted by perjury charges brought recently against Larry Stewart, a Secret Service laboratory director who was called as an expert witness at her trial in February."

Prosecutors say Larry Stewart lied on the stand about the role he played in ink-analysis tests conducted on a worksheet prepared by Bacanovic.

In court papers, Martha Stewart's lawyers called Larry Stewart's testimony "material scientific corroboration based primarily on circumstantial evidence."

A Word From The President ...
Welcome to the 2004 Parade of Homes!

This year's Parade of Homes is a showcase of the talent and creativity of our members and demonstrates the essence of the purpose of our organization. If you are interested in building a new home, remodeling or redecorating your existing home, the Parade of Homes is a live with ideas and styles to fit any budget. The builder or their representative, staffs each home and they are available to answer your questions and explain the features of the home.

On behalf of all the members of the Association, I want to express our appreciation to the Parade of Homes committee for bringing together all the elements of a successful show; Wills Toyota for providing luxurious transportation for our panel of judges; Ken Triplett for putting together the judging committee; and Cyndie Woods, our Executive Director for her assistance and dedication throughout the year.

Enjoy the Parade!

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

Bobby Wolf

"The probability of learning something unusual from a newspaper is far greater than that of experiencing it." — Robert Mstisl.

The finals of the 1999 U.S. Trials between Wolfson and Team Goldman featured an unusual play of the trump suit on today's deal.

The auctions, ending at two hearts, were identical at both tables, and both Wests led a club. At one table the declarer for Wolfson won the third club and tried a heart to the jack and ace. West carefully cashed the spade ace and then played a fourth round of clubs. East ruffing with the heart queen. That established two more trump tricks for the defense and ensured the defeat of the contract.

At the other table, the defense cashed their three black-suit winners and then played the third club. At this point South, Peter Weichsel (having already seen East promote both top clubs), decided that East could not have both top heart honors, or he would have bid. Accordingly, leading a heart to the jack would lose out to the trump promotion we saw in the other room.

The one chance to make the hand was that East had the heart queen and at least the heart nine or 10. So at trick five Weichsel played the heart four, from dummy and let it ride to West's 10! Now although West could lead a club, East could not ruff in to create a trump promotion for West, and the defense was finished.

This was only a small swing for the Goldman Team — but that did not in any way detract from the elegance of the play.
