Panel moots Bush claims

Commission finds no cooperation between Iraq, Al-Qaida

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The September 11 commission reported Wednesday that it had found no "collaborative relationship" between Iraq and al-Qaida, challenging one of the Bush administration's main justifications for the war in Iraq.

Along with the claim that Saddam Hussein was stockpiling weapons of mass destruction, President Bush, Vice President Dick Cheney and other top administration officials often asserted that there were extensive ties between Saddam's government and Osama bin Laden's terrorist network earlier this year. Cheney said evidence of a link was "overwhelming."

But the report of the commission's staff, based on its access to all relevant classified information, found that there had been contacts between Iraq and al-Qaida but no cooperation. In Wednesday's commission hearing, a senior FBI official and senior CIA analyst concurred with the finding.

The staff report said bin Laden "explored possible cooperation with the finding."

Store spat spills into fireworks fund raising

By Julie Pence Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — This is a story about some people who got their feelings hurt and decided to fight back.

It all started when a group of neighbors on Falls Avenue East learned three months ago of a large convenience store with a gas station and a drive-up window proposed for their neighborhood. They organized to block it and succeeded. After some emotional city meetings, they convinced the four members of the City Council to override the other three members' desire to allow the business.

During the process, the businessman who proposed the store, Dan Willie, became discouraged that the significant commerce he adds to the city seemed to go unnoticed. And his feelings were hurt because the neighbors seemed to dis-

Groundwater users make the switch to canals

By Jennifer Sandmann Times-News writer

JEROME — Finding ways to stretch southern Idaho's limited water supply has made converts out of some farmers.

They are turning off deep wells and instead pumping canal water through their sprinkler systems.

Irrigation systems for about 9,000 Nordside acres will have been retrofitted by the end of the year to accommodate canal water. It's an attempt to reduce demand on groundwater and allow more of it to reach declining springs at the Snake River's edge.

About 4,300 acres already were converted going into the irrigation season. Another 4,700 acres were pledged this year in a state agreement to avoid shut-

INSPIRATIONAL SPUDS

Art show depicts potatoes in all their dirt and glory

By Virginia S. Hutchins Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — When Buhl artist Rosi Eckert and her husband visit their house in Mexico, they take a box of Idaho potatoes, and their friends line up for a share of the big spuds.

After all, Idaho's license plates don't lie. The theme of a new Magic Valley Arts Council show, "Potatoes Are Our Life," might be a bit of an overstatement. But famous potatoes certainly are our reputation.

In artist Jason P. Hicks' wanderings, he said, he's heard people say that Idahoans are potato-heads with no appreciation for the arts. So his art show entry dubbed "Dancing Spud Family" makes light of that with a trio of tubers dressed in minimalist dancing attire, meant to convey that they state has plenty of love for the performing arts.

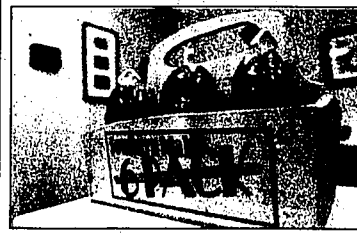

"Our international reputation is that we grow potatoes. So it's just playing light and not taking that so serious," Hicks said. "As an Idahoan, I take it with a lot of pride that that's what we do in Idaho and that's what we're known for and that's our local piece."

Eleven artists entered 19 pieces in "Potatoes Are Our Life," the Magic Valley Arts Council's second in a series of cantonal-themed shows this year. (That total excludes the guest book's paperweight, a rock with a remarkable similarity to a spud.) The show opens Friday in the arts council's Galeria Pequeña downtown, with an opening open-house. Chris Bolton's artwork, for instance, includes a wooden crate of spuds taters.

Participating artists are Chris Bolton, Judy Widener, Janie Mack-Goochcoche, Ingrid Strope, Rosi Eckert, Dick Morris, Lick Brown, Darren Peterson, Jason Hicks, Stacy Madison and Neva Edwards.

Admission to the Galeria Pequeña is always free, and the public is invited.

Huffman did not give a home address to booking officers. They listed his place of residence as "none fixed," Holladay said.

The suspect in those incidents did not display a note or weapon, police said.

Holladay said a man with the same name who matches the Boise man's description turned himself in on a fugitive warrant on Feb. 16, 2003.

Huffman is also suspected of robbing a Washington Mutual Bank inside a Fred Meyer store in Meridian on June 11, Twin Falls police say.

Water

Continued from A1. It's expensive to pump groundwater from a depth of several hundred feet. The farm hopes for $15,000 to $20,000 in annual power cost savings by shutting down the wells, Bingham said.

Otherwise farm operations haven't changed on the acreage already converted. The state is leasing 40,000 acre feet of reservoir water to channel through the canals for the conversion acreage.

The project's total cost was about $120,000, he said. Half of that was paid by a cost-sharing program through the Natural Resources Conservation Service and a state grant made available by the water agreement.

The North Snake Ground Water District has decided not to encourage more conversion projects without an assured source of water for them, Lynn Carquist, the district's vice president told a state committee in Burley Wednesday.

Iraqis flex political muscles

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — With two weeks to go until sovereignty, Iraqis already are running more than half the government's ministries, making key decisions, setting policy and managing their own budgets without direction from the U.S.-led coalition.

As of this week, Iraqis are in full control of 15 of the 26 ministries — including the key departments of oil, foreign affairs, health, education, public works and municipalities, and transportation — even before the June 30 transfer of sovereignty, coalition officials say.

Over the next two weeks, the remaining ministries will assume full powers in such critical fields as defense, communications, electricity and finance.

At the same time, Iraq's new leaders are beginning to assert their independence, taking public stands different from their American backers on issues including the fate of Saddam Hussein, security and control over key public property.

Lieberman links Iraq, al-Qaida

The Hartford Courant

WASHINGTON — Sen. Joe Lieberman on Wednesday said there are important ties between Iraq and al-Qaida, even as the commission investigating the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks found there was "no credible evidence" linking the two.

The Connecticut Democrat offered a different view, telling a Washington audience that the war in Iraq was a fight "against the emergence of a new evil empire, a radical Islamic caliphate, which would suppress the freedom of its people and threaten the security of every other nation's citizens."

The leading foe in that fight, he said, is Osama bin Laden, the architect of the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks. "The views and ideas which we cherish and which the denunciations are on the line in the Iraq war," he said.

Lieberman spoke to the Foundation for the Defense of Democracies, a Washington research group, and his listeners included American war backers and key Iraqi diplomats and government officials.

The senator has long been close to his country's top lawmakers and Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., sponsored the Iraq Liberation Act, which helped provide millions of dollars to Saddam Hussein's foes.

The U.S.-announced leader of that movement was Ahmad Chalabi, recently accused of passing sensitive intelligence to Iran. Chalabi also was a leading voice after Sept. 11 in convincing the Bush administration that the Iraq war was an important way of fighting terrorism.

Lieberman said Wednesday he was not about to abandon his old friend.

"I'm awaiting the result of the investigation. This is a serious charge," the senator said.

But, he added, he had found Chalabi and his associates to be "patriotic Iraqis. Their counsel to us was important," Lieberman praised Chalabi for giving the U.S. crucial information.

Bush: Iraq violence will increase

Los Angeles Times

MacDILL AIR FORCE BASE, Fla. — At one of the nerve centers of the U.S.-led global campaign against terrorism, President Bush paid tribute Wednesday to the sacrifices made by American troops in Iraq and Afghanistan and warned of more violence as an interim government prepares to take power in Baghdad.

"We can expect more attacks in the coming weeks, more car bombs, more suicides, more attempts on the lives of Iraqi officials," Bush said in a speech here at the headquarters of U.S. Central Command. "But our coalition is standing firm. New Iraq's leaders are not intimidated. I will not yield, and neither will the leaders of Iraq."

Bush added: "We will not let thugs and killers stand in the way of a free and democratic Iraq."

to Iraqis on June 30, though the end of the U.S. military presence in the country is nowhere in sight.

Bush spoke at the midpoint of a routinely deadly week of bombings and other armed assaults in Iraq. He was heard in person by thousands of troops and their families who gathered in a humid hangar at MacDill, many fanning themselves and chugging bottled water, and by U.S. military personnel worldwide who tuned into live coverage on Armed Forces radio and television.

Bush's stop at the headquarters of the command known as Centcom was his first since the outset of the Iraq war in March 2003. Centcom oversees military operations in a region spanning two dozen nations in the Middle East and southern and central Asia, including Afghanistan and Iraq.

"The men and women of Centcom have liberated two nations and have rescued more than 50 million people from tyranny," Bush said in his 35-minute speech.

Bush acknowledged that two concurrent wars have heavily stretched the all-volunteer military. About 138,000 U.S. troops are in Iraq and 18,000 in Afghanistan, many in both regions are reservists called to active duty. In addition, the Pentagon is extending tours of duty for many personnel.

"Many of you have faced long deployments — sometimes twice — and you've expected," Bush told the troops. "You miss your families. Your families miss you."

Afterward, Bush met privately with the families of 10 service members killed in the Iraq and Afghanistan campaigns.

is "clear evidence that Iraq was supporting al-Qaida has been found."

As recently as Monday, Cheney said in a speech that Saddam had "long-established ties with al-Qaida." Bush asked on Tuesday to verify or qualify that claim, defended it by pointing to Abu Musab al-Zarqawi, who has taken credit for a wave of attacks in Iraq.

Bush's Democratic challenger, John Kerry, sought to profit from the commission findings. "The administration misled America and the administration reached too far," Kerry told Michigan Public Radio. "I believe that the 9-11 report, the early evidence, is that they're going to indicate that we didn't have the kind of terrorists links that this administration was asserting. I think that's a very, very serious finding."

A Bush campaign spokesman countered that Kerry himself has said Saddam "supported and harbored terrorist groups." And Cheney's spokesman pointed to a 2002 letter written by CIA director George Tenet stating that "we have solid reporting of senior level contacts between Iraq and al-Qa'eda going back a decade" and "credible information indicates that Iraq and al-Qa'ida have discussed safe haven and reciprocal non-aggression." Cheney's office also pointed to a Tenet statement from 2003 calling Zarqawi "a senior al-Qa'ida terrorist associate."

Comp claims could cost U.S. millions

WASHINGTON (AP) — The mounting deaths and injuries to civilian contractors in Iraq could cost the federal government millions of dollars for hundreds of workers' compensation claims.

Federal law requires all U.S. government contractors and subcontractors to obtain workers' compensation insurance for civilian employees who work overseas. If an injury or death claim is related to a "war-risk hazard," the War Hazards Compensation Act provides for government reimbursement to insurance carriers.

Nearly half the 771 injury claims filed by U.S. contractors so far this year occurred in Iraq — 345. Of the 66 deaths reported as of last week, all but nine occurred in Iraq, according to the Labor Department, which handles the reporting of claims and reimbursements.

Since January 2003, there have been claims for 476 injuries and 80 deaths in Iraq. Casualties are rising. A convoy of contractors was ambushed Tuesday in Baghdad. Two people were killed and three were injured when shots were fired from a highway overpass. Among the most gruesome deaths were four civilian security personnel who were killed March 31 in Fallujah, their bodies mutilated and burned. The remains of two were hung from a bridge.

"The security situation is virtually unprecedented," said Bob Hartwig, chief economist with the insurance information industry group. "You've got the potential to be kidnapped, shot or killed, to be tortured, shot at, blown up."

Insurgents strike at heart of Iraq's oil industry

Rocket attack kills two U.S. soldiers

BAGHDAD, Iraq — Insurgents struck at the heart of Iraq's economic livelihood Wednesday, blasting a major pipeline to halt vital oil exports and killing the top security chief for the northern oilfields.

A rocket slammed into a U.S. logistics base near Balad, 50 miles north of Baghdad, killing three U.S. soldiers and wounding 25 other people, including two civilians.

New draft at IAEA retains tough language on Iran

VIENNA, Austria — Europe's three major powers shrugged off Iranian threats of retaliation Wednesday and put the final touches on a tough resolution rebuking Tehran for continued nuclear cover-ups.

The new draft seen by The Associated Press retained strong language designed to maintain pressure on Iran a year after the International Atomic Energy Agency began to probe nearly two decades of its suspect nuclear program.

Protesters cut power to French presidential palace

PARIS — French power workers cut electricity to President Jacques Chirac's official residence Wednesday in the latest in a series of "targeted outages" to protest government plans for the partial privatization of state utilities.

Electricity was cut to the Elysee Palace, the neighboring Interior Ministry and the famous Champs-Elysees avenue for about 15 minutes on Wednesday afternoon.

The CGT trade union, which is leading the protest, said the cuts were part of its campaign of "targeted outages of short duration" in an attempt to force the government drop its plan.

Joyce fans celebrate fictional 100th anniversary of 'Ulysses'

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — With straw hats, bonnets and lace-trimmed dresses — but barely a mutton kidney in sight — thousands of James Joyce fans on Wednesday immersed themselves in the fictional 100th anniversary of "Ulysses."

Actor Dermot Lynskey, dressed as James Joyce, in Dublin, Ireland, on Wednesday, takes part in 'Bloomsday,' the 100th anniversary commemoration of the day on which Joyce set 'Ulysses,' the fictional Journey of Leopold Bloom.

"Bloomsday" festivities commemorating the one-day wandering of Leopold Bloom into every nook and cranny of a long-lost Dublin on June 16, 1904, have grown each year. The current "Ulysses Dublin" festival featured more than 80 exhibits and events across the capital devoted to Joyce and his masterpiece.

"None was more traditional than Wednesday's breakfast at the James Joyce Center, a Georgian town house in the shadow of the writer's Jesuit-run alma mater, Belvedere College.

"I've brought my best walking shoes. I'm going to cover the whole route Bloom did — unless the pubs stop me," said Stephen Hammond, a visitor from England who set off with a map of Dublin annotated with "Ulysses" landmarks. On an unusually warm and blizzingly sunny day, hundreds of tourists in T-shirts and shorts stood in the street alongside aficionados sweating in heavy Edwardian costumes, waiting their turn for breakfast. Inside, an elite crowd — among them President Mary McAleese — dined in the shade.

Some families don't want to publicize incarceration

DEAR ABBY: I am a male, reformed from a major West Coast law enforcement agency. I generally agree with your advice, but I have a mega-problem with your answer to "Needs an Answer," the lady whose hubby, "Cliff" is incarcerated. She asked what to say when people she meets ask where her husband is.

DEAR ABBY Jeanne Phillips

You advised her to tell people they are having a "trial separation." Sorry, Abby, but a lie is a lie no matter how you package it. You should have told the lady to tell the truth.

- BLOWN AWAY IN MAUI

DEAR BLOWN AWAY: The fact that a relative is in prison isn't something that some families want to publicize. While many are open about the fact that a family member is incarcerated - and it is probably healthier to be up-front about it - not all are willing to be read on.

DEAR ABBY: "Needs to Know's" children must be able to talk about their father and be proud of him without worrying about what other people think. Their mother should set the tone for this. What is important is their relationship with their father, not what the neighbors think. Keeping secrets and behaving as though their dad is someone to be ashamed of will only hurt her boys in the long run.

That woman needs to forget what everyone else may think, and say and do whatever is the most healing for her children. A family therapist may be able to help the family navigate through their discomfort and allow the boys to feel good about him - regardless of the reason he is in jail.

- DEALT WITH IT IN DELAWARE

DEAR DEALT WITH IT: Your suggestion of a family therapist is a good one. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: My son, "Rod," is also in prison, and I, too, often feel uncomfortable revealing his whereabouts. I usually say he's an optician living in Southern California. (He is, having received his certificate while in prison.)

When I confide in a close friend or colleague where he actually is, people are usually understanding (and curious). But I've never experienced any criticism or negativity. After almost 10 years, it still hurts to talk about it. But knowing my son has made progress in his rehabilitation helps to ease the pain.

- JOAN IN LOS ANGELES

DEAR JOAN: Your son was wise to make the most of the time he has spent in prison. Read on:

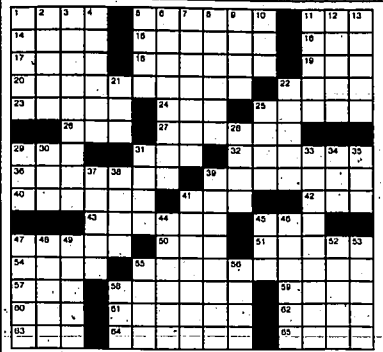

DEAR ABBY: My husband is serving 15 years to life. Although shame and guilt are normal reactions, they can be harmful to the family of an inmate. The isolation that comes from living in the long run, we tried it.

A better approach is to be honest, reach out to people and admit how painful it is. Once we did, we found that many other families in our area also have a loved one behind bars. The ridicule and scorn we expected never happened. Instead we were supported and encouraged.

- DIANE IN AUBURNDALE, FLA.

DEAR DIANE: I agree that living a lie is unhealthy. Thank you for sharing your personal experience. There are ministries and programs whose mission is to help the families of prisoners. One which has been mentioned in this column before is the Osborne Association, which offers a list of resources online at www.osborne.org. L.M. BOYD

A. Elephants dissipate heat. Asian elephants live mostly in relatively cool shady forests. African elephants in hotter prairie areas with less seclusion.

Q. Use of playing cards for money by the French in colonial Canada was exactly what you'd call an emergency measure. It went on for 70 years.

Q. Who's the patron saint of dentists, if such there be?

A. Apollonia. A statue of her stands in the art museum at Ponce, Puerto Rico. In the statue's right hand is a pair of pliers and an enormous molar.

Q. One of the largest U.S. cities was once called Yanaguana. You may not know which city unless you live in San Antonio.

Q. How many inches does the average woman add to her bustline from age 25 to age 50?

A. Four inches. From 34.2 to 38.2. How many inches a man adds to his chest measurement is not in the inequitable records at hand. Will check further.

Involve public in plans for library expansion

Common courtesy says you keep quiet in a library. But if Twin Falls Public Library officials want to make a compelling case for future library expansion, now's the time to raise the volume.

A library expansion project calls for an amplified public discussion.

Whether Twin Falls residents want a bigger library, and if so, what they want from it. Members of Twin Falls Public Library Board this week successfully lobbied the City Council to start planning for library expansion.

The council OK'd buying land next to the library for $75,000. The board says expansion would not occur for a few more years, but its plan is already in the works. The library would add about 24,000 square feet, with 8,000 feet on each of three floors.

Voters last approved a library expansion in 1989. They approved a $2 million bond issue that paid for an additional 21,000 square feet. If taxpayers are going to be asked to pay once again, library and city officials need to use the same model of public participation that went into the last project.

Back then, there was a right way — and a wrong way — to campaign for taxpayer support. Just the previous year, College of Southern Idaho officials had tried to pass a $7 million expansion plan.

But they made the mistake of giving voters too little time to think about and discuss the college's needs. Voters rejected the proposal overwhelmingly.

Having learned from CSI's mistake, library officials took considerably more time. They spent a year crafting a mission statement to guide library planning.

They publicized the library's needs and asked for community opinions. They built a broad base of support over time.

In the end, 71 percent of Twin Falls voters approved the plan.

Our view: Public discussion of library expansion should follow the same path taken 15 years ago.

What do you think? We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

found in a library 15 years ago is now accessible from a PC at home.

As Internet use continues to expand and gain speed, many bookworms will be able to skip the library altogether.

Regardless of those possibilities, a library with abundant resources is still a significant asset to this community.

As a newspaper that prospers on readers' demand for published material, we see the public need for libraries continuing as well.

What city and library officials must do is articulate that need to city residents and taxpayers.

Which parts of the library need more space? How would an addition be used? How would computer technology be used in synergy with existing reference and research material at the library?

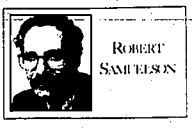

What programs and services do taxpayers want from the library of the future? Library officials effectively involved the community in answering expansion questions 15 years ago.

Logic says they can, and should, take the same approach this time around.

Natural gas crisis dwarfs that of oil

American energy policy is nothing if not shortsighted and self-indulgent.

By the early 1970s, it was clear that we faced a long-term oil problem because (a) the country inevitably depended on imports and (b) two-thirds of global oil reserves lay in the Middle East — where politics and instability made a catastrophic loss of supplies a permanent danger.

ROBERT SAMUELSON

What did we do? Well, Congress took some sensible steps in the 1970s. It created gasoline efficiency standards for vehicles and a Strategic Petroleum Reserve. But low oil prices in the 1980s and 1990s led to backsliding.

The SPR wasn't adequately expanded, and drivers flopped to SUVs, which are governed by less stringent fuel mileage standards. Americans preferred cheap gasoline to long-term prudence.

When oil prices hovered around $40 a barrel, pundits screamed for an energy tax (a policy I've long advocated).

Although that's desirable, it won't bring much immediate benefit, because there are more than 230 million vehicles on the road.

Any shift toward fuel efficiency will take time. A smart energy policy operates over years and decades, not weeks and months.

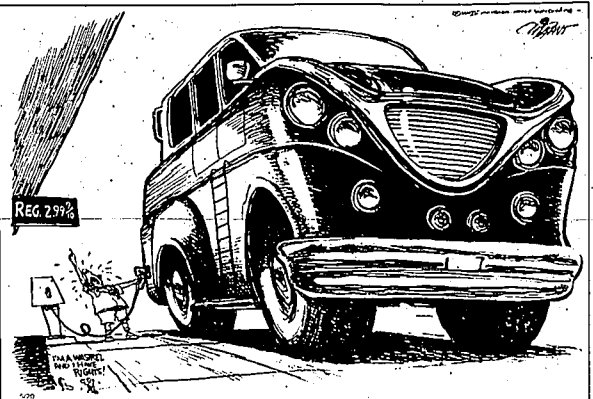

The question that we ought to be asking — and aren't — is whether we're similarly blundering with natural gas. Given our history, that seems a good bet.

Natural gas is the heating fuel of about half of U.S. homes. Since 1993, it has been the fuel used for almost 90 percent of new electric generation.

It is also a major fuel for manufacturers and for heating office buildings. The trouble is that we're no longer self-sufficient in natural gas — and our import dependence will grow.

In 2003, Americans used about 22 trillion cubic feet of natural gas, up from 19 trillion in 1990.

By 2025, consumption will

In the 1990s, wellhead prices (the price where the gas leaves the ground) averaged about $2 per thousand cubic feet; in 2003, they averaged almost $5.

reach at least 29¢ per cubic foot, projects the Energy Information Administration.

If we don't import more or expand domestic production — or both — those projections won't come true. Prices will rise, choking demand; or shortages will occur.

Some factories that need gas will move to countries with more reliable supplies. Already, prices have risen.

In the 1990s, wellhead prices (the price where the gas leaves the ground) averaged about $2 per thousand cubic feet; in 2003, they averaged almost $5.

Bill and I've Canada has supplied most of America's needed imports (a sixth of consumption in 2003) via pipelines. But Canada may not have enough gas to sell increasing amounts to the United States. On paper, the solution is to import liquefied natural gas. Plenty of gas exists worldwide, much of it outside the Persian Gulf, for conversion into LNG.

Four U.S. terminals already exist to import LNG. At least 35 others have been proposed. Says Chris McGill of the American Gas Association: "The question is whether enough will ever get built."

The hallmark of American energy policy is a steadfast refusal to confront choices.

On oil, Americans want low prices and secure supplies, which are inconsistent. The lower the price, the less reason to buy fuel-efficient vehicles.

The more oil we use, the more we import — and the greater our vulnerability to a catastrophe or loss of access.

Fortunately, that hasn't happened yet. Still, people must now realize that many dangers (terrorism, war, revolution, political extortion) could trigger a huge — and tragic — loss of Middle East oil for which we are utterly unprepared.

A similar urgency afflicts natural gas policy. It's a favored fuel. For electricity generation, it's cleaner than coal and less fearsome than nuclear.

We also restrict drilling: waters off the East and West coasts are prohibited; so are parts of the Gulf of Mexico; producers complain about approval delays in Rocky Mountain states.

New drilling remains essential because production from existing wells drops more than 25 percent annually.

There's also intense local opposition to some proposed LNG terminals.

It's based heavily on exaggerated safety fears. The LNG will not explode, and vaporizing gas will burn under only limited conditions.

The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission claims that over the past 40 years there have been 33,000 LNG tanker trips without a serious accident.

Can proposed LNG terminals overcome local resistance? The FEIC contends that it — and not state and local agencies — has exclusive authority to approve; but that's unclear.

The courts or Congress will have to settle the issue. The more agencies involved, the harder approvals will be.

A country that stimulates demand and restricts supply could resolve the conundrum. It could relax drilling restrictions and encourage imports. Or it could suppress energy use by tax policies that raise fuel prices and discourage large homes.

But Americans like none of these choices. So Congress waffles. If natural gas scarcities someday emerge, people will ask, who did this to us? And the answer will be: we did.

Bush's message still hasn't been delivered

On Monday, Vice President Cheney went to Florida, where he reasserted there were "long established ties" between Saddam Hussein and al-Qaeda.

Tuesday, during a Rose Garden news conference with Afghan President Hamid Karzai, a reporter invited President Bush to dissociate himself from this crime against conventional wisdom.

As you know, this is disputed within the U.S. intelligence community," the reporter said. "What do you add any qualifiers? What do you think is the best evidence of it?"

An answered look came over the president's face. It was hoarse in the midday Washington sun. Poor bald Karzai was standing there without his lambskin hat, sweating.

Bush was hot, too, and hungry; he had already snatched lunch. "Zarqawi," he snapped at the questioner. "It's the one whose still killing."

Abu Musab al-Zarqawi, the current jihad commander in Iraq, lived in Baghdad before Saddam's overthrow.

No foreigners — certainly no notorious international Islamic terrorist foreigners — lived in the Iraq capital without connections to Saddam and his regime. Bush would like the country to take this as prima facie evidence of the Saddam-Osama bin Laden relationship. But it won't. The president hasn't made the case. Partly, this is the press corps' fault.

As a recent Pew study revealed, journalists who work for elite national organizations are almost entirely liberal or moderate.

Most won't vote for Bush. Many won't see him lose. The idea that Bush invaded Iraq under false pretenses — and that Saddam had nothing to do with bin Laden — is an integral part of the case against the president.

Nothing less than a videotape of Saddam being inducted into al-Qaeda would constitute the sort of proof the press is now demanding.

But Bush has mostly himself to blame for the public's skepticism. He craved it by not telling the truth about why the United States went after Saddam.

This is what he should have said after 9/11: "The Arab world has declared war on us.

Before this election is over, he'll have to name the real enemy — Islamic fascism — or wind up looking like a man who went to war by mistake.

For decades, a great anti-African front has been building from North Africa to the Persian Gulf.

The Saudi royal family and its Wahabi missionaries belong to this front.

So do the ayatollahs of Iran and their Lebanese surrogates, Islamic and Palestinian terrorist groups and Baathist dictators like the Assads of Syria — and Saddam Hussein.

Some of these enemies are Shiite; some Sunni. Some are secular, some Wahabi. These are meaningful distinctions. The anti-American forces in the Arab world know one another and cooperate in shifting alliances.

"Our job now is to end this jihad by knocking the wind out of it. We could start in a lot of places, but Iraq — the heart of the Arab world — seems most effective."

Everyone in the Middle East knows that this is war and that Saddam is engaged in it. Knocking him off will demonstrate the danger of being on the wrong side.

This is the real reason that Bush went into Iraq. But he didn't say so.

It would have sounded too harsh in America's politically correct climate. Worse, such frankness would have offended the Saudis.

Bush chose a different approach. He declared war on terrorism.

It was being intentionally ambiguous — and now his political rivals have turned that ambiguity against him.

The president would like to incense "Zarqawi" and blame the case on Saddam. But it won't work. Before this election is over, he'll have to name the real enemy — Islamic fascism — or wind up looking like a man who went to war by mistake.

Idaho senators favor politics over cleanup

Reference to Sen. Larry Craig's and Sen. Mike Crapo's recent votes allowing change in the criteria for the removal of nuclear waste at the Savannah River site in the state of South Carolina.

Idaho officials indicate the near certainty this move will change the rules for removal of nuclear waste from the state of Idaho.

As a former member of the advisory board for the Idaho National Engineering and Environmental Laboratory, I am appalled and chagrined.

As a citizen of the state of Idaho who has lived in the area of the state which depends on the Snake River and the Snake River Aquifer for survival, I am said. As a current resident on the banks of the Snake River, I am furious.

Apparently, if you are not running for election (Sen. Crapo) or are opposed for election (Sen. Crapo), the party line is much more important than your state.

The health, welfare and future well-being of your constituents can be ignored. DR. DEAN MAHONEY

The wealth of Indian nations

It is said that a rising tide raises all boats, but that has not been true for American Indians. Despite recent growth partly due to gambling, per-capita income for Indians living on reservations in 1999 was $7,846 compared to a U.S. average of $27,880. This puts reservation Indians on par with citizens in developing countries.

Why does this bastion of poverty persist in a sea of wealth? One hypothesis is that Indian cultures are inimical to capitalism, but this is not supported by the facts. Supposedly Chief Seattle said in the 1850s: "How can you buy or sell the sky, the warmth of the land... Every part of the Earth is sacred to my people."

Never mind the fact that these were not the words of the chief but were fabricated for a television program; this view does not fit the historical facts. Nor does it fit the historical facts. Nor does it fit the historical facts. Nor does it fit the historical facts.

Another explanation for reservation poverty is that they lack high-quality natural resources. Many reservations, however, encompass hundreds of thousands of acres including valuable natural resources. For example, in the 1980s the Crow tribe had $27 billion worth of coal, or more than $3 million per tribal member. Unfortunately, the asset earned a paltry 0.01 percent return, leaving 55 percent of tribal members on public assistance.

Physical and human capital are surely important to economic prosperity, but are lacking on reservations mainly because the institutions that govern Indian economies do not encourage investment. Indians cannot borrow money because their land held in trust by the federal government cannot be used as collateral and because tribal judicial systems may not consistently enforce contracts.

Just as a growing number of studies show that private property, a consistent rule of law, and a lack of burdensome governmental regulations are crucial for encouraging investment in the developing world, the same holds for reservations. Agricultural productivity on Indian lands is 30 percent to 90 percent less than on similar private lands. Furthermore, tribal judicial systems are noted for their bias decisions that discourage outsiders from contracting with tribes or individual Indians.

Indeed, tribes that have relinquished their judicial authority to the states, wherein they lie had growth rates for 1989-1999 that averaged 20 percentage points higher than tribes without equivalent state oversight.

Many say the only hopes for pulling American Indians out of poverty are quick fixes such as federal aid and gambling, which are not sustainable solutions, especially for rural tribes. If Indians are to escape poverty, they will have to abandon what former interior secretary James Watt called "bastions of socialism" and commit to a rule of law with secure property rights and market institutions.

LETTER
Thomans finally gives moralists their due

What a relief it was to wake up this morning and read something sensible from Cal Thomas. While he usually peddles stupidity, his latest article is a refreshing change. He tells us about a Huston lawyer and a brigadier general who want to start an exodus from the public buses. They are excellent men from the Southern Baptist movement say we need to go back to God's commands and stop having homosexual values.

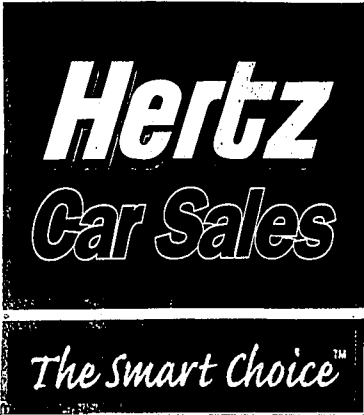

I completely agree that we should shut down the secular schools and have kids just go home and read the Bible. The Bible is not lax and easygoing about morals like people are today. It says that if your eye or hand scandalizes you, you should either pluck it out or cut it off, because it is better to go blind and crippled into the kingdom of the sky-father than not to go at all.

When we go back to the Bible, we will pry to God for tumor shrinkage and no longer run to the surgeon for every lump and bump. We will use the blade the way it is supposed to be used: to cut off offensive body parts. The husband whose eyeballs glue to porn movies and the housewife whose fingers get stuck in meat will wield sharp instruments for the sake of moral improvement. (And if the evil-doer does not care enough about his immortal soul to perform his own surgeries, is it a great leap to suggest that better men should do him the favor?)

I will not be so impertinent as to point out that the most errant and mischievous of all body parts belongs exclusively to the male gender, which includes many lawyers and almost all brigadiers. Jesus knows this full well — he says that some men are made eunuchs by man, some are so by nature and others choose to be eunuchs for the sake of getting into the kingdom. What the weaker vessel should do is always the same thing — obey her husband or her king.

Anyway, back to the real point: too many poor children are helplessly trapped in government schools, propagandized with passing intellectual "facts" like and other sciences that insult the Bible. We need to get back to better days, when people knew that while punishment could be as much as a sharp knife, unquestioning obedience to authority makes it unnecessary.

The unknown rules U.S. Open

The Associated Press SOUTHAMPTON, N.Y.—The final practice round for the U.S. Open brought a breeze Tiger Woods had not experienced from that direction. Standing on the 14th tee Wednesday morning, he gazed down the fairway and said to his caddy, "All right, now what do we do?" Woods eventually figured it out. He hit a 3-wood down the middle and stayed short of a daunting bunker, hit his approach 15 feet behind the flag and knocked in the putt.

104th US Open TV starts 8 a.m., ESPN everyone, from the world's No. 1 player to the two guys who have a chance to replace him, from amateurs playing the U.S. Open for the first time to major champions playing for the first time in months. But the anticipation is higher than usual. Shinnecock Hills looks nothing like it did in 1999, primarily because the rough has been shaved to resemble the rounded edges of the greens at British Opens. "We don't play golf courses like this in this country," Woods said. Woods looks nothing like he did when he left Long Island two years ago with the U.S. Open trophy while on a frightening 7-of-11 run through the majors. He is under more scrutiny than ever because of his engagement to a Swedish nanny, his divorce from a high-profile coach and shots that don't always go where he is aiming. Ernie Els and Vijay Singh have chances to overtake Woods at No. 1 in the world—a position he has occupied since Aug. 16, 1999 — if they win at Shinnecock Hills. "I'm eager to go play and I'm eager to go out there and perform well," Singh said. "I'm playing as good as I've ever played, and I can't do any more than just go out there and try to win the golf tournament."

Jim Furyk and David Duval are going to try to play, which is a story in itself. Furyk figured he would be the first U.S. Open champion since Payne Stewart to be unable to defend his title when he had surgery on his left wrist three months ago. Lo and behold, he played two full rounds last week and decided Friday to fly to Long Island and give it a shot. Can he win? "My expectations are high," Furyk said. "They're not that high." That's what awaits the 156-man field when the 104th U.S. Open starts Thursday morning. The wind favors to be strong because Shinnecock is situated between the Atlantic and the

Jackson bids farewell, sort of, to Lakers

The Associated Press AUBURN HILLS, Mich.—Phil Jackson stood at the podium in the interview room with four of his five grown children and said there was a "pretty slim chance" he'll coach the Los Angeles Lakers next season. Then he said it again. "I've had a lot of persuasion given to me by these kids. They were hoping I could win the 10th and retire, but maybe losing this one, this opportunity is enough for me to say that it's time to give it up," he said. "But right now I'm not ready to make that decision or give that statement."

Los Angeles Lakers head coach Phil Jackson has words with guard Kobe Bryant during the third quarter of game 5 of the NBA Finals against the Detroit Pistons at the Palace of Auburn Hills, Mich., Tuesday.

So while Jackson wouldn't commit, it certainly appeared to be a farewell—at least for the time being—from a 59-year-old coach whose perfect record in the finals was spoiled by the Detroit Pistons, leaving him tied with Red Auerbach for most titles by an NBA head coach (nine). Jackson said he planned to meet with members of the Lakers organization in the days ahead to discuss a future that promises to be filled with changes. Question No. 1 will be whether the franchise still believes Shaquille O'Neal and Kobe Bryant can coexist. Bryant plans to opt out of his contract and become a free agent, although he has said he wants to be "a Laker for life." Team owner Jerry Buss has given every indication he wants to keep Bryant, whose fractured relationship with Jackson and O'Neal could be one of the driving forces behind an offseason of change around the league.

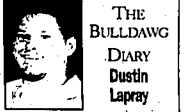

Not only will Bryant be a free agent, but Gary Payton and Karl Malone also can opt out of their contracts. O'Neal—already angry that the Lakers wouldn't give him a contract extension—could demand a trade if he decides the time has come to end his association with a team that failed in its quest for a fourth title in five years. "I'm not sure really where the organization wants to go from here." Change will come to other NBA franchises, too, beginning next Tuesday when the Charlotte Bobcats select 14 players from other teams' rosters in the expansion draft. The regular draft comes two days later with the Orlando Magic holding the first overall pick.

In addition to deciding between Emeka Okafor, Dwight Howard and other potential No. 1 picks, Orlando must figure out what it plans to do with Tracy

Finished, but never truly done

The 2004 Rocky Mountain Football League season is over for the Magic Valley Bulldawgs. We finished the season with a 3-5 record (0-3, South Division). The record is nothing to brag about. It came together for the first time in my career and we suffered some horrible losses.

But I am an optimist and I saw some amazing things in my team in 2004. I saw a team build character. I saw a team rally behind themselves in the darkest hours. Injury and losses plagued this team, but it stayed together. It was beautiful to watch young men step into leading roles and play above themselves. Teams are built by veterans and stars. But, adversity and injury create holes in the most solid of teams. My team was lucky enough to have the guys on the sideline who were strong enough to fill those holes and fill them well. We didn't have the most athletic team in the league. We have no former pro-level players. We are just local guys that came together to build a team. Three former starters showed last week. All quit on the team after we began 0-2. They had familial obligations and didn't come. When they arrived Saturday my heart sank. I figured they would take the starting roles from the players who had filled their holes with heart and dedication to the team, the guys who had taken the road trips to Montana and Idaho Falls to have their hearts broken. And I

Cancer survivor looks to Athens

The Associated Press MORENO VALLEY, Calif.—The bump on her right ankle was there for months, yet Kimberly Bruckner saw no cause for alarm. She was winning races, wasn't in pain and was moving toward her Olympic cycling goal.

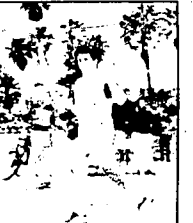

After winning the women's time trial gold medal at last year's Pan American Games, she finally had time to have the bump examined by doctors. They found a tumor, removed it a day later, and by week's end Bruckner was back on her training bike and finalizing wedding plans. Then the phone rang. The bump was cancer. "Whenever I got massage and people rubbed over it, then it hurt," Bruckner said. "That was the only time. I didn't do anything for it that whole year. I didn't worry. I just left it. Then I got home from Pan Am's, got checked out, got the lab results back and got told I needed to come back to the doctor's office that minute." The scare was just that—a scare. Doctors determined Bruckner's cancer was confined to her ankle, and have deemed her healthy. Now, she's a favorite in Thursday's 24-kilometer U.S. Olympic road cycling time trial, with the winner guaranteed a spot on the team headed to Athens. Most top women cyclists will compete in the trials, including Mari Holden, a five-time national time trial champion who won both a world champi-

Reds rally past Rangers for win

CINCINNATI (AP) — A capacity crowd hoping for home-run history saw Ken Griffey Jr. settle for a single, then revealed in another late comeback Wednesday night that rallied the Cincinnati Reds to a 7-4 victory over the Texas Rangers.

Texas Rangers' Alfonso Soriano, right, slides safely after stealing second base in front of Cincinnati Reds' shortstop Barry Larkin during the third inning Wednesday in Cincinnati.

Indians 9, Mets 1

MIAMI — C.C. Sabathia allowed one run and six hits in eight impressive innings. Sabathia (4-3) shut down the Mets a night after they had 14 hits in a 7-2 win after firing hitting coach Denny Walling. The big left-hander struck out three and walked one.

Corner was called fair by third base umpire Brian O'Nora. However, television replays clearly showed the ball served to the left of the net that serves as a foul pole at Olympic Stadium and should have been ruled foul.

Royals 10, Braves 6

ATLANTA — Angel Berroa hit a three-run homer in the eighth inning and the Kansas City Royals had their highest hit total in almost four years. Joe Mauer went 4-for-5 with an RBI double and Berroa had three hits and drove in a career-high four runs for the Royals, who ended a two-game losing skid. Kansas City had 20 hits for the first time since Aug. 5, 2001, at Minnesota.

Lee hit .369 (.445-122) during the streak.

Jose Mesa struck out Chone Figgins and Adam Kennedy with runners at second and third to end it for his 15th save in 15 chances.

Expos left fielder Brad Wilkerson immediately jumped up and down when he saw O'Nora signal a fair ball. Wilkerson ran in to join third baseman Tony Batista and manager Frank Robinson, who came out of the dugout to argue.

National League Cubs 4, Astros 1

HOUSTON — Greg Maddux earned his 295th win, pitching the Chicago Cubs past the Houston Astros 4-1 for their fifth straight victory. Todd Hollandsworth's RBI triple sparked a two-run eighth for the Cubs. Maddux (6-5) fudged the Astros, allowing only one run and eight hits in 6 1/3 innings.

One of the Great Falls Gladiators was also tossed for the scrum, which hit them harder since they only had 14 players show to the game.

Pistons are built to last

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. (AP) — Joe Dumars was sporting an NBA championship hat and T-shirt while chewing on an unlit cigar.

Almost two hours after Detroit beat the Los Angeles Lakers on Tuesday night, the Pistons' president of basketball operations was still smiling.

"I don't even smoke," Dumars said. "But I just felt like Red Auerbach, so I grabbed a cigar and I threw it in my mouth."

There could be more championship cigars in Dumars' near future.

"Maybe we don't have two superstars like the Lakers, but we've got five stars in their own way in the starting lineup and a lot of other solid players," Dumars said. "We've got the best of both worlds because we won now, and we can win in the years to come."

With a starting lineup of players 20 or younger, salary cap space and a Hall of Fame coach, the Pistons seem like a team built to last.

Before thinking about the championship possibilities of the future, however, the Pistons and their fans plan to celebrate Thursday with a parade in downtown Detroit and a rally at the Palace of Auburn Hills.

About 16 hours after winning the first NBA title in 21 seasons, coach Larry Brown was back in his office after sending off his four children, and his wife, to the airport.

"It was really exciting to have my family here with me on such a special night," Brown said Wednesday in an interview with The Associated Press. "I'm going to have to get out of here soon, too, so I can return all the kind messages I got."

"I've heard from Coach (Dean) Smith twice, Tony La Russa, Red Auerbach, Jerry West, Simba, Andy Reid and one of the first of many messages was from Derrick Coleman."

Detroit stunned the Lakers — led by superstars Shaquille O'Neal and Kobe Bryant — with a group of unselfish castoffs.

The MVP of the NBA Finals was Chauncey Billups, who was on five teams in his first four seasons before finding a good fit in Detroit two years ago.

Ben Wallace, the team's only All-Star, wasn't even drafted out of college. Wallace was a little known player when he came to the Pistons in the Grant Hill trade four years ago in what was Dumars' first major move as an executive.

Great Peconic Bay. The grass is high — anyone can see that — and the greens are hard and firm, like they always are at the U.S. Open.

"If the wind comes up like I think it will, I really think over par will win," said Tom Meeks, senior director of rules and competition for the USGA who sets up the golf course.

And if the wind doesn't come up? If the course doesn't play as tough as advertised? If the scores are low?

"Then the USGA stops watering the greens," Nick Price said. "They quadruple roll them. They triple cut them. Then, the scores go up again and everyone is happy — except the players."

Most players are pleased with the golf course, particularly the collection areas around the greens that resemble the 1999 U.S. Open at Pinehurst No. 2.

McGrady, who will be a free agent a year from now and does not plan to stay with the Magic through a rebuilding process.

The champion Detroit Pistons also have some uncertainty to deal with, beginning with the question of whether Rasheed Wallace plans to re-sign.

Free agents can begin signing with teams beginning in the middle of July, and Bryant will be the biggest prize on the market if he decides to start anew elsewhere.

Other top unrestricted free agents include Wallace, Steve Nash, Marcus Camby, Mehmet Okur — Wade — Divac — Stephen Jackson, Hedo Turkoglu, Bob Sura and Brent Barry. The list of restricted free agents includes Kenyon Martin, Quentin Richardson, Mando Gintoli, Darius Miles, Morris Peterson and Jamal Crawford.

Players who can opt out of their contracts include Antoine Walker, Latrell Sprewell, Nick Van Exel, Payton, Malone, Derek Fisher and Bruce Bowen.

The Phoenix Suns, Denver Nuggets, Utah Jazz, Atlanta Hawks, San Antonio Spurs and Los Angeles Clippers are among the teams with the most salary cap space, and each would jump at the opportunity to sign a player of Bryant's caliber.

Robbery suspect gets court date

POCATELLO — A man indicted by a grand jury in connection with a bank robbery in Paul last year is scheduled to appear in federal court this month.

U.S. Magistrate Judge Mikel Williams ordered John Kurkowski, 23, to appear in U.S. District Court in Pocatello on June 22 to face charges of bank robbery and use of a weapon in the commission of a crime.

Kurkowski faces a possible maximum prison sentence of 20 years on the bank robbery charge. The firearms charge carries a mandatory minimum sentence of five years in prison, which must be served consecutive to any other federal prison sentence ordered.

Kurkowski is charged in connection with the Sept. 19, 2003, robbery of Key Bank in Paul. He was being held in Ely State Prison, where he is set to return after his appearance in court next week, according to the application for writ of habeas corpus.

Kurkowski was sentenced in February to two consecutive prison terms of eight to 20 years in the Nevada state prison after he pleaded guilty to a charge of attempted murder with use of a deadly weapon. Minidoka County Sheriff's Detective Lt. Randy White was shot three times while trying to apprehend Kurkowski at a jackpot casino last year. White eventually was able to return to his job several months later.

Food program expands into Magic Valley

TWIN FALLS — A new Idaho food distribution organization that delivers food from the federal food bank program has expanded into the Magic Valley. ICAN recently opened up for new members in Twin Falls. Each month a truck brings about $50 worth of groceries to members in the area. Membership is $12 per month plus some service to the organization.

The first shipment was made May 5, with each member family receiving several items, including five boxes of ungrain potatoes, six frozen rice bean dinners, 24 cans of soda pop, 10 pounds of frozen trout and much much more.

ICAN has operated in Pocatello for three years with 125 members and expanded into Rupert more than a year ago. The focus for ICAN is to provide additional food for those who are on a tight budget.

For more information, call Hwy at 724-8924, Debra at 736-6516, Sarah at 212-5610 or Army at 725-1293.

Report: Errors deny food stamps

Bedke seeks more information on the problem

The Times-News and The Associated Press

TWIN FALLS — An increase in cases and a decline in staffing led to thousands of Idaho people entitled to food stamps being denied assistance, the regional director of the state Department of Health and Welfare says.

Since 2001, when the state economy began its slide, the number of food stamp recipients has almost doubled to nearly 100,000 a month. During the same time, manpower to handle the program was slashed 21 percent — 60 people — as the state coped with its own version of the budget crisis that gripped households throughout Idaho.

Last fall, then-Deputy Health and Welfare Director Joyce McRoberts tried to convince lawmakers before she retired they had created a crisis by cutting staff at a time when food stamp applications were running at record levels.

Scott Bedke

Lawmakers wound up restoring five of those eliminated jobs beginning next month. During a legislative committee meeting Tuesday in McCall, Health and Welfare officials said they couldn't at that time offer a region-by-region breakdown on the errors.

Historic Oakley opens its doors

By Chip Thompson Times-News writer

OAKLEY — Out of style when built, the historic two-story Victorian homes of Oakley are now popular attractions that draw some 400 visitors from throughout the region each year to the Oakley Home Tour.

Kent Hale stands before the childhood home of LDS Church Apostle David Haught, which will be featured as part of Saturday's Oakley Home Tour.

This year's tour is scheduled for Saturday, and six homes will be featured — along with the opera house and city office.

When early settlers came to Oakley in the 1880s they could only afford to build modest dwellings, explained Kent Hale, one of the tour's organizers. By the turn of the century settlers were able build the grand Victorian houses they recalled from the time they left Utah 20 years before.

Neil noticed the homes while leading a group of historians on a trip to City of Rocks. The group had been commissioned to develop activities to commemorate the bicentennial.

Neil encouraged Hale and others to conduct Oakley's first home tour in 1974 and, despite ridicule from many in town, the tour drew 50 visitors.

Hale said of Haught, who left Oakley after high school and now lives in Salt Lake City. "The home was built by mason apprentice Joseph Beck who, fearing he would be drafted into the German army, stowed away on a passenger ship bound for New York."

Buhl School Board gets ready to implement advancement standards

District dips into reserve funds to balance next year's budget

By Mickey Walker Times-News correspondent

BUHL — Students in the Buhl School District will soon have to meet a new set of standards to advance from one school to another.

Without those skills students will struggle and won't be successful. In other business, School Board members unanimously approved a $7.37 million budget for 2004-05.

The district will operate on $269,297 less than the year before. Hill said that state revenues went down faster than the district's budget could cope with so approved $272,000 into the budget from the general reserve fund to balance the budget. The $1 million reserve fund was reduced by nearly 27 percent.

The new policy goes into effect this coming school year. To advance from elementary to middle school, students must have 70 percent or better semester averages in math, language arts, social studies and science. Students with grade averages less than 70 percent can also advance to middle school by having a 90 percent or better attendance rate and earning scores on the spring Idaho Standards Achievement Test: 202 in reading, 209 in math and 204 in language arts.

Students will remain in the transitional program until they have met or exceeded the ISAT scores. Eighth grade students will be promoted to high school when they have met or exceeded similar standards; either a 70 percent or better average in core classes or spring ISAT scores of 214 in reading, 226 in math and 215 in language arts along with the attendance rate.

"Previously we had been able to balance the budget without much reserves, but this year en masse we had to dip into our reserves," he said. "Previously we had been able to balance the budget without much reserves, but this year en masse we had to dip into our reserves," he said.

Organizer says Centennial air show will be the best yet

By Robert P. Mayer Times-News correspondent

Air show will also honor local veterans.

TWIN FALLS — His plane looks straight out of "Star Wars." With its rear-mounted propeller and main wing placed at the rear of the plane, its design makes it difficult to tell whether it's flying forward or backward.

See page C8

Arnold's plane will be one of hundreds on display on the ground and in the air for the biennial event.

Yet the unusual appearance of the Long EZ is what drew stunt pilot Lon Arnold to that plane. Not that it's made for aerobatic flight. On the contrary, it's designed for efficient level flight for long distances.

Phil Hafer promises this year's show will be the best yet. Nearly all forms of mechanical flight will be represented; from Blackhawk helicopters to screaming F-15 fighters, from the mammoth cargo plane, the C-17, to homemade experimental planes.

The U.S. military action in Iraq has complicated availability of certain aircraft, Hafer said. For instance, he was able to secure at the last minute a C-17, but for just a brief visit. It will arrive from Texas with a full cargo, make a few low passes for Magic Valley fans and then head to Iraq.

POCATELLO (AP) — The focus of health science education in the state will remain at Idaho State University, while its potential competitor in Boise State University will concentrate on public policy for at least the next decade, according to officials from both schools.

The State Board of Education is meeting Thursday and Friday at the University of Idaho to consider eight-year plans by all state universities and colleges. The blueprints allow the board and the schools to map future programs.

More than two decades ago, the board assigned Idaho's colleges and universities separate missions. Whereas Idaho State is the leading school for health science, the University of Idaho focuses on agriculture, architecture, law and natural resources.

Jonathan Lawson, Idaho State's vice president of academic affairs, said he believes the Pocatello university will retain its mission as the top school for health science despite rumors of competition for the spot from Boise State University.

Goat sparks debate in Shoshone

By Lorraine Cavener
Times-News correspondent

SHOSHONE — Councilwoman Wendy Robinson will get her goat.

Following a long debate that ended in a split vote, the City Council granted Robinson a permit so she could keep a goat in her yard. Her daughter intends to use the animal as part of a 4-H project.

"There's nothing wrong with a good goat," Council member Dale Sluder said. "I have seen the price of gasoline for lawn mowers?"

Council member Ken Haight agreed.

"They eat noxious weeds like crazy," he said.

Councilwoman Lee Ross split from Sluder and Haight, who voted to grant the permit. Robinson abstained from voting.

"I'm sorry, but I don't think we should have a goat in the city limits," Ross said.

Robinson's permit was approved with cautions.

"If the police have to pick it up it goes to the dog pound," Haight warned Robinson.

Robinson said she spoke to neighbors and none of them objected to her family having the goat.

But one female neighbor remarked that if Robinson was allowed to have a goat she, too, should be allowed to have an unusual animal in her yard — say a pot-bellied pig.

Robinson said she informed the neighbor that she'd have to go through the same channels as her. Anybody who wants a pot-bellied pig or any animal would have to fill out a permit application and go before the City Council, Robinson said she told the woman.

Police Chief Robert Quiroga noted that someone had once had a pot-bellied pig in the city limits. "It got loose and was terrorizing people," he said.

In other business, Quiroga agreed to check with the Idaho Transportation Department about getting a yellow caution light installed at the corner of Greenwood and D streets. The intersection is busy with many pedestrians crossing to The Snake Bar from the old high school gymnasium, where sports and other events are held.

Ross said she has seen trucks park in the center turn lane in front of The Snake Bar. The driver often goes in to get food to go.

Quiroga said there was a caution light at the intersection when the old school was open, but it was taken down when it closed.

Jerome pledges $9,000 toward bridge study

By Dixie Thomas Reale
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — The City Council has pledged $9,000 toward a study that will help determine the feasibility of erecting a third bridge over the Snake River Canyon near Twin Falls and Jerome areas.

The money will be put toward the environmental assessment study in $3,000 sums each of the next three years.

The council recently was approached by Aaron Wert, Chairman of the Greater Twin Falls Transportation Committee, who was seeking financial support for the study. The city of Jerome now joins Jerome and Twin Falls counties, the city of Twin Falls and the highway districts in Twin Falls, Jerome and Filer in pledging financial support for the study.

Before the council voted to contribute the funds, Councilman Rob Lundgren asked City Administrator Travis Rothwell what would happen if the city could afford the $9,000 to complete the project three years down the road.

Rothwell said that he and City Clerk Kathy Cone had studied the budget and felt they could afford the pledge.

"We will do our best to honor the pledge but is not written in stone," the city administrator said.

Mayor Charles Correll said the pledge was "right in line with what we felt we should do."

In other business, the City Council approved a contract with Cooper Roberts Simonds Architects to design plans for the city library remodel addition. The Library Board will be hosting several upcoming

Overflowing ditch causes dilemma in Hagerman

By Sandra Wisecaver
Times-News correspondent

HAGERMAN — City Council members want to know who's responsible for a ditch running through town.

Water flooding over its banks recently threatened properties on Orchard Street. Now residents Les and Amy Harper want the city to install underground pipelines to carry the water past their property.

"I think it would be easier for the city to put in pipe than pay for damages to property," Les Harper told City Council members Tuesday.

But council members say they're not sure the ditch is their responsibility.

"I think for years, we just said 'it's our water,'" Councilman Lynn Scott said. "But more recently, when there were funds, materials and time, we have been trying to solve the problem. I'm not sure we are required by law to do that."

Les Harper said the city had already accepted responsibility for the ditch by piping portions of the flow in other neighborhoods.

The ditch carries wastewater from fields adjacent to the city. Council members directed City Attorney Phil Brown to determine who is responsible and, therefore, who pays for damages. Council members want to know whether it's the responsibility of the irrigators, the city, property owners or if it's shared responsibility.

The Harpers said the recent overflow had flooded onto their property as well as the properties of Katherine Hill and Bud Povey.

While the Harpers want a permanent fix for their flooding problems, resident Lyle Cornelison wants the City Council to address overgrown weeds in his neighborhood.

Vacant lots on two sides of Cornelison's property are overgrown with weeds, he told council members. If the vegetation is not cleared off, it will become a fire hazard next to his home, he said.

The city has been aggressively enforcing ordinances that require weeds to be cleaned up. Mayor Todd Bassett told Cornelison he'll contact the owners of the vacant lots.

"There's something to be said about just going to talk to people," Bassett said.

If the problem is not taken care of, the owners will be sent a notice notifying them that they have 15 days to eliminate the problem. According to state law, the city can then perform the cleanup with its own workers on the 16th day and charge the owners of the vacant lots, 200 percent of the costs, Bassett said.

"Let's not let this go away," Councilman Pete Weir said. "We need to insist problems are cleaned up."

In other council business, Bassett said he would talk to Hagerman Valley Chamber of Commerce members about damages in the park during the recent Fossil Days celebration.

"Chamber members were really good about supervising vendors coming into the park, but they probably weren't quite as well supervised when they were leaving," Kelley said. "But it was better this year. Last year 22 sprinklers were broken. This year there were seven."

Replacing the broken sprinklers cost $120.

That amount could be held out of the chamber's $250 deposit paid to the city prior to the event. After the park is cleaned up, the deposit is refunded to the chamber.

"I think we have to remember that risks are inherent with any event like this," Councilman John Mason said. "But the event serves as a benefit of the community and the chamber always gives back to the setting."

Scott encouraged setting up a park walk-through with a chamber representative prior to next year's event and another walk-through immediately following the event.

for display.

Often it's not finding the military aircraft that's difficult, Hafer said — it's finding the crew to fly it given the number of U.S. military personnel in Iraq.

Among the rare displays will be the University of Utah's replica of the Wright Brothers' flier. Aside from the engine, which is from a Harley-Davidson motorized, the aircraft is identical to the one flown at Kitty Hawk in 1903.

"Weather permitting, it will fly," Hafer said.

All are invited to sit in the cockpit and wiggle the controls, he said.

But it's the aerobics planes that Hafer said he's most looking forward to.

"They get your heart pumping, and you just never know what's going to happen when they take off," he said.

But the aerobics pilots do know what they're doing when they get in the air, Arnold said.

Arnold — now in his seventh year as an air show performer — said he has his routine memorized well and never deviates from it for safety reasons.

"I know the outcome 100 percent every time," he said. "They don't pay me enough to change things."

That's because to change things invites an accident.

Still, he admits that his is a dangerous profession.

But, then again, "everything that goes up in life is a calculated risk," he said. Hafer expects between 14,000 and 20,000 visitors to the air show.

That increase over the 12,000 who attended two years ago should help offset the $100,000 required to run the show.

Given that the attendance numbers have increased each year, Hafer said he feels confident that this year's show will continue that trend.

The bulk of that money goes toward the performers, who each receive between $7,000 and $10,000 for their efforts.

Then there are the hotel rooms for the performers and others.

Since 9/11, security has become a more complicated matter, he said.

The airport will keep open air space in one-hour blocks, which essentially closes all air space up to 15,000 feet, a new requirement for the air show. That affects all air traffic, even commercial flights to Boise, which will have to deviate from their normal paths.

Hafer and his dozens of volunteers have been working nearly a year to prepare this show. In the last month alone, unemployment benefits to recover overpayment of food stamps. There was nearly $2 million in overpayments uncollected during the audit period.

As of July 2003, the auditors found that 15.4 percent of food stamp applications were erroneously processed and that two-thirds of those involved denying applicants the benefits they deserved. While it expects mistakes in a program that costs it up to $80 million a year, the federal government set an acceptable error rate for Idaho at 6.6 percent last year.

Spokesman Ross Mason said the rate has been dropping in the last several months, although it remains above the federal guidelines.

The auditors recommended food stamp managers assess programs in other states with substantially lower error rates and that lawmakers give the department authority to garnish unemployment benefits to recover overpayment of food stamps. There was nearly $2 million in overpayments uncollected during the audit period.

A legislative panel will also investigate the $1 billion Health and Welfare budget in an attempt to develop a better understanding of its complexities.

Idaho Foodbank Director Roger Simon declined to criticize the state but conceded that problems in the food stamp program only increase pressure on the rest of the state's social safety net. His organization disburses 4.5 million pounds of food a year through 200 local agencies around the state.

"And we have not been able to keep up with the demand," Simon said. "That has meant is that the amount of food that the pantries have been able to give out is not at a level to get people through."

Woman tackles new migrant vocational rehab post

Increase in Hispanic population leads to creation of position

By Corren Hart
Times-News correspondent

BURLEY - Esperanza Gerhardt is tackling a newly-created position with the state Vocational Rehabilitation office.

The job of migrant service coordinator is made possible by a five-year federal grant. Financing for the position was written when the 2000 Bureau of Census reported that Camas, Blaine, Gooding, Lincoln, Jerome, Minidoka, Twin Falls and Cassia counties had a 92-percent increase in their Hispanic population.

Her new position began Feb. 9 and entails locating seasonal migrant farm workers who have disabilities and health issues. The goal is to successfully employ 600 people who otherwise might have been unable to work.

"That is a huge goal, but the issue is convincing people to seek help," said Gerhardt, based in the Mini-Cassia area. "So many are angry because they cannot provide for their family. I need to find these people and what they are needing."

She said disabled people need training to get back to work and there are new skills they can learn. Language, lack of education, advanced age and physical problems may make the situation appear hopeless, but her job is to hook people up with services.

"They now have to focus; to accept the fact that they can't do the same kind of work," she said. Several entities are ready to help, such as the College of Southern Idaho, English as second language programs, churches and others.

Gerhardt spends most of her time traveling a wide area of the Magic Valley, seeks out fields, visits the workers and hands out brochures explaining the services available.

The hardest thing is to get them to come in," she said.

She works with entire families because disabilities affect every member, Gerhardt said. Her main effort is networking with agencies. The trick is to match people and agencies. "In order to be successful, you have to network," said Gerhardt, who formerly worked with Job Service.

She also tracks people from their first farm job to the next job, until they actually leave Idaho.

"We were looking for somebody who had an understanding of the population, who had bilingual skills and a good knowledge of the community," said Sue Cook, deputy bureau chief of Field Services for the Idaho Division of Vocational Rehabilitation. "We found that person in Mrs. Gerhardt. It is very clear that this is not just a job for her. She is wanting to create a better life for the people she works with."

Gerhardt began public service in the 1960s when she volunteered at Head Start. Later, she began assisting people with their immigration work. She serves on the boards of Family Health Services and the Human Rights Task Force.

"Esperanza knows the community," said Vocational Rehabilitation counselor Damian Rodriguez, who was a part of the team that hired her. "She brings experience and knowledge to the job. If you want to know the meaning of outreach, just look up Esperanza in the dictionary."

In her youth, Gerhardt traveled from field to field and state to state with her family. "One thing I know, hard times come and go. When they are over, you don't remember the bad things. I remember being together with my aunts and uncles and sharing the life. You're down for awhile, and then you're up," said. "We're going to provide jobs and help."

AgJobs Bill makes way through Congress

But questions still arise

By Pat Marcantonio
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - The Ag Jobs Bill originated not only from a farm worker problem, but a humanitarian one, said a representative of U.S. Sen. Larry Craig, the bill sponsor.

Mike Mathews, with Craig's Twin Falls office, spoke about the bill at a recent meeting of the Hispanic Business and Professionals Network.

The Agricultural Job Opportunity, Benefits and Security Act - AgJobs - was co-sponsored by Sen. Ted Kennedy, D-Mass. The legislation would allow agricultural workers - who lack authorized immigration status but who can show that they worked a certain number of days in the United States during a set period of time - to apply for visas and later, resident status.

The bill would streamline the now cumbersome and expensive H-2A/Guest Worker program for the worker and employer, as well as expand it. Mathews said H-2A workers are allowed to work temporarily and legally in the U.S.

Want more information?
Check out <http://www.senate.gov/~craig/index.htm>

"People have called this (the bill) amnesty, but it's really an earned program," he said.

Of the 1.6 million agricultural workers, more than half are not legal, estimated the Department of Labor. About only 2 to 3 percent of the workers are in the H-2 program.

"The system is basically broken and not working right," Mathews said. By allowing more workers through H-2, they would be legally protected, which leads to higher wages and better working conditions, Craig's office reported. Now, illegal workers are vulnerable to predators and exploitation and exposed to dangerous conditions. Employers, meanwhile, get a stable work force.

The United Farm Workers supports the bill, saying it would allow farm workers to earn the legal right to permanently stay in this country by continuing to work in agriculture.

Mathews said more than 60 senators and more than 100 representatives had signed onto the bill, but it's uncertain whether it would be voted on this year.

"He's (Craig) very optimistic because he has the 60-plus sponsors," Mathews said.

Several people at the meeting had questions about the proposal, such as how the workers can verify their employment and what type of documents they need, as well as what happens to their families.

Barbara Gonzalez, who works with farm laborers through her job with Idaho Legal Aid Services, sees a potential problem overseeing the treatment of the temporary workers. She has heard about verbal and physical abuse of workers in Idaho.

"I would hope that they would better police this," she said.

"There has to be a watchdog," added Alex Castaneda, a real estate agent who worked several years with the Idaho Migrant Council. He has also heard "horror stories" about the treatment of farm workers. If the bill passed, rules would be developed to implement it, Mathews said. But he would also report their concerns to Craig.

Craig hopes the bill can serve as a template for a broader scale on immigration issues, Mathews added.

Hispanic Cultural Center of Idaho gets new director

NAMPA - The Hispanic Cultural Center of Idaho has hired Donna Vasquez as its new director.

Vasquez replaces Jorge Pina, who held the position since April 2003. He facilitated the grand opening of its new building in September 2003 and is moving back to San Antonio, Texas.

A search committee reviewed more than 40 applications. "Vasquez surfaced as the top candidate with a mix of cultural, business and interpersonal skills that will allow the HC2C to go to the next level," said Leo Puga, chairman of the center board of Directors.

Vasquez, who most recently worked for Boise State University, has extensive experience in educational training and customer service and volunteered to work on the center-sponsored Gala. Junior Achievement, the Youth Motivation Task Force and Cystic Fibrosis Foundation.

Jennifer Lopez and Marc Anthony are struggling mightily to keep the world's worst-kept secret: their wedding.

Never mind that everybody has seen photos of the recent nuptials at her L.A. spread. Never mind that Anthony went on "Today" and "The View" wearing a wedding ring. The salsa star flatly refused to confirm that he and J.Lo were hitched.

"Y'all know I don't talk about my personal life," Anthony told Matt Lauer.

One friend of the couple thinks that Lopez has told Anthony to zip his lip.

"She's the boss," the friend tells us. "He's like a puppy around her. He's blinded by love, and whatever she says goes."

Old friends of Anthony are still amazed that he didn't give Dayana Torres, the mother of his children, Cristian, 3, and Ryan, 9 months, any warning that he planned to marry Lopez just four days after he divorced the former Miss Universe.

"Dayanah found out about the wedding on the Internet," says a friend.

"Nothing about Marc surprises her anymore," said the friend. "She was depressed toward the end of their marriage. But I think she's numb to it all." One woman whose Torres turned to through the ordeal was Debbie Rosado, the mother of Anthony's 10-year-old daughter, Arianna. Rosado, who split with Anthony in 1995, tells us, "Dayana and I spoke when she was going through the hardest time. I told her she was going to get through this."

Asked what she thought of Anthony marrying J.Lo, the former NYPD officer said, "It's a comedy for me, this whole thing. But if he's happy, then I guess I'm happy. To each his own."

Anthony Stallone, center, of Seafood, N.Y., is assisted by Manny Matos, as he puts on a tuxedo jacket and bow tie to be photographed with the wax figure of Jennifer Lopez now wearing a wedding dress at Madame Tussaud's in New York. As the first interactive Tussaud figure, she blushes when someone blows in her ear. Reports say that Lopez married singer Marc Anthony.

Mexicans find 'saint' of last resort

By Reed Johnson
Los Angeles Times

MEXICO CITY - In the tough Tepito neighborhood, where poverty, corruption and violence are daily realities, there is a beloved "saint" who understands and forgives the frailties of all human flesh. To Roman Catholic Church officials, the skeletal woman in the long, flowing robes is a grisly embodiment of satanic purposes. But to the desperately poor and overlooked residents of Tepito she is a last, best hope for answering unanswered prayers. She is La Santa Muerte, "Saint Death," or as others call her, "La Santissima Muerte." "Sacred Death." Her petitioners are prostitutes, drug dealers and murderers, as well as multitudes of ordinary housewives, taxi drivers and street vendors hoping to cure a sick child or pay the rent or simply make it through another day without getting robbed, kidnapped or shot.

Over the past 20 years, her following has grown so large and so rapidly that in some parts of Mexico she is becoming a rival in popular affection to the Virgin de Guadalupe, the manifestation of the Virgin Mary that for nearly half a millennium has been the reigning symbol of Mexican national identity.

"She is a Virgin de Guadalupe in negative. That which one can't ask the Virgin, one can ask her," says Homero Aridjis, a novelist and former Mexican diplomat who recently published a short story collection about La Santa Muerte.

Woman thanks honest people for returning item

On May 2, I inadvertently left my purse on the top of my car and it left me somewhere between my residence and the store.

Needless to say, I was very distraught, I backtracked, and the purse was nowhere to be found.

I went home, had a long talk with myself and then a long cry. Then the doorbell rang.

Outside was a man, woman and two children. The man, Dan Lewin, introduced himself and asked me if the purse he was holding was mine.

I said it was and offered a reward, which he would not accept. Everything was still in the purse.

I would like to thank this gentleman and tell him how grateful I am for his honesty. I'm sure his children learned from his example, and will be proud of their father.

Again, thank you, Officer Lewin!

House posts financial reports

WASHINGTON (AP) — There's more than one way to please a congressman with gifts. Donors contributed to Majority Leader Tom DeLay's legal defense fund. Wedding guests gave presents when Majority Whip Roy Blunt married a lobbyist. And, strange as it may seem, a London casino provided a "gift" to the lawmaker in charge of House operations.

At least, that's how Rep. Bob Ney listed his winnings from a card game in financial disclosure forms released Wednesday.

The disclosures are made public each year to provide a financial portrait of each lawmaker. Generally, House members are less wealthy than senators, whose forms were released Monday.

The top House member, Speaker Dennis Hastert, R-Ill., was among those without large assets in 2003. The former high school wrestling coach earned a $199,600 salary, but his income beyond that was not huge: a $28,577 pension from the state of Illinois and $5,000 to $15,000 from rental on a Washington townhouse. A mutual fund was valued between $50,000 and $100,000.

Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif., did much better than Hastert financially — thanks in large part to her husband, an investor. Wine played a major role in the couple's assets. A vineyard in St. Helena, Calif. was valued between $5 million and $25 million. The sale of an 8-acre vineyard in Rutherford, Calif. brought revenue of between $1 million and $5 million.

The longest-serving House member also did well, when his spouse's assets are counted.

Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., disclosed that his wife, Debbie, has General Motors stock options worth between $1 million and $5 million, and a company savings-stock purchase plan worth between $500,000 and $1 million. Mrs. Dingell is vice chairman of the General Motors Foundation.

One lawmaker received money from a calamity rather than an investment. House Armed Services Committee Chairman Duncan Hunter, a California Republican, disclosed insurance benefits of $500,000 to $1 million after his home burned down in last year's Southern California wildfires.

The disclosure forms do not show net worth, but provide outside sources of income beyond lawmaker salaries — $154,700 for rank-and-file, more for leaders. Assets, liabilities and income are usually reported in broad dollar ranges.

DeLay, a Texas Republican, attached to his disclosure form a list of contributors to his Legal Expense Trust that totaled $53,500 in 2003, including $41,500 from political action committees and corporations.

Police kill bear that wandered into Virginia hospital at night

ROCKY MOUNT, Va. (AP) — Perhaps visiting hours were over.

Police shot and killed a full-grown black bear that wandered into a hospital Tuesday. The 300-pound male bear wandered in front of Carilion Franklin Memorial Hospital at about 9:10 p.m. and activated a sensor that opens the hospital's doors, police said.

The bear wandered down a few hallways and into a computer room, said Lt. Karl Martin of the Virginia Department of Game and Inland Fisheries. Two police officers yanked the door shut behind it.

Officers planned to sedate the bear, but because the hospital was nearly full they worried about it getting loose. An officer shot the bear twice and killed it, Martin said.

At teacher L.G. Newman's home for an after-school party, Hazel Malone — later Hazel Aslett — poses in 1934 with other members of the seventh-grade class of the Filer-area Maroa School. She is the girl third from the right in the back row.

She was a farmer's daughter and a miner's wife ...

Hazel Aslett is in love with Magic Valley, and proud to be a native Idahoan. At 65, she gets up in the morning with a smile on her face and a purpose for the day. Her enthusiasm is infectious, as her family, and many friends will attest.

Born Hazel Malone in 1918, she was descended from two sets of grandparents who came to the Twin Falls country in the early days of the tract and cleared sagebrush under the Carey Act. Hard work, common sense and resourcefulness are in her genes. Hazel recalls, "I don't remember any member of our large family complaining — there was honest joy from a job well done."

She attended country schools and at one time lived in the home built and occupied by Annie Greenwood, author of "We Sagebrush Folks." Hazel's life was much like that of Annie Pike Greenwood. They cooked on a wood stove fueled with sagebrush. It was hotter than Hades, and then it was out. Dishes were washed and rinsed in inches of water. Clothes were scrubbed clean on a washboard until your hands were raw, then hung on a fence or line, with a prayer that they'd dry before a dust storm hit.

Hazel attended a trade school in Weiser which was a part of President Roosevelt's New Deal. You chose your vocation, lived in the dorms and worked in the trade-shops, farming, restaurants, bakeries — and earned $16 a month. While there she met Dale Aslett who was studying welding, and also studying Hazel.

PIONEER PORTRAITS
Donna Scott

One evening Dale asked Hazel out for a date. He had no car, so they walked into town. On the way home the road was rough. Hazel didn't want to complain, so she just laughed and said she could probably walk it blindfolded. Dale said, "Okay. I'll put my hands over your eyes and see how you do." Of course, Hazel stumbled, and when he caught her she asked, "Where are you leading me?" He said, "To the altar."

Did this tidbit catch your interest? A fuller account of this family, along with stories of other local residents throughout the past century, will be published by the Twin Falls Centennial Commission's heritage committee next month in "Gifts of Heritage."

Hazel and Dale Aslett in 1945, four years after their marriage in Twin Falls. Dale was serving in the U.S. Air Force.

Centennial pavilion at air show will celebrate veterans

By Michelle Dunlop
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Dizzying stunts, high-speed racing and unusual aircraft won't be all that visitors to this year's Centennial Air Show can experience.

"We're having local vets bring some memorabilia to show," said Bob Jackson, district commander for Veterans of Foreign Wars. "I don't know exactly what these guys are going to bring, but I'm sure it will be good."

With P-51 war birds and military aircraft circling above, area veterans gathered below will share their war keepsakes and stories with guests in a veterans pavilion at Joslin Field.

Want to know more?

For more information about the veterans pavilion at this month's air show, call Tamara Taylor at 733-5215 or Bob Jackson at 733-6042.

The Twin Falls Centennial Commission joined forces with air show coordinators and local veterans groups to organize the event.

"They have asked veterans to bring war mementos to a special pavilion at the air show as part of this year's city centennial celebration.

The veterans pavilion will be open from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. the day of the air show, June 26.

"We're interested in having all branches of the different service groups represented," Jackson said. "Our object is to have veterans from World War II on up."

Tamara Taylor, executive assistant at the Twin Falls airport, hopes members of the public will attend to demonstrate their support for veterans.

"It's set up just to honor the veterans," Taylor said. Taylor encourages the public to come by the pavilion, check out the memorabilia and talk to veterans about their experiences.

Entrance to the air show costs $2 per person; no additional fee will be charged to visit the pavilion.

"We're having many veterans from around the state come in," Taylor said.

The pavilion accommodates up to 150 veterans at a time, she said. Seating and tables will be provided for veterans; big band music will play throughout the day. Jackson, a veteran of Desert Storm, served in the Navy for 22 years.

He plans to have his own coins, ribbons and medals on hand.

Jackson isn't sure what kinds of keepsakes other veterans will bring to the pavilion.

"Every war is going to be represented," Jackson said. "How it's going to be represented specifically, I don't know."

However, Taylor is confident that one item will not be allowed — ammunition.

"They can't bring any live rounds in," Taylor said. Jackson knows of a few World War II veterans in the area who he hopes will participate.

"I hope they'll bring their medals," Jackson said. "They've got some beautiful medals from the South Pacific arena."

Veterans have been receptive to the pavilion plan, Jackson said.

"I've had nothing but positive comments," he said.

Times-News intern Michelle Dunlop can be reached at 735-3229 or by e-mail at mdunlop@magicvalley.com.

Magic Valley scrapbooks

Volunteer members of Twin Falls' first fire department posed for this photograph in perhaps 1905 or 1906. A hand-written list on the back of the photo names most of the men pictured. From left to right are Perry Miller, George Savlers, Alfred Brickey, Aleck Bilas, a Lindsay whose first name is unknown, two men whose names are unknown, F.W. Harder, George Lowe, Joe Van Meter, Jim Tagert, an Alexander whose first name is unknown, A.J. Peavy, George Baird and J.E. Kelsey. Harder was the father of current Twin Falls resident Fred D. Harder.

Charles Skeen of Twin Falls — pictured at home in about 1940 with his wife, Margaret, and Mack the horse — was a ditch rider for about 35 years. At the Skeens' home on Main Avenue East, one side of the garage was for the car and the other side for the horse, says current Twin Falls resident Vernon C. Skeen, the couple's grandson.

In the small farming community of Knoll, southwest of Twin Falls, the Knoll Merc Co. and owner F.S. Cappel's home are pictured in May 1921. The railroad ran to the south of Cappel's home, and to the north of the J.T. Anderson ranch. The community also included the Pleasantview school, which is now the Knoll Grange building.

It seems that everything in the Pioneer Mountains is big. Elizabeth, my wife-to-be, and I discovered this over the recent holiday weekend.

First off, the mountains are big. Their names read off like a veritable who's who in terms of Idaho elevation and scale. There's Phi Kappa Mountain and The Devils Bedstead at 10,516 and 11,051 feet respectively. And imposing Cobb Peak at 11,650 feet.

There's the 11,600-foot plus elevation of the Salzburger Spitzel, and Handwerk Peak, the 10,840-foot twin-crested lightning rod of the Pioneers. And lest we forget, Hyndman Peak, whose 12,009 feet of upended rock thrust it well into the leagues of Idaho's highest. The ninth highest to be exact.

Not to be outdone, plenty of other superlatives help define this monumental mountain expanse. In fact, the entire Pioneer Range is big, enough to rank it as the second highest in Idaho behind the Lost River Range.

Even the lakes in the Pioneers exude a sense of bravado. One in particular stands out above all else. At 10,438 feet, Goat Lake sits in a picturesque basin beneath 11,878-foot Standhope Peak, making it the highest lake in Idaho.

Big doesn't do the Pioneers justice. Enormous is more like it. All this we learned on our first day in the Pioneer backcountry.

But the Pioneers hadn't finished their show-and-tell, it seemed. Hardly. Another surprise was still in store. It materialized late in the day as a indistinct inky-black mass across the meadow in the trees.

No more than 150 meters from our camp an enormous black bear sat rooting around among downed logs, foraging for dinner. He went on like this in the 45 minutes before dusk, seemingly oblivious while we ate our freeze-dried dinners downwind from him.

We watched him forage contently for whatever delicacies draw a spring-time bear until he departed. Not even the deer that passed by just as he left seemed concerned.

Needless to say, we suspended our food and cookware high in a tree overhead that night. We weren't taking any chances.

Over the next two days we hiked about, finding success fly-fishing in the Little Wood River between lazy spells spent soaking up the occasional rays of sunlight and the absolute mountain scenery.

After three days immersed in such abundant beauty and bountiful solitude we began to experience the effects of visual overload.

The Pioneers' four slides

Access points into the Pioneer Range are relatively straightforward and abundant. In any direction, whether north or south, east or west, passable forest service roads lead to jumping-off points in the Pioneers both near and far.

The Sawtooth and Salmon-Challis National Forests administer the majority of the acreage in the Pioneers, the rest falling into the hands of the BLM and private interests.

Elizabeth and I entered the Pioneers on the east side by way of the Salmon-Challis National Forest and the sprawling extent of Cooper Basin.

The north side of the range, as well as several popular trails, is within an easy drive of Ketchum by way of Trail Creek Pass. Various points along ID-75 also provide access to both the western and southern ends of the range. Another alternative is to leave

Pioneer Mountains trail info

Day hikes and overnight trail options abound in the Pioneers. Here are several:

- Pioneer Cabin (Sawtooth NF). Easily one of the most popular trails in the area. Simple access, great scenery. From Ketchum, drive several miles up Trail Creek until coming to forest service road 137. Follow this road east to the Pioneer Cabin trailhead. Trails 122 and 123 depart, accessing the Pioneer Cabin after various distances.
- Wildhorse campground and trail 087 (Salmon-Challis NF) to Boulder Lake. 5+ miles to Boulder Lake. Beautiful day hike or overnighter above a stunning canyon. From Trail Creek Pass continue driving until the turnout for Wildhorse campground and Copper Basin. Take this turnout. After several miles turn right (south) for Wildhorse guard station and campground. From the campground trail 057 departs southwest in the direction of Boulder Lake.
- Trail Creek. Access from Ketchum. Trail 053 (Salmon-Challis NF) departs the road over the pass and follows Trail Creek six-plus miles until coming to the base of The Devils Bedstead, an imposing 11,051-foot peak on the north side of the Pioneers.

Highway 93 near Darlington, drive west up Antelope Creek, thereby accessing windswept Copper Basin on the range's eastern edge after crossing Antelope Pass.

Wildflowers peak at Craters

The annual floral display along the 7-mile loop drive at Craters of the Moon National Monument and Preserve is now underway. The peak of the wildflower bloom will last for about two weeks and will be at its best from now to late June. This area of the Monument is located on Highway 20/26/93. 18 miles west of Arco.

Plink monkeyflower, yellow buckwheat, and white bitterroot make up the bulk of the display on the cinder cones, but the varied habitats of the monument support more than 300 different species of plants. Although June brings the largest abundance of blooming plants, there are many wildflowers that will blossom throughout the summer. "We invite you to bring your family and friends to the Monument," stated park superintendent Jim Morris.

There will be special guided wildflower walks on June 19. Join a Ranger on a 2-mile hike to view the wildflower display. Please contact the Visitor Center at 527-3257 to make a reservation for these free events. Daily guided walks and evening programs will begin on June 18. These activities will continue until mid-August. During the summer, visitor center hours will be from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily. For further information,

Local hunters bag a tom turkey

Paul Brown
Times-News correspondent

It's a long haul in one sitting from southern Idaho to the Panhandle in the north end of the state.

Two of us left here after work Friday headed north to make Cour d'Alene before sunrise and a rendezvous with a friend who was to guide us on a middle of May turkey hunt. We drove to the rendezvous point at 2 a.m. and caught a few winks before our appointed guide was to join us at 6:30 a.m.

Cameron, our friend and guide found us at the appointed early hour. Soon we were at a property of Cameron's friend snuggled among the thick forest of the Idaho Panhandle overlooking Lake Coeur d'Alene. A clearing had been carved out of the jungle large enough to accommodate three houses and barns making a couple of acres of meadow for turkeys to roam in.

We walked past the nearest house following an old skid road left over from past logging days listening carefully for turkeys talking. The grass was saturated with moisture from the previous day's rain.

"Gobble, Gobble, Gobble" sounded in the distance. A tom was talking. Cameron stopped and took out a turkey call from his pack that made a "skritch" "skritch" noise. This is a hen call that sometimes motivates toms to break into a gobble also. A answered in the distant woods. This fit for that repeated itself several times with no movement on the part of the turkeys. Whether they were still on the roost was speculation.

The three of us then spread out 200 yards apart to watch the cleared area. Who was us for turkey movements. A hen approached the tree I was positioned under and clucked as though she had a nest nearby. She came up to within 10 yards of me and to my surprise, she moved on in a different direction. No other birds appeared after an hour of calling and waiting.

We regrouped, retraced our steps a few hundred yards, and took up other positions as Cameron continued to call periodically. We maintained our positions waiting for a tom well into the middle of the afternoon. Only toms are fair game this period of the year.

"Bang!" The 12-gauge shotgun blast caught me snoozing. It came from Cameron's direction. He had his gun to his shoulder and fired another round at something unseen by me. I ran toward where he had fired.

A large tom turkey that got mysteriously appears and disappears when least expected had made its last mistake. He was a beauty with about a 10-inch beard but very little spurs. Cameron concluded he had broken them off while fighting.

I saw a movement to my side and as I turned he walked behind a tree giving me a chance to shoulder my shotgun. I fired just as he walked out from behind the tree and wondered how I could have missed, because a bird flew away. I ran over there to find this one that was down while a second one flew off. I had to give him a second round to finish the job. Cameron

No more action that day, and the next day was rained out until later afternoon. We later started the trek back south via Orofino. The Chinook salmon had just started making their way up the Clearwater. We unboxed and inflated the Zodiac, put the motor in place and spent all afternoon back-trolling the north fork of the Clearwater for Chinook salmon, but without success.

Later afternoon we folded up the Zodiac and headed south again. We drove well into the early hours of Monday morning to reach home at the south end of the state.

State plans youth, women's hunting clinic

Question: "My children and I had a wonderful time at the free fishing day clinic last weekend at the Hagerman State Fish Hatchery. Are there any other organized activities planned this summer?"

Answer: Yes, there are 2 hunting clinics.

Today, the department will sponsor a youth hunting clinic at the Jerome Rod and Gun Club Range. The range is located at milepost 64 north of Jerome on US Highway 75.

The clinic will run from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and is open to youth between 9 and 17 years. This year's clinic will cost $5 and lunch and refreshments are provided. Students will be instructed in basic shotgun, rifle, muzzle-loader, and archery shooting. In addition, students will be instructed on blood tracking, hunting traditions, conservation, and hunting ethics.

Students wishing to shoot rifles must supply their own rifle and ammunition. Shotguns, muzzle-loaders, and archery equipment will be provided.

On Saturday, July 10, the department will also sponsor a women's hunting clinic at the Jerome Rod and Gun Club Range from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Cost of this clinic is $5 and includes lunch prepared on site.

The women's clinic will include topics similar to the youth clinic. In addition, field care of game and some cooking and preparation tips will be included. In both clinics students should come prepared to spend the day outdoors and dress according to the conditions. Suggestions include long pants, high-top shoes or boots, lightweight shirt, jacket, a cap, sunscreen, and drinking water.

For more information on either hunting clinic contact Clayton Nielson at the Magic Valley Regional Office in Jerome.

Gary Hompland is a regional conservation officer at the Magic Valley Regional Office of the Idaho Department of Fish and Game. Contact him at (208) 324-4350 or e-mail us at the Fish and Game Web site at www2.state.id.us/ifsgame.

What kind of animals can be classified as predators?

JEROME—A predator is an animal that kills and eats other animals to survive. People usually think of large animals like wolves and mountain lions as predators, but predators come in all shapes and sizes, from tiny mountain lions to tiny shrews that look like mice.

Kids' Corner

Would you think of a bluebird or great blue heron as a predator? Both are birds that eat other animals to survive. The heron eats fish, and the bluebird eats insects. They are predators even though some people may not see them this way.

The number of predators there are depends upon the number of animals they have to eat. The more rabbits there are, the more bobcats and mountain lions you may see. As soon as rabbit numbers drop, so will bobcat numbers.

Many predators hunt by themselves, but others hunt in groups. Wolves hunt in groups, called packs, because they can catch much larger animals by cooperating with each other. One wolf would have a hard time bringing down an elk or a moose. However, three or more wolves working together has a much better chance of bringing down a large elk.

Predators are important parts of the ecosystem. They help maintain the balance of nature. If they were not for predators, predators also observe groups of animals, like elk and deer, to see if any of them look sick and weak. Predators often eat sick animals. Removing unhealthy members of the herd help to keep the whole herd healthy.

Predators may sometimes be seen as vicious or bloodthirsty, but they really are not. Predators kill for one reason, to survive. Wildlife acts instinctively or naturally. They have no choice. Predators have a job to do in nature, and they do it well. Weasels are considered by many to be the best predators in the animal kingdom.

Fish report is for the week of Thursday, Aug. 5, and is for family fishing waters and major rivers in the Magic Valley region. Reports are made courtesy of Skooter Gardiner of Silver Creek Outfitters in Ketchum, and Doug Cherry of Blue Lakes Sporting Goods in Twin Falls.

The Magic Valley fish report is for the week of Thursday, June 17. Updated conditions from Silver Creek Outfitters and Blue Lakes Sporting Goods are listed for family fishing waters and major rivers in the Magic Valley/Wood River regions. Check Idaho Department of Fish and Game regulations for restrictions.

Malad River: FAIR. Good top water action on attractor dries but once again, the bigger fish want a meal. Throw a streamer, madam K, caddis pattern, stimulators, sculpins, mudflats or clausers.

Little Wood River: FAIR. The wind-off to fish the Little Wood is coming to a close. There are a couple more weeks to fish before it gets too hot and the snakes come out. With any desert fishery, the low light times of day are the best time to fish. Fish the riffles with the fishing is excellent; in other areas it's just average. Use ducktails, Thompson buggers, scuds, damselfly, seal buggers.

Magic Reservoir: FAIR/GOOD. Find the shallow water under low light and the fishing is excellent; in other areas it's just average. Use ducktails, Thompson buggers, scuds, damselfly, seal buggers.

Silver Creek: GOOD/EXCELLENT. The creek is fishing surprisingly well so far this year. Last week was windy on the Creek and beetle imitations, pheasant tail nymphs and zebra midge nymphs were working with a little chop on the water. PMD and Beetles hatches were decent during the calm periods. This week's weather outlook will improve the dry fly opportunities. Green Drakes are beginning to pop on the upper conservancy waters.

Big Wood River: GOOD/EXCELLENT. Warmer weather should cause the Big Wood's waters to rise slightly this week. This should be the last of runoff. Fishing will be as good as it gets on the Big Wood for the rest of June. Wade with caution and fish with a friend. Stonely imitations are working best; size 8-12 stimulators and size 10-12 rubber-legged Stonely nymphs. Green Drakes will start to show, so be sure to have a selection of Green Drake flies, cripples and nymphs.

Big Lost River: FAIR. A few have braved the high on the Big Lost below the dam and found fish with both large and small nymph patterns. Stimulators and Yellow Sally patterns should also turn some fish. These waters will be unfishable if they let more water out of the dam. The North Fork and East Fork of the Lost will be fishing better in a couple weeks when water turbulence settles down.

Milner Dam: FAIR. Fishing has been spotty but when it's hot, it's hot. Creature baits, crankbaits, and spinner baits all lead to some success.

C.J. Strike Reservoir: FAIR. Begin to look for the fish holding in relatively deep water. Carolina rigging and drop-shotting plastics is hard to beat. Don't overlook crankbaits.

Warm Springs/Trail Creek: POOR. These light, willow choked streams are running high and difficult to access right now. Your efforts will be better spent on other waters; don't forget about Dollar Lake and Lake Creek Lake if you're looking for a few hours of fishing adventures with the kids.

Dollar/Penny and Lake Creek Lakes: GOOD. These waters have recently been stocked and are great destinations for beginners and kids. Try stripping nymphs and streamers through the water; prince nymphs, pheasant tails, and wooly buggers.

South Fork of the Boise: GOOD. The stone fly hatch is within a few weeks. Throw out Box Canyon stone flies, birch creeks, copper Johns, pheasant tails, caddis dries and emergers.

Dorkes Lake: FAIR. The local pond always puts up a few fish but at the moment it isn't too hot. Try nightcrawlers, powerball, corn, marshmallows, leech patterns, spinner baits and crankbaits.

Salmon Falls Creek Reservoir: GOOD. It's been a rough week for the walleye fishermen. A cold front moved in and put water temperatures in the low 50s. Plenty of trout though. Use slipbobber rigs, worm harnesses and wading plugs, crankbaits and jigging plastics. Fly anglers look for callibaits nymphs and seal buggers.

Clear Lake: GOOD. Do these fish ever not eat? Go get 'em and have some fun. Use callibaits and damsel nymphs, go bugs, leech patterns, and various attractors.

Billingsley Creek: GOOD. There are many aggressive browns to be had for those folks who will throw streamers under low light. You can also try marbout mudlers, swimming shad, clausers, and PMDs.

Lake Walcott: FAIR. Warmer water temperatures have slowed the trout fishing, but bass fishing isn't bad. Most folks are trolling pop gear and crankbaits.

Salmon report: FAIR. Some days are better than others but there are still fish to be caught. The South Fork of the Salmon will be hot soon. Get ready because it will be the fastest fishing yet. Black, blue and green flies, roe and yarn are all working. Presentation is more important than tackle.

Wildlife: Watch without bothering the watched

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — Mountain goats and bighorn sheep are Doug Garfield's favorite creatures to see.

"For me, the reason is, it takes a lot of effort to get to them, so there's not going to be 100 other photographers set up with their cameras," Garfield said. "I guess it's because of the country they inhabit."

That country includes the highest, rockiest places in the state.

The first step in finding them is to seek out likely areas. There are only a few herds of each in Utah, and all are due to reintroductions in the last quarter of the last century.

One herd of mountain goats is nearby, on the top of Willard Peak and Ben Lomond. Garfield, an amateur photographer and wildlife watcher from Morgan, visited this herd in the winter a couple of years ago. He followed his usual routine in attempting to photograph the animals.

"You go up these canyons and you glass and you look, and you might go all day without seeing them," Garfield said. "But usually, you can find them. Then pick your route and try to get to them."

In this case, it was a long hike up the steep front face of Willard Peak to bag some pictures of a small herd of white goats. It took more than an hour of looking and most of the rest of the day to find them.

This time of year, there is an easier way.

Willard Peak is within easy access to Top of Utah residents who don't mind driving a long, bumpy road. It will take an hour to drive from Mantua to Inspiration Point, near the top of Willard Peak, but a short walk will lead visitors to an almost certain encounter with one of nearly 50 Rocky Mountain goats that stay on the west side of the ridge, near the very top of the two peaks.

All visitors should respect wildlife and keep their distance. But there are some ways to get good views.

"I try not to disturb them," Garfield said. "I try not to change their behavior in any way."

That goes for any animal, whether it's a goat at the top of Timpanogos or a bison along side the road at Anelope Island. For some animals, like bison and moose, there is even a safety concern. Harassment can lead to serious injury. But most often, stealth is just a way to watch without bothering the watched.

It also helps to know about the habits of the animal. Most are more active in the mornings and evenings, though this time of year, animals may be visible any time of the day.

Watch for elk at the borders of meadows and thick timber. A herd will bed down in the timber, remaining invisible for much of the day. But they will emerge into the open a few times, especially in the morning and evening. Patience is key.

Here are a few viewing tips:

- Stay downwind. The smell can scare animals away.
- Walk softly and carry a big camera. All big mammals possess keen hearing. Long lenses can get you where your heavy boots can't.
- Get up early. Elk, for instance, are most active at dawn. In midsummer, the animals are often bedded down by 8 a.m.
- Stay up late, or at least until dark. That's when wildlife will emerge from cover.
- Look for water. Moose often wade in marshy areas. Everything else visits water frequently.
- Look for tracks and scat. If there are no animals, but there is water and sign, they will be back.
- Use binoculars or spotting scopes to locate animals.

Reward goes up for sturgeon information

The Times-News

The poaching of two mature sturgeons in recent weeks along the Snake River raised the ire of The Western Whitewater Association.

"We were outraged," Tim Palmer said. "We as members have enjoyed that resource, caught these fish, released these fish for generations...and it is a travesty."

The group is channeling its outrage into action, contributing $1000 - $500 for each fish to Idaho Fish and Game's reward fund meaning $2000 is now available for information leading to the arrest and conviction of those responsible.

Besides contributing with their wallets, the association's members will also be on the lookout for suspicious activity.

"We have 600 members of our group that are out there and we are aware...and we are going to be very diligent in paying attention to what is going on now," member Ron Garrett said.

A sturgeon head believed to have come from a fish between 40 and 60 years old was found earlier this month dumped just off Interstate 84 east of Mountain Home. Last month, witnesses reported seeing two men catch a nine-foot long sturgeon below Swan Falls Dam, load it into an older Ford pickup and drive off with it.

Fish and Game officials do not know if the incidents are connected but they are concerned about possible motives. "Some people are poaching for meat, some people are poaching for their ego," Resident Fisheries Coordinator Fred Partridge said. Anyone with information is urged to call the poaching hotline at 1-800-632-5999.

Money tip: Graduate gifts may affect bills

NEW YORK — The kind of gift of writing out a personal check for your high school graduate may lessen the youngster's financial aid package when he or she enters college.

Substantial financial gifts, either paid directly to the student or in the form of tuition bills reimbursed by the gift-giver, can influence colleges to reduce the student's financial aid package, according to Bankrate.com.

Such gifts are seen as evidence that a family can contribute more for college tuition.

The Education Department determines each student's eligibility for financial aid. The school then prepares a financial aid package based on need — the difference between the cost to attend and the student's expected family contribution.

If you're planning a sizable gift or are set on providing tuition assistance for your graduate, wait to contribute until the tuition bill has arrived and has been paid by the student's parents, CBS MarketWatch advises.

Then you may reimburse them. You can give up to $11,000 a year without either you or the recipient paying a gift tax.

You could also give your student other items he or she may need.

Gifts that won't affect your graduate's financial aid package include a computer, round-trip tickets from school to home, electronics such as a personal organizer or MP3 player, or a cellphone plan.

For a computer or other electronics, you may want to buy a gift certificate to let the student, to pick out the most suitable equipment.

For answers to questions about financial aid, call the Federal Student Aid Information Center at 1-800-4-FED-AID (1-800-433-3243) or visit www.fafsa.ed.gov.

Teens struggle for work

The Associated Press

CHICAGO — Erica Gomez dropped out of high school her freshman year so she could work to help her newly divorced mother pay the mortgage and buy groceries. A year and a half later, Gomez had a baby girl, Alize, and the need to make money became even more pressing.

Trouble was, the jobs she could find with no diploma, at a corner store in her Chicago neighborhood and later at a factory, paid less than $10,000 a year.

"It was depressing. We'd do all this work and still have nothing," says the 18-year-old, who recently enrolled in a class that helps young adults get their GEDs.

Late last month, after only a few months in the class, she passed a practice test and hopes to score well enough to qualify for a scholarship when she takes the actual general equivalency diploma exam in August.

It is, after all, a hard truth that has only gotten harder in this economy: The less education you have, the more difficult it is to get a job.

And the competition for even lower-paying jobs — at supermarkets, retail stores and fast-food restaurants — has meant that even more teens who want to work can't find jobs, whether full-time or just for the summer.

A recent study released by the Center for Labor Market Studies at Northeastern University in Boston put the teen employment rate at 36.8 percent — the lowest since 1988.

"Teenagers are at the end of the hiring queue," says Andrew Sum, the center's director, who notes that jobs that traditionally have gone to young people are often being taken by older unemployed adults — from those who've been laid off to retirees who are re-entering the job market to supplement their pensions.

Meanwhile, Sum says the nation's teen population has grown by about 2 million in recent years, even as federal summer jobs programs for youth have been drastically cut — from about 600,000 jobs until four years ago to fewer than 100,000 last summer.

There are small signs of hope. Those who track employment predict the summer job market will be a bit better for teens around the country than last year.

But, Sum cautions, a true turnaround in the jobs market can take years — especially for teens and even more so for minorities from low-income families.

Last summer, for instance, Sum says more than 60 percent of white teens from upper-income families got jobs, while only 18 percent of low-income black teens found work.

Best Buy earns $114 million in first quarter

The Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — Best Buy Co. Inc. reported first-quarter earnings of $114 million as the biggest U.S. consumer electronics chain saw its revenue climb 17 percent.

Best Buy, which has an electronics store in Twin Falls, said Wednesday that it earned $3 cents a share in the three months ended May 29 in contrast to a loss of $25 million, or 8 cents a share, during the same quarter last year — a loss due mostly to the Musicland busi-

"Given the competition you've got, you've got to be ready to apply 20, 25 places to hope to get callbacks," Sum says. "That's how intense it is."

Gomez, the Chicago teenager, knows what that's like. Before enrolling in the GED class at a nonprofit called Jobs for Youth, she applied for countless jobs, noting how her interviewers would frown when she told them she had no diploma.

"Oh," they would say. "Well, we'll call you."

"But they never call," she says.

ness that it no longer owns. The company said that without Musicland, earnings for the first quarter last year would have been 21 cents a share.

The latest earnings beat by a penny a share the consensus estimate of analysts surveyed by Thomson First Call.

Revenue increased to $5.48 billion from $4.67 billion a year ago.

The increase was driven by the addition of 84 new stores in the past year and a sales gain of 8.3 percent at its stores open at least a year.

Best Buy said it anticipates second-quarter earnings per share of 47 cents, compared with 42 cents a share in the comparable period last year.

Analysts expected earnings of 50 cents a share for the second quarter.

For the year, the company said it expects to earn $2.80 to $2.93 per share, compared with analyst expectations of $2.88.

The guidance for the quarter assumes, comparable-store sales gains of 5 percent to 7 percent, including gains in sales of products such as digital televisions and further expansion of Best Buy's "Geek Squad" technical support service.

In June 2003 Best Buy gave away Musicland, a mall-based music retailer with Sam Goody stores in Twin Falls and Burley, to a private investment company specializing in corporate turnarounds.

Best Buy held $2.1 billion in cash at the end of the quarter, up from $1.5 billion after the same quarter a year ago.

Delta CEO gives bleak outlook for airline's revenue

The Associated Press

ATLANTA — The chief executive officer of Delta Air Lines, Gerald Grinstein, gave a bleak outlook Wednesday of the carrier's ability to increase revenue. He said that means getting deep wage cuts from pilots is all the more key to its survival.

In a speech Wednesday at an investor conference in New York, Grinstein said low-fare rival AirTran Airways has for the most part been able to call the shots on ticket prices in many of the markets in which the two compete.

"We have no pricing power and yields are continuing to erode," Grinstein said. He added, "We have to learn to live in the revenue environment that we're in."

"That makes getting wage cuts from its pilots 'a crucial first step' in Delta's turnaround plan," he said. He reiterated that the Atlanta-based company would consider bankruptcy only as a last resort.

In a March 16 report, the reports of our death are premature," Grinstein said. Some analysts believe Delta has only six to nine months to get the wage cuts or face bankruptcy. The airline has lost more than $3 billion and laid off 16,000 employees in the last three years.

"If they don't have a deal by the first quarter of next year, then it's going to be all over," said Ray Neidl, an analyst with Haystack & Partners in New York.

The nation's third-largest airline — whose hub in Salt Lake City is Twin Falls air travelers' only nonstop destination — is asking for a 30 percent wage cut from pilots, who are offering 9 percent and to forego a 4.5 percent raise they received in May. Delta's pilots make between $100,000 and $300,000 a year, according to the company.

Formal negotiations have been stalled since late January.

Grinstein said he hopes Delta's pilots will decide "that it is time to re-engage and get the discussions back on track."

The chairman of the pilots union's executive committee, John Malone, suggested in an open letter to all Delta employees last week that management has engaged in "divide and conquer" tactics as part of its negotiating strategy. He said the union is willing to negotiate, but it believes the company must develop a business plan that involves more than just cutting wages.

State guards unclaimed property

The Times-News

JEROME — The state is safeguarding unclaimed property for hundreds of people and businesses whose last known addresses are in Magic Valley.

The Idaho State Tax Commission is looking for those folks, and hoping they'll call to claim the property.

It's stuff for which I'd a lot of businesses have been able to find the rightful owners, such as payroll checks, contents of safe deposit boxes, tax refunds, stock dividends, worker's compensation benefits and the like.

The Idaho Legislature in 1997 changed state law governing unclaimed property. Now after property that's safeguarded by the tax commission remains unclaimed for 10 years, it will transfer to state ownership and be deposited in Idaho's general fund.

The first time that will happen is 2007. Before the 1997 law, the tax commission held unclaimed property for its rightful owners in perpetuity.

The Times-News on Thursdays prints names of a sampling of unclaimed property owners whose last known addresses are in Magic Valley communities. Today's list is from Jerome, Ketchum and Shoshone. The tax commission said each person or business listed today — or the person's heir — owns unclaimed property worth between $25 and $50.

Match for other towns in coming weeks.

MONEY

Stocks move little as investors pause

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks wobbled in and out of positive territory Wednesday, settling near unchanged levels as the market shrugged off a pair of economic reports that suggested continued strength in the recovery.

A surge in manufacturing activity and better-than-expected data on housing construction failed to impress investors, who are preoccupied with concerns expected at the end of the month: an interest rate hike and the hand-over of political power in Iraq. Analysts say the markets are likely to face sideways action for the next few days as investors wait to see what will happen.

"I think for the next several weeks, we're not likely to see major directional moves," said Jack Caffrey, equities strategist with J.P. Morgan Private Bank. "We're more likely to see a few days up and a few days down. It's going to be frustrating. But there will be some opportunities created, both to buy and to sell."

Continued from E1 — and emphasizing education as well as networking.

For instance, Long Island's Cognition, a nonprofit in New York state, serves as a liaison between students, employers and learning institutions.

Today, 80 percent of high school graduates from Long Island — well above the national average — end up going to a two- or four-year institution. And that can only make for a stronger, more employable work force, says Cheryl Davidson, the organization's executive director.

"Education," she says, "is critical in this ever-changing economy."

Chris Lynch, who teaches Computer Applications at the Jobs For Youth program — sponsored by Cognition —

A GED teacher for 17 years, he says the need for a high school diploma or, at the very least, the equivalent has never been greater.

"That's why he chides students who skip class: 'If you can't be here on a regular basis, this program probably isn't going to work for you,' he told students during a recent class. 'So I'm just putting a little urge out there — SHOW UP!'"

Chris Lynch says that his GEDs, the organization works with them on job placement and training and also helps them research options for college.

Not that a college degree is Erica Gomez, 18, spends time with her daughter, Alize Benitez, at a celebration after Alize's baptism on May 16 in Chicago.

any guarantee.

Christen Kyle, who graduated recently from Michigan State University, has moved home with her parents in Troy, Mich., while she looks for a job. "None of my friends are in the same predicament."

"Nobody has a job, but nobody wants to talk about it," says Kyle, whose degree is in advertising. She's been interviewing for full-time jobs in her field in Chicago and Detroit but, so far, has only had an offer for an internship.

"I almost feel like an internship after graduation is kind of a step back. But you take what you can get," the 22-year-old says.

The fact that her dad, a chemical engineer, got laid off about two years ago also has led Kyle to believe she should have a "backup plan" for a job. She thinks teaching, her mother's profession, would be a good second choice.

She also realizes that her options are much greater than they are for her older sister, who didn't go to college and now works as a secretary.

Either way, research has shown that early work experience helps teens from all income brackets later on in life, whether they're college-bound or not.

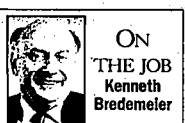

"They do better. They earn more. They're employed more steadily," says Northwestern's Sum. "And they make more money until they're in their mid-20s. So there's a lot of advantages to having kids work when they're young."

What to do when the boss leaves work

Filling in for an absent boss could lead to a promotion, or just more headaches and complications.

Question: My husband's boss did not return after taking maternity leave. When she was out, my husband was paid extra to serve as the acting director while still performing his regular duties. It is now eight weeks since the boss announced she wasn't returning and the president in charge of the department has been dragging her heels on a decision on the director position. My husband has been covering both jobs for that time period without continued extra pay. Another woman in the department will be departing this summer on maternity leave, giving my husband a third job to cover. This is causing my husband to look at other options, even though he loves his current firm. Do you have any suggestions how to get the VP to make a decision, without giving her an ultimatum, and to ask for the back pay for the past eight weeks?

Answer: Karen Usher, presi-

ON THE JOB Kenneth Bredemeyer

dent of TPO Inc., a Tysons Corner, Va., human resources outsourcing firm, said that the vice president who filled in boss has worked two jobs and not been handed the director's job on a full-time basis, it's doubtful that he will get the position.

But she said that he ought to talk to the vice president nonetheless to try to gauge where he stands at the company.

"He can go to the VP and say, 'I know you're still working on a decision on the director's job, but I still would like to be paid extra while I'm carrying this extra assignment,'" Usher said. She said that it's possible that the director who left on maternity leave signed off on the extra pay for a specified period and that the vice president had no idea that it had ended. Usher said the fact that the acting boss received the extra pay during his supervisor's maternity leave ought to be evidence enough that he should have been receiving it in the past eight weeks as well.

At the same time, Usher said, she thinks the vice president is "probably not the best person to do this job. It's clear to me the likelihood of him getting this job is low."

Still, he "ought to express his frustration and use the response as another data point to see what his standing is."

And, Usher said, he can express his concern about the impending maternity leave this summer. But she said he ought not to say that will affect his resignation, rather that "the company is going to be impacted by this. They had three positions for a reason, so he can put a stake in the ground and ask the vice president, 'What are you going to do?'"

Judge OK's settlement of suits against Qwest

DENVER (AP)—A judge approved a $25 million settlement this week that settles five shareholder suits accusing Qwest Communications and former executives, including Joe Nachicho and billionaire Philip Anschutz, of insider trading.

The settlement will require Qwest to change corporate governance and appoint a committee of independent directors to consider separating the roles of chairman and chief executive.

The plaintiffs' attorneys said an exhaustive review of more than 6 million documents, congressional testimony and other evidence did not turn up evidence that Qwest or its former CEO, Nachicho, Qwest founder Anschutz or other defendants breached their fiduciary duties. A second was filed in another Colorado state court, two more in Delaware's district courts and a fifth in U.S. District Court.

A class-action shareholder lawsuit still is pending in U.S. District Court.

The $25 million will come from an insurance fund negotiated among representatives of Qwest, various insurance companies and individuals who were covered by insurance. Lillo said.

Denver District Judge Lawrence Manzanos plans to subtract an estimated $7.5 million in attorneys' fees from the total.

Nachicho Phelps, executive director of the Association of U.S. West Retirees, said his group agreed to the settlement after initial objections.

"We're still very concerned about the financial misdoings — on behalf of Anschutz company, first and foremost this is very good news for Qwest and it's a major hurdle that's removed," Anschutz spokesman Jim McManahan said.

Qwest spokesman Steve Hammack declined to comment on specifics. "We're just pleased to put this matter behind us," he said.

The lawsuits accused 16 former and current executives and directors, including Nachicho and Anschutz, of earning millions by misusing nonpublic information to profit from insider trading in the stock of Qwest and other companies.

The lead lawsuit was filed in November 2002 in Denver District Court by shareholder Thomas Strauss on behalf of the company. It alleged the defendants breached their fiduciary duties. A second was filed in another Colorado state court, two more in Delaware's district courts and a fifth in U.S. District Court.

Oil markets shrug off outrage in Iraq's exports

LONDON (AP)—OPEC's second meeting Tuesday would boost oil prices, but crude oil markets shrugged off the surprise announcement that Iraq's exports were set to resume.

Oil prices rose after Saudi Arabia said that it would make up for the shortfall in Iraqi crude by increasing its production.

The move by Saudi Arabia and OPEC in general is to make up for a major shortage in the market and that there is no supply shortage," a senior Gulf OPEC source said on condition of anonymity.

OPEC also would ask large independent producers to make up by pumping more oil. OPEC President Punamto Yunggiatoro said in Jakarta, Indonesia.

But Russia and Norway—the world's second- and third-largest exporters after Saudi Arabia—said they could do little.

"We are producing as much as we can," the director of Russia's Federal Energy Agency, Sergei Goryunov, told the Interfax news agency.

Wildfires bring jobs and money to reservations

The Washington Post

IRONAN, Mont. — Francis Cahoon, born and raised here on the Flathead Indian Reservation, knows it sounds coldhearted, but he is hoping for another summer of ferocious wildfires across the Rocky Mountain West.

Last year, when fires burned a quarter-million acres in Montana, Cahoon said that he and his three sons grossed $250,000 fighting them. Most of that came from leasing three wildland fire engines — four-wheel-drive pickup trucks that Cahoon had rigged with water tanks — to the state at $1,300 per engine per day. This year he has added a bulldozer ($1,695 a day) to his fire-suppression armada.

If all goes well — if the federal government's forecast for another "above normal" fire season proves correct and parched western forests explode into flames as they have for the past five summers — Cahoon and his sons will have steady work for months, making as much as $5,675 a day.

"That's pretty good wages for little Indian boys on the reservation," said Cahoon, who celebrated the end of last year's lucrative fire season by trading in his Corvete for a new $43,000 Ford Expedition SUV. "I'm not the typical smart white businessman who wears a suit, but I still make as much as doctors or lawyers around here."

From northern Montana to southern Arizona, half a decade of drought and wildfire has offered Native Americans something they have rarely if ever experienced — a sustained economic boom. "Fire has become steady work," Cahoon said.

Not everyone, of course, is making serious money the way

Cahoon and sons are. But federal fire managers and tribal officials agree that an abnormally long run of "good fire years" has visibly improved lives and lifted spirits on Indian reservations.

These are among the poorest places in the United States, with four in 10 residents living below the poverty line and unemployment rarely falling below 40 percent.

"Fire money is paying bills, buying vehicles, and we see a lot of college students depending on firefighting to stay in school," said Leon Ben Jr., assistant fire manager in Phoenix for the Bureau of Indian Affairs. "These fires have benefited all 46 of the reservations that I have in my southwest region."

The federal government and western states have, in turn, become extraordinarily dependent on Indians as shock troops to contain forest fires. While Indians make up only about 1 percent of the country's population, they account for about half the firefighters on the front lines of wildfires in the United States, said Dale Glennore, assistant fire manager in Billings, Mont. for the Rocky Mountain region of the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

"It is the high unemployment," Glennore said. "This is a population you can tap into fairly easily."

The Montana Indian Firefighters program, which Glennore runs, paid a record 112 million in wages last year to about 2,500 firefighters, Glennore said. That's more than $4,500 each.

Most of that went to young people who otherwise would not be working," Glennore said, adding that on several reservations in Montana, firefighter wages exceeded the combined income of all other tribal members.

Ten years ago, there were three privately owned wildfire engines in the Flathead Valley, now there are 30, said Tony Harwood, fire management officer for the tribe's Fire Control Center.

Across the reservation, more pumper trucks are being welded together every month. Harwood calls it one of the biggest small-business booms in the reservation's history.

Feds' borrowing hurts fire prevention

The Associated Press

The Forest Service and Interior Department have borrowed so much money from other programs to fight wildfires in recent years that they actually hurt fire prevention efforts, a federal audit has found.

In the past five years, the agencies transferred more than $2.7 billion from other programs because, in their budgeting, they repeatedly underestimated how much money would be needed to pay for fire suppression, the report by the General Accounting Office said.

A fuels reduction project in New Mexico was delayed, wildfire management training courses were postponed and extra equipment could not be purchased.

The June 2 report by the GAO, the investigative arm of Congress, came as no surprise to the offices of the Treasury and Escrow Corp., 311 2nd Street North, Twin Falls, Idaho, said Trustee will sell public lands to the highest bidder in Book 1 of the Notice of Trust.

"Each year we are told that the administration's budget request will meet firefighting costs," said Sen. Jeff Bingaman, D-N.M. "Yet each year the administration's budget request proves inadequate to cover those needs, resulting in the chaos of having to transfer money from one account to another to make up for the shortfall."

THE ACES ON BRIDGE Bobby Wolff

"He wished all men as rich as he (And he was as rich as rich could be). So to the top of every tree Promoted everybody."

As East, you see your partner lead the heart five against South's three-spade contract, and declarer plays low from dummy.

It looks right to start with three rounds of hearts, and simultaneously to tell partner that your entry is in diamonds rather than in clubs.

Win with the heart jack (rather than the 10) and then play the heart ace followed by the king. Declarer will trump ruff the third heart with the spade king, but West should refuse to over-ruff.

In passing, did you notice that declarer had misplayed the hand? Rather than making the knee-jerk reaction of ruffing the third heart high, he ought to have discarded his diamond on the third heart.

ANSWER: Pass, and do not even think of bidding three diamonds on that fourth-entr suit. You have found a better strain than spades.
