Users spar over aquifer

By Jennifer Sandmann
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Is the massive aquifer that supplies water to much of southern Idaho sick or healthy? It depends on who you ask. Groundwater users who could face curtailment because senior spring water users aren't getting all of their water say the aquifer is fine. But water users struggling with declining spring water users say the aquifer is sick. The underground water supply is ailing.

Census indicates growth in Magic Valley

By Karin Kowalski
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The growth in Twin Falls' population is no surprise to Jim Adkins, a retiree who moved to Twin Falls in August 2002. He and his wife drove through the city on a vacation and "absolutely fell in love with the town," Adkins said. "The small-town atmosphere, friendly people and recreation opportunities made their move from Salinas, Calif., an easy decision," he said. The Adkinses are not alone. They're part of a larger influx of people in many parts of the Magic Valley.

Wend Liver Valley have seen significant growth from 2002 to 2003 with several hundred people flocking to Bellevue, Huley and Keckum. Cities in Minidoka and Cassia counties are holding steady or experiencing very small population losses. Twin Falls Mayor Glenda Thompson said the growth in population goes along with all the construction in the area. "I guess I shouldn't be surprised," Thompson said. "It's a great place to live and a great place to retire."

Economic factors
David McLindin, Twin Falls' economic development director, said the increase in the city's population can't be attributed to the city annexing new subdivisions because very few became part of the city in the past year. Recent annexations haven't been counted as part of the city yet, but that isn't the biggest reason for the growth. Please see CENSUS, Page A2

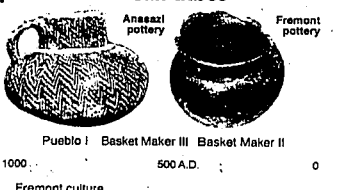

Rancher reveals ancient Indian settlement in remote Utah

The Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — For more than 50 years, rancher Waldo Wilcox kept most outsiders off his land and the secret under wraps: a string of ancient Indian settlements so remarkably well-preserved that arrowheads and beads are still lying out in the open. Archaeologists are calling it one of the most spectacular finds in the West. Hidden deep inside Utah's nearly inaccessible Book Cliffs region, 130 miles from Salt Lake City, the prehistoric villages run for 12 miles and include hundreds of rock art panels, cliffside granaries, stone houses built halfway underground, rock shelters and the mummified remains of long-ago inhabitants. The site was occupied for at

"It was just like walking into a different world," said Utah state archaeologist Kevin Jones, who was overcome on his first visit in 2002. Wilcox, 74, said: "It's like being the first white man in there, the way I kept it. There's no place like it left." The secret is only now coming to light, after the federal and state governments paid Wilcox $2.5 million for the 4,200-acre ranch, which is surrounded by wilderness state lands. The state took ownership earlier this year but has not decided yet how to control public access. "It's a national treasure. There may not be another place like it in the continental 48 states," Duncan Metcalf, a curator with the Utah Museum of Natural History, said Thursday by satellite phone from the site. Metcalf said a team of researchers has documented about 200 pristine sites occupied as many as 4,500 years ago, and "we've only looked in a few places."

More than 100 die in insurgent violence

The Los Angeles Times

BAGHDAD, Iraq — A deadly wave of attacks throughout Iraq on Thursday revealed a new level of coordination by insurgents, days before the United States is scheduled to hand over control to an interim Iraqi government.

The death toll in five cities climbed to 105 people, including three U.S. soldiers, according to U.S. and Iraqi authorities. Another 321 were wounded, most of them by a series of explosions in the northern city of Mosul.

Within a chaotic six-hour period, insurgents unleashed a combination of tactics, including ambushes, armed assaults, car bombs, and an explosive-laden suitcase and armed assaults. As the police chief in Baghdad dispatched his forces to repel the attacks, insurgents launched an assault on his home, burning it down.

Thursday's assaults marked one of the most complex strikes in Iraq since last November, when insurgents in Baghdad dispatched six car bombs to five police stations and the headquarters of the International Red Cross. More than 30 people perished in those attacks.

The latest attacks confirmed Iraq's insurgents would launch a final violent push to disrupt the June 30 handover of sovereignty.

One senior Iraqi official said intelligence reports indicate that terrorists have prepared as many as 60 car bombs for the coming days. U.S. forces recently intercepted three bomb-laden vehicles in Baghdad, a military official said.

Interim Prime Minister Iyad Allawi moved quickly to try to soothe an increasingly jittery population. "The situation is under control and everything is under control," he said. In Washington, national security adviser Condoleezza Rice suggested the wave of blasts were intended to weaken the resolve of nations seeking to help in reconstruction efforts here.

'The people come here for jobs,' McAlindin said.

The job growth spills over into increased population in towns near Twin Falls, he added.

'They may choose to live in one of the surrounding communities,' McAlindin said.

Greg Rogers, the Idaho Department of Labor's regional labor economist, said Twin Falls is still benefiting from the growth spurred by the relocation of the Dell cell center.

'Twin Falls has one of the hottest economies in Idaho,' Rogers said, 'I don't see a short-term end to the growth.'

For instance, the Irena, Calif.-based company, Veterinary Pet Insurance, plans to open a center in Twin Falls and create an initial 150 jobs in the next year.

Rogers said the influx of people is made up of many professionals and retirees.

Michael Alix, the executive director of United Way of South Central Idaho, came to Twin Falls from Santa Fe, N.M., two months ago for the new job.

'I like living in the West,' Alix said. 'What attracted me here is the beauty of it.'

Alix is enjoying all the outdoor amenities and the low cost of living.

'The longer you stay here, the more incredible outdoor things you get to see,' Alix said.

Mini-Cassia

Communities in Minidoka and Cassia counties have seen only the slightest drops in population in the past year, in spite of the high unemployment that has plagued the area after the closure of the L. R. Smith Co. plant.

Many of the people that were laid off are reaching the end of their unemployment benefits.

Rogers said some might take more than one job or relocate if they cannot find equivalent jobs.

Ginny Gierisch, of Paul, a former Simplot employee, said her family ties kept her connected to the area. She's studying human services at the College of Southern Idaho. She said she has heard of many young young-mer Simplot workers going to college or moving out of the area in search of work, so the population data surprised her.

'It's great we haven't lost that many people,' Gierisch said.

Rogers said he expects longer-term economic development efforts to pay off for the Mini-Cassia area.

'Over there it's guardedly optimistic,' Rogers said.

T.F. district plans to revamp bus routes

TWIN FALLS - The Twin Falls School District is working to revamp its transportation spending even though the new state cap is not likely to affect it next year.

John Miller, the district's operations director, said the district will re-evaluate some of its bus routes in preparation for the stricter cost controls coming in the next few years.

The district has a busing plan with at least 32 routes that transport students from first grade to high school. In the upgrade to high school, in the tomorrow this involves dropping of some students at the elementary schools and picking up others, making for a longer ride for some. Miller said some children have to wait as long as half an hour for a bus, creating a need for more supervision.

Miller said the district plans to reorganize the routes, creating a separate north and south route for the high school, but he won't know the final plans until Aug. 1. Miller said the plan should get elementary pupils home sooner than before.

The latest state report on transportation costs for the 2003 fiscal year showed Twin Falls to be within the cap. Miller said, but the district is still motivated to continue working to save money.

'We can always get better,' Miller said.

Busing

where kindergartners were only bused in the morning. She said the need for parents to pick up their children at noon could be a blessing in disguise.

'It could be a good networking thing,' Bigler said.

Whatever the opinions, the Gooding School District is eliminating busing for kindergartners as part of an effort to meet a new state cap on school transportation spending that starts July 1.

Parents receive about 85 percent of their eligible transportation costs back from the state, but for many years districts have not worried about those costs. Four Magic Valley districts - Burley, Gooding Valley and Wendell - are facing possible cuts next year as a result of the new cap imposed by the Legislature.

Brad Jensen, president of the Idaho Association of Pupil Transportation, said the state is looking at every aspect of transportation costs, from radios to tools. Statewide, the new spending cap will eventually have a good impact, Jensen said.

'You've got to get some kind of hands on this spending,' Jensen said.

Jensen is also transportation director at the Idaho Falls School District, which made cuts last year. By coordinating schedules, reducing 13 routes and laying off 13 drivers, the district was able to save more than $400,000.

The spending cap will still let districts be reimbursed at 85 percent, as long as that isn't higher than 110 percent of the average spending around the state. Districts that spend more than 110 percent of the average will have to tighten belts or find other sources of income.

From fiscal year 2003, the cap is estimated to be at $2.88 per mile, or $664 per rider, whichever is more advantageous for a district.

Reps. Scott Bedke, R-Oakley, who carried the spending cap bill in the Legislature last year, said the need for 'safety' busing - transportation for children who live too close to school to qualify for regular bus routes, but have to cross busy streets on their way to school - is common all over the state. So are increasing fuel and labor costs, and those things will be reflected in the state averages. Bedke said they will keep the amount of the cap flat. Districts with special circumstances can appeal to the state Department of Education.

Bedke said the law was devised primarily to get a handle on the Boise School District's transportation spending. Lawmakers have already seen benefits in the form of $4 million being saved this year and freed up to be spent in classrooms next year.

'That's exactly what the Legislature felt needed to be done,' Bedke said.

The estimate from the 2003 fiscal year data is that the spending cap could save the state about $1.8 million from excess spending at 11 districts that are over the cap. The actual cap will affect the amounts for fiscal year 2005, which begins in 2004. So the 2003 data indicate trends, but not actual figures, according to Rod McKnight, the Department of Education's supervisor of finance and transportation services.

Every year, the cap gets lower - 105 percent for fiscal year 2006 and 103 percent for fiscal year 2007 - so more and more districts will be subject to the spending controls. Four might be affected next year, and others are preparing to run on less.

Gooding Superintendent Bob Stearns said his school board voted in May to discontinue the district's noon kindergarten busing in order to save money and keep below the spending cap.

With a cap on fiscal year 2003 spending, Gooding would lose $49,076 in transportation funding.

Gooding Elementary Principal Craig Maki said the school buses about 75 kindergartners out of about 115.

It's going to be an impact in Gooding, Maki said.

The district is also consolidating two bus routes into one. Combined with the elimination of kindergarten busing, that should save the district about $30,000 a year and keep it within the spending cap, Stearns said.

He said his own family had to cope with children losing their kindergarten busing in Wyoming in the early 1980s. The Stearns family coped by carpooling with neighbors.

Stearns said he hopes the changes will not hurt kindergarten attendance, because children who don't attend kindergarten are at a disadvantage when they start first grade.

What's Swan Falls got to do with it?

By Jennifer Sandmann
Times-News writer

BURLEY - Swan Falls is on the Snake River west of Mountain Home, but it has everything to do with local water management.

Watermaster Ron Carlson, who oversees distributions of Snake River water above Milner Dam, outlined a controversial viewpoint on Swan Falls at Thursday's state water meeting in Burley. He has remained on the road since he revealed by the state but from which it has long since departed.

A 1984 state settlement with Idaho Power Co. set water levels at Swan Falls Dam to guarantee the power company hydro-power generation and still allow for upstream water development. Most of that was envisioned as development of groundwater.

When talking about the interplay between groundwater and springs at the river's edge, Carlson said it's impractical from a water manager's vantage point to administer the state's "prior appropriation doctrine." In theory, that calls for shutting off junior water users when senior water users aren't getting their water. But there isn't a method for determining which wells affect which springs.

"There was no question in 1985 that spring users were told they may have to cease their water," Carlson said.

The comment challenges spring users' assertions that junior groundwater users should be curtailed because by pumping the aquifer they are diverting groundwater before it can reach the springs. It also contradicts courts that have determined the state must curtail junior groundwater use when senior surface water users aren't getting their full share of water. Idaho water law dictates that "first in time is first in right" or that water rights established first have priority over later rights.

Idaho Department of Water Resources Director Karl Dreher issued a memorandum to articulate the state's position. The detailed Swan Falls agreement does not address the issue of whether spring users would be responsible for finding alternative water, he said. Because of the subject's absence from the agreement, he said and that the prior appropriation doctrine would apply.

At the most state water committee meeting on July 7 in Boise, a panel of individuals who framed the Swan Falls agreement 20 years ago will field questions about its intent. It's unclear where the discussion will lead in terms of state water management, considering past court decisions.

Carlson suggests that aquifer recharge - not curtailment - is the answer for dealing with aquifer declines. Other people have said that recharge is just one tool along with curtailment.

Water

Aquifer spans from Ashton in eastern Idaho to King Hill west of Glenns Ferry. It's fed by mountain snow melt, precipitation, and seepage from irrigation. It in turn feeds the Snake River with natural spring water, particularly at two key locations.

Springs at American Falls supply the water eventually diverted from the river to irrigate Magic Valley farms. Springs along the Thousand Springs reach from Kimberty to King Hill supply a myriad of water needs, including drinking water for the city of Twin Falls, irrigation water for farms and clean water to raise fish. The Thousand Springs reach also recharges the river, which is drained at Milner Dam for irrigation. If the springs continue to drop, so will the river.

The water table in wells is dropping, too. The aquifer is out of balance, said Chuck Brockway, a hydrologist who is a consultant for spring users. More water is being removed from the aquifer than is going into the aquifer, he said.

"I maintain that the long-term declines are indications of an over-appropriated aquifer," he said.

He outlined an action plan for stemming the decline: Provide alternative water sources for senior spring users when possible. Stabilize spring flows at 2004 levels, which he suggests could be done in five years. Identify a target and restore aquifer levels and spring flows to that level. Collect the spring and aquifer data needed to measure progress.

Michael Creamer, an attorney for groundwater users, offered a different opinion. "We believe that the aquifer is not sick. We don't believe the aquifer has been mismanaged," he said.

The primary cause of spring reductions, Creamer said, is altered irrigation practices. During the first half of the 20th Century, flood irrigation contributed a significant amount of recharge to the aquifer. But sprinklers rendered irrigation practices more efficient and less water is available on the farm today to seep into the aquifer.

Brockway agrees that historical irrigation practices affected the springs, but he presented evidence that show groundwater use consumes 2 million acre feet of water a year from the aquifer. That's enough to cover as many acres with water 1 foot deep.

Groundwater users support more efficient distribution of available springs, Creamer said. He provided data supplied by the groundwater users hydrologist that shows springs in the Thousand Springs reach are discharging 5,200 cubic feet of water per second but that the state has water rights appropriated for only 3,000 cfs.

The more efficient distribution scenario isn't applicable to the American Falls reach where springs simply fill the reservoir. Spring users Clear Springs Foods Inc., Twin Falls and Northside Canal companies, and representatives of small spring users in the Hagerman Valley shared their views.

Spring users advocate that the state's policy of cutting back or shutting off junior water users when there isn't enough water to go around should be applied to groundwater as well. Even though spring users hold senior rights to other water users, they say they are the ones facing cutbacks because of shortages. And they say their water users are getting restless.

Twin Falls Canal Co. Board Chairman Dan Shewmaker said Twin Falls irrigators have been patient as efforts have been under way for three years to work out solutions with groundwater users.

"We have not had any results to this point," he said.

Springs at American Falls are the lowest they have been on record this year. If solutions aren't reached, he quipped that the board's leadership will change and won't be as easy to deal with at the bargaining table.

Making cuts

Here's a look at what the other Magic Valley school districts facing loss of transportation money are considering:

Valley
Valley School contracts with Douglas Busing Co. for transportation. According to fiscal year 2003 data, Valley would lose $14,589 from the state's new spending cap.

"We reworked our contract," said Laurel Nelson, Valley's superintendent. Nelson said the district is revisiting all its bus routes and "counting the number of students picked up at each stop. Nelson said this summer the school board will consider consolidating some routes in order to save money, while keeping bus routes for every student. "Because of the funding cap, we're going to be required to use buses for a longer period of time," Nelson said. Nelson said she does not know if longer bus rides will have much of an effect on learning.

Wendell
Outgoing Wendell Superintendent Larry Manly said the reason his district was above the model spending cap in the past was the fact that the middle school was condemned in February 2000. The 2003 fiscal year data estimated that Wendell would lose $56,737. Busing some students to Gooding and shuttling students around during lunch increased the transportation costs greatly, Manly said. The new middle school has been open for a year, so those increased costs are gone, and Manly said the district will likely be within the new limits for the next year. "It remains to be seen," Manly said.

Buhl
The Buhl School District would lose $11,064 in transportation funding if the cap were in place for the 2003 fiscal year. Buhl's superintendent, Richard Hill, did not respond to repeated phone messages from The Times-News.

Mission control calls astronauts back inside

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) - Two astronauts who stepped out of the International Space Station for an unusually risky spacewalk were quickly ordered back in Thursday when Mission Control spotted a pressure drop in one of the men's oxygen tanks.

NASA stressed that the spacemen were never in any danger. They were safely in the pressur-ized confines of the orbiting complex within minutes, and said they were feeling fine. The spacewalk - a critical repair effort to replace a fizzled circuit breaker - was put off until Tuesday at the earliest. Flight controllers said they need to understand what went wrong before sending astronaut Mike Fincke and cosmonaut Genady Padalka back outside.

Fincke had just popped open the hatch and floated outside when the frightening words came from Russian Mission Control: "You need to return. Something is not right."

Mission Control informed the spacemen that the pressure in Fincke's prime oxygen bottle was falling rapidly. They needed to get back inside, fast, and close the hatch.

Blast in Istanbul kills four ahead of NATO summit

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — A bomb exploded on an Istanbul bus Thursday, killing at least four people and wounding 14, and another bomb went off in front of the Ankara hotel where President Bush is to stay before Monday's NATO summit, wounding three.

Turkey bombings

A bus bomb in Istanbul, Turkey, killed three Tuesday, shortly after an earlier explosion outside the Ankara hotel where President Bush is expected to stay before Monday's NATO summit.

Police said they suspected far-left Marxists in both attacks, the latest in a series of blasts — most of them small, without casualties — ahead of the NATO gathering. Bush arrives in Ankara on Saturday night to meet with Turkish leaders before heading to the summit in Istanbul.

White House press secretary Scott McClellan said "these terrorist attacks are disturbing to the upcoming NATO summit." He added that Bush's schedule would not be changed.

Istanbul has been the scene of al-Qaida attacks in the past, but many Turks also are angry over Bush's visit because of high opposition to U.S. policies in neighboring Iraq.

The Istanbul explosion occurred as the bus passed through the residential Fatih district, about five miles from the summit's venue.

The bomb — a concussion grenade — exploded in the lap of a woman in her early 20s who apparently was transporting the device when it accidentally went off, said Istanbul Gov. Muammer Guler.

"It was apparently a bomb that was being carried," Guler said. "It is understood that the target was neither the bus nor the passengers aboard."

Concussion grenades produce a loud noise and shock wave but usually cause little damage — unless they go off in a confined area. Thursday's blast blew out bus windows and tore through passengers.

Scottish museum will return Maori heads to New Zealand

LONDON (AP) — Three 19th-century Maori heads that were hidden away in a Glasgow museum for more than 50 years will be returned to their native New Zealand, the Glasgow city council decided Thursday.

Council members voted unanimously to repatriate the tattooed preserved heads, called "toi moko," along with an 18th-century leg bone of a Maori warrior chief and several other artifacts.

The items were donated to the Kelvingrove Art Gallery and Museum in Glasgow between 1900 and 1950 but never put on display.

"There's a different attitude around now compared to that time in colonial times when the gruesome practice of collecting human remains was a hobby," said John Lynch, head of the council's cultural and services committee.

"Thankfully, times have changed and in a civilized society, sending these artifacts back was the right thing to do."

New Zealand's Te Papa Tongarewa museum has campaigned for several years for the return of Maori remains taken as trophies by travelers and amateur scientists in earlier centuries. Officials estimate there are about 200 items of remains, from skulls to jaw and leg bones, in museums and other collections around the world.

The New Zealand museum would try to trace the tribal origins of the remains so they could be returned for burial, Lynch said.

One of the heads was purchased in 1906 from James Conrad Cross, a British man who historians believe obtained the head from a relative who owned a curiosity shop.

The other two heads were donated in 1951 by Archibald Shanks, a professional chemist and amateur natural historian, who purchased them from the Blair Museum at Dalry in 1901.

Patricia Allan, curator of the world cultures collection at Glasgow Museum, holds a carved wooden ancestral figure, on Thursday, that was brought back to Scotland in the 18th century.

Pigeons lead team to fresco

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Pigeons fluttering through a hole in the ceiling of a Spanish cathedral led an art restoration team to discover a hidden Renaissance fresco of winged angels that had been covered by a false ceiling for more than 300 years.

The team had been working on the baroque dome of the cathedral in Valencia for more than a month. Removing gray paint and fending off birds flying in and out of the hole, Valencia's regional government said Thursday.

One of the team leaders, Javier Catala, stuck a digital camera inside, shot blindly and came back with partial but spectacular images of a well-preserved fresco believed to be more than 26 feet in diameter.

The photos show parts of four winged angels against a starry blue background, all surrounded by gold-leaf trim.

Saudi Arabia offers foreigners right to carry guns

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Foreign residents of Saudi Arabia will be allowed to carry guns, the police minister announced after a series of militant bombings, attacks and kidnappings targeting Western workers in the kingdom.

"In principle, a citizen has the right to carry a licensed weapon," said John Lynch, head of the council's cultural and services committee.

"Thankfully, times have changed and in a civilized society, sending these artifacts back was the right thing to do."

Doctor calls super-strong 5-year-old just a 'normal boy'

BERLIN (AP) — A genetic mutation made a Berlin 5-year-old extra strong, but the German doctor who has been studying the boy since just after his birth says he's just a regular kid.

The boy doesn't stand out among his peers on the playground, but when he puts his mind to it, he can perform feats of strength, said Dr. Markus Schuelke.

"He's a normal boy — you don't see it, you wouldn't recognize him" out of a crowd, Schuelke said. "He can just lift heavy things."

Schuelke started studying the super-strong boy after he was brought to Berlin's Charite hospital shortly after birth because he was twitching.

That turned out to be nothing, but Schuelke, a pediatric neurologist, found that even though the boy was well within normal birth weight, he was particularly muscular.

Schuelke began conducting tests and found over the course of five years that the boy had a genetic mutation that boosts muscle growth.

It is the first human case where a mutant DNA segment was found to block production of a protein called myostatin that limits muscle growth, though researchers discovered in 1997 that they could create mega-mice by "turning off" the gene that directs cells to produce the protein.

Schuelke, who worked with researchers from the United States, wrote about the case in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine, where he said the discovery could possibly help in the fight against muscle diseases, like muscular dystrophy.

The boy, whose name Schuelke has promised not to divulge, has muscles twice the size of other children his age and half their body fat.

He was born to a muscular mother, a former sprinter. Her brother and three other relatives were also very strong — one a construction worker with a talent for hefting curbstones.

Schuelke said scientists have no way to tell how common the boy's ability is, or if a legion of super-strong types will be discovered now that researchers have learned what to look for.

"How should we know?" Schuelke said. "We have the first case so far."

Cops on the beat use devices to become walking databases

BOSTON (AP) — A police officer stops you on the street, then taps something into a device in the palm of his hand.

The next minute, he knows who your relatives are, who lives in your house, who your neighbors are, the kind of car you drive or boat you own, whether you've been sued and various other tidbits about your life.

Science fiction? Hardly. A growing number of police departments now have instant access via handheld wireless devices to vast commercial databases that contain details on just about anyone officers encounter on the beat.

In a time of terrorism worries, the information could theoretically save lives, or produce clues that an eagle-eyed cop could use to solve a case.

But placing a commercial database full of personal details at an officer's fingertips also raises troubling questions for electronic privacy activists.

"If the police went around keeping files on who you lived with and who your roommates were, I think people would be outraged," said Jay Stanley, a spokesman for the American Civil Liberties Union. "And yet in this case, they're not doing it, but they're plugging into a company that is able to do it easily."

In recent years, police departments have been testing different handheld wireless devices.

Typically, they've used the devices to gain access to law enforcement databases meant only for police that, for example, alert them when someone is being arrested.

At the same time, many police departments have been using desktop computers to search commercial databases to help them learn more detailed information about people they are investigating.

These databases can hold billions of public records from a variety of sources.

Thousands of law enforcement bodies now use them; five states have linked their own records with a huge commercial database in a federally funded program known as Matrix.

Now, in a convergence of the two trends, police are beginning to access the commercial databases using handheld wireless devices.

LocatePLUS Holdings Corp., a Beverly, Mass.-based company that says it maintains more than 6 billion records and has data on 98 percent of the U.S. population, announced this week that it would provide Blackberry wireless devices to state police at Logan International Airport. Two of the planes hijacked on Sept. 11, 2001, took off from Logan.

The officers can use the Blackberrys to access the LocatePlus database wherever and whenever they want, though the records don't include state and federal criminal justice databases or terrorist watch lists.

Such empowerment gains even more heft with Monday's Supreme Court that people who refuse to give their names to police can be arrested, even if they've done nothing wrong.

Justice John Paul Stevens, one of the dissenters, expressed concern that, with simply a name, officers could quickly tap into databases and learn a "broad array of information about the person."

Indeed, that's already happening.

LocatePLUS now has more than 50 law enforcement agency customers that use wireless handhelds to access its database, said chief executive Jon Latorella.

Latorella said the company's database takes information from such sources as registries of motor vehicles, credit bureaus, property tax departments, telephone directories — even unlisted numbers — and courts to create computerized dossiers on people on demand. Checkpoint Inc., based in Alpharetta, Ga., also offers police wireless access to its vast databases, but so far has a smaller number of clients, said James E. Lee, the company's chief marketing officer.

House spars over taxes, spending

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican leaders tried to push spending limits through the House on Thursday despite reboots from GOP moderates who thought the curbs were too tight and from conservatives who wanted even stronger restraints.

With support from President Bush, Republican leaders asked the House to accept legal limits on the one-third of government spending controlled by Congress, and to balance any new benefit programs with cuts in existing benefits other than Social Security.

The same philosophical split that has prevented the Republican-controlled Congress from agreeing to a federal budget for next year was expected to doom the proposals to curb spending. The election-year divisions have erupted over how tightly spending and taxes should be constrained in an era of deficits and war.

The House rejected a Democratic effort to tilt the budget away from tax cuts toward debt reduction and homeland security, health and education spending. The measure, rejected 229-184, would have taken back a slice of the tax cuts meant for taxpayers earning $1 million or more, redirecting that $19 billion to Democratic priorities.

Committee approves bill for bonuses

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — A House committee approved a bill Thursday that would permit more generous recruitment and relocation bonuses for federal employees and would give time off to employees who travel during off-duty hours.

The legislation has been in the works since last year and appears likely to be the only bill making changes in federal employment policy that will pass in Congress this year.

In a bid to build consensus and speed approval in the Senate, Rep. Jo Ann Davis, R-Va., the bill's chief sponsor, offered a modified version of her original bill to the House Government Reform Committee.

Jackson hearing centers on keeping details private

SANTA MARIA, Calif. (AP) — The judge in the Michael Jackson child molestation case has scheduled a pretrial hearing Friday — a proceeding likely to focus on whether many aspects of the case will be kept from public view.

The majority of 13 items on Friday's calendar concern the secrecy surrounding the case and the sealing of almost all documents.

Prosecutors and Jackson's new defense lawyer have consistently sought to keep documents under seal.

A coalition of news media has opposed those efforts, asking for portions of a grand jury transcript, a grand jury indictment and at least 47 sealed search warrants to be made public.

A court-maintained Web site also shows Judge Rodney Melville has been holding private telephone hearings with the parties.

The judge is expected to field news media complaints about these secret hearings Friday.

Jackson will not attend. His lawyer has declined to comment on why he wants so many documents sealed, and on a motion to suppress evidence against the singer.

Castleford can't stand alone in arsenic battle

If Castleford city leaders sue the Environmental Protection Agency over arsenic in drinking water, it won't be a game of high-stakes poker. It's more like Castleford using its last chip.

No one can blame the western Twin Falls County community for looking to the courts. Castleford is staging an outright rebellion of the Clean Water Act's arsenic standard. It's just trying to comply with it.

Arsenic is a natural element that appears in groundwater as a result of mineral erosion. Studies have tried inconclusively to link arsenic to certain diseases. Under EPA rules passed by President Clinton, and kept by President Bush in 2001, all public drinking water systems must lower arsenic levels from 50 parts per billion to 10 ppb by January 2006. Castleford's water measures 22 ppb.

Compared with other contaminants such as nitrates or coliform, arsenic is hardly a health risk to local residents. Yet many western states and cities are still trying to comply with the mandate. They're finding the task is anything but cheap.

Twin Falls, which has a wide tax base, expects to spend about $9 million to $20 million on arsenic rules compliance. Castleford would have to spend $200,000 on a new treatment facility, and $104,000 annually to operate it. And that's a town with 277 people and an annual budget of $175,000.

Castleford applied for a seven-year extension to meet the mandate. But the EPA rejected it in March. Castleford isn't the only town on the clock. In April, Twin Falls City Manager Tom Courtney said Twin Falls wouldn't be able to meet the EPA requirements until 2009 at the earliest.

Further, the problem now is not the time for Idaho towns to be saddled with arsenic burdens. Water tables are down throughout Idaho. Drought conditions are widespread. Further, the problem now is not the time for Idaho towns to be saddled with arsenic burdens. Water tables are down throughout Idaho. Drought conditions are widespread. Further, the problem now is not the time for Idaho towns to be saddled with arsenic burdens. Water tables are down throughout Idaho. Drought conditions are widespread.

Our view: The city of Castleford has a valid case in trying to extend the deadline for arsenic rules.

What do you think? We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

water supplies — such as Twin Falls' Blue Lakes aquifer — are already starting to decline.

In short, the problem isn't arsenic in water. The problem is finding water, period.

Castleford has reapplied for an extension and is ready to use the courts to get it. "We know our chances of winning are quite slim," Castleford Mayor Rita Ruffing said. "We want to comply. But this is going to break it."

"Hopefully Congress or the EPA itself will look at this and see it's an impossibility for small communities to do."

Ruffing is right and other Idaho communities should consider joining the cause. Rather than ignore the 2006 deadline, municipalities need to send a message to Congress that the arsenic standard is a premature, misguided and unfunded mandate.

Clinton rambles through empty 'Life'

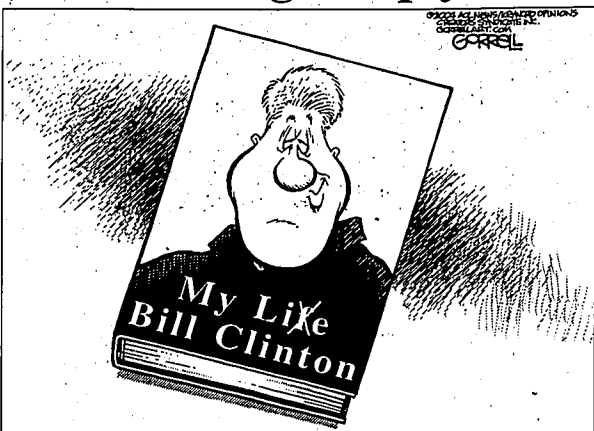

Leaning against a wall near the front of the line, a girl in a tattered leather jacket looked as if someone had just dragged her from a party. Farther back, a man in a button-down shirt and government security clearance was talking as he'd just rushed over from work. A man from Swedish television was asking earnest questions. A bearded man was selling "peace" buttons, or some such thing, but he was in a daze. Generally speaking, the people in the line were not hirsute, overtly left-wing or even visibly political.

ANNE APPLEBAUM

The "line," of course, was the line that formed to purchase a copy of "My Life," Bill Clinton's memoir, at the Politics and Prose bookshop in Northwest Washington Monday night. The books went on sale at midnight, but those standing proudly in front had been there since early evening. By 12:40 a.m. the store had already sold 1,527 books.

If this were any other product — a Michael Moore movie, say, or a Janet Jackson album — such numbers would make this book a grand success. It is less clear that the lines, the sales and the accompanying hype will bring success to Bill Clinton. After all, the former president earns millions from speaking engagements. He didn't have to do this for the money, and he isn't running for reelection. The only reason for him to write a book at all was for the "legacy" that he sometimes talks about: This was his chance to shape the way that all of the people waiting in line for his book will remember him.

Given that context, the book itself can only be described as disappointing, even bizarre. It isn't just that it's dull, like so many political memoirs, or that the sections on Jennifer Flowers and Monica Lewinsky are weirdly abrupt and uninformative: it's utterly lacking in perspective. Apparently, Clinton dawdled over the book for several years, concentrating on his childhood, and wound up racing to finish the final, presidential chapters this spring. The haste shows.

On Page 689, to take a random example, Clinton mentions his veto of the Private Securities Litigation Reform Act, his veto of the Republican budget, his submission of his own "seven-year balanced budget plan," a conversation with Shimon Peres about a plan to cede territory to the Palestinians, the agreement to end the Bosnian war, an encounter with Slobodan Milosevic, and Chelsea Clinton's appearance in the "Nutmegger" — all in five paragraphs.

At the same time, he finds space not only for trivia but for emotional reactions to the trivial. He lists the classes of fozer in his Arkansas high school (calculus, trigonometry, chemistry, physics, Spanish, French, four years of Latin) and the words of the school's "Trojan yell" ("Hullablow, Ke-neck, Keneck, Hullablow") the record of the football team (6-29). He also berates himself for "one of the dumber political moves of my life," allowing his name to be put up for senior class secretary: "It was a foolish, selfish thing for me to do." He lost. Clearly, it still rankles.

In fact, other than the personal issues of interest to him — the putting to rest of his "demons," the healing of his "self-inflicted wounds" — there are no real themes in this book, unless you count his battle with the "forces of reaction and division" that wanted to remove him from office. For all his wretched interest in policy solutions, it's hard to glean anything like a "big idea" from the mass of detail. For all his faith that he is on "the right side of history," he doesn't engage much with his policy solutions, at all, or even acknowledge that they have any arguments worth engaging.

The comparison to another former president is impossible to avoid: May Ronald Reagan thought air pollution came from trees, but in the end he stared down the Soviet Union, and that's what he was remembered for. Clinton, by contrast, has left us with mind-numbing lists of foreign trips, throwaway references to long-forgotten political battles, meetings with the pope, Rabin, Yeltsin, whoever. Because there is no central argument, no clear explanation of what his presidency was about, one is left, in the end, with nothing other than an emotional reaction to the man himself — as always.

That won't stop people from buying this book. Certainly some had early reviews didn't dissuade those who had come to stand in the midnight line.

In the end, though, I'll wager that just as many were there because, as one woman put it, "This is a Washington event." People gather wherever they think history will be made and wherever the gold dust of fame might be sprinkled upon innocent bystanders — however shallow that fame might turn out to be.

We need people in space, fast, for sake of posterity

DOUGLAS MACKINNON

Lord Oxburgh's opinion would seem to carry some weight on this subject. In an interview with the Guardian last week, he discussed the need to capture emissions of carbon dioxide and store them underground — a technique called "carbon sequestration." Oxburgh maintained that "sequestration is difficult, but if we don't have sequestration, then I see very little hope for the world."

Oxburgh was not speaking on behalf of the Sierra Club, Greenpeace or some "left-leaning" environmental group. He is the chairman of one of the world's largest oil companies, and his words are about to cause more than just a ripple.

Last, we have the perennial and growing threat that, leaving aside an "act of God," the human race is more than capable of destroying itself. Whether it is terrorism, war or by accident, technological advances and our ever-increasing ignorance and intolerance have put us at great risk. The world's arsenal of nuclear, chemical and biological weapons stand poised to alter or destroy life as we know it.

So, if Earth is rocked by an asteroid, global warming destroys all life or we unleash the evils created by our own hands, where does that leave the future of humankind? Extinct.

For the sake of posterity, we need to get some humans off the planet. If government can't or is unwilling to do so, then maybe this week's successful flight of SpaceShipOne demonstrates that the private sector is ready to take the first steps.

Democratic platform did not support gay marriage.

I was a delegate to the Democratic Convention in Pocatello from June 17 to 19. The Times-News on June 21, Page A-5, in the first paragraph, stated the Democrats adopted a platform supporting same-sex marriage. That is totally wrong. The final platform said no such thing, it did approve pro-choice, but not same-sex marriage. That fact was introduced as an amendment but was not approved and denied. The final platform is a good one.

The buzz I hear from the eyes on the ground is that the great Idaho State Gov. Kempthorne here to receive two antenna ornaments to celebrate lessons learned from West Coast schools and political college back East. Seems now that he is using his revolutionary Philadelphia freedom and is re-evaluating his education and challenging his teachers' lessons, which is only normal when you live with us in the great state of Idaho.

They say he has decided to dedicate three Idaho National Guard jets to lovingly accompany one of the "miracle" shower jets currently manning capital airport down to a holiday landing to be on display at the Twin Falls, Idaho, air show. I'm sure it will be grand for Remmie and us. We will all surely benefit just to see how it works and what language the cockpit instructions are printed in. I, for one, will surely be disappointed if he drops the ball and sorry seems to be the hardest word.

City can stop protecting pesky squirrels

I do not know where to send this in our city of Twin Falls, so an using this means.

My subject, they is not political. It's those cute critters that all seem to love. They have bushy tails that flit and are fed by all. Pears seem to be the choice, but if you do not wish to bury haul off and bury them, eating only plain nuts.

Well, my complaint is my apricot and Carpathian nut trees and others in the backyard each morning are overwhelmed with squirrels. The fruit on my trees, thanks to no late frost this year, was loaded but right now is half eaten and there is uneaten fruit under my trees by bucketsful.

They are protected only by the city of Twin Falls and the only thing that stops them, only the city of Twin Falls, is the 10,000 (yes) here is the automobile. Fish and Game says they are not native to Idaho, so are not protected by our southern neighbors in the South. Our city would be posted against squirrel hunters as they eat them. Watch outdoor life at times. One year for a certain farm lady, I trapped one by back fence more than 100 (can document) for her gob of trees. Last check, only three stayed.

LETTERS

Now then, city of Twin Falls, tell me how I can eliminate them from my fruit trees and farm. Looks like they get to eat and I do not. Those flicking bushy tails are very destructive. In closing, remember the pigeons?

FOR FEAR HE MIGHT SUGGEST THAT OBESSE AMERICANS BEAR SOME RESPONSIBILITY FOR THEIR CONDITION...

OPINION

Putin gives Bush a boost

President Bush got some very good news last week from one of the key 2004 battleground states: Russia. On Friday, Russian President Vladimir Putin confided that he wanted the U.S. after 9/11 but before the invasion of Iraq that Saddam Hussein was preparing terrorist attacks on America and its interests abroad.

ZEV CHAFETS

Democrats aren't happy with this revelation and even less happy with its timing. It came just one day after John Kerry accused the Bush administration of "misleading" the American public into believing that Iraq posed a terror threat.

If Putin is telling the truth, Kerry's accusation is, at the very least, undermined. After all, the Russians had longstanding relations with Saddam and famously good information about what was happening in Baghdad. Not only that, their warning jibed with the president's own assessment.

The Democrats argue that Bush concocted an Iraq terror connection over the objections of the intelligence community to take the country to war. But that simply isn't true.

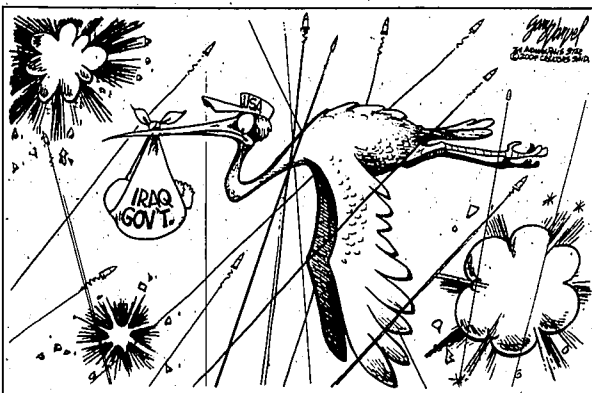

In October 2002, CIA Director George Tenet sent a written assessment to the chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, Democrat Bob Graham, in which Tenet claimed he had 10 years' worth of "solid reporting" on a relationship between Iraq and al-Qaeda.

Bush argues that no responsible post-9/11 president would shrug off such warnings. This is a tough argument for Kerry to counter. Although he voted for the war, he suffers from the traditional Democratic soft-on-national-security image.

The GOP will ask: What would President Kerry have done with the Russian warning?

One answer is that there was no warning, that Putin is lying to carry favor with Bush. But this explanation raises an uncomfortable question. One of Kerry's main themes has been that Bush can't get along with foreigners. But how does that square with the accusation that this president of Russia is actively campaigning on Bush's behalf?

If, in fact, Putin did speak up now to help Bush in November, that can only mean that the Russians think Bush will win reelection.

So, evidently, do Bush's other European critics, Jacques Chirac of France and Gerhard Schroeder of Germany. Suddenly, they are FOG (Friends of George), all smiles at the recent G-8 summit and - even more significantly - willing to give Bush a unanimous victory on Iraq at the U.N. Security Council. They know perfectly well that such cooperation undercuts Kerry's theme that Bush can't get along with America's allies.

Perhaps it is a coincidence, but Putin spoke up on the same day that a new Pew poll found Bush now leading Kerry in the presidential race. According to the survey, Bush's approval rating has gone up by roughly 10 percent in the last month.

The Pew poll also showed that 55 percent of Americans think Bush was right to go to war in Iraq, compared with just 38 percent who think it was a mistake. That is a gap of 17 points, up from a 9 point gap only a month ago.

Bush still gets comparatively low marks on his handling of the economy. But that will change. Most parts of the country are experiencing a strong economic recovery, and indicators suggest that it will continue into the fall.

If it does, Kerry will find it very hard to convince voters that they are in the midst of a depression.

Yes, I know. Polls are just a snapshot. Four months in politics can be an eternity. Anything can happen. But right now, I'd say that John Kerry is in big trouble. If he can't carry Vladimir Putin, he's not going to win in November.

Office seeks host families

TWIN FALLS — The Multicultural Student Services office at the College of Southern Idaho is looking for local families who can host young, career-minded German students who are part of the 2004-05 Congress-Bundestag Youth Exchange for Young Professionals.

Participants are between the ages of 19 and 23 and will be arriving in the United States in early to mid-August.

They will study at CSI during the fall semester and then will work in paid internships in their respective fields from January through the end of June 2005.

They will take part in a seminar at Georgetown University in Washington, D.C., next July before returning to Germany.

Host families receive a monthly stipend to help defray living expenses.

Local families, couples and individuals who are interested in hosting a student should call Kim Prestwich, program coordinator at 732-6293 or e-mail her at kprestwich@csi.edu.

Grand juries indict four in ID charges

BOISE — Federal grand juries have indicted Magic Valley residents in connection with the sale of false identification cards.

One indictment alleges that Roberto Rodriguez, 30, of Gooding, sold forged Social Security cards between August 2003 and March 2004 and sold cocaine to an informant, according to a news release from the U.S. Department of Justice.

Rodriguez has been charged with two counts of false immigration documents, which carries a maximum sentence of 10 years' imprisonment and a $250,000 fine; two counts of sale of fraudulent social security cards, which carries a maximum sentence of five years' imprisonment and $250,000 fine; and one count of distribution of cocaine, which has a maximum sentence of 20 years' imprisonment and a $1 million fine, according to the indictment.

Chip sealing will take place today

- Pierce Street from Addison Avenue East to Filer Avenue
- Buchanan Street from Addison Avenue East to Filer Avenue
- Terrace Drive from Heyburn to the dead end
- Lincoln Street from Addison Avenue East to Heyburn Avenue
- Taylor Street from Addison Avenue East to Heyburn Avenue
- Polk Street from Addison Avenue East to Filer Avenue
- Tyler Street from Addison Avenue East to the end of the street

Three days after the streets are chip sealed, a street-sweeping crew will clean up excess chips.

Sweeping operations will be conducted at night, and traffic control will be present to make sure the public is aware of work crews.

Signs and flaggers will be present for motorists' safety and protection.

The project will continue through June 29, and clean-up sweeping will continue through July 2.

Bedke's campaign chest overflows

Campaign disclosures show Coiner spent $5,000 of his own money

Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Rep. Scott Bedke blew away his opponent Wayne Bagwell in the May 24 primary race for state representative in District 27 — not only in votes, but also in contributions.

Second-term legislator Bedke took two-thirds of the votes, while political supporters gave him $10,470 in the last 10 days before the election. His opponent, Wayne R. Bagwell, a public school administrator, only received $745, or about 7 percent of what Bedke took in during the same time period.

In total, Bedke had $19,483 at his disposal for running in his second primary. Appointed to an open seat in 2000, Bedke has often been talked about as already headed for legislative leadership. Candidates had to report their contributions and final expenditures for the May 24 primary by June 24.

Decision 2004

Bedke had far and away the most money in his war chest.

But in the District 24 three-way face-off for retiring Sen. Laird Noh's seat between Republicans Chuck Coiner, Ken Edmunds and Randy Hansen, a surprise surfaced in the final report.

While Coiner took in another $1,500 from grassroots supporters and threw in $5,000 of his own money, neither of his opponents reported any contributions during the final 10 days before the election.

Earlier, Hansen had taken $13,000 from his own bank account to run in the Republican primary, and Edmunds had paid for virtually all of his $8,000, while Coiner had taken about $12,450 from individual donors. Coiner took the primary with 52 percent of the Republican vote.

In the District 23 race for representative seat A, Frances Field of Grand View took in almost five times as much as opponent Jim Conder of Filer.

She had $4,840 extra to spend during the last 10 days; Conder got $1,000.

Police captain retires after 31 years on force

By Rebecca Meany Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Not many people would recognize all the faces in the wall photo that hangs in Capt. Bob Hodge's office.

All but one has retired, moved on or passed away. The one face that is still a part of the Twin Falls Police Department more than 30 years later is Hodge himself, the longest-serving full-time member of the current department.

"I'm kind of the breed of people who get a job and stick with it," he said. Hodge came in for an interview with Chief Frank Barnett one afternoon in 1973.

"He handed me a policy manual and said, 'Read that,'

Hodge said. "I called (my wife) Carol and said, 'I won't be home for lunch.'"

Hodge, who was born in Kellogg, began with the department as a dispatcher, then moved to patrol after a few months.

Amid the calls to bar fights, burglaries and vandalism, one incident early in his career stands apart from the rest.

During his first year, a woman was found dead in an antique store, stabbed to death with scissors. "I arrived (on scene) first," Hodge recalled. "I ran out and got on the radio. The chief came and said, 'Stay right out here.' I said, 'Good enough.'"

That was his first encounter with serious crime, he said. "It's like the first accident you go on," he said. "You don't forget."

The toughest calls, however, are those that involve children. "SIDS (sudden infant death syndrome) or drowning in a canal," he said. "Those are tough."

The darkest days on the job are a little easier now than when Hodge first entered police work, he said. "It was, 'Buck up and get back out there,'" he said. "Officers leave the profession because of it."

Hodge gives credit to his wife for helping him cope with the taxing emotions — that come with the job. "That's what a police officer really needs," he said about his wife's patience and listening skills. "She's done it for 31 years.

She's been really good about that. If you try to hold it in, it just builds and builds. I probably owe it to her that I've been in the business for 31 years."

Today, there's a lot of help available to officers who experience traumatic events, he said, including the employee assistance program.

"Back then, your wife was the one that got it all," Hodge said. The profile of police officers has also evolved.

"Police work was a blue-collar job," he said. "It's a profession now ... the education you need and the qualifications. If someone's looking to get into the field, they get a degree."

Hodge said the last nine years have seen an enhancement. Please see CAPTAIN, Page B3

Court ruling affirms most Idaho death sentences

The Associated Press

BOISE — One thing is certain with a Thursday U.S. Supreme Court ruling that upheld the execution sentences for 14 inmates on Idaho's death row.

It will not end the legal arguments over their death sentences, lawyers on both sides said.

The Supreme Court closed off appeals for more than 100 death row inmates Thursday, blunting the effect of an earlier ruling that judges cannot determine by themselves whether convicted killers should die.

By a 5-4 vote, the court refused to make its 2002 ruling, which stipulated that juries impose death sentences, retroactive to condemned inmates who had already exhausted all their direct state appeals. The ruling means at least four states — Idaho, Arizona, Montana and Nebraska — will not have to hold new sentencing hearings or allow death sentences to be reduced to life in prison.

The victims' families will not have to go through the trauma of resentencing proceedings.

Idaho Attorney General Lawrence Wasden said.

But Marty Durand of the American Civil Liberties Union disputed the Supreme Court decision, arguing that it denies legal protections to some that

Funnel clouds and rumors don't dampen show

By Chip Thompson Times-News writer

RUPERT — Gathering clouds and rumors of a small tornado touching down a few miles north of town couldn't dampen the spirits of the hundreds who turned out for Thursday's Idaho Regatta Show and Shine competition and trout feed in the Rupert Square.

Teams from as far away as Arizona and California put their boats on display and the Square glittered with chrome and color. Fans were asked to vote for their favorite boat and Mayor Audrey Neiwerth presented a Mayor's Choice plaque as well.

The event also offered an opportunity for race fans to get a close-up view of the boats and talk one-on-one with drivers and crews.

And the teams love coming to Burley despite the distance they have to travel.

"It's quite a long way to come, but you can't go too far for a good time," Bruce Pedro said.

Pedro, a crew member of the GN790 boat from southern California, said that good organization and community support make the event the biggest of the team's season.

"The effort they put into it is tangible," Pedro said. "This is the greatest place to race that we go to," said Rick Maddox of the Lake Havasu, Ariz., "Wild Injun" Racing Team.

"The people in Burley and Rupert are great to us." Owner Deann Rankin said she and her husband David have been coming to Burley for 14 years from Hacienda Heights, Calif.

"The biggest event we have is coming to Burley," Rankin said.

"It's a family sport and we love Burley for the way they treat us."

The Rankins own SS53 and GJ286 which took first place in 2003.

Ruling won't affect Magic Valley killer

By Rebecca Meany Times-News writer

BOISE — The U.S. Supreme Court's ruling Thursday will not affect the proceedings of Magic Valley's only condemned killer.

Jimmie Vuori Thomas, 60, is the only offender sentenced to death in Magic Valley in the Magic Valley. He was convicted of first-degree murder for the Nov. 14, 1997, shooting death of 38-year-old Steven Louder at the home Louder and Thomas's ex-wife shared near Eldon.

Thomas was sentenced to death in August 1999 by 5th District Judge Monte Carlson, but in 2003 the judge ordered that he be resentenced in response to a 2002 U.S. Supreme Court ruling.

Cross-country ski school founder dies

KETCHUM — Leif Odmärk, founder of the country's first cross-country ski school and considered the father of cross-country skiing in central Idaho's Sun Valley resort area, has died at a Boise care center. He was 84.

A native of Sweden, Odmärk competed on the Swedish National cross-country and ski-jumping teams before coming to the United States in 1948 to play semi-professional soccer and hockey.

After watching the Sonia Heine movie "Sun Valley Serenade," he decided to visit Sun Valley and once there stayed. He was a ski instructor at the resort until 1970, when he founded the Sun Valley Nordic Ski School and Touring Center, the first full-time cross-country ski school and teaching school in the United States. The Nordic Center also became the first ski school in America to offer regular instruction in telemark skiing, a cross between cross-country and downhill.

Odmärk died on Monday. The family did not release the Regatta parade will go on today after all

BURLEY — The Idaho Regatta committee Wednesday reversed its decision to cancel today's boat parade in Burley.

The Cassia Sheriff's Department had expressed safety concerns stemming from candy being thrown from boats and children rushing into traffic to retrieve it.

Only one lane of traffic will be closed during the parade. But organizers decided that the parade is an important part of the regatta festivities and, because no accidents had occurred in previous years, the parade should go on as scheduled.

The parade is scheduled to begin at 10 a.m. today and travel from Smith's Food and Drug Center along Hilland Avenue to 16th Street, then to Overland Avenue and Main Street before returning to the starting point.

Parents are advised to keep children off the streets during the parade.

Pike will succeed retiring captain

By Rebecca Meany Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Retiring captain Bob Hodge of the Twin Falls Police Department said he feels confident about the man taking over his position.

"It's somewhat ironic. He hired me, and now I'm replacing him," said Staff Sgt. Brian Pike, who will begin his new job as captain of the patrol division on July 1.

"It's a real honor to be able to come in behind Captain Hodge," Pike said. "Thirty years. That's quite an accomplishment. You like to see people spend their careers here. I'd rather lose them through retirement than them moving on to somewhere else."

Thirty-eight-year-old Pike, a Twin Falls native, rose quickly through the department's ranks.

After a year's service with the Twin Falls County Sheriff's office, he left in 1994 to join the TFPD as a patrolman. Over the next four years he served as drug abuse resistance education officer, school resource officer and SWAT team member.

In September 1998, he was promoted to corporal; then three months later, to sergeant.

He explains his career in practical terms.

"I took advantage of opportunities," he said.

As he prepares for his new position, Pike is evaluating procedures at the department to see what changes could be made.

"My goal is to do a lot of assessing in the patrol division," he said. "In law enforcement we're always faced with changes. I'm really cognizant of the fact that if we change, we're accomplishing our goals."

"Your greatest resources are the men and women who work for you," he said. "They're the ones who make you successful. It's really about them."

"We're starting to think, 'How do we police our community 10 years from now?'" he said. "How do we address the concerns?"

One advantage Pike said he has, and one that he will draw upon, is the staff.

"Your greatest resources are the men and women who work for you," he said. "They're the ones who make you successful. It's really about them."

ment of the department's professionalism, as well.

"With Chief DeVore the department has grown in respect in the state of Idaho," Hodge said. "He's made this a department where people want to work. It's really due to his leadership, how professional and well-trained this department is."

The chief reciprocated his captain's sentiments, and said Hodge's inquisitive, calming presence will be missed.

"He's an individual who will carefully evaluate things from different angles," DeVore said. "I have always appreciated the way he questions things in a way that's helpful."

"At staff meetings I always say Bob is one of my 'Yah, but good,' he said. He asks, 'What about this? What will the reaction to this be? It's very helpful to have him in the process because of his knowledge of the department and the community.'

Dedication to the community is evidenced by Hodge's volunteerism, he added.

"He has a willingness to get involved in the community and spends time (at it)," DeVore said. "He's never was looking for accolades ... he's just out there doing things."

Others members of the department donate their time, but Hodge did so to a much greater extent, DeVore said.

"He's very very liked by the community and by his peers," he said. "Bob's just so good."

Changing times

As Hodge has grown with the department, the town has grown with him.

The changing complexion of Twin Falls has brought challenges, and Hodge said the department is working to address the needs of a growing community.

"The biggest change is Blue Lakes Boulevard," he said. "I remember when you could drive up Blue Lakes with a canopy of trees."

Changes on that street, including a retail explosion, have brought a daily influx of non-residents to Twin Falls.

"We're policing a town of 60,000 with a force for 35,000," Hodge said.

With so many people living in and visiting the town, problems are inevitable.

His hardest day on the force for Hodge was in February 1993 when he was in acting chief.

Officer Ron Farnsworth stopped a motorist on Shoup Avenue West during an investigation of gunshots heard earlier.

"When he went to turn on his lights, (the assailant) opened up with an AK-47 on his window," Hodge said. "It ricocheted under his door and hit him in the leg."

The man was killed by return fire.

"That's the first time an officer had killed someone when I'd been working here," Hodge said.

As in countless other days, his wife stood by him. Now, he's returning the favor.

Hodge and his wife are moving to Boise, where Carol is taking a new position with State Farm Insurance.

As for Hodge, he may seek out another, part-time position in law enforcement, or something entirely.

"I may be flipping burgers," he said with a smile.

"It's tough to leave," he said. "We've lived here for 31 years. But (Boise) is not that far from here. If we don't like it, we can always come back."

Schools bar Scientology-linked drug talks

Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — Los Angeles school officials are warning parents not to allow a drug prevention program linked to the Church of Scientology while California's schools chief has ordered an investigation to determine whether the anti-drug presentations are scientifically sound and free from the religion's influence.

The target of the district and state actions is Narconon, a drug prevention and rehabilitation program that bases its ideas partly on the research and controversial teachings of Scientology founder L. Ron Hubbard.

Narconon has conducted educational assemblies and classes, usually one session of about an hour each, in some schools in Los Angeles, San Francisco and other cities.

In the "Truth About Drugs" lectures, Narconon "presents" test students about the negative mental, emotional and physical effects of drugs (including theories on how they are stored and metabolized in body tissue and how drugs deplete vitamins and nutrients).

In a memo sent to schools last week, Los Angeles Unified School District Assistant Superintendent Maria Reza said the Narconon presentations are "not based on science" and warned schools to use only drug prevention materials that are "research validated" and approved by the district.

L.A. Unified's chief operating officer, Tim Buresh, said in an interview earlier this month in The San Francisco Chronicle.

He asked his staff to evaluate the program, a probe that is expected to take several months.

"We want information disseminated in our schools to be factual, accurate and helpful," O'Connell said Wednesday. "We certainly don't want untested and unscientific theories presented as truthful."

Clark Carr, president of Hollywood-based Narconon International, said that school presentations were based on sound principles and that the program had no motive beyond wanting to keep youngsters off of drugs. He insisted the classes did not include any proselytizing for Scientology.

"If people had never heard of Mr. Hubbard," the lectures would still stand up, because they are based on real science," Carr said.

teachers may have invited speakers without formal approval or records.

Narconon leaders said presentations had been given at more than 350 California schools since 2000.

O'Connell expressed concern about the lectures after learning about Narconon's activities in some schools from a series of articles earlier this month in The San Francisco Chronicle.

Arizona reports 37 cases of West Nile virus

PHOENIX (AP) — The number of people infected with West Nile virus in Arizona has nearly doubled since last week, health officials said Thursday.

There were 37 cases as of Thursday, up from 21 reported earlier, said Arizona Department of Health spokesman Michael Murphy.

West Nile made its first appearance in Arizona last year. Fifteen cases were reported and one person died of the disease then.

The virus is normally transmitted to humans and animals by mosquitoes, which become infected when they feed on infected birds.

Twenty-three horses in the state tested positive this year for West Nile.

In humans, the virus can cause flu-like symptoms such as fever, nausea, headache and muscle aches.

In some cases, it progresses to life-threatening encephalitis or meningitis. In a small number of cases, the disease is fatal.

Murphy said the severity of the cases is troubling.

Of the 37, 13 had encephalitis, 16 meningitis, five had West Nile fever and three were undetermined.

All the human cases were reported in the greater Phoenix area, and all but one is believed to have been contracted in Maricopa County, Murphy said.

"It's starting to become crunch time," he said. "Because of increasing humidity that comes with monsoon season, pools of mosquitoes can breed more easily."

The Arizona State University Health Lab has tested 625 mosquito pools for West Nile this year. Of those, 63 tested positive.

Infected mosquitoes have been found in Yuma, Cochise and Maricopa counties.

Murphy warned: "Do everything you can do to eliminate standing water."

tana, Idaho, Nebraska and Colorado, because those states left it to judges, not juries, to determine whether a killer should be executed.

Following that decision, the Legislature revised Idaho's sentencing structure to include juries. The new sentencing process has yet to be used.

Thursday's Supreme Court ruling has no effect on his case, however, because Carlson ordered resentencing of Thomas before a 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruling, related to the Ring v. Arizona decision.

"He's still litigating post-conviction issues," said LaMont Anderson, chief of capital litigation unit with the attorney general's office.

"We can't appeal because of other issues that need to be resolved."

After convictions are sentenced they can file petitions for post-conviction relief, he said. Judge

Carlson denied in part the state's motion for dismissal of Thomas's petition.

An evidentiary hearing will likely be scheduled sometime this year, he said.

"Once we finish post-conviction, it goes to the Supreme Court," Anderson said.

Once the state's high court issues its opinion, Thomas can be sentenced, he added. A new jury will then be selected for the resentencing.

The jury will hear the case and make a decision about whether the death penalty should be applied, Anderson said. Jurors will not revisit the issue of guilt or innocence.

A resentencing in a capital case is similar to a retrial because the new jury must decide if there were aggravating circumstances that warranted the death penalty.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

have been deemed the rights of others.

"It is fundamentally unfair and counter to the principle of justice that some people have a constitutional right to a jury trial and others do not," Durand said.

Deputy Attorney General LaMont Anderson and State Attorney General Moly Huskey both said defense attorneys will continue to press the retroactive sentencing issue because the court was so divided in the 5-4 decision.

"Lawyers will continue to press every conceivable issue in a death penalty case, including those that are frivolous," said Anderson, who heads the death penalty division in the attorney general's office.

But Huskey said such a close decision fails to produce the kind of clear majority that gives lawyers on both sides confidence there will be no change anytime soon.

"It certainly represents the difficulty and complexity of trying to unravel death penalty convictions," she said. "Defense attorneys will continue to pursue this."

Thursday's ruling leaves the case of Richard Albert Leavitt, whose death sentence was overturned only last week by the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. It will result in reversal of the appellate decision, probably through a petition for reconsideration.

Leavitt, 45, was convicted of the 1984 stabbing death and sexual mutilation of Danette Jean Elg.

City plans to ignore petition for monument

BOISE (AP) — The organizer of the petition drive to force a vote on reinstalling a Ten Commandments monument in a city park says advocates will go to court if city officials refuse to put a successful initiative on the November ballot.

"That might be the only option," said Brandt Swindell of the Keep the Commandments Coalition.

Earlier in the week, Boise Mayor Dave Bieter said that city attorneys advised him the proposition being circulated by the coalition deals with an administrative action, not a city ordinance, and therefore is not open to the initiative process.

The city code specifically limits the initiative to ordinances, the attorneys said.

"We wouldn't be surprised if it leads to litigation," Bieter said.

Swindell called the decision a shameful attempt to block the democratic process, promising to collect the nearly 6,700 registered voter signatures required under the initiative ordinance.

"They should let the voters vote," she said.

The coalition has until Aug. 13 to collect signatures.

INEEL will keep watch on gas leak

ARCO (AP) — Emergency crews were monitoring an accidental release of anhydrous hydrofluoric acid at the Idaho National Engineering and Environmental Laboratory site west of Idaho Falls.

The leak occurred at the Idaho Nuclear Technology and Engineering Center, south of State Highway 26.

The site's fire department had stopped the leak from a gas cylinder, and there were no injuries to six workers nearby when the leak happened, according to an employee who answered the INEEL media information telephone line but refused to give his name.

The employee said the released chemical is common in home rust removers.

It was not known how much gas escaped into the atmosphere.

Spokane paper plans to cut 11 from newsroom

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — The Spokesman-Review will cut 11 people from its newsroom through a voluntary enhanced severance program, the newspaper said Thursday.

Another five jobs have been eliminated in the newspaper's circulation, accounting and press departments.

The goal of the programs is to "try to get our expenses in line with our revenues," Spokesman-Review Publisher Stacy Cowles said.

"Advertising is one of the first expenses to get cut and one of the last to be restored in any recession," he said. "We're still adjusting to the fallout of the recession."

Actor Tony Austin, playing George Armstrong Custer, participates in the annual re-enactment of the famous 'Last Stand' in 1999 near Hardin, Mont.

Actors try not to get hurt while re-enacting Custer's Last Stand

BILLINGS, Mont. (AP) — The fate of Lt. Col. George Armstrong Custer and the men of his Seventh Cavalry is assured with each re-enactment of Custer's Last Stand: They always die.

The real suspense has to do with whether the actors can get through the performance without getting hurt.

Every year, authentically dressed cavalrymen and Indian warriors suffer twisted ankles from stepping into gopher holes and cuts and bumps from falling off horses.

In 2002, one actor lost a finger in a gun mishap, and another had to have a foot amputated after an accident involving a runaway wagon.

So this year, the state agency that provides workers' compensation insurance for the 200 or so paid actors has worked with the organizers to impose more stringent safety measures.

"Our goal," said Nance Hughes, leader of the team that oversees the insurance policy for the actors, "is no injuries."

On June 25, 1876, Custer and about 200 members of the Seventh Cavalry attacked an Indian village along the Little Bighorn River.

Custer miscalculated the size of the Indian force, made up by some estimates of as many as 2,000 Sioux, Cheyenne and Arapaho warriors.

He and his men were wiped out.

The Last Stand will be re-enacted at four shows this weekend, beginning on Friday.

Among the new safety measures are age limits for horse riders — 14 or 16, depending on whether the actor is riding on hilly ground or flatter terrain, and more rigorous checks of the wagons, weapons, and other equipment.

(The guns shoot only blanks, but actors have still gotten hurt by weapons anyway.)

A more distinct line between the actors and the audience will also be drawn to make sure no one gets trampled by a horse or hurt in some other way — although Hughes said she does not know of any instances in which spectators got hurt.

Additional medical staff will also be on hand, and a veterinarian will be available to treat any injured horses.

"All the things are fairly easy to control," said Bobby Brooks, the event's safety director. "You just have to tell people things like, 'You don't have to run your horse at a dead run. A lope or a gallop looks as good — or better — to the crowd. If you run full out, the battle is done in, like, three minutes."

For nearly the past decade, the State Fund has provided insurance coverage for the actors who take part in event, which is held on the prairie near Hardin and sponsored by the town's Chamber of Commerce.

In most years, only one or two claims are submitted, and they are usually for minor injuries suffered during the gallop across uneven ground.

But after the more serious accidents, it became clear to officials that additional measures were needed — not only to protect those involved but to keep costs down for the state.

"I think private insurers would look at it and never touch it," said John Dahl, a funeral home manager in his second year as chairman of the re-enactment.

No injuries reported in INEEL gas leak

By Sandy Miller
Times-News writer

IDAHO FALLS — Workers at Idaho National Engineering and Environmental Laboratory were back on the job late Thursday afternoon after an accidental release of anhydrous hydrofluoric gas from a cylinder.

"Something like this is common enough that we were well prepared," said INEEL spokesman Steve Zollinger. "We had a contingency plan in place."

The accident occurred earlier in the afternoon at INEEL's Idaho Nuclear Technology and Engineering Center site west of Idaho Falls. INEEL's fire department immediately responded to the scene and the leak was stopped soon after it was recovered. The area was secured and all employees working in the area were quickly accounted for. There were no injuries, Zollinger said.

The accident happened during a planned activity to recover and remove the 40-year-old cylinders from a pit next to the road, according to an agency news release. A small, unknown quantity of the substance was released, but emergency workers monitoring of the environment found no residual material in the air. Workers and the public were in no danger because of the leak, the news release said. Roadblocks were set up at the site following the accident but no public roads were closed.

Anhydrous hydrofluoric gas can be dangerous if inhaled, absorbed through the skin or ingested, according to the Centers for Disease Control. The substance is caustic to the eyes, the skin and the respiratory system. In severe cases, lung damage can occur, according to the CDC.

However, INEEL workers wear protective outerwear, Zollinger said.

"Anytime we have a situation like this where there is an issue regarding health, we take every precaution to protect the health of the employees and the public," he said.

Power supply returns to normal

The Associated Press

BOISE — Idaho Power Co. officials said Thursday the utility was returning to normal operations following an evening of blackouts caused by cut lines.

Two high-voltage transmission lines — one at the company's Helix Canyon generating complex and the other between Oxbow and Lolo — failed Wednesday, leaving some customers in Ada, Canyon and Payette counties without power.

State will pay UI Foundation $3.5M for project

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho State Building Authority is giving the University of Idaho Foundation $3.5 million to help pay down its debt from the failed University Place project in Boise.

The money comes from an estimated $4.6 million saved during construction of the Idaho Water Center, the only surviving building of what was once envisioned as a University of Idaho satellite campus. The building authority gave the foundation another $1 million last year.

The foundation is $25 million in debt over the bungled development. The project fell apart last year over problems with financing and cost former University of Idaho President Robert Hoover his job.

Foundation officials will get the $3.5 million in a few days, said Wayne Meuleman, the executive director of the building authority.

"It certainly takes off a lot of pressure," said Michael Wilson, foundation interim executive director. Foundation officials will meet in the next two weeks and decide which debts will be paid down with money.

Building authority members voted unanimously to give the foundation the money, but specified it could only be reimbursed for actual costs it incurred while developing the Idaho Water Center. The foundation submitted expenses totaling $4.9 million.

The foundation is also trying to repay its debt through a claim filed with the state's risk management office. The claim seeks to recover losses estimated at more than $12 million incurred while developing the University Place project.

The University of Idaho Foundation is also selling 26 acres of land in Idaho Falls, valued at $5 million, to Idaho State University as well as property in downtown Boise.

Detroit Police officers respond to a shooting near Hart Plaza during the 46th International Freedom festival on Wednesday in downtown Detroit. Nine people were shot.

Gunman wounds nine in Detroit

DETROIT — A gunman opened fire into a crowd that had gathered for the city's annual fireworks display, wounding nine people and forcing hundreds of revelers to scatter.

Police Chief Ella Bully-Cummings said Wednesday night's shooting apparently followed an argument and that innocent people were caught in the crossfire.

Hundreds of thousands of people packed into downtown and along the Detroit River that runs between Detroit and Windsor, Ontario, to watch the display, a summertime tradition that celebrates the bonds between the cities.

Bully-Cummings said a bystander who took pictures at the scene with a digital camera came forward to offer the photos to police, providing authorities with images of possible suspects in the shooting. Police questioned several people but had made no arrests, city spokesman James Tate said.

Nine people — four men and five women ranging in age from 17 to 47 — were shot, police said.

Softball coach, teen-player found together

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — A 39-year-old softball coach and a teenage player from Oregon who ran off together nine months ago were found in Tennessee this week after a minor traffic accident.

Andrew James Garver was in jail Thursday awaiting a court hearing, a day after he surrendered to police. Authorities will seek to send him back to Oregon to face charges of custodial interference and car theft, said FBI spokeswoman Beth Anne Steele in Portland, Ore.

Michelle "Mimi" Smith, 16, was being held in Juvenile Court custody and authorities were working on returning her to her mother in Oregon. Oregon police have said Smith went with Garver willingly.

Boston hit man gets 14 years in prison

BOSTON — A mob hit man who helped expose the cozy relationship between the FBI and the Boston underworld was sentenced Thursday to 14 years in prison.

John Martorano, 63, admitted killing 20 people but won leniency for helping prosecutors put some of his mob cohorts away.

"I'd like to say I'm sorry to any family I've hurt," the former member of South Boston's Winter Hill Gang said before he was sentenced by U.S. District Judge Mark Wolf. "I have no one to blame for the past but myself. ... My only desire is to be an asset to my family and to make up for the lost years."

Twins do well after separation

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Jade and Erin Buckles, the 4-month-old conjoined twins who were surgically separated Saturday at Children's Hospital, are recovering without complications.

Erin was removed from a mechanical ventilator earlier this week and is breathing on her own, said John T. Berger, a physician in the pediatric intensive care unit, where both babies are being treated. Jade probably won't come off her ventilator for a day or two.

"They're both doing better than hoped for," Berger said. "They're just a delight. Erin is the big star of the day."

The babies have had no bleeding episodes and show no evidence of infection — two of the big risks after major surgery. The function of their hearts is normal, and neither is on any heart-stimulating drugs, he said.

Erin was fully conscious and "looking around" after her breathing tube was removed Wednesday, Berger said.

Senate candidate faces pressure to drop out

CHICAGO (AP) — Well-educated, articulate and glamorous-looking, Jack Ryan was considered the GOP's best hope for reinvigorating an Illinois Republican Party demoralized by a corruption scandal and devastating 2002 election losses.

But those hopes were dashed in lurid fashion this week with the unsealing of diverse papers in which Ryan's ex-wife, "Boston Public" actress Jeri Ryan, alleged that Ryan took her to swingers clubs and tried to get her to have sex with him while others watched.

"Just when you think that the Illinois Republican Party couldn't get any lower, low and behold, we figure out a way to do that," said Gary MacDou-gal, former party chairman. Ryan has come under mounting pressure to drop out of the race, and has gotten little support from party leaders.

At least one Republican congressman has asked him to withdraw and several major newspapers have called on him to step aside or questioned his honesty.

mended 12.5 to 15 years. That did not sit well with some of his victims' families.

"He should get life for cold-blooded murder. I don't care how much info he gave the court," Marion Govoni, whose husband was killed by Martorano in 1969, wrote in a letter to the judge.

Air Force will dismiss charges against pilot

NEW ORLEANS — The Air Force has decided not to court-martial a U.S. fighter pilot who mistakenly dropped a 500-pound, laser-guided bomb that killed four Canadians in Afghanistan in 2002.

Maj. Harry Schmidt, 37, will face nonjudicial punishment and four dereliction-of-duty charges against him will be dismissed in court, the Air Force said Thursday.

He could face punishment including 30 days confinement or loss of one month's pay, about $5,600, Air Force spokeswoman Col. Alvina Mitchell said.

Former Peterson juror says prosecution falling

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. — A juror dismissed from the Scott Peterson murder trial criticized the prosecution's case on Thursday, saying there had been no good explanation of how or why Peterson would have killed his pregnant wife.

Justin Falconer, replaced Wednesday by an alternate, told reporters outside the courtroom that he would have found Peterson not guilty.

"He'd be innocent, because the prosecution hasn't given us any reason to believe otherwise so far," the 28-year-old airport screener said.

He said Thursday that he did not believe the prosecution's arguments that Peterson was motivated by an affair with massage therapist Amber Frey or by financial concerns to kill his wife, Laci.

Wisconsin cleans up after severe storms

MILWAUKEE — Crews worked to restore power and clear debris Thursday after tornado-spawning storms tore through Wisconsin, killing one person and causing millions of dollars in damage.

The storms moved through the state Wednesday evening, downing trees and knocking out power to about 11,000 customers. More than 4,000 were still in the dark early Thursday, utilities said.

Only isolated storms were expected the rest of the day.

Country singer decries unseemly rodeo clowns

NORTH PLATTE, Neb. (AP) — Country singer Michael Martin Murphey wasn't amused by the bawdy humor of clowns at the Buffalo Bill Rodeo.

Murphey, who was honored on Saturday at the Nebraska-Land Days festival for promoting family values in his work, says the clowns are sending the wrong message.

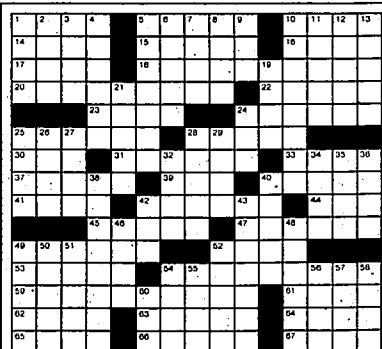

"Why don't we try to clean up some of the so-called humor in rodeo so that it's better for our kids to attend?" he asked the crowd during his performance Saturday. He received the Buffalo Bill Award for "outstanding contribution to quality family entertainment" in the tradition of Buffalo Bill Cody, who based his famous Wild West Show out of North Platte.

When asked by The North Platte Telegraph about his comments, Murphey sent a letter stating that he was "disappointed, dismayed, shocked and sickened to hear the extremely dirty, smutty, below-the-belt humor of the rodeo clowns."

Audience member Sue Elmshaeuser said the clown she dumped out a suitcase of women's underwear and bras and then dragged them around the arena. Another clown who was dressed as a woman used large balloons for breasts, she said.

Elmshaeuser said that one clown, after spotting Miss Rodeo America, exclaimed, "Looking at her makes me want to go home and slap my wife."

Hostess washes guests right out of her bathroom

DEAR ABBY: My fiancée and I recently traveled out of town to visit my best friend, "Frank," who recently married his sweetheart, "Gail." Frank graciously invited my fiancée and me to stay at their apartment. This had been our arrangement prior to his marriage, and I accepted the offer.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

Each morning, my fiancée and I got up and took our morning showers before our hosts. As we finished our showers, Gail would run into the bathroom with an armful of cleaning supplies and scrub it from ceiling to floor.

DEAR FORMER HOUSE-GUEST: I'd say she conveyed that message pretty clearly. Considering the fact that they are newlyweds, I think you'd all be more comfortable at your hotel or motel.

We're not dirty people. We didn't make a mess in their bathroom. We were a little offended, but said nothing.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 42-year-old woman. To those around me I seem to have everything—great kids, a beautiful home, a career and a pretty good life. But deep down I am miserably lonely.

Was this her way of telling us she didn't want us staying there? Should we stay at a hotel next time we visit?
—FORMER HOUSEGUEST, NORTH OLMSTEAD, OHIO

I divorced a cheating spouse eight years ago. I haven't been in a serious relationship since.

I have concentrated on my children, my career and my financial portfolio. But now that my kids are older and I have a lot of idle time on my hands, I miss being in a relationship.

You are only in the fourth inning, so get off your rusty-dusty, stay out there and keep on pitching.

DEAR NEEDS CLOSURE: Please accept my sympathy for your loss. I'll hold you a technique that has worked for many other people. Write your grandfather a letter. Put into it all the things you wanted to say to him but didn't have a chance to. Put it aside for a week, then re-read it and "send it" to your grandfather by burning it. I hope it works for you, too.

Postpone your fun, Leo

IF JUNE 25 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY... you should plan a special treat for Saturday. The focus of importance in your life has been making changes this year, and you are still in the process of altering your life in major ways. If your birthday celebration seems a little dull, know you have a lot of excitement to look forward to later this year.

ARIES (Mar. 21-Apr. 19): Too much hardship and recent thwarting of your desires has you edgy and out of sorts. Partners may seem frosty. Put off amorous adventures until Saturday.

Taurus (Apr. 20-May 20): Your guard is up, and formally chills social functions. Partners will only go out for dinner if there is a moneysaving coupon handy or business to transact.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your judgment is a little better today than usual, and you may be in perfect mental-harmony with a close companion. Avoid the nightlife until tomorrow.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): The need to make important changes becomes evident today. Fear and anxiety have become thresome, so make a break from those who cause dissension.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Few are in the frame of mind for fun and entertainment while a serious atmosphere prevails. You will have more fun if you hold off on outings until Saturday. Rest up at home, save money and shake off the blues tonight.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Seek good advice today while wise people are available and willing to provide a helping hand. Valuable information can come your way. Backlash from recent mix-ups and misunderstandings could spoil Friday-night outings.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Once bitten, twice shy, or so they say. You may still be smarting from unpleasant situations that you encountered this week.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Pass up socializing unless it is a command performance for business reasons. Devious scheming may lurk beneath invitations, and you are better off curling up with a good book tonight.

SAGITARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Rough spots can smooth out the difficult spots where significant relationships are concerned. The mood becomes businesslike this evening, and amorous intentions are likely to receive a rebuff.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You can easily exert your charm within the boundaries of business functions, but wisely keep others at arm's length. Someone close may be coldly calculating how to take advantage of others.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): People will appreciate your truthfulness more than ever. Count the pennies that you have saved up, and stay close to home tonight.

PISCES (Feb. 19-Mar. 20): Evidence of trickery or manipulation could have you fuming. But sometime today you will hear some honesty, and it will restore your faith in others.

Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — After J.R. Simplot, he's the most influential private citizen in Idaho.

Ninety-five hundred Idahoans call him boss and the $7.6 billion company he runs is by far the state's largest corporate taxpayer.

So why is Steve Appleton, president and CEO of Boise-based Micron Technology, fascinated with 53-year-old British technology?

"It's fast, maneuverable, fun to fly," said Appleton, who will pilot his Hawker Hunter jet warplane in a high-speed performance at Saturday's Twin Falls Centennial Air Show at Magic Valley Regional Airport at Joslin Field.

Appleton, 44, actually owns five Hunters — purchased after they were retired by air forces of Singapore, Peru and Canada. Two are flyable; the other three he uses for spare parts, many of which aren't available anywhere else.

"I've flown supersonic (faster than the speed of sound), although you're only supposed to do that over the ocean," he said in a telephone interview with his Boise office. "You don't notice much difference except that the gas gauge goes down faster."

Appleton's interest in Cold War aircraft is comprehensive; he's flown the two Russian-built counterparts of the Hunter, the MiG-17 and the MiG-21.

"They don't handle nearly as well," he said. "The MiG-21 has a small wing, and was developed at a time when the emphasis was on speed."

Created by legendary aircraft designer Sydney Camm, the Hunter was first flown a month after the Korean War broke out, and was rushed into production at a time when NATO countries were engaged in a furious arms race with the Soviet Union. When it reached Royal Air Force squadrons in 1953, the Hunter was the fastest airplane in the world — 730 mph at low altitude.

The aircraft's wing surface area — 349 square feet — made it valuable both in dogfights and as a ground-attacker.

In the latter role, it made a lot of history. It was Hunters that bombed the presidential palace in Santiago, Chile, in 1973, ending the reign of the first democratically elected Marxist leader, Salvador Allende. India flew them in both of its wars with Pakistan, in 1965 and 1971, destroying Pakistani tanks and helping India win both conflicts. And it was Lebanese Hunters that first attacked Israel in the Six-Day War in 1967.

Appleton flies a hybrid — a single-seat version with a more powerful Rolls-Royce engine than it was originally equipped with — in air shows and whenever else he can find the time.

"It has more speed," he said, "and excellent handling characteristics."

And occasionally, he encounters a retired RAF pilot with whom to compare notes.

"It's a great airplane."

The Twin Falls Centennial Air Show will run from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday at Magic Valley Regional Airport at Joslin Field. Gates open at 9 a.m. and the show starts at 11 a.m. Cost is $2 per person, but kids 5 and under free.

Attractions will include an appearance by — and, weather permitting, a flight of — a Wright Flyer replica, built by Utah State University's Aeronautics Laboratory and Space Dynamics Laboratory. Also featured will be the futuristic high-speed Long EZ; choreographed, aerobically routines by OK3AIR pilots Greg Peterson and Nadim Abu-Haidar; Sonny Walker in his Pitts 2-C; Rob Harrison in his Zlin 50; a military parachute performance; flight demonstrations by a C-17, F-18 and an A-10, and static displays of the F-15, F-16, KC-135, F-4, F-5, F-37, T-38 and Apache and Black Hawk helicopters. Between 10,000 and 15,000 spectators are expected.

Filer plans to have some fun this weekend

The Times-News

FILER — The local Kiwanis have shrunk their annual late-June hula-hoos for three days to two, but don't worry: Filer Fun Days' signature event, the Famous Chicken Drop, isn't going anywhere.

The principle of a chicken drop is to back the right bird on a numbered, grid-pattern playing surface and wait for nature to take its course.

It will often to excess. Guess correctly, and you're a winner. You can find out Saturday at 3 p.m. near the caboose at the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds.

But the chicken drop is just one event in a jam-packed Saturday that also includes a parade, which begins at 11 a.m., starting and finishing at the fairgrounds after making a loop through town. The parade typically draws about 1,000 people, according to Guy Taylor, the Filer Kiwanis president.

In all, Taylor guesses, Fun Days draw between 1,500 and 2,000 folks for events that include a street dance (8 p.m.-midnight) on Main Street, a concert at the fairgrounds (featuring the Magic Valley Gospel Opry from 7-9 p.m.), a fish fry (4-7 p.m. at the fairgrounds), and a variety of games for grown-ups and activities for children.

Sunday's event is a community church service, held from 10:30 a.m. until noon at the fairgrounds.

Fun Days are unique in that it's the only summertime communitywide festival in the Magic Valley run by a single service club, although the Kiwanis get support for the event from the City of Filer and a dozen West End and Twin Falls businesses.

The proceeds go to support Kiwanis youth activities.

Company of Fools reprises 'Always ... Patsy Cline'

By Karen Bosslok
The Wood River Journal

HAILIEY — Slap your tightest Levis on the ironing board and dust off your Lucchese boots.

Patsy's back. Company of Fools is staging an encore of Ted Swindley's "Always ... Patsy Cline," the alternately humorous and poignant musical tribute to the woman who opened the door for female country music singers, through July 11 at the Liberty Theater.

Audience members got aching cheeks from the broad smiles they wore through the musical, as well as callused toes from tapping their toes to the beat, when the Fools staged it last summer.

Some audience members returned again and again.

"Patsy Cline was a vocal phenomenon — the Ethel Merman of country music," said R.L. Rowsey, who will again head the four-member band as the Liberty Theater is transformed into the Ryman Auditorium of the Grand Ole Opry. "She had such a huge open sound and she sang from her heart."

Debra Wagener, who won several awards for her portrayal of the Cline at Swift Creek Mill Theater in Richmond, Va., will return to reprise her role as Patsy And longtime Sun Valley resident Danielle Kennedy is again donning the red cowboy boots she found at Barkin Base as she transforms into Patsy Cline's biggest groupie.

"I just feel really blessed getting to revisit this cherished role," Kennedy said. "It always seems like just when you're getting warmed up the show closes. Since I found out we were going to do it again, I've been driving everyone crazy humming the tunes."

"Always ... Patsy Cline" takes its name from the way the spunky country crooner used to sign her fan letters.

The play focuses on the unusual friendship Patsy shared with star-struck housewife Louise Seger, who fell in love with the talented singer when she heard her perform "Walkin' After Midnight" on "Arthur Godfrey's Talent Scouts" in 1957.

Seger followed Cline's career on TV and radio and finally met her at a Houston concert in 1961, where they rapidly became best friends and pen pals over a plate of scrambled eggs.

There's definitely a big Louise inside me because I'm a major fan not only of Patsy Cline but of Laura Linney, whom I saw last week on Broadway, and lots of others," Kennedy said. "I watch the show where Lucille Ball goes to Hollywood and trips into Cary Grant and, my gosh, that's me." Cline was already singing on the radio in her hometown of Winchester, Mo., by the time she was 14. But her career didn't take off until she recorded "Walkin' After Midnight" 10 years later.

Loud, boisterous and generous, Cline has been credited for helping scores of performers, including Loretta Lynn, make it in the business.

In the eight years that followed "Midnight," Cline recorded nearly 100 songs, including "Crazy" and "I Will Be Here." She was just 30 when she died in a plane crash in 1963. But nearly a half-century later, she is still the No. 1 jukebox play in the world.

Wagoner, who falls from Patsy's home state of Arkansas onto Cline's ballads, complete with every yodel and gottal stop — that heart tugging crying sound you get when the vocal chords smack together — when she slips into the elaborate costumes created for this show.

"There's not anything I've done yet that makes me as happy as when I do this show," Wagener said.

Kennedy says she was inundated with e-mails and letters from people who saw the play last summer. One woman told a friend of Kennedy's in the lobby that she was a friend of Louise, who was in her 70s and still living in Houston. "You tell Danielle Kennedy that she is Louise and that if Louise was here she would tell her, 'You done me proud,'" the woman said. "That really choked me up." Kennedy said. "I just hope I can recreate that feeling again. I took Louise to New York with me and dolled her all up with a haircut and fingernail polish and I've been taking her to the athletic club working her out on the treadmill so I could get back on those tight little jeans. And then, I re-read the script again as if I did not know the lines and covered a lot of things implied in the life of Louise that I didn't notice before. That's good because if it's fresh for me, it'll be fresh for the audience, as well."

But the biggest thing is discovering myself inside Louise. I saw Sally Struthers play this role and she raised the bar so high because she was true to herself, finding this woman inside herself. Of course, playing opposite someone with Debra Wagener's caliber automatically makes you raise the bar."

In addition to Rowsey, Michael White will return to play guitar and Dawson Howard, bass. Sarah Kovitz, a violin teacher at the Sun Valley Summer Conservatory will play fiddle and Joe Spencer, who often performs at the Gooding Opera House, will play drums.

The July 11 show will feature a Fools Unplugged component where audience members may enjoy light refreshments and ask questions of the actresses following the show.

Organizers super-size this year's fireworks show

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — The College of Southern Idaho campus will be the celebration point for the Twin Falls Independence Day celebration on July 4. This year's fireworks display has been enhanced by a one-time $12,500 grant from the Twin Falls Centennial Commission to mark the city's 100th birthday.

Vendors and the Twin Falls Municipal Band will locate on the east side of the campus near the Shields and Aspen buildings. The clear of the construction zone around the Fire Arts building.

Vendors will start selling burgers, hot dogs, tacos, ice cream and drinks at 4 p.m. The Twin Falls Centennial Commission will sell commemorative merchandise. The band performance will begin at 8 p.m. The fireworks will begin at 10 p.m. and will once again be synchronized to music on MIX-103 FM.

Organizers of this year's fireworks say the Twin Falls display will be even larger than the show in Boise, thanks to the extra money to help celebrate the city's centennial. Due to the increased size and altitude of parts of the display, as well as a preference on the part of the pyrotechnicians, the launching point has been moved to a spot in the college's alfalfa field north of North College Road. This means that all roads and parking lots at the college will remain open. North College Road will be closed from Washington Street to Fillmore all day July 4.

As a result of the new fireworks staging area, the college security staff foresees no need to close any of the campus leaving streets in North College Road that evening, allowing visitors to sit wherever they would like. Frontier Field Road also will remain open but will be closed as it meets North College Road.

Randy Dill, physical plant director, said visitors are encouraged to pack out as much of their litter as possible since the event often overwhelms the college's trash receptacles. Visitors are discouraged from bringing their own fireworks to the event. Minor injuries and fires, have been caused in years past by fireworks that have been brought to the campus.

Independence Day starts early in M.V.

The Times-News

The Fourth of July will come a little early in Hazelton and Rupert.

By long practice, Hazelton will celebrate Independence Day a week early — on Saturday night — with fireworks and a parade.

It will roll from the city shops to City Park, site the fireworks, at 6 p.m.

A car wash is scheduled at the park from 8-10 a.m., followed by a brunch from 10 a.m. to noon.

And there will be a carnival for kids Saturday night in the park.

Rupert plans fireworks Wednesday night, at the start of the city's traditional six-day independence Day celebration. They'll be set off following a concert by Kane's River Bluegrass Band, which begins at 8 p.m. in Rupert Square.

There's the 23rd annual Christmas Lighting Breakfast from 6-10 a.m. on the square, featuring pancakes, eggs, sausage, hashbrowns, coffee and juice.

Cost is $4 for adults and $2 for kids 8 and under. Proceeds are used for Christmas lighting, decorations and maintenance in Rupert.

Food booths will open the square later in the day, and the carnival starts up at the Minidoka County Fairgrounds at 5 p.m.

On Thursday, there's a concert by the Twin Falls Municipal Band on the square at 8 p.m., preceded by local entertainment.

The rodeo commences on July 2, with a patriotic program on July 4 and a parade downtown on July 5, starting at 11 a.m.

Tropicalia will bring Brazilian jazz to Buhl

The Times-News

BUIHL — Tropicalia, a Brazilian jazz group, will perform Sunday at McClusky Park, the second concert of the Buhl Arts Council's summer series.

The show, which is free, starts at 1 p.m.

The music of Brazil is an intoxicating rhythmic mix of African, European, native Brazilian and New World influences. Tropicalia is an energetic band that covers a wide variety of music, including samba, bossa nova, choro, rock, and folk-influenced tropicalism, samba funk and Latin jazz fusion, sung in both English and Portuguese.

The band includes some of the best jazz and Latin musicians in the Pacific Northwest: Bill Courtaul on guitar, Phil Garonzik on woodwinds and Chuck Smith on keyboards, with vocals by Carol Hays.

The Summer Concert Series is co-sponsored by the City of Buhl, the Buhl Chamber of Commerce, the West End Men's Association and the Buhl Kiwanis, with financial support from the Idaho Commission on the Arts, the National Endowment for the Arts, Con Paulos Chevrolet and Red Lion Hotels.

Future concerts include the Twin Falls Municipal Band on July 3 and the Brent Jensen Jazz Band with Blue Hart on July 11.

Secret Window

It's a return, you're good. Johnny Depp's good movie, bad. Well, not bad, exactly. Not more than a bit of a letdown. Depp's performance as depressive New York writer being stalked by a obsessive, dinky farmer (John Turturro) who claims to have been plagiarized, the movie, based on a Stephen King story, leaves too many loose threads hanging in an incongruously Psycho-esque climax. The first three quarters of David Koepp's movie aren't too shabby, but as Depp's Mort Rainey himself admits, "The ending" — which here falls flat — is the most important part. Contains obscenity, some thematic sexuality and a modest amount of grisly visuals and violence. PG-13.

Bad Santa

In Terry Zwigoff's film, Billy Bob Thornton plays a foul-mouthed, big-haired, four-partnered, big-brotherly, with a 12-year-old daughter, turns out to be a real cracker, in a partnership with the three-foot-tall Santa Jr. buddy Mattias (Tony Danza), who, notably, from the street, when the day job is done, when Willie becomes friends with a kid who invites him to his home, however, the old cynic doesn't realize his social redemption has begun. "Bad Santa" is not for anyone who considers Christmas the sacrosanct to joke about, or who shudders at "Verbal Abuse" abusive scenes involving children. But for anyone else with a dark sense of humor, the movie, a subversive riot. And Thornton is one hilariously bad. Santa. Contains pervasive obscenity, sexual content and some violence. R.

The Lost Skeleton of Cadavra

To begin with, you have to appreciate the inherent weirdness of B-movies in order for this parody of cheap living-saucer and monster flicks from the 1950s and 1960s to work. But if you do — meaning that you can sit through multiple screenings of "Plan 9 From Outer Space" and like it — you're likely to love "The Lost Skeleton of Cadavra," a satire of bad science fiction and horror that is as affectionate as it is cruel.

PG

Wickedly, wretchedly accurate in its lame dialogue, cheap effects, scary music and stupid plot, writer-director-star Larry Blumhert's weirdie — which features a mutant, a talking cadaver, an evil scientist, a mutant alien-beast and two all-ver-jumped-up aliens — is hugely giddy fun. Contains nothing offensive other than a couple of slightly suggestive double entendres. PG. Source: Washington Post

Cal State Fullerton catcher Kurt Suzuki, bottom, tags out South Carolina's Steve Pearce at home plate in the top of the ninth inning of a College World Series elimination game in Omaha, Neb., Thursday. Cal State Fullerton beat South Carolina 4-0, and will face Texas in the finals.

Cal St. Fullerton advances, shuts out South Carolina

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Scott Sarver and Jason Windsor combined on an eight-hitter, and Cal State Fullerton advanced to the College World Series championship round with a 4-0 victory Thursday night over South Carolina.

The Titans (45-22) will face top-seeded Texas (58-13) in the best-of-three championship series beginning Saturday.

Sarver (3-2) pitched six innings in just his second start of the season, allowing five hits, walking two and striking out seven.

Windsor, who earned his first career save, limited the Gamecocks to three hits and struck out the side in the ninth to send the Titans to their first finals since the 1995 team won the championship.

Windsor had pitched a three-hitter last Saturday in beating the Gamecocks 2-0 in the first round. In 12 CWS innings, all against South Carolina, Windsor held the Gamecocks to six hits and struck out 19.

Fullerton became the first team since Pepperdine in 1992 to record two shutouts in the same Series and the first team since California in 1957 to shut out the same opponent twice.

The Gamecocks, who had scored 35 runs in their last three CWS games, became the first team to be shut out twice in the same CWS since Fullerton in 1992.

South Carolina forced Thursday's elimination game by beating the Titans 5-3 Wednesday.

The Titans led 3-0 in the fourth against Matt Campbell (10-6) on Felipe Garcia's double and singles by Bobby Andrews and Neil Walton.

They added a run when Ronen Prettzman hit Campbell's first pitch of the seventh over the right-field wall for his third homer of the year.

The Gamecocks' first two batters reached base in the seventh and eighth innings, but they couldn't break through against Windsor.

In the eighth, Michael Campbell lined a two-out single into the outfield but Andrews, the Fullerton right fielder, threw out Steve Pearce at the plate to preserve the shutout.

The finals will pit Texas coach Augie Garrido against his old team and former top assistant, George Horton.

Garrido won 931 games and three national championships in two stints totaling 21 seasons at Fullerton.

Since taking over at Fullerton after Garrido led eight years ago, Horton has guided the Titans to four College World Series.

Horton's team was on the brink of reaching last year's championship round after a 2-0 start in the CWS, but the Titans were eliminated after two losses to Stanford.

Jazz take Humphries in first round

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Happy with their first two picks in the draft, the Utah Jazz quickly traded away their third — all 7 feet, 5 inches of him.

A team desperate for inside scoring, the Jazz decided they were comfortable enough with forward Kris Humphries and guard Kirk Snyder that they traded 5'11-inch center Pavel Podkolzine to Dallas for a first-round pick next year.

"We got a power forward and a big wing player," Jazz vice president for basketball operations Kevin O'Connor said. "We'll address our (other) needs in free agency."

O'Connor said the Jazz did not want to go with three rookies on the roster for a team that was going to be young even before the draft. Utah took two college players in Humphries and Snyder, then picked Podkolzine with the trade already in mind.

"This is a work in progress. We're still working our way through this," O'Connor said. "We tried to address some of the needs that we have. We needed some size up front."

But not Podkolzine's size. Podkolzine played in just 22 games in Italy last season and although he has the massive size, he lacks experience. Snyder played three years at Nevada and Humphries played one at Minnesota, where he was the Big Ten's freshman of the year after leading the league in scoring and rebounding.

O'Connor said Humphries and Snyder should be able to contribute to rebuilding the Jazz quickly under veteran coach Jerry Sloan.

Who is expected to return to the Jazz for a 17th season, Sloan, whose wife of 41 years, Bobbye, died last week, missed the draft to be with his family at his southern Illinois farm. Funeral services for Bobbye Sloan are scheduled for Saturday.

The Jazz are hopeful that Sloan will return and drafted with him in mind, giving the two rookies a strict leader in their first NBA season.

Humphries has been labeled by some as selfish, a tag that wouldn't last long under Sloan.

"We think he's going to come in here and be able to adjust to our system," O'Connor said. "The nice thing about the Utah Jazz is I think anybody knows when they come here what's coming. Whether it's a free agent, whatever it is. They know what to expect."

Humphries (6-9, 235 pounds) worked out for the Jazz one week before the draft and was impressive enough for Utah to use the first of its three opening round picks on him. He averaged 21.7 and 10.9 rebounds, becoming the first freshman to lead the league in both categories.

Humphries said he's followed the Jazz for a long time and is familiar with the team history of Sloan and former stars John Stockton and Karl Malone. He could be called upon to play Malone's former position within a few months.

"I had a feel before I came in and I felt even better when I left," Humphries said in a conference call after he was picked.

Jazz fans who watched the draft from the Delta Center led the pick and applauded when team president Dennis Haslam announced Utah was taking Humphries. But two picks later, there were quite a few boos when Haslam said Utah was selecting Snyder (6-6, 225).

But when Haslam announced that Utah was going with Snyder, a 6-foot-6 guard, there were plenty of "boos" shouted at Haslam, who said the coaches were big on Snyder but it was difficult to hear over the fans.

"Obviously they see something in the way I play the game of basketball," said Snyder, a career 42.6-percent shooter. "I don't want to leave them empty with what they've done. I think they made a great decision."

Draft

Wisconsin guard Devin Harris was chosen fifth by Washington, which was picking for Dallas as part of a trade agreed to Wednesday night that sends Jerry Stackhouse and Christian Laettner to Dallas and Antawn Jamison to the Wizards.

Stanford junior Josh Childress went at No. 6 to Atlanta, which had been trying to move into the No. 1 spot.

Duke freshman Luo Deng was picked seventh by Phoenix, which planned to trade him to Chicago.

Toronto chose Brazilian center Rafael Araújo of BYU, Philadelphia chose Arizona forward Andre Iguodala at No. 9 and Oregon forward Luke Jackson went to Cleveland.

Andris Biedrins, an 18-year-old from Latvia, shed tears after he was selected 11th by Golden State and Bakersfield. Calif. high schooler Robert Swift — a 7-footer — went next to Seattle.

Sebastian Telfair of Lincoln H.S. in Brooklyn was chosen 15th by Portland, a higher-than-expected slot for one of the record nine eligible high school seniors. Miffed that he was not invited to sit in the "green room" offstage, Telfair celebrated at rapper Jay Z's nightclub, not far from the Garden.

The Utah Jazz had three first-round picks and selected Minnesota forward Kris Humphries (14th), Nevada guard Kirk Snyder (16th) and 7-foot-5 Russian Pavel Podkolzine (21st). Boston also had three first-rounders and chose Mississippi high school senior AJ Jefferson (15th), St. Joseph's guard Delonte West (24th) and Oklahoma State guard Tony Allen (25th).

Prep players Jeth Smith (Oak Hill Academy), J.R. Smith (St. Benedict's Prep, Newark, N.J.) and Dorell Wright (South Kent Prep, Conn.) went to Atlanta. New Orleans and Miami will picks 17-19.

Twin Falls Cowboys fall in extra innings to Elk River

The Times-News

RAPID CITY, S.D. — The Twin Falls Cowboys Class AA team opened the Rapid City Firecracker Classic wooden bat tournament with a 3-2 loss to Elk River, Minn. in eight innings Thursday.

Alex Hill hit two singles, as did Todd Reibhen for the 14-6 Cowboys, who play host Rapid City American Legion Post No. 22 at 7:30 p.m. CDT Friday.

Tim Mealer took the loss despite striking out 10 and giving up only three walks.

Garciparra's two-base error in tenth boosts Twins past Boston

BOSTON (AP) — Lew Ford hit a sacrifice fly following a two-base error by Nomar Garciaparra in the 10th inning, and the Minnesota Twins beat the Boston Red Sox 4-3 Thursday.

Leading off the 10th, Garciaparra fielded Cristian Guzman's grounder up the middle and fired the ball into the Boston dugout.

Guzman took third on Jose Offerman's sacrifice, then scored on Ford's fly to left fielder Manny Ramirez.

Boston's David Ortiz homered and drove in three to take the AL lead in RBIs with 68.

Devil Rays 19, Blue Jays 13

TORONTO — A day after their club-record 12 game winning streak ended, the Tampa Bay Devil Rays set team records for runs and hits in a game.

Jose Cruz Jr., Carl Crawford and Geoff Blum homered for the Devil Rays, who finished with 24 hits, three more than their previous mark. The old club record for runs was 15.

Julio Lugo went 5-for-7 to set a team record for hits, and Tampa Bay tied its record with 11 runs.

Cruz, Crawford, Lugo and Rey Sanchez each drove in three runs for the Devil Rays, who have won 16 of 19.

John Halama (4-1) won despite allowing five runs and eight hits in five innings. Rob Bell pitched the last four innings for his first save, despite allowing four homers.

Yankees 5, Orioles 2

BALTIMORE — Alex Rodriguez and Derek Jeter homered to back a solid pitching of Javier Vazquez, and New York handed Sidney Ponson his seventh straight defeat.

Rodriguez hit a two-run shot in the third inning to tie the game, and Jeter gave the Yankees the lead for good with a two-run drive off Ponson (3-10) in the fifth.

Vazquez (8-5) allowed two runs in the first inning, then blanked the Orioles over the next six. The right-hander, 15-1 in his last seven starts.

Mariano Rivera worked a perfect ninth for his 28th save in 29 chances.

Braves 9, Marlins 4

MIAMI — Chipper Jones, J.D. Drew and Nick Green drove in two runs apiece for Atlanta, which avoid being swept in a series for the first time this season.

Drew doubled twice and tripled as Atlanta snipped a three-game losing streak. The Braves roughed up Dontrelle Willis and won for just the second time in eight games.

White Sox 7, Indians 1

CHICAGO — Jose Valentin hit a three-run homer in the first inning, and the White Sox tacked on four runs in the eighth.

Chicago's fifth starters had been 0-8 this season before Jon Rauch (1-1) limited the Indians to one run in five innings. He gave up six hits, and White Sox relievers held Cleveland hideous.

Jake Westbrook (6-4) pitched six innings, allowing just four hits and no earned runs with two walks and six strikeouts.

National League Reds 6, Mets 2

NEW YORK — Mike Cameron lost Ken Griffey Jr.'s bashed-losing fly ball to center field in the sun, allowing three runs to score in a five-run seventh inning as the Cincinnati Reds rallied past the New York Mets 6-2 Thursday.

Cameron's error foiled a strong start by Tom Glavine (7-4), who leads the major leagues with a 2.11 ERA.

Cardinals 4, Cubs 0

ST. LOUIS — Chris Carpenter threw eight sharp innings and had two hits and an RBI for St. Louis.

The NL Central leaders took two of three from their closest competition, and lead the division by three games after a 7-2 homestand. The Cardinals, who scored all their runs in the fourth with the help of an error by shortstop Rey Ordonez, are 29-8 against the Cubs at Busch Stadium since 2000.

Tony Womack had three hits and an RBI, and Hector Luna and Mike Matheny drove in a run apiece. Womack is batting .384 in June with 13 multihit games.

Tigers 12, Royals 3

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Ivan Rodriguez had three doubles, a single and four RBIs to help the Detroit Tigers stop a five-game losing streak.

Nate Robertson raised his league-leading average to .373 with his fourth four-hit game of the season. He is batting .478 in his last 23 games with 10 doubles, three homers and 21 RBIs.

Nate Robertson (6-3) combined with two relievers on a four-hitter, and Brandon Inge and Bobby Higginson had three hits each for Detroit.

Expos 3, Phillies 2

MONTREAL — Tony Armas Jr. (1-2) pitched six scoreless innings for his first win in 14 months and Tony Batista hit a two-run homer.

Armas had season-ending shoulder surgery in May 2003 and missed the first two months of this season while recovering from a strained right rotator cuff. He allowed three hits, walked three and struck out seven.

Giants 9, Dodgers 3

SAN FRANCISCO — AJ Pierzynski had two run-scoring doubles, Marquis Grissom homered and the Giants won their sixth straight to complete a four-game sweep of Los Angeles.

The game also featured the second bench-clearing scuffle in two days. San Francisco's Michael Tucker and Dodgers closer Eric Gagne were ejected in the eighth inning for nearly scuffling a brawl after Tucker dived away from a high pitch by the NL Cy Young Award winner.

Gagne was incensed when learning of his ejection, attempting to charge the umpires gathered at the mound. He flipped the ball over his shoulder toward the mound while leaving the field, then duffed his cap to the San Francisco fans jeering him into the dugout.

Rangers 9, Marlins 7, 18 innings

ARLINGTON Texas — Alfonso Soriano hit a two-run homer off Jamie Moyer (6-3) in the 18th inning, ending the longest major league game since St. Louis beat Florida 7-6 in 20 innings on April 27 last year. It also matched the longest game in Rangers history.

Prep players Josh Smith (1-0) got two outs for his first win in 106 career games, a major league record for most appearances without a victory.

Rockies 3, Brewers 0

MILWAUKEE — Mark Sweeney hit a two-run homer to help last-place Colorado win its second road series of the season.

Aaron Cook (2-2) won for the first time in four starts, allowing eight hits, all singles, in eight innings. Shawn Camp finished for his 15th save.

Ben Sheets (6-5) struck out 10, reaching double digits for the fourth time season. He allowed two runs and four hits in seven innings.

Howell sets course record

POTOMAC, Md. — Charles Howell III set a course record with a 10-under-par 61 — including a 28 on his final nine holes at the TPC at Avenel — and held a three-shot lead Thursday after the first round of the Booz-Allen Classic.

On a perfect day with the wind calm and the greens soft and smooth, Howell carded the lowest opening-round score this year on the PGA Tour. It also was the second-lowest overall round of the season.

Golf roundup

Howell went birdie-eagle on the three par-5s and made six putts of 15 feet or longer.

Scores were low all day. Seventy-six players were under par — exactly 76 more than broke even in Sunday's brutal final round of the U.S. Open at Shinnecock Hills. Howell finished his Open adventure with an 83.

"I don't reckon I've ever had a 22-shot swing before in two rounds of golf," he said.

The super-fast greens at the Open still rate as a sore point for many players, including Howell. He went from 3-over to 16-over on Sunday.

"It got laughable," Howell said. "Since starting to play golf and dreaming to win a major championship, I never ever in my wildest dreams thought a Sunday round teeing off at 2 o'clock was going to turn laughable."

"I thought the USGA did a poor job of setting the golf course up."

The only downside to Howell's record round Thursday was that there were so few people to witness it. A gallery of exactly 32 fans walked with him down the fairway along No. 8, the hole at which he sank a 20-foot putt to get to 10 under.

Interest is down because

Charles Howell III putts on the eighth green during the first round of the Booz-Allen Classic, Thursday at TPC at Avenel in Potomac, Md. Howell set the course record with a 61, ten under par.

most of golf's top players are taking the week off following the Open.

Howell leads 1999 champion Rich Beem and Olin Browne by three strokes. Jeff Sluman is four back.

Howell set the record despite two bogeys in his first six holes.

Fichardt takes one-shot lead in French Open

VERSAILLES, France — Darren Fichardt birdied five of the last nine holes for a 5-under 66 to take a one-stroke lead over Ian Woosnam in the French Open on Thursday.

Australia's Richard Green (68) was third, one shot ahead of Frenchman Jean-Francois Remesy and Belgium's Nicolas Colasaris both at 69.

Mark Roe and Ian Poulter both shot 70s and shared sixth place with Argentina's Cesar Monasterio and Ireland's Graeme McDowell.

Bernhard Langer, easing back after an eight-week absence because of injury, shot a 6-over 77. Australia's Robert Allenby, coming off a seventh-place in the U.S. Open, had a 76.

Winless Salki leads by one shot in Rochester

PITTSFORD, N.Y. — Kim Salki took a step toward ending a winless run of 13 years on the LPGA Tour with a bogey-free 66 that gave her a one-stroke lead Thursday after the opening round of the Rochester tournament.

Candle Kung was second after 18 holes on the par-72 Locust Hill course.

Julie Inkster was two shots back, one better than Rosie Jones, Se Ri Pak, Stephanie Louren, Becky Morgan and 17-year-old amateur Paula Creamer. She's coming off a tie for second Monday in the ShopRite Classic.

Annikka Sorenstam, who last played here in 2000, had some difficulty off the tee and shot a 72. She chipped in for birdie from about 50 feet on the par-3 seventh but some of her putts just slipped past the hole.

Defending champion Rachel Teske of Australia also carded a 72.

A THREE-WAY DEAL

Kansas City Royals' Carlos Beltran hits a two-run home run off Detroit Tigers starting pitcher Mika Maroth in the first inning Tuesday in Kansas City, Mo.

Kansas City trades Beltran to Astros

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Star center fielder Carlos Beltran was traded from Kansas City to the Houston Astros on Thursday night as part of a three-way deal that also sent reliever Octavio Dotel to Oakland.

The last-place Royals wound up with three prospects: highly touted third baseman Mark Teahen and right-hander Mike Wood from Oakland, and catcher John Buck from the Astros.

"This is obviously huge for our organization," Astros general manager Gerry Hunsicker said. "Carlos Beltran is one of the most exciting, complete players in our game today."

"He's the prototype we've been looking for for a long time. He's going to be a very exciting force for us in the middle of our lineup," he said.

Beltran can become a free agent this fall — but for now, he joined a team clearly going all out this year to win its first World Series.

The Astros spent millions last offseason to bring pitchers Roger Clemens and Andy Pettitte to Houston. Clemens, who already ended one brief retirement, agreed only to a one-year deal, while longtime stars Jeff Bagwell and Craig Biggio are nearing the end of their careers.

Last week, the Astros traded right fielder Richard Hidalgo to the New York Mets for reliever David Weathers and a minor league pitcher. This time, Houston pulled off a much bigger deal.

"When you have a chance to get an All-Star like Beltran, you do it, then you worry about filling in holes. He significantly makes us better, he is an impact player and will have an effect on our ballclub," Hunsicker said.

The multitalented Beltran is hitting .278 with 15 homers, 51 RBIs and 14 steals.

Beltran's arrival almost certainly means yet another position change for Biggio, who started his career as catcher, moved to second base and then center field. Biggio will probably move to left, with Lance Berkman shifting to right.

The 27-year-old Beltran, the biggest prize on the trade market, is making $9 million this season. He's represented by Scott Boras, who usually does not have his players re-sign before testing the free-agent market.

Dotel, 30, is 0-4 with a 3.12 ERA and 14 saves in 17 chances in his first year as a closer following the trade of three-time All-Star Billy Wagner to Philadelphia in the offseason.

Heenan gets second chance for Olympics

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Katie Heenan was in shock when she left the national championships in May this month, her career as an elite gymnast seemingly over.

A double bronze medalist at the 2001 world championships, she finished 14th at nationals, missing the cut for the Olympic trials by two spots.

"It wasn't so much disappointment as just shock that it was all over," she said. "It was overwhelming to think, 'OK, now what do I do?'"

She could, as an alternate for trials, keep training on the chance that someone would withdraw. Or she could stop, and move on with her life.

That latter option was mighty tempting at first. Then she had a talk with her father, John, a former gymnast himself.

"When you think about how much time she's put into this sport, chasing her dreams for the last 10 years, 12 years, that, multiplied out, equaled some 15,000 hours of practice," John Heenan said. "That's a lot of time she's put into it. At that time, there were only about two weeks left before trials."

"I said, 'When you look at it, two weeks more is less than 100 hours to go. That compared to the 15,000 hours you've already put into it is only 0.01 percent. Why not? Why not keep training?'"

"Those words struck a chord with me. Then she got phone calls from her coach, Tatiana Periskiaia, and the coach at Georgia, where Heenan has a scholarship waiting for her.

"Why give up when you still have a chance?" Heenan said. "So I decided to keep training."

Last Friday, Heenan got a phone call telling her that Nicole Harris pulled out of the Olympic trials because of a broken bone in her ankle. The open spot was Heenan's.

"Second chances don't come around often," Heenan said. "I have nothing to lose coming in here and so much to gain. That's how I'm looking at it. I'm doing it for me and Tatiana. Just to have fun. If I go further than this, then I go further. If not, I'm happy. This is a dream come

Mets-Yanks set for another Subway ride

NEW YORK (AP) — A big birthday for Derek Jeter. An emotional start for Jose Contreras. A matchup of Kaz and Hideki Matsui.

On deck, a fun and full weekend at Yankee Stadium. Time for the latest ride on the Subway Series, the interleague games that really jazz New York.

"I don't think Astros-Rangers can be anything like Mets-Yankees," Mets newcomer Richard Hidalgo said Thursday.

Not at all. "It's still great and I still look forward to it, even after all this time. The novelty never wears off," Yankees outfielder Bernie Williams said.

"Playing them is definitely something I get excited about. It's a cross-town rivalry and it's for bragging rights for whatever you call it," he said. "It's great because you know the stadium will be packed and the fans will be fired up, and it has a definite playoff atmosphere."

A year after the Yankees swept all six games, the teams meet again Friday night. Ex-Yankee Al Leiter will start for the Mets against rookie Brad Halsey in the opener.

On Saturday, Jeter will celebrate his 30th birthday. The same afternoon, Contreras is set to pitch for the first time since he was reunited with his wife and two daughters after they defected from Cuba.

The series wraps up Sunday night, then the teams play three times next weekend at Shea Stadium.

The Yankees lead 24-12 overall since interleague play began in 1997. That doesn't include their five-game win over the Mets in the 2000 World Series.

For Alex Rodriguez, Gary Sheffield and half the Yankees team, this will be their first up-close look at the Subway Series. Rodriguez figures to be a special target of Mets fans for the next week. Shortly after he became a free agent following 2000 season, the Mets cut off talks with the All-Star shortstop.

Now that Rodriguez is playing in pinstripes, at third base, for the team with the best record in baseball — and Kaz Matsui is struggling at shortstop for the below-.500 Mets — it'll only add another element to the equation.

"Obviously, once A-Rod's over there, you don't look for anybody else to take his place," Rodriguez figures to be a special target of Mets fans for the next week. Shortly after he became a free agent following 2000 season, the Mets cut off talks with the All-Star shortstop.

"I look forward to it. I'm very excited about the next three days," he said through a translator.

Matsui said he had no special plans to visit with his Japanese countryman, Yankees outfielder Hideki Matsui.

"If I see him on the field while we're stretching, I'll go over and say hi," he said.

For Hidalgo, traded from Houston to New York this month, along with Mike Cameron and Braden Loper, this Subway Series visit is all new.

Navratilova loses then vents

By Michelle Kaufman
The Miami Herald

WIMBLEDON, England — Martina Navratilova, Grand Dame of Wimbledon, came out in her glasses and comfortable shorts Thursday afternoon and served and volleyed to the crowd's delight. Somewhere deep in her heart, she felt she could keep her comeback tour, going another round or two, even at age 47.

She dominated for one set. But then 19-year-old Argentine Gisela Dulko, who defeated Navratilova in the first round of the French Open, got over her nerves, changed her strategy and came away with a 5-6, 6-3, 6-3 victory.

Navratilova, as always, had plenty to say afterward.

"I thought I could win a few matches, and that's not a knock on women's tennis," Fost said. "I get really upset when I see one - 51 a wonder Michael Stich criticizing the depth in women's tennis. Look at how I hit the ball, not the fact I'm 47."

"I think it's a sexist reaction. Michael Jordan comes back and kicks butt in the NBA. They're not questioning the level of NBA. If he plays half the players one-on-one, he would make them look silly. But they're not saying the rest of the NBA stinks. They're saying how amazing Michael Jordan is. Want to talk about depth in women's tennis? Who did Venus Williams lose today? Most of you reporters don't even know what Karolina Sprem looks like."

Ivanisevic, who called Navratilova "the president she has done in recent years, nevertheless said it could not happen on the men's tour.

"No chance," he said. "Who can be 48 in men's tennis and win a match? It would be funny to watch. Like slow motion. John McEnroe can maybe win a set, but I don't think he can win a match because these guys are hitting the ball so hard. There's a weakness in the women's game."

"Before the tournament starts, you can pick five girls and know they are coming to the semis or quarterfinals."

tions from a former assistant that he once asked her to dispose of used syringes and to give him makeup to conceal needle marks on his arms.

And three-time Olympic champion Jones, who with Montgomery has a nearly 1-year-old son, is being investigated by the U.S. Anti-Doping Agency for possible drug use.

All four high-profile athletes have denied the use of performance-enhancing drugs.

But the San Francisco Chronicle reported Thursday that Montgomery told the BALCO grand jury in November that he used human growth hormone and what was then an undetectable steroid. The report includes direct quotes from Montgomery's testimony, which was supposed to be secret.

Dr. Norm Fost, director of the program in medical ethics at the University of Wisconsin's medical school, argues that steroids and all other drugs should be allowed in sports. Though he acknowledges drugs give users an advantage, Fost argues that many other legal factors — genetics, diet, wealth, access to gyms — also give some athletes advantages.

He also said he believes a few athletes are being unfairly persecuted.

"It has the elements of a witch hunt, since the moral basis for the ban is so incoherent," Fost says. "The witch hunt aspect is the intensity with which they (anti-doping authorities) are trying to punish people for doing something that is ubiquitous in sports — trying to enhance performance using artificial means."

Attorneys for Montgomery, Jones and other athletes being probed by USADA have accused the agency of unfairly targeting their clients and changing their procedures to try to make cases. USADA officials are determined to take a drug-free U.S. team to Athens.

Some attorneys in the BALCO case also have accused federal prosecutors of a political motivation for going after their clients, saying the Bush administration has made prosecution of drug cases involving sports stars a campaign issue.

During his State of the Union address last January, President Bush appealed to sports leagues and athletes to end the use of performance-enhancing drugs.

And U.S. Olympic Committee officials have repeatedly said they are determined to take a drug-free U.S. team to Athens.

Yessalis says fans are now more aware about drug use among their sports heroes, though he's not sure that they care. And he says there is little indication doping is on the decline, as is evidenced by the BALCO case and a growing drug scandal in Australian cycling.

"It is all over, it is pandemic, doping is everywhere. In many sports, it's a huge majority of athletes doing it," he says. "The whole notion anymore that there's only a few bad apples in the barrel? There are only a few good apples anymore."

Andy Roddick of the U.S. plays a return to Taiwan's Yu Tzuoo Wang during their men's singles, match on the Centre Court at Wimbledon, Thursday. Roddick won 6-3, 7-5, 6-4.

Roddick reaches second round

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — When the skies finally cleared at Wimbledon, Andy Roddick was raring to go. He whacked aces, hit forehand winners and even caught a ball in his cap.

With his customary force and flair, Roddick earned a rain-delayed first-round victory Thursday, beating Wang Yu-Tzuoo 6-3, 7-5, 6-4.

Roddick's niftiest maneuver came after he won the opening game of the final set. A frustrated Wang slammed the ball into the grass, and when it skipped over the net, Roddick took off his cap and snared it as he walked to the changeover chair.

"I had a lot of built-up energy," he said.

That's because the match was halted by rain Tuesday with Roddick leading 4-2 in the first set, and he waited in vain to play for 9.5 hours before Wednesday's schedule was declared a washout.

"I'm not good for sitting around with nothing to do. My boredom was killing me," Roddick said. "But it's Wimbledon. I think you kind of have to expect it sometimes, and just do your best to roll with the punches."

When the match finally resumed, Roddick came out swinging. He finished with 18 aces, reaching 144 mph on his serve, and repeatedly angled inside-out forehands beyond Wang's reach.

The No. 2-seeded Roddick was relieved to take his first step toward an appealing potential rematch in the final against No. 1 Roger Federer. Last year Federer won his first Grand Slam title at Wimbledon after beating Roddick in the semifinals.

"First rounds at Slams are always a bit jittery," Roddick said. "I don't ever feel totally comfortable. There's a lot of bulldozing, a lot of hype. You can't wait to get out there. You're anxious. So there's a lot that goes into it."

A year ago at Wimbledon, Lleyton Hewitt lost in the first round as the defending champion to 6-10 Ivo Karlovic.

"My guy was only 5-9 today," Roddick noted.

Still, as Roddick acknowledged, the 19-year-old Wang was dangerous. He and Yen-Hsun Lu, who also lost Thursday, became the first players from Chinese Taipei to play Grand Slam singles in the Open era.

A qualifier, Wang was making his ATP Tour-level debut. But he's talented, as a 9-1 Davis Cup record attests.

He reached the net twice as often as Roddick and held his own in baseline rallies, some lasting 20 shots or more. But in the end, Roddick had too much power. He lost just 13 points on his first serve and never faced a break point.

"There's a lot of room for improvement from today," Roddick said. "I got through. That's the thing I was looking for."

Steroids

gave him weekly doses of human growth hormone and a substance called "the clear" — which Montgomery referred to as a "magic potion."

Montgomery said he was told "the clear" was not an illegal steroid, but that he understood that HGH is a banned substance. Montgomery set a world record of 9.78 seconds in the 100 meters in 2002.

Montgomery also gave secondhand testimony implicating Bonds, the San Francisco Giants' slugger who has hit the third most homers in baseball history. According to the Chronicle, prosecutor Jeff Nedrow asked Montgomery about Conte's dealings with Bonds.

"Did he say he gave any steroids, Winstrol or any of the other ones to Mr. Bonds?" Nedrow asked.

"Yes, he did," Montgomery replied.

"Did he say specifically which ones?"

"Winstrol," Montgomery said.

Winstrol is the same steroid Ben Johnson used before being disqualified in the 1988 Olympics. Montgomery testified that Conte told him Bonds switched to an undetectable steroid in 2003 when testabale introduced its drug policy.

"I have reason to have serious doubts about the accuracy of all that," Bonds' attorney, Michael Rains, told the Chronicle. "I doubt very much that Conte would be talking about anything he's giving to anybody."

"The clear" was later determined to be THG, a previously undetectable steroid at the center of the BALCO scandal, which now threatens to keep some of America's top sprinters out of the Athens Olympics.

Loving life

Truex enjoys standing atop Busch Series with Earnhardt as boss, friend

Truex loving life atop Busch Series with Earnhardt as boss, friend

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Life can't get much better for Martin Truex Jr. right now. In his first full season, Truex leads the NASCAR Busch Series points race with four victories and five poles thanks — in part — to bosses Bess and Dale Earnhardt Jr. giving him the best equipment and crew available.

"Life is good," Truex said with a smile. "No complaints from me. Winning races is what I love to do, and I'm just having a lot of fun with it."

And he's also become good friends with Earnhardt. "As his boss, Earnhardt provides top equipment through Chance 2 Motorsports, co-owned with his stepmother, and he's constantly offering tips to help Truex become a better driver."

As his friend, Earnhardt hangs out with Truex, playing racing video games. "We've become real good friends," Truex said. "He's always putting some bug in my ear about something we're trying to do and how we're doing. He's been real great and a lot of fun."

It's a relationship only racing could have created.

Earnhardt is the son of the late Dale Earnhardt, who earned seven Cup championships and won 76 races. Truex's father also loves racing, but he never got beyond NASCAR's Busch North Series before giving up his seat to his son.

"Martin's doing great, and I'm really proud how he's handled the pressure," Earnhardt said. "We have a team that is capable of winning races and winning the Busch Series championship. There are no excuses, so that means the pressure's on Martin to perform."

Martin Truex Jr. arrives back in the pits at Kentucky Speedway after turning a lap of 180.102 mph to take the pole for Saturday's NASCAR Busch Meijer 300 in Sparta, Ky., June 18.

Martin Truex Jr. signs autographs after winning the pole June 18, at Kentucky Speedway in Sparta, Ky., for Saturday's NASCAR Busch Series Meijer 300 with a speed of 180.102 mph.

Racing — and winning — comes naturally to Truex. He was just a toddler when he first started going to tracks around Mayetta, N.J.

Forget video games or sitting on the couch as a child. Truex was busy riding four-wheelers or his motorcycle with his friends. By age 10, he was rebuilding engines on his own, and he started racing go-karts at 11.

But it was his mother, Linda, who drove him to the track because his father was busy with his own races. "Truex won the junior class title in 1993 at New Egypt Speedway and took the New Jersey Championship Series in 1994 at the same track. He moved up to modifieds when he turned 18 and won his first modified race in his eighth start.

By 2000, he was ready to move up to the Busch North Series, and his father yielded his seat. "That was a big step for him. I don't know if I could ever do that for someone," Truex said.

In 2001, he ran his first Busch race at Dover and finished 38th. He ran four more Busch Series races in 2002 with his best finish 17th at Dover while winning two Busch North races. Chance 2 hired Truex for six of his 10 Busch races in 2003, and he turned in three top-10s, including a pair of second-place finishes in the final two races of the year for the team. By December, Chance 2 offered him a two-year deal.

Truex has proven worthy of the job. He won his first race at Bristol in his fifth start this season and added victories at Talladega, Gateway and Nazareth. He has nine top-fives and 11 top-10s in 16 races.

Road race welcome change for Gordon

SONOMA, Calif. (AP) — Robby Gordon figured this was the perfect place to test his car — Infineon Raceway, site of Sunday's NASCAR race on a road course in scenic wine-growing country.

Gordon dominated and won last year's Dodge/Save Mart 350 on the same 1.99-mile, 10-turn circuit, then won in August at Watkins Glen, N.Y.

"We are pretty confident we have the road course, game dialed in, but there is always room for improvement," Gordon said.

"Some people asked me why we were going out there to test, but it just made sense," he said. "Practice makes perfect, right? Plus, we work year long turning left, and to get one of these 3,400-pound stock cars to turn right is completely different and it also just helped me get back into the shifting groove."

Gordon said his Richard Childress Racing team concentrated on gear boxes and transmissions while using one of his handful of official NASCAR Nextel Cup tests.

Gordon also felt out the newly paved track that is expected to yield a qualifying record on Friday.

"We have a good baseline that won both races last year to fall back on," he said. "We are just trying to improve from that, and you always have to keep improving in this sport. The minute you let up, a bunch of them will pass you real quick because it is just that competitive."

A win at Infineon would be a big boost for Gordon and his No. 31 Chevrolet team. He goes into the race 20th in the Cup standings and, more important, 293 points out of 10th place and 666 behind series leader Jimmie Johnson.

With NASCAR's new "Chase for the Championship," the top 10 and any other drivers within 400 points of the leader after 26 races will get have the opportunity to race for the title over the final 10 events. Sunday's race will be the 16th of the season, so time is starting to wear against Gordon.

The road courses present a big opportunity for Gordon, who has been playing catch-up since crashing at Daytona and Rockingham in the first two races.

"Road racing does bring the driver out a bit more, but there are a lot of things that also come into play," he said. "You have to have a pit crew that can get you in and out of the pits without losing five positions. You have to get good fuel mileage, manage your tires and maintain track position."

"The fastest car doesn't always win the race. It is about being on top of your game across the board to win the race."

Iraqi Asaad Y. Alnajjar, one of the people who's applied to be in charge of the World Wide Web Internet top domain 'iq' for Iraq and give away Web services to Iraqis, is seen here with a map of Iraq.

Iraqi sovereignty won't extend online

The Associated Press

When an interim government takes over from the U.S.-led occupation next week, Iraq will regain its place among the world's sovereign nations — except on the Internet.

More than 240 places have their own two-letter Internet country codes, from ".ac" for Ascension Island to ".zw" for Zimbabwe. There's even ".ps" for the Palestinian territories.

But the domain assigned to Iraq, ".iq," is stuck in a strange bureaucratic limbo — the company that had administered it is under U.S. criminal indictment and could remain there for months.

As a result, if Iraq's government, national institutions or regular Iraqis want a Web site, they need to use international domains, such as ".com," ".org" or ".net" which are maintained in the United States.

"To me, having 'iq' is probably one of the most important steps toward giving Iraq its identity and independence," said Hisham Ashkouri, an Iraqi-born architect who has lived in the United States since 1972 and is designing several projects for Baghdad. "The information technology part today is extremely important."

Ashkouri said people in Iraq he works with use Web-based services like Yahoo! or America Online or domains with other countries' codes, including Bahrain or the United Arab Emirates.

The Baghdad Museum, which is still trying to recover from its April 2003 looting, could use an ".iq" address to identify itself as Iraqi, just as the Louvre proclaims its Frenchness with www.louvre.fr. Instead, it has registered http://the.iraq.museum.

There's also a practical downside to using other countries' slices of the Internet.

With many common site names already registered, "major brand names or organi-

British sailors freed, but border disputes remain

LONDON — Iran's diplomatic standoff with Britain over eight captured Royal Navy sailors showed the hard-line regime flexing its muscles over its border with Iraq and the ongoing international row over its nuclear program, analysts say.

London's relations with Tehran have run hot and cold for years. But they dipped last week when Britain helped draft an international Atomic Energy Agency resolution deploring Iran's lack of cooperation with nuclear inspectors.

Russia detains three in attacks; death toll rises

VLADYKAVKAZ, Russia — Three militants have been detained on suspicion they took part in this week's attacks in the southern Russian region of Ingushetia, a top military officer said, as the death toll from the assault rose to 98 people.

Three days after the Monday night attacks in the republic bordering war-torn Chechnya, questions still swirled about where the militants came from.

Ingush President Murat Zyazikov said in an interview published in the Russian government newspaper Thursday that "an international squad" intent on destabilizing Ingushetia was behind the attack.

Iraqi government gains control of final ministries

BAGHDAD, Iraq — Western advisers completed their handover of Iraq's remaining government ministries to Iraqis on Thursday, six days before the

Israeli forces search homes in raid

NABLUS, West Bank (AP) — Israeli soldiers blew open doors with grenades, rummaged through closets and rounded up residents while searching for fugitives and bomb labs in Nablihus' old city — the largest army operation in the militant stronghold in more than a year.

Soldiers sealed the old city with cement blocks and barbed wire to lock in militants and imposed a strict curfew. The military said "Operation Full Court Press" would last several days.

Soldiers handed out leaflets explaining that they are looking for seven men, most from the Al Aqsa Martyrs' Brigades, a militant group with ties to Yasser Arafat's Fatah movement.

Earlier in the week, an 18-year-old from Nablihus, recruited by Al Aqsa to blow himself up in Jerusalem, was caught at an Israeli checkpoint, and soldiers later found his explosives hidden in a school bag.

The army said the raid was triggered, in part, by that arrest. The Nablihus leader of Al Aqsa, Nayef Abu Shaikh, was among those on the wanted list. His mother, Dahieh, said soldiers burst into her home looking for her son.

"They were shouting, cursing," she said. "They damaged closets, threw all the things inside on the floor."

Also Thursday, Palestinian Prime Minister Ahmed Qureia condemned the U.S. House of Representatives for overwhelmingly affirming President Bush's declaration in April that Israel cannot be expected to withdraw from the entire West Bank.

The Senate was expected to hold a similar vote Thursday. "Endorsement of Israeli settlements" (in the West Bank) would reverse 30 years of U.S.

foreign policy," Qureia said in a statement, adding that the resolution contradicts the U.S.-backed "road map" peace plan.

Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon said the U.S. House vote was one of the biggest diplomatic achievements in Israel's history.

"This is a great day in the history of Israel," Sharon said at the headquarters of his Likud Party. Israeli army commanders, meanwhile, presented their initial plans for security arrangements after a planned Israeli withdrawal from the Gaza Strip in 2005.

Remote-controlled vehicles would patrol much of the border fence, according to the plan given to Defense Minister Shaul Mofaz, security officials said. The plans are to be completed by August.

The World Bank warned in a new report that Israel could lose diplomatic gains from the withdrawal plan if Gaza laborers are denied access to work in Israel or water and electricity supplies to the teeming coastal strip are cut.

Israel has not said it will impose either of these measures.

In the Gaza Strip, two armed Palestinians were killed by Israeli army fire early Thursday as they approached an army outpost in what militants said was a failed attack on the nearby settlement of Dugit.

The Nablihus operation began late Wednesday, with jeeps and bulldozers driving into the old city of Cashah, and imposing a curfew. Soldiers sealed streets to prevent fugitives from getting away.

Nareman Khader, 76, said she and her family were awakened by loud explosions as soldiers burst into the building.

Teton Wireless launches VoIP

TWIN FALLS — Teton Wireless on Thursday announced the availability of "Voice over Internet Protocol" calling services for residents of Idaho and Montana.

The Teton service, tagged "Internet Home Phone Service," enables anyone with a broadband Internet connection to make local and long-distance calls over the Internet, without a local telephone service provider. An adapter is required to connect a standard telephone to a broadband router.

VoIP technology breaks spoken conversations into small data packages and sends them over the Internet to the recipient, where they are reassembled.

For the Internet phone service, Teton charges $139 for the telephone adapter, and regular monthly rates are $29.99 for unlimited local and long distance calls to the United States and Canada.

"Most of the deployments of Internet voice services have been rolled out by very large cable providers in the major metropolitan areas," Teton Wireless chief executive and owner Willis "Gene" Twiner said. "A lot of cable companies are still evaluating their voice plans. We are excited to be making 'voice over IP' ... available in our rural market areas."

VoIP also called Internet telephony, avoids the tolls charged by ordinary telephone service.

"Adding voice to our existing video and Internet access services was simple to implement," said Tom Carey, Teton director of engineering. "The privately licensed frequencies making up Teton's wireless network are very robust, and most IP applications work seamlessly over our infrastructure."

Best Buy plans to increase dividends

TWIN FALLS — Minneapolis-based Best Buy Co. Inc., which operates an electronics store in Twin Falls, on Thursday announced its intent to increase its quarterly common stock dividend to 11 cents per common share, a 10 percent increase from the previous quarter.

The change would take effect with the next quarterly dividend, which, if declared, would be payable Oct. 27 for shareholders of record as of Oct. 6. Best Buy paid its first cash dividend in December.

Best Buy also said its directors have authorized a $500 million share repurchase program. That replaces the $400 million program approved in fiscal 2004, under which $262 million of stock has been repurchased.

"The dividend increase is expected to enable us to return to our shareholders approximately 15 percent of the current fiscal year's anticipated profits, after taxes," said Darren Jackson, chief financial officer, in a statement.

Bank of America raises dividends

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Bank of America Corp. rewarded investors with a 12.5 percent dividend increase in the wake of the company's recent $48 billion acquisition of FleetBoston Financial Corp.

The nation's second-largest bank — which has Magic Valley branches — also announced a 2-for-1 stock split that it hopes will make Bank of America's shares more attractive to investors.

The dividend increase rewards investors who stood by the Charlotte, N.C.-based company after the announcement of the Fleet deal last October caused Bank of America's stock to plunge more than 10 percent in one day.

The company's stock price has climbed back steadily and has traded above its pre-Fleet deal levels in recent weeks.

The increase raises Bank of America's quarterly dividend from 80 cents a share to 90 cents a share on a pre-split basis. After the split, the new dividend will equal 45 cents a share.

Author will speak on small-city success

By Virginia S. Hutchins
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Magic Valley's job creation in recent years already has garnered the praise of state leaders. Now Twin Falls' growth has caught the attention of an industrial developer-turned-author whose new book names the city as one of the country's top small communities.

Jack Schultz, author of "Boomtown USA: The 7 1/2 Keys to Big Success in Small Towns," calls Twin Falls an "agurb" — a term he coined to describe growing towns that have ties to agriculture, which have the potential to become regional centers for tourism, industry, job growth and commerce, the book's promoters say.

Illinois-based industrial development firm Agracel Inc., for which Schultz is chief executive, asked Twin Falls leaders for a chance to visit with the people who make Twin Falls a great place to live and work, and to spread Schultz's message about small-town America.

And, presumably, to promote the book.

The Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce obliged, scheduling a special lunch on Monday at a Twin Falls hotel, for chamber members and their employees.

"In the book, Jack discusses how communities have taken steps to become prosperous and thriving communities of the future," Jarrod Phillips of Agracel said in a note to the chamber. "He has spoken to town leaders, economic development groups, universities, town chambers and citizens in a variety of communities in the Midwest, East and Southern U.S."

Now Schultz and his presentation are touring the Northwest.

Idaho farmers likely won't grow new spud

Researchers create low-carb potatoes

The Times-News and The Associated Press

TWIN FALLS — For dieters, potatoes have been scorned, rejected and castigated — the Rodney Dangerfield of vegetables. They get no respect.

Many weight-loss programs, including the Atkins and the South Beach diets, advocate meat and cheese over high-carbohydrate potatoes, pasta and bread.

Come January, carb-counters who love potatoes may find cause to rejoice a bit. Florida growers will be pitching a potato they hope will be a hot one — it claims one-third fewer carbs than the ordinary spud.

But don't expect Idaho potato growers to jump on the low-carb bandwagon anytime soon. Industry leaders in Idaho stress, instead, the nutritious qualities of the more familiar varieties of spuds.

The low-carb spud, meanwhile, is getting its start in Florida. "Consumers are going to love the flavor and appearance of this potato and the fact that it has 30 percent fewer carbohydrates compared to a standard Russet baking potato," said Chad Hutchinson, an assistant professor of horticulture at University of Florida's Institute of Food and Agricultural Sciences.

After five years of testing in the sandy soils of Florida's potato country, Hutchinson knew it tasted great, had a shorter growing cycle, was disease-resistant and able to handle Florida's extreme weather. He then learned about its lower-carb properties.

"That was just gravy," he said. Independent research shows about 3.5 ounces of the new potato contain about 13 grams of carbohydrate compared with around 19 grams in the same size serving of a Russet Burbank. The new baseball-size potato will be available in supermarkets and restaurants in January.

Florida is the first test site in the United States for the European import, which was developed by HZPC, a seed company based in the Netherlands. The potato was developed by crossbreeding and was not genetically modified.

Five Florida potato growers have formed the SunFresh Marketing Cooperative to the grow and promote the new spud, said Jim McDowell, the sales and marketing director for the cooperative. The cooperative hasn't said what the new potato will cost.

The growers also want to market the potato as a "fresh" vegetable with a brand name and a logo, so shoppers will ask for it in their grocery store. "A potato that is freshly dug tastes different than a potato dug eight or nine months ago and put in storage," Hutchinson said.

Potatoes contribute about $120 million a year to Florida's economy. The state supplies about 60 percent of the country's fresh potato market from January to June, Hutchinson said.

Frank Muir, president of the Idaho Potato Commission, said he doesn't know of any Idaho potato growers interested in growing the new lower-carb

Court rejects FCC's ownership rules

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — A federal appeals court on Thursday largely reversed a landmark set of rule changes from the Federal Communications Commission that would have allowed companies to own more radio and television stations in the same market.

The decision by the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit in Philadelphia marked a major setback to the FCC's efforts to deregulate media ownership rules and a victory for public interest groups that had opposed the measures.

The rule changes have been the subject of much debate about the concentration of media ownership ever since they were announced in June 2003. The plaintiffs against the FCC said the rules would limit the diversity of voices on the airwaves, while the FCC said the old rules had become outdated.

The court also kept in place an order it made last September blocking the rules from taking effect.

In their 2-to-1 decision, the judges threw out rules that would have allowed greater ownership of television and radio stations in the same market. However, they also found that the FCC was within its rights to repeal a blanket prohibition on companies owning both a newspaper and a television station in the same city.

"This is a big, big win for diversity," said Andrew Jay Schwartzman, CEO of the Media Access Project, a Washington, D.C.-based public interest law firm that led the lawsuit against the FCC.

"The court recognized that debate and democratic values are more important than letting big media corporations grow bigger," Schwartzman said. "It's especially important that the court has told the FCC to remove its deregulatory thumb from the scales."

Schwartzman said he was slightly disappointed that the court did not reverse the FCC's move to repeal the ban on cross-ownership of newspapers and TV stations in the same city, but he noted that the court asked the FCC to reconsider the decision in light of Thursday's ruling.

FCC chairman Michael Powell called the court's decision "deeply troubling" and said it "hampers the flexibility of the agency to protect the American public."

Improving economy puts strain on truck industry

Knight Ridder News Service

MILWAUKEE — Trucking companies nationwide again are struggling to fill their rigs with drivers amid an expanding economy and strong demand for shipping.

The driver squeeze is holding back the growth of freight haulers large and small, and despite the opportunities presented by rising demand, has left some firms with tractors standing unused in the yards.

In Green Bay, Schneider National Inc., one of the largest trucking companies in the country, could use another 700 drivers immediately, spokesman Tom Nightingale said. "We're at probably one of the hardest points in our history to recruit drivers," Nightingale said.

At the Highlands Petro truck stop in Racine County, owner-operator Jim Bredelove, taking a break before hauling a load of flat steel from Milwaukee to Grant Rapids, Mich., said he had idled six trucks out of back-of-the-wheel labor.

"People who actually work and are good at what they do just aren't available," said Bredelove, of Champagn, Ill.

"We're right back to having a major problem," said Bob Please see TRUCK, Page E2

The current driver shortage...
Further, said Bob Rader, executive vice president of Roehl Transport Inc. in Marshfield, Wis. financial problems at a leading student-loan company led to the shutdown of several commercial driving schools in the past few years.

And high fuel prices and insurance costs have driven many independent owner-operators out of business, Rader said.
For Roehl, he said, it has led to "a significant tightening of the driver market."
Amid such pressures, trucking companies have been steadily raising driver pay, brought on, A.G. Edwards said.
"That's been true on an increasing basis for the last three quarters," he said.
Trucking can provide a path to middle-class income for workers without specialized skills.
At Schneider National, new drivers average $32,000 to $40,000 their first year, Nightingale said. Pay rises with experience. Drivers with four to five years at the wheel average $45,000 to $54,000 annually, according to Schneider's Web site.

Nationally, truck drivers of all experience levels averaged $43,000 last year, the ATA's Costello said.
That beats the average annual pay for all U.S. workers of about $37,000. But truckers' pay comes at a cost. Beyond the extended stretches, away from home for many, a 1997 University of Michigan study found that the typical driver worked almost 3,000 hours a year half again as much as an ordinary full-time employee.

health and prosperity," Schultz wrote in materials promoting his book.
"The questions boiled down to these: What separated the thriving towns from the struggling ones? Did the people within a prosperous town approach their lives differently than those in a struggling town? Can communities that are struggling rebound? If so, how?"
Those queries, he said, prompted his exploration of the roots of small-town success.
" I observed the resurgence of some, and the slow death of many, small towns," he wrote. "I wanted to fully understand why some communities were growing and offering opportunities to their young people, while others were turning into ghost towns."

About Jack Schultz

• He's the CEO of Agracel Inc., an Illinois-based industrial development firm facilitating new jobs in the high-tech and manufacturing sectors of small-town America.
• The firm, which began in 1986, has projects in eight states and has developed more than 4 million square feet of industrial space on long-term leases and several commercial office buildings and manages 14 industrial, office and commercial parks.
• Schultz holds a bachelor's degree from Southern Methodist University and a master's in business administration from Harvard.
• He sits on the board of directors for a pension fund, a nationwide trucking company, a bank holding company and a heavy equipment dealer.
• He is married with twin sons, age 16.

Markets sag after news of attacks

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks shifted lower Thursday as investors' enthusiasm flagged in the face of multiple attacks on the U.S. economy.
The Dow Jones Industrial Average fell 100.58 points to 10,508.75.
A record reading on home sales for May was a bright spot, suggesting continued economic strength. But violence in Iraq and a pair of bomb blasts in Turkey, including one near a hotel where President Bush is expected to fly ahead of Monday's NATO summit, caused some jitters. Still, the lack of a deeper slide was encouraging to analysts.

"The bombing in Istanbul certainly raises more risk concern, and that could be what's keeping us flat today," said Kevin Caron, market strategist with Ryan, Beck & Co. "Beyond the more important fundamental drivers — a robust profit expansion, companies with record levels of cash balances, creating new jobs — that provide solid support for the nation's economic recovery."

Spud. He doubts any will start anytime soon.
" But obviously, individual growers can make seed selection on their own," Muir said.
Muir said he's not sure lower-carb potatoes will catch on with the general population — consumers might not enjoy the taste like a regular potato.
" They're definitely going to be a niche product," he said.
" Anytime you reduce the starch in a potato, you end up with a gummy potato. If it doesn't taste like a regular potato, consumers won't eat it.
And besides, average potatoes are healthy just as they are. Muir said. An average potato contains 100 calories, has no fat, is low in sodium and high in potassium, plus has some dietary fiber. It also has vitamins C and B6.

And while the lower-carb potato may seem more healthful to carb-watchers, the new breed actually may have fewer nutrients than an average potato.
" It looks like this new potato is thin-skinned. Most of the fiber is in the skin," he said.
Linda McCashon, who represents the National Potato Promotion Board, which has launched a $4.5 million cam-offers BlueCross or BlueShield.

The counties maintained that BlueCross and BlueShield have campaigned to limit county membership in GEMPLAN so it will fail and they can continue monopolizing the market for county health care coverage and thereby fixing excessive premiums for such coverage.
The counties participating in GEMPLAN are Adams, Bingham, Blaine, Blaine, Butte, Caribou, Clark, Clatsop, Gem, Lemhi, Minidoka, Owyhee, Payette, Teton and Washington.

PUBLIC NOTICE

Notice of proposed designation of critical habitat for bull trout within the Jarbidge River population; opening of a public comment period to receive written comments to the Architect.
On June 25, 2004, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service published in the Federal Register a proposal to designate critical habitat for threatened bull trout within the Jarbidge River population of Idaho and Nevada under authority of the Endangered Species Act of 1973, as amended (Act). The total area being proposed includes approximately 131 miles of streams.
Among the many factors that contributed to the decline of bull trout in the Jarbidge River population are those which appear to have been particularly significant include degradation and loss of habitat resulting from isolation of the population due to dams and water diversions that impeded migratory bull trout movements; alterations in water temperature, water quality, and sedimentation rates resulting from past forest and range management practices, mining, and roads; and fisheries management, particularly fishing pressure and potential overharvest, and the introduction of competing nonnative species.
The Act refers to critical habitat as specific geographic areas that are essential for the conservation of a threatened or endangered species and which are special in management considerations. A designation of critical habitat does not set up a preserve or refuge for the species or establish critical habitat for each stream in the Jarbidge River population of Idaho and Nevada. It authorizes, if found, or authorizes that might affect critical habitat, but in most cases this would already occur under the section 7 interagency and consultation requirements of the Act. Critical habitat designation has no impact on private landowners taking actions that do not involve Federal funding, authorization, or permits.
Critical habitat for bull trout in this proposed rule includes specific streams. The lateral extent of critical habitat for each stream is the width of stream channel, as defined by its bankfull elevation (the level at which water begins to leave the bank and flow into the floodplain) on both sides of the stream. The majority (82%) of lands adjacent to the streams proposed as critical habitat are public lands managed by the Bureau of Land Management and U.S. Forest Service. Approximately 5 percent of adjacent lands are privately owned, and 3 percent are owned by the State of Idaho.
The Service is soliciting additional data and information from the public on all aspects of the proposed critical habitat, including data on proposed critical habitat, the impacts of the designation and any other habitats that should be included. These comments will assist us in making a final decision on this proposed action. We may revise the proposed rule prior to the final designation to address new information received during the 60-day comment period. An economic analysis of the critical habitat proposal is also being prepared and will be made available for public comment before a final decision is made.
Comments from interested parties must be received by the close of business on August 25, 2004. The Service will host an informal public meeting prior to the end of the comment period to allow interested parties to speak with Service representatives. The date and location will be announced by the Service at a later date.
Comments may be mailed to John Young, Bull Trout Coordinator, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, 911 N.E. 11th Avenue, Portland, Oregon 97232; submitted via e-mail to bulltrout@hqn.fws.gov; or mailed to John Young at 503-231-6243. Comments and materials received from the public, as well as the supporting information used in preparing the proposed rule, will be available for public inspection by appointment, during normal business hours at the above address. Additionally, the draft critical habitat proposal, maps, fact sheets, photographs, and other materials relating to this issue can be found on the Service's Pacific Region Bull Trout Website at <http://species.fws.gov/bulltrout>.

PUBLIC NOTICE

Notice of proposed designation of critical habitat for bull trout within the Jarbidge River population; opening of a public comment period to receive written comments to the Architect.
On June 25, 2004, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service published in the Federal Register a proposal to designate critical habitat for threatened bull trout within the Jarbidge River population of Idaho and Nevada under authority of the Endangered Species Act of 1973, as amended (Act). The total area being proposed includes approximately 131 miles of streams.
Among the many factors that contributed to the decline of bull trout in the Jarbidge River population are those which appear to have been particularly significant include degradation and loss of habitat resulting from isolation of the population due to dams and water diversions that impeded migratory bull trout movements; alterations in water temperature, water quality, and sedimentation rates resulting from past forest and range management practices, mining, and roads; and fisheries management, particularly fishing pressure and potential overharvest, and the introduction of competing nonnative species.
The Act refers to critical habitat as specific geographic areas that are essential for the conservation of a threatened or endangered species and which are special in management considerations. A designation of critical habitat does not set up a preserve or refuge for the species or establish critical habitat for each stream in the Jarbidge River population of Idaho and Nevada. It authorizes, if found, or authorizes that might affect critical habitat, but in most cases this would already occur under the section 7 interagency and consultation requirements of the Act. Critical habitat designation has no impact on private landowners taking actions that do not involve Federal funding, authorization, or permits.
Critical habitat for bull trout in this proposed rule includes specific streams. The lateral extent of critical habitat for each stream is the width of stream channel, as defined by its bankfull elevation (the level at which water begins to leave the bank and flow into the floodplain) on both sides of the stream. The majority (82%) of lands adjacent to the streams proposed as critical habitat are public lands managed by the Bureau of Land Management and U.S. Forest Service. Approximately 5 percent of adjacent lands are privately owned, and 3 percent are owned by the State of Idaho.
The Service is soliciting additional data and information from the public on all aspects of the proposed critical habitat, including data on proposed critical habitat, the impacts of the designation and any other habitats that should be included. These comments will assist us in making a final decision on this proposed action. We may revise the proposed rule prior to the final designation to address new information received during the 60-day comment period. An economic analysis of the critical habitat proposal is also being prepared and will be made available for public comment before a final decision is made.
Comments from interested parties must be received by the close of business on August 25, 2004. The Service will host an informal public meeting prior to the end of the comment period to allow interested parties to speak with Service representatives. The date and location will be announced by the Service at a later date.
Comments may be mailed to John Young, Bull Trout Coordinator, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, 911 N.E. 11th Avenue, Portland, Oregon 97232; submitted via e-mail to bulltrout@hqn.fws.gov; or mailed to John Young at 503-231-6243. Comments and materials received from the public, as well as the supporting information used in preparing the proposed rule, will be available for public inspection by appointment, during normal business hours at the above address. Additionally, the draft critical habitat proposal, maps, fact sheets, photographs, and other materials relating to this issue can be found on the Service's Pacific Region Bull Trout Website at <http://species.fws.gov/bulltrout>.
