Iraq will get Saddam

U.S. will hand over custody of former leader on Thursday

Newsday

BAGHDAD, Iraq — Iraq's new prime minister announced Tuesday that the country's former president, Saddam Hussein, would be handed over to Iraqi legal custody Wednesday and arraigned in an Iraqi court Thursday, possibly giving the world the first view of Saddam since he was captured Dec. 13.

Saddam and 11 other former senior officials in his regime will face charges of war crimes and crimes against humanity but will probably not be tried for several months because the Iraqi Special Tribunal established to try them is still in its infancy, said senior U.S. government legal experts consulting with the tribunal.

In the meantime, Saddam and his former lieutenants will remain under American guard but within the legal control of the Iraqi courts.

"I know I speak for my fellow countrymen when I say I look forward to the day former regime leaders face justice," said Prime Minister Iyad Allawi, a former Baath Party member who was the target of a 1978 assassination attempt while in exile near London that he says Saddam's half-brother oversaw. Yet Allawi insisted that Sad-

TWIN FALLS — On the eve of the 2004 fire season Twin Falls may become a hot spot of activity as the new Bureau of Land Management air attack base opens.

Not only has more than a decade of work brought a new facility and more jobs to the area, but fire officials say the base will serve as battleground headquarters for the BLM's airborne attack efforts against regional wildfires.

The new base will house all of the BLM's aviation resources in south-central Idaho, including two single-

U.S. plans to recall former soldiers into active duty

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Digging deeper for help in Iraq and Afghanistan, the Army is recalling to active duty about 5,600 people who recently left the service and still have a reserve obligation.

In a new sign of the strain the insurgency in Iraq has put on the U.S. military, Army officials said Tuesday the involuntary callups will begin in July and run through December. It is the first sizable activation of the Individual Ready Reserve since the 1991 Gulf War, though several hundred people have voluntarily returned to service since the Sept. 11, 2001, terror attacks.

Unlike members of the National Guard and Reserve, individual reservists do not perform regularly scheduled training and receive no pay unless

NO MAN'S LAND Residents of disputed area praise Filer schools

By Karin Kowalski
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Personal attention and a strong agriculture program are some of the benefits of attending Filer schools, several parents who support enlarging the district said at a hearing Tuesday.

The first day of testimony in a boundary dispute included comments from petitioners and cross examination by attorneys for the Twin Falls and Filer school districts.

The area in question is a strip of land that runs south about seven miles from Pole Line Road to 3400 North. Several residents have requested the Filer School District's eastern boundary be moved out a half mile to 2500 East. That would annex about 50 students that now fall within the Twin Falls School District's boundaries.

Ruling on Internet porn favors free speech

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Wide-open free speech remains the rule on the Internet, the Supreme Court said Tuesday, as it barred prosecutors from enforcing a federal law that would make it a crime for commercial Web sites to post sexually explicit material where children and teenagers could see it.

The 5-1 ruling sends a message to parents that it is up to them to monitor their family's computer use and necessary, install software filters to screen out pornography. The court said the free-speech rights of adult users of the Internet should not be sacrificed if there are other ways to protect children.

Software filters look to be a more effective way to shield minors from online pornography because they target the problem "at the receiving end," Justice Anthony M. Kennedy said.

This is preferable to permitting the government to go after Web sites whose customers are adults, Kennedy said. Moreover, since an estimated 40 percent of the pornography on the Web comes from overseas, a federal law targeting U.S. producers would not truly shield American children, he said.

Tuesday's ruling in Ashcroft v. the American Civil Liberties Union upheld a judge's order that has kept the government from enforcing the Child Online Protection Act of 1998. It would impose a $50,000 fine and six months in prison for the operator of a commercial Web site that posted "patently offensive" photos or descriptions that were available to minors.

Under the law, Web-site operators could defend themselves by requiring credit card numbers or an adult access numbers to enter the site.

The justices stopped short of declaring the law unconstitutional. Instead, they sent the case back to a court in Philadelphia for a trial to decide whether software filters would work as well as a criminal law in shielding children from online pornography.

"By preventing Attorney General (John) Ashcroft from enforcing this questionable federal law, the court has made it safe for artists, sex educators and Web publishers to communicate with adults about sexuality without risking jail time," said Ann Beeson, the ACLU's associate legal director.

Mark Conillo, a Justice Department spokesman, said in a statement, "The department will continue to work to defend children from the dangerous predators who lurk in the dark shadows of the World Wide Web."

Tuesday's ruling came on the last day of the term.

Air base open house. The Bureau of Land Management is hosting an open house from 10 to noon today to show-off its new air attack base at Justin Field, Magic Valley Regional Airport.

"It will make operations locally and nationally more efficient," she said. Larry Mabbutt, the BLM's aviation manager in south-central Idaho, described the base as a regional hub for aircraft to be deployed in all directions.

The event will feature a ribbon-cutting ceremony and a tour of the new 5,700-square-foot facility that will house up to 50 BLM personnel. Several practice air drops with BLM aircraft will then take place outside the facility on the airport tarmac.

"The base will be good not only for the Magic Valley but for all of the Great Basin," he said. "One of the great things about this place is that if there is a fire in Nevada and if we are in the initial attack area, they can call on us to help them."

In addition, since the base is built at the city-owned airport, Twin Falls will continue to own the new 5,700-square-foot building and lease it to the BLM. The BLM's rent will be free for the first five years. The federal agency will then make an annual lease payment for 15 years, and the rental agreement will be renegotiated after that.

Bush pushes for democratic reform in the Middle East

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — A day after Iraq's new interim government claimed power, President Bush said Tuesday that "freedom is the future of the Middle East," but made clear that what he means by democracy is not wholesale acceptance of Western pop culture.

"When I speak about the blessings of liberty, coarse videos and crass commercialism are not what I have in mind," Bush said in remarks here before ending a five-day trip to Ireland and Turkey. "There is nothing incompatible between democratic values and high standards of decency."

In another self-criticism after acknowledging widespread suspicion of U.S. motives, Bush said: "When some in my country speak in an ill-informed and insulting manner about the Muslim faith, their words are heard abroad, and do great harm to our cause in the Middle East."

But he said Muslims also bear some responsibility for tensions between the two

At the speech on the grounds of Galatasaray University, next

Man wins judgement in Barbie case

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Mattel Inc. must pay more than $1.8 million in legal fees and court costs to a Utah man who incorporated made Barbie dolls in his artwork, a federal judge has ruled.

The award stems from a lawsuit the El Segundo-based toy maker filed in 1999 against Tom Forsythe of Kanab, Utah, on grounds that his series of photos, "Food Chain Barbie," infringed on the toy maker's copyrights.

The photos often depicted Barbie dolls placed in sexually provocative positions. One called "Barbie Enchiladas," shows four Barbie dolls inside a lit oven, wrapped in tortillas and covered with salsa in a casserole dish.

Matell contended the images might hurt its brand and lead some consumers to believe that the company, which began selling the doll line in 1959, might be behind the photos.

The company lost its case, and in December, a three-judge panel of the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals rejected Matel's appeal.

Slain soldier's family shares images of grief

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Army National Guard Spc. Patrick McCaffrey's body arrived at Sacramento International Airport shortly before midnight Sunday enclosed in a flag-draped casket.

His wife, Silvia, was too heart-broken to say much. His father, Bob, was also silent. His mother was the only family member who could stay her tears. "I feel empty, hurt, numb," said Nadia McCaffrey, 59. "I am not angry, I am not revengeful. I'm just hurt that my son's life is gone, and they should stop what they're doing."

Patrick McCaffrey, 34, signed up with the National Guard the day after the Sept. 11, 2001, terrorist attacks because he wanted to help his country recover. His mother said. He never thought he'd be sent to Iraq, where he arrived this spring and died in a barrage of gunfire June 22. He served with the Santa Rosa-based 579th Engineer Battalion but had been converted recently to the infantry.

He was 60 miles northeast of Baghdad on patrol when he and National Guard Lt. Andre Tyson of Riverside were ambushed and killed.

His mother's decision to invite the media to cover the arrival of his casket was a challenge to the Pentagon, which prohibits the photographing of coffins when they are removed from military planes or when they arrive at military bases.

Twelve face indictment in Philadelphia probe

PHILADELPHIA — A former city treasurer, a powerful city lawyer and 10 others were indicted Tuesday in a municipal corruption investigation that became public when a bugging device was discovered in the mayor's office.

It is the second round of indictments to come out of the investigation.

The latest indictment alleges that in 2002 and 2003, attorney Ronald A. White gave cash and gifts worth tens of thousands of dollars to then-Treasurer Corey Kemp to influence which financial services companies were selected to handle bond transactions for the city.

Court rejects attempt to stop gay marriages

BOSTON — A federal appeals court Tuesday rejected an attempt by conservative groups and state lawmakers to stop gay marriage in Massachusetts.

The Florida-based Liberty Counsel, which launched the lawsuit, said it would appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court. The plaintiffs had argued that Massachusetts' high court usurped the power of the Legislature — and thereby violated the U.S. Constitution — when it ruled last year that gay couples are entitled to wed.

Detective: Peterson told about body disposal

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. — Scott Peterson talked to a friend nine years ago about how he would dispose of a body if he killed someone, saying he would weight the body down and dump it in the ocean so the fish would eat it, a detective testified Tuesday.

Nation in brief

"He said he would tie a bag around the neck with duct tape," weight the body down and toss it into the ocean and "fish activity would eat away the neck and hands and the body would float up, no fingers, no teeth," making it impossible to identify, Detective Allen Brocchini said.

Brocchini did not elaborate on how he learned of the 1995 conversation.

Weather eases fire threat along Sierra Nevada

COLEVILLE, Calif. — Two wildfires started by lightning had blackened more than 3,000 acres by Tuesday along the eastern Sierra Nevada, temporarily prompting the evacuation of a Marine Corps housing unit.

One fire broke out Monday and quickly spread across 900 acres. It erupted near the area where some 470 firefighters already were battling a 2,100-acre wildfire that started Friday in the region about 70 miles south of Reno, Nev.

Officials find body in home of social worker

TOPEKA, Kan. — Days after an elderly social service worker admitted concocting a story about surviving the Bataan Death March, the decomposed body of a woman was found in her home.

An elderly woman was in the home when the body was found Monday and she was taken to a hospital, police said. But officials would not say whether the elderly woman was Juanita L. Smith, who lost her job as director of the Topeka YWCA's Teen Pregnancy Prevention Program last week after she admitted her lie about serving as a Navy nurse during World War II.

Valedictorian who criticized school will receive her diploma after all

NEW YORK (AP) — A valedictorian who was denied her high school diploma after she criticized her school during a graduation speech will receive her sheepskin Thursday, but she still doesn't have an apology, she said.

A tearful Tiffany Schley, 17, appeared Monday outside City Hall with her mother and supporters, including a city councilman, to demand that education officials say they're sorry.

"I had things to say, I had opinions and ideas," Schley said at the news conference. "I stand by what I said because it was the truth and the truth hurts."

In her graduation speech last Thursday, Schley complained that Brooklyn's High School of Legal Studies was overcrowded and that the teaching and guidance counseling were inadequate.

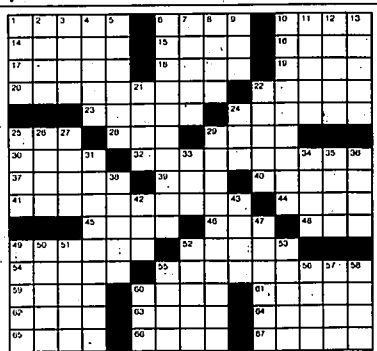

Schley — accepted to Smith College on a full scholarship and voted "Most Likely to Succeed" by her classmates — was refused her diploma when she went to pick it up the next day.

Teen must decide which he loves more

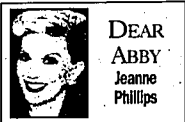

DEAR ABBY: I have been seeing "Gil" for a little over seven months. I love him, but he drinks a lot. A couple of nights ago he called me, roaring drunk. I told him he needed to stop drinking.

He swore on the love he had for me that he would quit, and asked me how long I wanted him to stop for. I asked him to stop for one month. I told him that if he drank during the 30 days, I'd break up with him.

Now Gil says that the promise he made doesn't count because he was drunk when he made it. He says he would never have made such a promise if he'd been sober. He told me he could quit for a month if he wanted to, but he doesn't want to stop.

I don't think this is fair to me because he swore on the love he has for me. Should I keep my word and end the relationship if he drinks? I'm only 17, and I don't want him to ruin his future.

—SAD IN TEXAS

DEAR ABBY: My niece and nephew were living with their father, "Ron," and their stepmom, "Anita," and she turned out to be a problem drinker. He may care for you, but it appears he loves his alcohol more. Much as you might wish to, you can't save another person; you can only save yourself. If you're as intelligent as I think you are, you'll keep your word and end the romance so you won't ruin your future.

—DOTING AUNT IN ALABAMA

How can I help the children to adjust and understand? They are precious young people who badly need stability in their lives.

—DOTING AUNT IN ALABAMA

DEAR DOTING AUNT: What your niece and nephew need in their lives, even more than words, is continuity. Assure them that you will be there for them as long as they need you. Praise them for their good qualities.

— Explain that regardless of what may be said in the heat of anger, adults rarely end their marriages because of anything a child may have done. Have their father repeat what you have said. From your description of the stepmother, everyone will be better off with her out of the picture.

DEAR ABBY: Our marriage was wonderful until my wife cut back on her Premarin. Now she's argumentative and her libido is shot. I'm really suffering. I want a wife, not a sister. I love her dearly, but had I known this was going to happen, I might not have married her. Is there any alternative to splitting up?

—DESPERATE IN ARIZONA

DEAR DESPERATE: Yes, and it involves your wife being willing to level with her gynecologist about the disappearance of her sex drive since she stopped taking the Premarin.

Women have been helped by using small doses of testosterone, but this is something that needs to be determined by a physician.

Purposeful plan of action awaits Aries

IF JUNE 30 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY ... you are beyond most of the troubles that pelt the world right now and are fortunate in your acquaintances. Expect companions to generously share their bounty with you. Hint: a loyal person by your side makes life more pleasant. Make important birthday resolutions: blow out all the candles on your cake and you will be able to follow through on them.

ARIES (Mar. 21-Apr. 19): Hopefully, you started something of importance, recently, because your energies are high and much can be accomplished. A purposeful plan of action will run smoothly for the next several days. Get on the ball.

Taurus (Apr. 20-May 20): Honesty is the best policy and right now the truth will be easy to see. People will appreciate your integrity, and you will attract others with the same high standards. Your personal fortune cookie is filled with good luck.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your head may be filled with new ideas and fresh insights that must be discussed. Your bubbling enthusiasms may be contagious where loved ones are concerned, but others are not dazzled by mere words.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): The romantic mood of last night may bubble over into today and you may get carried away. But eventually you must knuckle down and take care of pressing matters or risk reprimands. Discipline is necessary.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Place funds in safe hands and your trust will be rewarded. It is a good time to purchase tilings of beauty and taste. Employees who begin to work now will prove to be honest and loyal.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): With the light of love shining within, you may feel invincible and assured that your ideas to improve the workplace are valuable. But your words may fall on deaf ears. Concentrate efforts on improving yourself rather than others.

SARSA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Those who are a positive influence and have your best interests at heart will be drawn closer under these celestial patterns. Make promises and alliances now to receive the best advantages from helpful stars.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): The seductive atmosphere now in place is perfect for making vows of permanent allegiance. Put problems to rest and contact those who are owed an apology. There is a generous aura to the day so forgiveness comes easily.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Cheerfulness and good clean fun is on the agenda. Faith in others will be rewarded so accept promises and make plans. You are at your attractive best where love and romance are concerned.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Pastorate ideas give way to cold appraisal as the day unfolds. Deal with necessities, but look for value rather than price. Helpful planets can guarantee a smooth conclusion to agreements undertaken today.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): An extreme love of independence can ease opposition to your plans. Once compromise is obtained, you will be obligated to follow through on promises. If you have a hard time sleeping, count your blessings instead of sheep.

PISCES (Feb. 19-Mar. 20): Although a few surprises may cause stress, you will have true blue companions to rely upon. Use these beneficial stars to purchase items of refinement or solidify understandings with key partners.

Vintners face battle over wine ads

PARIS — Embattled French winemakers, struggling with sagging sales and backed by a powerful alliance of lawmakers, have a message for those who like a tipple: Drink more.

But their bid to loosen restrictions on alcohol advertising has met stiff resistance from doctors' groups — who say French consumers drink quite enough already.

France's vintners have for years suffered a steady erosion of their livelihoods by margin-squeezing supermarket chains, falling demand at home and the growing popularity of Australian and American wines abroad. A government crackdown on drunken driving has also battered domestic sales.

Amid concern for the future of French vineyards and the 300,000 jobs they support, Parliament is to vote on a Senate amendment next month that will clear the way for more wine advertising on billboards, radio, in magazines and other mainstream media.

Health workers are bitterly opposed, and three medical organizations have complained to the prime minister that the proposed changes would fuel alcoholism.

"What this amounts to is that we can't export all the wine we want, so French people will have to drink it," said Alain Rigaud, president of the National Association for the Prevention of Alcoholism and Addiction.

Liberals lose outright majority in Canada

OTTAWA — Voters stripped the long-dominant Liberal Party of its outright control of Parliament, but left it enough seats to take charge of Canada's first minority government in 25 years.

"It's unfamiliar terrain," said Prime Minister Paul Martin, relieved at avoiding even heavier losses in Monday's election at the hands of Quebec separatists and a newly unified Conservative Party.

Tarnished by financial scandal, the Liberals lost 13 seats to end an 11-year monopoly on power.

U.N. helicopter crashes in Sierra Leone; 24 die

FREETOWN, Sierra Leone — A U.N. helicopter crashed in Sierra Leone on Tuesday, killing all 24 peacekeepers, aid workers and others on board, a U.N. spokeswoman in the West African nation said.

The victims aboard the Russian-made Mi-8 included three Russian crew members, U.N. mission spokeswoman Sharon Peterson said. There was no word on the nationality of the others killed.

Leopards prey on people near India national park

BOMBAY, India — Leopards straying from a national park on the edge of Bombay, India's largest city, have killed 10 people this month — prompting forest officials to let loose pigs and rabbits to feed the big cats.

The killings are up sharply from previous years, and six of this month's deaths occurred outside the park as leopards extended their range in search of food.

Traps are being set up outside the park. A low voltage electric fence will be built to prevent the estimated 30 leopards from leaving Sanjay Gandhi National Park.

Father of dead American denounces handover

LONDON — The father of an American beheaded in Iraq said Tuesday the handover of sovereignty there was a sham and accused President Bush of causing immense pain to thousands of people by going to war.

Michael Berg, whose 26-year-old son, Nicholas, was decapitated by militants, said at a news conference organized by the Stop the War Coalition that the transfer was "nothing more than another nut-and-shell game."

"We know that the Iraqi people have not had an election yet, so we do not have a democracy over there, we just have a dictatorship of Bush and (Prime Minister Tony) Blair," he said.

"What kind of stability is there in Iraq when we have to sneak the transfer of power in two days ahead of time for who knows why?"

U.S. military appoints tribunal for Gitmo detainees

GUANTANAMO BAY NAVAL BASE, Cuba (AP) — The Pentagon announced Tuesday that it has formed a five-member military tribunal to try three terrorism suspects held at this U.S. naval base.

The Pentagon's announcement came a day after the Supreme Court issued a ruling that prisoners held at Guantanamo Bay should have access to U.S. civilian courts to appeal their detention — a decision considered a major blow for President Bush's stance that the United States can jail suspects without judicial review.

The trials — of an Australian, a Sudanese and a Yemeni — would be the first of any of the prisoners swept up in the U.S. war on terror and held at Guantanamo. These would be the first military tribunals convened by the United States since World War II.

"This is an important first step," Air Force Maj. John Smith, a lawyer who helped draft commission rules, said in a telephone interview from the Pentagon. "We'd like to have a case tried by the end of the year."

He said the trials would be held at the U.S. Navy base at Guantanamo, where detainees have been held since January 2002 and now number nearly 600 from 42 countries.

A Pentagon statement said the first to be tried will be David Hicks of Australia, Ali Hamza Ahmed Sulayman al-Bahlul of Yemen and Ibrahim Ahmed

Mahmoud al-Qsbi of Sudan. It was unclear which would go first.

The three have been charged with conspiracy to commit war crimes and other offenses. They could face up to life in prison if convicted, the Pentagon has said previously, ruling out death sentences for the three.

Al-Qsbi is alleged to have been an al-Qaida accountant and bin Laden bodyguard, while al-Bahlul, of Yemen, is accused of being a propagandist for bin Laden who produced videos glorifying the killing of Americans, according to an official list of charges released by the Pentagon in February.

The men are alleged to have trained at al-Qaida camps in Afghanistan, but the Pentagon's list of charges makes no mention of either man carrying out or planning any terrorist attack.

Hicks, 28, a convert to Islam, is accused of training at al-Qaida camps and taking up arms against U.S.-led forces.

Justices make proper follow-up to Ring case

Only time will tell whether last week's U.S. Supreme Court ruling to uphold 14 Idaho penalty cases provides savings for the state. Odds are, many death row inmates will keep battling to overturn their sentences.

The court's decision, however, does save victims' families the awful expense of enduring a another round of resentencing. If for no other reason than that, the court deserves applause for taking its legal stand.

The court ruled 5-4 that Idaho and three other states don't have to resentence more than 100 death row inmates under its 2002 case, Ring vs. Arizona.

That 2002 ruling said all criminal case death sentences must be given by juries and not judges, according to the Sixth Amendment.

The ruling, however, didn't specify whether it should apply retroactively to previously convicted death row inmates.

Last summer, the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said it should, and commuted the death penalties for 100 convicted murderers in Arizona, Idaho, Nebraska and Montana, in its sentence.

But the court, in a decision penned by Justice Antonin Scalia, reversed that ruling last week.

The majority called the Ring decision a "procedural" change to death penalty cases, not a "substantive" change.

Procedural changes should allow a defendant who has gone through trial and appeals to "continue to litigate his claims indefinitely on hopes that he will one day have a change of heart," the court determined.

Had the ruling gone the other way, the required resentencing hearings would have been costly, time-consuming and painful, to say the least.

New jurors would probably have to be called in each case. Evidence would have to be presented once more. Witnesses would have to recall testimony of ghastly crimes from past decades. And the process would pile up higher costs for the taxpayer.

But as Scalia wrote, if the procedural changes of the Ring case have not changed evidence or laws that led to guilty verdicts, there's little legal justification to retry these cases.

Some death penalty opponents will argue the court's preference for sentencing by juries will reduce the frequency of death sentences. Others such as Jimmie Vurel Thomas, the only death row inmate convicted from the Magic Valley, will get a new jury sentencing, anyway. (Judge Monte Carlson ordered that Thomas be resentenced after the 2002 Ring decision.)

But a jury sentence is hardly a guaranteed light sentence.

Scalia makes salient points that both judges and juries have strengths and flaws in sentencing.

And emotion can easily tip a jury toward a death sentence.

A majority of Idahoans still favor the death penalty. Just as important, is that they want sentences to stick.

The Supreme Court's latest decision reaffirms the state's ability to meet both standards.

Our view: The U.S. Supreme Court wisely ruled that death sentences from Idaho judges are still legally valid.

What do you think? We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

Liberal despair on a new day for Iraq

We live in peculiar times when good news is bad news and bad news is good.

Take the Monday Surprise. At 2:26 a.m. EDT, as most Americans were sleeping, sovereignty passed quietly from the Coalition Provisional Authority to the new Iraqi provisional government. Two days ahead of schedule.

Good news, right? A noble goal realized, yes! Not our goal is to unsettle President George W. Bush, in which case bad news is good news.

Among those for whom the news is good: the United States, America, the Muslim world, Bush, the Republican Party and, most important, the Iraqi people.

Honorable mention goes to U.S. Administrator L. Paul Bremer, for whom vicarious glory is appropriate.

Bremer, who has spent that past 13 months in Iraq toiling to create order out of chaos, handed over a formal document conveying authority to the new Iraqi leadership, as well as a letter from Bush requesting formal diplomatic relations, and left the country with handshakes and waves. Not exactly the image of Americans evacuating Saigon. Didn't someone say "quagmire"?

In Istanbul, where Bush and European leaders were attending the NATO summit, Bremer read a short note from National Security Adviser Condoleezza Rice, which began: "Mr. President, Iraq is sovereign."

Shortly thereafter, Bush declared: "The Iraqi people have freed their country back... We have kept our word."

Whereupon, stock markets rallied in the United States, Asia and Europe, and gas prices continued sliding down 13 cents a gallon since last month.

Every sane person knows that all such good news comes anointed with asterisks, and footnotes, and 10 index pages under the heading "Yes, but..." There are a thousand ways things still could go wrong in Iraq, but surely Americans are entitled to enjoy a few hours of relief, hope and optimism.

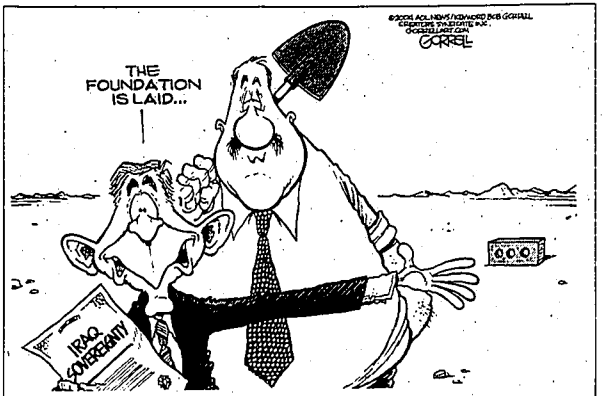

But celebration isn't a likely option for those who want to defeat Bush more than they want American success abroad.

A short list of those for whom successful Iraqi sovereignty is not such good news would include: the radical Islamist world, terrorists, al-Qaida, Michael Moore, George Soros, John J. Kerry, mooveon.org and the Democratic Party.

If you had to pick a team, which would you prefer: one who prays for victory or one who prays for defeat?

Of course it's possible to hope the best for the Iraqi people and also to hope the worst for Bush, which point of view gets organized this way:

"I hope we've turned a corner, but obviously I think we need a change in presidents to really turn the corner."

Those are the words of Wendy Sherman, a former State Department counselor in the Clinton administration, speaking Monday to CNN's Wolf Blitzer.

Not to pick on Sherman, but she's a convenient example of how schadenfreude sometimes masquerades as diplomacy. Loosely translated, here's what Sherman was really saying:

Bush overthrew a brutal dictatorship; arrested and detained Saddam Hussein, soon to be handed over to Iraqi courts; killed the tyrant's murderous sons; restored or invented infrastructure while safeguarding Iraq's oil wells; and created and installed a new provisional government in just over a year following 13 chaotic months of insurgent attacks, with little international support and daily assaults by the media and the far left, while apparently preventing new terror attacks on American soil.

But he's got to go. Why? Well, because he's a Republican.

Even as I type, a CNN Instapoll says a majority of Americans have little faith in Iraq's future. Yet another recent poll of 2,200 Iraqi households by an Iraqi firm offers a different perspective: Half of Iraqis interviewed believe Iraq is headed in the right direction; 65 percent think Iraq will be better off a year from now; 73 percent "believe the handover of authority to the interim government will improve the current situation."

Such optimism following decades of tyranny, war and terror may be explained several ways, including the fact that Iraqis lived the war rather than had it interpreted for them by the American media.

And possibly, they've caught wind of their reborn nation's new administrative law, which establishes inter alia that the people of Iraq are sovereign and free with rights of free expression, justice, thought and conscience.

Pretty heady stuff. Maybe the word will spread to others who need to hear it, including many in the United States.

Motorized use goes too far on public land

Take a hike. Seek an experience of our connection to everything. Be mindful we are visitors and ours is a very short stay.

Where are the old-growth trees? Where are the dense salmon runs? Are human interests the only considerations of consequence?

Must we continue offering choices based solely on motivations of exploitation?

Is it necessary to sacrifice these remaining roadless areas? Is there some lack of room where the motorized individual can roam?

The current proposal is a greedy one.

There is an attitude that motorized access is more important than solitude.

May we accept that there are worthwhile values in the preservation of undeveloped wild places? Is it worth less if we cannot get there from four directions riding something with a motor? Does everyone have to be driven over or dug under to be useful?

Will it be made better by sectioning it with roads? Only a fraction of what was available 30 years ago still qualifies as wilderness today. Offing less over time has become a matter of course.

More than 100 years have passed since the first unlimited access to these areas and a fine precedent that was.

This time at least we have those consequences to look back upon before choosing.

I see only two reasons for introducing motorized access into these areas.

They are political and economic for very short-term benefits.

Fireworks flap results in childish behavior

I'm going to take my ball and go home.

Today (June 23), while reading the letters to the editor, one stuck out; it was from Ann Keane. The letter was written with regard to Mr. Willie's withholding his donation for the fireworks display. Mr. Willie reminds me of a little boy that I grew up with; his name was Tommy. If Tommy didn't get his way, he would pout and take his ball home, but you know the funny thing about that is that Tommy

Price controls on gasoline is a bad idea

80-cent-per-gallon price control caused consumers to spend about $1.10 a gallon (30 cents per gallon in lost time) and that if the price controls had been removed, the market-clearing price of gasoline would have been $1. Consumers actually paid more than they would have without price controls, and producers made 20 cents less. Both lost.

Many people are convinced that high gasoline prices are due to oil companies' greed. But that explanation is insufficient. Why such sudden greed? Were oil companies greedy a year ago, when prices were lower? To explain a change in something, you need to point to something that changed.

What changed is the world price of oil; which increased by about $14 between May 2003 and May 2004. Each dollar increase in the price of oil translates into roughly a 2.5-cent increase in gasoline prices.

China's untold crises of growth

BEIJING — Mao Yushi, an elderly retired economist, has started his own charitable foundation, with gifts from some of the government and Communist Party officials he helped train over the years. He uses it to finance micro-credits — loans of a few hundred dollars or less — to villagers who want to start their own businesses and to train several hundred young women a year from rural areas so they can get jobs as hotel housekeepers in the burgeoning cities.

weight of the two-thirds of the population still stuck in the rural past. "There are protests every day," he says, but they could mushroom if the economic growth of the past decade were to turn into a bust — a threat very much on the minds of China's rulers.

The central government is trying to slow the double-digit growth of the past few years and bring it to a "soft landing" before what some see as a "bubble" economy, fueled by foreign investment and a huge construction boom, explodes. But it is a struggle. A delegation of conservative economists from the American Enterprise Institute, who recently visited here, were questioned closely by communist officials who wanted to know, "How the hell do you control your states? We cannot rein in what the provinces are spending."

The roaring economy is depleting China's resources — and threatening worldwide inflation in oil, steel and other commodities. Xiang Huaicheng, a senior party official and former finance minister, said the long-term threats to China's future lie in the shortage of energy, the growing dependence on imports of such basics as steel, copper, zinc, etc., and the pollution that clouds the air and spoils the streams.

Equally evident to officials are the social strains created by this high-speed economic revolution. Xiang's current assignment is to expand a social security system that now covers only a fraction of urban workers and almost no one in rural China, and to do it at a time when improving life expectancy combined with the one-child policy have given China a rapidly aging population.

The family structure that has been the linchpin of Chinese society for centuries is under severe stress. A recent newspaper survey found two-thirds of urban youngsters are being raised by their grandparents because both parents work, and reported frequent arguments between the two adult generations on child-rearing practices. The lead story in the Shanghai Daily on June 3 headlined a national survey that "showed about 20 percent of the middle and primary school children suffer problems ranging from tardiness to excessive drinking, teenage pregnancy and suicide. The moral problems of China's 367 million under-18s, including growing juvenile crime, have become a focal point for Chinese leaders."

With all this going on, those leaders do not need — and say they do not want — any external crises. That is why, they say, they have drawn a hard line against any dramatic steps toward democratic elections in Hong Kong. And it is why they talk constantly with visitors about the "threat" of a move toward independence by Taiwan's President Chen Shui-bian. China has declared it would oppose any such move "at any cost," and official U.S. policy calls for maintaining the status quo in the Taiwan Strait.

But Chen's stated goal is independence for the island and the United States is committed by treaty to protect Taiwan from military action by China. A Taiwanese professor I met in Shanghai said he is personally against America "would not sacrifice one soldier for Taiwan's independence," but, he added, "90 percent of the Taiwanese believe the Americans would fight, and that encourages Chen and other independence advocates."

The Taiwan issue has almost disappeared from domestic U.S. politics, but it is dead-serious business here. And conceivably the U.S. commitment could be put to the test during the next presidential term.

LETTER

Fundraiser deserves praise on fireworks

I have watched, with amusement, the fund-raising controversy with the Twin Falls City fireworks. Apparently, the people of Twin Falls do not understand the tremendous amount of work and effort that it takes to put on that display. A major contributor declined to contribute this year. The fund-raising personnel asked others to make up the difference. They were offended. That's foolish.

The Twin Falls City fireworks display is for every member of the city to enjoy. Thousands do. If each person that observed the fireworks contributed merely $1, the fund-raising controversy could have been avoided.

That should apply to people who go to the College of Southern Idaho to observe it, those who watch it from the empty fields at Locust and those who enjoy it from their back yards.

I personally know Mr. Dunlap. I have observed the 40 to 60 hours of direct fund-raising time expended on this project. I know that Mr. Dunlap made fund solicitation telephone calls during his vacations and during his work day.

That time must be made up elsewhere, such as performing his primary duties at home at night. For those who think raising more than $6,000 is an easy task, I'm sure that Mr. Dunlap would welcome their assistance in doing it on their own.

Some of the letters he received from the Locust solicitors told him he was failing at his job, that he was not a patriot and that he was a "yes man" for Dan Willie. He did not fail at the job; the fireworks were funded. He is patriotic and has served more than 20 years in the United States military in various forms, plus insists this program be funded annually. He is not a "yes man"; ask any of his clients.

Without the efforts of volunteers to fund this program, the skies would be dark over Twin Falls on the Fourth of July.

They haven't been since 2002, when Mr. Dunlap and his associates initially took responsibility for the fireworks display, the skies have not been dark. Funds have been raised, and the community as a whole has benefited from it.

Despite the criticism, Mr. Dunlap and his associates completed the funding for this year and fully anticipate obtaining ample funding next year for the same display.

Quarter-size hall pelts Hollister

HOLLISTER—Afternoon and evening thunderstorms sweeping through southern Idaho valleys Tuesday dumped 1-inch balls of hail near Hollister, the National Weather Service in Boise reported.

The storm began rolling in over the South Hills and Owyhee canyons in the afternoon and by 4 p.m. was in full swing.

In Boise, flash floods hit and flooded intersections and the basement of the Statehouse.

Chances of afternoon thunderstorms are forecast to continue this week.

Crash closes both lanes of Highway 93

ROGERSON—An accident that shut down both lanes of U.S. Highway 93 Tuesday afternoon caused only minor injuries, according to Idaho State Police.

Initial reports indicate two semis were involved in the crash just north of the Nevada border. Lumber from one of the tractors spilled onto the road, and Idaho Transportation Department officials were on scene to help direct traffic, according to an ISP dispatcher.

Police opened one lane of the highway around 5 p.m.

Commission conducts interviews for judges

SHOSHONE—The Magistrate Commission of the 5th Judicial District will interview candidates on July 1 for two open magistrate judge positions.

Interviewing to replace Kevin Cassidy for the Gooding County judgeship are Calvin Campbell and Steven Thomsen. Campbell will interview at 9:30 a.m. and Thomsen at 10:10 a.m.

Candidates interviewing for the Blaine County position vacated by Robert Edge include Daniel Dolan, Judge R. Ted Israel and Jim Thomas. They will interview at 1 p.m., 1:40 p.m. and 2:20 p.m., respectively.

Candidates for Gooding and Blaine Counties are Roger Harris and Casey Robinson, who will interview at 11 a.m. and 11:40 a.m., respectively.

The interviews will be in the District Courtroom in the Lincoln County Courthouse in Shoshone. The public is welcome to observe the interviews.

Water conservation group meets today

TWIN FALLS—A group calling itself the "Downsizers Club" will host a meeting at 6:30 p.m. today to share water conservation tips at Twin Falls City Hall, 321 Second Ave. E.

An introductory video on "Water-wise Tips" will be shown. It includes comments from Jo Ann Robbins of the Jerome Extension Service, Howard Nohling of the Twin Falls Extension Service, LaMar Orton of the Twin Falls Planning and Zoning Department, College of Southern Idaho Tutor Bill Ebner and CSI Horticulture Professor Dave Kiegle.

The program will be followed up every Wednesday from July through October with tours with these and other speakers. The goal is to teach citizens how to design and landscape their property to conserve water.

For more information, contact Mary at 733-6213.

Campaign will focus on aggressive driving

BOISE—The Idaho Transportation Department's Office of Highway Safety is sponsoring a safety campaign to encourage drivers to take an honest look at their own driving habits to help minimize this cause of crashes.

Aggressive driving includes risky behaviors such as following too close, driving too fast, running a red light, failing to yield or rolling through a stop sign, speeding, tailgating, people who drive as if they were 10 minutes late are considered aggressive drivers.

"The truth is, most of us drive aggressively at one time or another, so since we're all part of the problem, we need to be part of the solution," said Mark Strait of the Office of Highway Safety. "Driving aggressively only increases your chance of being in a crash."

Robber hits Wendell store

The Times-News

WENDELL—Police are seeking the public's help in identifying the suspect in a convenience store robbery early Tuesday morning.

A man described as Hispanic, between 5-foot-2 and 5-foot-4, entered the Maverik County Store at 20 S. Idaho around 4:30 a.m., according to a news release issued by the Wendell Police Department. He fired a warning shot from a pistol, then left with an undisclosed amount of money, the release said.

No one was injured in the incident. It was unknown if the man fled by foot, by car or by other means.

The suspect was wearing black pants with several white stripes on the sides, black and white shoes, a gray or white ribbed tank top, a necklace and a gray or white ball cap with a large blue patch or lettering on the front and small lettering on the left side of the bill.

The suspect also has arm-band-style tattoos on both biceps that do not fully wrap around his arms, the release said.

The same Maverik store was robbed on Aug. 15, 1996. Two 14-year-olds and a 15-year-old, armed with a semi-automatic gun and a baseball bat, stole more than $200 from the store. They were later arrested and convicted in that case.

Anyone with information on the latest robbery is asked to call the Wendell Police Department at 536-2935 or Crime Stoppers at 732-5387.

As of Tuesday, no reward was being offered in the case, according to police.

LET THE PARTY BEGIN

Rupert Parks Department employees Steve Pool and Gabriel Montoya give picnic tables in Rupert Square a fresh coat of paint in preparation for today's Christmas lighting breakfast, which kicks off six days of celebrations leading up to Monday's Fourth of July Parade.

Six days of Fourth of July festivities begin today in Rupert

By Chip Thompson
Times-News writer

RUPERT—If you can't wait for the Fourth of July you don't have to, just head to Rupert.

Today is the first of six days of celebrations marking Independence Day in Rupert. Festivities are scheduled to begin at 6 a.m. with the Christmas lighting breakfast, which raises money for decorations in Rupert Square during the holidays.

Tickets for the always-popular Eastern Idaho railroad train ride will be available at the breakfast for $2 each on a first-come, first-served basis. Fourth of July committee member Alan Johnson said. The cost of the breakfast is $4 for adults and $2 for children 8 and under.

Nationally acclaimed bluegrass band Kane's River will be the featured act tonight at 8 p.m. in the square. The band originates from Bozeman, Mont., and is one of the most sought after bluegrass bands in the U.S., Canada and Europe.

"Their songs are clever, and the band's presentation of them is exhilarating," Joe Ross of Bluegrass Now Magazine writes. "Clearly, Kane's River enjoys writing, arranging and playing music as an artistic and creative outlet as much as their fans will thrill in listening to it."

Glanbia updates locals on its treatment plant

By Michelle Dunlop
Times-News writer

GOODING—The air between Glanbia Foods Inc. and Gooding residents has cleared, and company representatives want to keep it that way.

Air quality stole the spotlight from wastewater at a meeting between Glanbia representatives and the public Tuesday night at Gooding City Hall.

"Be assured — we will get to it later on," said Doug Pettinger, environmental director for Glanbia.

Pettinger and other Glanbia employees discussed an air quality permit the company received from the Idaho Department of Environmental Quality. It's a step toward constructing a pretreatment wastewater facility on Glanbia's property near its Gooding cheese plant.

Glanbia irrigates more than 900 acres of farmland to dispose of wastewater from the facility. Glanbia does not raise the crops for human consumption.

After fervent negotiations, Glanbia and its neighbors finally reached an agreement to allow the company to expand its wastewater on 530 acres known as the Wolfe property.

Operator plans big dairy near Murtaugh

Cassia County officials will consider proposal

By Chip Thompson
Times-News writer

BURLEY—Dairy operators John and Ruth Beukers are seeking permission from the Cassia County Planning and Zoning Commission to build a nearly 10,000-head dairy in the northwest corner of the county.

The proposed 4,847-acre confined animal feeding operation for Beukers Dairy would be located near Murtaugh but within Cassia County in the vicinity of 1130 W. and 1100 S.

The planning and zoning commission has scheduled a public hearing for Thursday at 8 p.m. in the Burley City Council chambers. The meeting is open to the public, but those wishing to speak were required to submit letters in writing by June 24.

Letters were sent to 21 residents within a one-mile radius of the proposed dairy. In accordance with Cassia County ordinance, the neighbors include four ranches, the Bureau of Land Management, Idaho Department of Fish and Game, and Idaho Department of Lands.

One letter of opposition was received by the county, while there were four letters supporting the application. Three neighbors and the Oakley Highway District wrote in favor of the project.

Rulon Van Tassel, who lives 2.5 miles southeast of the proposed dairy, expressed concern in a June 23 letter about odor from lagoons and improper use of water without water rights.

"When a dairy is proposed of this magnitude you will want to raise as much dairy feed as possible and this farm has never been able to grow the kind of crops that they will be asking the wells to sustain," Van Tassel wrote.

An application is pending with the Idaho Department of Water Resources to convert existing irrigation water rights into stock water and commercial use. The application states

Prosecutors drop plans to seek death penalty

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — Just seven weeks after filing notice that he would seek the death penalty, Kootenai County prosecutor Bill Douglas has changed his mind in the first-degree murder case against Richard Elliot Hanes.

"While this is a grave and serious charge, it doesn't carry the depravity of other murder cases," Douglas said.

Hanes, 30, goes on trial Aug. 23 for killing his ex-wife's boyfriend and holding his ex-wife and her three children at gunpoint last Feb. 6. It was the day he was scheduled to be sentenced for assaulting Carol Mae Hanes-Bacon while the two were still married.

Besides killing Eddie Edmiston, 40, Hanes is accused of attempting to kill Hanes-Bacon. He is already serve the maximum five-year sentence for the assault.

In withdrawing his notice for the death penalty, Douglas cited several previous murder cases that resulted in attention for their cruelty but still failed to yield a death sentence.

- Stephen Cherry received a life sentence for slaying and killing his ex-girlfriend and then chasing her friend through the woods until she escaped.
- Danny Aschelman got 18 years to life for kicking his wife to death with cowboy boots.
- Scott Yager was sentenced to life without parole for shooting Idaho State Trooper Linda Huff.

Douglas said he discussed his caution in the Hanes case with Edmiston's relatives and they expressed confidence in the criminal justice system.

County OKs wildlife center

REBURG (AP) — A home for neglected exotic animals may be opened to the public as a wildlife sanctuary and educational center.

Rena Edleson has operated National Wildlife Awareness since 2000, taking in abandoned animals like emus, lynx, iguanas and chukars.

Now, she hopes to offer demonstrations and educational instructions about the animals.

"I'm not out to line my pocket," Edleson told Madison County Commissioners when asking for the conditional use permit. "I want to educate children and give something back."

Commissioners granted the permit Monday on the conditions that Edleson harbor no more than 60 animals, have no animal larger than a lynx and comply with U.S. Department of Agriculture regulations and licensing requirements.

of Eden are co-applicants with the Beukerses.

McRetts, owns much of the land upon which the proposed dairy would be built and is conducting a land swap with the Beukerses for land in Gooding and Jerome counties.

Because all parties are listed on the application, the land swap is not an issue for the commission, McMurray said.

Beukers' Dairy operates dairies in Jerome and Gooding counties and is proposing 8,525 Holsteins for a total of 9,999 head at the new facility.

Cassia County ordinance limits CAFOs in the CAFO overlay zone to 10,000 animal units unless specifically authorized by a conditional use permit, McMurray said. A mature Holstein is considered one unit and heifers 0.8 of a unit.

Addresses for parcels at the proposed facility are listed as 1130 W. 1100 S., 1100 W. 1100 S., and 1000 S. 1300 W. southwest of Burleigh.

The commission can approve or deny the application Thursday, or it could choose to reserve decision for a period of time if questions are not fully answered at the hearing, McMurray said.

Several fresh leaks in the basement of the Idaho State House were being plugged, but not before KRSX radio was forced off the air.

In the east wing and Legislative Services Offices were under at least two inches of water and the lights are flickering on and off. State office workers were furiously shutting off computers and putting paper up on desks as the Boise Fire Department responded to help stem the leaks.

National Weather Service meteorologist Paul Platt expected more flash flooding throughout Tuesday evening.

Flooding hits Boise area

BOISE (AP) — Hard rains hit southwestern Idaho and eastern Oregon, causing some flooding and traffic delays Tuesday.

The storms came into the Boise area at about 4:30 p.m., knocking down trees and flooding downtown intersections.

Water was also visibly running through the basement of the Idaho Statehouse about 30 minutes after the storm hit.

A mudslide in eastern Oregon blocked State Highway 86, stranding a number of motorists 10 miles west of Richland, but it was reopened after the crew. In Idaho, traffic on westbound Interstate 84 slowed to a crawl.

Downtown Boise and the North End neighborhood just north of downtown, also had a number of intersections flooded and traffic stopped, partly congested in standing water.

Idaho power officials estimated that about 12,000 customers without power.

National Weather Service meteorologist Paul Platt expected more flash flooding throughout Tuesday evening.

Anthropologist determines bone fragments were human

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — An anthropologist has determined that bone fragments found in Weber Canyon over the weekend were human, fueling speculation that they're remains of two hikers who disappeared last fall.

Summit County officials say the bones were found near a crude shelter made of trees and rocks, along with clothing and personal effects that a hiker may have carried.

The bones and other items were found near where an SUV, owned by Carole Wetherston, 58, of Panacea, Fla., and her daughter Kimberly Boudry, 39, of Tucker, Ga., was found last September.

The pair were reported missing after they failed to make their Blights home in September.

The Summit County Sheriff's office will use DNA testing on the bones to determine whether they are the hikers' remains.

The testing was expected to take several weeks.

Authorities have said they didn't believe the women were victims of foul play.

Glanbia

As part of the compromise, the company agreed to construct a $10 million wastewater treatment plant to pretreat water before it is used for irrigation.

"They've really come along and changed their attitude about it," said John Arkoosh, who lives near the plant. "I think it will be a good thing."

Glanbia can breathe a sigh of relief for the general approval expressed at the meeting. Neighbors originally expressed concern over odor and permit violations at Glanbia's existing farm, but they found few things to be worried about Tuesday.

"According to the agreement, we have until November of 2005 to begin treating the water," said Jeff Williams, executive vice president of Glanbia Foods. "Our goal is to start in July of 2005 in order to get the bugs worked out in time."

"Basically, they'll be removing a lot of the solids that are in the water," Williams continued. "It will be cleaner than irrigation water."

Methane gas is a byproduct of moving the solids. Any that cannot be used at the plant will be burned, Pettinger said.

The facility will add a new boiler and a bio-gas flare to burn the methane gas. Both processes are regulated by the DEQ.

"They're just wanting to make sure we run the plant as environmentally friendly as possible," Williams said. "And that's what we want, too."

To obtain the permit, Glanbia provided the worst case scenario projected pollution data to the department. Nitrogen dioxide levels passed federal air quality standards, Pettinger said.

Pettinger initially was more interested with levels of sulfur dioxide known to emit foul smells.

"My main concern was, are we going to add more smell to the area," he said. "And, we're not."

Feds, Utah seek nearly $14M from Boy Scouts to recover cost of fire

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The federal government and the state of Utah sued the Boy Scouts of America Tuesday for nearly $14 million to recover the costs of a 2002 fire at a Scout camp.

The lawsuit alleges that about 20 Boy Scouts ages 11 to 14 were left without adult supervision for a night outside an approved campground. Some of the boys built fires that were left to smolder and spread across more than 14,000 acres, the lawsuit says.

U.S. Attorney for Utah Paul Warner said the complaint seeks $13.3 million for the federal costs of fighting the fire and reclamation of the charred land in the Uinta Mountains. The state is asking for more than $600,000 to cover its firefighting expenses.

Utah law requires the people who start fires to pay for the cost of fighting them. Six prosecutors filed the lawsuit in federal court, the lawsuit is "the last resort" in defending taxpayers against getting stuck with the bill.

The Boy Scouts have not admitted responsibility for the fire. Roy Wallace, a BS attorney, said Tuesday questions remain about how the fire started, and that it's possible people using all-terrain vehicles were to blame.

Most Sawtooth sites ready for holiday

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Sawtooth National Forest visitors over the Fourth of July weekend will find most roads, campgrounds and trails ready for use.

The forest reminds visitors to all public lands — state or federal — that fireworks are prohibited.

Mount Harrison's Lake Cleaveland Campground in Cassia County will be open, but campers must bring their own drinking water. The water system is not yet operational.

Rock Creek area campers also should bring their own drinking water. The new water system distribution line will be completed only later in July.

The road from Oakley to Rogerson is open.

Off-road and all-terrain vehicle restrictions are in effect for Baumgartner Campground near Fairfield.

Severe rain showers have produced muddy trail conditions on the Keichum Ranger District.

The Forest Service asks visitors to avoid trails that are wet to prevent damage.

In the Sawtooth National Recreation Area, no vacancies remain at the Redfish and Alturas lakes campgrounds for the holiday weekend. Sites at other campgrounds still are available.

Backcountry users are reminded that some stream crossings may be hazardous because of fast, high water conditions. Some of the higher elevation lakes remain frozen and hikers will encounter snow on shady portions of high elevation trails.

Friends call them 'Dessert Queens'

By Coreen Hart
Times-News correspondent

BURLEY - Brenda Woodland and Charity Thrall have found their niche in life - in the kitchen.

The two best friends met while working at a florist shop 10 years ago. Although their personalities are completely opposite, they hit it off from the first day. Today, they're the original odd couple in their commercial kitchen.

Woodland likes lots of neat, clean space to make a single creation at a time - and she measures everything carefully down to the last 1/8 teaspoon. Thrall only needs a yard of counter top and is, by her own admission, a mess-maker. She measures "by guess and by golly" and may start to make carrot bread and end up with banana-coconut-raisin-carrot-nut bread.

"We complement each other," said Woodland 37. "Our two styles work perfectly together."

Both learned to cook at an early age. Woodland's father made the meals at home, but her mother baked cookies with her when she was in elementary school.

Thrall, 28, grew up in a family with five children. Her mother owned and operated the Hornet's Haven near Connor Creek, baking bread and pizzas and making sandwiches to sell.

"During their childhoods, both women owned Easy-Bake ovens. They used pint-sized mixes to bake cookies and cakes, fueling their imaginations for later years."

Thrall has now purchased an Easy-Bake oven for her 10-year-old daughter.

In fact, Hasbro celebrated 40 years of Easy-Bake sales last year, and the company has compiled a history of its ovens on its Web site - www.hasbro.com/easybake.

Woodland and Thrall belong to a group of about 10 friends who get together frequently for backyard barbecues, birthdays and holidays. The duo have long received requests for their special desserts. Eventually, old-fashioned baked goods like Orange Kiss-Me Cake and Brownie Pudding were elevated to celebrity status - and Woodland and Thrall became the Dessert Queens.

"I don't bake cookies and cakes. I just don't," said Vickie Larsen, a friend

Brenda Woodland, left, and Charity Thrall have earned a reputation among their friends as the Dessert Queens. They tie their gift baskets with fancy bows, which they learned to create when they worked together at a florist shop.

who lives in Heyburn. "But Brenda and Charity bake fabulous cakes and things. They always bring a cake for everyone's birthday. Their cookies have extra chocolate chips. Now I mail baskets of their goodies to my daughter in Hawaii instead of sending flowers."

When an area business, The Goody Basket, went up for sale, Woodland and Thrall decided to buy it. For the last five years, they have been preparing sandwiches, salads and their trademark treats every day.

"They remain best friends, too, and they even live on the same block in Burley."

ORANGE WALNUT CAKE

This cake is a very old recipe that has won raves at parties with family and friends. The cinnamon and sugar topping sets it apart.

1 large orange (squeeze 1/3 cup juice for topping)
1 cup raisins
1/3 cup walnuts
2 cups flour
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup sugar
1/2 cup shortening

Yellow leaves? Get a soil test

DEAR CATHY: I have just planted a new garden with Old and English-own rose roses. I am having some yellow leaves fall off at the touch. They are not blotchy or spotted. One book tells me this is iron deficiency. Can it be anything else?

GREEN THUMBPRINTS

—YELLOW ROSE IN OREGON
DEAR YELLOW ROSE: Yellow leaves can mean a lot of different things are going on in a plant. First, what kind of yellow leaves are we talking about? Are they yellow all over, in spots, just on the edges or between the veins? Where are they on the plant? Top or bottom? How are the plants around the affected one doing? What has happened in the garden recently? Any fence painting, weed spraying or clogged sprinklers in that area? Got a new puppy?

Squiggly, blotchy yellow patterns might be a virus. As with people, there is no cure for virus in roses. Eventually, the disease will weaken the plant so much that you may as well dig it up.

Yellow on the edges, or margins, might be fluoride toxicity. How much fluoride is in your water and soil? A soil test will tell you. Calcium deficiency, though, looks dull and gray-green before the plants turn yellow, then brown at the tips. New leaves are distorted, too.

Yellow veins can be oxygen deficiency. The soil is probably packed or over-watered and the roots can't get enough air. The mature leaves drop dramatically.

Nitrogen deficiency, though, looks sort of yellow-green all over. Leaves will be stunted and normally darker-colored flowers will be several shades lighter.

Potassium deficiency causes tip and marginal yellowing that turns brown and dies later. Older, lower leaves are affected first.

Magnesium deficiency turns the interveinal areas yellow, then progresses to brown and dead. It shows up mostly on lower, older leaves.

Iron deficiency is seen as several colors of yellow leaf between the green veins. Look for it to appear first on young leaves. In a while, it will progress to an overall light yellow-green of all the new growth.

Zinc deficiency will distort the leaves, turn them yellow except for the mid-rib and kill them. Manganese deficiency looks similar to iron chlorosis, but there is more green surrounding the veins. Too much manganese, though, will turn the veins almost white and leave tiny black spots all over. Boron toxicity also turns the veins white, but brown spots will appear around the leaf edges.

Heat or salt stress looks like the leaf is burned around the edges. Heat stress is worse when the weather has been cool and wet, then suddenly turns hot and sunny. The development of soft, succulent top growth is especially susceptible to stress.

Before you do anything rash, get a soil test. Thanks for writing.

Tempting tomatoes tickle tastebuds

By Amy Culbertson/
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

FORT WORTH, Texas — For cookbook author Ronni Lundy, the taste of a tomato can whisk her back to her childhood. Suddenly, she's in Louisville, Ky., sitting on the back porch. She's cupping a little wheel of salt in the hollow of her palm, and near at hand is a bushel basket of tomatoes from a neighbor's farm.

If you're looking for a different tomato salad, Lundy says, this is one of her favorites in her new book "In Praise of Tomatoes: Tasty Recipes, Garden Secrets, Legends & Lore," which features recipes by Asheville, N.C., chef John Stelling.

5 lime leaves, finely chopped (available in gourmet markets)

2 cups green beans, blanched and cut into 1-inch lengths
Juice of 1 lime
1/2 red onion, sliced

Lettuce
Ginger dressing: In a blender, combine ginger, vinegar and sugar on medium speed; slowly pour in oil until blended.

Salad: In a large mixing bowl, toss all ingredients with ginger dressing (either toss the lettuce with the other ingredients to serve from a large bowl or plate the salads individually on top of the lettuce leaves).

Renegade gardener says landscaping blunders are common in U.S. yards

By Candace Renals
Duluth News Tribune

Don Engbreitson, a Twin Cities Master Gardener is featured regularly on HGTV. Known as the Renegade Gardener, he's candid in his observations and often biting in his comments about what homeowners do wrong.

Here's his latest list:
1 We design and plant garden beds based on flower color combinations.

The gardening industry sells you color. But if you look at a really gorgeous garden, the reason is actually where those plants are placed. The foliage contrasts from plant to plant. Perennials only bloom for two to three weeks but the foliage is there for six months. That's a good reason to plant artemisia (silver mound) and ornamental grasses. Use plants with colored foliage - silver, variegated, red, gold, purple and black - and plants with large, broad leathery leaves and those with fine, fern-like leaves. When you place shrubs, especially in front of other shrubs, look at the foliage and try to create pleasing, sometimes striking, sometimes subtle contrast in the leaves.

2 We don't test, correct and amend our soil.
If you have trouble getting plants to grow, the problem is probably your soil. Have your soil tested. If plants grow well in your garden, enrich the soil by working in compost in the fall.

3 We use too few containers, structures, art and accessories.
Accessorize your landscape. Add an arbor, art, statuary, a birdbath, a garden bench and other outdoor furniture. Place containers on the patio, along the driveway, on the steps up to the house and in places in the yard where plants put into the soil won't grow.

4 We get suckered into taking the easy way out.
Part of the gardening industry is convinced that Americans have no desire or ability to learn to garden so they dumb it down. Gardening catalogs often tout the Latin names even though it's the only way to precisely identify plants. Plant-by-number gardens that bloom at the same time look terrible. Instead, plant what you like every year.

5 We plant the wrong plant in the wrong place.
Before planting trees and shrubs, find out how big and how wide they'll grow. Pick appropriate sites for plants by studying plant culture. What are a plant's requirements for light, moisture and soil? Does it need full sun or prefer shade? Does it like sandy soil with good drainage? Ask at the nursery, buy a good plant guide book or search for information on the Internet.

6 We don't use enough shrubs and small trees.
Beds around house foundations aren't wide enough, so we have a tux of shrubs that circles the house and looks ridiculous. We need to use small trees and shrubs that bring the roof of the house down to ground level with some kind of scale. Engbreitson's rule of thumb is that the width of a foundation bed should be at least one-third the height of the house. In front of windows, choose shrubs and dwarf evergreens that at their mature height will not block windows. A wider foundation bed that curves toward the back of the yard allows for depth in planting. Shrubs can be planted in front of other shrubs and perennials in front of shrubs. There may even be room for small trees such as dwarf evergreens, skyrocket junipers and Colorado blue spruce. Large trees off the corners of the house help create that nestled appearance.

If you look at a really gorgeous yard, you can be sure lots of attention has been given to where plants are placed. Remember, the foliage itself contrasts from plant to plant.

7 We devote too much space to the lawn.
Until the 1950s, only 20 to 30 percent of yards in urban neighborhoods and small towns were devoted to grass lawns. The lawn area was usually one-half circle in the front or back. People would use a push mower, water with a hose, throw on a little fertilizer. With the 1960s came suburbanization and yards became mostly lawn. Expansive lawns require more chemicals, more water and more time to mow. Incorporate more trees and shrubs. Get back to 40 to 50 percent lawn.

8 We cut live branches off our evergreen trees but don't prune dead branches from our deciduous trees.

We want grass to grow under a spruce tree, so we start pruning from the bottom. Never cut a healthy branch off an evergreen. It saps vitality from the tree and opens it up to fungal disease and insects. A spruce tree is supposed to have a broad base that stretches out and kisses the ground. Evergreens will lose branches naturally. Prune off any dead branches, but also have an arborist check the tree for diseases. Hire a professional tree trimmer to prune

Got Peat? Secret to Successful Gardening

(MS) - What is it that makes some gardeners more successful than others? Are their thumbs greener? Is their love of the soil and dirt so intense, they compel their flowers and plants into thriving through sheer force of will? It's nothing so extraordinary. The most successful gardeners simply understand, appreciate and use the basic principles of great gardening, including how to properly condition the soil. It works like this: A plant needs loosely structured soil that provides its roots with organic matter, moisture, nutrients and air circulation. Trees, shrubs, flowers, vegetables, lawns, seeds—they all grow better when planted in soil conditioned with Canadian sphagnum peat moss.

Gardeners who regularly use peat moss as cash money benefits, including being able to use less water, less fertilizer and fewer pesticides.

More peat moss means less watering—Canadian sphagnum peat moss holds up to 20 times its dry weight in moisture, releasing it slowly to plants as needed, resulting in less frequent watering.

Peat lets you cut down on pesticide use—Peat moss reduces the need for pesticides by strengthening the lawn, beefing up its natural defenses that help fight off pests.

Peat aerates heavy soil—it helps loosen and aerate clay soils to allow proper root growth.

Peat binds sandy soil—Peat adds body to light sandy soil to help it retain water and nutrients.

Peat is long lasting—Peat moss decomposes slowly over several years compared to compost, which typically decomposes within one year.

For more information on how to properly condition and prepare your soil, or other ways to use peat moss, send an unstamped, self-addressed business-sized envelope to Peat Moss, Box 385102, Minneapolis, MN 55438; e-mail them at cpmsa@peatmoss.com; or visit the Canadian Sphagnum Peat Moss Association's Web site at www.peatmoss.com.

Trees can help cool your home

DEAR JIM: My parents' yard has trees and their air conditioner seems to run less than ours. I know it takes years for trees to grow, but can you give me some tips on where and what kind to plant in our yard?

—SANDRA H.

SENSIBLE HOME
James Dulley

DEAR SANDRA: It is not just your imagination your parent's air conditioner runs less because of having trees in their yard. The Department of Energy (DOE) has done sophisticated computer models showing just three properly placed trees can cut your utility bills by up to $250 per year.

There are many other benefits from landscaping your yard with the proper type and placement of trees. By shading your house, the walls, shingles, even curtains indoors, will last longer because the sun's rays are blocked. The air immediately around your home will be less polluted and the oxygen level will be higher. Trees also create a sound barrier from road noise.

People often think of shading as the primary cooling effect, but trees also function as natural air conditioners through a evapotranspiration process. As leaves on trees give off water, they cool the air similarly to how our own perspiration cools our skin. The air temperature near the house on a well-landscaped yard can be 10 degrees cooler than on a treeless one.

The key to efficient landscaping is selecting the proper species and placing them in the proper location for your specific climate. A well-landscaped yard will look totally different from one in humid Georgia or in the Plains.

Draw a layout of your yard and decide where you need trees for your climate type. Also determine the height, shape, type (evergreen or deciduous), and growth rate of the trees. Next, talk with a local garden store expert to make sure you are planting trees which will thrive in your climate zone.

In a temperate climate, you will also be concerned about winter heating bills. Plant deciduous trees on south and west leaving a small gap to the south-west for breezes. During winter with the leaves down, the sun will shine through. Plant evergreens on the north side for a winter windbreak.

In a hot, humid climate, your air conditioner more often. Natural breezes are good, but not as important as in a temperate climate. Shading is most important with tall trees to the south side. Avoid an overabundance of plantings which will raise the humidity level and reduce the cooling effect.

In hot, dry climates, planting trees to shade the walls and roof is critical. Tall trees with a high canopy are effective. Lower plantings placed near the house are good because, with the dry air, the evapotranspiration process can create significant cooling.

Savor apples in sweet, sour, salty or hot dishes

By Renee Schettler
The Washington Post

Despite crates brimming with early-summer stone fruits and berries, I heard Granny Smith applies this time of year. The fruit lies in a recipe I first dog-eared a couple of steamy summers ago. It's a version of gado gado (GAH-doh GAH-doh) from a British cookbook author. Some nights, I toss in shredded cooked chicken breast. But mostly I prefer to savor it just as it is.

GREEN APPLE GADO GADO

- 6 first-course or 2 main-course servings
 - 2/3 cup salted or unsalted peanuts, coarsely crushed
 - 1 clove garlic
 - 1/4 to 1/2 teaspoon salt
 - 1 to 2 small red chili peppers, seeded and chopped
 - 6 tablespoons palm sugar (may substitute brown sugar)
 - 4 limes
 - 1/2 tablespoon granulated sugar
 - 2 large green apples (may substitute 2 green mangoes or papayas, peeled and seeded)
- Couple sprigs each fresh basil, cilantro and mint leaves, torn into small pieces

In a skillet over medium heat, toast the peanuts, shaking the skillet occasionally, until the peanuts are evenly frocked with brown. Remove from the heat. Using a mortar and pestle, pound the garlic and salt until a paste forms. Add the chilis and pound until mashed. Add the palm sugar and pound until incorporated (may need to work in batches). Add the crushed peanuts and pound until most are incorporated into the paste but some are still coarsely crushed. If the mixture is stiff, add a little lime juice.) Scrape the mixture into a bowl, add the juice of 2 limes and stir to combine. Set aside.

In a large bowl, combine the granulated sugar and juice of 1 lime until the sugar dissolves. Slice the apple, using the julienne blade of a mandoline or cut the apple into matchstick-size slices. Add the apple and herbs and toss to combine. Set aside. Cut the remaining lime into sections. Place mounds of the salad onto individual dishes.

Spoon the peanut dressing over the top of each portion and serve with lime sections on the side.

Stonehaven invokes European ambience

The Stonehaven clearly lives up to its name. Stone veneer covers most of the multigabled front facade, invoking the ambience of a European country retreat. Kestones crowning the entry arch and most of the front windows add a classic flavor to this estate-size, contemporary plan.

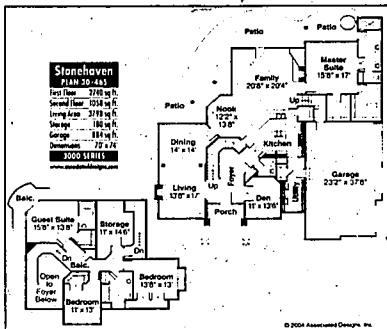

Entering, you pass between handsome stone veneer pillars into a bright two-story foyer. Natural light washes in through sidelights and a gracefully arched transom. An open stairway climbs up the left side and curves around to the right, terminating in a balcony overlooking the dining room. The gas fireplace here serves as a focal point. This space flows into the dining room, which is one step up.

A bright, roomy kitchen is at the heart of this home. It can be reached from the dining room, foyer and extensive patio, as well as the utility room and garage. A second stairway also provides a direct link with the second floor. Two work islands boast available work/storage space, and there's a large walk-in pantry as well. The octagonal nook creates a sunny, cheerful eating area, and this entire space is totally open to the spacious family room.

The luxurious master suite boasts dual walk-in closets and direct access to a partially covered hot tub on the patio. Three more bedrooms, two bathrooms and an unfinished storage room are upstairs. One of the bedrooms is a guest suite, with a balcony. Another has a window seat with storage below. The shared bathroom also has a cozy bench tucked in a smaller windowed alcove.

For a review plan, including scaled floor plans, elevations, section and artist's conception, send $25 to Associated Designs, 1100 Jacobs Drive, Department W, Eugene, OR 97402. Please specify the Stonehaven 30-465 and include a return address when ordering. A catalog featuring more than 400 home plans is available for $15. For more information, call (800) 634-0123, or visit www.associateddesigns.com.

Yards

deciduous trees and trim dead branches. Do a section of yard each year.

9 We're afraid to cut down a tree or yank out old shrubs. We've heard about the deforestation of the Amazon rain forest and think it has something to do with trees in our yards. Cut down a tree that's in a bad spot in your yard. Cut it down if it's diseased, old, storm-damaged or looks bad. Plant better trees in better spots. The same holds true for shrubs, especially those big, old overgrown shrubs. Rip them out and go to the nursery. The nursery is full of extraordinary new shrubs. A classic example is tall, leggy lilacs that were planted decades ago in what was once sun. Now they're completely shaded and don't bloom anymore.

10 We think too small and too straight.

We take a divide and conquer mentality instead of seeing a landscape as a whole. We cut a circle in the middle of the yard and plant flowers in it. We plant perennials by a fence because it's the only sunny spot. In the fall, we get a good deal on trees and plant them in a straight line along the driveway. Start by visualizing an overall landscape design. Where do you need trees? Where do you need tall evergreens to block the wind or block the sight of the neighbor's yard? The landscape should flow from one corner of the property to another and from the front to the back. There are no straight lines in nature, no perfect circles, no 90-degree angles.

Can a natural "feel good pill" shrink your BELLY FAT?

The answer is... RELACORE

Stompy flab is not your fault. That's the leading conclusion reached by scientists who discovered stress is the likely cause of stubborn belly fat. But instead of simply identifying the problem... this time, they may have found the solution!

Take The Excess Belly Fat Test!

- Does everyday life make you stress out and anxious?
- Are you accumulating belly fat that just won't go away?
- Do you binge eat in response to daily stress?
- Do you have high triglycerides (the "bad cholesterol")?
- Are you sensitive to refined sugar?
- Have you tried diet after diet without long-term success?

If you answered "Yes" to one or more questions, your extra belly fat might be due to excess cortisol.

Don't let picnics make you a basket case

By Karen Herzog
Milwaukee Journal Sentinel

Lazy summer days were meant for picnics. If time is an issue, grab something from the deli on the way home from work. The night before an outdoor concert, toss a pasta salad with arugula, fresh mint, basil and cilantro, some lemon juice and olive oil, and strips of New York strip steak. Chill it overnight. Dessert can be a bakery tart.

If kids are in on the party, keep it simple. Basic deli meat sandwiches, fresh fruit and munchies such as carrots and chips will make most kids happy — as long as there are brownies or chocolate chip cookies for dessert and lemonade to wash it all down.

A romantic picnic calls for pulling out all the stops: the perfect picnic spot and a meal that lets your special someone know he or she is the center of your universe. An assortment of crackers with pates, a fresh baguette with cheeses, and fruits such as strawberries and grapes will have your date eating out of your hand. For dessert, spread berries over poundcake. The main course for two should be something you wouldn't eat just any day — perhaps slow-roasted salmon, served cold with a refreshing cucumber sauce. Cholesterol candles provide soft light.

Going to the beach? Pack something cool and refreshing — tangy lemon bars and roasted chicken salad with red grapes and pecans.

Hikers can carry a picnic meal in their backpack. Fresh fruit is a welcome refresher after a hike. Remember to bring resealable bags for the apple cores and peels.

Here's the main dish for a romantic picnic.

COLD SLOW-ROASTED SALMON WITH CUCUMBER-CUMIN RAITA

- 1 filleted side of salmon, skin on
- 25 to 35 pounds of fat, 1 1/2 inches thick in center, pinbones removed
- 2 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
- Kosher salt
- Freshly ground black pepper
- 2 teaspoons cumin seeds
- 2 English cucumbers, peeled and diced
- 1 teaspoon kosher salt
- 2 cups plain whole-milk yogurt
- 1 tablespoon freshly squeezed lemon juice
- 2 teaspoons finely chopped garlic
- Sprinkle of cayenne pepper

Preheat oven to 275 degrees. Rub both sides of salmon with olive oil. Place salmon skin-side down in roasting pan. Generously sprinkle salt and pepper over flesh side. Roast uncovered over medium heat. Salmon will look undercooked on top, but if it flakes when gently pulled apart with fork, it's done. Remove and set aside. To make raita, place cumin seeds in large dry skillet over medium heat. Stir for 2 minutes until fragrant. Remove to plate and cool. Place in spice grinder or clean coffee grinder and grind well. In medium bowl, combine cucumbers and the 1 teaspoon salt, mix well and let sit 15 to 30 minutes, then drain off any accumulated liquid. Add ground cumin seeds, yogurt, lemon juice and garlic and mix to combine. Sprinkle top with cayenne. Let sit 10 minutes. Chill until ready to serve. Keep salmon chilled during transport and until ready to eat. Raita can be kept in a separate container and spooned alongside. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

—From "Picnics," by Sara Deseran

This sandwich, from "Picnics," by Sara Deseran, is easy to assemble after you've hiked to a favorite picnic spot in a state park. Place the fresh mozzarella balls, tomato slices and basil in a compact cooler.

FRESH MOZZARELLA, TOMATO AND BASIL SANDWICH

- 4 pieces of bread, such as herbed focaccia or baguette, halved
- 4 teaspoons extra-virgin olive oil
- 1 large garlic clove, minced
- 1 pound large fresh mozzarella balls, cut into thick slices
- Kosher salt
- Freshly ground black pepper
- 2 large tomatoes, cut into slices
- 1 bunch fresh basil, leaves separated

Brush bottom half of each piece of bread with olive oil and rub with cut end of garlic. Top with layer of mozzarella and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Top with tomato slices and sprinkle with salt and pepper again. Top with basil leaves. Brush remaining bread with olive oil and place on top. Makes 4 servings.

This recipe for a picnic with the kids plays off the appeal of one of America's favorite fast foods. It's from "Pasta Salads," by Barbara Lauterbach.

PEPPERONI PIZZA SALAD

- 8 ounces ditalini or other small, tubular pasta
- 3 tablespoons red wine vinegar
- Salt and black pepper
- 1 teaspoon anchovy paste (optional but recommended for subtle flavor)
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 2 teaspoons dried oregano, crumbled
- 1 1/3 cup extra-virgin olive oil
- 4 ounces pepperoni sausage, cut into 1/4-inch slices, then quartered
- 1/2 cup green bell pepper, seeded, ribs removed and chopped
- 2 ripe tomatoes, peeled and cut into bite-sized chunks
- 1 cup fresh white mushrooms, thinly sliced
- 1/2 cup pitted black olives, thinly sliced
- 8 ounces mozzarella, shredded

Cook pasta al dente, according to package directions. Drain into colander and rinse briefly under cold running water. Shake colander gently to drain completely. Set aside. To make dressing, in small bowl, whisk together the vinegar and salt and pepper to taste. Whisk in anchovy paste, if using, garlic and oregano. Slowly whisk in the olive oil until an emulsion forms. Place pasta, pepperoni, bell pepper, tomatoes, mushrooms, olives and mozzarella in large serving bowl. Toss together gently. Pour dressing over mixture and toss again, gently but thoroughly. Serve immediately, or cover and refrigerate up to 8 hours.

Here's a recipe from www.bettycrocker.com for a cake that packs well.

Special cakes give birthdays a spark

By Marie Hodge
Knight Ridder News Service

Let's face it, we're part of a culture that makes adults feel foolish if they want the birthday fairy to make an annual fuss over them. As a result, it often feels as if we haven't had a real birthday in years. But the glitz we felt on the birthdays of childhood has simply been moved underground, to re-emerge in the way we give our own children goopy cupcakes to celebrate theme parties, or sensory-overload celebrations at Chuck E. Cheese's. Move over, tots: the grown-up birthday cake has arrived. It's a visual show-stopper, with the kind of sophisticated ingredients that are an acquired taste most children have yet to acquire.

WHITE CHOCOLATE-RASPBERRY CHEESECAKE

Crust:
1 cup slivered almonds (optional)
2 cups graham cracker crumbs (7 ounces)
1/2 stick (1/4 cup) unsalted butter, melted
Filling:
8 ounces, fine-quality white chocolate
4 (8-ounce) packages cream cheese, softened
1/2 cup plus 2 tablespoons sugar
4 whole-large eggs
2 large egg yolks
2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 cups (11 ounces) fresh raspberries or 12 ounces raspberry preserves
Fresh raspberries, mint sprigs and raspberry coulis for garnish
Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

To make crust: Finely grind almonds and crumbs in a food processor and add butter, blending until combined. Press over bottom and two-thirds up the side of a 10-inch springform pan.

To make filling: Melt chocolate in double boiler or a large metal bowl set over a saucepan of barely simmering water, stirring until smooth, and remove from heat. If using preserves, melt them in microwave or in saucepan on stove. Let cool. Beat cream cheese with electric mixer at medium speed until fluffy, then beat in sugar. Add whole eggs and yolks, one at a time, beating well at low speed and scraping down bowl after each addition. Beat in flour and vanilla until just combined, then add melted chocolate in a slow stream, beating until filling is well combined.

To combine: Arrange berries in one layer over crust, or swirl in melted raspberry preserves, and pour filling into crust. Bake in middle of oven until cake is set 3 inches from edge but center is still wobbly when pan is gently shaken, about 45-55 minutes. Run a thin knife around edge of cake to loosen, then cool completely in pan on a rack. (Cake will continue to set as it cools.) Serve at room temperature or chilled. This can be made three days ahead and chilled, covered.

COFFEE CREAM CAKE

3/4 cup butter, softened
3/4 cup sugar
3 eggs, lightly beaten
1 1/2 cups self-rising flour
For the coffee syrup:
1 cup sugar
2 cups water
1 to 2 tablespoons brandy or rum (optional)
3 tablespoons coffee extract
For the decoration:
1/2 pint heavy cream
A few drops vanilla extract
1 to 2 tablespoons confectioners' sugar, or to taste
Walnut halves

Grease an 8-inch cake pan and line base with a circle of greased waxed paper or parchment. Cream butter and sugar together until light and creamy. Gradually beat in eggs, adding 1 tablespoon of flour with the last addition of egg. Fold in remaining flour. Turn into prepared pan and bake in a 375-degree oven for 45-50 minutes. Test for doneness by making sure a toothpick inserted into the center of the cake comes out clean. Make the coffee syrup by dissolving sugar in water in a saucepan over low heat. Remove from heat, add coffee extract and brandy or rum if desired. Stand cake on a deep serving plate and place it all over with a skewer. Pour hot coffee syrup over the cake while it is still warm to increase absorption. Leave cake to soak in syrup for at least 12 hours. Whip cream with a few drops of vanilla extract for a minute or so, and add confectioners' sugar to taste. Whip until icing forms soft peaks. Cover top and sides of cake with cream and decorate with walnut halves.

You can use chicken in stew

By Ellen Hawks
The Baltimore Sun

Harriet Boyesen of Pennington, Calif., wrote, "The recipe is from 'The New Doubtful Cookbook' (1985 edition) ... the aroma throughout the house adds to the enjoyment of the dish."

CHICKEN

BRUNSWICK STEW
1 6-pound stewing hen or capon, cleaned
1 gallon cold water
2 stalks celery
1 tablespoon sugar
5 medium potatoes, peeled and cut into 1/2-inch cubes
3 medium yellow onions, peeled and coarsely chopped
6 large, ripe tomatoes, peeled, cored, seeded and chopped
2 10-ounce packages frozen baby lima beans (do not thaw)
2 10-ounce packages frozen whole kernel corn (do not thaw)
1 medium green bell pepper, cored and cut into short,

thin slivers
2 tablespoons salt, plus more if needed
1/4 teaspoon pepper

Remove fat from body cavity of bird, then place bird and giblets in a very large kettle. Add water and celery, cover and simmer 2 hours, until meat is tender. Remove bird and giblets from broth and set aside to cool. Strain broth and skim off fat. Rinse kettle, pour in broth, and add sugar and all vegetables except corn and green pepper. Cover and simmer 1 hour. Meanwhile, skin chicken, cut meat into 1-inch cubes and dice giblets. Return chicken and giblets to kettle, add remaining ingredients, cover and simmer 40 minutes to 45 minutes more, stirring occasionally. Taste for seasoning, and add more salt if necessary.
Serve piping hot in soup bowls as a main dish.
The recipe easily can be halved or doubled, depending on how many one wishes to serve. Serves 12 to 15.

Give your salad some extra crunch

By Linda Cicero
The Miami Herald

Paula Bianchini asked for help finding an "old Italian recipe" for bread salad, "something I had often when I was a kid."

PANZANELLA (Tuscan Bread Salad)

- 1/2 loaf dense Italian bread
 - 5 plum tomatoes, peeled, seeded and chopped
 - 1 cucumber, peeled, seeded and diced
 - 1 red or orange bell pepper, seeded and diced
 - 3 small red or other sweet onion, cut into thin rings
 - 3 tablespoons drained capers
 - 1/2 cup minced flat-leaf parsley
 - 1/4 cup red wine vinegar
 - 1/4 cup Dijon mustard
 - 1 ounce minced anchovy fillets (half of a 2-ounce tin)
 - 2 teaspoons minced fresh oregano
 - 1 cup olive oil
 - Salt and pepper
 - Onion, black olives and/or minced parsley for garnish
- Chop the bread into 1-inch cubes. Let it sit out overnight, covered with a tea towel, to harden. At least 2 hours before serving and up to overnight, gently mix together the tomatoes, cucumber, bell pepper, onion, capers and parsley. In a small bowl, combine the vinegar, mustard, anchovies and oregano. Whisk in olive oil and salt and pepper to taste. Pour over vegetables, stir and allow to marinate in refrigerator. About half an hour before serving, combine 2 cups of the bread cubes with the marinated vegetables. Add additional salt and pepper as needed. Just before serving, stir in the rest of the bread cubes and top with garnishes if desired. Makes 6 servings.

Cook's corner

Lemon chess pie is one of many variations of the chess pie theme. There are also chocolate, butterscotch, raisin and other versions of the simple custard pie.

LEMON CHESS PIE

- 2 cups sugar
 - 1 tablespoon all-purpose flour
 - 1 tablespoon fine yellow cornmeal
 - 4 eggs
 - 1/4 cup milk
 - 1/4 cup (1/2 stick) butter, melted
 - 1 tablespoon grated lemon zest
 - 1/3 cup fresh lemon juice and pulp
 - 1 (9-inch) unbaked, deep-dish pie shell
 - 1 cup heavy cream, whipped (optional)
- Preheat oven to 375 degrees. Whisk together the sugar, flour and cornmeal in a large bowl. Beat in the eggs, then the milk, butter, lemon juice and zest. Pour into the crust and bake 40 to 50 minutes, until a knife inserted in center comes out clean. (If edge of crust browns too quickly, cover with aluminum foil.) Cool to room temperature and chill. Serve with whipped cream, if desired.

Add new sauce to grilled meat

By Liz Atwood
The Baltimore Sun

Tidbit for cooks

Looking to add a little zip to your grilled meat and vegetables?

Try Argentine chimichurri sauce. Although there are different versions, the basic sauce is a zesty combination of pepper, vinegar, garlic and parsley that can be used as a marinade or finishing sauce. Try spooning it onto grilled steak or mixing it into potato salad. Here's the recipe, courtesy of McCormick & Co.: Combine 1 cup of packed fresh flat-leaf parsley, 1/3 cup olive oil, 1/4 cup red-wine vinegar, 3 garlic cloves, 1/2 teaspoon thyme leaves, 1/4 teaspoon crushed red pepper and 1/2 teaspoon of salt into a food processor and puree. Makes 8 servings.

Tune up your pasta with tuna and lemon

By Renee Schettler
The Washington Post

Dinner in 25 minutes

This recipe originally called for tossing tuna tartare with pasta. Though we're fond of raw fish, we prefer it with sushi rice. We seared the tuna briefly on each side then tossed it with the pasta, lemon, chili peppers and basil.

TUNA, PASTA AND LEMON

- 4 servings
 - 12 ounces dried fusilli, penne or similarly shaped pasta
 - 8 tablespoons (1/2 cup) extra-virgin olive oil
 - 4 to 6 cloves garlic, thinly sliced
 - Generous pinch seeded, finely chopped fresh chili peppers or crushed red chili peppers (optional)
 - Grated zest and juice of 1 lemon
 - 1 large tuna steak (about 1 pound)
 - 2 large handfuls fresh basil leaves, torn into small pieces
 - Sea salt and freshly ground black pepper to taste
 - Lemon wedges for servings (optional)
- Cook the pasta according to package directions. Meanwhile, in a skillet over medium heat, heat 6 tablespoons of oil. Add the garlic and cook, stirring occasionally, until lightly golden, 2 to 3 minutes. Add the chili peppers and lemon zest and saute for 1 more minute. Remove from the heat; cover to keep warm. In another skillet over medium-high heat, heat 1 tablespoon of the remaining oil. Add the tuna and cook without turning, until golden brown, 3 to 4 minutes. Turn and cook to the desired degree of doneness, 1 more minute for medium-rare. Transfer to a cutting board; set aside to cool slightly. Cut the tuna into thin slices. Drain the pasta, reserving 1/4 cup of the cooking liquid. Return the pasta to the pot. Add the hot oil mixture, lemon juice to taste, basil, salt and copious amounts of pepper to taste and the remaining 1 tablespoon of oil and toss gently to combine. If desired, add some of the reserved cooking liquid and/or additional oil. Taste and adjust the amount of chilis, lemon and basil accordingly. Divide the pasta among individual plates and top each portion with tuna. Serve at once, with lemon on the side.

Go ape for apricots: Try them in a tart

By Cathy Thomas
The Orange County Register

Here's how to use those apricots:

- Honey-caramelized 'coits: Adjust oven rack to about 6 inches below broiler element; preheat broiler. Halve eight apricots and remove pits. Place cut side up on rimmed baking sheet. Spoon about 1 teaspoon honey onto each apricot. Broil about three minutes, rotating sheet once, or until bubbling and caramelized. Serve warm with ice cream (adapted from Food & Wine magazine).
- Apricot-pineapple salsa: Delicately spooned on grilled fish, poultry or pork, this tangy mixture can be made several hours in advance of serving and refrigerated. Combine four (pitted) chopped apricots, 1 cup diced fresh pineapple, 3 tablespoons cilantro, 1/4 cup chopped red onion, 1 diced (seeded) serrano chili (use caution when working with fresh chilies; do NOT touch face or eyes), 2 tablespoons lime juice and 1 tablespoon olive oil; toss to combine.
- Cheese-stuffed delicacies: In food processor fitted with metal blade, process until smooth 4 ounces crumbled blue cheese with 3 ounces room-temperature cream cheese. Fill hollow portion of pitted, halved fresh apricots with about 1 teaspoon of cheese mixture. Either serve as is for dessert, garnished with fresh mint leaves, or use as a topper of mixed green salad dressed with a simple vinaigrette, and garnish with chopped toasted walnuts or pistachios.

- Glaze to amaze: Brush on grilled meat during the last 10 minutes of cooking to bring sunny apricot taste to poultry or pork. Puree enough pitted chopped apricots in food processor or blender to make about 1/2 cup. Combine with 3 tablespoons red wine vinegar and 1 tablespoon brown sugar, plus salt and pepper to taste.

APRICOT CUSTARD TART

Yield: 6 to 8 servings
1 baked 9 1/2-inch tart shell
About 5 ripe apricots (13 ounces), pitted
1 cup sugar
2 large egg yolks
3/4 cup heavy whipping cream
2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
Pinch of salt
1/4 cup slice almonds
Cover dough for tart shell (see note) with sheet of waxed paper or parchment paper; add pie weights or uncooked beans or rice. Bake in 350-degree oven 15 minutes. Remove paper and weights. Bake additional 8 minutes, or until golden brown. Adjust oven rack to middle position.

Preheat oven to 325 degrees. Place baked tart shell on baking sheet set aside. Cut apricots into wedges about 3/4-inch thick; arrange in tart shell.

In medium bowl, combine sugar, yolks and cream. Whisk until combined. Stir in flour and salt.

Carefully pour mixture over apricots. Sprinkle almonds over top.

Bake until custard is almost completely set, about 35 to 40 minutes. Best served slightly warm or at room temperature the same day it's baked.

NOTE: To save time, use store-bought refrigerated pie crust, such as Pillsbury Pie Crusts (15-ounce package). There are 2 round sheets of dough in package.

Press 1 into 9 1/2-inch tart pan with removable bottom, folding over edge to reinforce sides with a double layer of dough.

If it seems scrimpy, cut wedge from second sheet of dough in package and patch it in place where needed, pushing to seal. Or prepare pie crust from scratch.

Rockets land McGrady in blockbuster deal

By Joel Anderson
Associated Press writer

HOUSTON - Tracy McGrady is leaving his hometown team for Houston in a blockbuster trade that sends Steve Francis to the Orlando Magic and gives the Rockets one of the NBA’s most intriguing duos.

The deal, which had been rumored for nearly two weeks, also sent forward Juwan Howard and guards Tyrronn Lue and Reece Gaines to the Rockets. The Magic will acquire guard Cuttino Mobley and forward Kelvin Cato.

The trade was finalized after Francis’ meeting with Magic general manager John Welsbrod and other team officials in Orlando on Tuesday.

McGrady, a two-time NBA scoring champion, now joins 7-foot-5 Yao Ming to form a combination that potentially could be as dominant as the Los Angeles Lakers’ three-time title twosome - Shaquille O’Neal and Kobe Bryant.

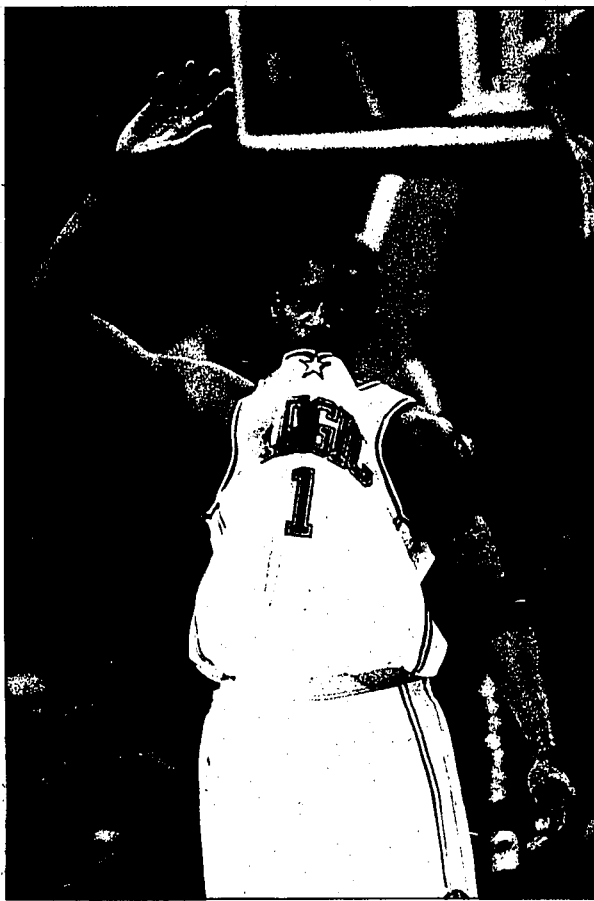

And with the Lakers splintering apart since coming up short in the NBA Finals, Houston immediately looks like a serious championship contender in the Western Conference next season.

McGrady signed with the Magic in 2000, thinking he and Grant Hill could push an up-and-coming squad over the top. But Hill had left ankle surgery in his first four seasons, and McGrady’s load grew heavier with each passing year.

Tired of carrying a mediocre franchise, McGrady wanted to exercise the opt-out clause in his contract that was to go into effect at the end of next season. But Orlando did not want him to leave without the team receiving compensation - like O’Neal did eight years ago.

Staley’s resume includes books

By Chuck Schoffner
Associated Press writer

In a career that has taken her around the world, Dawn Staley has played basketball, coached the sport, won two Olympic gold medals and created a foundation that carries her name.

Now she can add another item to her burgeoning resume: a book.

Staley, a guard on the U.S. women’s team that will play in the Athens Olympics in August, has written a series of four books aimed at girls entering their teen years.

They’re based loosely on her life and talk about the challenges - and joys - of growing up.

“It’s just going to be a tool for young girls to use for everyday life,” Staley said. “There are things I went through as a teenager that little girls are still going through, still have difficulty living through.”

“I want to let them know that it’s still OK. I’ve made mistakes. It’s what you do after you make the mistakes or when that situation is presented to you again. That’s what matters.”

Staley, 34, has plenty to share. She grew up in the tough streets of North Philadelphia, the youngest of five children. Playing sports with the neighborhood boys helped keep her on the straight and narrow in an area that had gangs, drugs, prostitution, fights and shootings.

“I saw it all,” Staley said. “It’s probably the same thing happening to our youth today. Hopefully, I can lend a ray of hope - you stick with things, surely success will come your way.”

“It has to do with passion, finding your passion. What is it that moves you?”

Olympic flame begins trip through Germany

By Roland Posch
Associated Press writer

MUNICH, Germany - The Olympic flame began its trip through Germany on Tuesday in Munich, the scene of the 1972 games that were overshadowed by a deadly terrorist attack on Israeli athletes.

After a ceremony in the city’s Olympic Stadium, the flame was carried on a 30-mile trip past some of Munich’s landmarks, including the English Garden park and the Nymphenburg Schloss castle.

“We wanted to share the flame with everyone everywhere,” said Spiridos Lambriidis, the ambassador of the Greek organizing committee.

The torch was passed between 124 people, including some of Germany’s best-known athletes like Guenter Zahn, a runner who was the final torch-bearer in the Olympic relay in 1972, middleweight boxing champion Sven Ottke and rower Johann Faerber.

“I can do it even without a boat,” joked Faerber, who was a gold medalist in 1972.

The Palestinian group Black September stormed the Olympic village at the 1972 games in Munich to take Israeli athletes hostage. A bungled rescue attempt left 11 Israelis, five terrorists and a policeman dead.

Arno Hartung, head of the Olympic park complex, said that memories of the incident made them pay special attention to security during Tuesday’s relay.

Vandals deface a portrait of Beckham at FIFA 100 exhibition

The Associated Press

LONDON - Vandals defaced a portrait of England captain David Beckham at the Royal Academy of Arts, scrawling the words “you losers” in indelible red felt pen.

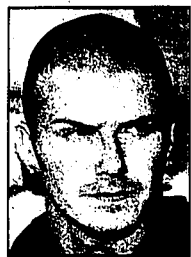

The words on the 5-foot-high picture are thought to have been deliberately misspelled in a reference to Beckham’s alleged affair with his former personal secretary, Rebecca Loos.

Curator David Grob said Tuesday the words “Beckham and Meier; you losers” were also scrawled on a wall at the FIFA 100 exhibition, commissioned by soccer’s world governing body to celebrate its 100th anniversary.

The vandallism also was aimed at Swiss referee Urs Meier, who disallowed a goal in the 90th minute that would

Record ace powers Williams to victory

By Howard Fendrich

WIMBLEDON, England - Pow! A 104 mph ace. Crack! A 113 mph ace. Wham! A 126 mph ace, the fastest serve ever hit by a woman at Wimbledon.

When Serena Williams ends games that way, as she did during a 6-2, 6-1 victory over Tatiana Golovin on Tuesday, it’s easy to understand why she’s closing in on becoming just the third woman in 35 years to win three straight titles at the All England Club.

And it’s easy to dismiss recent chatter about whether Williams can be No. 1 again. Whether she can dominate despite being too rusty or too consumed by cooling and fashion designing or too distracted by the shooting death of her half-sister last year.

Doubts tend to dissipate when watching her drop a total of 15 games through four matches, albeit without facing a seeded player. Her 12 aces Tuesday, including trios in three games, gave her 33 for the tournament, with only two double-faults.

“I’m feeling like Pete Sampras, for sure,” she said, smiling at her words. “It’s important for me to always have that confidence in myself and know that I can win this tournament if I was the European title in 1988. Portugal was buoyed by the news that defender Jorge Andrade and striker Nuno Gomes are recovering well from ankle injuries and should be fit for the match.

Dutch coach Dick Advocaat said Tuesday the Portuguese team will be under pressure and his side will try to take advantage of it.

For them, only victory counts. Any other result will not be good enough," he said. "We have to play our own game and not let it be imposed upon us."

For the Dutch, Wilfried Bouma is expected to replace the injured Frank de Boer as central defender, and Overmars may start at right wing in place of Andy van der Meijde.

Both teams are confident, too. "We are only growing in this tournament, so we don't have to be afraid of anybody," Netherlands' left wing Arjen Robben said.

"We have confidence in our abilities," Portugal's midfielder Deco said. "We believe we can beat the Netherlands."

Francisco Secodof has been a dominant figure for the Dutch at midfield, while Ruud van Nistelrooy has scored four goals at Euro 2004 to share second place in the scoring chart.

Portugal's 4-3-1 against the Netherlands. Their most recent meeting, in Eindhoven on April 2003, ended in a 1-1 draw.

Williams

Continued from D1 "My mind to it." Next comes a big test, though: a quarterfinal Wednesday against Jennifer Capriati, who beat No. 10 Nadia Petrova 6-1, 6-4.

The Williams-Capriati winner will face No. 4 Amelie Mauresmo or No. 9 Paola Suarez in the semifinals.

The other semifinal is set: 1997 champion Lindsay Davenport vs. No. 13 Maria Sharapova, players at opposite ends of their careers.

Davenport, 28, beat Karolina Sprem 6-2, 6-2, then said there's "probably a good chance" this is her last Wimbledon.

The Siberian-born, Florida-raised Sharapova, 17, got past No. 11 Ai Sugiyama 5-7, 7-5, 6-1 to become the tournament's youngest semifinalist since 1937, when Martina Hingis and Anna Kournikova were 16.

"I'm going to give it my all," said Sharapova, who has a deal with a modeling agency but shuns comparisons with zero-title Kournikova. "That's what I'm here for, and I want to win this tournament."

It's become somewhat anogue to question how badly the Williams sisters want to return to the top of tennis. After both missed the second half of last season with injuries, then showed off-and-on form in 2004, Serena is ranked No. 10, and Venus is No. 8. Both lost in the quarterfinals at the French Open; neither has been to a Slam semifinal since a year ago at Wimbledon.

MDI reduces more secured debt

TWIN FALLS—The management team at Twin Falls Discoveries Inc. plans to announce today that, as a result of a negotiated transaction, MDI was able to eliminate about $220,000 of secured debt from its balance sheet.

The transaction in effect converted a secured promissory note in the original principal amount of $195,000, plus accrued interest, to common stock.

"This is the latest in a series of successful efforts to reduce the liabilities on the balance sheet," said President and Chief Executive Officer J. M. Robinson of Twin Falls. "We have now eliminated over $960,000 in debt and liabilities from our balance sheet this year. Each time that we have converted debt to equity, it has been on successively higher conversion rates as our stock price continues to trend upward."

Formed in 1991, MDI is a publicly traded development-stage biopharmaceutical research company engaged in research, development and validation of its patented anti-infective technology.

TWIN FALLS—Linda Castaneda, a labor compliance officer with the Idaho Department of Labor, will be available July 14 to answer questions and concerns regarding labor laws and wage claims.

From 1 to 4 p.m. July 14, Castaneda will be at the Magic Valley Job Service office at 701 N. College Road in Twin Falls. Both employers and employees are invited to stop by for information and answers during those hours.

Realtors Association will hold meeting

TWIN FALLS—The Greater Twin Falls Association of Realtors plans its July general membership meeting at 11:30 a.m. Tuesday at the Turf Club. Dave McClinton, the city's economic development director, will be the speaker at the lunch meeting.

To attend, fax the Realtors association a note at 733-5707 by noon Friday to secure a reservation.

Washington Federal will increase dividends

JEHOIME—Seattle-based Washington Federal Inc.—a part of Washington Federal Savings—increased its quarterly cash dividend by 5 percent, from 20 cents per share to 21 cents.

The dividend will be payable July 23 to common stockholders of record on July 9.

"This is the 39th such increase since Washington Federal began publicly trading in 1982," said spokeswoman management's confidence in the company's future prospects," said Roy M. Whitehead, chief executive.

Wal-Mart reports June sales drop from 2003

BENTONVILLE, Ark.—Wal-Mart Stores Inc. lowered its forecast for June sales growth as stores open at least a year to a rate of 2 percent to 4 percent, citing cool weather and disappointing Father's Day results.

The world's largest retailer said during its weekly sales update that key categories were flat this year as compared with last year, when it had its best week of the summer.

A week ago, Wal-Mart—whose Magic Valley stores are in Burley and Jerome—had indicated that June comparable store sales were tracking the low end of its earlier estimates of 4 percent to 6 percent growth for the month.

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON—Poised to raise interest rates for the first time in four years, the Federal Reserve on Tuesday began debating how fast and how high. But one issue wasn't in doubt—the man controlling the debate was still Alan Greenspan.

Greenspan's command as Fed chairman is showing no signs of waning even though he now is officially a lame duck, having been sworn in this month for a fifth and last term. He was acknowledged during his confirmation hearing that he plans to serve only 19 months of his four-year term as chairman, choosing to step down on Jan. 31, 2006, when his 14-year regular board term comes to an end.

"There is not the slightest interference that Alan Greenspan is going to behave like a lame duck although technically he is one," said economist David Jones, the author of several books on the Greenspan Fed and chairman of Investors Security Trust Co. of Fort Myers, Fla.

Economists are convinced that the Federal Open Market Committee will vote today in favor of a quarter-point increase in the federal funds rate, the interest that banks charge on overnight loans and a strong influence on other rates Americans pay. The federal funds rate is now at a 46-year low of 1 percent.

This week's increase, analysts believe, will be followed by others in the coming months in an effort to keep inflation in check, although there is dispute over just how fast and how high the Fed will want to push rates, especially in an election year.

Greenspan is able to lead, Jones and other economists believe, because of his skill in managing the economy—17 years at the Fed with just two brief recessions—and his ability to build a consensus on the 19-member FOMC, the panel of seven Fed board members and 12 regional bank presidents who meet eight times a year to set interest rates.

"It's not a situation where an imperial chairman dictates and the rest follow," said Sung Won Sohn, chief economist at Wells Fargo in Minneapolis. "His track record plus his painstaking solicitation of views from other

Picking a job in an outsourcing world

The Associated Press

NEW YORK—Mike Zimmerman has left college to start a Web design business with some friends in Philadelphia.

It's concerned, though, that the very technology he intends to make a living from also means someone else, far away, can do the same job.

As far as this stuff is concerned it can be done from anywhere," he said. "You really can't stop it. People are going to go where the cheapest prices are and the best quality of work."

With all the talk of white-collar jobs moving overseas, it's no wonder that Americans, particularly those just entering the work force, are wondering about the safety of their jobs and reassessing career and educational choices.

Career coach Michael T. Robinson of Careerplanner.com believes the best jobs for the future are the ones that require a worker's physical presence and can't easily be done remotely like nursing, real estate and teaching.

Another route is to go for jobs that require a lot of skill, like music, acting, or writing—these aren't likely to move overseas, either.

Others, like John Challenger, CEO of job placement firm Challenger Gray & Christmas in Chicago, dismiss the idea that the offshoring phenomenon is worth the attention of those trying to pick a career.

"There may be some people mistakenly trying to figure out 'where are the jobs that can't be moved overseas,'" Challenger said, "but then they run into the fact that those jobs are also subject to job loss. Our environment today no longer offers lifetime employment."

Government projections do show that some of the fastest-growing areas of the job market for the next eight years are ones that are hard to send overseas: health care, education, bars and restaurants, and government.

However, this continues a long-running trend.

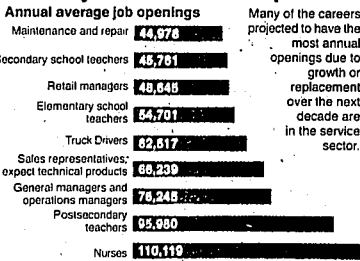

Service jobs have been growing the fastest because

Nation's richest farming counties brace for new air-quality regulations

The Associated Press

SACRAMENTO, Calif.—Along State Route 99 through the San Joaquin Valley heartland of California, farmers and dairy operators are finding themselves in a role once considered unthinkable—enlisted in an increasingly urban region's war on air pollution.

As the nation's richest farm counties have also become its smoggiest, a traditional hands-off policy regarding the ozone-forming emissions and dust generated by large farms and dairy operations ends Thursday. An estimated 1,350 farms and dairies, long ignored while other industries faced crackdowns on emissions that create conditions for smog, now face regulation by the eight-county San Joaquin Valley Air Pollution Control District.

Thousands more valley farms along a 270-mile corridor must also begin controlling dust and other small particles that have made the valley's so-called "particulate" pollution the nation's third worst, behind Los Angeles and Phoenix.

Officials say it's the first time U.S. farmers have been regulated for air pollution.

"We have reached a point in the San Joaquin Valley that every feasible control measure has to be addressed and explored if we can use it to reach attainment," said Anthony Presto, a Modesto-based official with the 12-year-old air district.

"Agriculture and dairies are now catching up with the rest of the world in the landscape of clean air," added Sen. Dean Florez, D-Shafter, author of several laws passed by the Legislature in 2003 to force new air quality standards on farmers. One of the laws set the July 1 deadline.

Farms and dairies that annually produce more than 12.5 tons of the gases that contribute to smog must apply by Thursday for local air quality permits, pay hundreds of dollars in annual fees and begin accounting for the air pollution produced by their farms and dairies.

The biggest culprits, say air pollution officials, are thousands of diesel-powered irrigation pumps. The air district's new program includes financial incentives for farmers to retrofit the engines or replace them with electric-powered units.

Another leading culprit is ammonia produced by hundreds of dairy operations that have moved into the valley in recent years, helping California surpass Wisconsin as the leading dairy state and making Tulare County the nation's leader in dairy products.

Air pollution officials consider farms and dairies responsible for 26 percent of the region's smog-producing emissions and 51 percent of the dust and particulates that have given life San Joaquin Valley the nation's highest asthma rate.

Chamber needs more sponsors for flower baskets

By Megan Hinds
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS—The Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce's hanging-baskets project is in full swing, but the chamber needs more sponsors to keep the bloom on the project next year.

Along Shoshone Street and Washington Street South are 72 spots for hanging flower baskets and signs. Each pole with a basket has room for a centennial-themed sign that displays the name of the basket's sponsor and welcomes visitors to Twin Falls.

"But 28 baskets still need sponsors," chamber executive Kent Just said Tuesday.

Sponsorship requires a five-year commitment, Just said. And the program isn't open to just businesses. Individuals and groups can tack their names on the signs as well.

Each sponsor can opt to cover $1,175 up front to cover flower-growing, watering and maintenance costs for five years. Or the sponsor can opt to pay $350 in the first year and $275 each year after. Either way, the chamber insists on a five-year pledge.

The chamber's hanging basket fund covers the cost of maintaining the unsponsored baskets.

But next year, the chamber will only hang as many baskets as are sponsored. So if only 44 are sponsored next year, only 44 will be hung, Just said.

With that number, the baskets—which start at the intersection of Shoshone and Sixth Avenue East—would stretch about as far as Second Avenue South. The baskets are now hung as far as the intersection of Washington Street and South Park Avenue.

The baskets were designed and constructed by Moss Greenhouses and maintained by Kimberly Nurseries.

For information on the hanging-baskets project or to sponsor a basket, call the chamber at 733-3974.

Tully's Coffee trims 2004 loss, gets debt extensions

Knight Ridder News Service

SEATTLE—Tully's Coffee—which is a Ketchum store—trimmed its annual loss sharply and has landed a 10-month extension to pay off more than $6 million in borrowings.

The 12-year-old company, which has never turned an annual profit, had a loss of $2.7 million in the 12 months ended March 28. A year ago, the company had a loss of $9.9 million.

Yearly sales were flat at $50.8 million. The company made more money from wholesale operations, licensing and franchising and it trimmed corporate expenses by about $2 million.

Still, the 94-store chain closed several unprofitable outlets and ended the year with six fewer stores.

Sales at stores open at least a year—a key retail barometer also known as same-store sales—climbed 3 percent. Meanwhile, Tully's nearly troubled its presence in supermarkets over the past year and now offers coffee at some 2,000 grocery outlets.

The company had been facing an Oct. 1 deadline to repay two credit lines from its landlord totaling more than $3 million, as well as a separate $3 million convertible promissory note. But this week, Tully's said it now has until Aug. 1, 2005, to pay those debts.

Tully's is seeking a new chief executive to replace Tony Gioia, who announced last month that he will resign in July after two years on the job. Gioia said he's leaving because he wants to spend more time with family in Southern California and because the company is on more stable ground than when he took over.

Lucky Friday gets new life from rising market, new vein

MULLAN (AP) — A 20 percent surge in the market has given new life to one of the nation's deepest hard rock mines.

On the verge of closing less than three years ago, the Lucky Friday Mine is being expanded to a new vein silver that would keep it operating until 2011.

With the silver market approaching $6 an ounce from under $5 several years ago and productivity from the reduced labor force, Hecla Mining Co. agreed to invest $8.5 million in expanding the mine last December.

Crevers are now about a third of the way drilling through the gray quartzite rock separating them from the vein containing 28 million ounces of silver above 6,000 feet below sea level.

The mine's silver production will double to about 1 million ounces annually after the new area goes into production late next year, and Lucky Friday should turn a profit if production costs can be kept at $4.50 an ounce, the average wage.

The turnaround offers hope to some of the 100 miners Hecla laid off in 2001 that they will be getting their old jobs back — jobs that on average pay nearly twice the annual average wage of $24,000 in Shoshone County.

"I made sure my name was on the recall list," said Roy Philip, who spent nine months at a mine in Idaho, Nev., after being laid off by Hecla.

Rick Norman, who has been rehired at Lucky Friday after working a year at the Siltwater plant in Nye, Mont., was "excited about the potential for the people who left the area to come back."

"It means everything for the family for this place to continue," he said.

Recent hiring has pushed the mine's payroll to 152 workers. Hecla plans to hire eight more people soon. But Mine Manager Mike Dexter doubted employment would return to the pre-layoff level of 200.

Lucky Friday has produced over 127 million ounces of silver in the past 50 years and could still hold 90 million ounces, Hecla Vice President Vicki Veitkamp said.

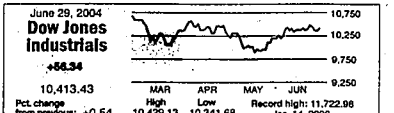

"This is where we have the most silver for the long-term," she said. "When the price of silver goes up, we get the most benefit, and the most leverage."

Consumer confidence report boosts stocks

NEW YORK (AP) — Wall Street posted a healthy advance Tuesday as consumer confidence surged to a 22-month high and quelled investor concerns about the economy, a day before the Federal Reserve's decision on interest rates.

The Conference Board's consumer confidence index rose strongly in June, far outstripping the market's expectations. Strong consumer confidence is seen as a key factor in the economic recovery, as it means people are more likely to spend.

"The nice thing about this number is that you get all the good news, but it doesn't necessarily correlate to inflation," said Michael Paluzzi, managing director of equity trading at SC Cowen Securities. "Yes, inflation will follow and rates will go up."

but we have a strong base for the ongoing, rates will rise, and now we have a lot of confidence."

The Dow Jones industrial average gained 56.34, or 0.5 percent, to 10,413.43.

The Dow Jones industrial average gained 56.34, or 0.5 percent, to 10,413.43. The Standard & Poor's 500 index rose 2.85, or 0.2 percent, to 1,136.20, and the Nasdaq composite index was up 15.11, or 0.8 percent, to 2,034.53.

sumer confidence index was posted at 101.9 for June, up from 99.1 in May and far surpassing the 95 reading Wall Street expected. That eased some of the nervousness investors were feeling as they awaited the Fed's interest rate decision on interest rates. The Fed is expected to announce Wednesday at least a 0.25 percentage point increase in the benchmark lending rate, which currently stands at a 45-year low of 1 percent.

"I would like a dog. I would like a brother and a sister. I like to give hugs. I am happy for a new mom and dad."
High energy family wanted. Dominique (pronounced Dominic) is an active child who loves to run and play outside. He enjoys helping his foster dad with gardening chores. Affectionate and trusting, this little boy has formed bonds with his foster family and loves his birth parents.

While Dominique is not currently legally free, his birth mother wants to voluntarily release him for adoption by a loving family. Despite his exposure to frequent domestic violence, Dominique has learned excellent talking, listening and negotiating skills within a stable foster family.

Dominique is available for adoption through the State of Oregon. For contact information, please contact Idaho CareLine at 1-800-926-2588.

parents, as well as his foster parents, are Hispanic, he is comfortable with this culture. He speaks both English and Spanish.

Dominique does best when he has good structure and daily routine along with attentive parents. This is so important because Dominique's impulsive behaviors sometimes put him in danger, such as running into traffic without looking. He needs parents who understand how to help him think things through.

Governor pays staff more money

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Even as he calls for shared sacrifice to solve the state's financial crisis, Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger is spending more than his predecessor on salaries for his official staff, an Associated Press investigation found.

Schwarzenegger has slightly fewer employees than Gov. Gray Davis did toward the end of his term, but is spending over 8 percent more on salaries. He also is paying a higher average salary for each employee. And he is paying more six-figure incomes within his inner circle than Davis did.

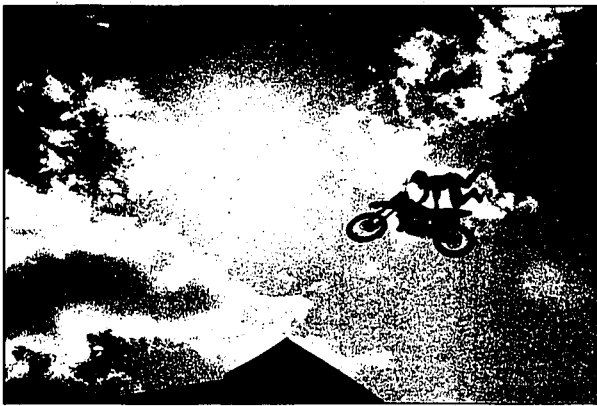

"For a governor who came to office saying he would cut the government, he seems to have really pumped it up, at least salaries for his inner circle," said Jamie Court, a consumer activist with the Santa Monica-based Foundation for Taxpayer and Consumer Rights. "It doesn't show much respect for taxpayers."

The AP obtained the governor's office payroll records through a California Public Records Act request to the state Controller's Office.

Schwarzenegger's office points out that his staff is smaller than Davis' and that the Hollywood multimillionaire has refused to accept the governor's $175,000 salary for himself, instead returning it to the budget.

"The governor is proud of his staff and thinks they are part of what has turned the state around," spokeswoman Margi Thompson said.

County denies tax exempt status

MERIDIAN (AP) — The city will have to pay tens of thousands of dollars in property taxes on its new police station, even though some officials say the building is already public property.

The Ada County Commission on Monday denied the city's request to make the station tax exempt.

The city opened the $3.5 million police station in 2002. It will not have to pay taxes on the land, which the city owns. But county commissioners said the city must pay taxes on the building because it was financed through a lease-purchase agreement with a bank.

Government-owned real estate is almost always exempt from taxation. But in 2002, a ruling by 4th District Judge Cheryl Cosphey opened the question of whether lease-purchase financing could be taxed.

The county maintains that the bank, Wells Fargo, and its investors actually own the building, which makes it taxable, said county spokesman John Baird.

He said the city must ask permission from the bank to make any changes to the building or use it for any other purpose.

Woman retrieves family relic from state

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Pete Nordstrom's unopened pocketknife convicted his killer 71 years ago. Then it was placed in an evidence folder, unopened for decades, and forgotten by nearly everyone.

That is, until Althea Torgerson took a family history class.

Torgerson discovered the family heirloom's whereabouts recently while researching Nordstrom, her husband's relative.

Nordstrom, a farmer in Terreton, had the knife in his pocket when Charles Barnette shot him through the lung with a .35-caliber Winchester rifle, according to court records and the Aug. 4, 1932, edition of the Rigby Star.

The two men had been drinking beer or liquor at a sheep camp one evening when they got into a fight, according to the reports. The fight ended with Nordstrom threatening to cut Barnette.

Barnette left and told a farmer he planned to kill Nordstrom and wanted a witness, the newspaper reported. Fink refused, but later went to the sheep camp, where he saw Barnette shoot Nordstrom and then laugh hysterically, the report says.

Deputies found Nordstrom lying on the ground in front of the sheep camp, his left hand in his pocket and the unopened Remington UMC blade on the ground.

Barnette then made a sheriff's deputy dinner before turning himself in, according to Torgerson, who has researched the case.

The closed pocketknife helped prove Barnette was not acting in self-defense, Torgerson said. Barnette was convicted of murder and spent less than five years in jail.

After Torgerson discovered the knife was still at the Idaho State Archives, she called Idaho Falls attorney Allen Browning for help.

After a trial, unclaimed evidence is given to the court and, if unclaimed, eventually goes to the state archives, he said. People who want to reclaim their property need a court order.

Browning, who took the case for free because it sounded so interesting, got the order from Jefferson County. On Monday, Torgerson presented the blade to her mother-in-law as a birthday present.

Linda Torgerson smiled broadly as she held her great-uncle's knife.

"I can't believe it," she said. "This is incredible. She plans to put it on a case and display it. We're not losing it this time," she said.
