Clinton adviser faces investigation

Department says he removed highly classified documents

Classified documents
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton's national security adviser. Sandy Berger, is the focus of a Justice Department investigation after removing ments and handwritten notes from secure reading room during preparations for the Sept.
It commission hearings. The Associated Press has learned.
Berger's home and office were searched earlier this year by FBI agents armed with warrants after he voluntarily returned documents to the National Archives. However, still missing are some drafts of a sensitive after-action report on the Clinton administration's handling of al-Qaida terror threats during the December 1999 millennium celebration.

celebration.

Berger and his lawyer said Monday night he knowingly removed handwritten notes
he had made while reading classified anti-terror documents at the archives by sticking them in his jacket and pants. He also inadvertently took copies of actual classified documents in a leather portfolio, they said.

"I deeply regret the sloppiness involved, but I had no intention of withholding documents from the commission, and to the contrary, to my knowledge, every document requested by the commission from the Clinton administration was produced." Berger said an a statement to the AP.

Lanny Breuer, one of Berger's attorneys, said his client has offered to cooperate fully with the investigation but had not yet been intendewed by the FBI or prosecutors. Berger has been told he is the subject of the criminal investigation. Breuer said.

id. Berger served as Clinton's national security adviser for all of the president's second term and most recently has been inand most recently has been in-formally advising Democratic presidential candidate John Kerry. Clinton asked Berger last year to review and select the administration documents that would be turned over to the commission. The FBI searches of Berger's home and office occurred after National Archives employees told agents they believed they saw Berger place documents in his clothing while reading sensi-tive Clinton administration pa-pers and that some documents pers and that some documents were then noticed missing, offi-cials said.

Miller said he was headed to Bolse today to meet with the district's legal counsel and consider what to do.
"We just want to be very careful in our response," Miller said.

The recommendation

Brown's decision stated that changing the boundary will allow parents in both districts to choose where to send their children and it will eliminate the need for yearly agreements allowing buses to cross bound-aries. Filer has been sending buses into the disputed area to pick up students for years and Brown wrote that Filer has better addressed parental concerns about students walking long distances along the road to catch buses.

"As Miller testified, if the boundary change is granted, Twin Falls buses will not seek permission to go into the Filer School District to pick children up. Such positions call into question the Twin Falls district's commitment to choice." Brown wrote.

Brown also addressed financial concerns, stating that he change could cause the district to lose more than $100,000 in attendance-based funding, but Brown wrote that losing $120,000 would be about one-third of 1 percent of the district's $34 million budg-

During the hearing, both districts touted their virtues. Twin Falls officials cited the districts variety of classes and advanced offerings, while Filer officials praised the schools' abilities to offer, personal attention and top-notch agriculture programs, Brown word.

Oregon professors wield influence with Bush

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — Over the years, the University of Ore gon — has developed a reputation as a hippic havon home to Hacky-Sackers. Frisbee-throwers — activists. But tacked own activists. But tacked own activists. But tacked own in a Bucolle corner of the campus is a group of education professors whose work has been widely influential and found favor with the Bush administration. Along with their counterparts at schools like the University of Texas. Oregon professors have been the driving forces behind the push for letting "scientifically based research" inform classroom practices.

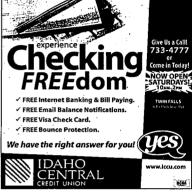

The professors are promoting teaching techniques that they say have been tested extensively in classrooms and have produced good results on standardized exams.

Some of their concepts have been scooped up by the Education Department for use In the No Child Left Behind act, the Bush administration's centerplece education bill. That law says that all children, regardises of their background, must be at grade level in reading and math by 2014, or else their schools could face sanctions.

Critics say the Oregon professors have helped usher in an age of rigidity in education, with classrooms fall of teachers who "least to the test," and students whose creativity is stifled because so much time is devoted to preparing for testing.

The emphasis on research-based instruction is a bit of a problem," said Barbara Bowman, a professor at Chicagos Erikson Institute, a graduate school in child development.

cardiologist at Yale University and an author of the paper published Tuesday in the Annals of Internal Medicine.
Commercial aircraft are not pressurized to a ground equivalent and the oxygen levels lower at high altitudes. Those factors have long prompted fears that flying could interfere with circulution and endanger passenger with heart or blood vessel problems. The researchers reviewed dozens of recent studies of people with different kinds of cardiovascular disease, natients with pacemakers and those who had recently undergone heart procedures such as stent implants and angioplasty.

For those whose heart disease was under control and who had no post-surgery troubles or major bouts with chest pain or other troubling symptoms, the risk is low that air travel will craet problems. Possick said.

The researches concluded they have had a heart attack, an angioplasty or a heart stent than an angioplasty or a heart stent had coronany artery bypass within the previous three weeks.

Blast near Iraqi police station kills nine | Arafat backtracks

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — A fuel tanker rigged as a massive bomb hurded toward a Baghdad police station and exploded Monday, killing nine people, wounding 60. and leveling a huge section of an industrial neighborhood.

The sulcide bombing was the tatest in a string of deadly attacks on police, but civilians working nearby appeared to bear the brunt of the explosion. The blast collapsed the roofs of auto repair shops, destroyed electrical workshops and crushed cars under concert and bricks. It fore open a 32-fpot-wide crater and damaged buildings hundreds of yards away.

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Less than a month after regaining sovereignty from the U.S. occupation authority. Iraq on Monday announced the appointment of 43 new ambassadors in its first move to re-engage with the world. The diplomats are to be sent to a wide range of countries across Europe, Africa and Asia, including most Arab nations, Foreign Minister Hosbyar Zebari said. Japan lost a key vote in its bid to have an 18-year ban on confinercial whaling overturned when its motion to hold secret balloting at this weeks international. Whaling Commission meeting was rejected Monday. Environmentalists accused Japan of using development aid to swell the number of nations in the pro-whaling bloc, a charge the Japanese delegation denied. Japan, the world's prime consumer of whale meat, and other pro-whaling countries such as Norway and tecland, say whales are overequing the world's fish and must be killed to prevent the continued decline of global fish stocks.

An anti-whaling group, in a report presented Monday, debunked that argument, saying most food consumed by marine mammals isn't what fisheries target.

"The study shows that there is nothing to the argument that we could remove marine mammals, especially baleen whales, and feed the world with their food," Daniel Pauly, a professor at the University of British Columbia in Vancouver and an author of the report, told The Associated Press.

"This food that marine mammals consume is essentially taken in areas where we don't fish and consists of animals that we do not exploit."

The report was funded in part by the international arm of the Humane Society of the United States, a member of an anti-whaling coalition of over 140 non-governmental organiza-tions called Whalewatch. It mapped the fisheries of the world and compared them with fish consumption of marine mammals, finding few zones of overlan.

Today's young people are far more tribal than the rest of us, according to social researchers like Hugh Mackay. They can't get enough of each other.

Feeding this herd mentality is text messaging (on cell phones), instant messaging and away messaging, and away messaging, and layour messaging and away messaging service. Called AIM, it allowed users, including non-AOL subscribers, to post short notes, known as IMs, to individual friends, who would receive them immediately. Other companies began offering the same thing, and today some 3 billion to 5 billion IMs are sent every day, a large proportion of them from teen-agers, according to Francis deSouza, CEO of IMlogic, a software company. One major attraction: Unlike blogs or Web sites, they're usually free.

From the beginning, the IM package included away messages. Young people, saydesouza, were the first to catch on to the general concept.

It's also becoming an art form, away of crafting an image of how you would like the world—or at least the 150 people on your buddy list—to think of you. If your away message says you're culting people you have a social life. If you say you're making dinner, as 'Ianguay did recently, you're saying that, at the moment, you don't. "People know I'm here and not really doing anything." he says.

Maybe you've broken up with your boyfriend or girlfirend and want to signal that life goes on just fine, thank you very much. So you post something like 'Irish girls are lantastic' or 'Eimotional detachment is the key to the game."

LETTER

Here are two reasons why I believe I never once had a problem:

1. Most students in athletics are good kids! They don't have time to get involved in troble because they re too busy with practices, games, homework and chores at home. Those who do use drugs and alcohol are usually going to show signs of it or get caught. If the condand school do their job, that means dismissal from the activity and legal action if required.

2.1 did not expect anything from my team that 1 did not expect from myself.

This is where my complaint with Coach Krumm surfaces. You took a job to coach young dulis who are affected by what you do on and off the field. Object with a winning football record. If you are convicted and given the opportunity to coach again, teach you ream that best lesson yet and decline the

An October surprise, pernaps? Rumsfeld didn't say. He did reiterate the administrations position that most of Congress and the world saw the same intelligence the administration saw and reached the same conclusion: that Saddain Hussein, who had violated 17 U.N. resolutions, had to go-and only the United States had the power and resolve to topple him.

Rumsfeld surprised me with his answer to a question about whether the flawed intelligence in the run-up to the Iraq war will make the neoconservative doctrine of preemption more difficult to empiloy when the United States faces new threats. "It makes it more difficult," he said. "And the balance is going to be a difficult one for the world because we have, in the 21st century, more readily available weapons of mass destruction, chemical and bloogical weapons, as well as nuclear and radiation weapons. and we have extremined to the contract of the World Series-starved baseball fan could reject this point of view Sure, Sandel writes, steroids give some athletes an unfair advantage, but so does God-given cyesight for seeing a rising fastball as a fat melon. I would put it like this: If life isn't fair, why should we care if steroids make elite sports a little bit more unfair?

To appreciate the deeper danger. Sandel says, start with what people want to believe. "We want to believe that success, in sports and in life, is something we latherit."

Tagree with Sandel on this point. As a society we know, deep down inside, that individ-tual success is not always the result of hard work. It's also about natural talent, privilege and other inherited advan-tages. That's why we've invented social safety nets, pro-gressive income taxes and other ways to even the playing field.

field. Imagine, then, a future in which we practice enhancement every day. In that world, Sandel says, the programmed successes of binnic athleres, memory-enhanced adults, de-signer children and other perfect ones become more ac-ceptable—a byproduct of, human ingenuity. In this world, who needs to correct social and economic inceptality? Let them eat steroids! at steroids! Far-fetched? In my lifetime, yes. But remember this: No-body broke Roger Maris' single-season record for hom runs for four decades. Then two guys did it the same sea-son. One of them admitted later to using a performance-enhancing drug. The other's under suspicion.

School district goes sour on sweets

HEBER CITY, Unit (AP) —
The Wasatch School District has become the first district in the state to limit sales of sweets and junk food to pupils.
The policy as originally proposed would have completely banned pop and candy in vending machines and the use of food as a classroom reward.

As adopted, it requires 70 percent of student vending machine offerings to be water, milk, 100 percent full juices and edibles meeting the district's minimum nutritional standards.
It also bans vending ma.

standards.
It also bans vending machines in elementary and middle schools and it directs district officials to draft a plan to lower processed foods and increase fruits, vegetables and low-fat and low-sugar items.
The policy allows but discourages teachers from using food as rewards.

District vending machine contracts will have to be changed because of the new policy.

Vicci Gappmayer, principal of Wasatch High School, said of Wasach High School, said vending contracts have brought in $12,000 to $14,000 for extracurricular activities. She doesn't believe the district will lose money because of the new policy, and is ready for the challenge of finding the right healthful food that kids will be interested in. "The verdict is still out, but I am going to look at it in a postive vein because it gives kids healthy choices," Gappmayer said.

District prepares for growth | Sewer grant goes

TWIN FALLS - The Twin Falls School Board is preparing for the district's future growth which could mean new school on the south end of town.

At its Monday meeting the board approved a $470,000 ap-praisal for 57.39 acres the district owns on Hankins Road

The district might sell or trade that property for land on the south side of town where a new school could be built.

Operations director John Miller said the Hankins Road property is being farmed and is not quite large enough for a high school, but it could accommodate a junior high or elementary school. Miller said the booming growth on the south end of town makes that area a better location for a future junior high or middle school. He said he knows of plans for at least 500 more houses to be built in that area. The district has already re-ceived an offer from Doug Vollmer of American Real Estate Vollmer of American Real Estate to made the property for 46.67 acres bordering Pheasant Road, Harrison Sweet and 3600 North. This property is appraised at $410,000, so the deal would include $60,000 in cash to make up the value difference. KIMBERLY - The school district is still looking for a principal for Kimberly Elementary School. Wes Remaley, the principal for many years, resigned at the end of this past school year to accept a position at another idaho school. The search committee for his replacement had chosen an applicant, but the candidate chose to remain at his current post.

unfortunate woman. Readers, there are laws against stalking in all 50 states and Washington, D.C. There are also laws against stalking at the federal level. Stalking is abusive, anti-social, sick behavior. It is not a compliment to the vietin, and it is not benign. Stalkers are addlets, and the substance to which they are addicted is their prey. That is why stalkers should be considered dangerous and the police should be notified when stalking occurs.

Kerry, Edwards use porches to get campaign message out

But the neighbors and friends were hand picked. A large camrate situation of the street of the street. Street of the street. Electrical cables snaked everywhere. Dozens of reporters and photographers were present. A man pushing a lawmmower was stopped by police from getting any closer.

The format plays to Edwards strengthis, Democratic strategists suggested. From his years of addressing juries directly and without notes as a trial lawyer. Edwards prefers not to speak at podiums or use prepared remarks.

It also allows him to empha-arks. It also allows him to empha-ze his humble Carolina size his humble caronia mill-town roots. On Monday, Edwards re-moved his suit coat, rolled up his shirt steeves and held forth for about half an hour.

"You go to where voters live and listen to them about what going on in people's lives," said campaign spokesman Mark Kornblau, who said the technique works well for both Kerry and Edwards. He said Kerry used if irst, and that it will be a regular feature of the general election campaign.

feature of the general election campaign.
"Generally, it's an outgrowth of their desire to continue their conversation with the Ameri-can people." he said.
Reed Dickens, a Bush cam-paign spokesman, dismissed Edwards event as the fourth most liberal member of the Senate trying to soften the image of the first most liberal senator."

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

With spots quadrangular of dia mond form,

Ensanguined hearts, clubs typical of strife,
And spades, the emblems of untimely graves."

— William Cowper

Consider the play in four spades here, after an uninformative auction.
West starts by leading the heart jack to East's ace, and a heart comes back. You win the trick in hand and presumably planto draw as many rounds of trumps as is appropriate, ending in hand. With three minor-suit losers looming if the cards are unfavorably located, can you see how to turn a good contract into an excellent one?

trump with the king. Now lead a club to dummy's eight rather than the jack.

Why? Well the answer is that when East takes the trick, he is absolutely guaranteed to be endplayed. He can only give you a ruff-sluff (in which case you ruff in hand and pitch a diamond from dummy) or lead back a club or a diamond into dummy's tenaces. Whichever minor he plays, you have the communications to be able to ensure that you lose only one more diamond trick and thus make your contract.

By contrast, if you had led a club to the jack as your first play in the suit, East would have won his queen and returned the suit. When clubs failed to break, you would have had to fall back on the diamond ace being onside. When that chance also failed to come through for you, you would have been sunk.

ANSWER: Cue-bid two clubs en route to four spades. You could simply jump to four spades here, but you actually have some mild slam interest, and nothing partner can do will cross you up since you have the boss suit. So you might as well show your high cards first and then bid your suit, just in case partner has his eyes on higher things.

TEAM EFFORT

U.S. Postal Service team leader Lance Armstrong looks at a map of France as he sits by a fountain near his hotel in Saint-Paul-Trois-Chateaux, south of Montelimer, southern France, during the second rest day of the Tour de France on Monday, Armstrong is in second piece in the race's overall standings, 22 seconds behind Thomas Vecekler of France.

Armstrong catches the Blue Train to Tour glory

By John Leicester

NIMES, France — Nickname: "The Blue Train." Mission: Laying the tracks that are transporting Lance Armstrong toward a record sixth Tour de toward a record skill lour de France crown.

Although a great champion in his own right, the Texan wouldn't be closing in on sport-ing history were it not for his loyal and tireless squad of sup-port riders who have steamrolled rivals from the get-go.

Armstrong gets the laurels, the sponsorships, the worldwide fame. George Hincaple, Viatcheslav Ekimov and the six other unsung heroes in Armstrong's blue-jerseyed U.S.
Postal Service team get satisfaction in knowing that the 32-year-old Toxan wouldn't be where he is without them.

"The Blue Train is the muscle-behind it, is the brawn." Arm-strong acknowledged last week.

This is the best team ever.

Like Rome, victories in the three-week cycling maration aren't built in a day.

Stage by grueling stage, first on the flats of Belgium and northern France and then in the peaks of the Pyrenees, Armstrongs Postads have hewn a path to the podium in Paris next Sunday.

If he keeps his form this week through the Alps and two time trails. Armstrong will overtake - the four other five-time champions.

Nothing has been left to chance. No detail overlooked. No ounce of energy left unexpended in an almost military pended in an almost military campaign.

Day 1, July 3, the opening time trial. Led by Armstrong, edged into accord by Swiss rider Fabian Cancellara, the Postals place seven of their nine riders in the top 50, showing from the outset that they mean business.

The effort vaults them to the top of the learn standings.

ISU shrugs off a poor ranking

By Jared Eborn Times-News correspondent

PARK CITY, Utah — Considering the fact idaho State has spent much of the past two seasons in the NCAA i-AA football top 25 polls and challenging for 18g Sky Conference crowns, a sixth-place prediction from the coaches in the league may seem to be a slap in the face for the Bengals.

seem to be a slap in the face for the Bengals.
Instead, ISU offensive lineman Steve Burch shrugged off the Idea his team will be returning to its previous haunt as a Big Sky bottom feeder.
"The polls really don't mean anything to us," Burch, a 6-foot-5, 310-pound senior from Oakley, said. "I think the fans and media might pay attention to the polls, but we really don't care."

and media might pay attention to the polls, but we really don't care."
The sixth-place prediction by the coaches at the Big Sky Conference meetings Monday in Park City, Utah was only slightly less optimistic than the media's estimation. Of the 30, media members voting, only one — ISU radio play-by-play volice Dave Reichelt — felt the Bengals were the odds-on favorite to win the conference championship. ISU placed fifth in that poli.

Not surprisingly, Montana is the favorite to repeat as Big Sky champion. Five of the conference coaches tabbed the Charles so the start we will be a start of the conference coaches tabbed the Charles of the conference and the two the conference are times, he was hampered by a nagging shoulder injury much of the year. "It's always tough when you can't offer what you should be offering to the team." Burch said. "I know when I wasn't on Please see ISU, Page D2

Decision looms for Devers as Edwards faces ban due to doping

SACRAMENTO, Callf. — Her curly, 3-inch flagemalls painted gold and her patter as breathless as her pace on the track, Gail Devers is headed for her fifth Olympics.

Once, in her early 20s, she was days away from having her feet amputated because of a rare disease affecting her immune system. Now Devers is 37, taking her last shot at the one gold that has eluded her in an event that has defined her career and, metaphorically, her life— the hurdles.

Mayba this time she will clear those hurdles cleanly, run the perfect race she has pursued so long and missed heartbreakingly on the biggest occasions. Three world championships in the 100-meter hurdles tell her she can do it, no matter the date on her birth certificate.

"If you had asked me in 1988 how long I would be here. I would have told you I thought I was done in '88," she said. 'The key to it for me, for all these years, is still having fun. The challenge for me has been coaching myself. You have to look for challenges to keep yourself motivated."

From Seoul to Barcelona to Atlanta, Sydney and now Atlanta sydney and sport too often consumed by the darkness of a Baptist preacher has been a burst of sunshine a sport too often consumed by the darkness of dopling.

She embraces the roles of atlates and of the sador of the tool of the sador of t U.S. team.

By chance, a doping case might give Devers the opportunity to race again in the 100 sprint, which she won in 1992 and '98.

She finished fourth in the trials behind Tort Edwards, who faces a two-year ban if found guilty of using a banned stimulant.

Edwards takes her case to an arbitration panel Monday but the odds of her winning are poor. She rimy very well have taken the stimulant inadvertently, as she says, as an additive in a glucose mixture her doctor gave her in Martinque in Apit.

But the bottom line, as the World Anti-Doping Agency keeps telling athletes, is they are responsible for anything found in their body.

If Devers is the beneficiary of Edwards' blunder and chooses to run in the 100, she would have to compete five days in a row. That could compromise her chances to win, finally, in the 100 hurdles. "Two never made a hasty decision," Devers said. "I'm not going to sture."

She said she will do what she said ways does when she has to make a big decision; pray.

If Devers passes on the 100, it would open up a apot in the race for Maxion fones, the derending Olympic champion who finished fifth in the trials.

Young Americans bring fresh faces to troubled sport

Several of the youngsters have shots at medals, including 22-year-old Justin Gatlin, the former NCAA champion at Tennessee who made the team in both the 100 and 200 meters.

"I think it's just untapped potential with all these young athletes out there." Gatlin said. "They're out here running on heart and dreams. Ever since we were little kids we just wanted to be out there running, out there on the Olympie team."

Gas prices rise for second week

WASHINGTON - The retail price of gasoline rose for the second week in a row, climbing to nearly $1.39 per gallon, after declining during the five previous weeks, the Energy Department reported Monday. The government survey sald the average price nationwide of regular-grade gasoline rose 1.1 cent to $1.928 per gallon last week.

1.1 cent to $1.928 per gallon last week. Prices are 40.4 cents higher than a year agon wide prices peaked at $2.06 a gallon during the week ending May 22. Pump prices are highest on the West Coast, averaging $2.113 per gallon, and cheapest on the Gulf Coast, averaging $1.818 per gallon. In the Midwest, gas averages $1.892 per gallon.

and the space of the key factors behind the soaring gasoline rices is the high cost of oil.

The price of light crude for August delivery rose 39 cents Monday settling at $41.64 per parrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

After failling from recent highs, oil prices have been surging again lately as traders react to concerns about terror; at attacks, strong demand and ist attacks, strong demand and relatively tight supplies of relatively tight supplies of gasoline.

The United States' inventory of gasoline is 0.6 percent above last year's leves, but at the lower end of the five-year average range for this time of year, according to Energy Department statistics.

Gasoline demand is about 2 percent higher than last year, averaging 9.3 million barrels per day for the past month.

Take best advantage of tax-deferred retirement options

Question: One year out of college, I own a home and contribute 10 percent of my salary to my 401(k) plan. My husband and I fully fund our Roth IRAs seach year, and we still have some money left over for our selves and for savings.

But the amount we have saided for home. Improvements is still fairly small. We are considering reducing our Roth IRA contributions from $3,000 to $2,000 a year to free up some extra money for replacing our roof and aging appliances. Do you have an opinion on this?

Answer: First of all; Fravo to you and your husband. Your plant in the first plant is a series out on the right finatell foot.

But it's easy to make a missep when you're trying to juggle financial priorities. You're smart to want to pay cash for home improvements whenever possible. But you shouldn't let that desire keep you from taking the best advantage of your tax-deferred retirement options.

MONEY TALK Liz Pulliam Weston

Roth IRAs are a particularly prowerful way to save, because your withdrawals will be tax-free in retirement. Your 401(k) can be a great deal, as well, particularly if your company offers a decent match. (Not contributing at least as much as the company will match essentially means giving up "free money" – and thats rarely a good idea.)

Rather than reducing your 401(k) or Roth contributions, look for other areas in your budget that you could trim to boost your savings. If your roof or appliances give up the ghost before you've saved enough to replace them, you can borrow against a home equity line of credit, lust try to pay the line off as quickly as you can.

Q: A grandparent recently wrote to you asking for an example of the power of compound returns so that she could use it to encourage her grandchildren to invest. Ism' your example—that $100 could grow to $5,000 – disingentous at best and based on a wholly unrealistic rate of return?

A if you think an average annual return of 8 percent is unrealistic perhaps. But a diversified portfolio of stocks should be able to produce that return easily, particularly over the long term.

And we are talking the long term here. The grandchild in the example was 15, which means she would have $25 years to invest before reaching full returnment age (for Social Security purposes, anyway).

Obviously, children aren't the only people who have trouble graphing the concept of compounded returns.

If you need another example, consider the lowly penny. If you're given a single cent on the first day of the month, and the amount is doubled every day thereafter, you'd have more than $10.7 million at the end of the month. (Or half of that amount if the month had only 30 days rather than $1.). That rate of return is, or course, unrealistic, but the example vividly illustrates how returns build on returns over time.

If the majority of self-made millionaires made it in Real Estate

why don't you have your IRA invested in it?

Chances are you didn't know you could.

IRA owns the Real Estate
