Ketchum architect James Ruscitto, chairman of the newly reconstituted Historic Preservation Commission, stands in front of the Ski View Lodge cabins at the entrance to Ketchum and Sun Valley along Highway 75. The cabins are some of the most recognizable sights in the Wood River Valley, and they were recently sold to developers who want to use the property to build townhouses. Ruscitto and the commission hope the developers will not destroy the early 1950s cabins.

"If a company experiences an increase in demand that cannot be met with the current work force, it may find alternatives to hiring full-time employees, such as outsourcing overseas or contracting with a temporary help agency," said John Challenger, chief executive of Challenger, Gray and Christmas, a job placement and research firm.

That is a concern for President Bush's re-election campaign, which had tried to make the case that the economy was 'turning a corner.'
Analysts say that despite a summer slowdown, the economy is gaining steam by most measures, Also, the employment outlook is much improved from the past two years.

"We have an employment sector that still has a considerable amount of slack, an employment sector that is definitely improving, but one that hasn't improved enough to yet recapture all of the losses of the recession in the post-recession-period, said Martin Regalia, vice president and chief economist at the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

Hiring is surging in health care. Demand is up, for social service workers, Architecture, accounting, engineering and other service businesses are adding jobs. So are restaurants, stores and hotels. Workers with construction skills are sought.

a real era."

But the lodge was sold off and moved to a ranch 100 miles south and the cabins were being removed to make room for an 80-room hotel when the projects financing fell through. Now the lot is back on the market for a reported 56 million.

"An interesting historic building is gone." Ruscitto said, and now we have a half-vacant lot."

Local history enthusiasts, led by Conger and real estate agent Anne Zauner, are trying to come up with a plan to at least save the cabins that are left, possibly converting them to office space.

"We're starting to realize that we do have a history here, a rich history, and if we don't save it, we're going to lose our character," Zauner said.

While there may be the odd wealthy patron who steps in to save a building because he has no need for more cash, real estate agent, Dick. Fenton says: those cases are few.

His office sits next to a 5,000-square-foot lot worth about 5500,000. On it is a 750-square-foot log cabin built in 1938 and -low-a-restaurant-paying-relazively limited rent.

"The 54 A percent return, so now a restaurant paying relatively limited rent.

"It's a 4 percent return, so you're not going to hold it,"

Fenton said. "If you're looking at it from an investment point, you'd build an office building with condos on top."

"The difficulty is you're a landowner sitting on land that's worth so much," he said, "You need incentives, It has to be in the interest of the landowner, He says, 'All my money's tied up in this funky little house that you call historic and I call barely habitable."

totic and I call barry manufable."

There are limited incentives — a federal tax credit and some grants. But Ruscitto and others agree there isn't enough money, to offset the cash that development typically generates.
Preservation has to be someching done for its own value, they said, and fostered by community support for history.

Alternatives to demolition to demonition

Some communities have used zoning ordinances to proton believes that in the Gardinance to high the control buildings that the Gardinan old buildings that the Gardinan old buildings that and of restriction on private property rights would not hold up in court. One viable option, he says is letting landowners sell—their development rights to others, who could then increase the density of their developments beyond what would otherwise be allowed. But that market has yet to take hold, he said.

Ruscitto befieves there are other ways to accommodate development plans for the sites of old buildings without completely destroying the buildings. They could be converted to contemporary uses like stores or offices, or zoning laws could be used to require at least some investigation into an old structures history before demolition is considered. Owners could be advised on any incentives to help offset gains from demolition.

His firm's office incorporates much of a home built in 1946 with boards taken from timber logged in nearby Thail Creek for a prominent business family. The preservation commission is also putting up plaques on preserved buildings, identifying the original use and the construction date.

"Just having people see these buildings, sturned into shops and restaurants is important."

Huscatro said. "Out can't. slop progress, but there are many ways to pay respect to these buildings."

Plan proposed for resort location

resort location

KETCHUM — The U.S. Forest Service is in the process of developing a management plan for a portion of the Sawtooth National Recreation Area near Grandjean — a rustic resort location near Lowman.

"We are asking people, who have an interest in the management of these public lands, as well, as cooperating agencies, for their suggestions on what issues should be addressed as we begin the analysis process," said Dave Fluetsch, resort administrator for the SNIA. A number of authorized activities are concentrated in this narrow valley on the South Fork of the Payette River, about 45 miles west of Stanley. The planning effort intends to address existing and potential concerns by developing a management prescription that will maintain quality resource and social values. Recreational activities within the Sawtooth Wilderness Area will not be included in this proposal.

Area will not be included in this proposal.

The Forest Service requests that written comments and suggestions be submitted by Sept. 30.

Please send them to the attention of Fluetsch' at the Sawtooth National Recreation Area, HC 64. Box 6291, Ketchum, ID 83340. Comments can also be faxed to 727-5029, hand delivered to the SNRA office north of Ketchum or sent by e-mail to comments-internitiuce north of Ketchum or sent by e-mail to comments intermin-sawtooth-nra@fs.fed.us.

T.F. council looks at soccer-field progress

By Michelie Dunlop Times-News writer

TWIN FAILS — The Twin Falls Soccer Complex has floated in and out of the public's eye since work on the project began in the project began in the public's eye since work on the project began in the public's eye since work on the project began in the public's eye that the public's eye on the complex remains contentious. At Tuesday's City Council meeting, members will hear a presentation on the soccer complex by Twin Falls County Commissioner Tom Mikesell.

Council member Glenda Thompson looks forward to learning more about not only the current status of the complex but also its completion schedule.

—Part-of-our-dilemma-is-understanding where they recurrently at and what their needs are. Thompson said.

In 2002, the Twin Falls Soccer Association assumed responsibility for converting 40 acres of farmiand north of 2700 East and 4000 North into the 12 full-sized soccer fields.

Mark Goodman of the soccer association provided an update on the complex west of the city have been planted and are sprouting grass. Goodman said.

Additionally, the sprinkler system for the entire complex west of the city have been planted and are sprouting grass. Goodman said.

Although the soccer association has und growing in seven fields, those areas arent quie ready to be used for matches.

TWIN FALLS — Children at a mumber of elementary schools in the Magic Valley will be able to participate in a weekly fluoride mouth rinse program this year.

Schools taking part in the program include "Mountain View in Burley: Acequia, Big Valley Memorial and St. Nicholas in the Rupert area: schools in Carey, Dietrich, Richfield, Heyburn, Paul, Wendell and Shoshone: and the Idaho School for the Deaf and the Blind in Gooding.

The fluoride mouth rinse program is sponsored by the Idaho School for the Deaf and the Blind in Gooding.

The fluoride mouth rinse program is sponsored by the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare. South Central District Health and participating school districts.

Drinking water that contains fluoride is the best and easiest way to protect the teeth from decay, according to a news release from South Central District Health. In areas where water fluoride levels are low, the school mouth rinse program gives children the protection of fluoride, the news release said.

—The—mouth—rinse—program takes about five minutes per week Children who take fluoride ablets or receive topical fluoride can also rinse at school. For more Information—eall—stale Beem—South Central District Health's dental health coordinator at 734-5900, Ext. 246.

Program helps women deal with domestic violence

COEUR d'ALENE (AP)
Some women, tired of being abused, lash out themselves. And though legal workers may sympathize with the woman who finally hits back, she still must learn that violence is not the answer, said Greg Orlando, who leads Kootenai County's adult misdemeanor probation program. "We still have to hold them accountable, even though we understand the dynamics involved," he said, "We can't reinforce violence to get a solution."

1977 and 2000, as their children showed and sold animals. With 34 years of hivolvement in the 4-11 sale, Shirley knows Masters never misses a bid.

"He's full of life," she said. The knows every-holy and he has to have a memory like an elephant, because he remembers every-one's name. He puts life into the sale. And Calvin, as a tractor puller, really enjoys lyle." Masters is the official announcer for the annual antique-tractor pull at the fair, too.

"He is a tremendous fair and youth supporter and very community minded." fair manager John Pitz said. "He just jumps in and volunteers to help." And he jumped in as the auctioner for the Magic Valley Daily Helfer. Program auction, also held annually during the fair. "Even before they initiated this program, we would have one or two 4-11 youngsters who wanted to sell their helfers and fd do that," he said.

In addition to operating a 200-acre, self-contained, cattle operation, he raises registered quarter horses. Missters Auction Service conducts an average of 125 sales each year and he auctioneers at about 100 Producers Livestock Commission Company sales annually. In addition, he does another 25 or 30 benefit auctions each year. These include the Twin Falls, Jerome and Gooding 4-H sales as well as fund-raisers for civic clubs and organizations, hospital guilds, church schools or just someone who has hit abump in the road and needs help. The said. As a Shriner, he has sponsored numerous youngsters for free medical treatment and helped organize the first Magic. and FFA teaders.

"They are the ones who baby slt and teach these youngsters, he said." They do it for no other reason that to help a youngster learn something that will benefit them down the road.

"There are other 4-H activities that don't include the sale of the project, so this is sort of a gift. There are some disappointments when an animal doesn't sell really high, but I can remember a former 4-H-leader telling his members that if they got orde dollar over market price, they'd been given a gift. Masters applauds the businesses that support the sale year after year, but would like to see more of the big chain stores support the county fair and market sales.

"When we used to have East. Eind Day and West End Day a lot of mom and, pop businesses would close for their day at the fair," he said. "But when the big chain stores moved into town, mom and pop couldn't afford to close anymore."

"But as an auctioneer I like to see businesses there, supporting the sale," he said. "It shows they care about the kids. There are some that come each and every year. They may not buy the top animals, but they'll try to hold the market steady. Jeanie Brown, who has served as secretary-treasurer of the sale committee since 1980, has vorked with Masters for 24 years. "Lyle is just a super person." Type is just a super person. Brown said: "I les always willing to help. He knows the kids I lte knows the buyers. He works at it 365 days out of the years, supporting the sale and encouraging people to come and buy. "And. in America Awards for work they did cleaning up illegal dump sites.
During one of the last volunteer cleanup efforts, two semi-loads of garbage were removed.
"We've hauled hundreds of ions of garbage," Payne said.
The variety of garbage includes appliances, wood waste, ehicle parts, tires, landscaping debris, household garbage, pesticide cans, batteries and more. Shawn Stapleton, a BLM park ranger, said rangers spend about one-third of their time pleking up garbage.
The budget impact is about 5100,000 per year, he said.
Some of the cleanup projects take a cuple hours and others take a day of two.
"People go to quite a bit of effort to take it in the middle of nowhere when they could be goling to the dump." Stapleton said.
People think they will save a couple bucks by not taking their garbage to the landfill, but in reality they are paying a huge-price; he said.
"We are reaching into the tax-payers wallous to clean up after people," Fuller said.

I dare you to read this-column

CHAIS-COLUMN

When you've been writing a column for as long as I have – 6 billion years this Tuesday – you get used to receiving a certain type of letter. It's known, in journalism, as the "I Dare You To Print This!" (IDDTPT for short) letter, because the letter-writer challenges you, the columnist, to print the letter, implying you lack the courage.

Generally you don't print it. To two reasons. One is, you get a lot of these letters (at least 1 do) and if you printed them all, your column would consist, entirely of letters that people dared you to print. Eventually the newspaper, realizing that you were no longer necessary, would fire you, and yout have to get a real job, which is a problem because most-columnists-don't-know-how to actually do anything except have opinions.

The other reason why columnists don't print IDYTPT letters is misinformed, by which I mean insane. Your typical IDYTPT letter-writer sounds like this:

Rotary cutters aren't just for pizza | Red, white and real:

Rocently, I wrote about specialty scissors for home-sewers, and this week I'll address the subject of rotary wheel cutters, a popular alternative to scissors. They're a particular favorite of quilters and crafters, offering quick, accurate cutting for straight deges and multiple layers, as well as curves.

Rotary cutters, which resemble pizza cutters, should always be used with a special self-healing mat. This has a composition that makes cutting lines less visible, and it protects both the cutting surface and the tool's sharp blade.

The mat helps align edges and has markings, usually in both inches and metric measurements. Mat sizes vary, as small as 6 by 36 inches, with prices from $5 to $45.7 They are rigid enough for stability, yet flexible enough to foll up for carrying or storing.

How to kill cancer so it doesn't grow back

In Greek mythology, a terrify-ing monster known as Hydra would regrow two heads for every one lost when one of the serpents many necks was sev-ered, making the beast nearly every one lost when one of the expent's many necks was severed, making the beast nearly impossible to slay. Modern scientists think they may have discovered why cancer often behaves like lydra, refusing to die despite every seemingly, moral blow that medicine inflicts upon it.

Current cancer therapies may attack only the equivalent of lydra's head-the malority of cancer cells removed by surgery or destroyed by radiation and chemotherapy. Spared is a crucial, pool of mutant cells that acts as the source of the malignancy, leaving the cancer able to rise again and again.

According to this theory, which has steadily been gaining credence, the only effective which has steadily been gaining credence, the only effective strategy for defeating cancer will be found in treatments that stanch cancer's ability to regrow, such as what Hercules did when he finally slew the beast of ancient Greece by cauterizing each of the monster's necks.

In the case of cancer, the solution would lie in stamping out the highly specialized cells are largely impervious to current treatments, enabling them to lurk silently until they repeatedly spawn new tumors, either in the same part or in other parts of the body.

the source of the head behind. So it just regrows," said Michael Clarke, a professor of medicine at the University of Michigan, who has found evidence for the existence of breast cancer stem cells.

In addition to breast cancer, scientists have produced evi-dence for the existence of cancer stem cells in two leukemias and a variety of brain cancer stem tens in the cancers.

In the most recent evidence, published in the Aug 12 Issue of the New England Journal of Medicine, researchers at Sandrad among the millions of cancerous cells found in patients suffering from chronic myel ogenous leukemia, only a small, discrete population had the ability to replenish the cancer. "We showed that only the suffering from chronic myel of the control of the con potential for treating a host of ailments.

It remains unclear how cancer-retor cells originate. But they probably arise as a result of genetic defects or exposure to toxins, researchers said.

"Normal stem cells are regulated by the body to make just the amount you need." Weissman said. "But a cancer stem cell has broken out of that control. It self-renews in an unregulated fashion. Its self-renewal gets way too big."

Regardless of the cause, scientists are urgently trying to identify cancer stem cells for every type of malignancy.

"We're going to keep going through each and every human cancer to isolate each of the can-cer stem cells and show what their properties are so one can look for new kinds of therapies."

look for new kinds of therapies," Weissman said. Identifying the properties of the cancer stem cells could provide crucial information, according to Peter Dirks, a nourousurgeon at the University of Toronto who has found evidence for cancer stem cells in every form of brain cancer he has examined.

Brain cancer tumors that tend to be more aggressive appear to have higher concentrations of cancer stem cells, he said. "We're trying to apply this to padent prognosis. Dirks said. "Dirks said. "Brain way identify which tumors are most likely to respanse." Selentists trying to understand cancer better at a fundamental level should focus their efforts on cancer stemcells, he said. "A lot of research on gancer involves the whole tumor mass." Dirks said. "If you study the expression of genes in all those cells you may not be studying the genes that are the most important." But perhaps the most important." Brain cancer tumors that tend the genes that are the most important.

But perhaps the most important implication is: that identifying and understanding-cancer stem cells could lead to more potent treatments.

"If you think about the basis for leukemia treatment, generally it is predicated on the idea that leukemia cells grow faster than the normal cells. So that's what it goes after, said John E. Dick, a professor of molecular genetics at the University of Toronto, who discovered cancer stem cells for acute myleoge-nous leukemia.

"But these cells arent. These leukemia stem cells are resting. They behave just like a normal stem cell. They sit there and eventually will regrow, the leukemia," Dick said. "Its criti-cally important to understand these Teukemia stem cells so we can target them."

"These felickemia stem cells so we can target them."

That is exactly what Craig lord an aprofessor of medicine the University of Rochester, has identified a molecular switch involved in cell survival that appears to be unique to leukemia stem cells and absent from normal blood stem cells. "We don't think normal treatments would thit this target, which is why patients relapse," he said.

he said. Jordan has begun testing drugs that, at least in the labora-tory, appear highly effective at killing leukemia stem cells while sparing healthy stem cells, he said.

said.
"It looks fantastic in the lab. In the laboratory we can very effec-tively kill the turnor without killing the normal stem cells," he said.

Ulder Law Report Straight Talk on Elder Law and Estata Planning

A MIND OF ONE'S OWN

QUESTION: I recently learned that my elderly ount has given some gifts of significant value to a gentlemen friend she met several yeers ago. Are those gifts legal if they were the result of under influence?

No. By definition, gifts made as a result of the undue influence by the recipient are not valid transfers and can be legally set aside. However, the initial question must always be whether in fact undue influence was present and the actual cause of the gifts.

The law defines undue influence as domination of one by ariother to the extent that free agency is destroyed. The rule is easier to state than to apply. Clearly, the presence of force, fear, or artifice will suffice to show undue influence.

More often than not the circumstances are ambiguous. Chan one's mind, later in life, regarding who should be the object of bounty may disappoint would be helrs, but does necessarily dence undue influence.

The law's alm is to support and uphold the dignity of the indi-vidual and to foster independence and autonomy in personal deci-sion-making.

in the season opener for both teams.

San Diego State dominated their Division, 1-AA opponents from the outset, scoring on its first three possessions en route to a 24-0 lead in the first quarto a 24-0 lead in the first quarter.

Robert Ortiz caught two touchdown passes for the Aztecs, who are attempting to finish with a winning record for the first time since 1998.

San Diego State got the opening kickoff and Fanklin wasted little time putting the Aztecs-ahead-for-good-as-lie ran untouched off right guard. Franklin finished with 101 yards rushing on 12 carries, his hird straight 100-yard gume.

De La Salle's win streak comes to an end streak comes to an end SEATTLE - It took 13 years, but De La Salle High School finally lost a football game.

A 39-20 defeat at the hands of Bellevue (Washi) on SaurJirst since 1991 and halted the nation's longest high school winning streak at 151 games.
A string of 12 consecutive undefeated seasons that became known simply as 'The Streak' began in 1992 and brought national acclaim to the private school in Concord.
A 55-0 win over College Park in-1997 gave - the Spartans 73 straight wins, breaking the national record of 72 set by Hudson (Mich.) from 1968-75.
No college or professional football team has come close to approaching that number.

off to perfect start
NEW YORK - A perfect day for ranked teams produced littie change in the Top 25, on Sunday.
Ranked teams went 17-0 Saturday, the opening day of the college football season around most of the country. It was the first time ranked teams had a perfect record on a day in which 10 or more played since Jug. 31, 1996.
That day, ranked teams went 11-0.

That day, fantee a con-ll-0, Add No. 1 Southern Califor-nia's victory on Aug. 28 and Utah's win Thursday night, and teams in The Associated Press media poil started the season 19-0. USC. off a lackluster 24-13 victory over virginia Tech.

USC, off a lackfuster 24-13 vectory over Virginia Techrigained three first-place votes (51) and six points (1,609) in the latest rankings, but the Trojans' lead over No. 2 Oklahoma shrunk from 74 points

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Ships that pass in the night, and speak each other in passing;
Only a signal shown and a distant voice in the darkness."
— Henry Wadsworth Longfellow

This week we shall be looking at deals from the qualifying event of the world championships that were held in Tunisia in the fall of 1997.

When Denmark met Poland.

When Denmark met Poland, both teams were struggling to qualify for the quarterifinals. This board will give you a feel for how the match went.

In one room the Polish North bid two diamonds in response to one spade; then jumped to four spades, giving West no chance on opening lead. That player led a club, and declarer actually emerged with an overtrick after some inaccurate defense.

However, in the room we are focusing on, the normal auction saw North reach four spades after a simple raise to game. When West led from his diamond sequence, declarer knew the diamond ace had to be offside.

He ducked in dummy, but Eastovertook with the diamond queen and cashed the diamond queen and cashed the diamond ace. — making it clear to his partner that he had started life overtook with the diamond queen and cashed the diamond ace at once — making it clear to his partner that he had started life with a doubleton. That allowed West to follow with the diamond 10 at trick two, a suit-preference signal. By playing the higher of his two remaining diamonds, he was signaling that he had a heart entry as opposed to a club entry, so that he could regain the lead to give his partner a ruff before declarer could draw trump. That was how the Poles defended, and they duly collected their ruff to beat the game on their way to a heavy victory in the match.

ANSWER: My preference would be to lead the heart five, though the diamond six might work out too. Your chance of getting a diamond ruff here, or of promoting the club nine into a trump winner, is pretty small. So it is better to try to set up tricks for your side with a heart lead. With the club 10 or iack instead of the nine. a diamond. or jack instead of the nine, a dia-mond lead has much more to of-fer.
