Thomas appears in court

Jimmie Vurel Thomas sits in a Jerome County courtroom during a post-conviction relief hearing Wednesday. Thomas was sentenced to death for the 1997 shooting death of Steven Louder but is fighting his conviction.

Idaho will oversee wolves

The Associated Press

BOISE — Most of the management of Idaho's thriving wolf population will be transferred from the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to the state within months, and even before the animal is pulled from the Endangered Species List, a federal wolf expert said Wednesday.

The state will do everything we do now. Essentially, Fish and Wildlife disappears," said Ed Bangs, wolf recovery team leader. "It's good news for wolves and for wolf recovery."

Oversight could be shifted by next spring.

The state of Montana will take the same approach, Idaho and Montana have approved plans to manage the packs. Wyoming's plan was rejected by federal officials and it is mired in lawsuits. Until that is resolved, the wolf remains on the federal list in the Northern Rockies.

Fifteen wolves were released in Idaho in 1995. That has grown to more than 400 animals in more than 40 packs, said Steve Nadeau, Idaho Fish and Game large carnivore coordinator. By last winter, there were 761 across the three states and that has likely grown to about 850, Bangs said.

"Idaho is the only place where they're still growing because of that huge core of wilderness in the center of the state," Bangs said. "There are about as many wolves as we'll ever have. We did our job under the Endangered Species Act."

"Delisting is still our goal. This is the second best thing," he said.

The new rule would let ranchers shoot wolves they see chasing livestock on private land. People with grazing permits on federal land would also get more leeway.

The state Department of Fish and Game gains more flexibility to step in if it is shown wolves are preventing a population of elk or deer from meeting objectives, Nadeau said.

Currently, under federal standards, "the burden of proof is very high," he said.

The Nez Percé Tribe will continue the role it has had since 1995 in monitoring the wolf numbers.

Recreational hunting and trapping of wolves would not be allowed until they are delisted.

Nadeau said one high point about the state-gaining oversight is that it is just Nadeau and two wolf biologists to run the program in the West, there are about 300 or so Idaho Fish and Game officers available.

Once the wolves are delisted, the state is required to maintain a minimum of 15 packs in perpetuity. They may ultimately be managed through controlled hunts or open hunts like bears and cougars.

Attorneys challenge death row inmate's conviction

JEROME — The man convicted in the 1997 shooting death of Steven Louder is in court for the first step of what is likely to be a lengthy appeals process of his conviction.

Jimmie Vurel Thomas, 61, was convicted of first-degree murder for the shooting of Louder, 38, at the home Louder and Thomas' ex-wife shared near Eden.

The post-conviction relief hearing began Monday and is scheduled to run through Friday at the Jerome County Courthouse.

"These claims are not unusual," said LaMont Anderson, deputy attorney general for the state of Idaho. "I have never seen a capital case where ineffective assistance of counsel has not been raised."

The seventh claim addresses alleged ineffective assistance of counsel relating to the fact that trial attorneys gave two options to the jury: either conviction of a first-degree murder holding an evidentiary hearing on those claims.

Six of the claims involve what appellate public defenders describe as ineffective assistance of attorneys representing

Brotherhood runs deep for guardsmen

By Roger Phillips
The Idaho Statesman

FORT BLISS, Texas — The brotherhood of soldiers runs deep, but in the Idaho National Guard it can run all the way back to elementary school.

While regular army soldiers rotate every couple years, Guard members sometimes spend decades training together and often have known each other even before their military careers.

Consider Capt. Mitch Smith of Burley and Sgt. 1st Class Roy Barrera of Boise. Both tell slightly different stories about the first time they met in Paul, but both agree on one thing: One of Smith's toy race cars came up missing.

"He stole it, I know he did," Smith said.

"He still thinks I stole it," Barrera said. He denies it.

The incident occurred nearly 30 years ago in elementary school.

"It was like the bully in school," Smith said.

This Barrera doesn't deny. "You've got to be careful who you beat up on because he might be your boss some day," Barrera said with a laugh.

The two men now serve together in Bravo Company of the 2-116th Armor Cavalry Division, training in Texas for a mission later this year to Iraq. Smith is the company commander, and Barrera a platoon sergeant working under his command.

Their long history with each other is not unusual for the Guard.

Party in the park for Twin Falls

Open-air festivities launch second century

By Virginia S. Hutchins
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Exercise those milking muscles. Scout out your perfect racing partner. Scout out an aerodynamic cow chip.

Those skills can make you a winner in the city's second century.

The Twin Falls Centennial Commission is putting on an open-air party in City Park on Saturday, with food, music and games that evoke an old-fashioned community get-together.

The Second Century Kickoff — the commission's last hurrah — runs from 2 to 6 p.m. Saturday in City Park. Admission is free, and it costs nothing to enjoy musical entertainment, eat an old-time tent town or compete in cheese carving, sack racing, hot dog eating and a lineup of other contests.

But highly competitive folks be warned: Spontaneity is the name of the game on Saturday. In the old-fashioned races and contests, organizers might make up rules and competition classes as they go. Prizes for winners will be certificates and centennial merchandise — and recognition in The Times-News.

With the exception of the children's fishing pond, the games are open to all ages.

At the Second Century Kickoff, the only thing you'll pay for is lunch.

For the food, organizers suggest a donation of $2 for adults and $1 for children 12 and under. They're prepared to feed 3,000 people, Centennial Commission Chairman Ken Edmonds said. But the meal is first come, first served, and some dishes will run out well before the 3,000-diners mark. Serving starts at 2 p.m.

With Latham Motors as the event's headline sponsor, the Centennial Commission has lined up donors for food and supplies and has organized a host of volunteers to run the games and serve the grub. Latham plans to display new cars during the festivities, and the Centennial Commission will staff a tent booth selling Twin Falls centennial merchandise such as historical books and commemorative bricks.

The size selection for centennial clothing is dwindling.

MAGIC VALLEY NATION

Second Century Kickoff Saturday in City Park

The food line

• 2 p.m. and on — Food is served, with a suggested donation of $2 for adults, and $1 for children 12 and under. The menu is hamburgers, fries, roast pork sandwiches, baked potatoes, green salad, flavored milk and Coke products.

Games and races

• 2:45 p.m. — Kids' fishing pond. Bagg and ice will be provided so that successful anglers can take their catches home without smelting up the family car.

• 2:30-5 p.m. — Cow chip throwing. Disposable plastic gloves will be provided for cow chip contestants. But if you like, you can opt to bring your own chip. (Scouting out a prime, round specimen in advance might give you an edge here.)

• 2:30-5 p.m. — Three contests of a somewhat messy nature will be open to individuals and to teams of any size: pumpkin carving, potato decorating and cheese carving. Bring your own carving tools.

• Cheese carving: Data regarding the carving tools. Spud decorating: Bring your own decorations. The raw potatoes will be provided.

• 3:4 p.m. — Milking contest. A couple of patient cows are lined up to test a time-honored skill. The more milk you get into the bucket in a set number of minutes the higher you score.

• 3:4 p.m. — Hot dog eating contest.

Contestants have three minutes to load the dogs. Yep, you've got to eat the buns, too. Drinking water is provided.

There are five classes in this contest: open class for the real pros; mother-son teams; father-daughter teams; children ages 12 and under; and teens. (It's not in the teenagers for the most spectacular consumption.) In the spirit of spontaneity, competition classes are subject to change at the last minute.

• 3:5 p.m. — Five contests will test speed, dexterity and cooperation: three-legged race, human wheelbarrow, egg toss, sack race and egg balancing race. Competition in the first three requires partners, but don't be afraid to show up alone. You're not likely to be the only one who did.

• Three-legged race: This is the old, familiar to your right leg to your partner's left. (The female teams are certain to trounce the male teams. Everybody knows that. But mixed teams are anyone's guess.)

• Human wheelbarrow: One partner holds the feet of the other, who walks on his or her hands, highly ungraceful.

• Egg toss: You climb inside a gunny-sack and toss.

• Egg balancing: You race while carrying an egg in a spoon. But organizers have had it settled on whether you'll have to hold the spoon handle in your hand or in your teeth.

Music and program at the band shell

• 2:30 p.m. — CSI Jazz Combo plays.

• 3:30 p.m. — Give & Take, on a capella quartet, performs.

• 3:30-5:30 p.m. — Twin Falls Centennial Dance Orchestra plays, under the direction of Brian Fernon.

• 5:30 p.m. — Wispapp program. Mayor Glenn Thompson welcomes.

Twin Falls to its second century, announce the Twin Falls Municipal Band's 2005 centennial year and speak on the planned renovation of City Park's band shell. A group of past Twin Falls mayors, led by Howard Allen, will symbolically place the city's future into the hands of its youth, represented by the chamber of commerce's student ambassadors. And Donna Scott, who penned "Just Add Water" as Twin Falls' centennial song, will lead the crowd in singing her song.

Link to Oktoberfest

• 2:45 p.m. — Free horse-drawn wagon rides will be available to shuttle partners back and forth between the centennial party in City Park and downtown's annual Oktoberfest festivities on Main Avenue.

Organizer of the two events are cross-promoting for each other. The two pick-up and drop-off points for the wagon shuttle are at the site of City Park nearest the public library, and at the Main Avenue fountain downtown. At least two wagons will be in service.

Centennial trail dedication Saturday above Shoshone Falls Park

The Twin Falls Centennial Commission's big legacy project was construction of a walking trail rising from Shoshone Falls Park to the Snake River Canyon rim above, and running along the canyon rim to the west. That newest addition to Twin Falls' trail system is already paved, and two of its three overlooks have been built. The commission will dedicate the new segment with a ribbon cutting and speeches at 11 a.m. Saturday.

To attend, park at the bottom of Shoshone Falls Park. The park's toll booth is closed, so you can drive in for free. Walk up the park's steep grass incline and follow signs marking the trailhead at the park's upper end. Follow the newly paved trail up to the first overlook, where the 11 a.m. ceremony will be held.

Show up early if you want to stand nearby during the ceremony. "We want people to come, but it isn't something where we can handle a top of people," the Centennial Commission's Bonnie Lezamis said.

The restored Perline stagecoach, now owned by a group of local investors, will be drawn by horses up the new trail to the first overlook in time for the 11 a.m. ceremony, then back down afterward. The coach will be hauled on a trailer to the top of the Shoshone Falls vehicle grade, then hitched to the team for a drive into town. Starting at noon or later, you can watch the horses and stagecoach drive from the top of the grade to Falls Avenue, then to Blue Lakes Boulevard North then to Shoshone Street, then around the downtown area. The coach driver offers to pull up at downtown's central intersection in time for Oktoberfest's 1:30 p.m. serving of a Twin Falls "brandy cake."

Then the stagecoach will park at City Park and remain on display during Saturday's Second Century Kickoff, which runs from 2 to 6 p.m.

Commission seeks $21,000 more in donations

By Virginia S. Hutchins
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The gap is narrowing.

By Wednesday, the Twin Falls Centennial Commission lacked just the final $21,000 it needs to cover its million-dollar budget for the past year's trail building, special events, historical projects and other centennial activities.

The commission hopes for more individual, family and business donors to step up. To donate, call the commission office at 736-0800.

But Chairman Ken Edmunds doesn't want the fund-raising to end $21,000 from now. He and other commission leaders will also attempt to raise the $20,000 that they figure it would cost to extend the newest stretch of Snake River Canyon trail across one private landowner's canyon-rim property.

The landowner hasn't agreed to the trail extension, Edmunds said, but trail promoters want to approach the landowner with construction money already in hand.

The most recently completed section of trail — rising from Shoshone Falls Park to the rim above, and running along the rim to the west — as well as that contemplated portion of trail across private property, are both part of the city's grand plan for continuous walking-trail systems in and around the canyon and throughout the city.

But a lot of trail building would still be necessary to connect the dots between existing trail segments.

So members of the Twin Falls

Centennial Commission, a nonprofit entity organized to lead celebrations of the city's 100th birthday, voted Wednesday to recommend that the City Council keep the commission alive after this year. If the council likes the idea, the nonprofit commission could become a fund-raising vehicle for future trail expansion, with a revised name and a new roster of board members.

Martha will do time in West Virginia prison

NEW YORK (AP) — Martha Stewart will do her time farther from home than she had hoped, at a remote West Virginia prison where inmates sleep in bunk beds and rise at 6 a.m. to do menial labor for pennies an hour.

The millionaire celebrity homemaker said Wednesday that she has been assigned to the minimum-security women's prison at Alderson.

Stewart, convicted in March of lying about a stock sale, had asked to serve her five-month prison term in Danbury, Conn., close to her 90-year-old mother and her own home in nearby Westport.

But a source familiar with the government's decision, speaking on condition of anonymity, told The Associated Press that Alderson was selected because it was more remote and less accessible to the media than Danbury or Stewart's second choice of Coleman, Fla.

warned Executive Director Bonnie Lezamis, but the commission will accept special orders for some of the items. Only 61 of the centennial medallions remain for sale, and the commission will not order more of those.

From 3 to 4 p.m. at the merchandise tent, co-editors Donna Scott and ZoeAnn Shaub will sell and sign copies of "Gifts of Heritage," the newest addition to the centennial year's Twin-Falls history titles.

From 4 to 6 p.m. Saturday — the last two hours of the Second Century Kickoff — representatives from Burley, Rupert, Buhl, Jerome, Kimberly, Hansen, Marnough and Filer have been invited to staff tables with information about their own upcoming centennials. But by Wednesday morning, only Buhl had committed to setting up a display at Saturday's event, Lezamis said.

Speakers at the band shell will call attention to neighboring cities' centennial plans, too.

"We wanted to promote that," Lezamis said. "This isn't the end of it. We have many other centennials coming up."

Overseas U.S. voters know their absentee ballots are crucial to presidential election

NEW DELHI (AP) — On election night in November 2000, dozens gathered at the American Center in New Delhi to watch the returns. When Democrats and Republicans alike saw the close results coming in, some were compelled to sheepishly admit that they hadn't bothered to vote.

They had thought their absentee ballots wouldn't really count, or were too difficult to prepare, or would be lost by the Indian post or U.S. diplomatic pouch.

Candidates gear up for presidential debates.

See page A1

Voices from abroad

The world has changed dramatically since the 2000 election and Americans living abroad are no longer complacent. They are registering for their absentee ballots.

are entitled to have their absentee votes counted in the state where they last lived — no matter how long ago that was.

Getting ballots into the hands of Americans overseas can be a problem: federal officials say they should be mailed out 45 days ahead of the Nov. 2 election. But the key battleground states of Washington and Oregon are already late or running into problems. Washington's ballots aren't expected to go to overseas voters until the week of Oct. 10. And Oregon, which mailed 10,000 overseas ballots by Sept. 18, must send out new ones because the Supreme Court ruled Ralph Nader's name could not be included.

Americans living in India, and dozens of countries worldwide, are determined that won't happen this time around.

"People know the absentee vote potentially turned the election the last time," said Carolyn Sauvage-Mar, an American living in the Indian capital who is pushing compatriots to vote.

"This race is close enough that it hinges upon who's going to get out there and vote — and so much is at stake in this election."

In 2000, George W. Bush's election victory was certified only after the overseas ballots were counted. Though Al Gore won popular vote nationally, Bush won the electoral vote after being certified the winner by 537 votes in Florida.

They're reminding Americans that while they may have missed the Sept. 15 deadline to request an absentee ballot by mail, they can still get it over the Internet and fax it to a Federal Assisted Voting Program center by early October.

Judge rules key element of Patriot Act is unconstitutional

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — A federal judge in New York ruled Wednesday that a key component of the USA Patriot Act is unconstitutional because it allows the FBI to demand information from Internet service providers without judicial oversight or public review.

The ruling is one of several judicial blows to the Bush administration's anti-terrorism policies in recent months.

In a sharply worded, 120-page ruling, U.S. District Judge Victor Marrero found in favor of the American Civil Liberties Union, which filed a lawsuit on behalf of an unidentified Internet provider challenging the FBI's use of a type of administrative subpoena known as a national security letter. Such letters do not require court approval and prohibit targeted companies from revealing that the demands were ever made.

He ordered the Justice Department to halt the use of such letters but delayed the injunction by 90 days to allow time for an appeal. The government is reviewing its options, according to Justice Department spokesman John Novack.

Marrero's ruling is the latest setback in the courts for the Bush administration's terrorism policies, which civil libertarians and some lawmakers consider overbroad. The Supreme Court ruled in June that detainees held as "enemy combatants" can challenge their confinement through the U.S. courts.

Rome waves off reports of ransom for hostages

The Washington Post

ROME — Italy's government dismissed reports Wednesday that it paid $1 million to free two Italian aid workers who were kidnapped in Iraq and held for three weeks before being released Tuesday.

Foreign Minister Franco Frattini attributed the release of Simona Pari and Simona Torretta to "all the good things Italy has done" in Iraq. But hours earlier, the head of parliament's foreign affairs committee and a member of Prime Minister Silvio Berlusconi's Forza Italia party said Italy had paid the ransom.

"It was right because the life of the two girls was more important than the money," lawmaker Gustavo Seba told reporters. "In principle, we shouldn't give into blackmail, but this time we had to, although it's a dangerous precedent. I think it was paid by the intelligence services."

On a day when the two Italians were as national heroes here and said they would like to return to Iraq, a British man still held captive in Iraq pleaded with Prime Minister Tony Blair to save his life.

A video posted on the Internet showed a chained and caged Kenneth Blegley, 62, saying "Tony Blair, I am begging you for my life. Have some compassion. Only you can help me now."

Karzai inaugurates rebuilt Afghan museum

KABUL, Afghanistan — President Hamid Karzai inaugurated Afghanistan's rebuilt national museum Wednesday, the latest effort to shed a bloody past and reconstruct a nation before landmark elections.

Karzai cut a pink ribbon to mark the completion of the refit of the two-story museum, whose building was destroyed in civil war and whose collection was further decimated by the Taliban.

The U.S.-backed interim leader is the favorite among 18 candidates contesting the Oct. 9 ballot to become the country's first directly elected president.

Hungary's parliament elects prime minister

BUDAPEST, Hungary — Parliament on Wednesday elected one of Hungary's wealthiest businessmen as prime minister, ending two months of political uncertainty.

Prime Minister Ariel Sharon phoned Sderot Mayor Eli Moyal and told him that "Israel will respond" to the attack, a government official said.

The rocket attack came in defiance of a major Israeli raid into the nearby Gaza Strip aimed at rooting out militants behind an unending wave of rocket attacks in recent weeks. The raid, which began late Tuesday, killed four Palestinians and wounded 46 others, Palestinian hospital officials said.

Just leaves big shoes to fill for T.F. Chamber

In retrospect, it isn't surprising that retiring Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce executive vice president Kent Just huddled both CEOs and critics of growth so adroitly.

After all, he learned the craft of aerial diplomacy hosting a call-in radio talk show in Blackfoot for three years.

Now, the longtime executive vice president for the chamber is movin' on. Just, 63, will step down from his post sometime in the coming weeks, and he'll be closer to family.

Just, who is Idahoan to the core, has a knack for putting people at ease with his "we-just-folks" humor.

During his 16-year tenure, the Chamber has been the catalyst for economic development that is the envy of many small Western cities.

Solo Cup, Seastrom Manufacturing and Dell all have come to town on his watch, and the Southern Idaho Economic Development Organization and Business Plus III, a regional team of economic development groups and local businesses that recruits new employers to the air, were also established.

That amounts to thousands of new jobs in the Magic Valley since Just arrived in 1988.

He doesn't get all the credit for that, of course, but it's certainly true that his interpersonal skills and hard work made cooperation and recruitment easier.

And the fact that he's held the job for so long says something about the man. Chamber executives serve at the pleasure of an ever-changing, sometimes contentious board of directors made up of business people who want different things — and have a variety of views about the future of Twin Falls.

Our view: Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce official Kent Just was the right man for the job for 16 years. What do you think?

We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

Just didn't agree with them all, but he listened to them all.

And he quickly established a reputation as an honest broker who would do his best to represent — but never misrepresent — the views of both of his chamber bosses and the broader community.

He'd done that before he came to the Magic Valley, during a seven-year tenure running the day-to-day operations of the Idaho Falls Chamber of Commerce and in 10 years in radio and television broadcasting in eastern Idaho.

Perhaps that's one reason he succeeded so well in Twin Falls: Just understands what it means to be an Idahoan.

We're all here to make a living, but we're also Idahoans — most of us — because we cherish the lifestyle and the freedom of an uncrowded, self-reliant, less regulated state.

The Chamber should seek a new executive with the same perspective, experience and work ethic. Kent Just set the tone for what could be accomplished with economic development in Twin Falls.

He'll be missed, and we wish him well.

Debates need wider spectrum

Almost unbeknownst to the citizens of this great republic, our election process is being bent in opposite directions by legal and institutional forces oblivious to each other — and to the damage they are doing to the workings of our democracy. One set of players — Congress, the courts and regulatory agencies — has opened the presidential campaign to in-house and highly expensive intervention by groups outside the two-party system.

DAVID BRODER

The airwaves are filled with ads and the battleground states are swarmed with workers financed by independent groups at least nominally uncontrolled by the Republican or Democratic parties, or the George Bush or John Kerry campaigns. At the same time, the presidential debates that are likely the single most important part of the contest have been negotiated privately by the two major candidates' personal representatives and are being presented by an organization representing the two major parties — and only those parties.

It is not difficult to make a case for either of these arrangements. But the juxtaposition of the two major parties — and only those parties.

Much has been said — here and in other commentary — about the enlarged role in this election being played by non-party groups, the so-called 527 and 501(c) organizations that were created as vehicles for unlimited large donations of "soft money" which the McCain-Feingold bill said the two major parties can no longer accept. Millions of dollars have flowed into these new chambers of mass, and the impact of their ads and voter mobilization efforts is significant.

Some regard this as a dangerous loophole in the law and argue for restricting these outside players.

But in a free society, there is a principled argument for protecting individuals' right to express their views on the candidates and issues at the time the nation is choosing its leaders — rather than requiring that all spending be controlled by the office seekers or parties themselves.

When it comes to the debates, recent practice (since 1988) has given the sponsorship to the private, nonprofit Commission on Presidential Debates, formed by the two major parties and headed by former chairman of the Republican and Democratic National Committees.

The commission has been successful in institutionalizing the debates, which were only intermittently scheduled and too often allowed to lapse when they were in the hands of the television networks or the League of Women Voters.

For that, the country can be grateful. But controversy has grown over the commission ground rules, which tend to restrict participation to the Republican and Democratic nominees. The exclusion of Ross Perot in 1996 and of Ralph Nader and Pat Buchanan in 2000 was the subject of protest and litigation, but the commission stuck to its guns.

This year, once again, it is only Bush and Kerry who received the coveted invitations for four and a half hours of prime time discourse on all the TV networks.

It is perfectly sensible to assert, as the commission does, that voters are most interested in seeing direct interaction between the two candidates who actually have a realistic prospect of winning the election, rather than cluttering the screen with a bunch of also-rans.

But if the law allows (and in some ways encourages) both donors and grass-roots activists to go outside the two-party system to participate in the campaign, then what is the logic in excluding the debates to those who have passed through the major-party primaries and conventions?

It would be better to recognize the special and valuable role of the major parties — as we do by our campaigns with taxpayer funds and by assuring their nominees get to debate — but at the same time to leave the door open for outsider participation, both in debates and in independent campaign spending and activity.

The way to do this is to nudge the TV networks to carry more presidential debate — open to all those candidates who have qualified for ballot position in a majority of states.

Scheduled early in the autumn, such a debate could provide valuable exposure this year for Nader, Green Party candidate David Cobb, Libertarian Michael Badnarik, and Constitution Party candidate Michael Peroutka.

Major party nominees could be invited to join them if they wished.

Should any of the minor-party candidates strike a chord — as Perot did when allowed into the 1992 debate or Jesse Ventura did in Minnesota in 1998 — the public reaction, as well as the media, would be enough to qualify him for the later debates with the major-party nominees.

It is possible to preserve the advantages of the two-party system and still have an open democracy. It ought to happen in 2008.

Bush must stop peddling Sept. 11 Iraq ties

I think President Bush should be honest with the American people. The investigating commission proved that Osama bin Laden was not connected with Saddam Hussein, yet he still connects the war in Iraq to the 9/11 attacks on America. Iraq did not have weapons of mass destruction, and Saddam Hussein was not an imminent threat to us; and he still tells the people that it is a war on terrorism.

We have always been against aggression, but we are the aggressors in Iraq. There was no provocation by Saddam Hussein to cause the need for our attack. It was a mean dictator, but there are other mean dictators in the world even closer to our shores.

The other nations were depending on the oil for food program for most of their oil supply. The war stopped that, and Bush would not let any other country rebuild the oil wells because Halliburton wanted the bid and all the other bids they chose to have. Germany offered to rebuild the oil wells at no expense to us but was told no.

All the other nations were behind us in the war in Afghanistan because we had provocation for that war and Osama bin Laden is not out there after three years since the 9/11 attack and is a bigger threat than ever.

Is this the kind of leadership you want? If you think as I do that the United States should be better than this, then go to johnkerry.com and see how Kerry and Edwards want to lead our country because that is the only place you can get the true information about Kerry and Edwards.

T.F. officials set double standards on campaigns

Twin Falls County commissioners amended the personnel manual as follows: Section 13-10, Political Campaigning 13-10-0, except for elected officials.

A. No county employee shall actively engage in election practices while on duty.

Makes sense to me, but it should be also for elected officials. Also, I don't want my tax dollars used for campaigning. They should all be working, not out campaigning.

B. No county employee shall actively engage in election practices targeted at county employees while they are on duty.

The elected officials should not be allowed to do this either, because they are all county employees. C. No county employee shall actively engage in election practices during the normal county work day which disrupt other county employees in their work.

This is where the system falls down when elected officials put themselves above the employees. One should treat your employees like you would like to be treated.

D. No county employee shall actively engage in election practices while in a county uniform or while holding themselves out as a representative of the county.

What Aren't the elected officials holding themselves out as a representative of the county?

County employees know they cannot campaign on the working time, but the elected officials do it all the time. One set of rules for employees and another set for the county officials. What kind of hogwash is that? Why should we let this happen? That is what is wrong with elected officials setting themselves to be better than the public. What is going on here folks? We need to elect new officials. County commission to sheriff.

We will remember this on Nov. 2, won't we?

Feds do nothing about drug company crimes

It's amazing to me. An 86-year-old Nazi war crimes suspect is on trial because he is accused of killing 164 Slovak villagers in World War II and yet American drug companies kill hundreds of thousands of people a year by not disclosing unfavorable results of clinical trials of their drugs.

This double standard, perhaps, is why our country is subject to terrorism, but we wouldn't know because President Bush says "you can't talk to these people," which is true, especially when Bush won't engage in a dialog.

This pattern of immoral conduct by American drug makers qualifies as crimes against humanity and yet upper management lives in luxury in the comfort of their money yet, immoral conduct by the Food and Drug Administration, a U.S. government agency, which, under the Bush Administration, aids and abets the relentless pursuit of profit by vigorously protecting its monopoly on health care.

Consider the latest outrage — human growth hormones. The FDA has recently approved a drug to make kids taller, admittedly without any idea whatsoever of the long-term effect it will have on the kids in years to come. At the same time, the FDA outlaws or restricts herbs proven over thousands of years as effective because the herbs are in competition with the unproven drug forced onto consumers.

Now, it comes to light that your kids taking anti-depressant drugs are killing themselves and the drug companies knew it and withheld the information to make more money. What's it going to take until discernment? While you're attending your children's funerals, the drug companies are pumping millions into the Bush campaign so "W" can "create more opportunity" (to exploit us all the more).

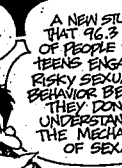

Is that a Christian thing to do? Not according to the Bible I read. You can tell a tree by its fruit. Re-defeat Bush!

Modest increases enhance F&G opportunities

A basic Mepps fishing lure sells for about $3. That's about how much more hunters and anglers being asked to pay to continue supporting some of the best hunting and fishing in the country.

You may have heard Fish and Game wants to adjust fees. Here's why. Just as businesses are paying more than five years ago for gasoline, electricity, salaries and insurance, so are we.

Just as businesses have held down costs, so have we. Unlike most businesses, we haven't changed prices since May 2000. Now, we're asking to charge a little more for licenses and tags to cover increased costs and to continue providing the services hunters and anglers want. How much more?

$1.50 for a hunting license, $3 for a fishing license - about the cost of a Mepps. Not much considering how much more it costs to do business than it did in 2000.

Remember when we thought

READER COMMENT

gas was expensive at $1.60 a gallon?

Since the last time we adjusted prices, we've built new places to fish. We're getting better information about fish and wildlife populations, helping us improve hunting and fishing. We've increased the amount of time conservation officers spend patrolling. So, to continue, we need a modest fee increase. Without it, we'll be back to cutting services you've told us are important. In the tight budget years before the last fee increase, we cut what some called "fat." Turns out, it wasn't fat.

Recently, we asked hunters, anglers, legislators, and others to help set priorities, to tell us what we need to do better. You told us "Get tough on poachers. Tell us more about fish and wildlife. Get us involved and give us more places to hunt and fish."

We heard you and we acted. We shifted our money into the priorities you identified. We freed up funds to start programs like Access Yes, opening private land to hunters and anglers. We gave conservation officers new tools to catch criminals.

We improved the Fish and Game web site and are making more information available to you. You told us you liked what we've done, but that we need to do more.

A couple dollars more per license will help. It will put volunteers on the ground improving mule deer winter range.

It will help conservation officers catch hard-core poachers who steal your fish and wildlife. It will keep hatcheries running to stock lakes, streams and ponds. It will open another 120,000 acres of private land to hunters and anglers.

We're trying to give hunters and anglers what they want and keep hunting and fishing affordable.

Giving Fish and Game Commissioners the authority to change prices means you won't see prices jump every six or seven years. Each year, Commissioners will look at the budget and meet with you - fellow hunters and anglers - before deciding what to charge.

Sometimes, there may be no change or some prices may go down. Other years, licenses and tags may go up 25 or 50 cents. Some say "Run government like a business." That's what this does. Prices will be in line with costs.

If prices get too high, people will stop buying. It's like any business, with one big difference. The Idaho legislature can turn down a change in prices. This approach makes sense. It keeps hunting and fishing affordable.

It gives Fish and Game the services hunters and anglers want - increased enforcement of hunting and fishing rules, more information, and more access to private land for hunting and fishing. Isn't that worth the price of a fishing lure?

Steve Huffaker is the director of the Idaho Department of Fish and Game.

Freedom shrinks under noxious rules and laws

People have asked me why I dropped the lawsuit against the school district. Perhaps it is ego, more likely pride, but I have refused to realize that my falling health has made me less of what I once was.

Be that as it may, a wise law professor once noted a truism that I should have heeded: Every wrong deserves a remedy, but not every wrong gets one. And so it is with rightly intended boycotts, peaceful redress of grievances, boisterous demonstrations, and yes, principled lawsuits.

One of the most precious rights we once had in this country was the right to be let alone. The right to proceed with our lives without having to continually prove our innocence: the right to be free. But the meaning of that term itself has been modified. When this country was born, it meant, among other things, to be free from debt, to own property and to pursue one's legal remedies whatever they may be. The Bill of Rights embodied the guarantee of a minimum of rights felt necessary to ensure those freedoms. Freedom was a state of mind and a state of being.

Today, however, the list cast a much narrower shadow. It has become action specific. And, of course we have lesser freedoms: including freedom to submit your urine for chemical analysis of dubious reliability. We have become a people governed by pernicious bureaucratic restrictions, noxious rules and regulations and irrational government encroachments. We carry our identification papers with us, cover at the sight of a patrol car, exclaim "that will never happen here" and all the while ignore the contrary facts around us in self-righteous apathetic ignorance. Our freedom is not eroding; it is suffering from our willful and chronic intellectual anemia.

The lawsuit against the school board was justified and based upon sound legal precedent. It was brought in good faith and supported by literally hundreds of people. To those people I can only offer my sincere apology for not being able to continue.

To Mr. Dobbs, the leader of our educational curriculum, who says in The Times-News that the Stanzaks would need a different angle if they wanted to pursue the case again, I must ask: what law school did you graduate from, what legal practice have you maintained and how many other cases of this nature have you successfully prosecuted? It seems that intellectual anemia knows no bounds.

Tousley reflects reliable, honest leadership

I would like to express my support for Wayne Tousley for Twin Falls County sheriff.

I have known Wayne for all of his law enforcement career and have found him to be a reliable and honest officer. He has a good background of service, serving as a city officer in Buhl as well as a deputy sheriff.

He is well trained and well qualified to be our sheriff for another term. I feel that he has served us well and I wholeheartedly support him.

Students grow stronger from their senior projects

The Jerome seniors walking out was quite humorous. I am so proud to be involved in the community of Jackpot, Nev. For four or five years each spring, I have been privileged to participate in the "Seniors Presentations" at the Jackpot School. I have been so impressed.

Every senior has to spend a large portion of their senior year and their own money to present to the community a detailed, professionally done presentation for the community. Parents, friends and community leaders attend. The seniors learn how to do Power Point presentations. They present a review of their educational journey and personal lives right up to the time nearing graduation day. It involves past history, family influences, community involvement, the highs and lows of their educational journey, then is capped off with the goals they will be striving to attain in the adult world after graduation.

There have been cheers and tears as these students tell of their struggles, the challenges and the victories of dedication to "pay the price" to reach the goals they had decided upon. Most of the seniors have gone on to college. Some to the military, some to Iraq. They get great letters from such a challenge, why not just "keep on walking." What college of respectable business would want a student, especially seniors, who have learned that having to discipline themselves to learn, dig and research is just too much of a demand. Ongoing knowledge and sharing that knowledge matters. That takes discipline. Prioritizing money and values to meet these required projects is nothing to walk away from.

Parents, if you want the pride of knowing you raised a diligent young person and you value learning and achievement, there are good housing opportunities and an excellent school, system in Jackpot.

If Bush wins, the draft will come our way. This letter is to those who choose not to vote. This letter is to those who say politics doesn't involve them. This letter is to those who think the Bush administration knows what's best for us, the citizens of the United States.

If Bush gets re-elected, a draft starting June of 2005 will be signed, sealed and delivered. It is already on his desk as we speak. The House and Senate introduced a couple of bills last year that called for introducing this very draft. The Seattle Post-Intelligencer recovered an internal issue paper on the new "Skills Draft" and Combat Draft through the Freedom of Information act. This document has been acknowledged by the Pentagon and the Selective Service.

This draft would change the essential mission of the Selective Service and require "virtually every young American" male and female, ages 18-34, to register for the Skills Draft and list all the occupations they are proficient in to fill labor shortages throughout the entire government. Women will be called up as well as men. There will be absolutely no deferments of any kind permitted. Persons with medical problems such as diabetes, cardiovascular disease, chronic asthma, physical deformities such as a club foot or hunch back, vision problems, etc., will be called up! There will be absolutely no deferments for someone with a family to support or who is enrolled in any kind of a school. If both parents are sent and their families are raised the best by bringing their four of duty, then their kids will be sent to some kind of federal day-care center. Students may be permitted to complete their semester and will not be compelled to report at once to their nearest enlistment center.

The nominal ages covered are from 18 through 26, but a special exception is now in the orders for anyone who went to the Army called "technical skills" such as proficiency in computers, foreign language skills and so on.

These people are subject to the draft until they are 35! Again, no deferments will be allowed unless the subject is already working for a government agency and is certified by his superiors as "fit" to whatever "war effort" the Army deems important.

If you don't believe me, go to these Web sites: TBRNews.org or http://blatanttruth.org/draft.php where you can also find the document stated above.

Idaho voter registration deadline is Oct. 5. JAMES GLANDON SR.

CHASING SISLER

Old-time great garners attention, thanks to Ichiro

By Ben Walker
Associated Press writer

Day and night, Dave Sisler is tracking every hit by Ichiro Suzuki. The former big league pitcher tunes in the radio each evening, his wife checks the boxscores in the morning.

Mostly, he's watching out for his father. Because as Suzuki approaches the season record for his fans all over are finding out about the man he's chasing: George Sisler, who got 257 for the long-gone St. Louis Browns back in 1920.

"I think it's great what my dad did, and that people are hearing his name," Sisler said Wednesday by telephone from his home in St. Louis. "He never talked about it, but a lot of people are talking about him now."

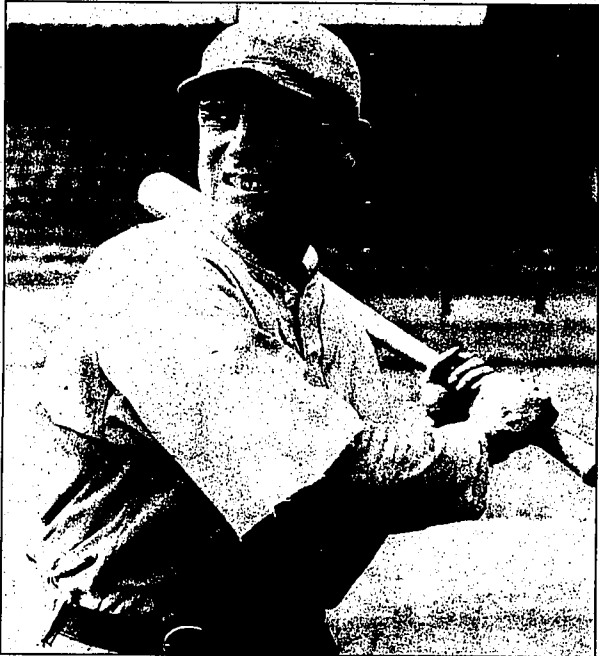

Down in Dallas, the Hall of Famer's grandson - also named Dave - already has his plane reservations for Seattle. The Mariners have invited him and other family members to Safeco Field this weekend for a celebration with Suzuki, probably before Saturday's game against Texas.

"It was very classy on their part," Sisler said, "and I'm going, provided Ichiro doesn't whiff in his next 12 at-bats."

Not much chance of that. Suzuki took a major league-leading .372 average into Wednesday night's game at Oakland. At 254 hits, he had five games left to break the record set so long ago by the player his family called "Poppy."

It's one of the longest-standing hitting marks left. Homer, RBI, batting average and runs records have all been set since "Gorgeous" George Sisler swung a bat that sometimes weighed a whopping 47 ounces. Last weekend, the younger Sisler sat in his season tickets at Texas - which happen to be only eight rows behind the visitor's on-deck circle - when the Mariners were in town and studied Suzuki.

"He's very good hitter, a really good hitter," Sisler said. And he's pretty certain the Seattle leadoff man will soon own the record, albeit with more at-bats than Sisler got when he hit .407 in a 194-game season. Suzuki had 250 hits through 154 games, and will finish with about 70 more at-bats than Sisler.

St. Louis Browns' George Sisler strikes a batting pose in this September 1920 photo, the year he batted .420 and had a record 257 hits.

"We're pretty much resigned to the fact that there will be no asterisk," the grandson said. "The light that this has shined on my grandfather is very positive. But it certainly is one of the last threads of recognition that he had. He was one of the most underappreciated players ever. So to be honest, I can't really say we're enjoying this."

Baseball returns to D.C. Canadian team moves to U.S. capital

By Joseph White
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON - The last time the nation's capital was home to the national pastime, the game was literally a riot.

Fans stormed the field with two outs in the ninth inning of the Washington Senators' farewell appearance at RFK Stadium on Sept. 30, 1971, upset over owner Bob Short's decision to move the team to Texas. The Senators were leading the New York Yankees 7-5, but the game was not finished and declared a forfeit.

"The kids just went wild," said Charlie Brooman, the longtime Senators public address announcer. "They were tearing up the turf with their hands and putting it in their pockets, going into the dugout. Anything that wasn't nailed down, they were picking up. There was not dissatisfaction. There was awe."

There was also the expectation that, in a few years or so, major league baseball would find a way to put a team back in Washington. Instead, the last three decades became an unending parade of frustration as one close call after another failed to materialize. A hopeful city turned into a jilted, jaded city. Baseball in D.C.? Ha! That'll be the day.

The day arrived Wednesday, when Major League Baseball Commissioner Bud Selig issued a statement saying the Montreal Expos are moving to Washington.

After 39 years of waiting and waiting and waiting and lots of hard work and more than a few prayers, there will be baseball in Washington in 2005! Mayor, Anthony Williams, donning a Washington Senators cap, told a jubilant news conference at the City Museum.

Despite the mayor's cap, the team's new name has yet to be determined.

Baseball takes pride in the fact that its franchises rarely move - the Senators were the last team to relocate - so it took an extremely unusual set of circumstances and a willingness to pay a steep price tag to give Washington its long-awaited reward.

The money-losing Expos were bought by the other 29 major league owners in 2002, and the search began for a new home for the team. Las Vegas; Norfolk, Va.; Monterrey, Mexico; and Portland, Ore., all made bids, but none of those locations could match the Washington area's combination of a wealthy population base and a ready-made stadium that

Boise State gains reputation for more than 'Smurf Turf'

The Associated Press

BOISE - Boise State football players love the novelty of their blue turf and the attention it brings.

What the Broncos have been accomplishing on the "Smurf Turf" is getting even more notice these days. No. 23 Boise State has the nation's longest winning streak at 15 in a row and hopes to break into the Bowl Championship Series de-split playing in a mid-major conference. "I think the national scene is really just starting to realize this isn't a fluke team. It's a program here," quarterback Jared Zabransky said.

In just its ninth season in Division I-A, Boise State is a relative newcomer to college football's top level. But the former I-AA power is putting up records that would earn other schools national titles. Boise State (4-0) has won 28 of its last 29 games and is the two-time defending champion of the Western Athletic Conference. But because the WAC is not among the six leagues guaranteed a spot in one of the four BCS games, the Broncos are a longshot to become the first school from a non-BCS league to get an at-large bid.

It would take going undefeated and probably a little help, two things coach Dan Hawkins doesn't want his players thinking about just one month into the season.

Bliss pulls off season sweep

By Nathaniel Garbrandt
Times-News writer

WENDELL - Payback will have to wait for the Trojans. Looking to avenge their only defeat of the season, Wendell fell to Bliss for the second time, 1-0 at home Wednesday night in hand-fought game that saw 32 shots on goal.

The shot attempts were split evenly between the two teams, as was the play throughout the high school boys soccer game until the Bears' David Butler knocked in a goal from the middle of the box in the 70th minute. It was a terrific shot. With the crowded goal box resembling a pinball table as the ball ricocheting wildly between players, Bliss' Omar Rosales trapped the ball and slid it over two feet to Butler, who slammed it home.

"Omar tapped it to me and I was there with my left," said Butler.

Until the late goal, it seemed that the game was headed for a tie. The contest had seen more than two dozen missed shots and several shifts in momentum and strategy, with neither team able to put anything on the scoreboard.

Both teams had attempted liberal play on the wings, utilizing a single, fast and skilled Please see BLISS, Page B2

Baseball fever Catch it at your own risk

We are becoming a nation of crybabies. And greedy ones at that. This week's reminder comes courtesy of a lawsuit filed in San Francisco County Superior Court over ownership of another Barry Bonds home run ball.

JIM LITKE

The last time this happened was three years ago. The plaintiff wound up with a legal bill more than twice as big as his share of the profits from the sale of Bonds' 73rd home run ball. Thanks to the generosity of his lawyers (two words you rarely see in the same sentence), the defendant walked away with "tens of thousands of dollars."

Here's wishing this latest lawsuit ends the same way. In it, Timothy Murphy contends Bonds' 700th home run ball hit his chin and then his seat before he sat on it briefly, and thus established possession. That was before a mob descended on Murphy's seat in the second row of the left-field bleachers at SBC Park a week ago Friday night, grabbed and hit him for a full minute, and someone else emerged from the scrum holding the baseball aloft.

That someone is Steve Williams, and he comes in for special scorn. While all the other defendants are referred to as "Does 1 through 100 (as in 'John Does' and not female deer)" and their actions described in generic terms, Murphy claims Williams grabbed more than the baseball.

"Defendant Williams," the complaint reads, "placed his hand on and under Plaintiff's crotch."

There weren't many more details available Wednesday, when Williams told a judge he wouldn't sell No. 700 until the lawsuit is decided.

Murphy's lawyers did not re- Please see FEVER, Page B4

Cubs stumble in NL wild-card race

CHICAGO (AP) — Austin Kearns tied the game with a two-out double in the ninth inning, then hit a two-run homer in the 12th as Cincinnati dealt Chicago a key 4-3 loss in the wild-card race.

The Cubs began the day tied for the NL wild-card lead with the Giants and one-half game ahead of Houston. San Francisco played at San Diego later and Houston beat St. Louis.

Chicago, which has lost four of its last five, has four games remaining — one more with the Reds on Thursday before concluding the regular season with a three-game series at Wrigley Field against NL East champion Atlanta.

Kearns, who also made a great catch in right to rob Sammy Sosa of extra bases, hit a two-run homer off Jon Liekester (5-1) after a walk to D'Angelo Jimenez.

John Redding (5-3), who replaced Ben Grise on a comebacker with Sosa at third in the 11th, got the win.

Marlins 9, Expos 1

MONTREAL — The Expos era in Montreal ended with a 9-1 loss to Florida on Wednesday night, a game delayed for 10 minutes when players were pulled out of the field after a fan threw a golf ball that landed near second base.

A crowd of 31,395 showed up at Olympic Stadium for a final farewell just hours after baseball announced that the 36-year-old franchise will be moved next season to Washington, D.C.

It was the largest crowd of the year and about four times the season average.

Fans were warned in the third inning that the game would be forfeited if anything else was thrown onto the field. Three plastic bottles were tossed into left field in the sixth, one near Florida's Miguel Cabrera. But the teams remained on the field.

With two outs in the ninth, a fan jumped onto the field near Florida's on-deck circle and was quickly escorted off by two security guards.

After Termel Sledge popped up for the final out, Marlins catcher Perry Miller hit the ball from third baseman Mike Mordecai and tossed it across the field to Expos manager Frank Robinson. Montreal coach Claude Raymond and the team left the Expos as they waved goodbye to fans.

Braves 6, Mets 3

ATLANTA — Bobby Cox became just the ninth manager in baseball history to win 2,000 games when Atlanta scored four runs in the seventh.

Of the eight managers who previously reached 2,000 wins, seven are in the Hall of Fame. The lone exception is Tony La Russa, still managing the St. Louis Cardinals. Cox's overall record is 2,000-1,530, and he has guided Atlanta to 13 straight division titles.

The Braves broke a 2-all tie in the seventh. Andruw Jones doubled in the go-ahead run, and 46-year-old Julio Franco drove in another with a pinch-hit single off Eric Heldman (1-3).

After Mike Stanton took over for Heldman, Marcus Giles hit a hard grounder that barely got over the glove of shortstop Kaz Matsui and nearly rolled to the wall for a two-run triple.

Braves starter Russ Ortiz (15-9) gave up two runs in the first but showed signs of snapping out of his slump with seven solid innings. John Smoltz pitched the ninth for his 43rd save.

Astros 6, Cardinals 4

HOUSTON — Houston pushed closer to a playoff berth, winning a club-record 15th straight home game.

The Astros temporarily tied San Francisco for the NL wild-card lead — the Giants played later in San Diego. Houston also moved a half-game ahead of the slumping Chicago Cubs, who lost their second straight to Cincinnati earlier in the day.

Roger Clemens was dethroned as his 19th win — and almost certainly a chance at his seventh 20-win season — when he left with the score tied at 4 after the sixth.

But Jeff Bagwell had a run-scoring single in the seventh and Lance Berkman followed with an RBI double to help the Astros eclipse their best home winning streak set in 1980 at the Astrodome.

Tot Kent connected for the 300th homer of his career, backing Clemens through his worst outing in three weeks. Chad Qualls (4-0) pitched a scoreless seventh for the win. Dan Miceli struck out the side in the eighth and Brad Lidge got three outs for his 27th save in 31 chances.

Phillies 8, Pirates 4, 1st game

Phillies 8, Pirates 3, 2nd game

PHILADELPHIA — Chase Utley had three hits and four RBIs, and Philadelphia rallied with a six-run seventh inning to complete a doubleheader sweep.

In the opener, Todd Pratt hit a three-run homer and the Phillies clinched consecutive winning seasons for the first time in 21 years.

Philadelphia's Bobby Abreu reached base in nine of his 10 plate appearances — eight straight before flying out in the fifth. He had four hits, four walks and reached on an error.

Chicago Cubs' Derrek Lee is hit by a pitch in the third inning against Cincinnati Wednesday, in Chicago.

The Phillies trailed 3-1 in the seventh inning of the nightcap before scoring five unearned runs against reliever Salomon Torres (7-7).

Brewers 4, Diamondbacks 1

PHOENIX — Geoff Jenkins homered and drove in two runs, and Luis Vizcaino worked out of a bases-loaded jam with no outs in the ninth to help Milwaukee snap a three-game skid.

The defeat was Arizona's 110th, one shy of tying four other teams for the eighth-most losses in major league history.

Jenkins singled, homered and tripled in his first three at-bats. He missed hitting for the cycle in the eighth inning when he flied out to left field. Jenkins scored twice.

Jenkins homered for the second straight game. He teamed with Keith Ginter for back-to-back solo shots in the fourth against Casey Fossum (4-15).

Gary Glover (2-1) went a season-high six innings in his fourth start, holding the Diamondbacks to one run on five hits.

American League

Yankees 5, Twins 3

Yankees 5, Twins 4

NEW YORK — With a doubleheader sweep of the Minnesota Twins, the New York Yankees moved to the verge of clinching their seventh straight AL East title.

"Derek Jeter and Alex Rodriguez rallied the Yankees to a 5-3 victory over the AL Central champions in the opener. Jon Lieber then won his fifth consecutive victory in the second game, with New York beating the Twins 5-4 behind Hideki Matsui's second homer of the day and 30th of the season, a three-run drive in the first."

Mariano Rivera saved both games, raising his total to a career-high 53.

New York, closing in on three straight 100-win seasons for the first time in team history, will clinch the division with one more win or one Red Sox loss. Both teams are both assured of no worse than the AL wild-card berth.

Devil Rays 9, Red Sox 4

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — The Tampa Bay Devil Rays damaged Boston's slim chances of winning the AL East, beating Pedro Martinez and the Red Sox.

Martinez (16-9) has lost four straight starts for the first time with the Red Sox.

Timo Lincecum added a three-run homer in the eighth off Alan Embree for Tampa Bay, which won for just the fifth time in 19 games.

Indians 5, Royals 2

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — The Royals lost their club-record 101st game of the season.

Kansas City's fifth straight loss — the sixth skid of at least five in a row — dropped it to 57-101 after going 83-79 last year and entering this season as one of the favorites in the AL Central. The only other time the Royals lost 100 games in the franchise's 36 year history was in 2002.

Ben Broussard homered and Cliff Bartosh (1-0) earned his first major league victory with one inning of perfect relief for the Indians. Bob Wickman pitched the ninth for his 12th save.

Orioles 7, Blue Jays 6, 1st game

Orioles 4, Blue Jays 0, 2nd game

BALTIMORE — Ittek Bauer pitched six innings of three-hit ball to help Baltimore complete a doubleheader sweep of Toronto.

In the opener, Rafael Palmeiro hit two homers and watched Miguel Tejada break his single-season club record for RBIs in a 7-6 win.

The second game featured a pitching duel between Bauer, making his first start since August 2002, and rookie Gustavo Garcia. Bauer worked in his second major league game after beating the New York Yankees on Sept. 20.

Doubles by Javy Lopez and Jay Gibbons gave the Orioles a 1-0 lead in the fifth inning, and Baltimore pulled away with a three-run eighth against reliever Justin Miller.

White Sox 11, Tigers 2

DETROIT — Carlos Lee hit a grand slam and a two-run homer and Freddy Garcia pitched seven scoreless innings to lead Chicago.

Ross Gload hit a two-run homer and Joe Borland and Juan Uribe added solo home runs for the White Sox, who need to win one of their final four games at Kansas City to avoid their first losing season since 1999.

The Tigers beat the White Sox in 11 of 19 games, winning the season series for the first time since 1997.

Olympian's suicide note explains killing wife, self

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — In a suicide note made public Wednesday, a former Olympian wrote of being haunted by perceived failures and blamed at least some of them on his wife, whom he is believed to have stabbed to death before killing himself.

"I have worked so hard in this life time (sic) and to fall short on many occasions has been hard," the note written by Robert Howard begins. Howard, a medical student and 10-time NCAA champion in the long jump and triple jump at the University of Arkansas, was a two-time Olympian who never won a medal. He failed in his third attempt to make the U.S. Olympic team for this year's games.

Howard, 28, jumped from a 10th-floor dormitory room window at the University of Arkansas for Medical Sciences early on Aug. 8, hours after the Olympics opened in Athens.

Police investigating his death discovered the body of his wife, Dr. Robin Mitchell, in bed at the couple's duplex, covered with a blanket. Mitchell, who was the chief neurosurgery resident at UAMS, had been stabbed numerous times in the head and torso the night before.

Sun eliminate Mystics from WNBA playoffs

UNCASVILLE, Conn. (AP) — An infusion of young talent and a change of scenery has done wonders for the former Orlando Miracle.

Reborn last year as the Connecticut Sun, the team landed in the WNBA Eastern Conference finals for the second straight season with a 76-56 victory over the Washington Mystics on Wednesday night.

The best-of-three series starts Friday night at New York. The former Miracle reached the postseason just once during their four years in Orlando and didn't advance beyond the first round.

"This is exciting," said Sun coach Mike Thibault, who joined the team last year. "The team has found their extra reserves within themselves. This is a great win for this franchise."

Led by the franchise's original members Nykesha Sales and Taj McWilliams-Franklin, the Sun found a way to stop the surging Mystics to advance. They also got plenty of help from rookie Lindsay Whalen in a 21-2 run in the first half of the deciding Game 3.

"You always want to see the young players coming around at the right time," McWilliams-Franklin said. "Players like myself are more productive because we don't have to play as many minutes. We can spread ourselves around."

McWilliams-Franklin made the most of her minutes Wednesday with 11 rebounds, two blocked shots and 10 points. Sales led the team with 18 points, including three 3-pointers during a key first-half run.

"We realized this was a big game for us," Sales said. "We continue to get better all the time."

Rookie Alana Beard scored 22 points and had four blocked shots for the Mystics, who had won six of their last eight games.

Their run to the playoffs began improbably after star Chamique Holdsclaw left for undisclosed medical reasons and Beard emerged as the go-to player during that stretch."

forward to penetrate the defense and cross-pass the ball over. For Wendell, it was Damian Diaz for Bliss, Joseph Huxold. In the first half, it was all Diaz, with the momentum consequently held by the Trojans, who were able to use his power to draw the field up and keep the Bear defense tight.

Though Huxold managed several forays up to the Trojan box, they lacked support and Wendell was able to clear the ball back up field. However, Trojans were unable to capitalize on the pressure they sustained, missing six shots in their first 20 minutes alone. Their best opportunity came in the 31st minute as midfielder Davis Raymond caught the Bears' keeper with his right and aimed a shot just over the upper left corner of the goal.

Noting the Diaz problem and a softening of the Wendell defense, Bliss coach Daniel Knapp made several adjustments at halftime, which included moving off midfielder into the forward position and another back to defense. It was a decision that paid off, as the second half saw an immediate and distinct shift in momentum and time of possession.

"We were 'them down,'" said Knapp. "But neutralizing Diaz was the big thing."

For the remainder of the game, the tie backs managed to stifle Diaz, and the Trojan defenders found their hands full with new threats, not the least of which being additional support for Huxold's speedy intrusions. As time wore on, the Wendell defense began to weaken and played gated more and more around the front of the goal until Buder sealed the deal.

Bliss moves to 5-2-2 on the season and hosts Magic Valley Christian on Wednesday. Wendell (6-2-1) visits The Community School, also Wednesday.

Girls soccer

Wood River JV 1, Wendell 0

WENDELL — The Wood River

junior varsity broke open a scoreless game in the 66th minute with a penalty kick to beat the Wendell varsity 1-0 Wednesday night on the road. It was an improvement for the Trojan girls, who lost 5-0 to the Wolverines in their previous game.

"Our defense played very well," said Wendell coach Jon Goss.

Wendell (2-4-3) visits the Twin Falls JV on Monday.

Volleyball

Century 3, Burley 0

BURLEY — Century defeated Burley 25-11, 25-17, 25-17 Wednesday night in Great Basin Conference volleyball play, despite three kills and two blocks by junior Jayne Lyons. Jessica Hope had six service points, including an ace while DeAnna Rock made four digs. Amber Funk added three kills while Candace Dalton and Aubry Ward had two blocks apiece.

Burley (1-8, 1-7 Great Basin) next plays Tuesday Preston and the host Hornets in Declo.

Manchester United's Wayne Rooney celebrates after scoring against Fenerbahce at Old Trafford Stadium in Manchester, England, on Tuesday.

Rooney enters Manchester U folklore with hat trick in debut

LONDON (AP) — The list of Manchester United superstars, headed by George Best, Bobby Charlton and Denis Law, could soon feature a new name; Wayne Rooney.

Rooney got his third goal in the 55th minute with a curling free kick that would have made David Beckham proud. He also set up the team's sixth goal by flicking a header to David Bellion, and came close to scoring two more goals.

Rooney is the first United player to score a hat trick in his debut in 99 years; Charlie Sagar did it against Bristol City in 1905.

It's a Tigers-Bulldogs rematch between the hedges

By Ralph D. Russo

The rematch of last season's Southeastern Conference title game might not even be the biggest SEC game on Saturday. First, defending SEC champ LSU takes on Georgia between the hedges at Sanford Stadium. Then Auburn and Tennessee get going in front of more than 104,000 at Neyland Stadium.

No. 8 Auburn and No. 10 Tennessee are the survivors from the SEC's matinee matchups Sept. 18.

Auburn beat LSU 10-9 at home to take an early, but important lead in the SEC West race.

That night, the Volunteers get a 50-yard field goal with seconds to play and a little help from officials who slipped up on clock management to beat Florida 30-28.

In a disappointing 2003, Auburn's 28-21 win over Tennessee was one of the highlights. The Tigers manhandled the Vols, outscoring them 264-4.

"Our whole team is looking at it as a challenge on both sides of the ball. Last year, we got whipped," Tennessee coach Phillip Fulmer said.

"They are good in every area—offense, defense and special teams—and have a lot of players who are playing well right now," Tigers coach Nick Saban said.

For much of the Top 25 this is the week before the big game.

No. 2 Oklahoma hosts Texas Tech and No. 5 Texas plays Baylor before the Sooners and Longhorns meet in the Red River Shootout.

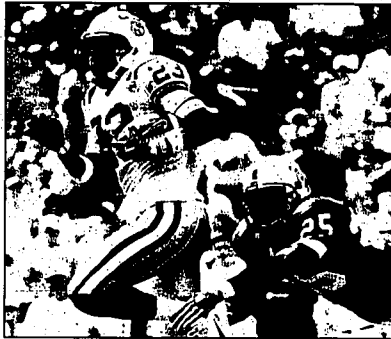

No. 10 California plays at Oregon State on Saturday, but No. 1 USC looms Oct. 9.

In the Big Ten, No. 7 Ohio State, No. 18 Minnesota, No. 19 Michigan and No. 20 Wisconsin all face lesser conference foes Saturday. Next week, those four pair off—Wisconsin is at Ohio State and Minnesota at Michigan.

Orton and Stubblefield fuel Purdue's fast start

By Jon Krawczynski
Associated Press writer

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. — When Kyle Orton arrived at Purdue, his future favorite receiver was already there. It just took awhile for the shy quarterback from Iowa to connect with a shiny, slow-widout named Taylor Stubblefield.

Four years later, they have blossomed into one of the nation's best pass-and-catch duos.

"It took me six or seven months just to meet Taylor," Orton said. "He hung out with different people and I was kind of quiet, so I didn't really hang out with anybody."

They hooked up on the field for the first time later that season, when Orton threw two touchdowns passes to Stubblefield in the 2001 Sun Bowl—and they haven't slowed down since.

Even by coach Joe Tiller's high standards, Orton and Stubblefield are putting up gaudy numbers for No. 15 Purdue (3-0).

Orton has thrown for 13 touchdowns in the first three games—eight to Stubblefield—who is closing in on the Big Ten and NCAA records for career receptions.

"They have a feel for one another," Tiller said Tuesday. "They're not attached at the hip, but it appears as though they are."

They're an interesting combination. Orton is the rifle-armed golden boy who has NFL scouts taking notes.

Stubblefield is the overachiever. He's not 6-foot-4. He doesn't run the 40-yard dash in 4.3 seconds. All he does is run razor-sharp routes and catch everything thrown his way.

"I don't have what everybody looks for in a wide receiver," Stubblefield said. "But there's only a handful of others in the nation that do."

Orton, Stubblefield: a dangerous liaison

After winning their first two games by a combined score of 110-7, the Purdue Boilermakers' offense—led by quarterback Kyle Orton and wide receiver Taylor Stubblefield—continues to be nearly unstoppable.

giving the way for the team's 3-0 start.

Orton
Thrown for 13 touchdowns in the first three games.

Stubblefield
Nine career catches away from the Big Ten record and 52 away from the NCAA mark.

It's worked so far. Stubblefield is nine catches away from breaking former teammate John Sandleford's Big Ten career receptions record and 52 away from breaking the NCAA mark.

"If it happens, it's going to happen," Stubblefield said. "It's something that, if I'm healthy, it should happen. It's not something that I have to push for."

Not bad for a player who is listed at 6-1, but is much closer to 5-10. But that's never bothered him.

"I don't have the little-man syndrome because I'm not that little," Stubblefield insists.

It's certainly a big enough target for Orton.

The two have developed a close friendship on and off the field, and the Boilermakers, who play at Notre Dame on Saturday, are reaping the benefits.

Orton has completed nearly 70 percent of his passes for 982 yards, the 13 touchdowns and no interceptions.

More often than not, Stubblefield is on the receiving end. The fifth-year senior has 21 catches for 324 yards, and his eight touchdowns are three more than he had in his first three seasons in West Lafayette.

"Before the snap, they really have an understanding of what each other is going to do," Tiller said. "That's always a great advantage for a quarterback. He's not getting involved in a guessing game because of the coverage."

That much was illustrated on one play in Purdue's 38-30 win over Illinois last week.

With the pesky Illini hanging around and threatening to tie the game, Purdue faced a third-and-8 in the fourth quarter. Orton read blitz and started to call an audible.

That was when Stubblefield spoke up. He yelled down the line of scrimmage at his quarterback, strongly suggesting a different play. Orton obliged, and lofted a perfect touch pass to Stubblefield for a 34-yard touchdown and a 15-point lead.

"He wanted to run something different," Orton said. "I have enough trust in him to say 'OK, run what you want' and he ran it and it was a great route and a great play."

That trust and communication has been four years in the making.

"They're more comfortable with one another today than they've ever been," Tiller said. "Orton has really been the same all along, but I see a big change in Stubblefield. He just seems to think he can go out and beat anybody."

It would be hard to argue with him at this point, as the touchdowns keep piling up and the records start to fall.

At this rate, both players could be in contention for the Heisman Trophy, but Stubblefield joked that the ultra-competitive Orton might not let that happen.

"I think you'll see my numbers drop off if I start to catch him," Stubblefield quipped. "Hopefully we can both be there."

Lynch prepares for a bittersweet homecoming

DENVER (AP) — He grew up near San Diego, watching Don Potts and Kellen Winslow two players who spent their entire careers with one team. John Lynch thought he could do the same.

It's a dream for so many players when they enter the NFL, before the business side of the game dictates differently. It's a dream that gets fulfilled less often as the years go by.

The former Buccaneers star will play in the familiar setting of Tampa Bay on Sunday, but he'll wear a different uniform. In the offseason, after 11 years, the Bucs let one of the cornerstones of their franchise go.

Lynch, chosen by the Denver Broncos, and his far things are going pretty smoothly for the five-time Pro Bowl safety.

But this week? To stand here and say it's just a normal week — I don't think that would be honest to anyone," he said.

Lynch, along with Warren Sapp and Derrick Brooks, all came to Tampa Bay in the '90s, back when the mascot was a jolly-looking pirate, the uniforms were Creamsicle orange and there wasn't much cool about being a Buccaneer.

Time passed, coaches changed, the team kept getting better and finally won a Super Bowl two seasons ago. Lynch, Sapp and Brooks took some ownership in having made it through the tough times. All felt they were doing more than earning a check — they felt they had a stake in the franchise.

"I don't think so much of the Super Bowl," Lynch said. "I think of the journey it took from taking a franchise that used to be the butt of all jokes to a place where they're respected as one of the great organizations in the NFL. You take a lot of pride in being a part of building that."

But are they still one of the most respected franchises? The record (0-3) for this injury-ravaged team doesn't indicate that. Neither does some of the tumult since Bruce Allen took over as general manager in the offseason, replacing Dick LeBeau. Receiver Keanan McCardell is holding out, accusing the Bucs of reneging on a promise to give him a raise. The Bucs let Sapp go, a widely unpopular move. They also said goodbye to Lynch, largely perceived as one of the all-time great guys in Tampa.

"Backdash is putting it mildly," Bucs coach Jon Gruden said. "We lost John, we lost Warren. It was very, very hard. There are some things you don't like to be a part of. You feel guilty. You feel dirty. You feel bad about it, you really, really do."

Lynch was willing to sacrifice some money to make a deal work, but the Bucs didn't bite. He said he's not totally sure why, but he's been around a long time — he knows the reality of the salary cap in football.

"I don't think it was easy for them to do, but they made a decision that it would be in the best interest of their team," he said. Entering his 12th season, it's no reach to say the 33-year-old Lynch has lost a step from his heyday. He also struggled with neck injuries last season and had surgery to remove bone spurs in January. He concedes those problems would be a legitimate concern for any team, including the Bucs.

The Broncos, however, checked him out thoroughly and decided signing him was worth the risk.

"We didn't see any side effects, and so far, we've been right," Broncos coach Mike Shanahan said. "He had to go in a new direction as a football player. Certainly, I haven't spent a lot of time talking to him about what happened in Tampa Bay."

What kind of reception will he get Sunday? He's not sure, but the smart money says there will be more. No. 47 jerseys in the crowd than any other. Remember that Tampa gave Lynch a key to the city when he left.

"It is hard. You keep hammering on it and talking about it," said Hawkins, in his fourth season since taking over when Dirk Koetter left for Arizona State. "I think they'll play off a lot of how you approach it and your staff approaches it. And we're very much day-to-day around here. Nobody is complaining about all this exposure."

The Broncos have gained attention by playing whenever they can get on TV — Thursday, Friday or Saturday, day or night. Broncos home games are big events in Idaho's capital and the school wants people to see it.

The 30,000 seats at Bronco Stadium, less than half of the capacity of stadiums at Michigan, Tennessee, LSU and Ohio State, are always packed with orange-clad fans.

The parking lot outside Bronco Stadium fills with tailgaters hours before kickoff, just like at any other college football power — just less of them.

"It's been a great atmosphere," said Hawkins, who is 37-6 with the Broncos. "You can do whatever you want, but you better win games. That's the best marketing you can do."

Boise State quarterback Jared Zabransky (5) keeps the ball for a 20-yard gain as BYU defensive back Spencer White (24) tries to catch up in the first quarter, last Friday in Boise, Idaho.

Bomb threat closes Minico HS

Officials approve Elmore CAFO

MOUNTAIN HOME—A controversial, confined animal feeding operation received the blessing of Elmore County Planning and Zoning Commissioners Wednesday night. Commissioners voted 5-2 in favor of Bernie Brown's CAFO request. Brown's Mountain Home Dairy will house a total of 10,000 cows. It is the seventh CAFO approved in Elmore County in the last five years.

By Lorraine Cavener Times-News correspondent

RUPERT — Minico High School students were at lunch Wednesday when a bomb threat was called in to Principal Dan Rogers around 12:20 p.m. Rogers called the Minidoka County Sheriff's Department and a special response team searched the school but found no bomb.

"We pulled the fire bell," Rogers said. "Students showed outstanding behavior. They stayed where they were supposed to be." Students could not be allowed back in the building until it was completely checked so they were sent home. The last bomb threat at Minico High School happened on Sept. 11, 2001. Hallett said. "At first we thought it was related," he said, "but nothing ever happened."

Jason Walker, who was not the prosecutor at the time, said the suspect, a then-19-year-old man, was prosecuted but got a fairly light sentence for a number of reasons. He was sentenced to probation and ordered to pay restitution. The young man's girlfriend, a 17-year-old Minico student, was charged in the juvenile division for assisting with planning the call.

Walker agreed, saying that prosecutor at the time, said to discourage hoaxes such as Wednesday's. "The only way you can really send a message is to send it by prosecuting," he said. The maximum sentence for a false report is five years in prison. There is no fine set forth in Idaho law, but the general fine provision calls for up to $50,000 in fines. Walker said. If the offender is 16 or older, he could be tried as an adult. A juvenile would be sentenced to juvenile detention, Walker said.

Drug trafficking case goes before judge

TWIN FALLS—A man police say was trafficking in methamphetamine was arraigned in 5th District Court this week. John Earl Ash, 44, will enter a plea of innocent to the felony charge, his attorney, Jon Brody, told Judge John Hohnhorst. The case will be set for trial.

Hansen school spirit drags on

Dressed in an outfit he got from his sister, Hansen High School freshman James Larson, right, jokes with friends as he, sophomore Ashley Runge, center, and freshman April Hughes wait for the beginning of an obstacle race during cross-dressing day on Wednesday. The event was part of the school's Homecoming week activities.

'Cross Dresser Day' underscores a week of zany activities

By Karin Kowalski Times-News writer HANSEN — Homecoming week can get a little crazy. Gender bending was in order Wednesday at Hansen High School where students had Cross Dresser Day as part of their school spirit activities. Principal Rick Abel was also in the spirit, wearing a shirt that said "Girls Basketball."

Rachel Okarma, a freshman, raided her own closet and borrowed from her friend's father to put together her jeans, plaid shirt and baseball cap ensemble. "It's been fun," Okarma said. "Southern Idaho's conservative social mores didn't hinder the exuberance of the day. Wilma Myers, a parent and teacher's aide at the school, said this year's spirit week was going well. She even brought some of her daughter's clothes for students to borrow.

"It's my sister's," said James Larson, a freshman. Larson wore a red and black flowered dress and a pink and black T-shirt, with the words "Los Angeles" on it that concealed bouncy, unidentified objects. Kendra McCollum, a freshman, borrowed a jersey from a football player and had shoes with pink laces. She said spirit week was fun. "I've never done anything like this," McCollum said. "I think it's cool."

Students in grades seven through 12 gathered in a nearby field for the team obstacle course. Obstacles involved fishing eggs out of a tub of "muck," breaking eggs, toilet paper, spinning around baseball bats then pouring water, and a shaving cream-covered water slide. The last obstacle involved licking whipped cream out of pie tins, finding a piece of gum and blowing a bubble. The junior and senior classes tied to win. Korie Butler, the junior class vice president who is organizing many of the events, said she brainstormed with a friend to come up with the obstacles. "We just thought of the funniest things we could see people at our school doing," Butler said.

Woman gets probation for embezzlement

TWIN FALLS — A woman charged with embezzling nearly $100,000 from her employer will serve three years probation. Barnaby Lu Whitton, 45, of Twin Falls, was charged with grand theft, in connection with funds missing from Watkins Distributing. She entered a plea of guilty to the crime count on Aug. 15. District Judge John Hohnhorst sentenced her Monday to five years in prison, with two years fixed. He suspended that sentence in favor of the probation term. She must also serve 30 days in jail but might be eligible for work release. Worthington must also write a letter of apology to the victim. The maximum penalty for grand theft is 14 years in prison.

Agencies discuss beef cattle annual review

By Michelle Dupont Times-News writer BOISE — The addition of two state animal inspectors should help agencies keep tabs on small beef cattle operations — a task that has posed problems in the past. "The predominant violations we find is in smaller facilities of less than 300 animals with a live stream running through the confinement area," said John Chatburn, deputy administrator of the Division of Animal Industries with the Idaho Department of Agriculture. On Wednesday, representatives from the Department of Agriculture, Department of Environmental Quality, Environmental Protection Agency and Idaho Cattle Association met in Boise to review the agencies' memorandum of understanding for beef cattle — an agreement that specifies each agency's role in regulating beef cattle animal feeding operations in Idaho. The bulk of the burden of inspections falls on the shoulders of the Department of Agriculture. Identifying and inspecting smaller operations has proved difficult, Chatburn said.

Inspection summary table with columns: Beef Cattle Animal Feeding Operations, Inspection Summary, Jan., Aug., 2002, 2003, 2004. Rows include Facilities Inspected, Compliance, and Complaints.

During the meeting, Chatburn announced that he recently received notification of grant money that will allow the agency to hire two new inspectors. The inspectors will work primarily in the Salmon and Clearwater areas. Although the new employees will not exclusively inspect beef cattle, the additional staff should enable the agency to reach smaller cattle operations in those areas, Chatburn said. Cevin Jones of the Idaho Cattle Association was pleased with Chatburn's announcement. While Jones' organization tries to maintain outreach and educational programs to cattle operations, he noted that reaching the owners of small operations remains a challenge. Overall, Jones felt the agencies' memorandum of understanding has been successful. However, "there are still areas we need to improve on," Jones said. Kim Ogle from the EPA seemed less enthused by the memorandum than Jones. Please see REVIEW, Page C3.

Horsley drops out of CSI board race

TWIN FALLS — Ryan Horsley, a Twin Falls planning and zoning commissioner, has dropped out of a race for a seat on the College of Southern Idaho board of directors. Horsley ended his candidacy the day after the filing deadline, said Mike Mason, the college's vice president of finance. Horsley said he has too much going on at the moment, but he might run for the board in the future. Horsley was competing for Chairman Leroy Craig's seat. Both Craig and Vice Chairman Charles Lehman are running again for six-year terms. Voters in Twin Falls and Jerome counties will choose the board members in the Nov. 2 election. Oct. 8 is the deadline for write-in candidates.

Twin Falls man pleads guilty to manslaughter

By Chip Thompson Times-News reporter RUPERT — A Twin Falls man charged with killing an Aberdeen couple May 9 in a head-on collision on Interstate 84 near State Pleaded guilty Wednesday to two counts of vehicular manslaughter. John Paul Warberg, 72, was scheduled to go to trial Wednesday in Minidoka County's 5th District Court but accepted a plea agreement before the trial began and changed his plea to guilty. Minidoka County Prosecutor Jason Walker said. The Mother's Day accident happened when Warberg, who was under the influence of alcohol, entered I-84 westbound via the exit 216 eastbound off-ramp and drove the wrong way.

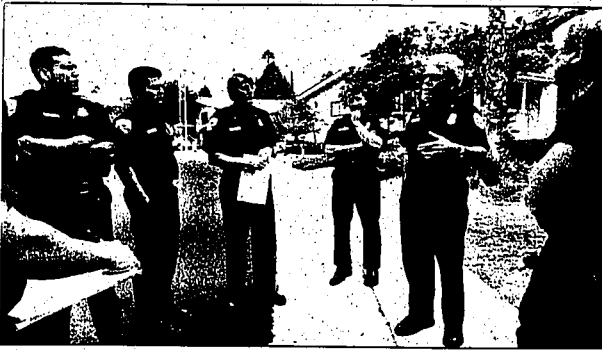

His 1999 Chevrolet pickup truck struck a 1986 Oldsmobile Cutlass driven by 15-year-old Joey Farnes of Aberdeen, killing Farnes' grandparents, Clarence and Martha Rogers, both 68, who were passengers in the car. Idaho State Police Trooper Todd Moyer said both vehicles could have been traveling as fast as 75 miles per hour and there were no skid marks indicating that either car slowed before the impact. Farnes and Warberg sustained only minor injuries. "Speed contributed to the severity, but this accident was going to happen no matter what," Moyer told The Times-News.

Police found an open bottle of bourbon in Warberg's vehicle and Walker said his blood alcohol level tested .18, more than twice the legal limit. His problem with Warberg is due to be sentenced in about eight weeks and his office is recommending a sentence of two years determinative and eight years indeterminate. "Warberg's attorney would be five to 15 years and a $15,000 fine for each count. It's likely he'll die in prison," Walker said, pointing to Warberg's age and some significant health problems. Walker said the Rogers family had approved of the deal before it was offered.

Warberg is also facing a civil suit filed on May 26 by DeMar Reed, 68, and his wife, Nellie Farnes in Twin Falls County's 5th District Court. The wrongful death suit seeks to recover money damages for what the plaintiffs say was negligence but does not cite a specific amount.

San Diego prepares for fires

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Nearly one year after a deadly firestorm devastated much of the region, San Diego County is better equipped and prepared today, but fire officials warn that the county must do more to unify its firefighting efforts.

"Fire protection in San Diego County is like a large jigsaw puzzle," said Garisbad Fire Chief Kevin Crawford, president of the San Diego County Fire Chiefs Association.

Crawford said the county has failed to manage the patchwork of fire districts in the growing unincorporated areas, where most of the 17 fatalities occurred in last October's Cedar and Paradise fires. As a result, the rural backcountry lacks sufficient resources and the county does not have a cohesive radio communications system.

Much of the county feels a "lack of support" a sense of "being isolated into themselves," Crawford said.

Sill, fire officials told a hearing that improvements have been made, including, evacuation plans for rural and semi-rural communities; new engines and additional firecrews; better coordination among agencies; speedier removal of dead and dying trees, and expanded use of firefighting aircraft. A new helicopter crew has been added to the San Diego region.

The California Department of Forestry and Fire Protection has improved its system for predicting fire weather and strengthening its plans to respond to extreme weather, such as moving equipment and boosting staffing, said the CDF's Tim Turner.

The rules for firefighting aircraft also have been changed to give pilots and support squads greater flexibility in deciding whether to take off in the final moments of daylight. State and federal fire officials were heavily criticized last year for following rules barring takeoffs 30 minutes before sunset in the early hours of the Cedar fire.

Extremely dry conditions persist in the county. On Monday, the U.S. Forest Service closed large portions of two Southern California forests to recreational use. There is a chance the entire Cleveland National Forest east of San Diego could be closed in the next month, said Rich Hawkins, the forest's chief firefighter.

Hispanic population growth brings minority closer to political power

BOISE (AP) — Hispanic activist Maria Mabbutt believes the day is rapidly approaching when the state's largest minority begins to flex some political muscle.

"Any time a minority population reaches 10 percent of a state's population, that's when attention especially is paid," the leader of the Idaho Latino Vote Project said. "We're very close — within the next five years."

New population figures released by the Census Bureau late Wednesday underscored Mabbutt's prediction. Idaho's Hispanic population accounted for nearly 9 percent of total population—nearly a full percentage point higher than when the 2000 census was taken.

The figures showed the Hispanic population statewide growing at 4.8 percent from mid-2002 to mid-2003 while total population was up just 1.7 percent, maintaining the trend since the 2000 census. After nearly doubling in the 1990s, the Hispanic population has grown three times faster, than the state as a whole since.

It totaled almost 120,000 last year.

"What it says is our community's growing and we're here to stay," said Leo Morales, who was politically active in his community while a student at Boise State University and is now with the Idaho Community Action Network.

"We're going to continue to call Idaho our home, and we're going to continue to call Idaho our home," Morales said.

"That stronger growth was seen in 37 of the state's 44 counties, and 18 of them saw the Hispanic concentration increase by a full percentage point or more."

Those included Canyon County in southwester Idaho, where Hispanics now make up 20 percent of the population, and the seven counties comprising south-central Idaho, where the Hispanic population is over 16 percent regionally and well above 20 percent in Minidoka, Jerome and Cassia counties.

"Idaho is really not prepared for that increase as far as services and resources," state Hispanic Affairs Commission Director Margie Gonzalez said, maintaining that the issue is economic as well as social.

"The schools are going to have to become more prepared," Gonzalez said, citing the high dropout rate among Hispanics.

And the businesses will have to become as well as social," she said. "The buying power is there."

In addition to the Hispanics counted by the census, Gonz-lez estimated as many as 10,000 more are in Idaho without documents but who still make money and spend it here.

"The where the business is as our population grows," she said. "It's going to make an impact, but it's up to the business owners to become educated."

Education and the economy are key issues for Hispanics, Mabbutt said, as is health care and it is at the local level that Hispanic political influence will first be felt. The timing depends on how long it takes to not just register Hispanics to vote in large numbers but to actually get them to the polls for every election from school board on up, she said.

Five years ago, only 10,000 of the 37,000 eligible Hispanic voters were registered. Today the number is up to an estimated 40,000-person Hispanic pool.

"So we're still not even at half what the potential is," she said.

But it's having some effect. At Hispanic county elections, the local level is where it can make a difference," Mabbutt said. "That is where it is significant."

Kimberly council discusses Halloween

By Margaret Jones Times-News correspondent

KIMBERLY — Residents of Kimberly will be glad to hear that current street projects under way should be completed this week.

Lines will be painted on the streets that have been resurfaced during Tuesday night's Kimberly City Council meeting. Maintenance Supervisor Rob Wright reported that eight streets had been seal coated this month and the striping should be completed this week if weather permits.

In another matter, Councilwoman Lee McKinlay said she had received a phone call from a resident asking if the City Council was going to proclaim Saturday, Oct. 30, as the night of children to Halloween trick-or-treat.

Sunday is the actual day of Halloween this year.

The question was raised as to what neighboring towns would be doing too.

Councilman Dave Overacre said Halloween should be left the way it is and the city shouldn't try to change it even though it's on a Sunday.

The council also discussed flu shots, vying to provide them to city employees again this season. Mayor Jim Soronen said he felt this would be a good way to cut down on "sick time."

Moderate quake strikes in California

ARVIN, Calif. (AP) — A moderate quake rattled Kern County on Wednesday, just hours after a pair of apparently unrelated aftershocks jolted another part of Central California. The latest tumbler apparently triggered a landslide on a state highway.

The magnitude-5.0 temblor struck at 3:54 p.m., 17 miles northwest of Arvin, according to a preliminary report from the U.S. Geological Survey. The quake, which was felt as far south as Los Angeles, was centered about 150 miles southeast of Parkfield in Monterey County, where a magnitude-6.0 quake scared residents on Tuesday.

"It's not an aftershock, it's a whole new earthquake," said Jill Perry, director of media relations at California Institute of Technology.

There have been over 500 aftershocks to the Parkfield quake. Two of the biggest, 5.0 and 4.5, shook the region around 10 a.m. Wednesday.

Perry expressed surprise that two substantial quakes would occur so close in time and location but apparently on different faults.

The rock slide closed at least one lane of State Highway 178 in a canyon 20 miles west of Lake Isabella, California Highway Patrol Officer Nathan Hunt said. A couple of vehicles were involved, but Hunt could not provide further details. A passenger in one of the vehicles requested an ambulance, he said.

Arvin, a rural community of 14,000 is 79 miles north of Los Angeles and lies at the eastern end of the White Wolf fault, which ruptured in a magnitude-7.5 quake in 1952.

"There was a roll for a couple of seconds, but it wasn't a strong jerk," said Lupe Vasquez, a dispatcher for the Arvin Police Department.

Bakersfield police spokeswoman Mary DeGee said dispatchers received about a dozen calls from people reporting the earthquake.

"It was obvious it was an earthquake. It was more of a jolt than the rolling sensation they felt yesterday," she said.

Montana officials will recommend a limited hunt

BILLINGS, Mont. (AP) — The Montana Department of Fish, Wildlife and Parks plans to recommend that the state, as early as this winter, allow limited hunting of bison that leave Yellowstone National Park, an agency official said Wednesday.

Pat Flowers, a regional supervisor, said the plan is similar to a draft proposal issued by the department in June. But it would allow hunting in areas near the park where state and federal officials do not see bison wandering bison under an existing bison management plan.

Flowers said this would help address the issue of fair chase.

A final environmental assessment and a decision signed by officials with the department and state Board of Livestock was expected to be released Thursday, he said. But the plan still must be approved by the Fish, Wildlife and Parks Commission, which is scheduled to discuss a hunt and possible season structure at its meeting next month in Helena, Flowers said.

Last year, state lawmakers passed a measure giving the department authority to establish a hunt. Bison have been hunted in the state before but

Wyoming county approves lights for some flags

JACKSON, Wyo. (AP) — Lighted U.S. and state flags will be allowed at most government buildings at night in Teton County, but not at private residences, county commissioners decided.

The Teton County Board of Commissioners changed county lighting regulations Tuesday to allow lighting of flag poles at "essential" governmental facilities, which include post offices, police and fire stations, and local, state and federal governmental administrative offices.

The former regulations prevented lighting of a flag pole at concerns about light pollution.

The commissioners unanimously approved the change, according to the Jackson Hole News-Guide.

Burley unveils its own centennial plans

By Chip Thompson
Times-News writer

BURLEY — The city came into being when the articles of incorporation were signed on April 10, 1905. But Burley has planned an entire year of events to celebrate its 100th birthday.

The Burley Centennial Committee held a press conference Wednesday to unveil the calendar of events, at least one each month, that includes historical re-enactments, concerts, tours, a go-cart grand prix and fire-works.

"It should be a great celebration for the area and everyone who loves a celebration," Sen. Denton-Darrington, R-Deer, said following the announcement. Celebrations will kick off Jan. 1 with a first-night family celebration including games, music, food and other festivities, committee Chairman Doug Manning said.

"We learned a little bit from Twin Falls, their first night was New Year's Eve," Manning said. "It was suggested to do New Year's Day because many other cities have regular activities they attend on New Year's Eve."

While the city was actually founded on April 10, in 2005 that date is a Sunday so the committee is scheduling to celebrate the day before, Manning said. A re-enactment of the incorporation of the city will be staged as well as an old West shoot-out and train rides through Burley. A massive cleanup day is scheduled for April 30 with family, church and school groups pitching in to make the town look its best in anticipation of visitors coming to attend summer events.

"We're looking to find events that are not just fun to watch, but will bring people to town," Manning said.

Heritage Day on May 7 will celebrate the home cultures of all those who make up the community and residents will be asked to dress in traditional clothing.

The day will conclude with the placement of American flags in Freedom Park in what's called a healing field of flags. Co-Chairwoman Linda Petersen said. The large flags will be available for $25 each and a tag can be attached to each flag honoring a family member or friend. At the conclusion of the event buyers can take their flags home with them, Petersen said.

A 100-mile bicycle ride is planned but those wishing to ride shorter distances can enter or leave the ride at any point. The route consists of two different 50-mile loops and will pass through the area twice. Community Development Director Brian Tibbets said. The city will be lit and the renovated Centennial Park in front of City Hall will be dedicated June 4. The park is set to include a scaled version of an irrigation system, a center piece fountain and pathways to make the existing World War II Memorial more accessible.

The official Centennial Week will be held July 9-16 and include a grand prix go-cart race through town, a city barbecue, street dance, street fair and a motorcycle race.

A Celebration of Faith concert is scheduled for Nov. 6 to give various area churches the opportunity to share their faith through music.

"When a town settles usually saloons and churches are the first things to come up," Petersen said, explaining the importance of recognizing the role of religion in the development of the city.

As yet, no plans have been announced for a salute to saloons and churches as the first things to come up."

The last night celebration is scheduled for Dec. 31 when the lights will be turned off and the year-long bash concluded, Manning said.

The committee plans to establish an office at 1256 Overland Ave. that will be staffed with volunteers with information available and event tickets and commemorative merchandise such as calendars, apparel and flags for sale.

The Cassia County Museum has published a 2005 calendar with historic photos of Burley and the centennial dates already printed on it. Historical Committee Co-Chairwoman Valerie Bowen said.

Activities and projects include a centennial quilt, poetry contest, local recipe book and walking tours of the city highlighting historic buildings with photographs of their original state.

Task force picks dates for Jerome's centennial

By Dixie Thomas Reale
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — The Jerome Centennial Task Force, a group made up of more than 20 business people, city employees and community representative organizations, met for the second time on Wednesday to continue planning the city's upcoming centennial celebration.

Task force members chose to begin the year-long celebration on Oct. 1, 2006, with it ending Sept. 30, 2007.

That's because the first city lots were not put up for sale until Sept. 30, 1907. A day later, titles to the homesteads in the surrounding areas of Jerome were drawn.

The beginning and end of the centennial year celebration will honor both those dates.

The group began to differentiate their roles and duties and decided to appoint a five-to-six member executive committee to direct the centennial activities. Linda Hadam, a Jerome Chamber of Commerce member representing Washington Federal Bank, was appointed secretary-treasurer of the executive committee.

Several other potential board members were suggested but since those members were not present their appointments were delayed until they could be contacted.

Chamber Director Elizabeth Thomas stressed that the chamber and city will not be in charge of the centennial celebration, but that it will be a community-sponsored event.

Darci Bobrowski, a Jerome City Councilwoman, and groups to plan events for each month of the celebration.

Task force members said the year's activities should feature two or three large celebrations, including New Year's Eve, Independence Day and Founder's Day in September — plus several smaller monthly events.

City Councilman Rob Lundgren suggested looking at other cities' centennial celebrations to get ideas on how they recruited sponsors and collected pledges.

Many ideas were suggested during Wednesday's meeting, including:

- Incorporate a centennial theme into all events held during the year.

- Feature an oldest citizen in Jerome contest.

- Host a dinner honoring all the past citizens of the year.

- Create a centennial Web site.

- Expand live history days during the centennial year and coordinate activities between the city and the Idaho Farm and Ranch Museum.

Several task force members said they'd like to see a centennial fountain built in one of the parks to celebrate the coming year, including the south central Idaho desert.

Bricks or pavers could be sold to be placed around the fountain to help pay for centennial activities.

A centennial statue contest, in which participants would create designs defining Jerome, could be held with the winning design being incorporated into the fountain or the area around it, task force members said.

The next meeting of the task force will be on Oct. 14 at the El Saborero restaurant, 143 Main Ave. E., Jerome.

Workshops will address community injustice

By Lorraine Cavenar

TWIN FALLS — When more than half the youth in the Twin Falls detention center are there because of a methamphetamine-related incident, the community needs to step up to the plate, says 5th District Magistrate Judge John Varin.

Varin, who has been assigned to the juveniles in Twin Falls, Jerome, Goodland, Blaine and Camas counties, is working on ways to alleviate the problem.

"We are really being hampered by the meth problem," he said. "It's getting to the point where it is almost overwhelming."

Varin hopes three community workshops on the balanced and restorative justice model can help.

On Wednesday, a typical day, Varin said that 10 out of 19 youths in the juvenile detention center in Twin Falls were there because of meth-related incidents and many are young women.

"Meth can only be solved by the community becoming extremely active," he said.

Many Magic Valley communities are already working toward using the model in their justice systems.

Lorraine Cavenar-Ingram.

and it looks for multiple ways to repair that harm and give individuals the opportunity for re-assimilation in their communities.

One of those opportunities involves victim/offender mediation and mediations between disputing parties/entities, Oxarango-Ingram said.

This model also helps the community find ways to help prevent future crime by addressing early childhood needs, support strengthening families, education, after-school options and economic opportunities.

"These are all things that affect the health and safety of our neighborhoods," she said.

Lincoln County has already begun to explore the implementation of programs that adhere to the philosophy of balanced and restorative justice. In three well-attended community forums, community members have identified the strengths and threats they see in their communities and brainstormed ways to address those threats.

Oxarango-Ingram encourages community members to attend the workshops.

The main speaker is Dennis Maloney, president of Community Justice Associates, who has more than 30 years of experience in corrections, according to the group's website.

Maloney led a community justice department in Deschutes County, Ore., for 16 years.

Nearly 30 states — including Idaho — have revamped their juvenile justice systems based on the balanced approach to juvenile justice.

I-84 lanes will reopen near Glenns Ferry

GLENN'S FERRY — The west-bound lanes of Interstate 84 between Glenns Ferry and King Hill are scheduled to reopen this morning, the Idaho Transportation Department announced. Access will be restored to the Paradise Valley on and off-ramps at Exit 125 near Glenns Ferry.

"Thanks to the hard work of ITD and contractor crews, we're opening these lanes earlier than expected," said Kimbol Allen, project manager for the transportation department. "We appreciate the patience of motorists who traveled through this project during construction."

Workers will continue to work in the median to remove cross-over ramps and do landscaping and minor clean-up.

The westbound lanes of the nine-mile stretch of interstate have been closed since March for pavement reconstruction because the roadway was cracked and deteriorated.

This project yields a safer, smoother ride for motorists, the transportation department said. A mirror image of this project was completed in 2003 when crews made repairs to the east-bound lanes along the same stretch of interstate.

"There are a number of pieces of information we need," Ogle said.

Ogle emphasized two areas in which the EPA wants to see improvement. The agency would like to see an inventory system implemented that can be used to better target compliance. Secondly, the agency requested the development of an enforcement response policy.

The EPA, Ogle said, needs help from the ISA and Idaho Cattlemen's Alliance in finding accurate data. "We're kind of on the fence," Ogle said. "We're waiting."

Woman drives rental car into terminal

BOISE — A woman who was returning a rented minivan at the Boise Airport drove it through the terminal on Tuesday.

A "confused senior citizen" whose name and age were not released, followed an outside "terminal access" sign Tuesday as she bumped the vehicle through a set of automatic-opening double-doors on the west end airport spokeswoman Larissa Stouffer through the terminal, past the baggage claim area before coming to a stop.

"The lucky thing is she didn't hit anything," Stouffer said.

There was no damage to the terminal building, but one was hurt and the out-of-town woman, who departed on a flight later Tuesday morning, was not cited.

Stouffer said the airport has had plans to install barriers to block the door.

Director of vehicle group resigns after citation

POCATELLO — The executive director of the Blue Ribbon Coalition has resigned, five weeks after being issued a citation for outlining without a license.

In a letter to supporters posted on the coalition's Internet Web site, Bill Dart said his resignation was effective on Sept. 24 and was submitted after meeting with coalition board members last week.

Although he had asked the board to withhold judgment on his ability to remain director until after the citation was resolved, Dart said there was agreement that his resignation would be in everyone's best interest.

Guard assembles unit to fight domestic terrorism

BOISE — Although the Idaho National Guard has more than 1,600 soldiers training in Texas for deployment in Iraq later this year, a small unit is staying behind to protect the homeland.

The newly formed Quick Reaction Force is made up of 50 Air and Army National Guard soldiers, primarily from the Boise area, with diverse backgrounds and skills, said Guard spokesman Lt. Col. Tim Marsano.

The unit, headquartered at Gowen Field, becomes operational Friday.

Every state has been asked to assemble small teams designated for rapid deployment to assist other agencies in handling domestic terrorism attacks or threats, officials said. Idaho's unit can assist law enforcement or other agencies with site security, infrastructure protection, roadblocks or checkpoints.

The unit also will tackle the traditional Guard function of responding to floods or other emergencies.

Young woman found dead by co-workers

POCATELLO — Police are investigating the death of a young woman who was found dead by her co-workers Tuesday as a possible homicide.

The body of Nori A. Jones was discovered at her home after she failed to arrive for work at the state's Job Service, authorities said. She was in her early 20s and lived alone in a small house in a rural area.

Bannock County Coroner Jim Allen said an autopsy will be conducted Thursday.

BABY SAFETY

Baby Safety Begins With a Security Gate for Your Child

(MS) - Babyproofing your home is necessary to keep your child safe from potential accidents, and installing safety gates is no exception. They confine your baby to a specific area and prevent him or her from wandering off into potentially dangerous locations. Install safety gates in areas that you want to keep off-limits to your baby, such as the top and bottom of stairs or between rooms. Install them when your baby is old enough to crawl - usually between 6 to 10 months of age.

There are two types of safety gates available - pressure-mounted and wall-mounted (also known as hardware-mounted). Since both are available with a variety of features, shopping for one can be quite confusing. The type you choose should be determined by where and how the gate will be used and your personal preferences.

For instance, according to Child-safety-gates.com, only wall-mounted gates should be used on stairways because of their strength and durability, while pressure-mounted gates are better in hallways or between doorways, provided they are placed between solid wood constructions.

Since stairs are usually placed next to hollow walls in most homes, don't use pressure-mounted gates in stairways. The pressure from the gate will create a dent in the wall, which can dangerously loosen the pressure fit.

"Pressure-mounted - Installed in just a few minutes, these safety gates require no holes, hardware or special tools.

"Wall-mounted (or hardware-mounted) - This type of safety gate is considered safer than pressure gate models because it is permanently mounted into the wall with screws, providing maximum strength and protection.

St. Helens may see small eruption

SEATTLE Wash. (AP)—Mount St. Helens began erupting more intensely Wednesday, prompting scientists to warn that a small or moderate eruption could happen in the next few days.

Earthquakes ranging from magnitude 2 to 2.5 were coming about four times a minute, possibly weakening the lava dome in the crater of the 8,364-foot mountain, the U.S. Geological Survey said.

Scientists did not expect anything like the mountain's devastating eruption in 1980, which killed 57 people and costed towns 250 miles away with ash. But a small or moderate blast could cost an area three miles around the volcano's crater with ash and rock, scientists said.

Few people live near the mountain, which is surrounded by a national forest. The closest structure is the Johnston Ridge Observatory, about five miles from the crater.

The Geological Survey raised the mountain's eruption advisory from Level 2 to Level 3 out of a possible 4 on Wednesday, prompting officials to begin notifying various state and federal agencies of a possible eruption. The USGS also has asked the National Weather Service to be ready to track an ash plume with its radar system.

In addition, scientists called off a plan, to have two researchers study water rushing from the crater's north face for signs of magma. A plane was still able to fly over the crater Wednesday to collect gas samples.

"An aircraft can move the hell out of the way fast," said Jeff Wynn, the chief scientist at the survey's Cascade Volcano Observatory. "We don't want anyone in there on foot."

The USGS has been monitoring St. Helens closely since last Thursday when swarms of tiny earthquakes were first recorded. On Sunday, scientists issued a notice of volcanic unrest, closing the crater.

Scientists said they believe the seismic activity is being caused by pressure from a reservoir of molten rock a little more than a mile below the crater. That magma apparently rose from a depth of about six miles in 1998, but never reached the surface, Wynn said.

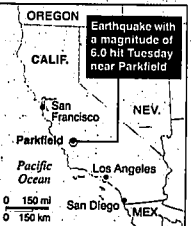

The main crater and lava dome of Mount St. Helens are shown from the air Tuesday.

Aftershocks rattle city day after strong quake

PARKFIELD, Calif. (AP)—Two aftershocks measuring magnitude 5.0 and 4.5 hit Parkfield Wednesday morning, making them among the strongest of more than 500 aftershocks rattling the area where a 6.0 earthquake occurred a day earlier.

The earthquake and its aftershocks have not caused any major damage or injuries, but they could bring new attention to researchers who hope intense scrutiny of the state's earthquake capital may help predict future tremors.

SOURCES: Associated Press; USGS AP

The aftershocks were centered five miles northwest of Parkfield at 10:10 a.m. and 10:12 a.m. Since the 6.0 quake at 10:15 a.m. Tuesday, there have been six aftershocks of 4.0 or greater.

Harry Miller, who grows 170 acres of wine grapes alongside the San Andreas fault, was checking on the cases of wine that were tipped over in Tuesday's earthquake, trying to assess his loss, when aftershocks hit Wednesday.

His home is near Parkfield, about 150 yards from the San Andreas fault, but Miller said the building and other buildings on the farm seem to have withstood the shaking.

His water lines were broken in yesterday's quake, he said, but he's been able to take care of that already.

"It doesn't really appear any buildings are really damaged that much," he said. "It just takes time to sort through these things."

Wednesday's earthquake hit hard, he said, but since "anything that wasn't bolted to the wall was already on the ground," he said, it didn't do much to the farm.

Parkfield, population 37, is subject to small, unrelenting shocks all the time. Tremors are so prevalent that the USGS named its long-term earthquake research project the Parkfield Experiment. A major quake in the same area killed two people last year.

Dozens of sensors dot the remote, sparsely populated region. Drilling is underway there to go 1.4 miles down into the bowels of the 800-mile-long fault that forms the boundary between immense geological plates that grind and produce ground movement.

Visitors look at the painting 'Las dos Fridas' during a visit to the Blue House museum in Mexico City. Frida Kahlo was born and lived there until 1954. Fifty years after Kahlo's death her work is only getting more popular.

FIFTY YEARS AFTER FRIDA KAHLO'S DEATH

Mythic figure's fame keeps growing

By Fiona Smith
Associated Press Writer

MEXICO CITY — Fifty years after Frida Kahlo's death, her very private, raw and vulnerable work is only getting more popular.

During her life, Kahlo had already become a mythic figure in her own country — famous for her marriage to Mexican muralist Diego Rivera, as well as her communist ideals and native Mexican dress and jewelry. But in recent years Kahlo's art has been sought by top museums worldwide and her dress has inspired fashion designers. Her bohemian lifestyle — that crossed the paths of many famous artists, writers and personalities — has been the subject of plays as well as the 2002 film "Frida," starring Salma Hayek.

The 50th anniversary of her death on July 13, 1954 was marked with a flurry of exhibitions, events and books in her birthplace, Mexico City. Many of the piercing self-portraits Kahlo was famous for are going on display at her home, the Blue House, so named for the indigo color she painted it. Through these self-portraits Kahlo dealt with her crippling bus accident, her inability to have children and her stormy marriage to Rivera.

It was Rivera who had Kahlo's home turned into a museum in 1958, and it is now one of the most-visited museums in Mexico. Each year, more than 325,000 people come to the Mexico City suburb of Coyoacan to tour the house, lush gardens and the bedroom where Kahlo often painted and where she died at 47.

The gift shop offers iconography featuring Kahlo's images, as well as mouse pads and cigarette holders. The public trust that controls the museum just finished a yearlong $130,000 restoration of the Blue House, replacing windows, fixing fountains and restoring the blue exterior to its original brightness.

The museum has also begun cataloging more than 26,000 letters and other documents left in the house when it was turned over to the trust. The archive of hitherto unseen material, will eventually be open to the public.

In Mexico, Kahlo appears to have gained equal stature with the country's heroes. Street stalls sell Kahlo reproductions, photographs and T-shirts alongside souvenirs of Pancho Villa and Emiliano Zapata.

"You can see images being seen in the markets that associate Frida with the Virgin of Guadalupe," said Hilda Trujillo, coordinator of the Frida Kahlo Museum. "The idea of pain and suffering that's present in Catholicism, they associate with Frida."

Many of Kahlo's writings and paintings deal with the effects of a near-fatal accident at 18, when a bus she was riding was hit by a trolley car, breaking bones throughout her body and skewering her on a metal pole.

It was while bedridden for months that she began painting. Kahlo underwent more than 30 operations throughout her life and remained in constant pain. At 22, she married Rivera, 20 years her senior. The couple hosted a stream of famous guests from the United States and Europe, and both had numerous affairs. Perhaps the most famous of Kahlo's trysts was with exiled communist Leon Trotsky.

She was one of the few liberal women of that time, who had a career, lived independently, said what she thought; who acted how she liked and who was liberated from social constraints," said Carlos Phillips, director of the Frida Kahlo Museum.

But Rivera's constant infidelity, including an affair with Kahlo's sister, led Kahlo to famously say that she had suffered two accidents in her life: the trolley car crash and Rivera.

There is something particularly attractive to other Mexicans about the way Kahlo loved life despite her constant pain, according to Mexico City resident Roberto Munoz.

"Mexicans don't lead what you would call an easy life, so in a certain way we see that tragedy reflected in her paintings," Munoz said, sitting in a plaza in Coyoacan. "Although we don't suffer the same exact problems, we can see that she was able to overcome hers... and it gives us pride that people in other countries know her and identify with her."

T.F. music group dreams of career in Latin hip-hop

By Levj Aspoytia
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — It's probably the dream of many young people to grow up and be recognized as an up and coming star in the music industry. Five Magic Valley men are doing everything possible to make that dream become a reality with their group, Untouchable.

"We perform Latin hip-hop," Andres Melendez said. "It is a lot of boys' dreams to be rappers growing up. We just have a chance here to make it come true."

For almost one year, Joe Navarez, Alberto Carmona, Hector Navarez Jr., Ricardo Rodriguez and Melendez, who are all in their early 20s, have worked together. All five were born and raised in Twin Falls.

"We all grew up together," Rodriguez said. "This is something we definitely love to do."

With a makeshift studio at Navarez's house, the group gets together three or four nights a week to rehearse for almost five hours. They have their songs recorded in Boise.

"Every song we write is something that comes from our heart," Rodriguez said.

"We love to do this," Navarez added. "We are always making sure to mention Twin Falls or Magic Valley in our songs."

Untouchable has been moving along in 2004. The group has written about eight songs and more continue to come. People within the music industry have noticed and sold them more beats to use with their lyrics, they say. Beats are the melodies that are playing in the rap songs.

The local group, Untouchable, plans to release an album. Members include Hector Navarez Jr., Alberto Carmona, Joe Navarez, Andres Melendez and Ricardo Rodriguez.

"Somebody heard what we did with one of their beats and he turned around and sold us this 'beater beat,'" Rodriguez said. "The guy told us that this beat was created just with us in his mind."

So far this year, the group has performed twice at Boise as the opening act for Brown Ecstasy and Texas T and at the Hispanic Heritage Fiesta this summer at the Twin Falls City Park. They, say their fan base is growing.

The group members plan to have about 12 or 13 songs ready for an album, which likely will have a parental advisory warning label for sparingly used foul language.

They also hope to organize a live performance with other hip-hop artists from Idaho. Navarez predicts it will be the largest hip-hop event Twin Falls would ever see.

"Our ultimate goal is the planet," Rodriguez said. "That is definitely the goal, and it is realistic. Why not? We have what it takes to get there."

“ Every song we write is something that comes from our heart. ”

The Twin Falls High School service flag files on Shoshone Street in 1915 or 1916. In the background are the county courthouse and the old high school, which no longer stands.

Californian Marian Griggs Lemke told us in July that celebrations of Twin Falls' 100th birthday — and newspaper coverage of the centennial — have revived her interest in the city where she graduated from high school in 1943.

"My sister's been sending me all the clippings. It's amazing," Lemke told us, while visiting Twin Falls for an alumni gathering.

We're pleased at the thought that our centennial features have been something like a homecoming for former Twin Falls folks scattered elsewhere around the globe. Even for those who haven't visited the city in person for years.

As Twin Falls High School prepares for its homecoming football game and tailgate party this week — a homecoming in the more traditional sense — we thought it might be a fine day to share some old school photographs. These are some of the last school-related images in our file of historical photographs submitted by our readers this year.

Wherever you live, may these photos bring you home.

Medical Discoveries finishes financing

TWIN FALLS — Medical Discoveries Inc. said Wednesday that it recently completed $500,000 in equity financing through subscriptions of restricted common stock by private investors. These investment proceeds help support the completion of pre-clinical testing and CMC (Chemistry, Manufacturing and Control) milestones, in preparation for the company's initial New Drug applications to be submitted soon to the U.S. Food and Drug Administration," said Judy M. Robinett of Twin Falls, president and chief executive. Forged in 1991, Medical Discoveries is a publicly traded biopharmaceutical research company engaged in development of its patented anti-infective technology, which is meant to target human immunodeficiency virus and cystic fibrosis.

Coeur mine gives up hostile takeover bid

COEUR D'ALENE — Coeur d'Alene Mines Corp. has conceded defeat in its hostile takeover bid of Wheaton River Minerals Ltd. of British Columbia. Chairman Dennis Wheeler said the company would allow an offer for outstanding stock in the gold company to expire today without further adjustment. "Further increasing the consideration payable under the present offer terms would not be in the best interest of our Coeur shareholders," Wheeler said in a statement. The Idaho company needed two-thirds of Wheaton River stock to take the company over. It indefinitely postponed a special shareholders meeting set for today to consider the Wheaton River deal.

Although the Canadian government certified the offer and an independent firm recommended the deal to Wheaton River shareholders, Wheaton River executives vigorously fought the acquisition. The board cited Coeur's history of losses and not meeting its obligations and the fact that its debt-financing plan would inhibit future growth and undermine cash flow. During the first half of 2004, Coeur d'Alene Mines reported a loss of $7.9 million, or three cents per share of common stock, on revenues of $56.1 million. "Coeur will continue with its plans to grow shareholder value," Wheeler said. "We remain focused on reducing costs at our existing operations and pursuing both internal and select external growth opportunities." He said the company would make construction decisions by itself and on the Kenai gold mine in Alaska and the San Bartolome silver project in Bolivia.

Idaho battles potato image

Tourism council's marketing plan parcels out $2.8M for 2004-05

By Susan Bailey The Wood River Journal SUN VALLEY — Despite fewer license plates reading "Famous Potatoes," Idaho is still battling the potato image, and now more strenuously than in efforts to promote tourism. According to SRHS Lifestyle Marketing Analyst, more than half of respondents in a national poll associated Idaho with potatoes. Worse, most of the rest had no impression of the state at all. "We're fighting an uphill battle," said Carol Waller, executive director of the Sun Valley-Ketchum Chamber and Visitor Center. Waller and other representatives of the Idaho tourism industry, as well as directors of various chambers of commerce, talked strategy this week during the Idaho Tourism Council's meeting at Sun Valley Inn. Carl Wilgus of Idaho Commerce & Labor said Idaho ranks 42nd in state funding for tourism marketing, with a total of $5.5 million across Idaho, compared with the $30 million budget of Las Vegas. "It's a competitive war out there," said everything else in life," said Wilgus. "It's cut or be cut."

In order to compete, Idaho watches its spending carefully and checks the per capita effectiveness of marketing to other states and cities. According to research tabulated by the marketing firm hired by the state, Seattle, Salt Lake City and Spokane, Wash., are the best markets for Idaho, although the largest number of visitors actually hail from California. Bill Drake of CS Drake Advertising unveiled a $2.8 million tourism marketing plan for the whole state beginning winter 2004-05.

"Promoting winter recreation continues to be a key marketing objective," Drake said. He said Idaho has an advantage over many Western states because of high-quality snow. Drake said magazine and Internet advertising brings the highest returns for Idaho and will remain the focus for the year. National surveys show 63 percent of travelers use the Internet, with that percentage expected to rise sharply in the next few years. Accordingly, the state successfully shifted to these marketing vehicles in the 2002-03 fiscal year. Idaho Commerce & Labor's online promotions include sponsorship. Please see TOURISM, Page D3

Land lures those with homesteading spirit

Rural prices can't be beat

The Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. — Looking out at 500 acres of land is awe-inspiring. But for Danielle Fitzpatrick, it means something more. Sitting on the side of a hill in New Mexico, the view leaves the Oakland resident with a feeling of "total exhale."

It's an emotion that comes from owning a good chunk of American land, something that connects her to the homesteaders and pioneers of the past. "I feel like something I've been looking for all these years has been fulfilled," she said. "I had a feeling of completion after I bought that property — like I could stop looking for my spot on Earth now."

Fitzpatrick, who is in her 50s and has made her living in the alternative health field as a massage and nutritional counselor, is among Californians who have realized their lifelong dreams of buying land in rural America, often at prices far lower than in California. "People want to get out of the cities. They want to get away from the crime, the pollution, the noise and the light pollution," that prevents them from seeing the stars at night, said Al Miller, Miller is owner and operator of www.english.net, which lists rural land across the country.

Experts say that although buying land in a peaceful rural setting can be a dream, it can also have pitfalls. "People need to have in mind some vision of what they're looking for and make sure what they're buying is good quality property," said Charles Gilliland, a research economist with the Real Estate Center at Texas A&M's Mays Business School. "Not only is an appraisal a good idea, but you might also want someone helping you — a broker or an agricultural consultant or farm manager," Gilliland said. Appraisers can tell you what land is actually worth. But sometimes the process is cost prohibitive. Experts suggest you call local real estate agents and find out what similar property is going for in your area of interest.

The McCookran family of Oakland, Calif. — Susan, left, Jerome and son Cairo, 15, right, go through some snapshots of their new vacation home in the high desert of New Mexico, Thursday in Oakland, Susan McCookran and her family purchased 30 acres near Magdalena, N.M., from New Mexico Land three years ago for $38,000.

"Buyers also need to check the zoning of the land they're considering. Some counties prohibit mobile homes on land, while other areas have no building codes, allowing people to just throw up a board and call it a house. Another "must-have," experts say, is title insurance, which insures that you own the property. During this process, you make sure you can access the property. Not every area has public roads. Some locations require you to go through "seasons" or "rites of way" through a neighbor's property.

Compared to California's prices, the land can often be very inexpensive. But prices for rural land have been going up in the past several years, driven by low interest rates and a stock market that has failed to produce good returns on investment. "The primary driver in the national market has been people purchasing land for getaways or recreational purposes, such as hunting, fishing and bird watching. In Texas, prices jumped 13 percent in 2003, driven largely by the recreational market, with hunting and fishing accounting for 68 percent of buyers' motives, according to the Real Estate Center at Texas A&M University.

Miller has been demanding particularly strong for land in Florida, Arizona and Colorado, and prices have been rising accordingly. He said that buying land in any of those areas would be a good investment. Other buyers are couples nearing retirement age, looking to get a head start on their future homes.

"For some people, the motivation is to 'get off the grid' and cut off connection to power lines and phone lines, opting for solar power and cell phones instead. In areas near Flagstaff, Ariz., people can buy land that has no water system and on which a well cannot be dug. Residents head miles outside their homes to "water haul areas," where they fill up their water supply for the week. Forty-acre parcels in these areas used to sell for $5,000 but are now selling for $50,000, Miller said. Because Arizona and Colorado are often the first destinations for Californians looking to buy rural land, places like New Mexico offer cheaper options. Susan McCookran, a 50-year-old Oakland pre-school teacher, and her family purchased 30 acres near Magdalena, N.M. — outside Albuquerque — from New Mexico Land three years ago for $38,000.

"The purchase of the land was less than what some cars cost," she said. Their "straw bale" house will rely on solar paneling for energy. The family also is initially opting not to drill a well, and will instead rely on hauling their water and storing it in a holding tank. "A septic tank was installed at a cost of $8,500."

The total cost to build a house on the land will probably be about $50,000, she said, with the family's labor helping cut down the price. "It's pretty putting sweat equity in, which cuts the price down," she said. "It shows ordinary people that you can do this."

State guards unclaimed property

The Times-News

RUPERT — The state is safeguarding unclaimed property for hundreds of people and businesses whose last known addresses are in Magic Valley.

The Idaho State Tax Commission is looking for those folks, and hoping they'll claim the property. It's stuff for which Idaho businesses have been unable to find the rightful owners, such as payroll checks, contents of safe deposit boxes, tax refunds, stock dividends, workers' compensation benefits and the like.

The Idaho Legislature in 1997 changed state law governing unclaimed property. Now after property that's safeguarded by the tax commission remains unclaimed for 10 years, it will transfer to state ownership and be deposited in Idaho's general fund. The first time that will happen is 2007. Before the 1997 law, the tax commission held unclaimed property for its rightful owners in perpetuity. The Times-News on Thursdays prints names of a sampling of unclaimed property owners whose last known addresses are in Magic Valley communities. Today's list is from Jerome, Ketchum, Malta, Minidoka, Rupert and Shoshone. The tax commission sends each person or business listed today — or the person's heir — owns unclaimed property worth more than $75.

Wal-Mart appeals ruling on overtime for pharmacists

The Associated Press

DENVER — A ruling that could cost Wal-Mart millions of dollars in overtime pay should be reconsidered because the judge didn't hear all the evidence, attorneys for the retailer said today in an appeals court Wednesday.

Wal-Mart — whose Magic Valley stores are in Burley and Jerome — asked the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals to order a new hearing in the case after a federal judge said the company had violated the law by failing to pay overtime to pharmacists.

Wal-Mart attorney Steve Merker told a three-judge panel on the 10th Circuit that the trial judge should have heard evidence about U.S. Department of Labor rulings that companies can adjust salaried employees' pay if economic conditions warrant. The district court was wrong, Merker told the judges.

Gerard Bader Jr., an attorney for 900 pharmacists who have been challenging the company's overtime rules since 1995, said there was no need for a hearing because the Labor Department has ruled that companies cannot arbitrarily change salaries for recurring events, such as seasonal declines in business during the off-season in Florida.

"When Wal-Mart opens a store in Florida, they have to know there are fewer people there in the summer than there are in the winter," Bader told the panel.

Denver federal court Judge Zia Weinshtien ruled in 1999 that Wal-Mart violated federal law by classifying pharmacists as salaried employees who were ineligible for overtime, instead of hourly workers who are entitled to time-and-a-half pay for overtime.

Estimates for the cost of unpaid overtime for the pharmacists have ranged up to $140 million. The class-action lawsuit was initially brought in 1995 by former Wal-Mart pharmacist Jerry Archuleta of Alamosa and two other southern Colorado pharmacists.

Banks, retailers take swipes at each other

The Baltimore Sun

It's no mistake that the bank-card swipe device at Wal-Mart Stores Inc. asks customers first to enter their secret personal identification number — their PIN — to begin a debit purchase.

Nor is it a coincidence that Wachovia Corp., the United States' fourth-largest bank, recently launched a promotion for customers to earn discounts on various products purchased with one of the bank's "check cards" provided that they sign for their purchases rather than use a PIN.

Although many shoppers don't realize it, they are in the middle of an invisible tug-of-war between credit card companies and major retailers in an increasingly cashless society. Whether a customer uses his bank-issued card by signing a PIN code or a signature affects the size of the accompanying fee the merchant — and sometimes the customer — must decide how to use their cards, shoppers collectively decide the fate of billions of dollars in frequent purchases.

"We're definitely seeing some steering from both sides," said Gail Hillebrand, a senior attorney with Consumers Union, a nonprofit consumer advocacy group. "It's hard to tell if it's more from the banks or the retailers."

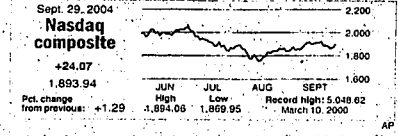

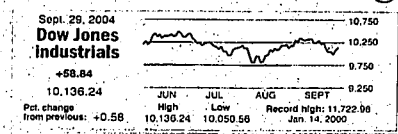

Electronic payments surpassed the use of cash and checks for the first time last year, according to a study by the American Bankers Association, a Washington trade group, and Boston-based Dowe Consulting. Cash and checks accounted for 47 percent of consumer purchases in 2003, down from 51 percent in 2001. Just five years ago, cash and checks still accounted for 57 percent of purchases, the study found.

Stocks rise on latest GDP reading Micron posts profitable quarter

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks edged their gains into a second day Wednesday as investors digested a jump in the second-quarter gross domestic product...

Investors saw the Commerce Department report, which said the nation's GDP grew 1.3 percent from April to June, as fairly good news, with a few caveats. While the GDP figure was revised upward from a previous estimate of 2.4 percent, it still marked the slowest period of economic growth since the first quarter of 2003.

Consumer spending, however, grew at an annual rate of just 1.6 percent in the second quarter, the lowest level in three years. Economists fear unemployment will rise as a result of which topped $50 per barrel Tuesday, could further hamper consumer spending.

"The economy seems to be on a decent growth path, but it's being held back by high energy prices, and that's likely to keep the stock market in this trading range that we've been in over the past eight or nine months now," said Ken Tower, chief market strategist for Schwab's CyberTrader.

The Dow Jones Industrial average finished up 58.84, or 0.6 percent, to 10,136.24, adding to an 88-point gain Tuesday. The Standard & Poor's 500 index rose 4.74, or 0.4 percent, to 1,114.00.

The Nasdaq surged 24.07, or 1.34 percent, to 1,893.94, partly on enthusiasm about the potential acquisition of travel site Orbitz Inc.

Buying in the chip sector, oversold after weeks of downturns and third-quarter warnings, also buoyed tech stocks. The Philadelphia Semiconductor index was up 1.9 percent.

"Basically we're seeing some quarter-end bargain hunting for semiconductor companies on the abnormal performance on the quarter for stocks like Intel," said David Hegarty, head trader at Commodity Securities. "I'm a little bit cautious, but I remain positive going into the end of the year."

In an attempt to tap into Russia's vast oil reserves, U.S. giant ConocoPhillips took a $1.99 billion, 7.6 percent stake in Lukoil, the world's second-largest oil company in terms of reserves. ConocoPhillips fell $9.14 to $61.57.

Aerospace manufacturer Boeing Co. dropped $1.31 to $51.01 after Bank of America downgraded the stock to "neutral" from "buy," citing potential weaknesses in the international aircraft market.

Telecommunications equipment maker Agere Systems Inc. declined 8 cents to $1.06 after saying it would lay off 500 employees in an attempt to offset declining revenues.

Oil prices rose to a record high of $59.19 per barrel on Tuesday, adding to a 78-cent gain Monday. Analysts expect a further rise in oil prices for a downside breakout, any number of things are possible, including an actual oil shortage, which we thinkfully don't have right now."

BOISE (AP) — Higher prices and increased production at Micron Technology Inc. a second straight profitable quarter this summer, but earnings fell short of Wall Street estimates.

The Boise-based computer chip maker on Tuesday reported a net income of $91 million, or 14 cents per share of common stock, on revenue of $1.2 billion, compared to a net loss of $123 million, or 20 cents a share, on revenue of $888.5 million.

Wall Street analysts surveyed by Thomson First Call had expected earnings of 21 cents a share, or $2.1 million, in revenue.

It was the first time in more than three years that the company has posted back-to-back quarterly profits.

Micron also reported a profit for the year of $157.2 million, or 24 cents a share, on revenue of $4.4 billion. That compared with a record loss of nearly $1.3 billion, or $2.1 per share, on revenue of $3.1 billion.

Temporary managers may ask for more pay

Question: My boss will be going on maternity leave at the end of November. I have just found out that I will be assuming her role as director of our unit until she returns in April or May. I am second in command in our department but am not compensated as nor viewed as management. Do you think it is reasonable to expect a pay raise while I am asked to assume a management role? And how do I ask for it?

Answer: Rebecca Hastings, who answers workplace questions for the Society for Human Resource Management in Alexandria, Va., said "there's no legal requirement that the temporary boss be paid more, but at the same time "it's not unreasonable to expect it."

She said the sum-to-be temporary director should find out what the company has done in the past when a subordinate has assumed expanded temporary authority.

She also said that companies to allocate duties to fill a vacancy, Hastings said. "From an ethical standpoint, it's appropriate for the company to pay more," and may even be dictated by a union contract.

Once this manager knows what has been done in the past, Hastings said, she can say to management: "I am happy to take on this new role. May I assume my pay will be temporarily adjusted to reflect the additional duties while I'm acting in this capacity?"

White Hastings said, she thinks this is generally a safe approach, she noted that some companies may view such a pay request as a sign that someone is not a team player. Hastings said this manager may want to consider the firm's policies before making the pay-increase request. One consideration, Hastings said, is that the pregnant supervisor might not return to work and then this second-in-command might be in line for the full-time promotion, and a pay boost as well.

Man must come clean about life

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: I have a medical condition known as gender identity disorder — more commonly called transsexualism. I have prayed every night ever since I was a young boy that God would turn me into a girl. During my teens and into adulthood, I learned to live with the constant pain of pretending to be a man when, really, all I wanted was to live my life as a woman.

However, earlier this year I began the gradual process to transition from male to female. After years of therapy for depression, ingesting dozens of different medications for a variety of misdiagnosed ailments, hospitalization for post-traumatic stress disorder, and daily thoughts of suicide, I made the decision to reveal my lifelong secret to my siblings, some friends and professional colleagues. Generally, the reaction has been supportive.

It is now time to tell my adult children and parents that I in-questions and concerns honestly. An excellent way to deal with this would be to have the discussion in the presence of your psychotherapist.

It would also be a good idea to have on hand some literature on the subject of transsexualism.

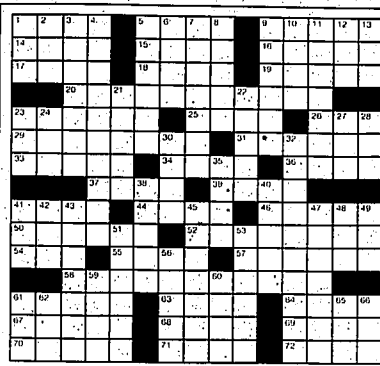

One book that's recommended by the International Foundation for Gender Education is "True Selves" by Mildred L. Brown and Chloe Ann Roundy. It can be ordered from the IFGE by calling (781) 899-2212. Or visit the Web site at ifge.org. P-FLAG has a support group for parents of transgendered people, aptly called "TransParents." The Web address for P-FLAG is www.pflag.org.

DEAR ABBY: Veterans and their families might be interested to know about a new Web site, www.govbenefits.gov. It's government-sponsored, and organizes 500 federal and state benefit programs, targeting citizens into one single site. Veterans can log on, answer a few anonymous questions and find out which benefits they may be eligible to receive. It's also a helpful site for case workers, relatives or caregivers.

I answered the questions for my grandfather, a World War II veteran, from 1941-'45, and discovered 21 benefit programs for which he might be eligible.

— KEITH NELSON, WASHINGTON, D.C.
DEAR KEITH: Bless you for sharing this information with my readers. Upon further investigation, I learned that www.govbenefits.gov was created by the U.S. Department of Labor, with contributions by 10 federal agencies and several states. (There is at least one benefit in every state.) Hosted by firstgov.gov, which just celebrated its fourth anniversary, the site also includes a Spanish language version: www.govbenefits.gov/es. Bravo!

Presidential House was not always white

This day in history: "It's got to stop," he's seen were James Dean's last words on Sept. 30, 1958, seconds before ploving his Porsche into a car entering the highway. Ironically, a few days earlier he had filmed a traffic safety spot.

The White House was not always white. When it was called the Presidential Palace, the building was the natural color of the brownstone of which it is made. After the British army set the palace ablaze in 1814, burn marks marring the outside couldn't be removed and so paint became a necessity.

What would be an inch of rain in summer will make an average of 10 inches of snow in the winter. However, that's average. That same inch of water can make about 15 inches of dry and fluffy snow, but only 5 inches of the wet and soggy stuff.

If you're caught in an avalanche, you have about a one in three chance of surviving. You can improve your chances by "swimming" upward through the snow wave to propel yourself toward the top of it, using your arms to make a breathing space in the 1 to 3 seconds before the snow "sets," and carrying a radio homing device.

Yet another reminder that literature, firearms, drugs and alcohol don't mix. Before he became famous as a writer, William S. Burroughs killed his wife Joan while trying to shoot a martini glass off her head.

The United States generates 20 percent of the 10 billion pencils produced every year. So how come you can never find one when you need one? Remember wading through "First Impressions" in high school literature? Not Well, no wonder. That was the novel's first-draft name. "Bride and Prejudice" became the name Jane Austen eventually settled on. Likewise, Jane Austen's "Elinor and Marianne" eventually became known as "Sense and Sensibility."

Although the bulk of the Washington Monument is stone, the tip was made of aluminum, which was then a rare and precious metal. Good idea, too — it's the tallest building in Washington, D.C., which gets a lot of lightning.

Online Auction Boom Has Many Making $150,000+

By D. Angela Crus
Independent Staff Writer

In the last few years the job market and the average worker have suffered significant economic blows, which is why more people than ever are becoming self-employed.

Nationwide 1.64 million jobs were lost after Sept. 11, leaving a record number of people signing up to sell on eBay. One of those people was Michael Syme. As a single parent, Syme found he had to make money fast and turned to online auctions. It was not long before he replaced his income and made as much as $10,000 a month.

Syme is not the only one to see such phenomenal results. In 2003 many others left their 9-to-5 jobs to become their own boss, according to USA Today.

"People shouldn't wait until they find themselves out of a job before they find out they are not financially secure, they should start ensuring their own and their family's financial future immediately," said Syme, online auction expert and author of the book Keys to Making Money with Online Auctions.

Online auctions are becoming one of the easiest and most profitable ways to earn financial freedom and security. There were more than $9 billion in sales in 2003 alone, and this number is expected to be much greater in 2004, demonstrating the high demand for products on eBay and other online auction sites as well as the significant opportunity for sellers to make money. This can also be seen in the more than 180,000 people making a full-time living selling on eBay.

In addition to income, eBay has more to offer. By selling just $1,000 a month, people can qualify for health, dental, vision and pharmacy benefits. There are already 145,000 who already qualify according to the Associated Press. Many power sellers are making $150,000 a month.

Syme and others have found they not only make money, but the only work commute they worry about is driving to the bank. It is not unusual for them to deposit hundreds or thousands of dollars daily.

Many people are finding the growing demand consumers have for online auction products has allowed them to make an income equivalent to a traditional job, in half the time. Often, auctioned items are not expensive or hard for online sellers to buy and sell at a profit. Some sellers don't even spend a single cent, to make money. Items from a garage, closets or attics are money-makers waiting to be discovered.

"One man's trash is another man's treasure," may be a cliché, but only because it has been proven true time and again. What online auction shoppers are looking for doesn't need to have substantial value. Everything from clothes and tools, to toys, electronics and collectibles are in demand.

One seller found out first-hand how easy it was to bring in extra cash. Larry Rueschhoff was surprised after finding an old camera for $8 and watching it sell for $1,120. That meant Rueschhoff made $1,112 with a single sale on eBay.

Other sellers found specializing in specific items successful. An example of this is Jim Wilson, who decided watches and software were areas he wanted to focus on.

"I happened upon a nice little [software] program," Wilson said. "I bought 200 for only $8 each including shipping from a buyer's club. They sold in less than 2 months for an average of $70 plus shipping." This meant his $1,600 investment turned into $14,000, nearly a 1,000 percent return, in 60 days. This was a feat no stock investment could earn in today's Center - Mr. Michael Syme and daughters, single father, has become an eBay expert and works from home making up to $10,000 a month.

market. This is why many are turning to online auctions.

"Anybody can do it if they know the right technique," Syme said. "With the right techniques it's easy to make extra income." People quickly learn how to market items to attract a higher bid: from photo quality to product listing. Sellers eventually become the experts in online auctions.

Although online auctions are simple to use, experts such as Syme warn first-time sellers to be careful of pitfalls. Simple yet costly mistakes occur when people don't take time to learn about selling online first.

"It's like driving a car," Syme said. "It's easy to do but, if no one shows you how to drive, you could end up in an accident that costs you time and money to fix."

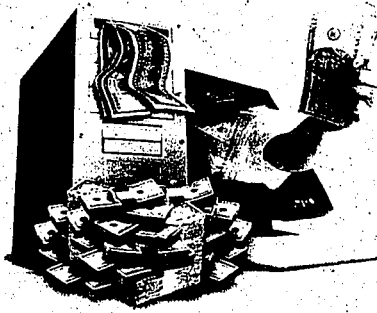

This doesn't mean people should avoid online auctions, it actually means the opposite. It's easy to get started. With a computer, internet access, and some basic computer know-how, you too, can be on your way to doing business over the Internet.

"Why wait to win the lottery when selling on eBay is like winning the lotto every day," Syme said.

With so much money being made for so little investment and effort, the online auction world and doing business over the Internet is becoming a dream come true for those seeking a full or part-time income from home.

The Magic Valley fish report is for the week of Thursday, Sept. 30. Updated conditions from Silver Creek Out-fitters and Blue Lakes Sporting Goods are listed for family fishing waters and major rivers in the Magic Valley/Wood River regions. Check Idaho Department of Fish and Game regulations for restrictions.

Malad River: GOOD. The baetis are becoming more active both in the emerging and dun stage. Put floating pheasant tails, quig's crippe BMD, Adams #16-22 and comparandis in your tackle box. Little Wood River: FAIR. Right below the dam or directly below its confluence with Silver Creek, you have the opportunity to catch some big brown trout. Try clausers, black and halloween buggers, cankers, and attractor nymphs and go bugs.

Big Lost River: FAIR. The brown trout are more aggressive on the north shore as the near the spawn. Streamers are the ticket now. Seal buggers, Mickey Finns, bunnies and scud patterns work as well. Silver Creek: EXCELLENT. Baetis and Callibaetis are the two consistent insects recently. They can come in waves for a few minutes, and then come right back. Keep your eyes toward the sky because each passing cloud changes what is happening on the water. The Mahogany Dunn has been sporadic at best, but it will make a bigger showing in the coming weeks. With warmer days and lighter skies expect the fishing to drop off a little, but not much. The cold nights are putting these fish on the bite during the day as rainbows try to fatten up for winter and the browns try to fatten up for the spawn.

Big Wood River: EXCELLENT. The Wood is a sight-fisher's paradise. Baetis are the bug of choice most afternoons for the rainbows here. Even when there are no bugs on the surface the most aggressive fish continue to stir upward. Anglers in one place work over smart fish slipping Baetis or cover a lot of water and throw big attractors that can resemble the Western Red Quill, (Royal Wulffs, Irresistible Adams, H and L Variants). Fish continue to midge in the mornings and evenings.

Big Lost River: FAIR. The Lost seems to be our forgotten fishery this fall. The right weekday can provide unlimited water to fish and explore. Below the dam, baetis activity comes and goes with the weather. Nymphing can be sporadic but productive in the right areas. Keep to small nymphs, or fish them in tandem with bigger nymphs. Tributary streams in and around Copper Basin can provide miles of angler free water to cast flies.

Fish a Royal Trude, Royal Wulff, or a Royal Stimulator in sizes 14 and 12. Keep on the move. The more water you cover the more fish you'll catch on these streams.

Milner Dam: GOOD. Weeds are dying off so much more water is available to fish on. Use shad raps, wiggle warts and frenzies and dropshotting.

C.J. Strike Reservoir: FAIR. Many more fish in the shallows and on shelves. Snake side is fishing well. Perch crankbaits are tops. Carolina rigging is also catching fish.

Warm Springs/Trail Creek: GOOD. There are still some fish to catch in these little streams, but with the autumn flows an angler may only get a few casts into a pool before the fish go on alert. Try using small terrestrials and attractors fished on short, but light leaders tapered to 5X. A small rod (i.e. seven foot, three weight) will also aid in quiet presentations. Stealth and a low profile are keys to small stream fishing in the fall.

Dollar/Penny and Lake Creek Lakes: GOOD. A great place to go with the kids. Picnics, dogs, bobbers and worms are all one needs to make family adventures and memories for a lifetime. Very few children ever forget the first fish they catch. If you need any help with the fishing part of the day, just ask one of our fly shop employees to help you get set up for a day's outing.

South Fork of the Boise. FAIR. Fall flows have put an end to most float trips. But use parachute baetis, comparandis and searching nymphs to hook the fish.

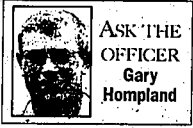

Dierkes Lake: GOOD. Trout are much more active due to cooler water temperatures. Bait is tops on this pond. Nightcrawlers and corn, callibaetis nymphs, and various lures for fly fishermen. Salmon Falls Creek Reservoir: EXCELLENT. This fall deservet reservoir is fishing very well. Slow down your retrieves and cover a lot of water south of the Landing. Cast some wooly buggers and oversized crankbaits.

Clear Lake: GOOD. Leeches in a size 10 are candy to these fish, and so are emergers.

Billingsley Creek: FAIR. It's time to throw streamers. Use light clausers, buggers, zonkers and of course, muddler minnows. Lake Walcott: FAIR. Some nice trout are again being caught trolling. Throw your rapalas, krocodies, wedding rings and nightcrawlers. Steelhead report: FAIR. Fish counts over Lower Gmalls are insane - 75,000 - for this time of year. Bring all the gear you can and be patient. Catch and release may be good method for now.

Muzzleloader must meet requirements

Question: "I'm going to hunt big game this year with my muzzleloader. What's the difference between the rules in a 'muzzleloader only' season and a 'short-range weapon' season?"

ASK THE OFFICER Gary Hompland

Answer: The muzzleloader only season is a special opportunity to hunt big game with black powder muzzle-loading firearms. Lawful black powder firearms must conform to the restrictions adopted by the fish and game commission. In muzzleloader, only seasons firearms are restricted to open sights, contain ignitions systems of a percussion cap, muskets cap or flint lock, and must be loaded from the muzzle with black powder, Pyrodex, or synthetic black powder. Muzzleloaders must be .45 caliber or larger when used for deer and .50 caliber or larger for elk. Additionally, black powder hunters must possess a muzzleloader hunting validation on their hunting license.

Short-range weapons hunts are also a special hunting opportunity, but are actually general weapons that contain some weapon restrictions. These restrictions are generally equipment related and are designed to limit a firearms effective range. Lawful weapons in short-range weapons hunts include: shotguns with slugs or 00 buckshot or larger, a muzzleloader greater than .45 caliber, archery, and crossbow. There are no restrictions on sights.

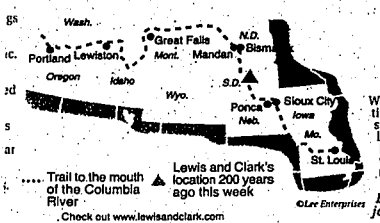

As you can see in a muzzleloader only season, only black powder rifles of a certain design are allowed. In a short-range weapon season, muzzleloading firearms are one of the many firearms types allowed.

'bags Cut by the mice'

The world around the Corps of Discovery began to change as the expedition continued upriver. The Missouri River, after the powerful, heavy spring and summer currents, began to slow and it became difficult to keep the small fleet in the main channel and off the sandbars. Sometimes, the explorers were forced to backtrack for miles before finding the right course.

Gun cabinet company discovers pens can pick some of its locks

CHICAGO (AP) - Days after reports that a widely used bicycle lock could be opened with a ball point pen, a suburban Chicago company acknowledged a pen could also be used to break into some of its gun cabinets.

Stack-On Products, of Wauconda, said it would replace tubular cylinder locks on the cabinets for free.

A gentleman called customer service and said he could open this gun cabinet, and it took us a day and a half, but our engineering staff said it could be done," said Susan Eckhoff, vice president of administration for Stack-On, which manufactures storage products such as tool chests, gun cabinets and gun safes. She said she didn't know how many gun cabinets had been sold through sporting goods retailers like Bass Pro Shops and Gander Mountain.

The problem with some of the locks came to light after a low man, who had seen news reports how Kryptonite's bicycle U-lock could be breached by a ball point pen, opened the lock on his gun cabinet with a pen, Eckhoff said.

"At first I thought it was bizarre, (but) we went out and bought Bic pens to investigate," she said.

While company officials could not open every tubular cylinder lock, "there were one or two we could open," she said.

Hunters should watch for poachers

While hunters are preparing themselves for hunting season, the Fish and Game is also asking sportsmen to take along the Citizens Against Poaching (CAP) hotline number.

This year, live operators are manning the Citizens Against Poaching (CAP) hotline for more hours during hunting seasons.

Citizens who wish to report a violation of game laws can call 1-800-532-5595. If no operator is on duty, citizens are asked to do the following:

- If violation is in progress, call the local sheriff's dispatch or ISP dispatch, which will then attempt to call a Fish and Game officer.

- Leave a detailed message on the CAP answering machine with the reporting party's name and phone number where an officer can call at the most convenient time.

- Callers can remain anonymous at their request.

Steve Anderson, a CAP operator, encourages individuals concerned about suspicious activities to call the CAP line with as many details as possible. "If it's questionable, the things they need to look for are obvious, who's doing what, where they are doing it, when they are doing it, and if they have a vehicle—what kind of vehicle it is."

CAP needs to know where the incident took place, such as the nearest town, so the right officer can be dispatched. Vehicle license numbers are important.

That information is forwarded to a Fish and Game enforcement officer for investigation. If the tip proves to be accurate and the officer writes a citation, the caller can be paid a reward.

Check rifles before the big hunt

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — With the general rifle season fast approaching, many hunters are thinking of taking their rifle out and shooting a few rounds.

For many the last time they touched their rifle was during last year's hunting season. Since then, their gun has been tucked away in their cabinet gathering dust. Many find it strange how a rifle in a locked gun cabinet no longer shoots as straight as it once did.

Idaho Fish and Game encourages big-game hunters to visit their local rifle range before the hunting seasons start. Not only is practice shooting important for future success, it also is important for ethics of the sport.

"By taking the time to prepare and become a better marksman, you show great respect for your quarry," said Kent Henderson, IDFG hunter education coordinator. "And the better marksman you become, the better your chances for success."

For those looking to target practice, ammunition and targets are a must, but shooting ranges and ear protection are also important. Many shooting experts recommend setting your initial target at 25 yards to make sure that you are on the paper.

After shooting at that distance, move your target out to 100 yards to finish the sighting in process. Consistent accuracy is the ultimate goal when practicing shooting skills, so it is important that hunters determine their effective shooting range.

"All hunters have an ethical obligation to know their personal limits and be prepared," Henderson said. "Hunters should practice shooting from a variety of distances to help prepare them for the very situation that might be encountered in the field."

Personal shooting skills vary, but for most, effective shooting ranges vary between 100 yards for iron sights and up to 300 yards maximum for scope-sighted rifles.

According to Henderson, it is important that hunters determine their sight in their rifle to shoot it themselves before hunting season, as it may not be exactly accurate for them. In addition, hunters should always use the same bullets for hunting as they did when sighting in their rifle.

Those adults mentoring young hunters need to keep in mind that recoil is a big consideration. Talking to 12 year olds at hunter education classes, Henderson cringes when they tell him that they are planning to use a 7mm magnum or a 300 magnum. Several firearms adequate for deer hunting that will not beat young shooters include the 243, 257 Roberts, 30-30, 270 and 30-06.

Finding a place to shoot in many areas can be difficult, as there are not many public rifle ranges around. A recommendation for safe shooting would be to get permission from a private landowner or to find some public land where shooting is allowed. When shooting on private or public lands, be conscious of safety at all times.

Some communities in Idaho do have shooting ranges that may be open for sighting in centerfire rifles.

Checks will look into chronic wasting disease

Hunters will play an important part in the chronic wasting disease (CWD) surveillance program this year at Idaho's Fish and Game check stations. Idaho Department of Fish and Game personnel will be collecting samples and are encouraging successful hunters to cooperate with their requests.

It is part of general surveillance program to monitor Idaho's big game herds for the disease. "We have a general surveillance program that we do at check stations on hunter kills," Fish and Game Wildlife Veterinarian Phil Mamer said. "And then a targeted surveillance program where we look at deer and elk showing the symptoms of chronic wasting disease and take samples from them."

These same symptoms can occur when deer and elk are hit by a car and their heads and jaws are injured, so testing is important. The Idaho Department of Fish and Game began monitoring deer and elk for CWD in 1997. To date, all samples have been negative.

However, the neighboring states of Utah and Wyoming do have the disease. Also, there are large elk feed grounds in Wyoming near the Idaho border. Consequently, there's the possibility that chronic wasting disease may move its way from central to western Wyoming and its feed grounds and into eastern Idaho. As a result, Fish and Game has instigated a more intensive sampling program in these high-risk areas.

"Hopefully we never find it, but, if we do, we want to find it just after it gets here and be able to take action before it's spread," Mamer said, "and that includes both wildlife management and veterinary-type actions."

Chronic wasting disease was first recognized in mule deer at a research facility in Colorado in 1967. It was first identified in free ranging deer in 1981. Since then it has been documented in wildlife in Wyoming, Utah, Nebraska, the Dakotas, Illinois, Wisconsin, New Mexico and the Canadian province of Saskatchewan.

Deer and elk that are affected by CWD generally appear thin for no reason, tend to drool, drink excessive amounts of water and may appear blind or uncoordinated. Animals showing these signs should be reported to a local conservation officer, Fish and Game regional office or the Wildlife Health Laboratory at 208-454-7638.

"If you kill a sick deer or elk you should notify a conservation officer," Mamer said. "That way it can be sampled for chronic wasting disease or have a necropsy done to see why it was in poor condition and then probably apply for another tag so you can go out and harvest a healthy animal." According to the World Health Organization there is currently no evidence that CWD in deer and elk is transmitted to humans.

File harvest reports now online

Big game hunters can now file mandatory harvest reports online. The form for reporting is found at http://fishandgame.idaho.gov/hunt/harvest_report/ on the Fish and Game Web site. Reports can also be filed by mail to Hunter Harvest Reports, P.O. Box 70007, Boise, ID 83707-0107, by phone at 1-877-268-9365 or by fax at 775-423-0799.

All deer, elk and antelope hunters must complete and submit a report for each tag issued within 10 days of harvest or within 10 days of the close of the season for which their tag was valid. Hunters who do not report will not be able to purchase a license the following year until the report is filed and may be charged a $1.50 transaction fee.

Any license already issued will be invalidated in the computerized licensing system. A new license may be purchased only after the report has been filed.

Waterfowl

"It's still at a level where (federal agencies) recommended fairly liberal duck and goose seasons. The birds are still strong and healthy, so with the right conditions we can still have some great hunting."

As for geese, the Fish and Wildlife survey also reflect an overall estimated decline over 2003 numbers in most flyways. Among snow geese, favorable estimates were made for the Western Central Flyway from Alberta down to southeast Colorado and New Mexico. Among white-fronted geese, the Western Population. "Hunting swans that winter in the Northwest states and Utah, showed a decline. To see the full report, go to <http://migratorybirds.fws.gov/> on the Web, and hit the link to "Waterfowl Population Status 2004."

Pennies by the Inch benefits Salt Lake children's hospital

TWIN FALLS — The Pennies by the Inch campaign, which benefits Primary Children's Medical Center in Salt Lake City, Utah, is running now through Saturday at the Magic Valley Mall. Filer resident Cherise Christensen is a supporter of the campaign. She was a patient at Primary Children's for five months.

On Sept. 6, 1997, when she was 14, Cherise and a friend were riding horses near a paved road, when a car honked, spooking her horse, reported campaign chairman Gwern Jones. Cherise fell and her head hit the asphalt road. She suffered a head injury, went into a coma and was hospitalized at Primary Children's.

Her mother, Debbie Cook called the state and the care was wonderful. For example, at Thanksgiving, the staff arranged for Thanksgiving dinner so the family could celebrate together, and the doctors would always include Cook in on conversations about Cherise's progress.

Cherise was in a coma for nine weeks, and then began to recover, but could not talk or even swallow. Jones reported, she would have physical and occupational therapists.

Cherise now attends classes at the College of Southern Idaho. She visits the hospital monthly for medication to be filled into an internal pump that administers it to her spine so that walking and moving are easier.

Cherise Christensen, with mom, Debbie Cook, was a patient at Primary Children's Medical Center in Salt Lake City, Utah. They are promoting the Pennies by the Inch campaign which aids the hospital.

The hospital reports that it cares for children in Utah, Idaho, Nevada, Wyoming and Montana, regardless of ability to pay.

The Pennies by the Inch campaign also is working with Quilts for Kids, a local charity making quilts for children in need locally and at the Utah hospital. People are invited to donate or help make quilts or both.

LETTERS OF THANKS

Community supports benefit to help woman

Recently, I had the pleasure of putting together a fund raising benefit for a very dear friend, Ruth Bill, who was diagnosed with terminal cancer. I personally want to thank everyone who purchased tickets for the river cruise on the Snake River Queen. A generous portion of each ticket purchased went directly to Ruth.

Thanks to Jim, Lori and Duane who helped me sell tickets. A special thanks to Edith's class for their cash donation. I would also like to thank the anonymous people who donated extra cash. The crew of the Snake River Queen also donated a portion of its expenses to the benefit fund.

All in all, it was a huge success. It does the heart good to see the generosity and kindness expressed by everyone that was involved. I hope everyone had a good time. We'll love you, Ruth, and wish you the very best.

Thanks again,

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

Bobby Wolff

"The louder he talked of his honors, the faster we counted our spoons."
— Ralph Waldo Emerson

As Eddie Kantar says in his new book, "Kantar on Contract," if you want to be an expert defender, you must keep counting all of the time. East made a play on this deal that most players wouldn't make if they lived to be a thousand, because he could count. West led his singleton heart against four spades and East's queen lost to the ace. West hopped up with the diamond ace at trick two and shifted to a low club. South took dummy's club ace and diamond king, shedding a club, then advanced a heart from dummy.

At this point East's automatic play is to rise with the heart king. However, the would-be South score up his game contract, losing only one more trick to the trump ace.

But if East ducks the heart, West ruffs and gets out with a trump, letting East win and return a trump. South can ruff only one heart in dummy now, and the heart king will be the setting trick. How does East know to duck the second round of hearts? South appears to have started with one diamond and two clubs. If South had more than two clubs, he would surely have finessed the club jack.

Moreover, the opening lead of the heart two suggests that, as West never supported hearts, the lead must be a singleton. If so, let partner ruff the heart and get out with a trump.

There is no way of being an expert without counting every hand.

ANSWER: Bid two no-trump to show the minors. (Yes, that is what it shows, even though your LHO opened one club.) If you had the unbid suits, you would have doubled on the previous round or at this turn to speak, so the unusual no-trump should show the minors now. After all, West could easily still have only three clubs, could he not?
