More rights than water

IDWR director blames situation on limited knowledge of aquifer

By Julie Ponce
Times-News writer

BOISE — It's official: "There are more water rights out there than we have water to fill them," Idaho Department of Water Resources Director Karl Dreher said Wednesday.

But he qualified the statement by explaining that at the time the rights were appropriated, Idaho had a limited understanding of how the Eastern Snake River Plain Aquifer works. As a result, the water agency did not place conditions on certain rights to accommodate the problem of potential shortages. Dreher made his comments at the annual Idaho Ground Water Technical Workshop at the Boise Centre on the Grove.

Instead, as a matter of course, Water Resources gave out water rights because the Idaho Constitution mandated that unappropriated water had to be appropriated, he explained.

There has been a moratorium on the Eastern Snake River Plain Aquifer since 1994.

However, Randy MacMillan of Clear Springs Foods Inc. of the Thousand Springs area — which is the world's largest trout producer — said his company has been trying to get the attention of Water Resources and lawmakers for 30 years. That's because the company has been watching diminishing spring flows upon which it relies for fish production, he said. Since Dreher has only headed Water Resources since the mid-90s, MacMillan specifically excluded him in criticisms of the agency that had gone forward with the Charges filed in baby's death

Autopsy shows child died of asphyxia, had drugs in his body

By Rebecca Heany
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A man has been charged with a felony in connection with the death of a 9-month-old boy who was found to have drugs in his body.

Eric Christopher Ochsner, 35, of Twin Falls, made an initial appearance in 5th District Magistrate Court recently to face one count of infanticide.

The court has issued a summons for the baby's mother, Millicia Cosentino, 34, also of Twin Falls.

An affidavit written by Detective Michael Steen of the Twin Falls Police Department outlines the sequence of events leading up to the charges.

On July 11, police officers were called to a residence for a report of a baby's death. While there, they spoke with Cosentino and Ochsner, Cosentino's boyfriend.

Ochsner said he put the baby to bed in a playpen at 11 the night before. Around 10 a.m. he said he heard the baby crying and put him in bed with him and Cosentino. Several hours later, he woke to find the baby not breathing.

He told officers he thought he or Cosentino had laid out on the baby and smothered him.

After further discussion with police, Ochsner admitted he and Cosentino had been on four days smoking methamphetamine and were just beginning to "crash."

In the house, detectives found baggies that can be used for packaging drugs and glass pipes, police say can be used for smoking meth.

Ochsner admitted to police that the items were his and said he had been using meth since 1998.

He also said he appeared to be a blond and removed a front tooth.

While interviewing Cosentino, police found her to be at times confused, delirious and unresponsive to her answers.

Autopsy results on the baby came back Aug. 24, indicating the cause of death to be asphyxia due to oxygen by an adult.

Lab results from the North Idaho Forensic Lab in Salt Lake City showed that the baby's hair samples had there was a high level of exposure to meth.

Police talked with Ochsner again on Aug. 26 and Cosentino on Aug. 27 with their sample results. He admitted he and Cosentino smoked meth in the Speaker illuminates presidential race, role of media

TWIN FALLS — Under a sign that read "Make your vote count," Paul Glasriis, a former speech writer for President Bill Clinton told students and community members that the two presidential candidates have vastly different approaches to the world and that bias in the media is making it harder for people to be informed.

Glasriis spoke to a crowd of about 200 people in the College of Southern Idaho's student union building Wednesday as part of the Eagle View Lecture Series. Event organizers encouraged people to register to vote at the polls if they hadn't already.

Glasriis started out comparing the November election with baseball.

"It's neck to neck and either side can win," Glasriis said. He later said he'd be a fool to predict the outcome right now.

Doctors perform first organ transplant brokered via Web site

The Associated Press

DENVER — Setting aside ethical concerns, surgeons completed a kidney transplant Wednesday in what is believed to be the first operation where the donor and recipient met through a commercial Web site.

"The donor and recipient were doing well after the four-hour surgery," Presbyterian St. Luke's Medical Center spokeswoman Stephanie Lewis said.

Bob Hickey, who lives in a mountain town near Vail, had needed a transplant since 1999 because of kidney disease but had grown tired of being on the national waiting list. He met donor Rob Smitty of Chattanooga, Tenn., through MatchingDonors.com, for-profit Web site created in January to match donors and patients for a fee.

"Sitting on a waiting list and hoping for a new kidney for so long, your attention is attracted to anything that might help you,"

Arsenic regulations will cost millions

By Michelle Dunlop
Times-News writer

BOISE — What does it cost to prevent lung and bladder cancer linked to arsenic?

Idaho officials estimate $40 million in capital will be needed to bring state regulated public drinking systems up to the federal arsenic standard.

On Wednesday, state officials voted to adopt federal arsenic guidelines at the Idaho Department of Environmental Quality board meeting in Boise.

"I'm sure everybody has been waiting for this for several years," said Jerri Henry, a regulatory analyst for the department.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency established its federal arsenic regulation for drinking water in 2001. State agencies such as the Department of Environmental Quality retain the primary responsibility for enforcing federal standards. In order to maintain their authority, individual states have until January 2005 to adopt the federal regulation.

"It's based on public health protection," Henry said.

While arsenic occurs naturally in water, rocks, soil and other elements, it has been linked with harmful health conditions such as lung and bladder cancer, diabetes and anemia. The area from Arvin Island to Boise has been the hardest hit by arsenic concentrations, Henry said. The arsenic level in Castleford's water at 22 parts per billion, is more than double the federal standard of 10 parts per billion.

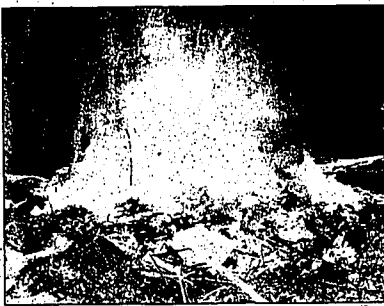

"Boise and communities like Castleford struggle to find ways to meet the standard by January 2005," the federally mandated deadline for compliance. Some communities can apply for assistance or a deadline extension through the EPA.

"Originally, we estimated 130 systems would be affected," Henry said.

Two survive crash

A commuter plane crashed Tuesday as it approached an airport in northeastern Missouri, killing 13. Two survived with little more than broken bones.

The plane took off from St. Louis and went down in woods as it came in for a landing in Kirkville, a city of about 17,000.

Rescuers found the plane's fuselage in flames, with one of its wings broken off. Most of the debris was found in a compact area of about 40-by-60 feet, Carmody said.

The two survivors, a 44-year-old woman and a 68-year-old man, suffered only broken bones and some burns, and were in fair condition Wednesday.

"We see car accidents with worse injuries coming in here every week," said Dr. Charles Zenian, director of trauma serv-

WITH NARY A VOTE COUNTED

Lawsuits already filed over election issues

By Deborah Hastings Associated Press writing

A new political strategy has emerged in this month's presidential race: file a flurry of lawsuits before the first votes are even tallied.

From Oregon to Florida, Democrats and Republicans are firing away at such issues as touch-screen voting machines and provisional ballots. The lawsuits represent a hard-learned lesson from 2000 — Do not wait until all the votes are counted to go to court.

"I have never seen this level of concern about an election," said Laughlin McDonald, director of the American Civil Liberties Union Voting Rights Project.

Others believe the legal wrangling may serve only to damage the voting process.

"It's disastrous for fundamental faith in the system itself," said Doug Lewis, executive director of the Election Center, a nonprofit organization working with polling administrators across the country. "Pretty soon you get people saying, 'Shoot, then why bother to vote?' There has been such a concerted effort to beat up on the system itself that people need to step back and understand that if you destroy the very process by which your candidate gets elected, then what have you gained?"

In more than a dozen states, including the big battleground sites of Florida, Ohio, Michigan and Missouri, a series of lawsuits has been filed in the past few months. Most of the cases were brought on behalf of Democrats.

Two of the most common legal battles are over electronic voting and provisional ballots.

Florida and 28 other states will use touch-screen machines, but that has prompted lawsuits claiming the ATM-like devices are unreliable because they produce no paper receipts that could be used in a recount.

On Tuesday, a lawsuit filed in New Jersey asked that 8,000 of the machines be banned on Election Day for those reasons.

A trial over the e-voting machines also got under way this week in Florida — just as residents started going to the polls for the start of early voting.

Provisional ballots — essentially replacement ballots sent to voters whose names somehow got left off precinct rolls — have prompted intense fighting in battleground states such as Ohio, Michigan and Florida.

In court decisions issued this past week, Democrats won their fight to ease restrictions on such ballots. In Ohio and Michigan, judges ruled that a voter who shows up at the wrong polling place can still cast a provisional ballot as long as he or she is in the right city or county.

But on Monday, Republicans scored a victory for their side of the argument when the Florida Supreme Court ruled that provisional ballots cannot be counted unless they are cast in the correct precinct.

After the presidential battle of 2000, the ACLU sued over Florida's faulty punch-card ballots in a dispute that introduced the terms "hanging chads," "dimpled chads" and "pregnant chads" to American pop culture. After 36 days of lawsuits and recounts, George W. Bush won Florida, and thus the White House, by just 537 votes.

"Filing lawsuits has been part of the election strategy since the last election," said University of South Florida political science professor Susan MacManus, who until last year was chair of the Florida Elections Commission, appointed by Republican Gov. Jeb Bush. "Both parties have known all along there would be problems with this election, and that it would go right down to the wire."

NPS upset over plan to illuminate St. Louis' Gateway Arch in pink

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The National Park Service is upset over a plan to illuminate the Gateway Arch in pink on Monday in recognition of Breast Cancer Awareness Month.

Spokesman Dave Barua said Wednesday the Park Service is not opposed to the cause, but rather the precedent it sets for possible future uses of the 630-foot-tall arch, which the agency is charged with maintaining.

Congress approved illuminating the Arch at the urging of Sen. Jim Talent, R-Mo., whose wife died of the disease in 1988.

Iraq: U.N. not doing enough to help in January elections

BAHGDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iraq's interim government complained Wednesday that the United Nations isn't doing enough to help prepare for January elections, saying the organization has sent fewer electoral workers than it did when Iraq last voted to secede from Indonesia.

U.S. aircraft, meanwhile, mounted four strikes in Fallujah on what the U.S. military said were safehouses used by Abu Musab al-Zarqawi's terror network. A Sunni Muslim clerical group demanded that the Iraq government present any full-scale U.S. attack on Fallujah, hoping to avert the same public anger that forced the Marines to abandon a siege of the city last spring.

In other violence, 11 American soldiers and an Iraqi interpreter were wounded when two car bombs exploded in Samarra, a city that U.S. and Iraqi forces have held as a strategic stronghold since taking it from insurgents last month. An Iraqi child was killed and a civilian was wounded, the Army said.

A suicide bomber in Baghdad detonated his car near a U.S. patrol on the airport road, wounding two American soldiers and two Iraqi policemen. The roads among the most dangerous in the capital.

Zarqawi's terrorist organization has denied responsibility for the attack, though it was not immediately possible to verify that the Internet posting was authentic.

U.S. and Iraqi forces have stepped up operations seeking to curb insurgent violence so that Iraq voters throughout the country can choose a new transitional government in January. The elected assembly is to draft a new constitution in a move step toward democratic rule after decades of tyranny and military occupation.

An Iraqi man sits among the rubble of a destroyed building in which six people died in central Fallujah, west of Baghdad, Iraq, Wednesday, after U.S. forces fired rockets into the city early Wednesday. A couple and their four children had just returned to their home overnight after having fled the city a week earlier, police and witnesses said.

But Foreign Minister Ihsan Zehari complained that the United Nations isn't sending enough election experts to help prepare for the balloting.

"It is unfortunate that the contribution and participation of U.N. employees in this process is not up to expectations," Zehari told reporters. He said the number of U.N.

workers expected to help in the election was far smaller than the 300 workers the United Nations sent for the 1999 independence referendum in East Timor.

"Judging by the size of the process in Iraq and its complexity, we definitely need a larger U.N. presence in Iraq, at least to bestow trust upon the electoral process," Zehari said.

Sunni clerics urge boycott of elections

Knight Ridder News Services

BAHGDAD, Iraq — Iraq's largest group of Sunni Muslim clerics ordered their followers Wednesday to abstain from parliamentary elections, a move American forces don't want. The clerics urged their followers to abstain from the elections, which are being held by daily aerial bombardment.

Gathering from across northern Iraq, the clerics of the Council of Islamic Clerics in Baghdad said the clerics in the Muslim Shi'ahs Association, whose followers make up 35 percent of Iraq's population, called on Arab leaders throughout the Middle East to condemn U.S. actions in Iraq and "end their silence, which brings frustration and anger." They noted that Iraqis have a religious duty to fight American-led forces, according to a statement issued from the mosque.

"The esteemed clerics bless the Fallujah sons for their jihad and patience," the statement read, invoking the Arabic word often translated as "holy war." The clerics' statement was the strongest open opposition yet to pledges by U.S. officials and interim Prime Minister Iyad Allawi to retake Fallujah from insurgents who've controlled it since April, underscoring the serious consequences the battle for the city could have.

One airstrike Wednesday reportedly killed an Iraqi family, as shown in video footage of rescue workers digging a couple and their four children from the rubble of their home.

Another American soldier pleads guilty in prison abuse

Knight Ridder News Services

BAHGDAD, Iraq — The highest-ranking soldier accused in the Abu Ghraib prisoner abuse scandal pleaded guilty Wednesday to four counts of mistreatment, including sexually humiliating Iraq inmates, an official said he knew the actions were wrong but did not report the abuse because he "didn't think anyone cared what happened to detainees as long as they didn't die."

Under the plea agreement, Frederick must cooperate with future investigations and testify in the courts martial of other soldiers.

U.S. military detention centers in Iraq. Frederick, an Army sergeant, is scheduled for sentencing Thursday on counts of dereliction of duty, conspiracy to mistreat detainees, assault and indecent acts.

Frederick told the judge, Col. James Pugh, he was following orders from superior officers to prepare detainees for interrogation in a hostile, dangerous prison where there was no clear leader ship. Frederick said he knew the actions were wrong but did not report the abuse because he "didn't think anyone cared what happened to detainees as long as they didn't die."

Under the plea agreement, Frederick must cooperate with future investigations and testify in the courts martial of other soldiers.

Israeli tightens protection of its government officials

As next week's crucial vote on Gaza withdrawal looms

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Ariel Sharon made a dramatic entrance into Israel's parliament Wednesday surrounded by a large phalanx of bodyguards, as security officials voiced concern for his safety before a parliamentary vote on his plan to withdraw from the Gaza Strip.

The increased security reflected the explosive political climate in the tense countdown to next week's vote. The plan has put Sharon, the one-time champion of Jewish settlements in the West Bank and Gaza, at odds with his former allies.

Security officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, confirmed said Israel's secret service, the Shin Bet, is on high alert regarding possible attacks on Sharon. They confirmed security has been bolstered around the prime minister, lawmakers and parliament.

Public Security Minister Gideon Ezra, a former senior Shin Bet official, was evasive when asked about specific threats against Sharon or lawmakers. "If there were specific threats, we would deal with them," he told Army Radio.

The security concerns were evident during Sharon's visit to parliament Wednesday. Minutes before Sharon's arrival, three bodyguards cleared a hallway for him. The prime minister entered the building surrounded by 10 bodyguards wearing the trademark Israeli military safari jackets and gas pieces of Shin-Bet agents, guns bulging at their sides.

In the parking lot, three Shin Bet guards looked into windows, checked tires and prepped behind bushes. A fourth guard walked through the parking lot with a bomb-sniffing dog.

Parliament Speaker Reuven Rivlin continued lawmakers' concerns for their safety. "Members of parliament talk to each other, and many of them come to me. ... They are talking about threats," he told Channel Two television.

Israel's Prime Minister Ariel Sharon, right, surrounded by an unprecedented number of bodyguards, walks inside the Knesset, Israel's parliament, in Jerusalem Wednesday.

amid 1.3 million Palestinians, has become untenable. While opinion polls show a solid majority of Israelis favoring Sharon's plan, he faces significant opposition from many of his traditional supporters.

Study: 'The Pill' cuts risk of diseases

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The same huge federal study that led millions of women to abandon use of hormones after menopause now provides reassurance that another hormone concoction — the birth control pill — is safe.

In fact, women on The Pill had surprisingly lower risks of heart disease and stroke and no increased risk of breast cancer, contrary to what many previous studies have found.

Doctors say the type of hormones and the stage of life when they're used may be what makes them helpful at one point and harmful at another. "We're still learning more and more about the biology," said one of the researchers, Dr. Michael Diamond of Wayne State University in Detroit.

The findings are from nearly 162,000 participants in the Women's Health Initiative, the largest women's health study ever done and one of the biggest on oral contraceptives. Results were presented Wednesday at an American Society for Reproductive Medicine conference.

About 16 million American women currently take birth control pills, and hundreds of millions have used them since the first one came on the market in 1960. Most combine synthetic forms of estrogen and progestin in various doses.

Women taking these hormones after menopause were more likely to have heart disease and certain cancers — a finding that prompted part of this large study to be stopped in 2002.

Previous research on oral contraceptives suggested that they too, raised the chances of heart disease. But this new study found the opposite — lower risk of heart attacks, strokes, high cholesterol, high blood pressure and other

PUBLIC MEETING NOTICE

Twin Falls County Fair Board Invites You To The Final Public Meeting To Review Plans For A Community Event Center

DATE: Thursday, October 21
TIME: 7:30pm
PLACE: Filer, Twin Falls County Fair Grounds, Merchants #3.

18 Buildings on the Fair Grounds are 60 years old. There are in need of costly repairs. Now is the time for the voters of Twin Falls County to build a community event center that will meet the needs of the Twin Falls County Fair as well as host a variety of events throughout the year.

Let the Twin Falls County Fair Board share their vision with you and get your input into the future for the Twin Falls County Fair Grounds.

They still shoot hippos?

Disneyland shrugs off political correctness

Los Angeles Times

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Hippos beware: The Jungle Cruise skippers are packing heat again.

Many fans are cheering what appears to be a loosening of political correctness after watching the "I Happiest Place on Earth" in recent years not just disarm the skippers and de-spin the teacups, but also strip muck hunter rifles from Jim Sawyer Island and strap manning pirates from chasing frightened maidens in Pirates of the Caribbean.

Disneyland officials describe the changes as a move to recapture some of Walt Disney's original vision by "restoring the magic" to the park as it gears up for its 50th birthday next year.

"I've just been happy as a pig in mud," said Disney executive Al Lutz, founder of www.usag.com. "I think they went too far in one direction and now they're course-correcting. They've gone back to the way they used to do things."

Not quite. Tom Sawyer Island is still gun-free, and the pirates continue to chase the wenches for their lead, not their bodies.

But Disney watchdogs say the park is making improvements, apparently responding to complaints about altered rides and declining ambience.

On Main Street, generic food carts are being redesigned to match the architectural style and paint colors of nearby buildings. In New Orleans Square, where entrepreneurs have been wearing Victorian styles in subdued grays and browns, new outfits will reflect the jazz era in vibrant greens, purples and golds.

That's what we're known for — the quality, the detail," Disneyland spokesman Bob Tucker said.

Hundreds of letters and calls from park guests came in each week, on topics ranging from the minutiae all the way to the big stuff," he said.

Changes on rides such as the Jungle Cruise span fans marching to Disneyland's City Hall in protest. Some boycotted the attractions.

Disneyland, Tucker said, was listening. Engineers will return the spin to the teacups early next year. And the guns came back to the Jungle Cruise this month.

As recently as one day before the Oct. 1 return of the guns, Jungle Cruise skippers said guests were complaining about the notable absence of the Smith & Wessons — even though they'd been taken away in 2001.

Bush's accomplishments add up to failures

All voters hanging from the right of Atlas the I Fan to the left of Fabian Socialists should ask themselves if they really want four more years of the current president and his bullboys marketing the message: Vote for me or the Bodeo voting, just look at the accomplishments of this president's administration over the past four years:

- Engaged us in an unnecessary and illegal war in Iraq;
- Left it to our children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren to pay for the war;
- Further enriched wealthy friends with an unfair tax cut which could have paid for the war;
- Continued spending on crazies like Star Wars;
- Under-funded "No Child Left Behind";
- Failed to fix our broken borders;
- Gave free reign to oil, gas, coal and timber companies to do as they wish with the environment;
- Gave pharmaceutical companies huge profits under the guise of prescription drug benefits for seniors;
- Failed to protect potential major targets of terrorists;
- Allowed corporations to take jobs abroad;
- Allowed corporations to bank off shore and avoid paying taxes;
- Continued efforts to privatize all public institutions;
- Impeded scientific stem cell research;
- Made a mess of universal health care;
- Increased Medicare payments by 17 percent in January;
- Reduced veteran benefits and military pay;
- Politicized Social Security benefits and raided the funds;
- Claims bad news is good (see chaos in Afghanistan and Iraq);
- Repeatedly said in debate that being president is hard work. If he were given the choice between working for a combat infantry badge and being president, he would, I believe, choose the latter and complain no more.

Solved the problem of flu vaccine shortage by commanding Americans to stay healthy; and I has spun so many webs of illusion, he now finds himself trapped in them along with his true believers.

The point is that voters of all persuasions can change the misdirection of the United States of America in November if they remember that they are voting for more than a political party and/or a name. Instead, citizens are voting for themselves and their children's future here at home.

Local teacher's methods spark real activism

I read with interest the story of Carol Hurst and her students trying to take some citizen responsibility according to the venues permitted us with regard to the Idaho National Engineering and Environmental Laboratory. I hope and pray that her teaching methods will become the subject of high praise nationwide as an example of leading our youth into the arena of public decision-making known as politics. And I hope that should the alternative which so often happens — that Ms. Hurst gets penalized by those who would trivialize our schools and students to leave us with a sense of powerlessness and inevitability — that your paper will stand with her and champion her good work.

Who says our schools are failing when a teacher does this?

New film exposes all lies of Iraq war

"Today I saw the shocking film, 'Uncovered: The War on Iraq,' at the Magic Lantern in Ketchum. It is a must for all to see before the election no matter what your political views are. This film offers irrefutable evidence that we were lied to. Congress was lied to, and the U.S. Assembly was lied to, horrifically, by George W. Bush.

Rumsfeld, Cheney, Powell and Rice. The lies are so terrible that, in accordance with our laws, a criminal case could be made against these people punishable by imprisonment, imprisonment or both. The evidence is documented and damning, presented by 28 individuals with impeccable credentials. They include past director of the CIA, Stansfield Turner; CIA analysts, Ray McGovern, Patrick Eddington, Bill Christison, Milt Beardon, Robert Baer and Dr. David MacMichael; Arabiasaditor for Wilson, who's CIA agent-wife was exposed by someone high up in the administration,tribution for Wilson's exposure of the Niger, Hassett, uranium hoax, Hans Blix, the U.N. weapons inspector, Scott Ritter, the American weapons inspector and John Deen, Richard Niemi, White House press secretary. Also offering evidence are Bush's own Secretary of the Army, Thomas White; his Foreign Service Corps member, John Kieseling; and his own weapons inspector, Dr. David Kay. I hope it will be screened somewhere in the Twin Falls area.

Pence has the real feel for District 25 issues

On Nov. 2, vote for Donna Pence's Grounding for state representative from District 25 B.
 We need an active legislator who is open to the concerns and opinions of people throughout this district. We need a legislator with direct experience in what is a good learning environment for school children, in working with small businesses in the area, and in standing up for the fair management of our valuable water resources. Donna Pence has lived in the district 44 years, has coached and taught in our public schools, has been a director of her local chamber of commerce, and she and her husband grow the trees on their tree farm which bring beauty throughout this district. I have worked with Donna from time-to-time during the past four years, and I see her as a person who would be both a hard-working, intelligent and truly "representative" legislator and an articulate and forthright spokesperson for our area of Idaho. On Nov. 2, vote for Donna Pence for District 25 B, state representative. You will be pleased with your choice!

 Thank you,

Leave family's support ribbons alone

I am writing this letter to all my dearest "somewhats."
 I have been trying to show my support of our local troops who have been deployed, especially since my daughter's father and his best friend are two of them. Twice now I have had the "Support Our Troops" ribbons stolen off my car, along with two of my co-workers' ribbons. The first time I was irritated, but when someone stole the "Keep Daddy Safe" ribbon off my car, I was mad! If you are doing this, or know who is, because you think it's funny, please think again. It's important to me and my family to show our support, and we would appreciate it if the ribbons could last on my car for more than a week!

Leaving dogs behind was senseless act

Idaho is the kindest word being in the newspaper that I can use. This letter is directed to the people who decided to drop off two dogs (reddish brown in color) on South Washington the afternoon of Oct. 15, along with a clear skin for the dogs to eat.
 It's too bad people like this are allowed to have animals or even be associated with any animal. I only wish I would have seen the act happen. It seems like this is happening more frequently in the country. This shows the total lack of humanity and complete ignorance these people exhibit. The old saying is, "What goes around, comes around."
 I can only hope in the end that you will get yours for the cowardly act that you have displayed. Next time you decide to drop the family pet, do everyone a favor and let the dogs

Lebanon's prime minister resigns

The Washington Post

AMMAN, Jordan — A Lebanese Prime Minister, Rafik Hariri, resigned Wednesday in a sign of deepening divisions within Lebanon's fragile government over the decisive role that Syria's larger and more powerful neighbor plays in its political life.

One of Lebanon's leading postwar political figures, Hariri leaves amid growing international pressure on Lebanese politicians to turn more forcefully against Syria's long-standing presence in their country. Hariri, whose tenure as prime minister spanned nearly all of Lebanon's suspended postwar period, will return to parliament, where he helps lead a bloc of Christian and Muslim legislators increasingly opposed to President Emile Lahoud, a Maronite Christian whose term in office was extended last month under pressure from the Syrian government.

Although Hariri's departure was not entirely unexpected, it marks a new development that Lebanon, among the Middle East's most economically vibrant and liberal countries, has entered a period of political turmoil. Hariri, a 1948 immigrant, has been a reassuring symbol to Lebanese Prime Minister Rafik Hariri, left, arrives at the presidential palace to submit his resignation to President Emile Lahoud on Wednesday.

Lebanon's international lenders and potential investors because of the fiscal program he favored that called for budget cuts and privatizations.

Hariri gave no official reason for his resignation, which he submitted to Lahoud on Wednesday afternoon. But he suggested in an interview this month that if he left the government it would be over differences with the president about Syria's influence in Lebanese politics.

New Indonesian president sworn in

The Washington Post

JAKARTA, Indonesia — Susilo Bambang Yudhoyono, a retired army general with a newly minted doctorate in economics, was sworn in Wednesday as Indonesia's first directly elected president and unveiled a cabinet reflecting his cautious approach to reform.

Elected in a landslide a month ago over incumbent Megawati Sukarnoputri, Yudhoyono, 55, begins his five-year term with public expectations running high that he will offer stability for a country that has had four presidents since longtime dictator Suharto was ousted by protesters in 1998.

"I have to remind you all that the complicated and complex problems of the nation cannot be solved within the period of a hundred days. It is not as easy as turning over the palm of your hand," Yudhoyono said in his inaugural speech at the presidential palace.

Group will send troops to Darfur

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia — The African Union on Wednesday agreed to level up its peacekeeping force in Sudan's western Darfur region and send hundreds of civilian police officers in an effort to end violence that has driven more than 1.5 million people from their homes.

The African Union's Peace and Security Council approved the increase in the size of its force in Darfur from 390 to 3,320 troops and civilian police.

The force will include 150 unarmed military observers, a major increase from 80 currently there, to monitor a shaky ceasefire between two rebel groups fighting government troops and allied militia.

The $220 million, one-year operation will be funded mainly by the European Union and the United States, Djinnit said.

Typhoon Tokage hits Japan, killing 18

TOKYO — A powerful typhoon blasted across Japan on Wednesday, killing 18 people, causing deadly mudslides and flash floods and prompting thousands to flee their homes, officials said. At least 13 people were missing.

Typhoon Tokage made landfall on Japan's main islands early Wednesday and though it was downgraded by the evening to a tropical storm, it was proving to be one of the deadliest storms of the season.

Television footage showed powerful winds uprooting a whole tree, flash floods submerging cars to their windows and entire hillsides crumbling away in landslides across southern and central Japan.

Tokage — the Japanese word for lizard — swirled up the length of Japan's main island of Honshu and by the evening was closing in on central Nagano prefecture (state), about 112 miles northwest of Tokyo, with sustained winds of 56 miles per hour, the Meteorological Agency said.

Muslim girls expelled for wearing head scarves

PARIS — Two Muslim girls were expelled Wednesday from high school for refusing to remove their head scarf — the fourth such expulsions in two days as officials began taking action against those who defy a new law banning conspicuous religious apparel in public schools.

A 17-year-old girl was forced out of school in the eastern city of Mulhouse following a disciplinary hearing, said Gilles Jean Klein, spokesman for the Strasbourg school district. Another girl was expelled from a school in the town of Flers in the western Normandy region, according to the Caen school district.

Red Sox pull off historic comeback to advance to the World Series

NEW YORK — Boston blew away decades of defeat with four sweet swings.
Believe it, New England, the Red Sox are in the World Series. And they got there with the most unbelievable comeback of all, shattering the New York Yankees, the Evil Empire, to Cursed for 86 years, these Red Sox just might be charmed.

There is no torture this time, no hour of humiliation. Better yet to Boston fans, it's the Yankees left to suffer the memory of a historic collapse.

Buhl rallies for 3A district title

By Nathaniel Garrabrاند
Times-News Writer

WENDELL — It would've been easy to roll over.
Down 3-2 with 10 minutes left, it would have been easy for the Indians to tuck their tails and try to regroup for a loser-out game on Friday Wendell had taken their best, rallied, and had all the momentum.
Buhl had played sloppy soccer for most of the half. They couldn't even seem to get the ball out of their end of the field, let alone in the Trojans' goal.

But championships aren't won with cop-outs. The Indians knew this. They stopped. First, they won 4-3 and now have a 3A District IV title for their tenacity.

They won by finding the game they'd started out with. Capturing momentum at the outset the Indians struck first in the 11th minute when senior midfielder Christian Estrella took a beautiful behind the back pass left of the box from Miguel Maya and found the right side of the net.

Wendell looked to create breakaways for the next 20 minutes, but they lacked mid-field support and the Indians had an easy time turning back the one or two-man attacks and kept the game largely confined to the Trojan side of the field.

Things took an even worse turn for Wendell in the 26th minute as starting keeper Junior Cortez was lost for the game with an ankle injury.
But, as would occur frequently, the momentum soon shifted.

"It could have gone either way," said Wendell coach Robert Orloski after the seasaw contest.

In the 30th minute, Trojan forward Daniel Diaz threated a free kick though the Indian defense to make it 1-1. With a minute left in the half, Diaz nearly gave Wendell the lead when he took a perfect centering pass from Jose Salazar and headed it off the cross bar.

Continuing their pressure from the late first half, the Trojans hit up 2-1 in the fifth minute on a shot from Salazar in from 10 yards out on

Eight minutes later, Indian playmaker Miguel Maya burned the Trojans defense on the left and lobbed a shot just over the keeper's hands that by some trick of physics dropped very suddenly into the goal to tie the game at 2-2.

"I don't know how I did that," said Maya. "It looked like it was going over."

Wendell struck back three minutes later on a solo goal from Giovanni Leon to take a 3-2 lead.

The next 15 minutes belonged to the Trojans as they won nearly every loose ball and dominated the time of possession.

Then, as Wendell had done before, Buhl used a free kick to turn things around as Maya scored his second goal off of an indirect kick in the 70th minute.

Smelling blood, the Indians took control for good two minutes later when Estrella received a short pass in the middle of the box from Rui

Medina and put it home.
"Wendell played their top game," said Indians coach Bill Fields. "They came out really hard."

Buhl begins the 3A state tournament at the Capital Soccer Complex in Boise on Thursday.

The Trojans will have a shot at a first-ever state tournament berth.

Wendell plays at The Community School, 1-0 winners over Bliss Wednesday in loser-out play at 4 p.m., Friday for second place.

GOODING — Top-seeded Shoshone defeated No. 2 Carey in the championship match of the Magic Valley Northside Conference Tournament, 25-14, 25-14, 25-20, and will meet Southside conference champion Laguerre at 7:30 tonight at Gooding High School for the top district seeding at state.

The top four teams from District IV advancement to the Class 1A state tournament at Declo and Burley high schools Oct. 28-30.
The Lady Indians passing game was the key to the victory. The Lady Indians were able to attack due to accurate first passes to setters, senior Meghan Sorenson and junior Kallie Axelsson.

"We decided to hit right at them so the first pass was the key to the offense," Shoshone coach Larry Messick said. "And we only missed three serves all night."

Junior Katie Strunk had 14 kills and Kyll Assle had 10 kills and 35 service points for the Lady Indians. Sorenson added 12 service points.

Cardinals force Game 7 after defeating Astros

The Associated Press

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Jim Edmonds skipped around the bases, jumping into a cluster of St. Louis Cardinals waiting for him at home plate.
Now, waiting for all of them is Roger Clemens in an all-or-nothing Game 7.

Edmonds blasted a two-run homer in the 12th inning and the rejuvenated Cardinals turned Busch Stadium into a red frenzy, beating the Houston Astros 6-4 Wednesday to even the NL championship series at 3-3.

"We all watched TV as kids. We all hear all the stuff you guys say and write and show us. I finally get to play in a Game 7," Edmonds said.

"I think how much better does it get? Game 7 vs. Roger Clemens," he said.

After Jeff Bagwell's two-out slide in the ninth off Cardinals closer Jason Irthinghausen tied it at 4, Edmonds won it with a one-out shot off Dan Miceli.
Bagwell didn't even bother watching as Edmonds' shot sailed way over the St. Louis bullpen in right field. The star first baseman simply walked across the field while the Cardnals streamed out of the dugout.

"A very winnable game for us, so I'm disappointed," Astros manager Phil Garner said.

"I haven't given much thought to tomorrow's game, only that we had scheduled the Rocket to go."

Clemens came out of retirement for the sole purpose of pitching his hometown Astros into their first World Series.
Now the 42-year-old ace will get that chance Thursday night when he starts against former Boston teammate Eli Sippan.

It will be Clemens' fourth career start in a Game 7 — he's 1-0 in those outings after getting knocked out early last year in the ALCS for the New York Yankees.

"I've never seen him pitch. When he wasn't tough to beat," Cardinals manager Tony La Russa said. "It shapes up to be a terrific matchup."

Rightly Julian Tavarez went two innings for the victory. He pitched with a left hand that he broke in a dugout tantrum in Houston.

Boilermakers could give Badgers boost

By Ralph D. Russo Associated Press writer

A week after losing to Wisconsin, Purdue can do the badgers a favor against Michigan.

No. 7 California (minus 22) at Arizona. Is there a more balanced offense in country than Calif's?

No. 10 Georgia (minus 30) at Arkansas. First of four straight away from Athens for Bulldogs.

No. 13 Michigan (plus 4.5) at No. 12 Purdue. Some Blue fans might want to hear coach Phillip Fulmer more than Auburn this year.

No. 20 Florida (minus 24.5) at Mississippi State. Gators lost last game at Starkville 47-35 in 2000.

No. 22 Oklahoma State (plus 3.5) at Missouri. Missouri defense is top in Big 12.

No. 24 North Carolina State (minus 7.5) at North Carolina State. No. 1 defense in ACC on display.

No. 5 Florida State (minus 13.5) at Wake Forest. Seminoles getting better every week.

JUST SHUT UP!

Garcia wishes Owens would stop feuding

BEREA, Ohio (AP) — Someday Jeff Garcia and Terrell Owens may connect again.

Someday, the former teammates may be able to talk, shake hands and repair their ruptured relationship. And maybe, just maybe, they can become friends again.

Someday. Not this week.

On Sunday, when the Cleveland Browns host the unbeaten Philadelphia Eagles, Garcia and Owens will be as close in proximity as they've been since playing together for five stormy seasons in San Francisco.

Both players spent part of Wednesday addressing their ongoing, mostly one-sided feud, a clash of personalities fueled by Owens' repeated bashing of the Browns' new quarterback.

Garcia doesn't understand Owens' anger or the relentless criticism from one of the NFL's most opinionated players.

In his autobiography and during interviews, the brash, sharp-tongued wideout has ripped Garcia's playing ability and leadership skills. Owens has even questioned Garcia's sexuality.

"I don't know why he can't let it go," Garcia said. "I mean, it's unfortunate because I've never looked at [Owens] as being an enemy of mine. I don't know where the anger or the negativity or the criticism comes from, and why certain comments have been made because he's known my situation in the past."

"It's always known my girlfriends, things like that, and to have been said, I just don't know where it comes from."

Garcia insists he has moved on, and he just wishes Owens would do the same.

Never one to dodge a question, Owens has dished out some damaging verbal shots at Garcia since the two parted following last season. Owens, though, maintains his comments directed at Garcia have been blown out of proportion.

"I haven't criticized him as of lately," Owens said. "I think everybody is just getting reports from the book. You're the ones that won't let it go. I've let it go since training camp."

Not quite.

In an interview last week, Owens went on the attack against Garcia again. He said the three-time Pro Bowler doesn't have a strong arm, is an inaccurate passer and if Owens had played with a better QB in San Francisco he would have better stats.

Owens defended his renewed assault on Garcia.

"I was answering a question," he said. "What do you want me to do, stare at the camera? This shouldn't be about me and Jeff. I'm not going to be on the field at the same time he's going to be on the field, so it shouldn't be about us."

Philadelphia Eagles wide receiver Terrell Owens, left, catches the ball past Chicago Bears defender Matt Ware during the second quarter, Oct. 3 in Chicago.

Oh, but it is.

The Garcia vs. Owens matchup is the featured subplot as the Browns (3-3) try to legitimize another turnaround season against one of the NFL's powerhouse.

The history between the two stretches to 1999, when after starting in the Canadian Football League, Garcia replaced Steve Young as the Browns' starter.

In his first season with Owens as his quarterback, Owens caught 60 passes. He went on to have 97, 93, 100 and 80 receptions the next four seasons, twice leading the league in TD catches.

Someone had to pass him the ball, yet Owens seems unwilling to admit Garcia was 'the one who threw it to him.'

The pair went to three Pro Bowls and made two playoff appearances as one of the league's most lethal pass-and-catch combinations. But there were problems, too.

Cleveland Browns quarterback Jeff Garcia passes in the first quarter against the Cincinnati Bengals on Sunday in Cleveland.

Garcia was constantly trying to keep Owens happy. If the talented wideout wasn't complaining about getting the ball, he was at odds with the coaches.

Garcia hasn't given up on a positive ending, and said he's willing to take another stab at patching up things with Owens.

"I want to go to bed at night knowing that things are all fine," he said.

The way Owens sees it, things already are.

Asked if he would talk to Garcia this weekend, Owens didn't sound as if he would be doing much socializing.

"No," he said. "For what?"

Gold-medal saga set for resolution

WAUKESHA, Wis. (AP) — Whether he's talking to family, friends or random people he meets out in public, Paul Hamm hears the same thing over and over: Are you going to be able to keep your Olympic gold medal?

On Thursday, he'll finally have an answer.

Two months after Hamm won the men's all-around title at the Athens Olympics, the Court of Arbitration for Sport in Lausanne, Switzerland, will announce at 7 a.m. MDT Thursday whether the gold medal stays with him or goes to a South Korean gymnast who claims it should be his.

"I'm obviously looking forward to this whole thing being done," Hamm told The Associated Press in a telephone interview Wednesday. "I wouldn't consider this (process) to be a pain, but it's always something that's being discussed, whether it's with my family and friends or people I run into on the street. People say, 'Whatever happened with that medal thing?'"

"People are trying to find out about it, so it's constantly on my mind."

Hamm won the gold Aug. 18 with one of the most spectacular comebacks in the sport's history, rallying after being in 12th place with only two events left. But two days later, gymnastics officials discovered that Yang Tae-Young of South Korea had been wrongly docked a tenth of a point on his second-to-last routine, the parallel bars.

Yang ended up with the bronze, 0.049 points behind Hamm. Add that extra 0.100, though, and Yang would have finished 0.051 points ahead of the American.

"However, I assume everything in the final rotation played out the same way — a big if."

The International Gymnastics Federation acknowledged the error and suspended three judges.

But it said repeatedly it would not change the results because the South Koreans didn't protest until after the meet.

That didn't stop the South Koreans from pressing their case, though. They appealed to the U.S. Olympic Committee and the International Olympic Committee, but IOC president Jacques Rogge flatly refused to even consider the idea of giving Yang a gold medal.

The FIG president Bruno Grandi confirmed the issue, writing a letter to Hamm and asking him to surrender the gold medal voluntarily. In the letter, Grandi wrote: "The true winner of the all-around competition is Yang Tae-Young."

Buoyed by that statement, Yang filed an appeal on the final day of the games with CAS — the sports world's highest court and final authority on Olympic matters.

"There are a lot of great memories for me of Athens and I'll never forget them," Hamm said. "But there are also times in Athens that I just wished I was home."

Singh wants to finish strong at tournament

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — Ken Griffey Jr. walked down the practice range Wednesday morning and stopped to watch Vijay Singh, two world-class athletes with not much else in common.

One guy rarely plays in the fall. The other plays his best golf this time of the year.

Singh has won his last three PGA Tour events, and this is his last six. Next up is the Fjord-Classic at Disney where he is the defending champion. It's the start of a three-week sprint to the end of the season, and the 41-year-old Fijian wants to finish strong.

Despite having wrapped up all the major awards, his goals are clear.

Already an eight-time winner on tour, Singh wants to reach 10 victories. Not since Sam Snead won 11 times in 1950 has anyone won so much in one year. Singh also is $54,434 away from becoming the first $10 million man in golf.

"There's three more tournaments to go and this so-called '10' mark they all talk about," Singh said. "I'd like to achieve that. I want to end on a high note. I just want to keep it going and see if it's going to last."

"I just don't want to see it end. Put it that way."

Griffey, who lives nearby at Islworth, reached his own milestone this year with his 500th career home run. But his season was cut short by injuries, the second straight year he spent September on the disabled list.

Singh is relentless, and he really seems to surge in the fall. He started his ascent to No. 1 in the world about this time last year when he won Disney. He has won 12 times the last two seasons, with five of those victories coming in the final two months of the season.

"There is nobody out there working harder than him," Chris DiMarco said.

Singh already has played 26 tournaments and will finish the year by playing Disney, next week in Tampa (he finished second last year), followed by the season-ending Tour Championship.

"I don't really look at stats and look at how many tournaments I've won," Singh said. "You've got to be really focused on what you're doing. My focus is on this event. I try not to get complacent."

USOC fights to keep Olympic gold for Johnson

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. Olympic Committee is contesting an international ruling which could cost Michael Johnson and the rest of the U.S. 1,600-meter relay team their gold medals from the Sydney Olympics.

The USOC filed an appeal to sports' highest court challenging a recommendation by track and field's world governing body to disqualify the entire squad for a doping scandal involving team member Jerome Young.

The petition was lodged with the Court of Arbitration for Sport in Lausanne, Switzerland, by the USOC and five team members — Johnson, twins Antonio Pettigrew and Jerome Taylor. Young is not covered by the appeal.

"They think only Jerome Young should be stripped of the gold medal and not the rest of the team," CAS general secretary Matthew Reeb told The Associated Press on Tuesday.

The appeal is directed against the International Association of Athletics Federations (IAAF) and the International Olympic Committee.

A hearing date hasn't been set. Young tested positive for the steroid meldonium in 1999, but was exonerated by a U.S. appeals panel in July 2000, avoiding a two-year ban.

He ran in the opening and semifinal rounds of the 2000 Olympics in Sydney, but not in the final. Johnson ran the anchor leg in the final for the fifth and last Olympic gold medal of his career.

Searchers find hunter's body

KIMBERLY — Officials Wednesday located the body of a man reported missing Monday.

Ernest Klimes, 54, of Kimberly, was hunting with friends near the Diamond Flat Springs area of the South Hills Monday morning.

His friends reported him missing in the afternoon. Search and rescue teams from Cassia County and deputies with the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Department were called out to help locate him, said Nancy Howell, a sheriff's spokeswoman.

Authorities contacted the Civil Air Patrol, which provided a fixed-wing aircraft to aid in the search. Later an Air Force Black Hawk helicopter was brought in from Langley Field in Boise.

A crew in the helicopter spotted the body around 9:20 a.m. Wednesday, Howell said. The cause of death was undetermined as of Wednesday afternoon.

Accident victim still in serious condition

JEROME — A woman injured in a car accident on U.S. Highway 93 Tuesday morning remained in serious condition Wednesday afternoon, according to a spokeswoman for Saint Alphonsus Regional Medical Center in Boise.

Earlene Lewis, 59, of Dietrich, was driving a 1993 Mercury Tracer near 200 North around 6:30 a.m. when she attempted to overtake a slower-moving vehicle, according to Idaho State Police.

Lewis' car hit the back of the vehicle and went into oncoming traffic, where her car was hit by a pickup truck. She was taken by air ambulance to Saint Al's in Boise.

Another crash occurred on Highway 93 Tuesday afternoon when a tractor-trailer pulling out on the Flying J Travel Plaza crashed into a northbound Chevy pickup truck, according to police.

No one was hurt in this accident.

Members of the Jerome Rural Fire Department were called to the scene to help clean up oil, acid and other debris that spilled onto the road after the crash.

Downed line causes power outage

SHOSHONE — Approximately 780 customers in the Shoshone area were without power Tuesday evening because of a fallen power line, said Anne Alenski, a spokeswoman with Idaho Power.

The weather-related incident caused power outages beginning around 6:20 p.m., she said. Power was restored an hour later to more than half those affected, and all customers had power by 11:30 p.m.

The line that went down was half a mile long west of Shoshone near the Big Wood River.

Wendell qualifies for emergency levy

WENDELL — The Wendell School District qualified for $33,328 in emergency levy funding because of increased attendance this year, said District Clerk and Business Manager Diane Adams.

Superintendent Greg Lowe said the money will go into the district's general fund and will be used to help pay salaries and benefits for staff. Lowe said he's happy to see attendance increasing.

Emergency levies are based on average daily attendance. This year's average attendance is 1,002, up from 1,074 last year, Adams said. Enrollment is also up to 1,117 this year.

The levy cost will be about $8.50 for the owner of $50,000 in assessed value of property, Adams said.

Emergency levies are effective for one year and are not subject to voter approval. Wendell had a $116,000 emergency levy last year.

STREAMLINING THE SYSTEM

M-C officials meet to see whether certain inmates should be released

By Chip Thompson
Times-News writer

BURLEY — During the 1980s, the term "revolving-door prisons" became a convenient catchphrase and turned the tide of political campaigns throughout the country.

But what's going on at the Mini-Cassia Criminal Justice Center, where local officials have begun working to streamline the legal process, shouldn't be thought of as a move toward a revolving-door policy, they say. On the contrary, participants in this new experiment consider it a move toward freeing up space at the jail, saving taxpayer dollars and ensuring that inmates don't spend unnecessary time behind bars.

Every Friday morning at 8, county and city prosecutors, public defenders, jail officials and fifth District Judge Dick Bolzar sit down to review the current jail population and decide whether any inmates need to be let go.

"What we're looking for mostly are situations where people have dropped through the cracks," Cassia County Prosecutor Al Barrus said. "Just to make sure everybody's being treated right and get them out of there when they should."

Barrus offered one example of a man who had been sentenced to a 180-day program by the district court but still appeared on the record with a misdemeanor. The group dug a bit deeper and discovered that the misdemeanor had been dismissed but the man was still taking up a bed in the jail.

"It was an error in record keeping," Barrus said. "Somewhere there was a breakdown but I don't know where it would have been."

The important thing is that the man was released to the state to begin his 180-day program and was no longer a burden on Mini-Cassia taxpayers, Barrus said.

Public Defender Kent Jensen said a common problem occurs with undocumented persons who get arrested, for relatively small amounts of money, and spend weeks in jail waiting for a trial.

"The county sheriff picks up somebody for driving without privileges and that person happens to be an undocumented person in the U.S.," Jensen said. "That's not a terribly serious offense."

Because the person is being held by the county on the minor offense, federal officials can't deport them until they're released on bond or go to trial, Jensen said. They can't be bailed out because they would then be deported and default on the bond.

No officials are looking to expedite such cases so the inmate can have his day in court or plead guilty and be released for deportation. Without such scrutiny, inmates might spend weeks occupying jail space before a trial that would only have negated them a few days in jail.

"For an offense that they might only get a couple of days in jail, they're waiting for a month," Jensen said. "The meetings are a way of seeing which cases can be put on the fast track or other ways to alleviate that problem."

But Jensen, who said the meetings began in response to overcrowding at the jail, was careful to point out that he also finds cases where his client should have a trial rather than being expedited through the system.

"You can't just say 'we're going to plea folks guilty to streamline the process,'" Jensen said, adding that each case has to be considered individually.

But even when a trial is war-

- Opposition to a government ban on abortion.
- Opposition to making a ban on gay marriage part of the U.S. Constitution. The Constitutional Party sees no constitutional basis by which the government may regulate the sexual morality of people, the platform says.
- Support for a balanced budget at the federal level.
- Opposition to the War on Drugs and support for legalizing marijuana for medicinal use.
- Support for school vouchers and health care vouchers.

Jerome apartment fire displaces families

By Dixie Thomas Reale
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — Sirens screamed just after 5:30 a.m. Wednesday as fire engines raced to the Casa Del Prado Apartments on the 100 block of Eighth Avenue East. By the time the fire was totally extinguished mid-morning, six families were homeless. Nobody was hurt in the fire and the affected apartment units were safely evacuated, said City Administrator Travis Rothwell.

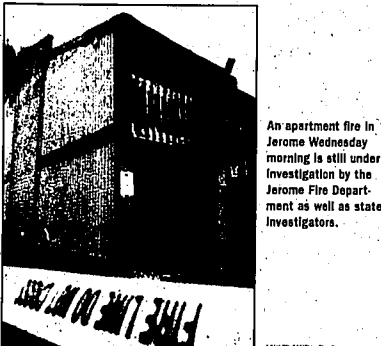

One of the six damaged apartment units was a total loss and its resident will not be able to move back in. The other five damaged units suffered varying amounts of fire, smoke and water damage. Those residents will be able to get their belongings, but will not be able to move back into the apartments until contractors make

"None of the displaced residents had renters insurance to cover personal belongings. Although she was unwilling to give the names of the displaced residents or say where they are staying, she did say that all the displaced families have found temporary housing. Johnson moves to solitary

The Associated Press

HALLEY — The 16-year-old teenager accused of killing her parents is wrongly being kept in solitary confinement in a Mini-Cassia Criminal Justice Center, her attorney claims.

In a motion filed Oct. 12, Sarah Johnson's public defender asked that she be immediately removed from solitary confinement unless her placement there is a matter of public safety.

But Blaine County Prosecuting Attorney Jim Thomas said Johnson was relocated from the Blaine County jail to make room for another defendant who was scheduled for a hearing. Johnson is 17, and the Mini-Cassia jail in Burley does not have the facilities to separate Johnson from adult inmates, as required by state law.

Johnson goes on trial Feb. 1 on two counts of first-degree murder in the Sept. 2, 2003, shotgun slaying of Diane Johnson, 52, and Alan Johnson, 46.

Attorneys maintain Sarah Johnson took a neighbor's shotgun and killed her mother while she slept and then her father near the bedroom shower.

Investigators have suggested the teenager was motivated by her parents' disapproval of her romance with an older boy and the fact that they discovered she had spent the previous night at her boyfriend's apartment after telling her parents she was with girlfriends.

Fifth District Judge Barry Wood last week agreed that Johnson must be granted reasonable access to a telephone and her attorney, Bob Pangburn, was the judge who immediately issued a written order detailing his ruling.

Johnson, meanwhile, was still in solitary confinement at the Mini-Cassia Criminal Justice Center on Wednesday.

Pangburn claimed he only discovered Johnson had been moved after he went to see her at the Blaine County jail.

And defense investigator Patrick Mun said in court documents he was once denied access to Johnson at the Mini-Cassia jail.

Dunn also described the conditions under which she was being held: in a cell roughly 8 feet wide by 10 feet long, with the only window covered in cardboard.

Johnson had no radio, tele/phone nor television, and the bright fluorescent light on the ceiling was left on 24 hours a day.

"She has no paper and nothing to write with and nothing other than the Bible and the one magazine to keep her mind occupied," Dunn wrote. In addition to a written ruling on Johnson's jail conditions, Wood is expected to rule soon on whether police interviews with Johnson and the testimony of Johnson's cellmates will be allowed in trial.

Buhl district sees funds shrink

Auditor also suggests School Board closely watch student body fund

By Mickey Walker Times-News correspondent

Buhl, "As a good rule of thumb, if business should have two or three months of reserve funds locked away in case of a downturn. ... That's what Michael Burr told Buhl School Board members Tuesday as he unveiled his annual audit report. Burr, the school district's certified public accountant, said the district has depleted its reserves to the point that it could only fund about six weeks of operation in an emergency. ... Burr said there was a loss this year there was a loss, this year there was a loss, this year there was a loss, this year there was a loss, granted, there is still a chunk of change sitting there, but when you take that dollar amount and compare it to what the actual expenditures are, there's not that much operating capital there is something happens. ... Burr also warned the board that if the trend continues for several more years, the district will find itself in trouble. ... In June, the board approved a $7.37 million 2004-05 school district budget. The general reserve fund was topped for $272,000 to balance the budget, leaving about $700,000 in reserves. ... So it's something to keep an eye on and hopefully everything will go fine with the new school and there won't be any surprises. Burr said the general fund will have to come in money in, then the district is going to have some problems. Superintendent Bill Hill told the board that one variable the school has no control over is its revenue from the state based on daily attendance. "We're below the 1,300 mark," Burr said. "Two months of revenue didn't even last year."

Board member Gary Lovell added that the district is also receiving less funding from the state for transportation costs. "What's happened to us here recently is that the state has limited the amount of reimbursement we get for transportation, so that has to come out of the pocket here locally now," he said.

It appeared to Burr that revenues are not going up, but expenses are rising. "There is enough money there, but now if you don't want to go much further into the future with this happening," Burr said. As for the audit itself, Burr said he was pleased. He did, however, offer a few suggestions that included removing the facility fund from the student body fund and closing funds that had no activity for several years. Burr said that according to Idaho law, school boards ultimately are responsible for the student body fund. "And last year there were over a quarter of a million dollars that ran through those funds," he said. "Especially in light of the current budget crisis in other governmental entities, the district needs to make sure there are controls in place to be safe."

Burr noted that with only a few exceptions, student body funds don't strictly line up. Brian Brivick, the district's business manager, told the board that the district has enacted several controls, including numbered tickets and reconciliations. "And as far as what we saw, everything looks great. The documentation is there," Burr said. "What still the potential is there and for the amount of money that's going through there you need to keep it an eye on it."

In other business, the board approved the firing of Wally Burton as head track coach. Lynn Bowman was named head basketball coach and David Blaszkiewicz as golf coach. Several members from the Presbyterian Church attended the meeting and requested the board consider moving an old railroad car that stores athletic equipment. Marvin Lively, a spokesman for the group, told the board that the church is planning a landscaping project at its facility on the corner of Main Street and North 58th Street. The rail car, which is near the church but across the alley, has become a bit of an eyesore and restricts a driver's vision from a certain direction, Lively said. Board members took the matter under advisement and will revisit the issue at a future meeting.

1985 hearing deaths of Berta Herndon, 58, of Marsing, and her nephew, Del Dean Herndon, 37, of Morefield, Neb. They were killed at their cabin in the Clear Fork of the Snake River north of McCall. They had been prospecting in the area at the time. The three-judge federal panel reached a similar decision in February 2002 but stayed its effect until after the U.S. Supreme Court made its rulings on whether only juries, not judges alone, can impose the death penalty. It ruled that juries had to determine aggravating factors, but did not decide until earlier this year that the ruling did not apply to death sentences imposed before 2002.

Hazelton voters face bond measure

Backers say sewer rates will increase too much if election fails

By Elizabeth A. Devana The North Side News

Decision 2004

HAZELTON - The city of Hazelton is putting a special $150,000 revenue bond issue before voters on Nov. 2 asking them to approve money for repairs and upgrades to the city's sewer system. Hazelton's current sewer rate is $11 for residential customers. Before July 1, residents had been paying only $5 a month but the rates were raised to make the city more eligible for grant money. Passage of the revenue bond issuance will raise Hazelton's sewer rates to $27. That will make the city eligible for U.S. Department of Agriculture grant funds, said Susan Riddle, said Susan Riddle, a consultant hired by the city. "They look at what similar communities are doing," Riddle said of the federal agency. If the bond issue doesn't pass, the backers say Hazelton residents will see their bills increase even more - to $43 a month. Riddle said that's not something residents want to see happen.

"They would rather see the bond pass and have $27 than have the bond fail and it be $43," she said. The estimated total cost of upgrading Hazelton's sewer system is $2.33 million. Of the potential grant dollars that are available, $500,000 could come from the Idaho Commerce and Labor department. That money is not contingent on passage of the bond issue. But the remaining $875,000 available can only be obtained if residents pass the bond issue. It would take approximately 30 years to pay off. Tracy Ahrens, who's been working on the project, said the upgrades should solve Hazelton's sewer problem for the next 30 years.

Jerome council works on noise ordinance

By Dixie Thomas Reale Times-News correspondent

Sound off

JEROME - The City Council is working toward becoming a quiet peaceful community by the way of a proposed noise ordinance. Several citizens on Tuesday voiced concern at the second reading of the ordinance. As it is written, the proposed ordinance prohibits noise that is plainly audible within any residence, except the residence that is the source of the noise, or on a public right-of-way or street at a distance of 100 feet. Exemptions to the ordinance include emergency vehicles, municipal buildings, schools, churches or other publicly owned buildings provided the activity has been authorized by the owner. Also exempted are activities for which a permit is required and has been obtained. Some asked what could be done about noise with loud mufflers or no mufflers at all. Jerome Police Chief Dan Hall said there was already a city ordinance that addressed muffler noise. The problem with noisy cars is we get a car (63) by the time we arrive, the car is gone," Hall said. "If you are willing to file a disturbing the peace complaint, we can get the people to turn the volume down." City Administrator Travis Rothweiler said the noise ordinance is designed to fill the holes that other city ordinances do not cover. Several people asked about publicly owned buildings like the Messersmith building at the Jerome County Fairgrounds which is often rented on weekends for parties, weddings, dances and other celebrations. Neighbors of the fairgrounds have complained over the years about loud music and partying continuing well into the night. Sponsors of dances at the Messersmith Building are required to get catering permits from the city to serve alcoholic beverages at the dances. Rothweiler said the catering permit allows the serving of alcoholic drinks but does not grant permission to make noise. "Some residents asked if getting a curfew on parties held in the publicly owned buildings might help cut down on noise complaints. Bill Bailey, representing the American Legion, said the American Legion had changed its rental agreement in June to include an 11 p.m. curfew on music, but the police tell us that is not working."

These who would like to comment on the city of Jerome's proposed noise ordinance can call City Administrator Travis Rothweiler at 324-8189.

Bailey said the American Legion could change the curfew to 10 p.m., but if it doesn't help, the organization would have to vacate the building because it cannot afford to rent it out.

Rothweiler said curfews can be tricky because not all people work 9 to 5. "People work and sleep all around the clock," Rothweiler said. Councilwoman Marjorie Schmidt asked about noise from construction, jackhammering and lawn mowers. Construction would probably be exempted because the contractor would have permits. Rothweiler said.

Rothweiler said the ordinance still needed a lot of work and the final reading had been postponed until Nov. 16. That will give staff time to contact as many churches, organizations and other building owners, as well as their neighbors who might be affected by the noise ordinance. Rothweiler said a decision on the ordinance does not have to be made at the time of the third reading.

Divided appellate panel upholds execution

By AP Boise

BOISE (AP) - A divided federal appellate court on Wednesday upheld the death sentence imposed on double-murderer Gerald Bruce Pizzuto. In a 2-1 ruling, the majority of the panel from the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals again rejected Pizzuto's claims that his trial attorney failed to effectively counsel him. The prosecution case for execution and that his rights were violated in several instances during the sentencing phase. Judge Fisher, Pizzuto's federal public defender, said he will file a 11-member panel of the 9th Circuit has already been asked to reconsider Tuesday's ruling. But she also said Pizzuto has an appeal pending in state District Court on grounds that he is mentally retarded and it would be unconstitutional to execute him under a two-year-old U.S. Supreme Court decision.

The appeal is before 2nd District Judge George Reinhardt III, who imposed the original death sentence in the case. Fisher said she has petitioned for Reinhardt's removal after the judge said Pizzuto's lack of intelligence would keep him from being rehabilitated, which is an aggravating circumstance for capital punishment.

A further attempt to disqualify Reinhardt from Pizzuto's case was rejected by the state Supreme Court. Pizzuto, 48, of Oakland, Calif., was condemned for the 1985 hearing deaths of Berta Herndon, 58, of Marsing, and her nephew, Del Dean Herndon, 37, of Morefield, Neb. They were killed at their cabin in the Clear Fork of the Snake River north of McCall. They had been prospecting in the area at the time.

The three-judge federal panel reached a similar decision in February 2002 but stayed its effect until after the U.S. Supreme Court made its rulings on whether only juries, not judges alone, can impose the death penalty. It ruled that juries had to determine aggravating factors, but did not decide until earlier this year that the ruling did not apply to death sentences imposed before 2002.

Danny Allen Burnett - Grandview

Danny Allen Burnett, 54, of Grandview, Idaho, passed away peacefully at home after a two-year battle with cancer on Oct. 18, 2004. Danny was born June 13, 1950, in Granite City, Mo., to Albert Allen and Mary Margaret (Webb) Burnett. When Danny was 12 years old his father retired from the U.S. Army and the family moved to a farm in Missouri. His teenage years were spent helping on the farm. After high school, he attended college at Bolle, Mo. He married (Lorette) Susan State-Air Force in 1970, where he served for 22 years. After having served in the states in the east, west, mid-west and in Korea, Sicily, England and West Germany, Danny was stationed at Mountain Home Air Force base, when he decided to change careers and make a change. He was working for Micron when he was diagnosed with cancer. In 2003 he medically retired. Danny married Melode Van Sickle in Buhl, in August of 1974. They are the parents of five children, family of Iornsby, III, Ben of Burley, Idaho, and Stephen, Erin and Jonathan; all of Grandview, Idaho. Danny was preceded in death by his parents.

A very big, heartfelt, thank goes out to all the caring people that have touched and supported Danny and his family during this trying time, especially the nurses, doctors and staff from MSTI oncology and radiation. A funeral will be held at 11 a.m. on Saturday, Oct. 23, 2004, at The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in Grandview, Idaho, with viewing from 10 to 11 a.m. A graveside service will be held at 4 p.m. at West End Cemetery, Buhl, Idaho. Funeral arrangements are entrusted to Farmer Funeral Chapel, Buhl, Idaho.

Nader drops bid for spot on Idaho ballot

BOISE (AP) - The campaign of independent presidential candidate Ralph Nader dropped its effort to have the longtime conservative's name printed on the Idaho ballot. The decision came a day after Nader supporters filed the papers to qualify him as a write-in candidate on Nov. 2 and the day before 4th District Judge Joel Horton had scheduled a hearing on the Nader claim that petitions to gain ballot status were improperly disqualified.

Matthew Campbell, the Boise attorney who represented the campaign in the case, declined to comment on the reason the suit was dropped. Kevin Zeese, a spokesman for the national Nader campaign in Washington, D.C., initially said he was unaware of the decision and did not respond to later telephone requests for an explanation. An earlier lawsuit to claim a spot on the ballot was rejected by 4th District Judge Deborah Ball on technical grounds, but she also said she found no justification for concluding Nader had been improperly denied ballot status.

Weather hampers rescue of 10 hikers

Yosemite National Park, Calif. (AP) - A fierce storm that started over the weekend turned deadly Wednesday, claiming the lives of two Japanese climbers in Yosemite National Park and stranding several groups of backpackers high in the Central Sierra.

The climbers were spotted Tuesday by Yosemite rangers but could not be rescued because of driving wind and snow.

The Japanese men were among seven people on the famous climbing wall when the storm hit on Tuesday. Schweizer said a solo climber was rescued Wednesday, while rangers reached a man and a woman but would remain with them on the face.

"It's very miserable conditions," she said. "It was snapping up here and there."

The bilboard raged at higher elevations through much of the day, frustrating rescuers who labored against 4-foot-deep snow and 50 mph wind gusts to reach the areas where the hikers were thought to be.

"I just believe that we're going to find them. It seems foolish to undertake this, thick. But in all fairness, they didn't know this storm was coming," said Jim Bargetto, the sister of one of the missing hikers.

The 10 stranded hikers included two groups of experienced backpackers and a couple from San Luis Obispo County who apparently set out for a day hike.

"They're all extremely knowledgeable about backpacking. They've been doing it since they were tykes. ... There's no issue with the ability of marine mammals to hear natural sounds," according to the court.

"Obviously, I'm very disappointed, particularly on behalf of the cetaceans," Sinkin said.

"Sinkin said he hadn't yet decided whether to pursue an appeal.

Candidates on the issues

Should the extra penny sales tax be retired?

Bruce Newcomb

Newcomb: "Yes. That was the condition of the contract with the people of Idaho that it only last for two years. It is absolutely not necessary that the contract be honored. The sales tax increase should not be renewed."

Warren Yaden

Yaden: "Absolutely. In fact, one of the strongest differences between me and my opponent is... I believe that the best public Idaho has now is the 1.5th highest rated state in the nation...

What do you think about merit pay for teachers?

Newcomb: "I think that good teachers are worth their weight in gold and should be rewarded. It makes no sense to me that all teachers should be paid the same just because they have so much education and/or have been teaching for so many years..."

Yaden: "America is the strongest nation in the world in part because of our reliance on free market principles..."

Is the state Department of Agriculture doing a good job of policing and helping dairies control odor and waste? Should nutrient management plans be required of all agriculture, not just cattle operations, and should they be available to the public? Should people who live more than one mile away from a proposed dairy be allowed to testify at hearings in regard to the proposed sites?

Newcomb: "There should always be public hearings on the new location of a large confined feeding operation (CAFO) to determine the concerns of those affected. I would think that would be essential to all parties..."

Yaden: "I believe that agriculture is already well regulated by the federal and state governments. Mostly every job in Magic Valley is based in agriculture..."

Should the College of Southern Idaho become a four-year school?

Newcomb: "No, there are already enough four-year colleges in Idaho. Even Boise State University recognizes the pressing need for community colleges and is doing something about it by trying to establish a community college campus west of Boise."

Yaden: "No, the state can't afford another four-year institution. Besides, CSI already does a terrific job in its current mission."

How would you go about convincing Boise-area and northern Idaho legislators that they should support the state paying to bail out water users in Magic Valley and eastern Idaho in order to stop depletion of the Eastern Snake River Plain Aquifer?

Newcomb: "By showing them the consequences to the state economy if this controversy is not resolved. We need to also show that most of the funding could occur by bonding and have the debt serviced by fees that water users are willing to pay..."

Yaden: "I am not at all convinced that a pro-rated 'tax out' is the best strategy for dealing with this crisis. Agriculture must be given priority access to our precious resource of water..."

Do you think Idaho should pass a constitutional amendment forbidding gay marriage?

Newcomb: "Yes, I think that the sanctity of marriage is between one man and one woman. I have voted for that in statute and as a proposed constitutional amendment in the last legislative session."

Yaden: "Given the radical agendas of many judges in Idaho and across the nation, it would be foolish to sit back and wait for a court ordered destruction of Idaho's families. It is appalling that the Republican Senate in Idaho could not find the will to allow the People to defend itself against this present danger."

Are Idaho's laws regarding abortion rights tight enough? If you think they should be altered, what would you recommend?

Newcomb: "My view is and always has been that abortions should only be allowed in the event of incest, rape or if the life of the mother is endangered. I do not think that there is a lot that can be done differently until the Supreme Court changes its decision on Roe vs. Wade."

Yaden: "We can do so much more to help women and their children - for these babies. We will need to revamp Idaho's Parental Consent Law in the wake of the 9th Circuit Court of Appeals' ruling..."

Undocumented Catch-22

One common scenario officials are trying to resolve: An undocumented individual is arrested for drug without it being a case of other minor offenses.

In the process of booking, it is discovered the person is not in the country legally. The jail contacts authorities and a warrant of deportation is issued.

Federal officials can't deport and federal agencies bring money into the jail. "It came out of my concerns about what's going on in the jail and one of the things we want to do is to keep looking for solutions to help pay for the jail," Bartsch said.

Recently, expenses at the jail have increased and income has decreased due to the rising percentage of local inmates, Bartsch said.

ly have been missing since Sunday at a 9,400-foot-elevation lake east of Fresno in the Sierra National Forest.

A break in the weather late Wednesday allowed the Fresno County Sheriff's Department to dispatch a helicopter toward the groups' location. If the hikers were spotted, a CH-47 Chinook helicopter was prepared to drop supplies, sheriff's officer Robert Osborn said.

Another group of four, close friends from the San Francisco Bay area city of Lafayette, were reported missing Tuesday morning and were believed to be in the Ansel Adams Wilderness on the southern fringe of Yosemite National Park.

The four men caught in Yosemite - Jeff Peacock, 45, his father, 75-year-old Tom Peacock, Douglas W. Schneider, 47, and Brian Jefferson, 57 - were described as experienced backpackers who had camped in snow previously and were prepared for bad weather.

"They went extremely well-equipped, and we take huge amounts in that," said Cindy Schneider, who said her husband is a biochemist for Bectel Biosciences in Richmond.

"They're all extremely knowledgeable about backpacking. They've been doing it since they were tykes. ... There's no issue with the ability of marine mammals to hear natural sounds," according to the court.

Appeals court rules whales have no standing to sue Navy to stop sonar

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - A federal appeals court decided Wednesday that marine mammals have no standing to sue to stop the U.S. Navy from using sonar.

In upholding a lower court decision, a three-judge panel of the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco said the world's cetaceans - whales, porpoises and dolphins - have no standing under the Endangered Species Act, the Marine Mammal Protection Act or the National Environmental Policy Act.

"Obviously, I'm very disappointed, particularly on behalf of the cetaceans," Sinkin said.

INTO THE HEART OF CONSERVATIVE UTAH

Filmmaker Michael Moore brings Bush-bashing to Orem

OREM, Utah (AP) — Filmmaker Michael Moore brought his Bush bashing to the heart of conservative Utah Wednesday, saying he was proud of student organizers who held firm against critics who tried to keep him out.

"I feel bad for students who had to suffer through this simply because they believe in freedom of expression," Moore said before his sold-out speech at Utah Valley State College.

The stop was Moore's fifth in his 40-city "Starkr" tour, a national trek aimed at mobilizing youth voters. Asked if he leaned to his safety in an area opposed to his point of view, Moore smiled jokingly. "It is the most conservative county in the country. I can't think of a better place to be," he said.

"The whole country loves the Americans, why would I feel unsafe here? I haven't seen a lot of Utah gangs, Mormons with chains and knives and Uzis."

Moore's appearance has stirred fierce debate in Utah County, one of the nation's most conservative. Critics here say the student government misused public money by spending most of its $50,000 budget to book the "Fahrenheit 9/11" director.

Student government leaders organizing the speech, who face a recall petition, said the money was spent properly and that Moore's appearance reflects the freedom of expression that has historically had a home at colleges and universities.

Because it had received so many complaints, the school brought in conservative talk show host Sean Hannity to speak last week in an effort to balance Moore's perspective.

The fight to keep Moore away went to court earlier this week when a parent and OVSU student filed a lawsuit seeking to stop the school from paying Moore. The suit claimed the college acted outside its authority by agreeing to a contract exceeding the spending limit set out in the student government's constitution.

However, school spokesman Derek Hall said before the speech that proceeds from the Hannity and Moore events would fund the net cost for both speakers to only $35,000.

"The way we look at it, we spent $17,500 each on two national speakers," Hall said.

About 90 security officers — including an assortment of 35 to 40 policemen and sheriff's deputies — were on hand to protect Moore, compared with about 40 for Hannity.

The audience was warned not to stand on seats in the 8,000-seat arena, wave signs or disrupt Moore's speech, but that didn't stop a conservative contingent from heckling the filmmaker.

At least three people were thrown out, including one seated near the front who Moore said was threatening him by pointing an unidentified object

Roaming through the Rio Bec region

A drive through the colorful villages along the Costa Maya en route to the Rio Bec ruins gives visitors an up close look at life in the southern section of the Yucatan.

Groves of lemons and limes, as well as fields of sugar cane and pineapples, grow in abundance as far as the eye can see.

A local girl sells fruit in Los Limones, Mexico.

BUENAS VISTAS
Karla Barnes

My favorite stop on our journey to the Rio Bec region was Los Limones. As we approached this small settlement, we were greeted by extra large lemons, known in Mexico as "topes." This is a warning to travelers that they are about to enter a village and to slow down.

Upon slowing, young children approached our car to sell us a variety of locally-grown delicacies, such as watermelon, pineapple, lemons, limes, oranges, papaya and guava. Never in my life have I enjoyed a faster pineapple and papaya.

The children who were not selling fruits and vegetables were playing alongside the road, poned by their dogs, cats, chickens and pigs.

The homes were modest, some painted in bright colors, and almost all adorned with brightly-hung flowers.

journeying toward the west, we enjoyed the spectacular site of the sun setting over the jungle on our way to one of the best visited archaeological sites in all of Mexico, the Rio Bec region.

The Rio Bec ruins all lie in Mexican territory with the city of Chetumal on the east and Tulum to the west. Discovered in 1906-1907 by French explorer Maurice de Perigny, the Rio Bec ruins consist of more than 60 Mayan sites, some which have not yet been excavated and several that have been restored to their time of splendor, during about A.D. 500.

Spinal promontory she produced is a small site with large lessons in Rio Bec architecture. The main temple has three long towers adorned with small ornamental steps and elaborate roof corbels. Just behind the south tower is a narrow doorway that leads to a secret passageway that may have been used by Mayan priests.

Not far down the road on the Rio Bec route is Becan, another beautiful place with several interesting features. As you enter the site, you pass over a dry moat 52 feet wide by 16 feet deep. This was once used as a protective measure during the Early Classic Period.

A massive two-tower structure is the focal point. Behind the towers are two levels of rooms. Vaulted tunnels, checkerboards and various masks are also unique features at Becan.

Chichnaum, my favorite of the three Rio Bec sites, is a quaint city with heavily-sculpted structures. The main temple is covered with intricate carvings, and a stack of masks of the god, Chaac, set on the corner. At the House of the Serpents Mouth, I got goose-bumps as I took a sent on the edge of the gigantic "jaws" and the spiral eyes of the structure looked down on me.

The structures along the route of the Rio Bec aren't just about the ruins, they're also about the people and places along the way. Don't wait too long before you experience the many wonders of Mexico.

Mexican Coke: How sweet it is red, white and green national flags.

The neighborhood is one of the nation's largest consumers of Mexican Coke, a sweeter — some say — version of the American soft drink shipped north in heavy glass bottles.

The U.S. Coca-Cola Co., which does not make Mexican Coke, has taken notice and is trying to win over soda pop drinkers in this economically bustling area known to locals as La Villa.

The import typically costs a little more than U.S. Coke, but residents are willing to pay extra to be reminded of home.

"It has a way different taste, better than American Coke," said Tomas Rios, a customer at La Chiquita canteen.

His lunch companion, Edgar Flores, added, "When I was a baby, my mom used to feed me Coke in a bottle."

"A lot of products that Americans think are quintessentially American, Mexicans think are quintessentially Mexican," said Chris Bayer, a professor of history and Latin American studies at the University of Illinois at Chicago. "Coke is part of the Mexican cultural landscape."

Last year, Mexico consumed 65.2 billion cans of Coca-Cola products — 526 servings of Coke a year for every man, woman and child, making it the largest per capita consumer of soda pop in the world. Americans consume 414 8-ounce servings per year.

Siqueiros paintings will fund film

By Agustín Zurza
Los Angeles Times

HOLLYWOOD — In Hollywoood, he could be mistaken for just another would-be filmmaker with a script under his arm and a handout for the money to make it.

But David Siqueiros has assets, not a dime of them. He claims the same surname as world-renowned painter David Alfaro Siqueiros and a private collection of works by the artist who spearheaded Mexico's 20th-century mural movement.

Plus, the aspiring producer has a nonchalant willingness to convert his rare collection into cash.

Siqueiros-42, whose bullfight father was a first cousin of the revolutionary muralist, has started selling the paintings to help raise the $1.5 million he needs to fund the script he wrote into a motion picture. The movie-maker says he has no qualms about displaying his collection of historic family treasures, to realize his own artistic vision on the silver screen.

"I don't have a problem with it," says Siqueiros during lunch near the Sunset Strip office of his company, Via Hollywood. "It's art for art, and I think my uncle would be happy with it."

High-quality works by Alfaro Siqueiros (to use his maternal surname) to sign his work and whom David calls an uncle, following Mexican tradition are rarely available for sale in the United States, experts say, due in part to paternity laws that prevent his art from being taken out of Mexico without permission.

The younger Siqueiros says his collection — which once totaled about 15 pieces, some inherited, some acquired — was brought here legally before the restrictions took effect.

Art lovers gasp at the thought of marketing precious paintings for a gamble as risky as a first-time movie. But Siqueiros, who came to California at 21 and made a career in Spanish-language television and advertising, says he's confident because "people have reacted positively to his script."

"Titled 'Mazuzán,' it's a transgender story about the personal identity crisis of a purified Mexican American with an Angloized surname. He's an affluent Orange County investment banker forced to face his cultural roots when he reluctantly undertakes a 24-hour business trip to Mexico City.

Ice cream flavors from garlic to avocado

By Gary Mark
Chicago Tribune

MIRIHUA, Venezuela — Bos nep Gonzalez gasped in disbelief as he surveyed the selection at Heladera Comunitaria, an ice cream parlor in this western Venezuelan city perched between towering mountains.

"Gañito" the 10-year-old shouted at his mother. "Smoked trout Avocado Onion."

His dark eyes wide as saucers, Gonzalez settled for something relatively conservative. "Coca-Cola" ice cream. He said it tasted great, "just like the soft drink."

Created 20 years ago by Portuguese immigrant Manuel La Silva Oliveira, Comunitaria has become wildly popular with locals the avocado flavor right. Since then, he has become a Guinness World Records holder, producing 812 flavors to date — and counting.

"I thought up 50 or 60 new flavors this year," said Oliveira, 73. "I try it and I'll don't like the taste right away. I drop it."

Not all 812 flavors are available every day, but there are usually about 75 chilling under a long glass counter.

There is smokable trout-flavored ice cream and tuna ice cream, along with shrimp, squid, ham and cheese, meat, whiskey, beer, champagne, wine, crab, rice, pumpkin, roses, black beans, ginger, asparagus, chili, spaghetti and cheese, garlic and corn — and many more.

Various readers brought us these photographs, with notes about how these early Magic Valley families shared love, labor and laughter; trials and tears; struggles and success.

Formal or not, each of these images captures evidence of those ties that bind.

Willis, the family's father; George Willis; and Ernest Willis. Henry's wife died in 1898. When Jesse was 14, he came with the family to Twin Falls and lived in tents, like many other families did in Rock Creek Canyon while waiting for their homes to be built up on their claims. As a boy, Jesse drove a team of horses, helping his father run a freight line between Twin Falls and Shoshone by way of the Shoshone Falls ferry. Contributing to the family's meager income, Jesse and his father hauled water for 50 cents a barrel to settlers in the valley fortunate enough to already have homes.

THOUSAND SPRINGS

Stretch of Snake River makes for a great downstream trip

By Mike Cothern
Times-News correspondent

The September afternoon was ideal for paddling a canoe on open water. No wind or waves were present to interfere with a smooth, easy glide.

A calm day also adds to the aesthetics of a journey by paddle. The unblemished water surface reflects the shores' vegetation, rocks, and for this outing, the many springs and waterfalls that make up the Snake River's Thousand Springs area.

Such was the scene from our flotilla of four canoes and two kayaks as we paddled the stretch from Banbury Hot Springs to Sili-gars.

A joint effort between the Twin Falls Parks and Recreation Department and the Idaho Guide Service brought our group together. This trip is one of several the two entities put together every summer on the Snake River.

Shelley and Olin Gardner, owners of the outfitting company, were our guides for the day. They provided not only their knowledge of the area, but also the canoes and the always-important shuttle for one-way trips. In addition, with all the private property on the river, their familiarity of the access points was a key component.

A notable element on this stretch of the Snake River is its minimal current, which became obvious the first time that we paddled across the river. While the lack of velocity allows certain areas to accrue mats of undesirable vegetation, it provides a good arena for paddlers of all skill levels.

The first feature on our route was across from our put-in. Box Canyon Springs, after being partially diverted, enters the Snake River at this point. The boundary between clear spring water and river water in the main channel is striking.

Just below the mouth of Box Canyon lies Blueheart Springs, where water bubbles up through the sand in a turquoise pool. The water was inviting enough on this day that a couple of brave souls left their canoes for a swim. The 50-degree water, however, made for a short encounter.

The middle section of the trip allows for a care-free float where the area's birds become the focus. We saw several species of ducks and geese, a pair of osprey, and a golden eagle.

The overgrowth of trees at the mouth of Salmon Falls Creek forms an important nesting and breeding grounds for great blue herons. While too late in the season to see much activity, we did observe a couple of these birds, along with a smaller related species. The tangle of trees also offers some secluded water lanes that allow for a little exploration.

Near the journey's end, we paddled upstream against the spring flow on the east side of Minnie Milner Island to the main waterfall's base. We were directed to a spot where we could disembark from our canoes, stretch our legs, and have lunch. The group concurred that our vantage point here of the Thousand Springs cascading water was much better than the traditional view from across the river.

The trip allowed us to see some hidden gems only accessible by our mode of travel. And from other sights routinely viewed from the highway, we received a closer, more intimate perspective. This short stretch of the Snake River offers much diversity, and a great means to experience it by a lazy paddle downstream.

Bugle of rutting elk echoes through Utah

ELK RIDGE, Utah (AP) — To those unfamiliar with the sounds of Utah mountains in the fall, the howl of a bull elk challenging other males can be frightening. Even those who have heard the eerie calls get goose bumps when the wicked walls echo through the forest.

Surely the high-pitched, full-bodied "scream" could not emanate from a huge animal singing with testosterone and bent on perpetuating its species. A banshee drifting through the timber looking for lost souls is a more fitting image for the wailing tones of bull elk during the rut.

People say they have heard the bugle — isn't there a more accurate word that doesn't conjure up the picture of a soldier playing "Taps"? — throughout the year, but it begins in earnest during the first spell of September, when the bulls realize mating season has arrived.

conservation officer Joe Nicholson gave The Salt Lake Tribune a lesson on elk talk.

Treating the adventure like an elk hunt with a camera rather than rifle, Nicholson suggested camouflage and no fancy-smelling shampoo, deodorant or mouthwash.

Like other big-game animals, elk are most visible to people in the few hours after sunrise and a couple of hours before sunset. They are active all night long.

Hunters, lucky enough to draw one of the coveted elk permits on the San Juan unit where Elk Ridge is located, report an inability to sleep because of all the bugling happening right outside their tents and campers. One hunter suggested the bulls bugle throughout the night, which he hopes that the lack of sleep would affect hunters' aim.

Our trio hit the mountain about 4:30 p.m. on the first day. Not 10 steps from the vehicle, we could hear a faint bugle. Nicholson pulled out a powder duster to test the wind, pointed out the intended direction and we took off in a quiet shuffle.

When approaching a ridge or coming to a clearing, Nicholson stopped, put in a mouth reed and gave out a short series of cow calls to make sure we weren't barging in on our quarry.

Signs of the elk were everywhere — a scrape where a big bull had taken out his aggression on a lowly branch or used it to get the velvet off his antlers. Elk tracks littered the ground like the falling aspen leaves and, later in the trip, Nicholson stumbled across an antler shed dropped by a bull last winter.

Around 6 p.m., Nicholson motioned to drop to the ground. A cow elk was moving through the trees about 100 yards away. Not far behind, a bull followed. The cover was too thick for a decent picture.

Nicholson was not deterred. After the bull moved out of sight, he tested the wind direction and took off again. Slowly following the animals, Nicholson kept their interest piqued with an occasional cow call and a bugle to challenge the herd, bull.

With dusk enveloping the land, the moment came. The bull had enough of the challenge and turned to face his pursuer. There is nothing like an 800-pound animal with sharp

After running to within 50 yards, the bull stopped and stared. He turned to leave and was disappearing into the trees when Nicholson dropped to the ground and started raking a stick through the brush, mimicking a testosterone-charged bull. "We got between him and his cows," Nicholson said through a beaming smile. "That works every time."

Some hunters become disenchanted with NRA's controversial methods

By Brent Frazier, Knight Ridder News Service

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — You won't find Mike Hayden's name in the National Rifle Association's membership rolls.

Oh, it was there years ago. When he was growing up in western Kansas, where hunting is almost a way of life, he was an enthusiastic supporter of the powerful gun-rights organization.

But today, he is part of a growing group of hunters who have become disenchanted with the NRA and its controversial ways.

"I just don't think the NRA represents the best interests of hunters, with the extreme positions it takes," said Hayden, who is secretary of the Kansas Department of Wildlife and Parks. "It does some good, but it also does some things that are counterproductive: some things that hurt the image of the average hunter. I decided that I didn't want to be part of an organization like that anymore."

Hayden certainly isn't alone. As the NRA becomes more aggressive in its role to fight gun control, it is coming under increased fire — even from its largest group of supporters, hunters.

"Like a look at some of the issues in the last year alone that have generated a barrage of shots: Some hunters worry about their image as the NRA continues to support private ownership of a wide range of assault weapons, even those which critics say have no sporting use.

"The NRA has sharply criticized state and federal game and fish agencies, saying they have unknowingly contributed to the decline in hunting by creating needless red tape in the form of overbearing regulations.

"The organization has blasted the Clinton Administration for its so-called "Roadless Initiative," which closed roads on millions of acres of federal land. The NRA said that move has closed many areas to drive-up hunting and added to access problems. It supports the Bush Administration's plan to open those roads again.

"The NRA has rebuffed efforts by organizations such as the Sierra Club to become allies in a program designed to improve wildlife habitat.

Kayne Robinson, president of the NRA, downplays those incidents and the criticism they have generated. He said the NRA still is the champion of hunting sports and is about to become more so.

"The creation of a new program, "Free Hunters" — which will place a priority on solving some of the problems that have led to a decline in hunter numbers — has already attracted 20,000 members in its first two months of existence, he said.

He added that almost 3 million of the NRA's overall 4 million-plus members are hunters and that there has been no mass exodus of disenchanted sportsmen.

"They realize the NRA is still their biggest ally," Robinson said. But some hunters aren't so sure.

"In many, my opposition of the National Rifle Association is like spitting on the American flag," Joel Vance wrote in an article in the summer edition of the Outdoor Guide. "I beg to differ."

Like Hayden, Vance is among those who aren't afraid to admit that there's a "former" in front of their status as NRA members.

"I belonged to the NRA years ago, when it concentrated on gun and hunter safety, an admirable goal," he said. "Now it is so focused on shooting down anything that smacks of gun control that it has lost me."

Vance, who lives in Russellville, Mo., would like to see the NRA soften its approach and develop a more cooperative nature — an approach that, he says, would "better represent the hunters in the organization."

"There are many hunters, me among them, who are turned off by the nastiness of the NRA," Vance wrote in the Outdoor Guide. "The attitude that 'If you ain't for us, you're agin us' is stupid, self-serving, and in the long run, self-destructive."

Idaho bank sees drop in earnings

KETCHUM — Coeur d'Alene-based Idaho Independent Bank (IIB) on Wednesday said its earnings fell in the third quarter, compared with the same period a year ago. IIB operates a loan production office in Ketchum.

For the quarter, IIB's earnings were $1.2 million, down from $1.3 million in third quarter 2003. IIB said Jack W. Gustave, IIB's chairman, president and chief executive.

IIB saw a 7 percent increase in total assets for the third quarter compared with the same quarter a year ago. IIB's total assets increased to $387 million, up $26.7 million from a year ago. The bank said its total deposits and repurchase agreements increased to $344.3 million, up nearly 7 percent.

"Given the industry-wide decline in residential real estate refinancing activity this year, we are pleased with these results," Gustave said.

IIB also declared a 7 percent stock dividend payable to shareholders of its common stock of record on Nov. 8. The stock dividend will be paid Dec. 3.

Company voluntarily recalls pasta products

TWIN FALLS — Harrisburg, Pa.-based New World Pasta Company is voluntarily recalling a limited quantity of American Beauty brand pasta products.

The products — which include some Elbro-Roni, Shel-Roni, Large Shel-Roni and Roni-Mac products — may contain small metal shavings. There have been no reports of injury or illnesses associated with the consumption of these products.

The products were produced in June and distributed in Nevada, Idaho, Oregon, Washington, Montana, Utah, Arizona and California. New World Pasta has acted to immediately remove all affected products from store shelves.

New World Pasta has a list of the affected products on its Web site, www.nwpasta.com, or customers may call the company at 1-800-730-5957 with questions.

Firms with military workers may get loans

TWIN FALLS — Small business owners with vital employees serving in the military are eligible to apply for government loans.

The U.S. Small Business Administration (SBA) offers Military Reservist Economic Injury Disaster Loans to help small businesses who may suffer financially due to the loss of an essential employee due to military service, according to information released by the U.S. Department.

"The loss of such a key employee, even for a short period of time, can adversely affect a small company's ability to remain viable," said Alfred E. Judd, the SBA's disaster relief director.

The 4 percent fixed-rate, 30-year maximum loans may be used to pay fixed debts, payroll, accounts payable and other unpaid bills. Small businesses may apply for the loans from the time the employee is discharged.

For more information, contact the SBA at 1-800-488-5323.

Storm claims batter Allstate earnings

CHICAGO — Allstate Corp., which has agents in the Valley — said Wednesday its third-quarter earnings plummeted 92 percent due to heavy insurance claims from the hurricanes that battered Florida and the Southeast.

Allstate, the second-largest U.S. property casualty insurer, behind State Farm and the biggest in Florida, reported $1.1 billion in total catastrophe losses for the quarter. More than 95 percent of it, or $1.06 billion, was from the four major storms — hurricanes Charley, Frances, Ivan and earnings.

As a result, net earnings for the July-through-September quarter were just $56 million, or 2 cents per share, down from $691 million, or 71 cents per share, a year earlier.

Church plans building

Structure will house three LDS support services

By Megan Hinds Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — By this time next year, The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints will have a building that will house a number of support services under one roof.

Construction crews soon will break ground for a new building valued at $1.4 million at 722 Cheney Drive. The building will include a new Deseret Industries thrift store, which will be about twice as large as the existing Twin Falls store, said Curtis Ravsten, director of Deseret Industries.

The thrift store operations are part of the welfare services department of the LDS church.

The 45,175-square-foot building also will house the church's family services and employment services offices, now in separate locations in Magic Valley, Ravsten said. Some regional physical facility managers may work out of the building as well.

"We're creating a location that serves more than one purpose," he said.

Deseret now leases a 14,200-square-foot building with an 8,800-square-foot sales floor on Blue Lakes Boulevard. As donations to the store have increased, the thrift store operations gradually have outgrown the space, Ravsten said. The sales floor alone in the new building will be about 14,000 square feet.

The (current) location is woefully inadequate in the black processing area," Ravsten said.

The LDS church uses its Deseret stores as training grounds for unemployed workers in the job services program, said Dr. Brad Hobbs, Twin Falls Stake president. The existing Twin Falls store is capable of employing 45 trainees and five full-time staffers, he said.

The volunteer-run employment services office matches unemployed workers with jobs, Hobbs said. And the larger building — with the addition of the church's employment services office — will allow Deseret to add 15 more trainees at the thrift shop.

Joe Russell, a Twin Falls real estate developer and estate planning strategist, holds Deseret's lease on its current location. The thrift store is slated to vacate the Blue Lakes building next summer, but Russell said he's seen "quite a bit of interest" in the building already due to its prime location, he said.

"I feel like that building will lease pretty easily," Russell said.

Record cargo traffic causes severe backups at L.A. ports

The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — These days, the worst traffic jam in Southern California is at the port.

Scores of mammoth cargo ships laden with Asian imports often must wait a week before their thousands of steel containers are loaded or unloaded at the sprawling docks along the coast of Los Angeles and Long Beach.

With ships arriving faster than dockworkers can handle them, the ports can't keep ahead of the rising tide of Pacific Rim cargo. The delays have revealed problems with everything from harbor operations to the truck and rail systems that move goods inland.

State guards unclaimed property

LAGERMAN — The state is safeguarding unclaimed property for hundreds of people and businesses whose keys to their addresses are in Magic Valley.

The Idaho State Tax Commission is looking for those folks, and hoping they'll call to claim the property.

It's stuff for which Idaho businesses have been unable to find the rightful owners, such as payroll checks, contents of safe deposit boxes, tax refunds, stock dividends, workers' compensation benefits and the like.

The Idaho Legislature in 1997 changed state law governing unclaimed property. Now after property that's safeguarded by the tax commission remains unclaimed for 10 years, it will transfer to state ownership and be deposited in Idaho's general fund.

The first time that will happen is 2007. Before the 1997 law, the tax commission held unclaimed property for its rightful owners in perpetuity.

The Times-News on Thursdays prints names of a sampling of unclaimed property owners whose last known addresses are in Magic Valley communities. Today's list is from Hagerman, Jerome and Halley. The tax commission said each person or business listed today — or the person's heir — owns unclaimed property worth more than $100.

Watch for other towns in coming weeks.

Which way do you turn when you receive conflicting orders?

Dealing with conflicting orders from bosses at work often leaves workers wondering whom to turn to.

Question: I'm in a bind at work. My boss wants to implement something very badly. The information technology director is not on board and is extremely uncomfortable with it. My boss has gotten me to try to go around the IT director's back to see if we can implement something anyway. I researched further and saw for myself that my boss's idea is not a good idea. In fact, it could even put the organization in a legal bind if something were to go wrong. I pointed that out to the boss, but haven't gotten any response. I intentionally kept our conversation private, rather than involve the IT director. My objective is to dissuade the boss from the idea without having it appear that I am siding with the IT director. Now I feel both are not pleased with me — the boss because I'm raising objections to his idea, and the IT director because he perceives my role in all of this as getting the boss to go around his back over his objections. Do I just resign myself to the doghouse, or what should I do?

Fraud task force pursues mission

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — It was July 2002 in Washington, and the focus on the president to respond to a devastating series of corporate scandals that had cost investors billions of dollars. Houston energy trader Enron Corp. had collapsed, seven months earlier, amid revelations of shady business partnerships, thrusting former chief executive Kenneth Lay and his long history of political donations to the Bush family into the harsh spotlight.

WorldCom Inc. Prominent Democrats seized the news to argue that the president and vice president, both former Enron executives, were too cozy with corporate America. Lawmakers from both parties maneuvered to be the first to investigate claims of accounting fraud and call for corporate leaders' scalps. Within two weeks of the announcement that WorldCom had filed the largest bankruptcy case in U.S. history, President Bush signed an executive order creating a government-wide task force to root out business crime. Bush told reporters a few months later that the multi-agency task force "is sending a clear warning and a clear message to every dishonest corporate leader: You will be exposed, and you will be held accountable in America as above or beyond the law." Today, more than two years after the task force's creation, federal prosecutors and Securities and Exchange Commission investigators have helped convict a number of high-profile chief executives, including the former leaders of drugstore chain Rite Aid Corp. and cable television provider Adelphia Communications. Congress' government lawyers have indicted many more — including Enron's Lay, WorldCom's Bernard Ebbers, and HealthSouth Corp.'s Richard Scrushy

— all of whom pleaded not guilty and are awaiting trial. There have been some losses and changes that prosecutors are coveting in an effort to bring high-profile cases, but federal prosecutors involved in the task force have convicted more than 500 corporate wrongdoers in that month, according to a task force report. That's out of 900 suspects criminally charged, with many of those trials still pending. "I think the proudest legacy is we have sent a message of deterrence that has found its way into every corner of corporate America," said Deputy Attorney General Jim Comey in an interview. "I believe we have changed behavior."

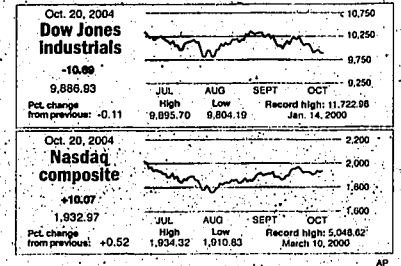

Delta

Continued from E1 Analysts believe the airline has only a few weeks left to win $1 billion in concessions from pilots and restructure its heavy debt to avoid a Chapter 11 filing. Delta did not plan to hold a conference call Wednesday to answer investor questions, suggesting to some analysts that a bankruptcy filing is near. Delta had $1.45 billion in unrestricted cash as of Sept. 30. "They're in a period where they are concentrating more on getting the necessary concessions to save the company from going into bankruptcy," said Roy Neid, an analyst with Citicorp Securities Inc. in New York. "There's not a lot to talk about until they find out if the pilots and the other parties are going to cooperate." The pilots union said in a memo released Wednesday that the two sides continue to meet and are making progress on an overall plan with targets that will be significant issues to resolve. The memo did not elaborate. Delta said it lost $651 million, or $5.16 a share, for the three months ending Sept. 30, compared to a loss of $1.1 billion, or $1.36 a share, in the same period a year ago. The current loss includes $5 million Delta paid out in dividends to preferred stockholders. Declaring one-time items, Delta said it lost $592 million, or $4.73 a share, in the July-September period. On that basis, analysts surveyed by Thomson First Call were expecting a loss of $4.28 a share, an estimate that had been reduced after Delta warned of its loss on Friday. Revenue in the third quarter was $3.87 billion, a 5.9 percent increase from the $3.66 billion Delta recorded a year ago. "Last month we outlined the key elements of Delta's transformation plan with targets of $1 billion in annual pilot cost savings, as well as participation from Delta's other stakeholders," said Gerald Grinstein, Delta's chief executive officer. "As Delta's financial situation continues to deteriorate, time is of the essence." Delta blames high fuel and pilot costs as major contributors to its continued losses, which have surpassed $1 billion in the last three years. It also has been hit hard by competition from low-fare carriers, which in turn has forced it to lower its ticket prices to compete. Delta said its passenger unit revenues declined 3.7 percent and domestic yields were down 5.9 percent in the third quarter compared to a year ago. The Atlanta-based airline also said it faces increased competition from the $10.48 billion restructured by the four major airlines that hit Florida, a major destination for Delta travelers with targets. Without changes in its cost structure, Delta expects its financial situation to get even worse. It estimates fuel costs for all of 2004 to exceed last year's by $1.5 billion. In the third quarter, Delta recorded two non-cash charges of $54 million related to costs associated with its pilot pension plan and the sale of some of its aircraft. For the first nine months of the year, Delta said its net loss was $3.01 billion, or $24.05 a share, compared to a loss of $550 million, or $3.71 a share, in the same period. The current nine-month loss includes $14 million Delta paid out in dividends to preferred stockholders. Nine-month revenue was $11.26 billion, an 8.4 percent increase from the $10.48 billion recorded in 2003.

Oil prices rise while stocks end mixed

NEW YORK (AP) — Wall Street wavered Wednesday, leaving stocks mixed as oil prices soared on bleak inventory data and investors digested a disappointing earnings report from IBM. Morgan Chase & Co. blue chips were under pressure, but tech shares advanced on strength in semiconductor stocks. A shortfall in gasoline and heating oil pushed crude prices back above the $54 level, solidly reversing a two-day retreat. Inventories of distillate fuels, which include heating oil and diesel, fell for a fifth week, reversing a trend that high energy prices will eventually slow consumer spending and dent corporate bottom lines. The data also distracted investors from a slew of profit consumer demand, the economy, corporate profits and the future. That's the driver. Does it have an effect? It is. It's larger than earnings, and right now it's larger than the Dow Jones industrial average sagged 10.69, or 0.11 percent, to 9,886.93. The broader gauge was higher. The Standard & Poor's 500 Index added 0.43, or 0.04 percent, to 1,035.66. The Nasdaq composite index closed up 10.07, or 0.52 percent, at 1,932.97, partly due to strength in the chip sector. The Philadelphia Semiconductor index advanced 1.31 percent last day after bellwether International Business Machines Corp. delivered better-than-expected earnings and an upbeat forecast for high-tech spending. Growing concern about how much energy prices will weigh on the economy in the months ahead kept Street's attention riveted on oil prices.

Class reunion committee put on a great event

Our 50th class reunion had to be the greatest ever! The entire reunion committee is to be commended for the great job they did. The picnic, the tour of old and new Twin Falls, the river boat trip, the golf tournament, the banquet and the brunch were great. Gail, the memory room at the banquet was terrific and really gave us a trip down memory lane. Sue Pollard, you did a truly awesome job on the memory book. Thanks.

In all our classmates who came here to live away — New Zealand, Maryland, Vermont, Missouri, Ontario, Alaska and many other states; thank you so much for making the effort to be at the reunion, it was great seeing all of you again.

LETTERS OF THANKS

A year and a half ago, I left a pair of pictures on my car's roof. After I realized this, I retraced my steps but couldn't find them. Imagine my surprise when I received a call from Devry Nield recently telling me she had my pictures. She traced them to the police department and they really gave us a trip down memory lane. The pictures and then personally delivered them to me. I'm amazed that anyone would take the time to do all that Devry did. A big thank you to her for returning the pictures.

INVITATION
The Idaho Outfitters and Guides Licensing Board is accepting applications for an outdoor opportunity to conduct outlined and guided snow-carrying on the Sawtooth National Recreation Area. The season of use is December through early April, depending on snow conditions. A variety of day-use options are expected to be available to the public. These options may include 1) 2 hour rides, half-day rides, and full day trips. The trail rides will occur on existing groomed snow-covered trails with no additional areas available. National Forest system lands are not available for a base of operations so applicants will be conducting their base of operations in the vicinity of Stanley or in the Wood River Valley. Further details, and a description of the operating area, may be obtained by contacting the Board of Outfitters & Guides Licensing Board (208) 327-7380.
Application packets can be obtained from the Licensing Board at 1565 North Orchard, Box 172, Boise, ID 83706, (208) 327-7380, FAX (208) 327-7382, email: hicks@idago.state.id.us. Application packets will also be available at www.state.id.us/iglb/iglbhome.htm. Completed applications must be mailed or delivered to the Outfitters and Guides Licensing Board office and received on or before October 21, 2004.
CONSIDERATION OF APPLICATIONS: The Board reserves the right to reject any or all applications, and to waive any technical defects in the applications. Material submitted with applications is the applicant's responsibility, and the Board will not accept applications until the Board reserves the right to request clarification of an application. Incomplete or illegible applications will not be processed.
If you have any questions regarding the applications, please submit your inquiries by email to hicks@idago.state.id.us or by telephone to (208) 327-7380.
