Tanks threaten water

Nearly two out of three underground storage tanks have leak problems

By Michelle Dunlop Times-News writer

BOISE — According to a recent round of investigations, about two-thirds of the state's underground storage tanks put Idaho's groundwater at risk by failing to meet federal regulations.

“The bottom line is we found only one in three facilities complying with key operational requirements,” said Jim Wernitz, Idaho's state director for the Environmental Protection Agency. “While some in the industry are doing everything right, there are a large number of facilities in Idaho that are not making leak detection and prevention a priority.” Last month, EPA inspectors visited 76 Idaho underground storage tank facilities from Coeur d'Alene to Lewiston and from the Treasure Valley to Idaho Falls. The purpose of the inspections was not to detect tank leaks, but rather to ensure the proper tank operation. Inspectors identified 93 violations with several facilities being cited for multiple violations. The EPA issued $14,550 in penalties. “This inspection is aimed specifically to make sure the equipment is in place,” said Mark MacIntyre, with EPA's Region 10 office in Seattle. “We do the prevention part.” The agency's findings come one day after the 20th anniversary of the federal Underground Storage Tank Program. Since the program began, regulations have been worked out with facilities to meet compliance. Please see TANKS, Page A2

“What a blessing this is,” Sgt. Chad Horton, center, says as he holds his one-week-old son, Seth Scot Horton, with his wife Jamie at their home Tuesday. Chad leaves Monday for Fort Polk, La. before being deployed to Kuwait and Iraq the following week. He would have missed his son's birth had Seth not been born a month premature.

FILER — Seems Seth Scot Horton wanted to get acquainted with his dad before his soldier father went overseas, so he decided to make his appearance a month early. All 5 pounds, 9 ounces of him. For his dad, Army Sgt. Chad Horton of Filer, it was the very best of surprises, making his 20-day leave before heading to Kuwait and Iraq that much more precious.

Bush taps Rice for Secretary of State

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush promoted his most trusted foreign policy adviser to Secretary of State on Tuesday, tapping Condoleezza Rice to replace warrior-turned-diplomat Colin Powell as part of a sweeping second-term Cabinet overhaul. “The secretary of state is America's face to the world and in Dr. Rice the world will see the strength, grace and decency of our country,” Bush said of his national security adviser.

selflessly” on behalf of the country.

Rice is the second White House loyalist to land a Cabinet post since Bush's re-election triggered a top-tier shake-up that has presented several agency heads with the clear impression that their services were no longer needed. White House counsel Alberto Gonzales is Bush's nominee to replace Attorney General John Ashcroft.

Bush named Stephen Hadley, Rice's deputy, to replace her as national security adviser, the top White House-based foreign policy aide.

Study: Culture issues hold back Idaho women

The Associated Press

BOISE — A conservative culture is combining with inadequate educational opportunities and economic stress to hold Idaho women back, not just from achieving equality with men but even matching the status women in most other states have, according to a new study.

The report from the Institute for Women's Policy Research, released on Tuesday by the Idaho Women's Network, confirmed information compiled in the 2000 census ranking Idaho among the states with both the lowest median income for women employed full time and the lowest percentage of the median income for men. “Women are not becoming an economic impetus in Idaho,” Boise State University professor Lisa McClain said. “The economic consequences impact all of us, and the social consequences impact our lives. We have challenges to face.” McClain and others hope the startling statistics presented in the study will spur government leaders to support policies that will improve opportunities for women across the board. The study, based on information for 2002, put the median income for women in Idaho at $25,600 while men were at $35,300. Only four states had lower median incomes for women while seven states were lower for men. Eleven states were lower than the 72.5 percent of a man's median income. Please see WOMEN, Page A2

British hostage believed executed

The Associated Press

BAGHDAD, Iraq — Kidnapped aid worker Margaret Hassan was believed to be dead Tuesday after a video received by Al-Jazeera television showed a hooded figure shooting a blindfolded woman in the head.

The British government and Hassan's family in London said they believed the longtime director of CARE in Iraq was the victim. CARE said it was in mourning for the 59-year-old Briton who worked for decades providing food, medicine and humanitarian aid to Iraqis. The video shows a militant firing a pistol into the head of a blindfolded woman wearing an orange jumpsuit. Al-Jazeera spokesman Ihsan Ballout said, “She was presumed to be Mrs. Hassan,” he told The Associated Press.

Margaret Hassan

The station initially said it would air parts of the video, but Ballout then said it would not. Hassan was abducted in Baghdad on Oct. 19, the most prominent of more than 170 foreigners kidnapped in Iraq this year. Her captors later issued videos showing her pleading for Britain to withdraw its troops from Iraq and calling for the release of female Iraqi prisoners.

Ballout said the station received the tape a few days ago but had not been sure of its authenticity.

“We invited British diplomatic officials to come and view it ... with the aim of helping us ascertain whether it was Mrs. Hassan or not,” he said. “It's now likely that the image depicts Mrs. Hassan.”

British Foreign Secretary Jack Straw said that based on examination of the video, “we have today had to inform Margaret Hassan's family that, sadly, we now believe that she has probably been murdered, although we cannot conclude this with complete certainty.”

In an emotional plea on Al-Jazeera, Hassan's husband said he had heard of the video but did not know whether it was authentic. He asked the kidnappers to return his wife to him.

“I appeal to those who took my wife (to tell me) what they did with her,” Ihsan Ali Hassan said, his voice choked with tears. “They can contact me or the Iraqi Peace Organization. I want my wife, dead or alive. If she is dead, please let me know of her whereabouts so I can bury her in peace.”

British Prime Minister Tony Blair expressed sympathy Tuesday with Hassan's family. His office said Blair “shares their abhorrence at the cruel treatment of someone who devoted so many years of her life to helping the people of Iraq.”

Hassan's brothers and sisters said they believe she was dead. “Our hearts are broken,” they said in a statement released by the British Foreign Office. “We have kept hoping for as long as we could, but we now have to accept that Margaret has probably gone and at last her suffering has ended.”

Continued from A1. letters to Chad's superiors asking that Chad be given five-day leave to come home for his sons' birth.

It was "not going to happen," Chad said. Seth's parents believe that their son arrived while his father was home.

"It's pretty amazing," Chad said. "You don't expect things like this to happen, but God's goodness just shines through."

Chad's son of Scot and Margaret Horton of Bull, and Jamie, daughter of Jim and Karen Kloe of Jerome, met each other on a wood cutting trip with friends in June 2003. He proposed six months later.

Chad and the rest of the 2-11th gathered in Boise where they boarded two planes for Fort Bliss, Texas. After three months of combat training it was off to Mission readiness training.

"I missed him like crazy," said Jamie, who was there at the Boise airport when her husband's plane landed.

The separation hasn't been easy, but thanks to cell phones, Chad and Jamie were able to touch base a couple times a day.

"I've gotten through it as best as I can," Jamie said. "Sometimes it hits me pretty hard, now is the time to make sweet memories."

And it's the memories they're making now that will help get them through the difficult months ahead.

"I don't know what to expect," he said. "You hope for the best and prepare for the worst."

Women

Continued from A1. The study found Idaho women ranking high compared to other states in mental health problems and suicides.

The low rate of marriage and professional not only reflects opportunities for advanced education but also the failure of Idaho businesses to open more jobs to women.

The woman who has those degrees," Church said, "find the opportunities are better somewhere else, and they leave the state."

Idaho's comparatively young population, which works more at the lower end of pay scales that reward longevity and experience, along with the state's relatively high divorce rate to go along with a high marriage rate all serve to limit the composite picture of women, he said.

The state's conservative politics and culture play a role as well, but McClain argued that a conservative philosophy "does not mean you treat women as second-class citizens."

And Church contended that while the young-age-of-the-Idaho population works to keep Idaho's rates low "but this low - the bottom - I don't think so."

"During the early inception of the program, there were a lot of handouts and brochures given out," said Erik Sires, Idaho's coordinator and inspector for EPA.

A large number of facility owners still act surprised when the EPA fines them for not knowing how to use their leak detection equipment correctly, Sires said.

Idaho remains one of the few states in the nation without its own underground tank program.

Rice

Continued from A1. Rice, who is considered more of a foreign policy hard-liner than Powell, has been Bush's national security adviser for four years.

Under your leadership, America is fighting and winning the war on terror," Rice said to her boss during the Roosevelt Forum announcement.

Bush asked the Senate for quick confirmation. "The nation needs her," he said.

Bush sought a fresh start for a second term. Administration officials say Homeland Security Secretary Tom Ridge and Health and Human Services Secretary Tommy Thompson may be next. Officials close to Ridge say he may be willing to stay for a few months and advisers to Thompson hint that he may open to another Cabinet post.

Rice, 50, worked at the National Security Council in former President Bush's White House and went on to be provost of Stanford University in California. She was widely considered the president's first choice for the top diplomat's job, despite reports that she intended to return to California or was hoping to replace Donald H. Rumsfeld as defense secretary.

State Department spokesman Richard Boucher said that after Powell's exit was announced on Monday, his deputy, Richard Armitage, submitted his resignation to the White House. It's effective as soon as the next secretary of state is sworn into the position.

There had been speculation that Powell, 67, would stay on, at least for part of Bush's second term, but he told reporters Monday that he had made no offer to do so.

"I would anticipate in the near future we would inspect facilities for the second time," Sires said.

"The trend was that they were doing a little better." While he could not release the names of facilities visited, Sires noted that only five or six locations in the Twin Falls area were inspected last month.

Environmental Protection Agency's Underground Storage Tank Program

- In 1984, President Ronald Reagan signed into law the National Underground Storage Tank Program.
The program requires underground tanks to be properly equipped, monitored and maintained to avoid contaminant leaks.
33 states, the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico have EPA-approved management plans.

Statistics: Known underground tanks in 1984: 2.1 million. Total substandard tank closures since 1984: 1.5 million. Total known leaks: 400,000. Leak cleanups since 1984: 300,000. Remaining known tank leaks: 100,000. Reported leaks in 2003: 12,000. Completed cleanups in 2003: 18,500.

While the Idaho Department of Environmental Quality assists in the names of facilities visited, Sires noted that only five or six locations in the Twin Falls area were inspected last month.

"This should be a concern not just to EPA, but to every Idaho resident who drinks water or irrigates from a well," Wertz said.

Specter attempts to save future position

WASHINGTON (AP) — Anti-abortion conservatives on Tuesday protested the possible elevation of Sen. Arlen Specter to Senate Judiciary Committee chairman just as the Pennsylvania senator was trying to convince his Republican colleagues that he would be a strong advocate for President Bush's judicial nominees.

More than a dozen protesters gathered outside a Senate office building where Senate Majority Leader Bill Frist, R-Tenn., keeps his offices, carrying signs saying "Bork Specter", "Sen. Frist: Stop Judicial Activism" and "Senator Frist: Listen to We the People." Robert Bork was a conservative jurist whose nomination to the Supreme Court was thwarted.

Specter has been on the hot seat with conservatives since saying that anti-abortion judges would be unlikely to be confirmed by Senate. Since his remarks two weeks ago, he has tried to assure Republicans that he would not personally block any Bush nominees from getting a floor vote.

But several of the protesters said they didn't trust Specter, and they want Frist to keep him from being elevated to the judiciary chairmanship. "This is just the beginning," said Troy Newman, president of Operation Rescue. "We worked very hard to put Bush in an office, and now is not the time to demur the president's pro-life nominees."

Wholesale prices jump in October

WASHINGTON (AP) — Propelled by sharply higher energy and food costs, wholesale prices soared by 1.7 percent in October, the largest increase since early 1990.

The Producer Price Index measures costs of goods before they reach store shelves. The big over-the-month jump came after wholesale prices edged up just 0.1 percent in September, the Labor Department reported.

"Tuesday concerns about inflation have driven the Federal Reserve's credit-tightening policies of recent months." The report suggested that inflation at the wholesale level is picking up after months of being quite well-behaved.

"Inflation is not a problem, but a corner has been turned," said Ken Mayland, president of ClearView Economics. "We face a period of still low, but building inflation pressures, which the Fed has plenty of time to nip in the bud."

The economy's soft patch in the spring and early summer helped to keep wholesale prices relatively subdued, Mayland explained. Now that the economy is gaining traction, inflation probably will be on the rise as well, he said.

FDA faces criticism over abortion pill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government on Tuesday said a controversial abortion pill is safe enough to remain on the market, despite a third death and a grieving father's plea.

Monty Patterson, father of a teen who died after taking the abortion pill RU-486, says the government's new safety warnings aren't enough to protect women. Because a third death now has been linked to RU-486, the Food and Drug Administration should bar sales of the abortion pill, he said.

Military probes shooting

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — The fatal shooting of a wounded and apparently unarmed man in a Falajlah mosque by a U.S. Marine angered Sunni Muslims in Iraq on Tuesday and raised questions about the protection of enemy fighters once they are out of action.

More international legal experts said the Marine may have acted in self-defense because of a danger that a wounded enemy may try to blow up a hidden weapon; a key issue was whether the injured man was a prisoner at the time.

The shooting happened Saturday, one day after the Marine, who has not been identified, was wounded in the face and after another man in his unit was killed by the booby-trapped body of an insurgent.

However, the incident could cause major political problems for the government of Prime Minister Ayad Allawi and his U.S. backers at a time when Iraqi authorities are seeking to contain a backlash among Sunnis to the invasion of the former insurgent stronghold of Fallujah.

In this image taken from video, a U.S. Marine is seen raising his rifle in the direction of two wounded Iraqi men. The Marine then fires his weapon, the bullet striking the upper body of one of the men.

American and Iraqi authorities tried to prevent rage from spreading among Sunnis, many of whom watched dramatic footage of the shooting that aired throughout the day on Al-Jazeera television.

Troops recapture Mosul police stations

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — U.S. and Iraqi troops recaptured police stations and secured bridges in the northern city of Mosul on Tuesday in an offensive aimed at pushing out fighters supporting the insurgent stronghold of Fallujah.

Troops moved quickly, said U.S. military officials, in securing several of the dozen or so police stations that had been captured by insurgents. The U.S. military command said. Nineveh province's deputy governor said militants blew up the Zuhour police station ahead of the U.S. advance, but the U.S. military denied any stations were destroyed.

Loud explosions and gunfire could be heard as U.S. warplanes and helicopters circled over Mosul, Iraq's third-largest city with more than 1 million residents.

Mortar shells hit two areas near the main government building in the city center, killing three civilians and wounding 25, hospital officials said. One American soldier was wounded when a car bomb exploded near a U.S. convoy in western Mosul, the military said.

The U.S.-led offensive is aimed at seizing control of the city 225 miles north of Baghdad, where gunmen stormed police stations, bridges and political offices last week. The city's police force was overwhelmed and in many places failed to even put up a fight. Some officers also allegedly cooperated with insurgents.

The operation was launched after U.S. and Iraqi reinforcements were rushed to Mosul. A U.S. Army infantry battalion was recalled from the fighting in Fallujah, 300 Iraqi National Guard soldiers came from garrisons along the borders with Iran and Syria and a special police battalion was sent from Baghdad.

U.S. military spokeswoman

Capt. Angela Bowman said the attack began Tuesday as troops closed Mosul's five bridges and American soldiers began securing police stations in the western part of the city.

"We are in the process of securing all of the police stations and returning the police to these stations," she said.

U.S. Marines continued to hunt for fighters hiding in Fallujah, but airstrikes and gunfire waned considerably after a week of heavy fighting that left the Americans in control of the city west of Baghdad that had been the main insurgent bastion.

In this artist's rendition released by the European Space Agency, the European-made SMART-1 solar-powered satellite is seen nearing the Moon on its way to make the first comprehensive inventory of key chemical elements in the lunar surface.

Officials call Europe's space mission a success

BERLIN (AP) — A fuel-efficient, compact spacecraft has made it into lunar orbit, signaling Europe's first successful mission to the moon and putting the inexpensive probe on course to study the lunar surface, officials said Tuesday.

Almost more impressive than reaching its destination was the slow and steady way the SMART-1 probe puttered its way there — flying 13 months in ever-expanding circles around the earth using a cutting-edge ion propulsion system.

The spacecraft used only 130 pounds of the 181 pounds of xenon fuel it had aboard, according to European Space Agency spokesman Franco Bonaccina in Paris. That translates to more than 5 million miles per gallon.

The fuel consumption was less than expected, and the success of the mission has raised hopes that the technology can be used to send other craft far deeper into space, where the chemical propulsion systems that power conventional rockets would be too expensive or unworkable.

"Europe has proved that it is able to fly a spaceship with ion propulsion alone," Giorgio Sacconi, one of the ESA's propulsion specialists, told reporters at the ESA's control center in Darmstadt, in southern Germany.

Launched into Earth orbit from French Guiana on Sept. 27, 2003, atop a conventional booster rocket, the SMART-1 probe made it to within 3,100 miles of the moon Monday, and will now begin spinning its way closer to the surface as it orbits, Bonaccina said.

By mid-January the dishwasher-sized spacecraft will be in an elliptical orbit that will take it within 185 miles of the moon's south pole and 1,850 miles from the north pole, Bonaccina said.

Growing ties don't prevent friction between Japan, China

TOKYO (AP) — Despite a thriving economic partnership, political ties between Japan and China are at their lowest ebb in years. The two countries are locked in disputes over World War II history, natural gas exploration and now a bold incursion by a Chinese nuclear submarine.

The troubles have blocked a meeting between the countries' top leaders since 2001, complicated Northeast Asia's scramble to meet its growing energy needs and threatened to limit the growth of Japan-China business ties.

The startling intrusion by a Chinese nuclear submarine last week into Japanese waters introduced a disturbing military aspect to the tensions between East Asia's two leading powers, putting greater urgency on calls for a repair in relations.

"We should hold talks because we have problems. We are making arrangements," Prime Minister Junichiro Koizumi said Tuesday when asked whether he was trying to schedule a summit with Chinese President Hu Jintao at the upcoming Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation meeting in Santiago, Chile.

Decade-old sandwich draws high bids on eBay

MIAMI (AP) — The people at eBay were no believers in this cheesy miracle: half of a 10-year-old grilled cheese sandwich whose owner claimed it bore the image of the Virgin Mary.

Dianna Duyser put the sandwich up for sale last week, drawing bids as high as $22,000 before eBay pulled the item Sunday night. The page was viewed nearly 100,000 times before being taken down.

An e-mail Duyser received from eBay said the sandwich broke its policy, which "does not allow listings that are intended as jokes."

But, Duyser, a jewelry designer who has bought and sold items on eBay for two years, insisted this was not a laughing matter.

"How could eBay do this to me?" Duyser said Monday, hours before the online auction was supposed to have ended.

On Tuesday, the Web site allowed bidding to resume, with the top offer reaching $5,100.

A phone message left with Sun Jose, Calif.-based eBay was not immediately returned. In mocking response, two similar items were posted later — grilled cheese sandwiches bearing the images of the Virgin Mary's used chewing gum and Mary-Kate and Ashley Olsen.

Duyser thought eBay would be the best place to show off the sandwich, made on plain white bread with American cheese. It was cooked with no oil or butter.

SIPING FOR CARS & TRUCKS

WHY DON'T YOUR TIRES SIPLE? The simple answer is that most tires are not designed to siple. They are designed for dry roads. Siping is the process of cutting thin grooves into the tread of a tire to improve traction on wet roads. It's like having a thousand tiny sipes that create a siping effect. This helps to break up the water film on the road surface, allowing the tire to make better contact with the road. Siping is a critical feature for winter driving and is also beneficial for wet road conditions in other seasons.

BETTER TRACTION • IMPROVED BRAKING • LONGER TIRE LIFE

NEW LES REPLIX DRUMBY • LES REPLIX DRUMBY is a siping technology that creates a siping effect on the tread of a tire. It's like having a thousand tiny sipes that create a siping effect. This helps to break up the water film on the road surface, allowing the tire to make better contact with the road. WILL SIPING AFFECT YOUR PERFORMANCE? • SIPING DOES NOT AFFECT YOUR PERFORMANCE. In fact, it improves it. Siping helps to break up the water film on the road surface, allowing the tire to make better contact with the road. This results in better traction, shorter braking distances, and longer tire life.

Grounded Eagles have reason to fight sanctions

The College of Southern Idaho volleyball squad received a spike in the heart last week when it learned its season was suddenly over.

The confusion remained when CSI sent two documents to the NJCAA regarding her player status. One was a letter of intent stating Siemiatkowska was a non-scholarship player. The other was a Form 1-20 (a student visit form) which listed her as having a scholarship. CSI officials counter that NJCAA bylaws prohibit using Form 1-20 to check student eligibility.

Our view: The College of Southern Idaho volleyball team's postseason ban merits a prolonged fight by school officials.

What do you think? We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

The National Junior College Athletic Association ruled that CSI had used an ineligible player during the 2004 season. The NJCAA rejected CSI's appeal and banned the team from postseason play.

For a program that's won seven national titles and 11 regional championships, staying home in November is a rude awakening.

The Golden Eagles (40-3, and ranked 3rd nationally) were national title contenders and were in the Region 18A tournament in Twin Falls last week.

Now, CSI will use arbitration to challenge the NJCAA's decision. There's more than an volleyball tournament at stake here.

CSI can't do anything about the current postseason ban. But the other sanction—the loss of one foreign player scholarship in 2005 and 2006—would stagger the program for two seasons and probably longer. So the fight isn't just for the program's good name, but also its competitive future.

The ineligible player in question, Poland native Marta Siemiatkowska, is one of four foreign players on this year's CSI team. Junior college rules limit teams to just three foreign player scholarships per season.

Siemiatkowska was promised a scholarship last spring, but only if other foreign players didn't accept offers to CSI. Eventually those players did accept, and Siemiatkowska joined the squad as a non-scholarship player, paying her own travel and tuition to CSI.

In the end, Siemiatkowska's was ruled ineligible on Oct. 18, turning 34 games in which she played into forfeits. CSI's failed appeal was especially wrenching for a talented squad that battled on in the face of uncertainty.

They deserved better, and the college and community should be proud of this team's effort. Regardless of how arbitration may turn out, CSI should learn from this painful experience and get its house in order. The record-keeping and financial counseling in this case was a little sloppy.

When a student-athlete is required to pay his or her own expenses, it may be convenient to use personal cash. But it's much wiser for all parties if the student opens a checking account. CSI Athletic Director Jeff Duggan agreed, and has said the school will be more astute in that area in the future.

Fighting the NCAAs appeal is an uncertain prospect. But as CSI coaches and officials have noted, the competition wants to see the Eagles' wings clipped by the NJCAA. The struggle to make sure that doesn't happen will move forward.

People voted to end lawsuit abuse

Today there is no shortage of inside-the-Beltway political pundits offering post-election analyses on why President Bush won re-election, and why the Republicans picked up seats in Congress. As evidence, they offer everything from progress in the war in Iraq to the pace of our economic recovery.

SHERMAN JOYCE

As a result, there are new opportunities for Americans to lower the annual lawsuit tax—now more than $3,200 for a family of four—and restore access to affordable health care by reforming the legal system. In Nevada, and Florida, voters approved ballot referendums to improve the medical liability system and limit the power of personal injury lawyers. In California, voters even approved a ballot initiative, approved by the voters, that required them to have an actual injured claim before they filed a lawsuit. In Illinois and West Virginia, voters rejected candidates for state Supreme Court that had received the backing of each state's powerful personal injury bar. In the U.S. Senate, six of the nine incoming senators have strong records on legal reform. Equally important, two significant opponents of reform will soon be out of office. Sen. Fritz Hollings, D-S.C., a former trial lawyer, is retiring. His replacement, Jim DeMint, built a strong legal reform record during his tenure in the House. In South Dakota, Sen. Tom Daschle, a Democrat, lost to Rep. John Thune, a House Republican with a legacy of support for legal reform. Daschle was viewed by many as the principle architect of legal reform legislative defeats in the Senate. While serving as minority leader, he was able to kill even modest legal reform measures, such as class-action reform, that had garnered significant support among members of his own party. Looking beyond the vote tally, however, is the looming policy debate that's likely to occur in Congress and in many state legislatures. In Washington, look for President Bush to work closely with the new Congress to pass health-care liability reform and class-action reform. Both bills passed the House easily last Congress, but were unable to get through the Senate. They face better prospects for passage now. Also on the agenda is legislation to clamp down on frivolous litigation and to limit the ability of lawyers to sue restaurants on behalf of obese clients. Congress likely will address "litigation tourism" in reform venue rules for the courts. The American Medical Association has identified 20 states that face a health care litigation crisis that is compromising patient access to affordable care. Many of these states will be considering health-care liability reform during the coming legislative session. This election was one with high stakes: lawyers pouted millions of dollars into the political campaigns of elected officials who would support the status quo. Fortunately, in most cases, voters across America selected candidates who support a fair legal system. Now that the elections are behind us, it will be up to these candidates to deliver. Sherman Joyce is president of the American Tort Reform Association.

Editorial dropped the ball on UI's success

In Wednesday's (Nov. 10) editorial, The Times-News expressed an opinion about the University of Idaho's football status as a viable Division 1-A program. It is apparent from the editorial that the editor missed some important facts which we would like to bring to your attention. It is important that the State Board of Education has approved each and every change in direction by the University of Idaho. First, you quote Tom Cable as being the authority on where Idaho should compete. In 1996, the University of Idaho moved to 1-A status and competed very well until Tom Cable became head coach in 2000. From 1996 through 1999, Idaho's record was 27 wins and 18 losses in 1-A football. During that period, Idaho defeated Boise State twice, beat Pac-10 Washington State and became the 1998 Humanitarian Bowl Champion with a win over READER COMMENT Gary Garmand and MV Vandal Boosters.

Conference USA's Southern Mississippi. While Tom Cable was head coach, the record went to 11 wins and 35 losses. In retrospect, the hiring of Tom Cable was the most disastrous error in Idaho football history! The hiring of new coach Nick Holt and his staff has brought increased recruiting of local student athletes. Second, it makes economic sense for the University of Idaho to be Division 1-A. In Fiscal Year 1996, advertising dollars generated $114,000. In FY '05, that figure is $460,000. Game guarantees in FY '96 were $125,000; since that time, game guarantee revenue has averaged $850,000 to $1 million. Annual fund contributions to the Vandal Scholarship Fund generated $500,000 in FY '95; it now exceeds $1 million. Without this income, we would be forced to drop some programs and, thereby, deprive many talented men and women the opportunity to attend a great university! Under current National Collegiate Athletic Association rules, our game guarantees would drop from $1 million to about $250,000 because we would not be able to schedule football games against other Division 1-A schools. University of Idaho attracts a diversified student body because of athletics. In addition, these young people are good students (3.02 grade-point average), and we graduate 94 percent of student-athletes completing their eligibility. Vandal athletics attracts many outstanding young men and women, some of whom stay in Idaho and become taxpayers. The athletic department contributes more than $2 million per year to the university and its seven colleges through student fees; provides fund-raising and friend-raising opportunities for all areas of the university. The university athletic department, the coaches, the student-athletes and alumni are committed to making the Division 1-A football program successful. It would be appreciated if The Times-News did some serious research before it expressed an opinion. If it had done that, you would have easily found the facts stated above. We were able to do so with one call. Gary Garmand is the president of the Magic Valley Vandal Boosters. He submitted this letter on behalf of 43 other members of the group.

Senseless act resulted in a lost pet

Do you live on Clover Lane in Jerome County? Were you visiting or doing business on that road on Tuesday, Nov. 9, between the hours of 9 a.m. and 11 a.m.? Did you hit and kill a black lab on that day? You didn't even have the decency to ask the people who live in that residence if the dog belonged to them. It appears the dog was hit deliberately, so I hope your conscience bothers you for a long time and the sound of you hitting the dog echoes in your head every minute of the day! I do thank the Lord I wasn't one of my grandchildren getting the newspaper. Howard was just a dog, but his family who loved him will sadly miss him. In closing, my friend, you are a jerk who doesn't even deserve a driver's license. Next time, it could be a child! Since Howard wasn't his son, that puts him a fault, so if you will stop at their residence, they will give you the money it took to wash the blood off your vehicle and apologize for the inconvenience it caused you! FERNOLA TAPPAN Jerome

Council shouldn't tell customers how to pay To the City Council: What gives you the right to tell gas stations and their customers that they have to prepay for gas? I didn't realize that you were the owners, and for those of us who are handicapped who have a hard time walking in to pay for our gas once, now we have to make two trips, if filling up, but I guess then maybe you were going to stand at the pump and take our money in and bring our change back, since you seem to have all the answers and think you know what is best for the people of the Magic Valley. I didn't realize that by being elected to office also gave you the right to tell businesses how their customers are to pay for gas. If I would have known just how much being on the City Council got a person, I would have thrown my hat in the ring years ago. KENT PUTZIER Filer

Candidate's mother had a valid question

This is a response to the ridiculous letter that Doug Hughes wrote in the paper. Mr. Hughes, the election is over, stop whining. The reason my mother-in-law asked Wayne Tousey a question at the debate was she had a legitimate question. She asked him why, when she had break-in at one of her houses that one fine day, didn't the sheriff's office respond when she had a house full of appliances, a heating system, such as carboards, a bathroom, stolen from this house that they did not respond but told her to come in and fill out a report. She was wondering why in the world the sheriff's office was too busy to come and take a report. She was told by Sheriff Tousey that basically they could choose the calls that they went on. I wonder what would happen if it was his house? It wasn't to sway voters for her son, she had a very good question. The answer was dumb. Maybe she didn't have the right to ask a question, but it was a good one and I have never known her to be bashful. So, that is why, and I am sure if you had called her she would have been delighted to answer you. Too bad you don't like the council chambers for the debate, but last I heard, no one asked you if "you" wanted it there or not. You should just stick to doing what you do best, um, now what was that? KAREN BACH Kimberly

Arnold keeps rolling as governor

MONTREY, Calif. — A year after he took office following the voters' recall of Democratic Gov. Gray Davis, Arnold Schwarzenegger is riding high in California. A recent Los Angeles Times poll put his job approval rating at 66 percent, and his efforts to break through the political paralysis that had contributed to a serious fiscal crisis in state government have won commendation across the spectrum.

DAVID BRODER

Among those who praise the efforts of the movie hero turned Republican politician is Leon Panetta, the former California Democratic congressman and Clinton White House chief of staff. With his wife, Sylvia, he now runs an Institute for Public Policy here, whose chosen mission is to convince promising college students that politics can be a means of solving problems — not just of securing titles and humiliating opponents.

The other night, after a banquet at which the Panetta Institute honored two senators who often rise above partisanship, retiring Democrat John Breaux of Louisiana and Republican Olympia Snowe of Maine, Panetta talked about Schwarzenegger's first year in Sacramento.

"No question," he said, "he really has made an effort at trying to govern the state. When he came in, he asked George Shultz (the former Republican secretary of state) and me to meet with him and his people, and we said, 'You have to start trying to cut deals, break the gridlock, show people the governmental process can still work.' He is doing it.

The big decisions are still out there — especially how to deal with the structural budget deficit. But he has brought in good people from both parties with a lot of experience and credibility to work with him. He knows how to deal with people, and the star power counts for a lot."

Bruce Cain, the University of California-Berkeley authority on state government, is another former skeptic now ready to give Schwarzenegger high marks for his first year in public office. "He's done a pretty good job of hopping back and forth between Republicans and Democrats and carving out something worthwhile in the middle," Cain said. "He is a wheeler-dealer of enormous talent and he's obviously very good at maneuvering public opinion. I don't think we've had anybody in California who could do this."

Schwarzenegger kept one key promise from the recall campaign by rolling back an unpopular increase in vehicle license fees, and he persuaded voters to support a $15 billion bond issue to refinance the state debt. This year, Schwarzenegger negotiated his own deals with prison guards, public schools teachers and local government officials to avoid the kind of logrolling and lobbying in the Democratic Legislature that had inflated budgets to unsustainable levels under Davis.

But despite an improving economy, revenues are still expected to fall short of expenditures by an estimated $8 billion to $10 billion next year. The governor also has work to do on prison reform and Indian gambling, not to mention an energy plan — another issue that damaged Davis.

With term limits now ending the careers of the last battle-tested veterans in the state Senate (the Assembly had been stripped of its experienced members earlier), Cain said the balance of power in Sacramento clearly has shifted from the Legislature to the governor's office.

Schwarzenegger is using that power to push for big and long-term restructuring of the economy and the political system. He thwarted Indian tribes' efforts to use the initiative process to cut him out of their quest for expanded gambling. He pushed through a $3 billion initiative to put California in the forefront of stem cell research. Under threat of a Schwarzenegger-backed voter initiative, the Legislature agreed to reform workers' compensation laws. Now the governor is talking about a measure that would take redistricting decisions away from the Legislature and give them to a nonpartisan commission.

The latest recruit to the Schwarzenegger administration, in the key post of finance director, is former law school professor and maverick Republican Congressman Tom Campbell. Campbell is a long-time advocate of an open primary system designed to promote the nomination of moderate Democrats and Republicans, instead of the partisan liberals and conservatives who now dominate the Legislature.

All of this is happening with a minimum of bruised feelings. The "changed climate" that President Bush promised but did not achieve in his first term in Washington is on display in Sacramento.

Leave magnetic ribbons alone on cars

This is dedicated to all of the others who are also tired of having their magnetic ribbons snatched from their cars.

Hey you, Ribbon thief! Are you too cheap to buy your own? This makes the third one I've replaced after having them ripped off in various parking lots. I'm fed up with this. Knowing you had to steal it from someone else first. Feel free to drive down Blue Lakes with a big smile on your face displaying "your" support for our troops.

Hey you, young-old son who is inactive duty with a U.S. Army Combat Engineers Battalion and training daily for imminent deployment to Iraq, would be proud of you, too. After all, he's the one that's putting his life at risk so you have the freedom to roam the parking lots of the mall, stealing the symbol that's supposed to remind people of this war and the men and women that are chosen to be put in harm's way. He'd just smile and say, "What a jerk," as he cleans his weapon in preparation for a day he, too, may be in a possible fire fight with another criminal, this time in Iraq.

Perhaps you just liked this specific ribbon because it was just a little different. It wasn't yellow but a camouflage color that stated, "America the Free 'Because of the Brave.'" Well, did you feel brave when you took your final glance to see if anyone would notice as you plucked it off the tailgate of my truck? I never thought that a lousy $5 magnet would cause me to write a letter to the editor, but it was just the irony that this has happened three times now, and I wrote this letter on Veterans Day.

Well, display it proudly. The people who see it don't know that you are a thief and, hopefully, they, too, will be reminded that our sons, husbands, daughters and wives are in physical danger every day over there and should not be forgotten or this war be taken for granted.

Hey, I got a neat flag on the front of my house — want that, too? (Just be careful this veteran never catches you in the act.)

Church not the place to lobby for candidates

Election Day is past, thank goodness!

I am a firm believer in separation of church and state. And when church hands out pamphlets that practically tell you who to vote for, then I have a problem. I also have a problem with discussing politics during, before and after a Bible study.

I find that it causes hard feelings among people who should be "Christian friendly."

Politics is a personal choice.

New legislator seeks more input from voters

I would like to thank my supporters for electing me to be the Representative B from District 25. In such a close race, each vote does count, and I appreciate the special effort individuals took to make sure their vote was cast. A special thank you goes out to those volunteers who donated hours of their time to working on the campaign. Your grassroots influence was so important in this election.

I take very seriously the responsibility I have placed upon me. I campaigned long and hard and will put that same type of work ethic into being your representative. I am aware there is much to learn but will tackle the task with enthusiasm and energy. I talked with many of you personally at your door about issues important to our district. At that time, you were urged to keep in touch with me about your concerns. If I did not have the opportunity to visit with you, the invitation is extended to you also.

I will "be here for you" throughout my tenure as your representative and will start this week making good on that promise.

Wendy Jaquet, Clint Stennett and I will be visiting the following communities to get your input for the upcoming legislative session: Fairfield, 8 a.m., City Hall, Nov. 18; Gooding; noon, Old Toponis Restaurant, Nov. 18, chamber meeting; Shoshone; 3 p.m. Extension office, Nov. 18; Halley; 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. courthouse; noon, Senior Center, Nov. 19; Hagerman, noon, Snake River Grid, Dec. 8.

It is an honor to serve the people of Blaine, Lincoln, Gooding and Camas counties.

Condition of accident victim improves

PAUL — The condition of a man injured in an accident Monday was upgraded from critical to serious, said a spokesperson for St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center in Boise.

Brogan Gransbury, 18, suffered third-degree burns from landing on the exhaust pipe of his pickup after being ejected from the vehicle during the accident near Paul, said Randy Sutton, West End Fire Chief.

Gransbury's pickup was hit by an oncoming, fully-loaded Trans-systems beet truck.
The driver of the beet truck was not hurt.
Sheriff Paul Pries said citations for Gransbury are pending; he could be charged with inattentive driving and failure to yield.
Gransbury's test results for alcohol or drugs have not returned from the lab yet.

M-C towns may get abstinence program

BURLEY — Students in Burley and Murtaugh might see a new abstinence education program next semester if school boards like the idea, said Adria Masoner, Region IV adolescent pregnancy prevention coordinator.
The Peers Encouraging Abstinence Kids, or PEAK, program is an abstinence-only program that trains high school students to be mentors, teaching the program to junior high students in supervised classrooms.
Masoner said she will meet with school officials Monday to discuss the program. The plan is to implement it at Burley Middle School, then expand it to other districts in the Magic Valley.
The refusal skills taught in PEAK will be applied to any risky behavior, such as drinking, using drugs and violence, which makes the program more effective, Masoner said.
PEAK is funded by $180,000 in federal abstinence education money, which is being matched by the state.

Coalition files salmon lawsuit

By Julie Pence
Times-News writer

BOISE — Yet another complication to the salmon recovery controversy arose Tuesday when the Washington-based Pacific Legal Foundation announced intentions to file suit challenging recommendations for Endangered Species Act listings of salmon and steelhead.
Joining the lawsuit is the Idaho Coalition for Water, which includes a host of organizations such as irrigators, the Idaho Dairyman's Association, Idaho Farm Bureau Federation, Idaho Association of Commerce and Industry, the Idaho Association of Counties and the Association of Idaho Cities.
The purpose of the proposed lawsuit is to force the Bush administration to count hatchery salmon along with wild salmon in its ESA rules for salmon recovery.

The administration has yet to adopt a policy, but the Pacific Legal Foundation claims a recent recommendation from the National Marine Fisheries Service "to discount hatchery salmon in meeting salmon recovery numbers goes against ESA language," said Norm Semanko, who heads the Idaho coalition.
"These fish are genetically identical," Semanko said. "Our position is hatchery fish are vibrant enough to survive all the way to the ocean and then make it through the dams back to Idaho to reproduce, and their progeny are wild, then there's no difference between hatchery fish and wild fish."

The recommended policy violates a 2001 federal court ruling for an Oregon case establishing that wild and hatchery salmon are to be counted together, Semanko asserted.
But Save our Wild Salmon President Pat Ford said the Pacific Legal Foundation's action is premature. Calling the proposal, "in polite words — vague and mysterious," Ford said the fisheries service proposal doesn't clearly establish methods or criteria for counting nor does it include numbers.
"It is hard to decipher at this time what the recommendation is," he said. "To begin with, it's only a draft, and it's hard to characterize. It's muddled."
The foundation's threat of a lawsuit is a political move,

Ford said.
"They're just saying now that the elections are over to an administration that's mostly on their side. We're going to raise holy hell in court if you people in the Bush administration don't do what we think you ought to do," Ford said.
Ford's group, which includes business as well as environmental interests, is firm in its position that hatchery salmon and steelhead should not be counted together, he said.
"Any fisherman who has hooked hatchery salmon knows he is dealing with a different creature," Ford said. "Just like chimpanzees and humans are different, hatchery salmon are different creatures in how they respond to natural habitat. It just doesn't make sense to lump them together in seeking to apply the Endangered Species Act."

In addition, Ford said his group believes that raising salmon and steelhead in hatcheries in order to meet the numbers required by ESA in no way complies with the act's requirements, for properly re-establishing salmon abundance in the rivers of the Northwest.
In addition to representing the Idaho Coalition for Water, the Pacific Legal Foundation is representing a broad group with similar interests in Oregon, Washington and California.

City's police protection might hinge on coin jars

Castleford looks for a way to retain local sheriff's deputy

By Sandra Wisecaver
Times-News correspondent

CASTLEFORD — City leaders are asking residents to chip in to help keep a Twin Falls County sheriff's deputy patrolling their area for another year.
And they think coin jars placed in "strategic" businesses might do the trick.
"An anonymous donor has offered to give the city a sizeable donation if we will place jars around the community and ask others to help," Mayor Rita Ruffings said.
For the past two years, the county has paid half of a deputy's salary and the city and school district split the remainder. The deputy polices the city and surrounding rural area and serves as the school resource officer.
"The city and school need to come up with $20,000 to fund the deputy's annual salary and benefits — to keep him patrolling for an additional year."
Twin Falls County commissioners agreed that if the city could come up with $10,000 — one-fourth the deputy's annual salary and benefits — the county would approve a year-long policing contract.
City officials have committed themselves to keeping Deputy Rich Pavillion in the community for at least another six months by shifting dollars in their $167,594 annual budget.
"The city had only $5,000 to budget for law enforcement this year," Ruffings said. "We will have to be taken from funds budgeted for equipment purchases or supplies."
"We hopefully have found $10,000 for the first six months," Ruffings said.
At the end of six months, the city will have 30 days to back out of the contract if there's no money for the second half of the year. The undisclosed donation plus any money raised from the coin jars will go toward the second six months.
The school district could possibly still chip in $1,000 if those funds can be spared from the annual maintenance and operation budget, Superintendent Kelly Murphy said.
"Hopefully, the community will want to see us retain our officer and will want to help us," Ruffings said.

Work will begin on Centennial store

By Chip Thompson

BURLEY — A ribbon cutting is scheduled today for a new store in Burley, but it's no ordinary event.
The Burley Centennial Committee is heralding its headquarters at 1256 Overland Ave., which will offer information and merchandise associated with the year-long celebration of the city's first 100 years.
Committee Chairman Doug Manning said he hopes the store will be ready to open by Nov. 22 and that volunteers will begin moving furnishings such as display racks and sales counters in today.
"We'll use it as a general clearing house for centennial merchandise," Manning said. "Some will be available at other stores but most of it is just going to be out of the store."

The headquarters will also be staffed with volunteers who can provide information and sell tickets for various events.
The centerpiece of the headquarters will be a wood stove around which visitors can gather to enjoy hot drinks and share stories about the city's past.
Graphic displays and historical photographs will grace the walls, Manning said.
"It will have a lot of things that people will be interested in,"

he said.
Because the facility will be staffed entirely by volunteers, Manning said the hours of operation have not been established yet.
He speculated the headquarters would be open from noon to 5 p.m. initially, but that the hours would expand during the summer when several events are planned.
Merchandise available will include souvenirs sporting the centennial logo and a centennial calendar featuring humorous photographs of local officials and business people.
The calendar will be available in about a month but customers can place orders at it ahead of time, Manning said, adding that other merchandise will be available in time for Christmas.
Use of the building, which formerly housed Dance Addictions, has been donated to the city by Tom King of M. H.

King Co.
Centennial celebrations are due to kick off Jan. 1 with a First Night Family Celebration at Burley High School.
Other events scheduled during the year are a ball, gala, historical reenactments, concerts and a 100-mile bicycle ride, or century ride, around the county.
An initial open meeting to recruit committee members was successful and another will be held following the Thanksgiving holiday, Manning said.
Those interested in helping to make Burley's 100th year a memorable one can call Community Development Director Brian Tibbets at 878-2224.

Man appears in T.F. court, faces charges in shooting

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — The man arrested in connection with a shooting fired in the presidential streets on Nov. 5 has been transferred from Pocatello to Twin Falls to face multiple felony charges.
David S. Ruckdaschel, 34, of Pocatello, made an initial appearance in 5th District Magistrate Court Tuesday, charged with one count each of aggravated battery, aggravated assault, kidnapping in the first degree and unlawful discharge of a firearm into an occupied dwelling.
Members of the Twin Falls and Pocatello police departments arrested Ruckdaschel late Friday night in Pocatello.
He was held in the Bannock County jail over the weekend and made an appearance in 6th District Court Monday.
Officers were called to 364 Jackson St. in the early morning of Nov. 5. A man had been shot while in his bed, police said.

The victim was released from the hospital after being treated for a bullet wound to the back.
"After talking with witnesses, detectives determined that the shooting stemmed from a drug deal gone bad, according to court documents."
Police don't believe the shooting victim was the intended target.
Ruckdaschel's preliminary hearing was scheduled for Nov. 26 in Twin Falls. Bond was set at $500,000.
Ruckdaschel remained in the Twin Falls County jail Tuesday afternoon.

Gooding church looks for help with sewers

Septic system is 'really, really bad,' church member says

By Mickey Walker
Times-News correspondent

GOODING — The First Southern Baptist Church in Gooding is having problems with its septic system and has asked the city to come to its aid.
Hooking up to the city sewer system would solve the congregation's problem but because of the rise in elevation at the site it could be cost prohibitive for both the church and city.
"We've had some bids, but because of the elevation problem, we're looking at having to put in a lift pump that would run between $7,000 and $10,000," said church Pastor Chris Madsen.

Pat Bollinger, a church member who attended the Gooding City Council's Monday meeting, said the septic tank had been pumped out in September.
However, because the drain field from the tank was also full it has drained back into the tank and filled it.
"It's really, really bad," said Bollinger.
Bollinger added that the church has a small congregation and had little money to spend on a large project.
Public Works Director Todd Bunn advised the council that a surveyor or engineer would have to be hired to shoot the elevation from the nearest hookup to the church.
"And I don't know how much

Hansen will build structure for buses

By Margaret Jones
Times-News correspondent

HANSEN — The Hansen School District will construct a storage area for buses on the south side of its Vo-Tech building.

The decision came during the board's regular Monday meeting. It was based upon the recommendation of bus supervisor Bob Wayment.

The Hansen and Kimberly school districts are pooling segments of their transportation departments in an effort to trim costs. Hansen School Board members decided to continue fueling the buses in Kimberly's yard because of safety reasons.

In another matter, Wayment said there's a need for a part-time janitor in the elementary building in the early morning. The person hired would need to be willing to go to work at 6 a.m. to get the building prepared for the start of the day.

The job would require less than 20 hours a week, Wayment said.

Other Hansen School Board business included:

- Valuedictors — The board agreed the grading for valuedictor and salutorian should be based on eight semesters instead of seven as it has in the past. This will motivate students to get good grades up to the end of their senior year.
- Conference — Secondary Principal Rick Abel will be allowed to attend the National Association of Secondary School Principals conference in San Francisco in February.

Abel said he was especially interested in the program for student learning and challenging.

The conference will last for three days.

- Sports — The girls' invitational basketball tournament will be held Friday and Saturday. District will challenge Riverside and Hansen will play against Sho-Ban.

BLM releases plan to help sage grouse

BOISE (AP) — The federal Bureau of Land Management released a strategy Tuesday to boost sage-grouse numbers, hoping to bolster the population of America's second-largest game bird after a 90 percent decline since the early 1900s.

The fate of the sage grouse, found in 11 U.S. states, is garnering national attention because of its habitat site atop some of the nation's richest natural gas fields in Colorado, Montana, Utah and Wyoming.

Developers wanting to drill for gas are closely watching government plans, as are cattlemen, oil-rodent enthusiasts and environmentalists. Already on Tuesday, some of them dismissed the BLM strategy as a failure.

Male sage grouse perform their mating displays on a "dancing ground" in Garfield County near Jordan, Mont., in this file photo, date unknown. Of an estimated 16 million sage grouse that the government says may once have covered expanses of the western United States and Canada, as few as 100,000 greater sage grouse may remain.

According to the BLM, its strategy will guide its wildlife managers in restoring bird populations and habitat until programs can be developed on the state-and-local level.

"The importance of working with state wildlife agencies cannot be overemphasized," BLM director Kathleen Clarke said in a statement. "We'll continue to use the best available science and experience-based knowledge to form our management decisions."

The BLM strategy was released as the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service is still studying whether low bird numbers warrant endangered Species Act protection.

Sage grouse numbers have declined to about 200,000 — from more than 2 million a century ago.

Clarke said the BLM's strategy puts "specific, measurable, achievable" requirements to protect sagebrush habitat in places issued for grazing, recreation, mining and oil and gas activities on public land."

The BLM owns half of U.S.

improve habitat.

"We've got 70 local area planning groups making local-area plans and implementing local-area projects for conservation of sage brush," Crawford said in an interview from Reno. "BLM has been a player all along. This is firming up that commitment to continue the partnership."

But environmental groups working to restore sagebrush habitat — and species that live there — said the agency's plan doesn't do enough.

Mark Salvo, director of the Sagebrush Save Campaign, a group that advocates for sagebrush restoration, said the BLM plan shirks creating "minimum standards" for activities that might hurt sage grouse.

It bows to policies backed by President Bush's administration, he said.

The BLM is under pressure from the current administration to continue to develop these lands for oil and gas exploitation, to maintain current livestock grazing and to maintain open spaces for off-road vehicles," Salvo said in an interview from his Chandler, Arizona offices.

Salvo said he sees nothing in the BLM strategy introduced Tuesday that might affect the Fish and Wildlife Service's study of whether the birds should be listed as endangered.

If environmental groups like Salvo's get their way, the Fish and Wildlife Service would restrict further use of grouse habitat spread among 770,000 square miles in 11 states.

Results of the Fish and Wildlife Service's study are due Dec. 29.

Crawford said its plan helps define methods for assessing risks to sage grouse. The strategy identifies things its managers can do that have proven successful in some areas of the West.

water can be ruled out as a cause, since students who did not eat in the cafeteria were affected at the same rate as those who did, Principal Jill Starnes said.

On Monday, only 4 percent of the students were absent, which Starnes said was within the normal range.

sagebrush habitat, about 57 million acres.

Some western politicians and wildlife managers hailed the BLM strategy as "finding a proper balance."

"This is another indication that federal officials, under the leadership of President Bush, fully appreciate the importance of working closely with state and local officials when developing public lands policies," said Rep. Mike Simpson, R-Idaho.

Terry Crawford, director of the Nevada Department of Wildlife, has testified before the Senate about dangers to sage grouse populations.

After reviewing the BLM plan, he believes it provides "general ground rules" to make sound land-use decisions to Railroad through northern Idaho makes progress

CRAIGMONT — Progress is being made toward opening the railroad from Spalding to Cottonwood in north-central Idaho.

Stan Patterson, manager of the B&C&M Railroad, said the line's owner, Mike Williams, remains committed to putting locomotives back on the tracks. The line has been idle for four years.

"He said the price of steel could be too high and we wouldn't tear it up," Patterson said.

Williams, a Missouri-based railroad salvager, bought the line in 2002 with the intent of opening it to freight and eventually tourist traffic. He has maintained that although he is in the salvage business, he has no intention of ripping up the historic Camas Prairie line.

Patterson expects the first train to run on the line by summer at the latest.

"I am really looking forward to running a train up there," he said. "It will be nice to have a positive impact on a community and on railroading."

not done anything to deserve a recall," Matson said. "Ultimately we will all answer to God, and my conscience is clear."

Matson was the target of a recall effort after a controversial decision in which she and Commissioner Pat Holtzberg voted to open a small portion of Rabbit Creek Road. The road had been closed since 1948, and residents living in the area objected strenuously to the move.

Holtzberg lost her primary bid for re-election and was beaten in her write-in bid to reclaim the commission seat in the general election.

Matson initially questioned the process her critics used to gather signatures on a recall petition but declined to press the issue in court.

earlier this week and said he believes the predators were large dogs.

"It's definitely not a wolf," Lucid said.

He said the deer was probably hit by a car on Idaho 21 and died, or was finished off by the animals. The carcass will be left at the site for wildlife to devour, he said.

Jon Rachael, a Fish and Game regional wildlife manager, said the Idaho City area is home to a pack of wolves that follows migrating deer to winter range in the Boise area. He said there is a second in the Mountain Home area.

But Rachael said some wolves in the packs have radio collars and none has been traced to the Boise area.

District Health Department epidemiologist Ken Anderson said the cause of the illness may never know.

"We know it hit quickly and spread like fire," he said.

Board votes to purchase farmland for new schools

REXBURG — The Madison School Board has voted to buy 160 acres of farmland on the city's southwest side for a new high school and elementary school.

Superintendent Geoffrey Thomas said the tract "fits nicely into the 20-year plan trustees have for building improvements and replacements of schools."

The district will pay $1.5 million over five years for the land, about $5,000 less than its appraised value, district Business Manager Varr Snedaker said. The land will be leased to a neighboring farmer to help defray the cost until it is needed for new construction.

Buying now makes sense, Snedaker said, because the land is and around Rexburg is being developed so fast.

"If we wait, we might be that much further away from town," Snedaker said.

money the council wants to spend to build and determine what it would cost to run the sewer line out there," Gunn said. "Unfortunately the church sits on a bit of an island."

Councilwoman Sharon Seifert sympathized with members of the church and agreed the congregation was in need of assistance.

A starting point for the city, Seifert said, would be to contact a couple of engineers to find out what it would actually cost to have a survey taken.

"We'll find out what the costs will be, get back in touch with you and go from there," Seifert said. In other council business, members heard from Susie Development, answered Council questions about a block grant to help pay for a new well and sewage tank. The project is expected to cost $2.4 million—the grant could offset as much as $500,000 of that.

But with federal grants come federal regulations.

Under the conditions of the block grant the city must conduct an environmental assessment, provide for citizen participation via public hearings and comply with federal labor standards, including a "prevailing wage" requirement for all workers on the project.

Because most of the work is of a highly-skilled technical nature, the wages required are not likely to be much higher than those the city would have to pay normally, Mitton said. He estimated that the federally-mandated wages would be less than $100,000 more than those the city would pay without the $500,000 grant.

Mark Maier, the project manager for The Boyer Company that's taken over the Burley-Heyburn Industrial Park, reported that he'd hired a contractor to remove asbestos in at least one of the buildings at the site for far less than expected.

The Council approved as much as $100,000 to be spent on the abatement project during a previous meeting, but Maier told the Council that Inter-mountain Construction and Abatement had agreed to complete the project for just $21,045.

Work is expected to begin Nov. 29 and be completed in about three weeks, Maier said. The abatement will clear the way for Gossner Foods to continue construction of a $20 million cheese factory that will incorporate some buildings at the site.

Since taking over management of the site eight weeks ago, Maier said he has shown the property to 65 prospective tenants.

Judge condemns sentencing laws, gives drug offender 55 years

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A judge who condemned federal sentencing laws as "unjust, cruel and irrational" said Tuesday he had little choice but to sentence a first-time drug offender to 55 years in prison.

U.S. District Judge Paul Cassell gave record producer Weldon Angelo the minimum 55 years for carrying a gun and one day for dealing marijuana and money laundering.

Cassell said Angelo will serve more time than rapists, murderers or airline hijackers.

The courtroom was packed with Angelo's family, friends and supporters for what promised to be a dramatic sentencing.

Cassell made an impassioned speech against draconian sentencing laws and appeared ready to defy them, but he wasn't willing to step out of his role as a lawmaker," said University of Utah criminal law professor Erik Luna.

"I'm disappointed the judge didn't go the extra step," said Angelo's attorney, Jerry Mooney. Cassell said Angelo, 25, could have gotten another 78 months under sentencing guidelines, but the judge imposed the minimum. Angelo's lawyer plans to appeal. If that's unsuccessful, Angelo won't be eligible for release until he's 70, the judge said.

In his reluctant ruling, Cassell said he would call on President Bush to commute Angelo's sentence and Congress to change sentencing laws for drug offenders.

"This is the most difficult case I've decided since I took the bench 2.5 years ago,"

Heller representing the Gooding interests.

Heller asked the council to consider allowing the group to hold an Arts in the Park-type event next summer as a fundraiser.

The event, if approved, would be held on June 25, and could coincide with the annual fireman's barbecue, Heller added.

Heller said that the money raised would go toward membership activities and a donation to be made to the senior center in Gooding.

The consensus of the council was favorable providing Heller and Gooding Fire Chief Pat Bishop can coordinate the time and date.

Washington calmly awaits gubernatorial election results

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — Two weeks after the election, Washington state still doesn't have a new governor. And voters are "weathering" the suspense the way Seattle residents shrug off the rain.

"People in this part of the world tend to be rather pleasant. They expect people to be happy in the way they behave," said Ken Hoover, a political scientist at Western Washington University. "New York, this isn't. That's why people like to live here."

The vote-counting is still going on. As of Monday night, Democratic state Attorney General Christine Gregoire led by just 15th votes out of 2.8 million cast, after a week of trailing Republican real estate agent Dino Rossi. Gregoire had 1,360,871 votes to Rossi's 1,360,713.

Across the state, about 22,000 votes remained to be counted. Of the six counties with the most votes outstanding, three favor Rossi and three Gregoire.

"Washington voters have come to expect to wait for returns," said Bobbie Egan, King County elections spokeswoman. "Counting absentee ballots just takes a long time."

While protests broke out in Florida after the 2000 presidential election, no angry mobs have stormed the county canvassing centers in Washington — not even slightly ticked-off mobs.

People may be on the edge of their seats, but they are sitting quietly and politely.

Glacially slow vote-counting goes with the territory in Washington politics.

In most states, mail-in ballots must be received by Election Day. Washington and Alaska, however, require only that ballots be postmarked by Election Day. With an estimated 60 percent of Washingtonians voting by mail, close races can drag on for weeks as absentee ballots trickle in to county offices.

The 2000 U.S. Senate race took several weeks of counting and recounting before Democrat Maria Cantwell was declared the winner over Republican incumbent Slade Gorton.

One veteran of the Gorton campaign is now Rossi's spokeswoman:

"Boy, can I pick 'em. Mary Lane said in an opinion piece she wrote about the highs and lows of a close Washington state election. "On the days when your boss is up or trending up, you're ecstatic, thinking for sure he's gonna win. On the bad days, well, you're pretty much crushed. That's not a recipe for healthy living."

Wednesday is the deadline to finish counting, so Washington should know who the next governor is by then. Unless, of course, there are recounts.

Under state law, a recount must be held if the final margin of victory is less than 2,000 votes and one-half of 1 percent. Six statewide vote recounts have been held since 1998, though none of them changed the outcome.

WWII-era artillery leaks mustard gas

STOCKTON, Utah (AP) — Workers at the Deseret Chemical Depot sealed some leaking mustard agent Tuesday.

The vapor from the leaking artillery projectiles was detected during monitoring operations in a storage igloo.

According to a statement from the Deseret Chemical Depot, depot workers in protective clothing put the munitions in airtight packaging for continued storage. The igloo is covered by earth and the air inside is filtered. No vapor escaped and there was no danger to the surrounding community, the release said.

The depot is about 40 miles west of Salt Lake City.

PETA pitches fish as smart, sensitive

NEW YORK (AP) — Touting tofu chowder and vegetarian sushi as alternatives, animal-rights activists have launched a novel campaign arguing that fish — contrary to stereotype — are intelligent, sensitive animals no more deserving of being eaten than a pet dog or cat.

Called the Fish Empathy Project, the campaign reflects a strategy shift by People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals as it challenges a diet component widely viewed as nutritious and uncontroversial.

"No one would ever put a hook through a dog's or cat's mouth," said Bruce Friedrich, PETA's director of vegan outreach. "Once people start to understand that fish, although they come in different packaging, are just as intelligent, they'll stop eating them."

The campaign is in its infancy and will face broad skepticism. Major groups such as the American Heart Association recommend fish as part of a healthy diet; some academics say it is wrong to portray the intelligence and pain sensitivity of fish as comparable to mammals.

Researchers find a cause of heart attacks with lower blood pressure

CHICAGO (AP) — Aggressively lowering blood pressure isn't enough to prevent heart attacks and strokes in some patients, and now researchers think they know one reason: enlargement of the heart's main pumping chamber.

The condition is called left ventricular hypertrophy, or LVH, and affects at least 20 percent of Americans with high blood pressure, or up to 12 million people.

Two new studies found that reducing LVH with blood-pressure drugs can further lower the risk of deadly heart trouble in patients whose blood pressure already has been substantially reduced.

"We've always known that lowering blood pressure alone in hypertensive patients did not completely reduce the increased risks," said Dr. Peter Okin of Weill Cornell Medical College in New York. "The question was why."

Study links disorders, infection in preemies

CHICAGO (AP) — Infections shortly after birth are a surprisingly significant cause of cerebral palsy and other brain-development disorders in the tiniest premature babies, a study found.

It is well known that babies born extremely prematurely run a higher risk of a host of developmental problems, with the chief causes thought to include infections contracted in the womb and bleeding in the brain.

The new research shows the strong degree to which infections contracted after birth — including infections not directly involving the brain — are linked to neurological problems later, said lead author Dr. Barbara Stoll of Emory University.

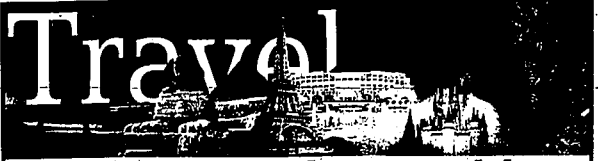

About 47 percent of children in the study who had had an infection had at least one developmental problem by age 2, compared with 29 percent of children who had not had an infection.

"This study shows that successfully treating an extremely low birth weight infant's infection does not automatically ensure that the infant will do well," said Dr. Duane Alexander, director of the National Institute for Child Health and Human Development, which funded the study. He said premature infants who have had infections should be watched carefully for developmental problems.

Tiny premature infants are especially vulnerable to infections because their immune systems have not matured and because ventilators and other medical "machinery" create a pathway for germs to enter the body.

New INEEL contractor looks for cash to advance research mission

IDAHO FALLS (AP) - The new contractor taking over research operations at the Idaho National Engineering and Environmental Laboratory is ready to implement a plan that will bring in the extra cash needed to build a world-class nuclear power research program at the facility.
John Grossenbacher, who is charged with creating that program at what will become the Idaho National Laboratory, will not provide details of the fundraising strategy until all details get Energy Department approval.
But he said, "you can bring private industry into the lab in ways that don't interfere with government work."
The cash to be raised by the Battelle Energy Alliance is critical since the department's budget request for the next year is only $50 million higher than the INEEL and Argonne National Laboratory-West received for research operations this past year.

The two laboratories are being combined under the new contract.
William Magwood, who runs department's nuclear energy, science and technology office, said Battelle is not only expected to generate additional cash, but "to bring that effort to a whole new level, especially on the national security side."

Bagels, chop suey are all-American

Like the bagel, chop suey is an American invention masquerading as an Old-World tradition.
This day in history: On Nov. 17, 1534, Elizabeth I became queen of England after the death of Mary I. Decades later, a German visitor would describe Elizabeth this way: "Her face is oblong, fair and wrinkled; her eyes small, yet black and pleasant; her nose, a little hooked, her lips narrow and her teeth black (a defect the English seem subject to, from their too great use of sugar)."
While in the process of inventing the fluoroscope — the world's first X-ray machine — Thomas Edison's assistant, Clarence Dally, was slowly poisoned from its the radioactive rays. Several years and several amputations later, Dally died.
Customers shop longer when listening to familiar music. Researchers think its because shoppers lose track of time while trying to identify the tunes.
There are at least 274 different breeds of cattle. Dairy connoisseurs say that the taste and color of milk varies greatly from breed to breed. For example, milk from Jersey cows has a high degree of butterfat, while Guernsey milk has a distinctive yellowish color.
In an average day, about 4,800 American adolescents ages 11 to 17 try their first cigarette. Of these, 2,000 become regular smokers.

Reader Donna Foland asks if people who were born blind "see" when they dream. No, say researchers and blind people themselves — their dreams are of the other four senses. In fact, most people who lost their sight before turning 7 don't see in their dreams either, while most who lost their sight after age 7 do.
Bonvino da Riva wrote in his A.D. 1290 etiquette book, "Fifty Table Courtesies": "Do not spit over or on the table in the mouth of lunatics." If only our dinner-companions would take this to heart, too.
Coincidentally, the most recent election featured a man from the state with the highest rate of divorce and one from the state with the lowest. Texas sees 4.1 divorces per thousand people each year; Massachusetts, only 2.4.
Aposteme is from the Greek word for "interval." We don't quite know how it developed its English definition: "a swollen, pus-filled abscess."

Pumpkin

Think you know that orange-colored custard? Read on:

Pumpkin pie, a lasting legacy of Pilgrim feasts, continues to serve as the much-anticipated conclusion to many traditional holiday meals. Today this passion continues, with more than 50 million pies served each year. Canned-pumpkin has remained a favorite due to its convenience, quality, nutrition and, of course, great taste. With pumpkin on the ingredient list, the distinctive orange color, creamy texture, moistness and mellow taste can enhance any number of dishes. Contemporary cooks have discovered pumpkin's versatility and flair, so it now stars in more than pies. Pumpkin adapts to a variety of flavorings and spices, giving terrific taste to breads, soups and many delicious desserts.

LIBBY'S FAMOUS PUMPKIN PIE

Makes 8 servings
3/4 cup granulated sugar
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1/2 teaspoon ground ginger
1/4 teaspoon ground cloves
2 large eggs
1 can (15 ounces) pumpkin
1 can (12 fluid ounces) evaporated milk
1 unbaked 9-inch (4-cup volume) deep-dish pie shell
Whipped cream
Mix sugar, salt, cinnamon, ginger and cloves in small bowl. Beat eggs in large bowl. Stir in pumpkin and sugar-spice mixture. Gradually stir in evaporated milk.

Pour into pie shell.
Bake in preheated 425 degrees F oven 15 minutes. Reduce temperature to 350 degrees; bake 40 to 50 minutes, or until knife inserted near center comes out clean. Cool on wire rack 2 hours. Serve immediately or refrigerate. Top with whipped cream before serving.

TRADITIONAL PUMPKIN PIE

This recipe is close to the famous classic pumpkin pie, but with less butter and skim milk instead of cream. The flavor is just as good as Grandma's pie. Make your own crust or buy a frozen crust and allow it to thaw for a few minutes at room temperature.
Makes one 9-inch pie.

1 9-inch unbaked pie shell
2 eggs, slightly beaten
2 cups pumpkin puree or 1 can (16 oz) solid pack pumpkin
1 cup firmly packed brown sugar
1 1/2 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1/2 teaspoon salt

1/2 teaspoon ground nutmeg
2 tablespoons melted butter or margarine
1 cup skim milk
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
Preheat oven to 425 degrees F.
In a large bowl, add filling ingredients in order given. Mix with electric mixer or by hand.
Pour into pie shell. Bake 15 minutes. Then reduce oven temperature to 350 degrees F and continue baking for an additional 45 minutes or until knife inserted near the center comes out clean. Cool slightly and serve warm or chilled.

Pie crust 101

Enough for a single crust 10-inch deep-dish pie:

1 1/2 cups sifted all-purpose flour
6 tablespoons sifted cake flour
2 teaspoons sugar
1/2 teaspoon salt
4 1/2 tablespoons cold shortening, cut into small pieces
6 tablespoons cold butter, cut into small pieces
About 5 tablespoons cold water
Nonstick cooking spray
Pastry weights or dried beans

1. Sift together the flours, sugar and salt. Put into a bowl or food processor. Add the pieces of shortening and butter; cut in by hand or use the pulse button on the processor until large flakes are formed. Add cold water and work just until the dough begins to hold together. Transfer to a sheet of plastic wrap and form dough into a flat disk. Refrigerate at least an hour or overnight.
2. Lightly spray a 10-inch deep-dish pie pan with cooking spray and set aside. If dough has been refrigerated overnight, remove about 30 minutes before rolling.
3. Roll dough between lightly floured sheets of plastic wrap to a 15-inch circle. Remove top sheet of plastic and invert dough over pie pan. Use plastic to mold dough into the pan, then remove and discard. Crimp top edge of dough. Refrigerate 30 minutes or freeze 15 minutes.
4. Preheat oven to 400 degrees. Fold a piece of aluminum foil over the dough and add pastry weights or dried beans to cover the bottom; don't fill entire shell with weights. Make sure the edge of the dough is also covered with foil. Bake on center oven rack 20 minutes. Carefully lift foil and weights out of pan and with a fork lightly pierce dough that has puffed up. Continue baking 10 minutes. Cool on a wire rack completely before filling.

Pumpkin Ginger Cheesecake.

PUMPKIN GINGER CHEESECAKE

Makes 16 servings

Crust
1 1/2 cups gingersnap cookie crumbs (about 36 cookies)
1/4 cup granulated sugar
3 tablespoons butter or margarine, melted

Cheesecake
3 packages (8 ounces each) cream cheese, softened
1 cup granulated sugar
1/4 cup packed light brown sugar
2 large eggs
1 can (15 ounces) pumpkin
2/3 cup (5 fluid-ounce can) evaporated milk
2 tablespoons cornstarch
3/4 teaspoon ground ginger
1/4 teaspoon ground cloves

Topping
1 container (16 ounces) sour cream, at room temperature
1/3 cup granulated sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
Crumble gingersnap cookies
Preheat oven to 350 degrees F. Tightly wrap outside bottom and side of 9-inch springform pan with 2 pieces of foil to prevent leakage. Lightly grease inside of pan.
Combine crumbs, granulated sugar and butter in medium bowl. Press onto bottom and 1 inch up sides of prepared pan. Bake 6 to 8 minutes. Cool on wire rack 10 minutes.
For cheesecake:
Beat cream cheese, granulated sugar and brown sugar in large mixer bowl until fluffy. Beat in eggs, pumpkin and evaporated milk. Add cornstarch, ginger and cloves; beat well. Pour into crust. Place pan in large roasting pan; fill roasting pan with hot water to 1-inch depth.

Bake 65 to 75 minutes or until edge is set but center still moves slightly.

For topping:
Combine sour cream, granulated sugar and vanilla extract in small bowl; mix well. Remove cheesecake from water bath, leaving water bath in oven. Spread sour cream mixture over surface of warm cheesecake. Return cake to water bath; bake 5 minutes longer. Remove cheesecake from water bath to wire rack. Run knife around edge of cheesecake. Cool completely. Refrigerate several hours or overnight. Top with crumbled gingersnaps. Remove side of pan.

How to cook a pumpkin

When selecting a pumpkin for cooking, the best selection is a "pie pumpkin" or "sweet pumpkin." These are smaller than the large jack-o-lantern pumpkins and the flesh is sweeter and less watery. However, you can substitute the jack-o-lantern variety with fairly good results.

Look for a pumpkin with 1 to 2 inches of stem left. If the stem is cut, the pumpkin will decay quickly or may be decaying at the time of purchase.

Avoid pumpkins with blemishes and soft spots. It should be heavy, shape is unimportant. A lopsided pumpkin is not necessarily a bad pumpkin. Figure one pound of raw, untrimmed pumpkins for each cup finished pumpkin puree.

Preparing the pumpkin

Spread newspaper over your work surface. Start by removing the stem with a sharp knife. If you are planning to roast the pumpkin seeds, smash the pumpkin against a hard surface to break it open.

If not, cut in half with a sharp knife. In any case, remove the stem and scoop out the seeds and scrape away all of the stringy mass. A messy job, but it will pay off.

Cooking the pumpkin

Boiling/steaming Method: Cut the pumpkin into rather large chunks. Rinse in cold water. Place pieces in a large pot with about a cup of water. The water does not need to cover the pumpkin pieces. Cover the pot and boil

FOOD & HOME

Ashland has modest size, modern layout

The painted corbels that accent the Ashland's stepped gables create a charming first impression. A wide bay window and modest porch add to the home's overall welcoming appearance, while its narrow footprint (41 feet wide) allows it to fit comfortably on a small lot.

This plan's compact size and contemporary floor plan make it equally well-suited to the needs of first-time homebuyers and empty nesters.

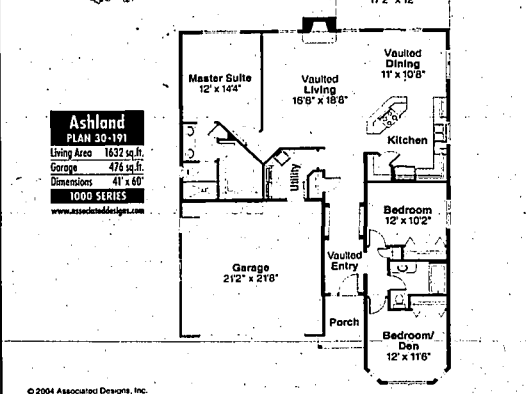

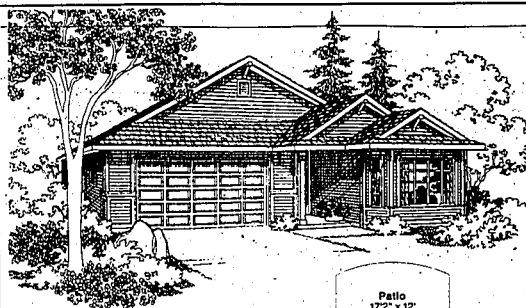

Vaulted ceilings lend a feeling of spaciousness to the entry, living room and dining room. Natural light washes into the entry through a sidelight left of the door. Two arched openings add to the visual appeal. The first is capped by a high display shelf, then more display shelves line the section of hallway between the first and second arch.

Family living spaces at the rear are large, comfortable and relaxed. Living room and dining room feel bright, open and expansive. The kitchen is visually open as well, its boundary defined by an eating bar and a flat ceiling with overhead display shelves.

Windows line the rear wall. Two flank the gas fireplace and a set of sliders offers access onto a large patio. Generous kitchen storage and counter spaces include a roomy walk-in pantry with shelves filling two sides. A sink island with a raised eating bar faces into the family and dining rooms. Utilities are nearby in a good-sized room that connects with the garage.

An angled entry gives privacy to a master suite with a large picture window that opens up the view to the backyard. Other amenities in the Ashland's master suite include a huge walk-in closet, double vanity and oversized shower. At the opposite end of the house, secondary bedrooms share a bathroom.

For a review plan, including scaled floor plans, elevations, section and artist's conception, send $25 to Associated Designs, 1100 Jacobs Dr., Dept. W, Eugene, OR 97402. Please specify the Ashland 30-191 and include a return address when ordering. A catalog featuring more than 400 home plans is available for $15. Making window coverings safe

The Baltimore Sun

You're a conscientious parent when it comes to your children's safety. In fact, with car seats and safety belts, bikes, toys, foods and more, you're ever careful. But have you considered the potential dangers of your window coverings? Levolor Window Fashions offers several tips:

- Never leave children unattended around window blinds. And keep cribs away from any corded blinds or drapes.

- In nurseries and playrooms, hang cordless blinds.
- Hang cords on a hook out of a child's reach. Or use cord shorteners on long-corded blinds.
- Check that inner cords (through the center of the slats) are not loose.
- Cut your blinds' lift-cord loop and replace with safety tassels.

For more tips, visit www.levolor.com or call the Window Covering Safety Council at (800) 505-1636.

Scents that send people in ascent

Los Angeles Times

Peek into the fragrant life of Danielle Roska. After taking a trip to the "fresh air" linen smell she sprays on her sheets, she slips on vanilla-scented slippers and heads to the kitchen, pulls a mug from her lemon-scented dish strainer and steeps a cup of tangerine tea.

Her unnaturally scented day has only just begun. Roska grabs her strawberry-scented soap suds in the shower, moisturizes with "buttery raspberry body lotion" and finishes up with "muddled elder body cologne." Her car greets her with a fresh cucumber air freshener, and she tells it to work with a mint-scented put.

Back home, she moves between rooms known by plug-in scent as much as by purpose: cinnamon stick in the living room, buttercream in the home office, and Macintosh apple in the bedroom. "As I'm getting into bed, I put on cookies and cream foot cream," says Roska, the 27-year-old creator of the 16-month-old retail website everythingsmells.com.

Scented products are increasingly dominating our homes, our cars and our lives. "Scent is absolutely one of the key driving forces of today," says Marshal Cohen of the market research firm NPD Group. "We're seeing it enter into many businesses. In the apparel and cosmetic industries, in home furnishings, accessories, food, the auto industry... The scent industry has — forgive the pun — not even scratched the surface."

Follow your nose and you'll discover lavender-scented rugs, eucalyptus-scented pillow covers, jasmine-scented mattress pads and chocolate-scented socks. Who needs a morning cup of java when you can inhale the coffee-scented watch you bought on impulse from artwatch.com? Or the Nokia cellphone with the coffee-infused faceplate sitting on your bedside table?

"Everything is going to smell, to the point where there's a conflict of smells," Cohen says. "Smells are going to start fighting each other. Some would argue that they already have. Scents that soothe one person irritate another, and perfumed products, like secondhand smoke, wind their way into unsuspecting nostrils.

"This is more complex than the tobacco issue ever was," says Betty Bridges, founder of the Fragranced Products Information Network and one of a number of people nationwide who say they get sick when subjected to chemicals found in scented products.

Bridges lives in a world where a sleepover has the potential to turn into a giant sniff test — if you don't forget your scented PJs. "I Need a Barbecue Man" pajamas are infused with a "tangy barbecue sauce" scent, while "I Need a Handyman" provides a whiff of cedar and "I Need a Lawnmower Man" the odor of fresh-cut grass.

Because scent recipes are considered trade secrets — and fragrance manufacturers are not required to divulge the ingredients — Bridges spent eight years trying to isolate the chemical that made her sick. A sympathetic fragrance chemist finally identified the ingredients and helped her solve the riddle.

for 20 to 30 minutes or until tender—oven—for 10 to 12 minutes. Check for doneness by poking with a fork. Drain the cooked pumpkin in a colander. Reserve the liquid to use as a base for soup.

Oven method: Cut pumpkin in half, scraping away stringy mass and seeds. Rinse under cold water. Place pumpkin, cut side down on a large cookie sheet. Bake at 350 degrees F for one hour or until fork tender. Then follow the procedure outlined below in Preparing the Puree.

Microwave method: Cut pumpkin in half, place cut side down on a microwave safe plate or tray. Microwave on high for 15 minutes, check for doneness. If necessary continue cooking at 1-2 minute intervals until fork tender. Continue as outlined below in Preparing the Puree.

Preparing the puree

When the pumpkin is cool enough to handle, remove the peel using a small sharp knife and your fingers. Put the peeled pumpkin in a food processor and puree or use a food mill, ricer, strainer or potato masher to form a puree.

Pumpkin puree freezes well. To freeze, measure cooled puree into one cup portions, place in ridged freezer containers, leaving 1/2-inch headspace or pack into zip closure bags. Label, date and freeze at 0 degrees F for up to one year.

Use this puree in recipes or substitute in the same amount in any recipe calling for solid pack canned pumpkin.

1 tablespoon vanilla extract
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1/4 teaspoon salt
2 large eggs
2 large egg whites
Preheat oven to 300 degrees F
Coat six 6-ounce custard cups with nonstick cooking spray.
Place cups in 13 x 9-inch baking pan.

Place evaporated milk, pumpkin, 3 tablespoons sugar, vanilla extract, cinnamon and salt in blender container, cover. Process until smooth, about 1 minute. Add eggs and egg whites to blender; process just until smooth. Pour mixture into prepared cups. Fill pan with hot water to 1-inch depth.

Bake 65 to 70 minutes or until gently set in center. Remove to wire rack to cool slightly. Refrigerate several hours or overnight. Preheat broiler. Sprinkle each creme brulee with 1 teaspoon of remaining sugar. Place on jelly-roll pan. Broil 1 to 2 minutes, rotating pan once, until sugar is melted and caramelized. Refrigerate 5 to 10 minutes or until topping hardens.

Get smart about changing thermostats

DEAR JIM: We are trying to keep our utility bills low by setting the thermostat lower at night, but we hate waking up to cold bedrooms. Are the new smart thermostats easy to install and program for comfort?

MEG: Setting your thermostat lower at night during winter (higher during summer) will save a tremendous amount on your utility bills. By installing a smart thermostat, you can go to bed and awake to a comfortable house and never know the thermostat changed itself overnight while you slept.

Most new smart thermostats allow you to set different temperatures during four periods throughout the day and night. Just as it saves energy at night when the thermostat is set lower, it saves additional energy to have the thermostat set lower while you are gone at work or at school.

Smart thermostats have followed the lead of other electronic items and are now smarter and easier to program and use. Some of them are so smart, they sense both the indoor and outdoor temperatures and determine the precise time to start the furnace in the morning. Your bedrooms will be warm when your alarm goes off in the morning no matter how cold it is outdoors.

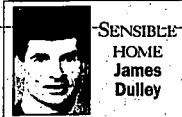

Smart thermostats are available with several programming methods that even the digitally-challenged can handle. They have their own internal power storage so you can snap them off-the-wall base and program them in your easy chair. They include a generic programmed time/temperature schedule so you can use them immediately and program your personal schedule later.

If this still sounds too challenging, select one of the designs which resemble a tiny touch screen display on the wall. There are no multi-use buttons with which to contend. The entire programming process is menu-driven by touching its screen. It is backlit to make changes in the dark.

When shopping for a smart thermostat, you will see designations of 7, 5+2 or 5+1+1. These refer to the programming flexibility. A 7-day thermostat allows you to program a different temperature schedule every day of the week. With the prices more reasonable now, this type is generally your best choice.

A 5+2-day thermostat provides for the same schedule every weekday and another for the weekend. A 5+1+1-day model is the same except you can set different Saturday and Sunday schedules. For some families, these are adequate.

You can find these smart thermostats at most home center stores. The thermostat

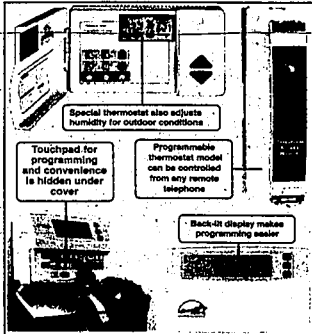

Wiring is safe: low-voltage and color-coded for simple installation. If you have a relatively new furnace or central air conditioner with a variable-speed blower, it would be wise to have your heating contractor select and install one for you.

DEAR JIM: I am thinking about installing insulating window film on my windows, but I heard the film can make the double-pane seal leak. Is this a real problem and is there any way to get around it?

LARRY H. DEAR LARRY: Most double-pane window manufacturers do not recommend you install window film on their windows. The heat created when the sun hits the film can cause the air between the panes to expand and blow a seal.

Generally though, the lightly tinted, low-emissivity, insulating window films do not cause the glass to heat enough to cause problems. Definitely stay away from using darkly tinted film on double-pane windows.

Smart thermostats have followed the lead of other electronic items and are now smarter and easier to program and use.

Easy elegance for walls

The Baltimore Sun. faux finishing the walls doesn't come cheap. Besides being costly, it's laborious and time-consuming. That is, unless you consider installing a textured, paintable wall covering, like the new Super Fresco Paintable Textures from Graham & Brown.

The wall coverings allow homeowners to re-create the look of a faux-painted or fabric-covered wall, but without the expense of hassle.

Easy to hang and pre-pasted, the heavy paper wall coverings hide cracks and imperfections as well as paneling. No scraping or sanding is needed.

Wall coverings come in white in a variety of patterns, and can be painted, stained and repainted in the future. Wall coverings include Linen, Brushstrokes and Small Squares, and sell for around $14 a roll at Home Depot and the Great Indiors. Call (800) 554-0887 or visit www.grahambrown.com.

2 large eggs

1/2 teaspoon vanilla extract

Finely grated zest of 1 lemon

1/2 teaspoon ground cinnamon

1/2 teaspoon ground nutmeg

1/4 teaspoon ground ginger

1/4 teaspoon salt

1 cup canned pumpkin

2/3 cup half-and-half

Prepare, bake and cool pie crust.

Heat oven to 350 degrees.

With an electric mixer or food processor, beat cream cheese until smooth.

Add sugars and blend until smooth.

Then add whole eggs and yolk, vanilla, lemon zest, cinnamon, nutmeg, ginger, salt, pumpkin and half-and-half.

Blend until smooth and evenly mixed.

Pour the filling into the pie shell.

Place pie pan on center oven rack and bake 25 minutes.

Rotate pan 180 degrees and continue baking 20 minutes, or until the top has puffed slightly.

The center may still be a little wobbly but it should not be soupy.

Transfer pie to cooling rack and let cool to room temperature.

PUMPKIN ICE CREAM WITH CARAMEL SAUCE

Makes about 8 to 10 servings

Ice cream:

2 cups whole milk

1 cup half-and-half

1/2 teaspoon ground cinnamon

1/4 teaspoon ground allspice

1/2 teaspoon ground nutmeg

1/4 teaspoon ground ginger

6 egg yolks

3/4 cup granulated sugar

1/3 cup packed light brown sugar

1 (16-ounce) can pumpkin puree

1/2 cup whipping cream

1 teaspoon vanilla

Caramel sauce:

3/4 cup bottled caramel

How to store pies

There are many variations on the old-fashioned pumpkin pie that Grandma made, but most recipes still contain eggs.

and/or dairy products. For this reason, the pumpkin pie belongs in the refrigerator, not on the kitchen counter.

Too often, pies are stored on the counter before and after the big holiday meal. Many fail to realize that even commercially prepared pumpkin pie filling has a high proportion of milk and eggs, so it is highly perishable.

The high water, protein and sugar content of pumpkin pie provide a prime growing environment for bacteria. When pumpkin pie is kept at room temperature, bacteria can multiply to dangerous levels, possibly causing illness.

Keep pumpkin pie, custard pies and other rich egg-laden desserts hot or cold until ready to serve, then store leftovers in the refrigerator. Fruit pies are safe in the cupboard, pantry shelf or in a pie keeper on the countertop for no longer than two days. After that time, the fruit may ferment or mold, spoiling the pie.

into the sugar mixture, whisking well. Pour back into the saucepan. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until thickened.

Remove from the heat and stir in the whipping cream and vanilla. Pour into a bowl, cool slightly and refrigerate about 3 hours, until completely chilled.

Pour into an ice-cream maker and freeze according to package directions. Then transfer to a chilled bowl, cover and freeze. Place in refrigerator about 1 hour before serving.

To prepare the caramel sauce:

Heat the caramel sauce and cream together gently on top of the stove or in a microwave just to warm. Stir well until smooth and blended. Serve warm over the ice cream.

PUMPKIN NUT BARS

Yield about 30 bars

1 cup cooked pumpkin puree, fresh or canned

1/2 cup butter or margarine (melted)

2 egg whites, slightly beaten

1 cup brown sugar, packed

1/2 cup shredded coconut, toasted

1/2 cup wheat germ

1 cup chopped salted peanuts, pecans, or almonds

Preheat oven to 350 degrees F in a large bowl, beat egg whites slightly, add pumpkin and melted butter or margarine beat until smooth.

In another bowl combine oats, brown sugar, coconut, wheat germ, and nuts.

Fold oat mixture into pumpkin mixture to form stiff dough.

Press dough into a lightly greased 15 1/2 x 10 1/2 inch jelly roll pan.

Bake 40 to 45 minutes or until golden brown. While still warm, cut into 2x3 inch bars. Serve warm or cool completely.

Why Access to Books Matters

The Availability of reading material in the home, weather owned or borrowed from the library, is directly associated with children's achievement in reading comprehension.

61 percent of low-income families have no books at all in their homes for their children.

The most successful way to improve the reading achievement of low-income children is to increase their access to print.

The only behavior measure that correlates significantly with reading scores is the number of books in the home. An analysis of a national data set of nearly 100,000 United States school children found that access to printed materials - and not poverty - is the "critical variable affecting reading acquisition".

Reading to your children will develop their love of reading.

Why Should you Keep reading to kids even after they start reading on their own?

1. Because children need attention and this is one way to show you love them.
2. Because reading to them will encourage them to become lifelong readers.
3. Because children's books today are so good that they are fun, even for adults.
4. Because they will develop a more positive attitude toward reading.
5. Because children need reading role models to help them hear what fluent readers sound like. They also need one-on-one time with role models outside of the school environment.
6. Because their "listening levels" far exceeds their "reading levels". Until about eighth grade, children listen on a higher level than they can read. They hear and understand stories that are more complicated and more interesting than anything they could read on their own.
7. Because it gives you and your child a chance to relax together.
8. Because reading to your child provides an opportunity for conversation and can provide a way to bring up difficult subjects.

Care and feeding of Christmas cactus

Some call them Christmas cactus. Others call them Thanksgiving-cactus. Probably because it was blooming when they got it for a hostess gift right around one of those holidays. They're not really cacti, but we don't seem to care: a rose is a rose by any other name, right? These little ladies really belong to the Schlumberger family, if anybody asks.

GREEN THUMBPRINTS
Cathy Walworth

And they'd like to bask in the brightest light you've got in the house. Direct sunlight is great, thanks.

Keep her soil moist (rule of green thumb: if she blooms, she drinks). But don't overdo it. All roots need to dry out between waterings to avoid the dreaded root rot. These girls hail from the tropical jungles where, if they were there, would reside on trees, like some orchids. And like orchids, like all that extra moisture to drain away quickly.

You can replot your Christmas cactus with a good mixture of organic matter and sand. Look for compost or sphagnum moss as key ingredients in the potting mix you choose.

If you'd like Ms. C cactus to bloom again next year, you must remember that she responds to day length and temperature, much like a poinsettia does. When the nights fall into the 50-55-degree range buds will form, no matter how many hours of darkness she sees. If she's kept in warmer temperatures, as most houses are, she'll need 12 hours of uninterrupted slumber each night to get the hint it's time to flower up.

During September and October, most people put their Christmas cactus in an unheated garage close to the window. Letting her dry out a little more than usual helps the bud development, too. If you're not sure whether or not your garage freezes, put an inexpensive thermometer out there and watch it.

Those plants will be killed by freezing temperatures—they're from the jungle, you remember.

When buds show, acclimate them to the inside again slowly so you can enjoy her in all her glory.

Tip of the Week: You heard it here first: You're going to need a giant-sized tree holder/reservoir for an average (6-foot, 7-inch foot Douglas fir) Christmas tree.

Gary Chastagner of Washington State University did a little research a few years ago and found that a tree of that size will drink up to four gallons of water the first week it's in the house.

Unless you want to set your alarm for regular, through-the-night waterings, that big tree stand could be the best thing you ever bought.

What's bugging your garden? Write to Cathy in care of this newspaper or e-mail her at: cwalworth@aol.com.

Trees that are fake and fabulous

Knight Ridder News Service

Warning: The following story is about nontraditional Christmas trees. Not green. Not real. Not Fraser fir-like and not with a scent. There are two distinct Christmas camps, the traditionalists and the heretics, so the warning seemed necessary. This trend is fueled by the heretics and makes the traditionalists wince.

Artificial Christmas trees in nontraditional colors and textures are becoming quite popular. There, it's been said. Pink leather trees, for example, purpleinsel trees, blue flocked trees and even oranges and lime-colored trees are showing up on the holiday radar. It was a natural progression. Real trees gave way to fake, and once the balance of sales tipped to the side of the artificial (only 30 percent of displayed trees are real, it was only a matter of time before liberties were taken with the green color and pine needle texture.

These affronts to the yuletide are not in the big retail stores such as Michaels Arts & Crafts or Garden Ridge. Those stalwarts of the artificial forests are sticking to green trees and green trees only. It's the decorative-accessory emporiums where the unusual shades of the season lurk.

1/2 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon pumpkin pie spice
1 egg, slightly beaten
2 cups pumpkin puree
1/2 cup molasses, or maple syrup
3-4 tablespoons buttermilk or milk
2 tablespoons unsalted butter, or margarine, melted
1/2 cup chopped pecans or hazelnuts, optional

3 cups fresh or frozen pumpkin puree - (see Pumpkin Purchase & Puree Preparation)
1 head garlic, unpeeled
1 large onion, quartered
Zest of 1/2 orange
1-1/2 teaspoon salt
6 cups water

Putting the soup together:

1/2 cup apple juice concentrate, thawed

King Vlad: Guerrero voted AL MVP

The Associated Press

NEWYORK — Vladimir Guerrero had such a huge impact during the final week of the season that voting for the American League Most Valuable Player award wasn't even close.

Guerrero easily defeated his competitors on the Boston Red Sox and New York Yankees on Tuesday, becoming just the fifth player to switch leagues and earn the honor in his first season with his new team.

The Anaheim Angels right fielder received 21 of 28 first-place votes and 354 points in balloting by the Baseball Writers' Association of America.

Yankees right fielder Gary Sheffield finished second with five first-place votes and 254 points. Boston players split the remaining two first-place votes, with left fielder Manny Ramirez finishing third with 238 points and designated hitter David Ortiz winding up fourth with 174 points.

Guerrero was prepared for a close vote. "I was in no way expecting it to be the way it came out," he said through a translator during a conference call from the presidential palace in the Dominican Republic.

Guerrero, 28, signed a $70 million, five-year contract with the Angels last January after eight seasons with the Montreal Expos. He hit .337 with 39 homers and 126 RBIs as Anaheim won the AL West, and led the league with 124 runs and 366 total bases. He batted .371 in September with 10 homers and 23 RBIs and went 14-for-30 (.467) with six homers and 11 RBIs in the last six games of the season, helping the Angels finish one game ahead of Oakland. Anaheim manager Mike Scioscia said Guerrero was "at times carrying our team single-handedly." "When he came to our team, our expectations were obviously very, very high, and he met them. 'IT'S A LONG SEASON'

Shoshone opens season with win

By Eric Larsen Times-News writer

KIMBERLY — It could be a very long year for Magic Valley Northside Conference teams.

Last year's Class 1A state championship runner-up Shoshone Indians opened their 2004-05 girls basketball season with a convincing 57-26 win over the Class 3A Kimberly Bulldogs Tuesday night at Kimberly High School.

The Indians shook off the early-game jitters and four early turnovers to take a 6-1 lead heading into the second quarter. Sparked by a nine-point second quarter from senior guard Meghan Sorenson, the 1-0 Indians took a 33-6 lead into the half and coasted the rest of the way for the win.

"Early in the year, games are going to get sloppy, but we talked about running our offense completely through and taking care of the ball," Shoshone coach Tim Chapman said. "I thought they did a good job for their first game."

Sorenson led all scorers with 16 points and added four steals. Shoshone posts Katie Strunk and Amanda Gullford chipped in with nine points and five rebounds apiece. Indians junior guard Jallei Harris added eight points, seven rebounds, four assists, and four steals. While junior guard Kallie Axelsson was the only Shoshone player that saw time but failed to score, she chipped in with five steals and two assists.

"Kallie does a good job on defense and she'll get her points going," Chapman said. "She's capable of scoring 10-15 points a game."

Kimberly was led by seven-point performances from senior guard Whitney Park and junior post Sarah Gunnell. Megan Stradley, Abby Belin, and Tariah Lappin all had four-point nights for the 0-2 Bulldogs. While they became more aggressive as the game went on, the Bulldogs were hampered by 24 turnovers.

"We're just trying to get this program turned around and we have some work to do," Bulldogs coach Rich Bishop said. "Kimberly had a lot of success the last couple years, but these girls are working hard to change that."

Sarah Gunnell tallied four steals and one block, while sophomore Katie Gunnell also blocked a shot. The Bulldogs will look to meet their first win of the season Friday at American Falls.

Shoshone guard Meghan Sorenson, front, drives past a Bulldog defender during the third quarter of the Indians' 57-26 win over Kimberly Tuesday night.

"Right now, they have to get more confidence," Bishop said. "We have girls second-guessing themselves when they should go up strong, but that's going to come. It's a long season and we'll be fine."

Shoshone travels to Hagerman to face the Pirates.

Ulrich sparks Lighthouse Christian

By Diane Philbin Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Sophomore Ambur Ulrich had the kind of game Tuesday night a basketball player dreams of having. It seemed that everything she tossed up in the third quarter rattled the nets for a score.

Ulrich paced the Lions with 25 points, 10 in the third, as Lighthouse Christian defeated the host Twin Falls Christian Academy 53-32 Tuesday night.

Ulrich's points come from lay-ups, long-range bombs, and several three-six foot pull-up jumpers. She was also 5-for-10 from the charity line and pulled down numerous rebounds. Her 10 points in the third sparked a 20-10 edge for the Lions (1-1). Ulrich's offensive show gave Lighthouse a rare chance to rotate in the reserves.

"Getting the lead and especially holding TFCA to the three first quarter points gave us the chance to get our reserves some quality playing time," Lighthouse coach Jake Tolman said. "We are young but have shown some improvement in each game."

Two other sophomores, Rachel VerHagen and Vanessa Wendland, added 11 and nine points, respectively for the Lions.

Lighthouse controlled the glass, denying TFCA the second-chance points the Warriors needed to mount a rally.

"We need to finish our shots and rebound better," TFCA coach Rachel Owens said. "I've had worked on filling lanes on fastbreaks but we still need to work harder."

Senior Jenna Fenderson finished with 13 hard-earned points including a 3-pointer and Jamie Wilson followed with 12 for the Lady Warriors.

Sophomore Mindy Brown tossed in seven. Marie Hutchinson didn't score but pitched a tough inside defensive game before fouling out early in the fourth quarter.

Lighthouse Christian (1-1) plays Friday night at Bliss and Twin Falls Christian Academy (0-1) hosts The Community School Monday night.

Hewitt rallies past Moya

The Associated Press

HOUSTON — Lleyton Hewitt led the first set slip away after an overnight rain delay. He wasn't about to allow the trend to continue.

Hewitt came back from a first set lag to beat Carlos Moya 6-7 (5), 6-2, 6-4 in a first-round match at the ATP Masters Cup Championships on Tuesday.

In a later match, Marat Safin of Russia needed just one hour to beat Guillermo Coria of Argentina, 6-1, 6-4. Coria played his first match in over three months after surgery on his right shoulder. Second-seeded Andy Roddick was to meet Tim Henman in the night's featured match, which was rain delayed.

"Obviously I had a set point in that first set and things just didn't go my way," Hewitt said. "I tried at the start of the second set to get myself back in the

Sharapova ends her 'amazing' year at No. 4

The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — So what's a girl who loves to shop do with $1 million?

"That's a lot of shoes," says Maria Sharapova, winner of Wimbledon and the year-end WTA Championships.

The 17-year-old Russian is headed off to a "super-fantastic" vacation knowing she beat the world's top players over five consecutive days to earn one of the richest paychecks in women's tennis.

"I certainly deserve a spot on that list," she said.

Sharapova rose to a career-high fourth in the year-end WTA rankings released Tuesday after starting the year at No. 32. She finished with a 55-15 match record and her fifth title after defeating an injured Serena Williams 4-6, 6-2, 6-4 Monday night.

"I've had an amazing year and accomplished so much," she said. "To achieve so much, I don't think a lot of people realize that I'm still 17."

Lindsay Davenport claimed the year-end No. 1 ranking for the third time in her career, although she failed to advance to the semifinals after winning a four-best seven titles.

"To be able to do it at 20 is quite an accomplishment," she said.

Sharapova's run through the season-ending tournament proved a breakthrough, with three victories over players she had losing records against. She beat countrywomen Svetlana Kuznetsova and Vera Zvonareva in straight sets, and outlasted fellow Russian Anastasia Myskina in three sets at winning a fourth title to her three other times this year.

"It just shows that I came a long way in a short period of time," she said. "It's just really unbelievable. I played five days in a row and won my first at 17. It's very easy to do that."

Sharapova's only loss in five matches came against former No. 1-ranked Amelie Mauresmo. The two had never played match and in the third set it was having a lot of chances out there again but I was always playing behind."

Hewitt took a 5-1 lead and was ahead 30-1 in the 10th game when play was suspended late Monday night, after it had started following a delay of over 3.5 hours.

When play resumed, Hewitt couldn't break in the 10th game, even though he had a set point, allowing Moya to escape and win the tiebreaker with an overhead on the first set point.

Hewitt took charge of the second set with breaks in the first and third games.

The players were on serve in the third set until Hewitt broke in the seventh game. He ran down a shot by Moya and then smashed a forehand down the line to bring the game to break point and then Moya hit a forehand error to give the lead to Hewitt.

SuperSonics win seventh straight

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Ray Allen scored a season-high 37 points, Rashard Lewis added 21 and Vladimir Radmanovic 20 to lead the Seattle SuperSonics to their seventh straight victory, 103-95 over the Philadelphia 76ers on Tuesday night.

The Sonics are off to their best start since opening 10-0 in 1993. They haven't lost since dropping their opener to the Los Angeles Clippers by 30 points after going 2-6 in exhibition games.

Allen scored 26 points and Kyle Korver 14 for the Sixers, who had won three in a row. Reserve Antonio Daniels had 19 points for Seattle, which got 41 points from its nonstarters.

Jazz 107, Bobcats 105 — CHARLOTTE, N.C. — The Utah Jazz have no idea if they are any good, despite their 6-1 start.

The Jazz overcame a 22-point deficit Tuesday night for a 107-105 victory over the expansion Charlotte Bobcats. It was the kind of win that has Utah coach Jerry Sloan wondering what kind of team he has.

Timberwolves 108, Heat 97 — MINNEAPOLIS — Minnesota's Kevin Garnett had 25 points, 21 rebounds and eight assists. He also surpassed 14,000 career points.

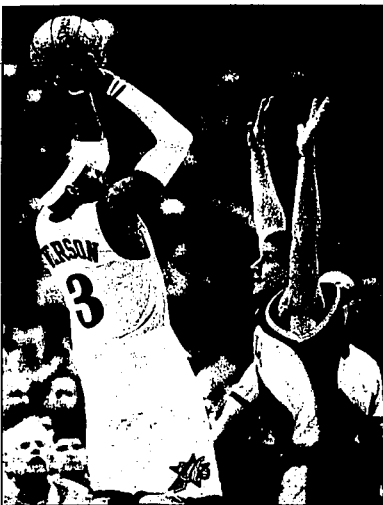

Hawks 88, Rockets 84 — ATLANTA — Antoine Walker had 20 points and 10 rebounds, and Atlanta rallied from an 11-point deficit in the final 6:11.

LPGA ahead of the curve in global golf

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Thanks to Vijay Singh winning nine times, foreign-born players established a LPGA Tour record by winning more than half of the year's tournaments.

But that means it that the men are finally catching up with the women. "We're already there," Meg Mallon said Tuesday on the practice range at Trump International.

So. California native Palmer finished second, then won the first of the next two years, but his presence helped restore prominence to the Open and generated excitement throughout the world of golf.

Philadelphia 76ers' Allen Iverson shoots over Seattle SuperSonics' Luke Ridnour in the first half Tuesday, in Philadelphia.

Yao Ming, who had 27 points and 11 rebounds, ended Houston's 0-for-10 skid from the field with a 5-footer with 18 seconds remaining, cutting Atlanta's lead to 86-84. But Jon Barry made two free throws to seal it for the Hawks.

Yao hit 13 of 15 shots, and Tracy McGrady scored 21 points, but the Rockets lost for the third time in four games.

Spurs 99, Knicks 81. — SAN ANTONIO — Tim Duncan had 17 points and 10 rebounds, and began a key third-quarter burst for San Antonio.

Tony Parker added 18 points and a season-high nine assists for the Spurs, 6-1 this season. New York pulled to 54-52 with 8 minutes left in the third quarter on a tip-in by Nazr Mohammed. But Duncan made a 12-foot turnaround jumper to start a 13-4 run for the Spurs, and the lead rarely fell below 10 points thereafter.

Suns 107, Mavericks 101. — DALLAS — Steve Nash had 17 points and a season-best 18 assists — many setting up Amar'e Stoudamire's 34 points — in a bid to Phoenix.

More and more Europeans are playing a full schedule on the PGA Tour — Sergio Garcia, Justin Rose, Luke Donald and Darren Clarke, soon to be joined by Lee Westwood and Padraig Harrington. While the LPGA Tour is taking great players from their native tours, it also is giving back.

The LPGA, which has a lot more wiggle room in its schedule, will be played in seven countries next year — the United States, Canada, Japan, South Korea, France, England and two new tournaments in Mexico. The next spot could be China.

Vince Young, San Diego's 6-foot-8, 250-pound center with a soft shooting touch, matched his career best with 28 points and had 11 rebounds for the Blazers. Brandon Gay added 17 points.

Wizards 107, Pistons 97. — WASHINGTON — Vince Young, San Diego's 6-foot-8, 250-pound center with a soft shooting touch, matched his career best with 28 points and had 11 rebounds for the Blazers.

Pilots end Rimrock's 50-game win streak

The Times-News GLENN'S FERRY — Two-time defending Class 1A champion Rimrock's 50-game win streak is over, thanks to a tremendous effort by the Glenns Ferry Pilots.

"We shot really well in the first half," said coach Kelli McLone. "We were playing aggressive defense and it was their first game. We were amped up for this game. We wanted to beat them really bad."

"Our defense was a big key. We got a hand in their face and contested a lot of shots," Rimrock (0-1) battled back, pulling within four points midway through the fourth quarter.

"They started to get some easy baskets," McLone said. "We're able to pull it together and take care of the ball." McLone called a timeout and Vicky Barroso rattled home a basket off the set play to help steady the Pilots.

Carruth, 30, was convicted in January 2001 of conspiring to murder Adams and was sentenced to at least 18 years and 11 months in prison.

"I'm going to the cemetery because I want to honor Cherica on her son's fifth birthday," she said Monday. "That's also Keith Acres, a spokesman for the N.C. Department of Correction, said Carruth has gotten into two fights in prison — one over a pen — and has been written up for making too many telephone calls.

The N.C. Court of Appeals has denied Carruth a new trial and the U.S. Supreme Court has refused to hear his case. But defense lawyer David Rudolf said Monday Carruth's appeals are not over.

UW hopes to salvage season

SEATTLE (AP) — The Washington Huskies, struggling through their worst season in 35 years, will be out to salvage their self respect in this week-end's Apple Cup.

"It's always important to win any game," departing coach Keith Gilbertson told his weekly news conference Monday. "Since we've only won one, it would be huge for our fans and our kids."

After losing 42-12 to No. 4 California last week at Husky Stadium, Washington has a 1-9 record, including 0-6 in the Pac-10. The Huskies haven't finished winless in conference play since going 0-7 in the Pac-10 and 2-9 overall — in 1973. In 1969, they finished their season 1-9 overall.

This year they lost their first four games, beat San Jose State and have dropped their last five starts.

They're 11-point underdogs against Washington State in Saturday's Apple Cup in Pullman. The Cougars are going through a tough season, too, losing last weekend 45-28 at Arizona State to be eliminated from bowl game contention.

It's been a season of anguish and frustration for a once-elite UW program that went 12-0 and won, with Miami, a national co-championship in 1991 under coach Don James.

Gilbertson will be coaching his final Washington game on Saturday. He announced his resignation earlier this season.

Washington State coach Bill Doba and Gilbertson are rivals, but they're friends, too. Doba talked to Gilbertson on the phone Monday.

"We kind of kidded each other about how bad we were," Doba said by telephone. "But I know he'll be cranked and ready to go. This is his final hurrah. I respect him very much. He's an excellent football coach. I'm sorry it didn't work out for him."

Doba had a taste of Gilbertson's coaching last season, when the Huskies upset the Cougars in Seattle 27-19. Washington State then wound up a 10-win season by beating Texas in the Holiday Bowl.

"We talk every week, just about," Gilbertson said. "He's a good friend and a fine man."

The Huskies' chances of beating Washington State took a hit in the California game when they lost middle linebacker Joe Lobendahn, their leading tackler, with a broken wrist. He will be replaced in the starting lineup by Tim Galloway, a senior.

With both schools mired in disappointing seasons, Saturday's game won't have any national importance, but Gilbertson thinks interest in the outcome is high in the state.

"I think it's the biggest day in the state of Washington," he said.

Gilbertson, 56, wants to coach again next season, but he wouldn't shed his light on where that might be.

California's Marshawn Lynch (24) runs for a touchdown as Washington's Tim Galloway misses on a tackle attempt in the second half last Saturday, in Seattle. Lynch had 123 yards rushing and TD runs of 32 and 70 yards and a 29-yard reception as the Golden Bears beat the Huskies, 42-12.

Jets' Edwards still clueless with a clock

By Andrea Adelson
Associated Press writer

Analysis

HOOPSTEADEAD, N.Y. — Jets coach Herman Edwards realized in the offseason he needed to make the NFL clock his friend, after so many time-management gaffes made him look like a goof.

So he assigned assistant coach Dick Curi to only one task: helping Edwards manage their games. Now even that system has failed, leaving Edwards to shoulder the blame once again for another clock fiasco.

This one, a 20-17 overtime loss to the Baltimore Ravens on Sunday, could have adverse effects on the rest of the season. And it showed once again the jets will not make the jump from good team to elite Super Bowl contender unless Edwards can figure out how to manage games properly. Time management issues have sabotaged at least one game a year since Edwards became coach in 2001.

"You can always second-guess what you should have done, what you could have done," Edwards said about the Baltimore loss. "All calls, they go through me. I have the decision."

Remember the comical ending to the game against the Giants last season, when kicker Doug Brien was not ready for the snap, his kick that would have won the game in overtime was blocked and the jets lost 31-28?

How about the last time the jets played the Cleveland Browns, their opponent this Sunday. The jets took a 21-6 lead into halftime two years ago, but somehow blew three timeouts with more than 6 minutes to play in the third quarter.

Edwards tried to downplay that error, but it cost them when they tried to rally at the end with a way to stop the clock. Their final drive ended with a blocked field goal and Cleveland won 24-21.

Who can forget the late-season game against the Buffalo Bills in 2001 that nearly cost the jets a playoff spot? Trailing 14-9 with 13 seconds remaining and no timeouts left, Vinny Testaverde threw a completion to Curtis Martin over the middle to tie the game 17-17.

Though Testaverde managed to throw an incomplete pass to Kevin Swayne in the end zone on the next play, it appeared time expired before the ball was snapped.

But the Baltimore game is the worst defeat of all under Edwards. Not only did the Jets booby a halfback option pass, giving the Ravens the momentum they needed—just before halftime, but they could not figure out how to use the clock once again at the end of a game.

Quincy Carter, filling in for the injured Chad Pennington, is a senior of urgency in the final set of plays. The jets wasted 32 seconds getting one play deep in Baltimore territory. Then on a crucial third-and-goal from the 5 with 8 seconds to go, Carter got to the huddle too late. The play came in late, and Carter was late breaking the huddle.

Edwards was forced to use his final timeout and kick a tying field goal rather than take one more shot at the end zone. The conservative approach failed because they lost in overtime.

Though the jets dropped the Buffalo and Cleveland games, they managed to make the playoffs. But the loss to the Giants last season in Pennington's first start since returning from a broken wrist could have helped turn the tide on a disappointing season that they finished 6-10.

Will the Baltimore loss send the jets spiraling into oblivion? Once sitting pretty at 5-0, they have lost three of four and are one of six AFC teams at 6-3. Their final four games are against teams currently with better than 500 records.

After the devastating loss, Martin said, "These are the kind that put a dagger in your heart, the kind that hurts the most."

What seems inexplicable is the way they lost after being burned in the same manner so many other times. Curi went from tight ends coach to senior offensive assistant/special projects coach in the offseason. He stands next to Edwards in the dugout, advising the head coach on how to use the clock to their advantage.

Players also are not allowed to call timeouts in the first or third quarters without approval from Edwards. With these added safeguards, Edwards hoped these issues would be relegated to the past. Even last week, he said Curi, "He's like the guru of the clock, all of a sudden."

But Curi was not available for comment after the game or on Monday, leaving Edwards to talk the fall for all the errors. Perhaps Carter is most at fault for being so slow in getting the play off. When asked what took so long, Carter said, "I'm not sure."

One has to wonder whether Pennington, who led two fourth-quarter comeback victories this season alone, would have allowed the clock to nearly expire on a play that could have won the game.

"As a team, as coaches and players we take our lumps together, and when it comes up again we will definitely be ready to execute that to make sure we use our timeouts appropriately," Carter said.

How many times have the jets said that before? They better hope Edwards figures it out fast before he ends up costing them more games.

Vlad

Continued from D1. every one of them," Scioscia said. "Not many players can do what he did last week."

The only other non-rookies who became MVPs in their first AL seasons were Baltimore's Frank Robinson (1960), Chicago's Dick Allen (1972) and Detroit's Willie Hernandez (1984). In the NL, Kirk Gibson accomplished the feat with Los Angeles in 1988.

Houston's Roger Clemens won the NL Cy Young Award last week following his first season in the league. Clemens won six Cy Youngs in the AL.

Guerrero became the second Angels player to win, joining Don Baylor (1979). He is the fourth Dominican to be MVP, following Toronto's George Bell (1987), the Chicago Cubs' Sammy Sosa (1998) and Oakland's Miguel Tejada (2002). He became the ninth straight player from the AL West to win.

"Vlad has got such a great temperament. For as talented as he is, he's probably the most unassuming superstar you'd ever be around," Scioscia said. Guerrero was especially happy the three of the top four finishers in the voting were Dominican.

"It's in our blood," he said. "We grow up with baseball."

Sharapova

"When I was playing Amelie, I was absolutely dead. I felt that I wasn't going to win," she said, "but I found an inner strength in myself."

The long year clearly took a toll on Sharapova, who didn't smile much as she tournament after tournament. She had a muted reaction when she beat Williams.

"It was a relief," she said. "I froze."

Sharapova's life turned into a whirlwind of promotional appearances, photo shoots and constant scrutiny after her stunning 6-1, 6-4 victory over

Williams at Wimbledon. Expectations piled up on her thin shoulders, too.

She played 10 more tournaments the rest of the year, winning titles in South Korea and Japan before beating Williams again.

"There were definitely a lot of difficult periods that's how I learned to be at the top. That's how I learned a lot about myself," she said. "After winning Wimbledon at 17, it's a bit of a struggle. I'm just one girl in front of millions of people and a lot of people are watching me, looking at me every second to see what I'm doing, wanting me to win this and that."

MORNING-BREAK

Aries: Keep your cool under pressure

IF NOVEMBER 17 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY... It is quite possible that you will be faced with tricky choices in December and January. In some areas of life you can get by through charm and graciousness, but in other areas you could face demanding responsibilities and be required to toe the line. Keep balanced and don't take people or things for granted. Expect to work hard in June and August to reap the rewards that will be heaped upon you in September.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You aren't paranoid if people really are out to get you. It could seem that people criticize your every move today or that every word you speak to follow is blocked. Sift aggressiveness and keep your cool under pressure for the best results.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Building pressures at the workplace can cause conflicts. Impress others with your patience, fortitude and refusal to lose your temper. Meet challenges and criticisms with an exemplary professional air and spend quality time with those you value the most this evening.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Subtle crosscurrents could produce hesitation about financial matters, so it is best to adopt an attitude of "when in doubt, don't." Exercising patience today could pay off tomorrow when important information may arrive. Developing frugal habits will give the best satisfaction in the long run.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): When the going gets tough the tough get going - and early today you have the enthusiasm and courage to tackle any job that requires fancy footwork. Focus on healing rifts between you and a significant other. You may be surprised to find that others appreciate and value you more than you thought.

HOROSCOPE

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Good guys wear white hats, so let yours stand out in the crowd and don't be afraid to participate in public showdowns. Others may find you irresistible, so turn on the charm and get your way both at home and in the business world.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Exude charm and impress others with your integrity and attention to detail. The good opinions of others will pay off later. Avoid making credit purchases or delaying promised payments under these stars no matter how tempting it is to rearrange your financial obligations.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Stop at the stop signs and obey the speed limit. Traffic cops could have their eye on you. Others could be out of sorts and picky about minor details, so lay low and refuse to push important issues. Your warm, loving nature will have ample chance to shine within the confines of your own home.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Pay attention to important issues today and do not be distracted by new projects that interfere with your schedule. If you follow the rules and cut along the dotted line, you will win in the end. Mars in your sign could stir up a few challenges to your authority that you can only handle with diplomacy.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): It is simply not the time to make headway in reaching your goals as you are controlled by circumstances beyond your control. But a little light may go on where your piggy bank is concerned - and you could see ways to make a few extra pennies. Look for helpful friends to support your objectives.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Supporting patriotic values and cheering for mom, home and fresh apple pie may be the best way to overcome opposition to your plans. Keep your true purpose clearly in mind. You are working to provide for a family or to make a good impression on the boss, not to get the better of someone else.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): With the moon in your sign you could be more aware of your own feelings than someone else's. Trust that others care about you and are willing to go an extra mile to bring a smile to your face. Those you hook up with today could help you get on a more fulfilling financial track.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You could be caught in the throes of a sticky situation or feel that your creative energies are at a low point. Quit knocking your head against a brick wall and reassess your long-term goals. Pick up the phone and talk things over with trusted friends. You may be amazed at helpful insights that quickly heal problems.

Abercrombie & Fitch will pay $50M to settle lawsuit

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Abercrombie & Fitch has agreed to pay $50 million to settle a lawsuit that accused the clothing-store chain of promoting whites over minorities and cultivating a virtually all-white image in its catalogs and elsewhere.

The settlement, approved Tuesday, calls for Abercrombie & Fitch to pay $40 million to black, Hispanic and Asian employees and job applicants and $10 million for attorneys' fees and to monitor compliance of its changes. The federal Equal Employment Opportunity Commission estimated more than 10,000 Hispanic, Asian or black men and women could share in the settlement.

The lawsuit was filed in June in San Francisco by Hispanic and Asian groups. They charged that Abercrombie & Fitch, known for its "classic casual American" clothing styles, hires disproportionately white sales force and puts minorities in less-visible jobs.

"The retail industry and other industries need to know that businesses cannot discriminate against individuals under the auspice of a marketing strategy or a particular 'look.' Race and sex discrimination in employment are unlawful," said Eric Dreihand, EEOC general counsel.

Naysayers need not apply for a second Bush term

By Tom Raum
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush is tightening control over his Cabinet, moving loyal insiders into top jobs and fashioning a second-term administration likely to be free of internal clashes — but one in which there may be nobody left to tell him when he's wrong.

Six of 15 Cabinet members have announced plans to step down since the president's Nov. 2 re-election, some clearly nudged by Bush or his lieutenants. Several more are expected to follow.

Bush is replacing two high-profile Cabinet members from his first term with trusted White House staffers: Secretary of State Colin Powell with National Security Adviser Condoleezza Rice, and Attorney General John Ashcroft with White House lawyer Alberto Gonzales.

He also promoted Rice's deputy, Stephen Hadley, to national security adviser and is expected to name White House domestic policy adviser Margaret Spellings to replace Education Secretary Rod Paige.

"This is an indication that there will be less infighting this time around, more consensus in foreign policy (trending to the hard line)," said Kurt Campbell, a former Pentagon policy adviser who is now with the Center for Strategic and International Studies.

"It may also be that, during the course of his presidency, the last person to tell him to his face that he was wrong was John Kerry during the presidential debates," Campbell said.

White House spokesman Scott McClellan on Tuesday denied that Bush was, intentionally or not, creating an administration of yes people. "Once a decision is made, the president expects the administration to work together. ... But he's always welcomed a wide diversity of views from members of his team."

However, Allan J. Lichtman, a presidential historian at American University, said the impact of Bush's selection process was "to bring down over his administration a cone of silence." He said presidents Johnson and Nixon also tolerated little dissent among their Cabinet and staff, contributing to "colossal blunders."

Bush, the first president with an MBA degree, brings corporate discipline to running his administration, as he did to his re-election campaign, with little tolerance for those who don't get with the program.

Gonzales as attorney general is expected to continue to vigorously wage the war on terror, but in a less confrontational manner than did Ashcroft. And there should be more administration harmony with Rice, Bush's most trusted foreign policy adviser, at the State Department.

Powell's emphasis on diplomacy often put him at odds with his more hawkish colleagues, including Vice President Dick Cheney, Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld and even Rice.

Bush has also established clear lines of command in the White House that will continue into his second term, with Cheney and political strategist Karl Rove wielding enormous influence and chief of staff Andrew Card keeping all the moving parts running on time.

Bush has a history of removing those who disagree with him. Paul O'Neill, his first treasury secretary, was fired after expressing misgivings about the need for additional tax cuts proposed by the president. Economic adviser Lawrence Lindsey got his walking papers after making estimates on the cost of the Iraq war that Bush deemed to be too high, but which turned out to be accurate.

Voicing public concerns about costs and troop levels in Iraq helped hasten retirement for Marine Gen. Anthony Zinni and Gen. Eric Shinseki, the Army chief of staff. And the Bush White House worked hard to discredit its former anti-terrorist chief, Richard Clarke, after he wrote a book suggesting the president let down his guard on al-Qaida because of an obsession with Iraq.

Humsfeld, told reporters on Tuesday that a president must hear different perspectives and that it is up to his appointees to make sure "the pros and cons are considered and weighed and that the president knows their best judgment and their best advice." The defense secretary said the process "has worked very well in this administration" and would continue to do so.

In addition to Powell, Ashcroft and Paige, those submitting resignations so far are Commerce Secretary Don Evans, Energy Secretary Spencer Abraham and Agriculture Secretary Ann Veneman.

Homeland Security Secretary Tom Ridge and Health and Human Services Secretary Tommy Thompson may be next, although officials close to Ridge say he may be staying for a few months and advisers to Thompson hint that he may be open to another Cabinet post.

Personal decisions clearly are important to Bush. At a town-hall debate in St. Louis last month with Democratic challenger Kerry, Bush said he could not name any policy mistakes. "I made some mistakes in appointing people, but I'm not going to name them," Bush said.

Tom Raum has covered Washington for The Associated Press since 1973.

Nader asks for New Hampshire recount

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — New Hampshire is about to become a test case for the accuracy of optical scan voice-counting machines because third-party presidential candidate Ralph Nader has asked for a recount.

The request covers 11 of the state's 125 precincts that use Diebold Inc.'s Accuvote optical scanning machines to count paper ballots. Depending on the results, his campaign could ask for recounts in other states.

spokesman Kevin Zeese said Monday. Nader doesn't expect to change the outcome. In New Hampshire, Democrat John Kerry defeated President Bush 50 percent to 49 percent, while Nader got less than 1 percent from the state's 304 precincts.

However, the former consumer advocate wants to address concerns that the machines are inaccurate or can be tampered with, Zeese said.

Hewlett-Packard reports Q4 rise

LOS ANGELES — Hewlett-Packard Co. reported a 25.5 percent rise in fourth-quarter profit Tuesday on the strength of record revenue growth across all of the computer manufacturing giant's businesses.

For the three months ending Oct. 31, the Palo Alto, Calif.-based company reported a net income of $1.091 billion, or 37 cents per share, compared with $862 million, or 28 cents per share, in the same period last year.

Fourth-quarter revenue was $21.39 billion, up 8 percent from $19.85 billion in the fourth quarter of 2003.

The company said the non-GAAP figures include an adjustment of $136 million, or 5 cents per share.

Analysis had been expecting HP to earn 37 cents a share for the latest period, according to Thomson First Call.

Flight attendant union authorizes strike

PITTSBURGH — The board of the country's largest flight attendants union authorized a national strike Tuesday after its president said the airline industry is using the bankruptcy process to threaten workers' livelihoods.

The union, which represents 46,000 members at 26 airlines, said it will immediately start the process of taking strike votes at four airlines — JAL Corp.'s United, US Airways Group Inc., ATA Holdings Inc.'s ATA Airlines and Hawaiian Holdings Inc.'s Hawaiian Airlines — and will tally the votes by the end of December.

From there, the union will wait until there is an action in bankruptcy court.

Investigator: Scandal surfaces in insurance

WASHINGTON — Congress should dig deeper into the burgeoning scandal within the insurance industry, a top investigator said Tuesday, claiming lawmakers will find a "Pandora's box" of unethical conduct.

New York Attorney General Eliot Spitzer, who launched an investigation Oct. 14 into major brokerages and raised accusations of bid rigging and price fixing, told the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee that more revelations about bad practices are coming.

The scandal has led already to high-level resignations, employee layoffs and guilty pleas to some executives.

Stocks drop as wholesale prices surge

NEW YORK (AP) — A huge jump in wholesale prices sent stocks falling Tuesday as investors worried that rising oil prices were starting to take a toll on the overall economy. Modest earnings reports from retailers, including Wal-Mart Stores Inc., also pressured the market.

Wall Street was concerned that the sharp increase in the Producer Price Index, which rose 1.7 percent in October after a 0.1 percent hike in September, would either eat into fourth-quarter profits or be passed on to consumers, with the latter possibility spurring inflation as time goes on.

The 1.7 percent increase in the PPI was the largest since January 1990.

Group files lawsuit against movie pirates

LOS ANGELES — A trade group representing seven major movie studios filed a first wave of lawsuits against individuals they say are offering pirated copies of films using Internet file-sharing programs.

As part of a larger effort to combat piracy, The Motion Picture Association of America also said it would soon make available a computer program that sniffs out movie and music files on a user's computer as well as any file-sharing programs.

The MPAA announced the federal court suits Tuesday but did not say how many defendants were sued or where the lawsuits were filed. The group also did not immediately make available a copy of the complaint.

Home Depot sees earnings rise

Wal-Mart meets expectations

The Times-News and The Associated Press

TWIN FALLS — Amid the flurry of corporate earnings reports released Tuesday were quarterly statements from six retailers which operate Magic Valley stores.

Home Depot

The Home Depot Inc., the largest U.S. home-improvement chain, reported a nearly 15 percent jump in third-quarter earnings on strong sales, particularly at stores open at least a year.

The results beat Wall Street expectations and prompted the Atlanta-based company to raise its full-year earnings estimates.

For the three months ending Oct. 31, Home Depot said it earned $1.32 billion, or 60 cents a share, compared with a profit of $1.15 billion, or 50 cents a share, a year ago. Analysts surveyed by Thomson First Call expected earnings of 57 cents a share.

Revenue in the quarter rose 13.1 percent to $18.77 billion from $16.60 billion recorded in the same three-month period a year ago. Home Depot operates 1,826 stores in the United States, Canada and Mexico.

Same-store sales — a measure that compares sales at stores open at least a year — increased 4.5 percent in the quarter.

Based on the results, Home Depot said it was raising its fiscal 2004 earnings per share growth guidance to 19 percent to 20 percent. It had earlier expected earnings per share growth for the year of 14 percent to 17 percent.

The company said it has benefited from the continued improvements it has made to the look of its stores, from enhanced lighting and new merchandise to cleaner floors and more helpful personnel. The chain launched a broad store modernization program in the face of growing competition.

Wal-Mart

Wal-Mart Stores Inc., the world's largest retailer, reported a 12.7 percent rise in its third-quarter earnings, meeting Wall Street expectations.

The Arkansas-based retail giant earned $2.29 billion, or 54 cents a share, for the three months ended Oct. 31, up from $2.03 billion, or 46 cents a share, a year ago.

Its sales rose to $68.52 billion, up 9.5 percent from $62.49 billion a year earlier.

Wal-Mart raised its earnings outlook for the full year to a range of $2.39 to $2.41 a share and offered a fourth-quarter earnings estimate of 70 to 75 cents a share.

Previously, the company had forecast annual earnings of between $2.34 and $2.38 per share.

Analysts already expected earnings of 74 cents a share for the fourth quarter and $2.40 a share for the year.

Wal-Mart President and chief executive Lee Scott has long complained about higher fuel prices pressuring low-income consumers but said Tuesday that things are looking up.

"The economy continues to improve, and we are well positioned for the holidays,"

Scott said.

Scott said he was not satisfied with profit margins and sales growth in the Wal-Mart division. But he said executives believe the company will have a strong finish to its fiscal year.

"I believe sales momentum will accelerate into the holidays," Scott said in a recorded call.

J.C. Penney

Department-store operator J.C. Penney Co. said its third-quarter profit nearly doubled, beating Wall Street estimates.

Texas-based Penney earned $149 million, or 50 cents per share, in the three months ending Oct. 30 compared with $80 million, or 27 cents per share, a year earlier.

SALT LAKE CITY — Deseret Book has announced it will acquire "Excel" Entertainment, a distributor of Mormon-oriented films and music, for an undisclosed amount.

Deseret Book is owned by The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and sells books and Mormon Tabernacle Choir recordings and other religious music.

Excel, which is privately held, produced and distributed the movies "God's Army," "The Other Side of Heaven" and "Charly" and has CDs by musicians such as Kenneth Cope.

"This joining of forces will only propel us down the road," Deseret Book chief executive Sherril Dew said.

Some of Excel's music executives will move to Deseret Book's Salt Lake City headquarters. Excel President Jeff Simpson will become the Deseret Book executive vice president and chief marketing officer.

Simpson's responsibilities will cover all product marketing for the company.

Excel's music groups all will be managed under Deseret Book's Shadow Mountain label.

The film group will retain the Excel Entertainment name.

Nelther Simpson nor Dew expect the transaction to affect content of future films.

Deseret Book has sold every Excel product so far.

"We'll do as many good films as we can find," Dew said.

The combined company's first project will be "The Work and the Glory," a film from a Deseret Book series.

It will hit Utah theaters next week.

Deseret Book has about 150 employees at its headquarters and another 1,000 at its retail stores during the holiday season.

Simpson said the combined company will be able to do a better job of "finding, creating and developing better cultural relevant media that is faith-based and values-based and doing a better job at delivering that to the audience."

He said the audience for the products "may not see anything tomorrow change or the next day change, but hopefully they'll see an evolution in the entire marketplace and see better media and stronger media that really is aligned with their values, that is faith-based and works for them."

He acquired a loan on the new land that helped the family farm out of difficult times. The new loan he purchased the farm to join him in a cow/calf operation, which is still in place today.

Newcomb is still on that Declo farm, which since has expanded to more than 2,000 acres. In 1986, Newcomb was elected to the Idaho House of Representatives. Newcomb's concern for water issues was the catalyst for seeking a seat in the Idaho Legislature in 1984.

"My dad always used to say that we'd see the day when water would be worth more than gold," Newcomb said. "We're there now."

Newcomb received the Declo Lions "Citizen of the Year" award in 1989, the Honorary State Future Farmers of America degree in 2001 and in 2002 received the Pulitzer Award for Outstanding Legislator of the Year by the National Leadership Foundation.

Brent Griffin

Minidoka County producer Brent Griffin was chosen for this year's Minidoka County Farmer of the Year award.

Griffin has spent countless hours in the seat of a tractor, repairing equipment and doing everything else that comes with farming. He knows what it's like to have crops freeze and then have to replant or to have a whole crop of beets die, said his wife, Connie Griffin.

Brent Griffin started farming with his father when he was a boy, raising potatoes, beets and grain.

"Farms at this time were mostly silicon tubes, field lines and wheel lines," Connie Griffin said.

After his first year out of high school, still farming with his father, Brent Griffin made other plans. He had enrolled at the College of Southern Idaho, planning eventually to attend business school to become an accountant.

But he quickly changed his mind and went back to the farm. Connie Griffin said.

"There was no looking back," she said. Griffin continued farming with his father until 1988, when Griffins purchased their first farm. They continued to purchase farms from other north side horsehandlers.

Now the Griffins own more than 90 acres and rent out about 150 acres. The Griffins also taught their six children to work on the farm.

Griffin has always kept busy with his family, working on the farm and doing church work as a bishop for Rupert's fifth ward of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. He is also a member of Northwest Farm Credit Services' advisory board.

Dennis Christensen

Dennis Christensen, manager of Kings in Rupert, received the chamber's Minidoka County Businessperson of the Year award in 1969.

Christensen has worked for the department store chain for 24 years — 17 of those in Rupert where he has helped the store with merchandise and helping remodel existing stores.

"As King's seeks to improve and update, I have been asked to serve on several committees within the company," he said.

Christensen began the King's management training program in Twin Falls before transferring to the store in Rupert, working on the Jerome and Idaho Falls locations.

After becoming a manager in 1984, he worked at two stores in Burley for nearly four years before moving to the store in Rupert.

Outside the workplace, Christensen and his wife, Kris, are active in community and charity events, including the American Cancer Society's Relay for Life and "Jail and Ball" events. Those fundraising efforts hit home a few years ago, Kris Christensen said.

"We enjoyed supporting this organization, but did not realize how much it would come to mean to us," she said. "Since then, several immediate family members have joined our second son."

Christensen also participates in a volleyball fundraising tournament and also coaches youth basketball, baseball and softball.

Dr. Joe Petersen and Linda Petersen

Burley business owners Dr. Joe Petersen and his wife, Linda, share the chambers' Cassia County Businessperson of the Year award.

Joe Petersen, a physician who's practiced in Burley for 17 years, owns and operates the Burley Ambulatory Surgery Center. Linda Petersen is the owner of children's retail store A Child's World.

The couple met at Brigham Young University, both graduating in 1969.

Joe Petersen attended several medical schools, including the University of Utah and the school in Mexico, before the couple moving to Idaho. Linda Petersen earned a master's degree at night and took care of the couple's children during the day.

Joe Petersen also has served as president of the Idaho Medical Alliance for four years. Linda Petersen serves as chairman of the Cassia County School District's health and student council committees, is active in Quarters for Shoes for Kids and performs educational puppet shows for area children.

The Petersens also were instrumental in starting safe celebrations for area seniors on graduation night.

"The wonderful people of this area have helped us in our most important responsibility — raising our children properly," Linda Petersen said.

Earnings

Analysis surveyed by Thomson First Call last forecast earnings of 48 cents per share.

The 2004 results included charges of $47 million, or 10 cents per share, to pay for early debt retirement.

Revenue rose 3 percent to $4.6 billion from $4.3 billion a year earlier, nearly matching analysts' expectations of $4.47 billion.

Same-store sales were up 6.2 percent at department stores during the period, said Penney, which also operates catalogues and an Internet store.

Same-store sales are considered the best indicator of a retailer's financial health.

Chairman and chief executive Allen Quetstrom said higher oil prices remain a concern, but he said the company is optimistic that the economy will keep improving.

Fourth-quarter operating profit from continuing operations will be 95 cents to $1.05 per share, including one-time charges of 5 to 10 cents per share of the apparel and footwear divisions.

Analysis forecast earnings of $1.07 a share before one-time charges in the critical November-January quarter.

TJX Cos.

Massachusetts-based The TJX Cos. Inc., an off-price retailer of apparel and footwear, reported third-quarter net income of $201 million and diluted earnings per share of 41 cents, a 14 percent increase over last year's results.

Over the quarter, which ended Oct. 30, net sales rose 13 percent to $3.8 billion with consolidated comparable-store sales increasing 4 percent over the prior year.

At the Marmaxx Group, the combination of TJX Maxx and Marshall's third quarter sales increased 5 percent, and comparable-store sales grew 2 percent on strong sales of women's apparel, jewelry and footwear.

Segment profit increased 7 percent to $284 million, and segment profit margin was 10.6 percent.

During the third quarter, the company spent a total of $172 million more than it had planned — retiring 7.9 million shares of TJX stock.

Zale Corp.

Dallas-based Zale Corp., a specialty retailer of fine jewelry, posted a net loss of $10.9 million, or 11 cents per diluted share, for its first quarter, which ended Oct. 31.

The deeper red ink than a year earlier, when Zale reported a net loss of $9.2 million, or 17 cents per share.

Total revenues rose 1.4 percent to $423 million, compared with $417 million last year, while the quarter's comparable-store sales dropped 0.9 percent.

"We were satisfied with the performance of the business, especially in light of the recent hurricanes which adversely affected our results earlier in the quarter," said Mary L. Forte, president and chief executive.

Hancock Fabrics Mississippi-based Hancock

Fabrics Inc. said sales for its third quarter, which ended Oct. 31, dropped 2.5 percent to $109.9 million from the earlier $112.7 million.

Comparable-store sales decreased 2.6 percent.

Net earnings declined to $1.0 million, or 5 cents per diluted share, compared with the year-earlier $4.2 million, or 23 cents per diluted share.

"Conditions continued to be very difficult in the textile industry in the third quarter," said Larry G. Kirk, Hancock's chief executive. "Although customer spending in our stores was off slightly from a year ago, our biggest issue was a decline in the average sale of 2 percent. In some key product categories, we are selling more yardage for less dollars, a deflationary condition that impacts both sales and our margin."

"Ironically, because the government's Producer Price Index that the company uses to measure inflation in our inventories spiked up unexpectedly in September, our stores were required to record a $750,000 LIFO charge to earnings in the third quarter.

The result was a negative swing in EPS from a year ago of 4 cents per share," Kirk said in a statement.

Hancock operates 433 retail fabric stores in 42 states, supplies various independent wholesale customers and operates an Internet store.
