Clock ticks for water pumpers

By Julie Penco
Times-News writer

BOISE—As of today, the possible shutdown of wells on the north side of the Snake River Canyon is once again a reality. An agreement struck among water users a year ago has expired. It had put on hold the order by the Department of Water Resources to shut down 1,300 wells by April 1, 2004.

But the number of wells at risk might not remain 1,300. Mike Keckler, spokesman for the Idaho Department of Water Resources, said Director Karl Dreher might change the number based on an improved water model not available a year ago of the Eastern Snake River

Plain Aquifer. The model provides a more accurate map of how much underground water is available in certain reaches of the 10,000-mile aquifer that stretches from King Hill to Ashton. Dreher said he will issue his new order for curtailment around April 1. The order will be based on Idaho law, which stipulates those with older water rights can make a call against a junior right holder to curtail his water use until the senior water-right is met. Hagerman Valley spring users—with older, senior water rights—had agreed to hold off a water call if Magic Valley groundwater pumpers could guarantee them more water. Groundwater pumping did not begin on the Snake River Plain until the late 1940s, which makes those rights junior to surface water rights that extend back to the late 1800s.

The water that groundwater pumpers promised did not materialize, partly because of a six-year drought that Dreher has called a once-in-500-years event. Last year's determination was based on shutting down wells junior to Rangen's Inc., a Buhl-based commercial fish producer that made a call for full allotment of its 1962 water right. Groundwater pumpers, dairymen and related industries are scrambling to strike water agreements that might keep them in business one more year.

Owners of large dairies in Jerome, Gooding and Lincoln counties will soon unveil a mitigation plan. Milk Producers of Idaho Executive Director Brent Olmstead said Tuesday. "We're close to having it completed," Olmstead said. The Idaho Dairymen's Association had warned Water Resources last month the lives of 125,000 cows were at risk if wells were shut down. The water for cows must come from groundwater, because they require clear drinking water. Those junior water rights account for about 2 percent of the water drawn from the Snake River Plain Aquifer, Olmstead said. Randy MacMillan, vice president of Clear Springs Foods, another spring user, said spring users are open to a water-replacement plan from dairymen. "We haven't seen the plan, but we think it would be fairly straightforward for the dairy industry to mitigate for the actual dairies themselves," MacMillan said. "In the total scheme of things, it's a pretty small amount."

HOMETOWN HERO

T.F. graduate earns Bronze Star Medal

By Sandy Miller
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — U.S. Army Maj. Dan Munger is a humble man, not one to brag about anything. Not about climbing to the top of Mount Rainier — twice. Not about his years as a Green Beret. Not even about being awarded the Bronze Star.

Munger, 46, who is with the 15th Engineering Group out of Salt Lake City, was awarded the prestigious military medal in February at a ceremony at Fort Carson, Colo., for his service in Iraq. Stationed in the southern city of An Nasiriyah, he and his unit helped the Iraqis rebuild their city and their police force. Munger was also recognized for overseeing the construction of a major highway between Baghdad and Basrah. Munger was thrilled to receive the honor, but is quick to share it with others.

"There were a lot of people who helped me," Munger said. "It wasn't just a reflection of what I accomplished, but what the whole unit did." Munger, the firstborn son of Bill and Jean Munger, displayed his leadership skills early on. He was the president of his ninth-grade class at O'Leary Junior High and of his senior class at Twin Falls High School. He was a tight end on the Bruins football team and still found time to wrestle and help out on the technical end of high school plays. He graduated in 1977.

"Dan has just been one busy boy his whole life," said his mother, Jean. "He was a fun boy to raise. He always kept us on our toes. He was a jump ahead of this mom."

"I'm real proud of him for everything," but "I'm really pleased he's been recognized for his work in Iraq," she said. Munger has one proud father, too.

"I'm busting my buttons," Bill Munger said. "It's great. I was just really tickled to hear that."

Please see MEDAL, Page A2

First day's deliberations bring anxiety

Victims' family members play the waiting game

By Patti Murphy

BOISE — Courtroom No. 501 was mostly empty, quiet and devoid Tuesday of the drama that had filled the space the previous five weeks. This wood-paneled room in the Ada County Courthouse is where the Sarah Johnson double-murder trial has unfolded. It is the place where family and friends of Alan and Diane Johnson have sat, day in and day out, listening to painful testimony about the brutal murder of the Bellevue couple, who prosecutors say were shot to death by their teenage daughter in September 2003.

During the first full day of jury deliberations, the only flicker of activity came at 8:20 a.m. when jurors were brought into the room and a female juror told the judge they wanted to view a copy of a sheriff's department video that had been introduced by the defense.

The video in question was from a camera inside the patrol car of Blaine County Sheriff's Deputy Ross Kirley. In it, Kirley was making a traffic stop on Highway 75, during which he received a call to respond to a shooting at the Johnsons' home on Glen Aspen Drive. The camera continued to run as Kirley drove to the site and pulled up to the house. It's unclear why jurors requested to view the video, again.

about the hallways of the courthouse Tuesday, or congregated in a conference room that had been set aside for their privacy. They use the conference room to eat, read, crochet and share each other's company. "To pass the time, Matt Johnson, Sarah's older brother, brought his X-Box and wired it into the overhead projector, allowing him to project games onto a large screen. For hours, he and others played a baseball video game, while his aunt, grandmother, both grandfathers, and family friends chatted outside in the hall. Although the mood felt quiet, there was an undercurrent apparent among those who wanted for a decision. Some say that, a quick decision is good for the prosecution; a slow decision means it looks good for the defense. To this group, this first day of silence was exasperatingly long.

The jury begins each day at 8 a.m. and deliberates until 5 p.m., unless jurors decide they want to continue. They receive a break for lunch and will remain sequestered until they reach a verdict. Fifth District Court Judge Barry Wood, who is presiding over the Johnson trial, has instructed attorneys, the family and the media of his "15-minute rule." Once the jury comes to a decision, the judge will give interested parties 15 minutes to be in the courtroom before the verdict is read. The jury has access to hundreds of pieces of evidence and the testimony of more than 100 witnesses. By 5 p.m. on Tuesday they had deliberated a total of 9 hours since the trial ended at approximately 4 p.m. on Monday.

Greenspan pushes later retirement, benefit cuts

Knight Ridder News Service

WASHINGTON — Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan told Congress on Tuesday to consider raising the retirement age to help fix Social Security's funding problems, and he made it clear that benefit cuts should be part of any solution.

Greenspan also told the Senate Select Committee on Aging that lawmakers should give themselves a deadline of 2008 to fix the system. That's when the first wave of 76 million baby boomers will begin to retire. Over the past two months, Greenspan has walked a fine line in testimony before several House of Representatives and Senate panels, offering advice but stopping short of specific recommendations. On Tuesday, the respected central bank chief offered more direction, such as saying it was logical to have older people work longer.

"Increasing labor-force participation seems a natural response to population aging, as Americans are not only living longer but are also generally living healthier," the Fed chief said. Sen. Chuck Hagel, R-Nebr., has introduced legislation that would increase the Social Security retirement age to 68 and index future benefits to life expectancy so that earlier retirees would get smaller initial benefits. Greenspan didn't support any specific bill, but indicated that there may be little choice but to encourage older Americans to stay in the work force.

"Rising pressures on retirement incomes and a growing scarcity of experienced labor could induce further increases in the labor-force participation of the elderly and near-elderly in the future," he said. "Extending labor-force participation by just a few years could have a sizeable impact on economic output."

President Bush has called on Congress to rework Social Security in light of the financial strains it will face with the retirement of the baby boom generation, those born in 1946 to 1964. The first boomers are qualified for early retirement in 2008 and turn 65 in 2011. From that point on, more and more Americans will retire, until by 2030 more than a quarter of the U.S. population will be older than 65.

Raising taxes could be part of the solution too, but Greenspan warned against relying too heavily on them. He fully endorsed the Social Security 2050, he said, Congress would have to raise the payroll tax to about 14 percent from the current 12.4 percent, split equally between workers and employers. Such a move could "severely inhibit economic growth," he said. The Fed chairman again offered qualified support for Bush's proposal to allow workers to divert some of their payroll taxes to personal retirement accounts that invest in stocks and bonds. Such accounts could boost national savings, which would help finance investment and economic growth, he said.

Medal

Continued from A1. Munger earned his bachelor's degree in geology from Weber State College in Ogden, Utah. He remembers the exact day he joined the Utah National Guard — Nov. 30, 1981.

"I just always wanted to, since I was a kid," he said. He was a Green Beret from 1983 to 1988, working on a team as a weapons specialist and becoming both a jump and dive master. He survived SERE — Survival, Escape, Resistance and Evasion — training at Fort Bragg, N.C. It was a grueling three weeks.

"They lock you up in dog cages and spray you with water. In general, they're pretty rude to you," he said.

He met wife, Rosalee, on a blind date in 1988 and they married a year later. She recently retired from the Utah National Guard after more than 20 years in the service.

Munger's National Guard unit was deployed to Iraq a year ago in February. He said he found most of the Iraqis to be warm and caring people.

"They're very friendly, very loyal, very outgoing," Munger said. "They'd invite you in to eat even though they didn't have enough for their own families." Munger returned to the states last fall. He'll soon head back to Utah, where he'll put in another couple of years with the National Guard before retiring. He said

The Bronze Star Medal

The Bronze Star Medal is awarded to any person who, while serving in any capacity in or with the military of the United States after Dec. 6, 1941, distinguished himself or herself by heroic or meritorious achievement or service, not involving participation in aerial flight, while engaged in action against an enemy of the United States; while engaged in military operations involving conflict with an opposing foreign force; or while serving with friendly foreign forces engaged in an armed conflict against an opposing armed force in which the United States is not a belligerent party. Awards may be made for acts of heroism, performed under circumstances described above, or to recognize single acts of merit or meritorious service.

Negotiators try to lure North Korea back to nuclear talks

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Nighttime spy satellite photos illustrate the stark contrast between the two Koreas: The capitalist South is aglow with shimmering constellations of light, while the North disappears into blackness as deep as the aim of secrecy surrounding the communist nation.

This's about to change for a small corner of the North. On Wednesday, for the first time since the Koreas were divided, the South will pipe electricity into the North for a joint economic zone meant to foster cooperation between the countries sharing the world's most heavily fortified border. Seoul's help comes as Pyongyang defies the world by proclaiming it has nuclear weapons and shunning disarmament talks — and it illustrates the differences in the carrots and sticks approach the international community is using to lure the North back to the negotiating table. Coming up with a coordinated strategy on North Korea is expected to be a focus of U.S. Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice's visit to northeast Asia.

Water

Continued from A1. Muckillan said his company has already shut down 10 percent of its fish meadows and could be facing more reductions because of decreasing spring flows.

But though dairymen might come up with sufficient water to run their operations, they will find themselves in a bind to come up with feed. Omestead said. They might have to look out of state, since groundwater pumps who grow corn and hay for the dairymen face the possibility of not having irrigation water.

Not only are spring users going forward with calls now that the one-year agreement has expired, but in January a coalition of seven Magic Valley cattle companies made a call for water from groundwater pumps. In response, Dreher said he would be considering a shutdown of pumps beginning April 1 from near Idaho Falls to the Hagerman Valley.

On Tuesday, Dreher reinforced the warning in a press release by telling farmers who rely on junior water rights to be cautious about planting decisions.

In three economic studies in the past year have predicted gross monetary losses ranging from $200 million to $900 million to the local and state economies annually because of well curtains used to dairies and farmsteads. Mike Cramer, an attorney who represents the groundwater pumps, said they are looking for water to either lease or buy from high-lift pumps, who get their water from the Snake River.

But his group doesn't know yet where they will get the water or how much it will cost, he said.

Cramer praised groundwater pumps for hanging together, instead of telling those with the most junior priority rights they should shut down to protect those with older groundwater rights. As a group, pumps would rather restrict production on each farm to save water, he said.

Meanwhile, lawmakers remain pushing to fix any agreement water users reach. Not knowing what Dreher's new order portends coupled with water users' inability to come together on mitigation plans could hold legislators in Boise until mid-April. They usually shut down the session by the third week of March.

"But things could go down fast when they go," said Rep. Scott Beutke, R-Oakley, referring to pending agreements. "We can draft legislation based on eventualities and be ready to pass it."

Anthrax scare may be false alarm

WASHINGTON (AP) — Anthrax tests from two Pentagon mailrooms came back negative Tuesday, a day after testing indicated the deadly spores might be present, prompting nearly 900 workers to take antibiotics as a precaution.

According to what now appears to have been false alarms, officials handed out antibiotics and closed three mail facilities — two that serve the Pentagon and one in Washington that handles mail on its way to the military.

"We had some preliminary results that were positive but subsequent additional tests have determined that the sample that we had was in fact negative," said Dr. William Winkenwerder, assistant secretary of defense for health affairs.

He said tests that have been completed on samples from both facilities have all come back negative, though some additional tests are still incomplete.

"So on that basis we have nothing to suggest anything remotely like the events of October 2001, and we hope that with further information we'll be able to completely rule out any threat at all," he said.

Unidentified U.S. postal employees talk after being screened at D.C. General Hospital for anthrax contamination Tuesday in Washington. A postal facility in the nation's capital was closed after concerns were raised about a possible anthrax contamination on the premises.

In more than three years since the 2001 anthrax-by-mail attacks, there have been scores of initial tests that falsely reported anthrax in government mailrooms. In this case, however, two alert systems independently suggested the presence of the bacteria, raising concerns and invoking memories of the attacks that killed five and panicked Americans still raw from the Sept. 11 attacks. Officials became concerned after warning signs of anthrax appeared at two Pentagon mail facilities on Monday, in what appears now to have been a coincidence. First, a filter on a device that screens mail for chemical and biological agents on the Pentagon grounds tested positive for anthrax. Separately, an alert was set off at a nearby satellite mail processing facility.

Officials set out to retest the initial filter and gathered additional samples from the facilities for testing.

Initially, confirmatory tests suggested that there might be anthrax present, according to a counterterrorism official close to the investigation. But subsequent testing of both the initial filter and of other samples at both locations later came back negative, Winkenwerder said.

"We're very encouraged with the information that we now have in hand," he said. As a precaution, antibiotics were given to 166 employees at a post office processing center in the District of Columbia, which handles mail before it reaches the Pentagon, and to about 700 workers at the military mailrooms, officials said. That includes those at the facility on the Pentagon grounds in Arlington, Va., and those who work at the satellite facility several miles away in Fairfax County, Va.

Obesity in Europe rises to U.S. levels

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — At least seven European countries now challenge the United States in size — at least around the waistline.

In a group of nations from Greece to Germany, the proportion of overweight or obese men is higher than in the United States, experts said Tuesday in a major analysis of expanding girth on the European continent.

"The time when obesity was thought to be a problem on the other side of the Atlantic has gone by," said Mrs. Di Bartolomeo, Luxembourg's Minister of Health.

Only the Czech Republic, Finland, Germany, Greece, Malta and Slovakia, a higher percentage of men are obese or overweight than the estimated 27 percent in the United States, according to a report from the International Obesity Task Force, a coalition of researchers and institutions.

The analysis was released as the 25-nation European Union announced an initiative to enlist the food and marketing industries in the fight against fat.

Obesity is especially acute in Mediterranean countries, underscoring concerns that people in the southern region are turning away from the traditional diet of fish, fruit and vegetables to fast food high in fat and refined carbohydrates.

In Greece, for example, 38 percent of women are obese, compared with 34 percent in the United States, the group said.

EPA: Power plants must cut mercury

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration on Tuesday ordered power plants to cut mercury pollution from smokestacks by nearly half within 15 years but left an out for the worst polluters.

The Environmental Protection Agency said the cuts would help protect pregnant women, women of childbearing age and young children from a toxic metal that causes nerve damage. Critics said the arrangement fell far short of what was needed, and they promised to fight it.

"The United States is the first nation to take a leadership role in addressing the problem of mercury from power plants," said Jeffrey Holmstead, EPA's top air pollution official.

The nation's 600 coal-burning power plants release 48 tons of mercury pollution a year. That is expected to decrease to 31.3 tons in 2010, 27.9 tons in 2015 and 24.3 tons in 2020.

Forty percent of mercury emissions come from power plants, but those emissions have never been regulated as a pollutant. EPA regulates mercury in water and from municipal waste and medical waste incinerators.

More nations drop out of Iraq

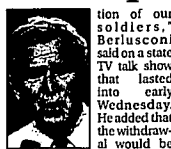

ROME (AP) — Italy's prime minister announced plans Tuesday to start drawing down his country's 3,000-strong contingent in Iraq in September, putting a fresh crack in President Bush's crumbling coalition. Bulgaria also called for a partial withdrawal, and Ukraine welcomed home its first wave of returning troops.

The moves come on top of the withdrawal of more than a dozen countries over the last year and could complicate efforts to keep the peace while Iraq's new government builds up police and military units capable of taking over from foreign forces.

Two years after the U.S.-led invasion toppled Saddam Hussein, the coalition is unraveling amid mounting casualties and kidnappings that have sapped anti-war sentiment and angered leaders' resolve to keep troops in harm's way.

Italian Premier Silvio Berlusconi, who confirmed he would seek re-election next year, alluded to the rising public discontent and said he had spoken with British Prime Minister Tony Blair, another strong Washington ally. "We need to construct a precise exit strategy, also because our public's opinions expect this communication and we agree to talk about it soon."

"Starting with the month of September, we would like to proceed with a gradual reduction of our soldiers," Berlusconi said on a state TV talk show that lasted into early Wednesday. He added that the withdrawal would be tied to the Iraqis' ability to secure the country.

As of now, the reduction in the Italian contingent will start "even before the year end, in agreement with our allies," Berlusconi added.

Italy's government, a staunch U.S. ally, had vowed to stay despite suffering 21 casualties and enduring fierce public opposition that escalated this month after U.S. soldiers in Baghdad fatally shot an Italian intelligence agent escorting a newly freed hostage.

Thirty-eight countries have provided troops in Iraq at one point or another. But 14 nations have permanently withdrawn since the March 2003 invasion, and today's coalition stands at 24. Excluding U.S. forces, there are 22,750 foreign soldiers still in Iraq.

"Obviously, every country will make their own decisions about what they can continue to contribute or contribute in the future when it comes to helping the Iraqi people," said White House spokesman Scott

McClellan. The scramble to get out has taken the multinational force from a high of about 300,000 soldiers in the region early in 2003 to 172,750 and falling. About 150,000 U.S. troops shoulder the bulk of the responsibility and suffer the most casualties.

A Pentagon spokesman, Lt. Col. Barry Venable, said the decisions by some nations to reduce or end their presence in Iraq was not a threat to security. "The coalition is strong," he said.

Venable said the reductions are part of the natural process of turning security over to Iraq's government. "The plan is to have the Iraqis fill in everywhere," he said. "That process will continue and indeed accelerate."

The United States also is drawing down its troop levels. After bolstering the U.S. force to about 155,000 during Iraq's recent elections, the Pentagon is bringing some units home and expects to be down to 136,000 soldiers in a few months.

Legislature should prepare to debate disclosure laws

The downfall of a Sen. Jack-Noble should be just the start of a new emphasis on ethics in the Idaho Legislature.

State leaders should examine the idea of passing ethics laws, which would require legislators to disclose their financial and professional interests.

That might be a groundbreaking move for a state that has absolutely no laws of that nature.

According to the Center for Public Integrity, a nonprofit group that preserves states' disclosure laws, Idaho, Michigan and Vermont are the only states where no financial disclosures are required for legislative officials.

Financial disclosure laws are used by states to make it clear what kind of businesses, investments and real properties are owned by legislators and their spouses.

Having documented information about those interests helps voters, legislative leaders, and even the legislators themselves.

Voters can observe the process and make sure their representatives won't pad their own pockets.

Legislative leaders can run the state's business knowing the process is in the open. And legislators serve without secretive suspicions arising about their background and public-service intentions.

The degree to which states require this disclosure varies.

Some states such as Washington, Arizona and Hawaii have set high standards of disclosure, whereas other Western neighbors such as Wyoming and Utah rank low.

and keep them to a bare minimum.

To the latter, the idea of detailed information on legislators may be more of a libertarian issue.

Choosing to serve in the Legislature should require some disclosure, but not the kind of detailed information that equals federal background checks.

Our view: Idaho's investigation of a senator for ethics violations shows a need for disclosure laws.

What do you think? We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

Leah Rush, Director of State Projects for the Center for Public Integrity, says Idaho's system "worked" in Noble's case.

While Idaho is one of the 27 states where legislators have sole oversight of their own conduct and it is only one of three states in the county with no mandatory outside interest disclosure, the mechanism in place appears to be doing its job," Rush said in an e-mail interview with Associated Press.

But what mechanism is that? Senators questioned why Noble was sponsoring a bill to change liquor licenses, simply because they knew he owned a convenience store.

In a Senate with 35 members, you get to know one another quite well. But that's not exactly a public mechanism.

Some critics will also say disclosure laws lack any potency unless they also target the interactions between legislators and lobbyists. That may be true as well.

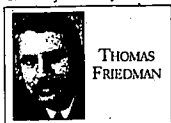

We can't say for sure how far Idaho should go in any of these directions.

But we do think it's a constructive debate to have. Not having any disclosure laws at all may be setting up Idaho for an even bigger debacle than the Noble affair.

New signs on the Arab street

From Baghdad to Beirut, the Middle East has seen a series of unprecedented popular demonstrations for democracy. There were, however, two street protests in December that got virtually no coverage, but were just as important, if not more.

One took place in the Egyptian Nile Delta town of Mahalla and the other in the Suez Canal city of Ismailiya.

THOMAS FRIEDMAN

Both of these raucous Egyptian demonstrations, which included marches, strikes, denunciations of the government and appeals to Parliament, were triggered by President Hosni Mubarak's decision to sign the first substantial trade agreement with Israel since Camp David.

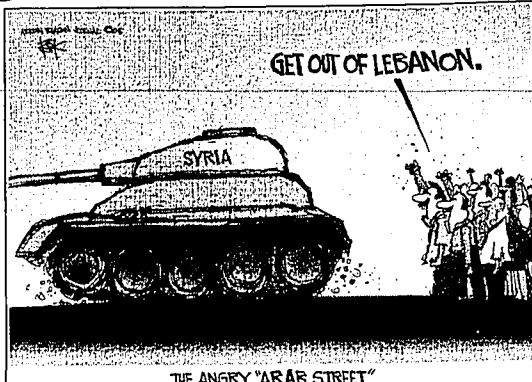

That decision brought Egyptian workers from both areas into the streets. They were furious. They were enraged. Why?

They were not included in the new trade deal with Israel. Now, that's a new Middle East. On Dec. 14, Egypt, Israel and the U.S. signed an accord setting up three Qualified Industrial Zones (QIZs) in the Egypt. The deal stipulated the following: Any Egyptian company operating in one of these QIZs that imports from an Israeli company at least 1.2 percent of the parts, materials or services that go into the Egyptian company's final product can then export that finished product to the U.S. duty free.

That is a big deal for Egypt, which, unlike Jordan and Israel, does not have a free-trade treaty with the United States.

As part of the accord, the United States named Greater Cairo, Alexandria and Port Said the three QIZs.

It had to be limited to only three municipalities so that the United States would not be swamped with Egyptian exports — hence the protests from the two big Egyptian manufacturing centers that were left out.

According to Rashid Mohamed Rashid, Egypt's impressive new minister of foreign trade, 397 Egyptian companies have already signed up to participate in the QIZ program, most of them small and medium-size firms. Many of these Egyptian companies have already gone to Israel to forge deals with Israeli suppliers or started work with Israeli partners to identify export markets in the United States.

Some Israeli companies are setting up shop in the Egyptian QIZs to provide services right on the spot.

There are a lot of messages in this battle. One is that if you create a real opportunity for Israeli and Egyptian businesses to interact profitably, not only will Egyptians ignore the protests of the old Nasserites who want to boycott Israel, they will seize the opportunity and protest mightily if they are kept out.

Another message: This "Baghdad spring" will not blossom into sustainable democracy in any of these Arab states without a broader middle class and civil society institutions to support it.

For too long, U.S. foreign policy was based on buying stability in the Arab world by supporting dictators, who destroyed all the independent press, political parties, unions, real private sector and civil society in their countries — everything except the mosque.

Iraq is the starkest example of this, which is why democratization there will take time.

Looking at Eastern Europe on the eve of the fall of the Berlin Wall, said Emanuele Ortolano, a lecturer on the Middle East at Oxford, "we could have predicted which countries would have an easy transition to democracy and which ones not." Countries like Poland, Hungary, the Czech Republic and the Baltic states, which had a history of liberal institutions and free markets that had been suppressed by communism, quickly flourished.

Others farther east, which did not have such institutions in their past and were starting from scratch — Bulgaria, Romania and the former Soviet republics — have struggled since the fall of the wall.

The same will be true in the Middle East, where democracy will not just spring up because autocrats fall down.

It will arise only if these countries develop, among other things, export-oriented private sectors, which can be the foundation for a vibrant middle class that is not dependent upon the state for contracts and has a vital interest in an open economy, a free press and its own political parties.

The development of such a private sector was crucial in democratizing Taiwan and South Korea.

That is why, beyond Iraq, America's priorities should be to sign a free-trade agreement with Egypt — which would help focus an export-oriented private sector there just when Mubarak has signaled an end to 50 years of military rule — and get Syria out of Lebanon, which would free the dynamic private sector that already exists there, but has been stifled by Syria. Free Lebanon and free Egypt's economy and they will change the rest of the Middle East for us — for free.

Thomas Friedman is a columnist for The New York Times.

Go ahead and dish it out, ladies

When I need to work up my nerve to write a tough column, I try to think of myself as Emma Peel in her rather exotic, giving a kung fu kick to any diabolical mastermind who merits it.

I try not to visualize myself as one of the witches in "Macbeth," sitting off to the side over a double, double toll and trouble, bubbling cauldron, muttering about what is fair or foul in the hurly burly of the royal court.

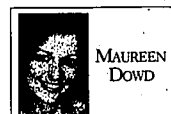

There's an intense debate going on now about why few female columnists.

Out of what will soon be eight New York Times Op-Ed columnists — nine, counting the public editor — I'm the only woman.

In 1996, after six months on the job, I went to Howell Raines, the editorial page editor, to try to get out of the column.

I was a bundle of frayed nerves. I felt as though I were in a "Godfather" movie, shooting and getting shot at. When I met my verbal dueling. As a woman, I told Howell, I wanted to be liked — not attacked. He said I could go back to The Metro Section and give it another try. Bill Safire told me I needed Putzarc, Prozac for pundits.

Guy's don't appreciate being lectured by a woman. It taps into myths of carping, Harpies and hounding Furies, and distaste for nagging by wives and mothers. The word "harp" derives from the French word "haridelle" — a worn-out horse or nag. Men take professional criticism more personally when it comes from a woman.

When I wrote columns about the Clinton impeachment opera buff, Chris Matthews said that for poor Bill, it must feel as though he had another wife heckoring him.

While a man writing a column taking on the powerful may be seen as authoritative, a woman doing the same thing may be seen as castrating. If a man writes a scathing piece about men in power, it's seen as his job; a woman can be cast as an emasculating man-hater. I'm often asked how I can be so "mean" — a scalpel, my cutting words, razor-sharp hatchet, Clinton-skewering and Bush-whacking. "Does she," The Los Angeles

Times' Patt Morrison wondered, "write on a computer or type on a typewriter?"

In 1996, Bill Clinton made a castration joke about me at a press dinner, as I sank down in my seat. I called Alan Dunes, a renowned folklorist, to ask about it. "Women are supposed to take it, not dish it out," he replied. "If a woman embarrasses a man, he feels inadequate, effeminate. He wants her to go back to the kitchen."

The kerfuffle over female columnists started when Susan Estrich launched a crazed and nasty smear campaign against Michael Kinsley, the Los Angeles Times editor-in-chief, trying to force him to run her husband syndicated column. Given the appalling way she's handled herself, Susan — an acquaintance for many years — is the last person Michael, a friend of mine, should hire.

But he should recruit some more talented women to write for him. So should The New York Times. The Washington Post — which also has only one female columnist — and anyone else who has an obvious gender gap on their op-ed page.

Call Collins, the first woman to run The New York Times' editorial page and the author of a history of American women, told The Post's Howard Kurtz: "There are probably fewer women in the press, but in the great cosmic scheme of things, who feel comfortable writing very straight opinion stuff, and being a comfortable hearing something on the news and bating something out."

There's a lot of evidence of that. Male bloggers predominate as do male TV shouters. Men I know and men who read The Times write me constantly, asking me to read the opinion pieces they've written. Sometimes they'll e-mail or fax me their thoughts to read right before I have lunch with them. Women hardly ever send their own rants.

There's been a dearth of women writing serious opinion pieces for top news organizations, even as there's been growth in female sex columnists for college newspapers.

Going from Tess Harding to Carrie Bradshaw, Dorothy Thompson to Candace Bushnell, is not progress. This job has not come easily to me. But I have no doubt there are a plenty of brilliant women who would bring grace and guts to our nation's op-ed pages. Just as, Lawrence Sanders notwithstanding, there are plenty of brilliant women out there who are great at math and science.

We just need to find and nurture them.

County commission is full-time work in Jerome

Since I've had so many people make comments to me about my wife's salary as Jerome County commissioner, I would like to comment on an incorrect statement and facts that were omitted in the March 6 Times-News article.

A 51 percent increase was approved for Commissioners Howell and Davidson. Commissioner Lierman's salary was not increased by 16 percent. Her salary for this fiscal year will be $33,000. It has been reduced by 8 percent from last year. As was stated in the article for the past four years, the commissioners recorded a portion of their hours. Check the public records! She works full time for Jerome County.

Annual salaries for other elected officials are: county treasurer, $45,436; county assessor, $46,765; county clerk, $49,351. In my opinion, none of these people are overpaid for the responsibilities they have.

Another fact that was not reported was that when Commissioner Lierman returned to office in 2001, she learned that a debt of approximately $58,000 had been accumulating for more than three years with no attempt by the county commissioners to collect these funds. She researched the matter, sent our billings with documentation to support those billings and collected $55,000 (which included $8,000 from Twin Falls County and $33,000 from Ada County). In 1994, our children and I pressured her to step down from the commission. In 2000, I told her to go ahead and run for office again. I wouldn't have her job for any amount of money!

Leaving child in car was neglect and illegal

Recently, I read Gayle Bean's letter regarding the child who was left in the locked car at the mall. What interested me was not that Ms. Bean contacted the police; she was following the law. But it was the reaction of others who thought she was nosy or interfering in someone else's business that interested me.

Idaho law states that any person who suspects child abuse is required by law to report it. That's exactly what you did. A child left in a locked car by himself is a form of neglect, which is child abuse.

I teach child development at Twin Falls High School. Awareness of abuse is something I teach in class.

My class was very surprised that others would condemn a person for caring about the well-being of a child.

The temperature that day was 57 degrees. That's not an unbearable temperature, even though the car was probably 110 to 115 degrees warmer. The real problem could have been someone who would have broken into the car and kidnapped the child. Hauling two small children into the mall is a hassle, having one kidnapped from the car would have been a tragedy.

You were right in your actions, Gayle! Congratulations for having the courage to do the right thing.

Risks of cloud seeding need more detail

We really need to take a look in the skies and see what these weather modification agents are up to.

We have been aerial-sprayed by chemicals on March 1, 3, 6, 9, 10 and 11.

I do not believe this is all Idaho Power. These people spray over clear skies right in front of cloud fronts and then the clouds evaporate. The chemicals in these chemicals are aluminum and barium. They are extremely hazardous to elderly, small children, people with weak immune systems and birds. These chemicals also cause drought by collecting all the moisture to the aluminum particles.

Aluminum is a heat shield, and they are using global warming as an excuse to de-populate many countries and cause drought. It is not a fact, cause much global warming because there is no clouds or rain due to chemicals.

Chemtrails are X and straight-line patterns across the sky from jets' spray. Look up chemicals on your Internet. People need to read as much information as they can about chemicals. We really need to get answers to what and why? Type in ask.com and then ask if we are being sprayed by U.S. or U.N. planes.

You will be amazed at the amount of information these people have accumulated. This is not an urban legend. We need to start putting two and two together and get these people, "Rockefeller," including Idaho Power out of our skies.

It's time to get this to the public and ask the government agencies to come clean. We need to urge our congressmen to take a stand and get these planes out of our skies.

Contractor bill penalizes the Idaho homeowner

While your editorial of March 9 points out some of the features of the contractor licensing bill (House Bill 140), now in Senate committee hearings), it leaves out the restrictions on the homeowner's ability to make improvements to their own home.

Section 54-5203 (k) and (l) will not allow a homeowner to sell their home for one year after improvements are made by a licensed contractor. If improvements are made by the homeowner, that homeowner must have lived in the home for at least a year in order to sell the home. Of course, real estate professionals, commercial property owners, ag building contractors and farmers are exempt from these requirements.

Can it be more plain that this is just another thinly disguised attempt by big contractors and real estate-commercial interests to take away the rights of individual property owners? And don't think that this bill applies only to the building profession. By the definition in the bill, a gardener, tree trimmer, house cleaner, painter, pest control person or pool maintenance person is classified as a "contractor" (see 54-5303 (3) and (4)(a)). If their work is valued at more than $2,000.

So all you sole proprietors out there, call your insurance agent and see how much that $300,000 insurance policy is going to cost you if you can't get one. Oh, and if you can't, kiss your lien rights good-bye because this bill says you don't have any.

Having been involved in the building industry for more than 20 years as a licensed mechanical engineer, I can flatly state that more licensing laws do not produce a better product. If that were the case, California would have perfect buildings and no building lawsuits (the complete opposite is nearer the truth). What the state needs to do is fire more inspectors to do the job they are currently authorized to do, train them better and pay them a living wage. We do not need another public rip-off like the heating, ventilation and air conditioning (HVAC) contractor licensing law.

Popular stargazing gets an encore

Event puts focus on the freshman

TWIN FALLS — Next year's sophomores and their parents can get a jump on life at Twin Falls High School at the school's Freshman Focus information session.

The second annual event hosted by the staff and the parent-teacher-student organization is meant to help smooth the transition to senior high school. It's from 5 to 7 p.m. today starting in the Baun Gymnasium. Representatives from clubs and the school's finance and information technology academy will be on hand to answer questions. Staff also will be on hand to help students who are affected by the Smaller Learning Communities grant. Students can also have tours of the building.

Extension officials promote awareness

TWIN FALLS — The U.S. Senate designated March 13 through 19 as "Extension Living Well Week" and faculty in the Extension Family & Consumer Sciences department at the University of Idaho said the week's theme is "Raising Kids, Eating Right, Spending Smart, Living Well." Describes their goals to a T.

UI Extension FCS specialists and educators use research-based knowledge to help Idahoans make informed decisions as they teach them how to manage diabetes through meal planning and exercise, work with grandparents and parents on effective child-rearing techniques, share their expertise in management and retirement planning with low-income and older audiences, or advise clientele on nutrition and food safety.

Rhea Lanning, extension educator in Twin Falls County and president of the Idaho Extension Association of Family and Consumer Sciences, urged Idahoans to take time this week to find out their local UI Extension office can help them live well through classes, educational materials and other resources.

"We want to help families and individuals achieve a positive, healthy lifestyle," Lanning said. For more information on UI Extension, visit the Web site, www.uaidaho.edu/extension/ — compiled from staff reports

Judge dismisses charges against Santos

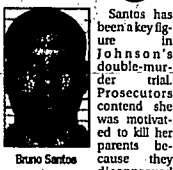

Key figure in Sarah Johnson murder trial also still face deportation

By Patti Murphy Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — Drug charges against the former boyfriend of Sarah Johnson have been dismissed following a judge's ruling that the officers who searched him did so illegally. Bruno Santos, an undocumented Mexican immigrant, was arrested on Oct. 30, 2004, when the blue truck he was riding in as a passenger was stopped and searched.

Officers found methamphetamine in an empty cigarette package along with about $1,500 in Santos' wallet, according to court documents.

Fifth District Judge Robert Elgee ruled to suppress the evidence, finding the seizure to be unreasonable and his detention extensive. Santos' attorney Doug Werth told the Wood River Journal. "We're obviously pleased with the decision," Werth said. "We felt strongly that the actions of the Bellevue police crossed the line."

Bruno Santos is a key figure in Johnson's double-murder trial. Prosecutors contend she was motivated to kill her parents because they disapproved of her relationship with him. Three days before Alan and Diane Johnson were murdered, they caught their then-16-year-old daughter at Santos' apartment, grounded her and threatened to report Santos for statutory rape.

Santos has been a key figure in Johnson's double-murder trial. Prosecutors contend she was motivated to kill her parents because they disapproved of her relationship with him. Three days before Alan and Diane Johnson were murdered, they caught their then-16-year-old daughter at Santos' apartment, grounded her and threatened to report Santos for statutory rape.

Sarah Johnson had told friend her and Santos, who was 19 at the time, were engaged to be married. Santos' relationship with Sarah and his ties to the murder case brought his illegal status to the attention of authorities, who deported him to Mexico in September 2003. He was brought back the next month to testify in the grand jury proceedings against Johnson and given a temporary work permit. Then, a year later in October 2004, he was arrested for drug possession when his friend's vehicle was pulled over because of a problem with its tail light. According to court documents, while the vehicle was pulled over, an officer outside of his jurisdiction who assisted in the traffic stop asked Santos for his identification, took his wallet away, and then conducted a search of the truck, during which time he found methamphetamine. While Santos was in jail in connection with the drug charges, 5th District Court Judge Barry Wood, who is presiding over the Johnson case, placed him under a $150,000 witness bond to ensure that he would not be released from jail or deported before the murder trial ended. COUNTING COWS

Dairies such as this one west of Gooding are under a moratorium imposed by Gooding County commissioners, who want to know how many cows are in the county before approving any new or expanded confined animal feeding operations.

County commissioners seek accurate numbers

By Michelle Dunlop Times-News writer

GOODING — How many dairy cows are in Gooding County?

That's one answer Gooding County commissioners hope to find during a 120-day moratorium they adopted on Monday for confined animal feeding operations, or CAFOs. Commissioners fear the county might already have too many cows in too concentrated of an area, which could potentially create problems with waste that would pose a threat to public safety.

While commissioners say various figures on the county's dairies are floating around, others believe the answer to the commissioners' dilemma is just a phone call away.

Bob Narebut, executive director of the Idaho Dairymen's Association, declined comment on the moratorium, but did say that obtaining the number of dairy cows in a given county is "no big deal to get." The dairymen's association relies on the Department of Agriculture for its cow counts, he said. Narebut cited a Jan. 20 report listing 105,193 dairy cows in Gooding County. Those numbers come from the USDA's Idaho Agricultural Statistics Service, said John Chabum, deputy administrator for the Idaho Department of Agriculture.

"We don't keep statistics on the number of cows in a particular area of the state," Chabum said. However, the state Agriculture Department will get involved in animal counts if a problem develops, he said. "Every January, USDA statisticians administer sample surveys to determine the number of dairy cows in each county of the state, said Don Gerhardt, director of division. The number of dairies in the state makes it prohibitive to survey each and every one, Gerhardt said. Instead, random sample surveys are sent.

"It's a random sample, but it's also based on size. All the large dairies are basically in this survey," Gerhardt said. Gerhardt's division does not conduct physical counts of animals on dairies.

"We rely on their integrity to tell the truth," Gerhardt said. On Jan. 1, 2004, Gooding County had 117,500 dairy cows, he said. The figures for the Jan. 1, 2005, survey will not be available until May.

"On dairies — particularly — we have very accurate numbers," Gerhardt said.

Gooding County commissioners have expressed doubts in state agencies' abilities to enforce the accuracy of those numbers. In their ruling Monday against the Scarrow Dairy expansion, the commissioners noted, "We have no proof that state agencies are monitoring the facilities to protect the neighbors."

Although Gerhardt isn't sure why conflicting figures on Gooding County's dairy cows exist, he ventured a few guesses. A difference between the actual numbers accounted for in the survey and permitted numbers — or the number of cows allowed by the county — might cause confusion, he said. "The permitted number doesn't necessarily tell how many cows there are," Gerhardt said.

In their resolution enacting a temporary moratorium on CAFOs, Gooding County commissioners noted that the county has permitted between 210,000 and 220,000 cows as of February 2001.

Varying definitions of what constitutes a dairy cow may also cause discrepancies. When evaluating the number of dairy cows, the USDA counts only cows who have had a calf, Gerhardt said. Calves are not counted in this calculation. Instead, the division does include calves in their total count of all cows — beef and dairy, male and female — for the county, Gerhardt said. For example, Gooding County had a total of 199,000 cattle in the county on Jan. 1, 2004, he said.

Despite assurances from different agencies on the accuracy of cow counts in Gooding County, Lauren McClean of the Idaho Conservation League applauded the county commissioners for trying to get to the bottom of the problem. "I think it's very important for the people of Gooding County to have accurate information," McClean said.

Hagerman will see more windmills

The Times-News

HAGERMAN — By the end of the year, 20 new windmills could pop on the horizon above the Hagerman Valley.

On Tuesday, the state utilities commission announced a proposal for Idaho Power Co. to purchase wind energy from four wind projects to be located near the existing Fossil Gulch Wind Park. The Idaho Public Utilities Commission will take comments on the plan through April 15.

Each of the four projects consists of seven 1.5-megawatt wind turbines, similar to the Fossil Gulch project. Combined, the wind parks can sell Idaho Power up to 40 megawatts on a monthly basis.

One megawatt is enough electricity to provide power to about 850 homes.

The new wind projects will be named the Howard Springs Wind Park, the Pilgrim Stage Station Wind Park, the Oregon Trail Wind Park and the Tuna Gulch Wind Park. All four will be all owned by Montana-based Energy Development Group, the company that developed Fossil Gulch.

Each of the projects will qualify for a small power production facility eligible for rates set by the utilities commission under the federal Public Utilities Regulatory Policies Act, passed by Congress during the energy crisis of the late 1970s. The act encourages development of renewable energy technologies as alternatives to burning fossil fuels or constructing new power plants.

The federal act requires that electric utilities offer to buy power produced by small power producers at a rate equal to the cost the utility avoids if it would have had to generate the power itself or buy it from another source. In the next 10 years, Idaho Power expects to add as much as 350 megawatts of wind energy to its generating portfolio.

The commission will accept public comment on the four projects via e-mail by accessing the commission's homepage at www.puc.idaho.gov. Comments can also be made to P.O. Box 83720, Boise, ID 83720-0074 or faxed to (208) 334-3762.

Sportsmen ask to take over former landfill

By Renee Wells For The Times-News

BURLEY — A former county landfill may become a habitat for pheasant if a group of local sports enthusiasts gets its way.

George Warrell, representing Sportsmen for Fish and Wildlife Habitat, asked Cassia County commissioners, on Monday to allow the group to manage the former county landfill property located at 600 S. 150 E. Burley. The landfill was closed when Southern Idaho Solid Waste District opened its regional landfill on Milner Butte. Pheasants were installed around the

and the property has been idle ever since.

Looking for a place to develop habitat for pheasants, Warrell said the group would like to manage the property, planting trees, shrubs and grass, and in time introduce a population of hatchery-grown pheasants in an effort to enhance hunting in the area.

"When hunters used to come into the county looking for pheasants back in the days when the hunting was still good, they stayed in local motels and purchased food and goods at local businesses," Warrell said. Please see LANDFILL, Page B3

Students' reading skills improve

The Times-News and The Associated Press

BOISE — The reading skills of kindergarten, first- and third-graders have improved slightly, according to test scores released by the Idaho Department of Education Tuesday. The scores from the Winter Idaho Reading Indicator show that about 59 percent of kindergartners are reading at their grade level, as are 81 percent of first-graders and 67 percent of second-graders and 65 percent of third-graders.

Although for the most part test scores of Hispanic and American Indian children also improved compared with last year, they continued to lag behind overall student achievement score improvements.

Students in kindergarten through third grade took the test, one of three given during the school year.

Percent of pupils had increases in the percentage on grade level in every grade except second, which dropped three percentage points to 78 percent on grade level.

"We had really good increases from last fall," said Brett Gies, Twin Falls director of data analysis and program improvement. He said the district is well on its way to meeting state score targets for spring.

The Legislature has set an achievement target of at least 55 percent of students in kindergarten through third grade reading at grade level, along with 60 percent of each school's first-graders. If schools fail to meet the targets for a certain number of years, the state may provide additional resources to help them improve.

In Jerome, the district saw the percentage of pupils on grade level increase in all four levels tested. In Blaine County, pupils held their own in being on grade level, except for third grade, which fell four percentage points to 60 percent.

Cassia County's kindergartners saw a sharp decline from 63 percent on grade level this time. Please see READING, Page B3

Scores will appear tomorrow

OBITUARIES

Martin M. Funk

BURLEY — Our beloved husband, father, grandfather and great-grandfather, Martin Miller Funk, an 84-year-old resident of Burley, died Tuesday, March 15, 2005, at his home surrounded by his loving family.

He was born Nov. 25, 1920, in Burley, Idaho, the son of Alvah Martin Funk and Esther Miller Funk.

He graduated from high school in Grandview, Wash., and enjoyed playing sports, especially baseball, basketball and football.

After graduating from high school, he then attended technical school in Postland, Ore. Martin was a veteran of World War II, serving in the United States Army Air Corps, in the 15th Air Force in North Africa and Italy during the war.

After the war, he returned home to Burley and married Mary Louise Crane on Dec. 20, 1946, in Burley.

Together they raised their nine children in the Unity area of Burley. Martin and Mary Lou were sealed in the Idaho Falls LDS Temple on April 29, 1963.

Martin was a well-known and a successful farmer. His family and friends respected him.

Following Mary Lou's death in 1989, Martin married Virginia Bruesch Smith on March 23, 1990.

They continued to live in Burley, where he had since resided.

His greatest pleasure was watching his family grow and prosper.

He was a member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, where he served as a home teacher and as a president of the Sunday School.

Buhl looks to install pool heater

By Jana Davidson
Times-News correspondent

BUHL — The heater for the city of Buhl's public pool has been purchased and is expected to be installed by week's end.

The City Council recently approved the heating of the pool to draw more swimmers.

The additional revenue the swimmers will bring is expected to cover the cost of the heater and the fuel to operate it.

Buhl has been averaging about 80 swim days per season. Heating the water could extend that to 90 days.

In a greater business, new police officer Scott Montgomery was sworn in by Mayor Barbara Getzlen.

Montgomery served with the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Department for 10 years before moving to Puget Sound, Wash., for one year.

He said he moved back to be closer to his family and because he likes the community.

"I'm happy to be here (and am) glad Chief (Ron) Romero gave me the opportunity," Montgomery said.

Other City Council business included:

• Positive report — Ron Potts, the director of the Buhl Chamber of Commerce, said the March 8 community fair at Popplewell Elementary School was a success. The cost of the fair was covered by donations and included representation from 55 organizations, Potts said.

• Broadway project — The City Council voted to approve City Engineer Scott Bybee's recommendation — to invite construction consultants to enter request for quotes, or RFQs, related to the $2.7 million project to revitalize Broadway Avenue through downtown.

• Upcoming meeting — The next Buhl City Council meeting is scheduled for 7 p.m. April 11 at City Hall.

Jury indicts man in lewd conduct case

Hansen resident faces multiple child sex charges

By Rebecca Meany
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A Hansen man indicted by a grand jury on multiple counts of child sex abuse has been arraigned in 5th District Court.

Original charges against George Houston Crider, 43, were dismissed when a grand jury indicted him Feb. 22.

The superseding indictment charges Crider with two counts of lewd conduct with a minor under the age of 16 and two counts of rape.

A superseding indictment means that the case was taken to a grand jury instead of presented at a preliminary hearing; charges previously filed are voided in favor of the indictments charges if they are the same.

Reasons for taking a case to a grand jury include vulnerability of witnesses, difficult finding witnesses and the complexity or subject matter of a case, said Grant Loeb, Twin Falls County prosecutor.

"There are all kinds of variables," he said.

He declined to reveal why he took the Crider case to a grand jury.

The Twin Falls County Prosecutor's Office filed the initial charges after Crider allegedly admitted the sex abuse crimes when talking to a deputy at the Twin Falls County Jail in March 2004, and after authorities investigated the alleged incidents, according to an affidavit written by Detective Becky White of the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Department.

Crider was arrested by Buhl police that month in connection with a lewd conduct left in the presence of a child.

Police made contact with Crider on March 21, 2004, after clerks at the Buhl OnSite Stop 'N' Go alerted them to an incident in which a man told them he was God and asked for money.

An affidavit written by Detective Karen Trent of the Buhl Police Department says that Crider spoke to store clerks of the rapture and told them that there was no government.

After police tracked down Crider, they found a loaded pistol and a cut-down, 22-caliber rifle under his car seat, according to the affidavit.

Prosecutors charged him with felony injury to a child for having the loaded weapon in the presence of a minor.

Crider's 12-year-old daughter later told police her father was Jesus, and questioned how they could arrest him.

In December, a hearing in the case was postponed following a judge's orders that Crider could remain committed at Idaho State Hospital South, a psychiatric hospital in Blackfoot, before appearing in court.

"We have a finding of competency from an appropriate mental health professional," Loeb's said Tuesday.

"If a person gets an evaluation and it is found not competent to stand trial, then we don't (continue with the case)."

On Feb. 4, nearly a year after the Buhl convenience store incident, Crider was arraigned on two counts of lewd conduct with a minor child.

A status hearing was set for March 28.

Santos

ground has been brought out by several witnesses in the murder trial, although much of it was determined to be inadmissible by Judge Wood.

The tests are part of the principal at Wood River High School, testified outside the presence of the jury that Santos admitted his gang affiliation with a group called the "Southside 13," which consists of Latino youth living in Blaine County.

Another vice principal, John Blackman, said Santos was habitually truant and tardy and he was suspended in spring 1994 for a fight in the lunchroom and for drug use.

He said that he called Santos in to take a drug test for marjuana because he had suspicions that he might be high. Santos denied smoking pot and agreed to the test, but when it came back positive for cocaine, Blackman said Santos told him, "I don't know you were testing for cocaine."

Wood ruled the drug test was irrelevant to the murder trial, but allowed the statement about Santos' gang affiliation to be made to the jury.

Johnson's defense attorneys have inferred that Santos could have been the murderer of Alan and Diane Johnson. During closing arguments, attorney Bob Fungtho even suggested one of Santos' "gang buddies" could have pulled the trigger.

But despite their finger-pointing, Johnson's defense team chose not to cross examine Santos or members of his family when they were on the witness stand.

Worth said Santos was present during the drug charges are being dropped, but he remains in custody at the Blaine County Jail on an immigration hold.

Worth said he believes Santos has fulfilled the requirements related to the Johnson trial, so a motion to quash the witness bond was filed last week with Judge Wood.

Kathleen L. Turner, a reporter with the Wood River Journal in Halley, also contributed to this report.

Ex-WorldCom CEO found guilty

NEW YORK (AP) — Bernard Ebbers, the once-swaggering CEO of WorldCom, was convicted Tuesday of engineering the largest corporate fraud in U.S. history — an $11 billion accounting scandal that costumed the big telecom company three years ago.

The verdict marked a colossal fall for Ebbers, who had turned a humble Mississippi long-distance provider into a global telecommunications power, swallowing up companies along the way and earning the nickname "Telecom Cowboy." A federal jury in Manhattan returned guilty verdicts on all nine counts, including securities fraud, conspiracy and lying to regulators — a decision that could send Ebbers, 63, to prison for the rest of his life. Sentencing was set for June 13.

The former chief executive roddened deeply when the jury announced its verdict after eight days of deliberations, and his wife, Kristie, burst into tears in the courtroom front row. Later, as his lawyer spoke on the side, promising an appeal, Ebbers and his wife — nearly toppled by the enormous crew of cameras and reporters camped outside the federal courthouse — made their way to a nearby street, hailed a cab and drove away.

Attorney General Alberto Gonzales called the conviction a "triumph of our legal system." He said the jury had recognized that the fraud "extended from the middle management levels of this company all the way to its top executive."

Russia paid $10M to find rebel

MOSCOW (AP) — Russia's security services announced Tuesday it paid an unprecedented $10 million to informers who helped track down the late Chechen rebel leader Aslan Maskhadov — an effort to give credibility to its renewed offer of an identical prize for the Kremlin's No. 1 foe, warlord Shamil Basayev.

The announcement appeared part of a stepped-up effort to eliminate separatist leaders whose fight against the Kremlin has dragged on for most of the past decade and destabilized much of Russia's southern flank. Chechnya's Moscow-backed president suggested it was part of a plan to rely increasingly on the region's local population in its attempts to stop rebel warlords.

Shackled suspect goes before judge

ATLANTA — Ringed by 19 officers in a cinderblock jail room, the man accused in the crime spree that left an Atlanta judge and three others dead went before a judge Tuesday for the first time since being shackled.

Brian Nichols, 33, was informed that authorities plan to charge him with murder.

Nichols looked straight ahead during the five-minute hearing and did not make eye contact with anyone in the room, including the judge. He spoke only once, when Judge Frank Cox asked him if he had any questions.

"Not at this time," he said.

Nichols was held without bail on the rape charge he was on trial for Friday, when he allegedly overpowered a guard at the Fulton County courthouse, stole her gun and started a rampage that terrorized Atlanta and left four people dead.

This time, authorities took no chances for the hearing at the Fulton County jail.

All prisoners booked into the jail make their first appearance before a judge inside the jail, not at the courthouse. But 19 officers — almost five times the usual number — packed the small room, and several more officers blocked the hall outside.

also included wiretaps on seven phones and interceptions of more than 15,000 calls, according to prosecutors, the FBI and police.

The informant, an explosives expert, contacted the FBI after he was approached by a man who said he had access to weapons from the former Soviet Union and believed the informant could find a willing buyer, federal prosecutors said.

Using a digital camera provided by the informant, members of the ring, which included Armenians and South Africans, provided pictures of the weapons they said they had available for sale, prosecutors said.

witnesses and other materials, Assistant Chief Dean Collins said Tuesday.

It remained unclear what prompted the shootings. Investigators said they had virtually ruled out as a motive the impending loss of Ratzmann's contracted job as a computer technician and were focusing on his connection to the church.

Army documents raise fresh concerns of abuse

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Newly released Army documents suggest that soldiers at a makeshift Iraqi detention camp suspected that detainees were being mistreated by a Navy SEAL team whose members were photographed posing with bloodied prisoners.

Two Army interrogators said they were concerned about the way members of SEAL Team Five were treating prisoners, according to documents obtained by the American Civil Liberties Union. Some of the prisoners brought in by the SEALs "appeared to be very severely beaten," an unnamed Army staff sergeant told investigators last year.

WAUKESHA, Wis. — Partial autopsy results released Tuesday for seven victims of a church service shooting rampage showed the gunman hit three people with multiple shots — including one man who was struck with four bullets.

Authorities say Terry Ratzmann, 44, fired 22 bullets within a minute during the Saturday rampage at the Living Church of God's service at the Sherman hotel in Brookfield, killing seven and wounding four.

He then shot himself in the head.

The Waukesha County medical examiner's office said toxicology tests on all the victims and Ratzmann will take weeks to months to complete. An investigative report should be completed later this week.

NEW YORK (AP) — U.S. authorities charged 18 people in an alleged scheme to smuggle grenade launchers, shoulder-fired missiles and other Russian military weapons into the United States.

The versatility of casseroles

Casseroles are handy. I don't know why we associate this type of dish with ordinary, boring dinners. Yes, there are easy and boring types of casseroles, but there are easy hairstyles or simple conversations that aren't necessarily boring.

Casseroles are kind of like a thicker stew. You have meat, some vegetables, and a little liquid to simmer it all together. Rather than having to serve it in a bowl, a helping of a casserole sits nicely on your plate.

Casseroles can be tasty as well. I've gotten two recipes for two very different casseroles that should keep your taste buds entertained with every mouthful.

Both take some time to assemble, so take some time the night before to do all your preparations.

It's worth it, though. The casserole with a rice, salad and a roll will be a filling meal.

Glanbia employees give Patrick's Day more authenticity in southern Idaho

By Loretta Burkhardt
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Tomorrow is St. Patrick's Day in Idaho. So don't go to strangers.

Irish-owned Glanbia Foods Inc., one of the Magic Valley's largest employers, has provided a touch of the Old Sod to local Patrick's Day celebrations for more than a decade.

This year, a little more so than usual.

And along with an Irish suppers, 10 of Glanbia's 4,000 employees have found some treasure and are currently experiencing Idaho's own diverse pot of gold.

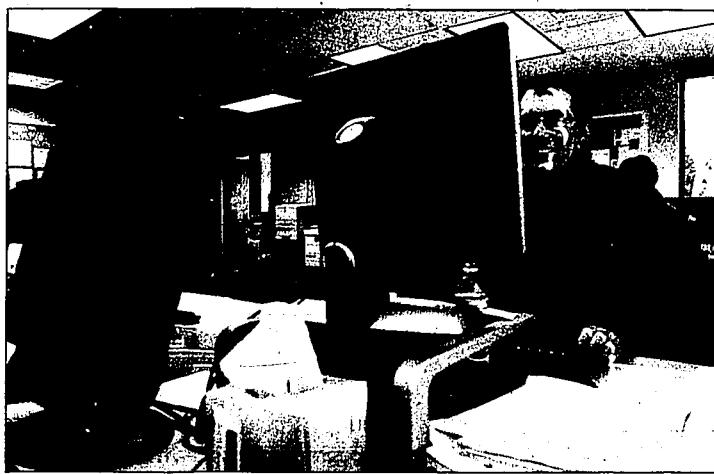

The next group of computer technician specialists came as part of the company's decision — several years ago — to implement the Systems Application Products in Data Processing, a $4.5 million dollar investment, said Jeff Williams, the Twin Falls-based CEO of Glanbia's U.S. operations.

To integrate the new business platform, just under a dozen single Irish employees came to the area in July and will stay until May. Unmarried employees were chosen so they didn't have to leave family behind.

"We'll be having a potluck," Williams said.

"I think that on St. Patrick's Day, the Irish eyes are smiling on all of us," Williams added, and part of the sharing is done with a smile.

Here are some of their recipes:

Farrel O'Shea, a native of County Kerry, Ireland, works as the sales and distribution team leader for a new business information system being installed by Glanbia Foods in Twin Falls. O'Shea is one of 10 Glanbia employees from Ireland brought in by the company to help with the change.

 - 1 oz. butter or margarine
 - 1 oz. onion (chopped)
 - 1 lb. cooked kale or cabbage
 - Salt and pepper
 - A little milk

- Add the mashed potatoes, chopped cabbage, pepper, salt, and milk.
- Mix all well together and re-heat thoroughly, stirring all the time.
- Pile up in a hot vegetable dish.

With a touch of Ireland's influence, Glanbia Foods Inc. is adding the color of gold to south-central Idaho.

"Glanbia is Gaelic for 'pure food,' thus as milk production continues to grow along the Snake River Plain, it's no wonder that Glanbia is the fastest growing — and one of the largest producers of cheese and whey products — companies in the United States.

On the world scene, the Irish-based company has its headquarters in Killybegs, Ireland, with operations in the United Kingdom, Germany and Nigeria. And, of course, Idaho.

And while their responsibilities are "huge" still, they're taking the time to see what Idaho has to offer.

And they're loving it, Morgan said. "Here, there's so much more to do," said 23-year-old Liz Cotter, who came to Idaho from County Cork.

And while she misses Ireland's chocolate and the taste of

Erin in Idaho

Barry's tea," the sking at Pomerelle Ski Resort is makes up the difference for the computer technician.

Fiford Jim Bergin agrees with her take on skiing, "which we can't do in Ireland." But what impresses him even more are Idaho's wide-open spaces and bright sunny skies.

"A lot of fun is good for the mind," said Bergin, who also enjoys a cast of being much lower than that of Ireland's.

And compared to the small farms

In Ireland — a place filled with trees and hedges and where the grass never burns — the Idaho's abundance of empty is a refreshing sight.

"We have a lot of dull weather and a lot of rain," Bergin said.

With a farming background — 100 cows would be considered "a (very) big herd" — Bergin explains that the problem of "drainage" is a real issue. "In his hometown of Port Arlington, located about 50 miles southwest of Dublin, "Hence, I like being a long way from the sea," Bergin said.

The mountains are another plus in the eyes of the Irish, particularly where "hiking." Is concerned said team member Farrel O'Shea, 29.

The rivers in Idaho also hold a justification for O'Shea, who too is taking advantage of the skiing that Idaho has to offer.

In line with that, he took the time to go to a local ski-swap, and the treasures he purchased will be part of his luggage when he heads back to Ireland, he said.

Stacking blocks can protect your plant beds

By Gary Dymak
Newsday

Grass and weeds invade, mulch and wood chips escape and rich soil erodes. Your plants and retaining walls can weigh up to 70 pounds apiece. For beds, blocks typically weigh 15 to 20 pounds each, are 12 inches long and about 4 inches high. Blocks can be either stacked in a straight line or be turned to form curves for easier installation.

Tools and landscape materials needed include a spade shovel, mason's line and line level, torpedo level, rubber mallet; garden gloves, tamping tool, safety glasses, sand and crushed gravel or small landscape stones.

The first step should be planning the bed. Let's assume it will feature rounded corners and inside and outside curves. For this design, use a hose to create an outline. Next, determine how many blocks will be needed to dig out a narrow trench, then lay a base of landscape stone and fine sand. Once the first layer of blocks is set into place, the next few steps are a snap.

Planting-bed blocks are smaller and lighter than those used for retaining walls, so the project won't be back-breaking. For beds, blocks typically weigh 15 to 20 pounds each, are 12 inches long and about 4 inches high.

Using a 2-by-4 that is slightly narrower than the width of the excavated channel, screed the gravel smooth, then flatten it with the tamping tool. Line the channel with a thin layer of sand, about an inch or so, and screed again. Begin laying the blocks, and pound them level with the rubber mallet. When blocks are needed for specific applications.

Mark the bed outline with white spray paint; then excavate a channel by removing sod or grass. So that blocks are easier to align and level, dig out an area 2 to 3 inches wider than a block. Depth of the channel should be about half the height of the block, plus about 2 inches.

Line the excavated channel with a layer of crushed gravel, 1 to 1 1/2 inches deep. For small jobs, it's OK to substitute bags of fine landscape rocks for crushed gravel. In many cases, crushed gravel is delivered by the truckload. That's way too much for most planting beds.

Using a 2-by-4 that is slightly narrower than the width of the excavated channel, screed the gravel smooth, then flatten it with the tamping tool. Line the channel with a thin layer of sand, about an inch or so, and screed again. Begin laying the blocks, and pound them level with the rubber mallet. When laying a course in a straight line, use a mason's line and level.

Because stretching a mason's line over a long distance can sometimes be difficult — the string can lose tension — another item that might come in handy is a 4-foot carpenter's level, which can be used to check the alignment of several blocks at a time. The most important part of the project is a level first row. After that, all other rows stack into place.

Remember, many manufacturers call for the second course to be placed in a running bond pattern. This calls for the top block to lie over the joint between the two blocks underneath it.

A running bond might mean you would have to cut a couple of bricks in half to use as end pieces on the second course. Use a circular saw with a masonry blade to make a shallow cut in the block, then use a masonry chisel to split the stone. On a flat-faced block, cuts can be made on the top and face.

Nature's little stress-busters

When the company quarterly report is due in two days, your mechanic can't figure out why the engine won't brighten every time you start and your teenager announces that "D's" are passing grades, reach for a bunch of flowers.

Recent behavioral research at Rutgers State University of New Jersey says that fresh flowers can ease anxiety, agitation and depression, according to the Flower Promotion Organization. Flowers, apparently, trigger immediate feelings of delight, and produce a mood lift that can carry over for several days. Color flowers "nature's little stress-busters."

"Now, science shows that not only do flowers make us happier than we know, they have strong positive effects on our overall well-being," says Jeanette Haviland-Jones, psychologist and authority on human emotional development. Fresh flowers rekindle a connection with nature. Their color, fragrance and silky smooth petals envelop our senses and replenish the spirit. Sigmund Freud observed, "Flowers are useful to look at. They have neither emotions nor conflicts."

Capture the regenerating power of flowers. Create "floral moments."

- Keep a pitcher filled with flowers on the breakfast table summer and winter. You'll start every day with cheerful blooms.
- Cluster two or three mini-vases where you'll see them while you work in your kitchen.

- Put a container of flowers next to your favorite chair. Research shows that the scent of flowers can be invigorating, restful or instill productivity.
- Color counts, too. Color expert Leatrice Eiseman, author of "Painting Guide to Communication with Color," says that red and yellow are energizing colors, while green and blue evoke tranquility. If the dark days of winter get you down, start spring early with a basket of brightly-colored flowers. Switch off life's pressures and focus on the restful tones of champagne, blush and soft pink flowers while luxuriating in a warm bath.
- Bring flowers to the office. Recharge your energy with a nature break. Use a medley of red-purple and blue blossoms to anchor a stack of reports. Add pebbles or marbles to a vase to weight it, then add water and flowers. Or put brightly colored primroses in a plastic-lined basket.
- Have fun with imaginative containers. Maybe a ceramic cat for the kitchen, an antique teapot for the dining room. The possibilities are endless — as long as your container doesn't leak!

Tip of the week: It's tough to pluck one tiny seed in your fingers and put it where you want it. A No. 2 pencil can make the job a lot easier. Touch the damp soil with the pencil tip. Then dip it in the seeds. The wet pencil lead will pick up only one or two seeds, tops, like magic. Twist the pencil to wipe seeds off onto the soil.

STEAK AND GUINNESS PIE

Serves 4

The length of time waiting for this dish to cook — 2 1/2 hours — combined with the absence of TV in Ireland during the 1950's and 1960's, goes some way to explaining why Irish families used to be so large.

2 lb. round steak, cubed and rolled in seasoned flour
1/2 cup plain flour
1 tsp. brown sugar
2 large onions, peeled and finely chopped 2 oz. button mushrooms
1/2 pint Guinness
8 slices of streaky bacon
Chopped parsley
1 pack frozen shortcrust pastry, thawed

Grill the bacon, cut into pieces and place in a saucepan with the steak. Fry onions and mushrooms until golden and add to the saucepan. Add the sugar and the Guinness. Cover and simmer over low heat for 2 hours. Stir occasionally, adding a little more Guinness if gravy thickens too much. Line a deep pie dish with half the pastry and bake at 425 degrees for 10 minutes. Add the Guinness and beef mixture from the saucepan and cover with the top layer of pastry. Bake for 10 minutes, or until brown.

grain, on a platter surrounded by the vegetables and with a side dish of Champ.

IRISH STEW

- 2 lbs. breast of mutton or 1 1/2 lbs. piggy chops.
- 5 medium-sized onions.
- 2 lbs. potatoes
- Pepper and salt
- 1 pint cold water
- 1 tsp. chopped parsley

Cut the meat into neat pieces, removing the skin and superfluous fat. All fat is not removed because the potatoes will absorb a certain amount. Peel the onions and chop one. Wash and peel the potatoes thinly. If small, leave whole. If large, cut into two. Slice one thinly. Put the meat in the bottom of the stew pan then put in the sliced potato and chopped onion well seasoned with pepper and salt. Add the water, bring to the boil. Skim. Simmer for 1 hour.

When the stew is cooked, serve on a hot dish with the potatoes and onion, around and the meat in the center. Pour a little gravy over and serve the remainder in a hot sauce-boat. Garnish with parsley.

bite-sized pieces

1/2 lb streaky bacon, cut into 1-inch pieces
1 3/4 pts boiling water
2 large onions, peeled and coarsely chopped
2 lbs. potatoes, peeled and thickly sliced
3 lbs. chopped parsley
Salt and pepper to taste
Large glass of cider

Place the sausages and bacon in the boiling water and cook for 5 minutes.

Drain, but reserve the liquid. (Now remember this! Don't go draining the thing over the sink!)

Put the meats into a large saucepan along with the onions, potatoes, and parsley. Add enough of the reserved liquid to just cover the contents.

Cover the pot and simmer gently for about one hour, or until the liquid is reduced by half and all the ingredients are cooked. (Don't let them get mushy!) Season with salt and pepper.

1 tsp. freshly ground black pepper
1 bay leaf

Chocolate has tradition, but Peeps got bounce

“Some products don't taste as good as you remember them. But a Peep is always a Peep.”

— Libbeth Echeandia, Candy Information Service

Milwaukee Journal Sentinel

They are timeless favorites of spring, those neon marshmallow Peeps and playful chocolate bunnies.

Baby boomers have embraced them since childhood, doing them out to their children as well, and it's a safe bet these iconic candies of Easter will be around for at least another generation.

On the game board of candy fame, Peeps and chocolate bunnies write the rules: Here today, back next spring. Who would want it any other way?

For many children, chocolate bunnies in Easter baskets are a rite of passage—sometimes marking their first exposure to chocolate, said Lindsay Echeandia of Candy Information Service, a consulting company in Savoy, Texas, that monitors trends in the candy industry.

“Very young children aren't as fussy about chocolate and tend more toward sugary and high-fructose flavors, like Sweet Tarts and Nerds,” she said.

Still, chocolate bunnies of all shapes and sizes have been king of the Easter basket since the late 1800s, long before Peeps.

They are the consummate Easter confection, no matter whom you ask. And unlike Peeps, the designs are endless. Peeps are an Easter basket staple in part because of their fun texture, and because they don't require many teeth to eat, Echeandia said.

Even so, there are two distinct camps when it comes to Peeps: those who love the sugary chicks and bunnies and those who don't. There is no middle ground.

“But the per capita (purchase) of their loyal audience makes up for all those who don't like them,” Echeandia said.

“Some products don't taste as good as you remember them,” she said. “But a Peep is always a Peep. They've kept the fun and they've kept the freshness. People know they were made a short time ago because a Peep comes and goes, and doesn't stay on the shelf forever. It's a novelty and it's never a disappointment. You also keep getting a new audience of kids.”

The formulation of a Peeps animal candy hasn't changed since the first Peeps were made in 1953. These are the same Peeps that boomers savored as kids.

This helps explain why fans never outgrow Peeps, Echeandia said.

There's a Peeps Fan Club on the official Peeps official Web site (www.marshmallow-peeps.com), complete with Peeps T-shirts and interactive games.

THE TROUBLE WITH Splenda

Sweetener comes under fire over claims

When America's sweet tooth mix up with a new product called Splenda back in 2000, it didn't take long for the two to hit it off.

By 2003, Splenda was the country's top-selling no-calorie sweetener, charging past such competitors as NutraSweet, Equal, Sweet'N Low and Sunett as if powered by a sugar high.

It has since gone on to also outsell, in dollars, any brand of sugar, and is added to about 3,500 processed foods and beverages, besides its tabletop and home-cooking uses.

Now the competition among sweeteners has turned bitter. The sugar industry is assailing Splenda's marketer, McNeil Nutritionals, a division of Johnson & Johnson, over the way it advertises Splenda. Lawsuits and counter suits have hit the courts.

If you're a Splenda user, here's what you need to know: The controversy centers mainly on Splenda's promotional messages and its claimed link to sugar, not its safety. At the same time, some critics in the sugar industry contend not enough is known about the long-term human impacts of combining chlorine with sugar to make sucralose, Splenda's base ingredient. The sweetener's approval by the Food and Drug Administration followed numerous animal studies.

“Made from sugar so it tastes like sugar” are the words on the Splenda package and in the Splenda ads that rankle the Sugar Association, a sugar-industry trade group, and its co-plaintiffs in a suit targeting the ad campaign.

In using the slogan, “Johnson & Johnson want consumers to think that it is natural sugar without calories. The truth is that Splenda is not natural” and is not sugar, according to www.truthaboutsplenda.com, a Web site launched by the Sugar Association.

“The Center for Science in the Public Interest, a food-watch-dog group, agrees. “We consider (Splenda) safe. But it happens to be a synthetic chemical cooked up in a flask somewhere,” said CSPI spokesman Jeff Conlin. “That doesn't mean it isn't safe, but people should know (what it is).”

CSPI is not part of the lawsuit but has joined the Sugar Association in publicly criticizing Splenda's advertising campaign. CSPI's criticism has drawn added attention, given that the consumer group in the past has assailed Americans' massive consumption of sugar.

“Unlike sugar and high-fructose corn syrup, (Splenda) is low in calories and does not promote tooth decay. But that is no excuse for misleading labeling and advertising,” said Michael Jacobson, CSPI's executive director. As evidence of Splenda's alleged advertising impact, Jacobson cited a national survey done last year for CSPI, that included 426 people who had used Splenda. Nearly half (47 percent) of them “incorrectly” believed (Splenda) was a natural product,” Jacobson said. “Only 57 percent of Splenda users correctly believed Splenda was an artificial sweetener.”

McNeil Nutritionals does not claim that Splenda, or its sucralose, is natural, said company spokeswoman Cathy Grayson. “It is not sugar, and it is not natural,” although the chemical structure is similar to sugar's, Grayson said.

Both sides in the dispute agree the Splenda starts out as sugar. But its chemical composition changes when sugar is combined with chlorine in the manufacturing plant.

“We selectively replace three of the hydrogen/oxygen groups (of atoms) on the sugar mole-cule with three chlorine atoms,” Grayson said. “This makes sucralose, which is no longer sugar.”

Why chlorine? Partly because the chemical change affects the sweetener's ability to be absorbed by the body, essentially making sucralose calorie-free, she said.

It also gives sucralose stability during cooking and baking so it retains its sweetness under high heat. Some other artificial sweeteners, such as aspartame-based Equal and NutraSweet, lose some of their sweetness under prolonged heat and have more limited cooking uses.

Besides sucralose, Splenda contains dextrose and maltodextrin, added as bulking agents, said Grayson.

McNeil has filed a countersuit against the Sugar Association and others (but not against CSPI), accusing them of “a false and malicious smear campaign on the Internet and elsewhere that ‘seeks to frighten the American public into thinking that sucralose ... is somehow unhealthy or unsafe.’” “Sucralose has never been shown to produce any deleterious health effects,” the suit maintains.

Has the fuss over Splenda's marketing campaign hurt its sales? Not if two recent developments are any indication. Both Coca-Cola and Pepsi-Cola have announced plans to reformulate some Coke and Pepsi varieties using Splenda.

The new spin on gin

Knight Ridder News Service

Remember gin? The original martini classes and defined an edgy chic? The Beefer-Blude on the label? “London dry?” It's back, and three arduous Bay Area distillers are leading the way. One new San Francisco operation, mingles itself the first dedicated gin-making operation in the country since Al Capone was a pup.

For purists whose blood boils when the seaver assumes that “martini” means vodka, it's about time.

For too long, gin got no respect. In the public mind gin meant not the 15th century of William Powell, but the 18th-century depravity depicted by William Hogarth, who drew Gin Alley.

Even the fictional James Bond, whose name is synonymous with the dry martini, used to fussian vodka from gin early on. (In “Casino Royale,” the first in Ian Fleming's Bond novels he orders an orange-colored gin, vodka, Little Blanc and more.)

Not just Thugsnery Zen, the citrusy/melony ultra-premium from the company founded in 1830 by 26-year-old Charles Hanquested Distillery 209 from San Francisco; Sarcious, from Santa Cruz, Calif.

“Most of the gins now are trying to outdo some of those vintage gins, which may become a little more sophisticated in their taste,” said Colin MacPhail, a Scotsman who will oversee Distillery 209 when it goes into production later this year. “It's not that horrible night you had maybe when you were 17.”

Springdale extends a gracious welcome

Gently arched windows fill both of the Springdale's front gables, creating an open and welcoming front facade. Brick detailing adds a sense of permanence. This plan's slender footprint (40 feet) makes it suitable for construction on a narrow lot.

The high-ceilinged foyer is naturally bright. Plants on an overhead shelf flourish in light spilling down from the gabled window above, while more light washes in through the transom and sidelight. Display shelves line the left wall.

Three vaulted gathering areas give the home a sense of spaciousness that belies its size. The front-facing den has a wide bay window that could be outfitted with a cozy window seat.

supplied in the large kitchen, and storage capacity is more than ample, augmented by the roomy walk-in pantry. The dining room boasts a built-in hutch, and yet more cabinetry lines the walls in the pass-through utility room that connects to the garage.

Master suite amenities in the Springdale include a large walk-in closet, and a bathroom with dual vanity. The water closet and shower are separately enclosed. Secondary bedrooms share a central bathroom with a combination tub and shower.

Don't go cold-turkey with wind power

DEAR JIM: I saw a show about using windmills to generate electricity for homes. It seems windy around my house and I would like to eliminate my electric bills. Does this make sense and how do I select a windmill?

—MARK P.

SENSIBLE HOME James Dullay

DEAR MARK: Installing a windmill to generate all the electricity for your house can make economic sense in some situations. Generally though, you are still better off getting electricity from your utility company. It would make more economic sense to plan to use a smaller windmill to reduce your electric bills and not try to totally eliminate them.

With adequate wind conditions (speed), a windmill capable of producing 10 kilowatts of electricity (enough for most needs of typical home) may cost more than $20,000 to install. Depending upon your local electric rates, it will generally take many years to payback its cost.

If your home is very energy efficient, you may be able to get by with a smaller, less expensive model though. If you are planning to build a home in a remote area which does not currently have electric power, installing a windmill may be the most cost-effective option. The cost of the utility company or a contractor to run new electric lines to a distant house can be extremely expensive and installing a windmill will eliminate this expense.

Some people are willing to make the additional investment in a windmill for environmental reasons. Windmills produce pollution-free electricity and reduce the need for mining coal or drilling for oil and gas. They also are completely quiet and create a majestic feeling for many people.

Check with your local electric utility company about its policy on buying electricity your windmill produces. On windy days, when the windmill produces more electricity than your family needs, it can be fed back into the utility electric grid. The utility company may either pay you for this electricity

How to cut your utility bills

This is the time of year when opening your utility bills can be a scary experience. Here are five fairly simple, cost-effective ways to cut your energy costs, courtesy of Ace Hardware spokesman Lou Manfredini:

- Where practical, replace regular incandescent light bulbs with compact fluorescent bulbs. They consume about one-third as much energy and last up to 10 times longer than regular bulbs, Manfredini says.
- A toilet that runs constantly uses up to 8,000 gallons of water a year, Manfredini says. Installing a toilet-repair kit that includes a new valve and flapper will conserve water.
- The wasted water that drips from light faucets adds up fast. The solution could be as easy and inexpensive as replacing the aerator and rubber washer. Manfredini also recommends replacing shower heads with flow-restricting models for additional water savings.

- Reduce the temperature on the hot water heater to 120 degrees to save on the cost of heating the water. For further savings, consider replacing any water heater that's older than 12 years with a new, more energy-efficient model, Manfredini says.
- Install a programmable thermostat to lower the temperature automatically when you go to bed or leave for the day. It can save you money as well as the bother of adjusting the thermostat yourself.

Sources: Akron Beacon Journal

or allow it to run your electric meter in reverse. Also available are smaller windmills, costing from $500 to $1,000 which produce from 100 to 400 watts. This is enough energy to help you survive through emergencies and power outlets.

They are also ideal to provide electricity to an outdoor shed or cabin. Often, they are mounted on boats to provide electricity and keep the batteries fully charged. To select a windmill, first test the wind speeds at your location for several months.

Some of the windmill suppliers will provide you with a wind gauge. The wind speed will determine your economic payback and allow you to select the proper size windmill. All the new windmills available have power and safety controls and are very reliable. The following companies offer residential windmills: Aeromax (888-407-9163 www.aeromax.com), Alternative Energy Store (877-878-4060 www.alternativeenergy.com), Lake Michigan Wind & Sun (920-743-0456 www.windandsun.com), Wind Generation Prod. (954-525-9999 www.windbugger.com), Wind Turbine Ind. (952-447-6664 www.windturbine.com), and Windstream Power (802-658-0075 www.windstreampower.com). Send inquiries to James Dullay, The Times-News, 6906 Royalgreen Dr., Cincinnati,

DEAR JIM: My master bathroom is built over the garage and the tile floor always feels cold during winter. The garage is not heated, but it stays fairly warm. What can I do to keep the bathroom floor warmer?

—DENNIS D.

DEAR DENNIS: First make sure your bathroom floor is really much colder than the rest of your house. Tile, even at normal room temperature, can feel cold on bare feet. Check its temperature with a thermometer. If it really is cold, add some insulation above the garage ceiling under the bathroom. To minimize the amount of work, use blown-in insulation. This will require only several small holes to be cut in the ceiling.

Talk About Having A Green Thumb

By Ronda Addy

You have a backyard garden, just a small one that allows you to spend time outdoors working with the flowers and vegetables you like. It's the perfect size and you can't imagine having one any bigger. Well, try to imagine a garden that covers hundreds of acres or one that thousands of years later is still considered one of the Seven Wonders of the Ancient World.

— One of the Seven Wonders of the Ancient World, the Hanging Gardens of Babylon, is still being disputed by archaeologists today. Babylon was an immense city complete with the Tower of Babel, a temple to the god Marduk. In actuality, the hanging gardens were more like overhanging

Raw food advocate touts benefits of his lifestyle

The Denver Post

You don't have to be a squirrel to be full of fruits, nuts, vegetables and seeds, as raw-food advocate Juliano firmly believes. Juliano, who uses only his first name, is a chef and restaurateur who looks more like a teenager than a 55-year-old.

He attributes his youthful appearance and high energy reserve to a diet based on raw food, and he loves to talk about its benefits in a society addicted to artificial sweeteners, pseudo-fats and carcinogens.

To make his point, he rallied against the military-industrial complex, corporations, the medical community, the pharmaceutical industry, bottled water and cooked food in a stream-of-consciousness rant that would have made Fidel Castro proud.

With a table at a Denver demonstration filled with platters of mashed avocados, julenned zucchini, sliced red bell peppers, shredded almonds, sliced almonds and cilantro leaves as a background, the raw food guru paced, gestured and spoke of cooked-food horrors.

Shorn of the shoulder-length locks featured in his book "Raw," Juliano praised the healing powers of eating raw, right down to an admonition to eat melons as an alternative to drinking water.

"Cucumbers are actually a melon, did you know that?" he rhetorically asked the audience. "Cucumbers make a great glass of water. Instead of that stuff that has been sitting in a plastic bottle for weeks. Think about it. Tomatoes, squash, fruit - all water sources."

While some swear by raw food, others see it as a reflection of creeping puritanism and asceticism: no rich foods, no sugar, no salt, no flavor, no pleasure. Nothing but what is pure, healthful, bland and joyless.

Dr. Richard Asarch, a dermatologist who has prescribed medicine in Denver for more than 25 years, says eating raw food is beneficial, but he reserves judgment on all-raw, all-the-time.

"As far as the nutritional advantages of not cooking, you have to remember that the higher the temperature at which you cook, you definitely lose some of the minerals and vitamins otherwise present," says Asarch, author of "The Beautiful Skin Diet."

"On the other hand, I'm not sure that most people get along with a steady diet of not cooking foods," he says. "You'd have to be pretty dedicated."

Raw-fooders, however, insist there is nothing bland or tasteless about their meals. In fact, raw fooders insist that an enzyme-rich diet strengthens the immune system and wards off disease.

Boulder, Colo., resident Andrew Hoar has eaten raw foods for 27 years. He converted to raw food after waking up one morning with excruciating pain in his right leg. He had been working out for a lacrosse team.

"I woke up crippled," he says. "Doctors told me to take pain medication, but someone suggested I change the way I eat. Back then the (raw-food) concept was interesting, but not scientific."

"MEAT" LOAF

- 1 1/3 cups walnuts
- 1 1/3 cups sunflower seeds
- 1 1/3 cups almonds
- Filtered water for soaking sunflower seeds and almonds
- 1 tbs. minced garlic
- 1/2 tbs. Celtic sea salt
- 1/2 cup fresh parsley, chopped
- 1/2 cup chopped celery
- 2 cups marinated Portobello, chopped (see recipe)
- 1 tbs. chopped onion
- 1 tbs. minced ginger
- 2 tbs. fresh rosemary, de-stemmed and minced
- 1 tbs. fresh tarragon, minced
- 1 cup red bell pepper, chopped
- 1 tbs. minced jalapeno
- 1 1/2 tsp. cumin seeds (not powder)

1/2 cup olive oil
1 recipe Barbecue Sauce (see recipe)
Soak sunflower seeds and almonds in enough water to cover for 2-6 hours. Soak walnuts 1/2 hour. Drain and throw nuts and seeds into a food processor with minced garlic. If you have Green Power, push them through - they're best when homogenized. Process until contents develop a dough-like consistency. Add a dash of olive oil if dough is too thick. Stir in Celtic sea salt, parsley, celery, marinated portobello, onion, ginger, rosemary, tarragon, red bell pepper, jalapeno, cumin seeds and olive oil. Mix well.

On a solid dehydrating sheet, shape the mixture into a loaf about 1 1/2 inches high. Dehydrate for 1 hour at 90 degrees. Remove loaf from the dehydrator and baste it with barbecue sauce. Dehydrate for 2-3 more hours at 90 degrees. Serve immediately.

MARINATED PORTOBELLO

- Makes 2
- 2 cups diced portobello mushrooms
- 1 cup nama shoyu (organic soy sauce)

1/4 cup olive oil
In a bowl, soak mushrooms in nama shoyu and olive oil for at least 10 minutes, up to 6 hours. Note: If you don't have nama shoyu, substitute 1/4 cup miso and 1 1/2 cups fresh-squeezed orange juice. Discard marinade.

BARBECUE SAUCE (OR CHILI SAUCE)

- Makes 2 1/2 cups
- 1 cup fresh tomatoes, chopped
- 1/4 cup chopped onion
- 1/2 cup sun-dried tomatoes, chopped
- 1/2 tsp. minced garlic
- 3/4 tsp. minced jalapeno

- 1/2 cup Medjool dates, pitted
- Olive oil or fresh tomato juice for blending
- 1/4 cup nama shoyu or 1 tsp. Celtic sea salt
- 1 tbs. olive oil

Combine ingredients in a food processor or a blending jar. Add a little tomato juice or olive oil if the sauce is too thick to blend. Keeps for 2 days in the refrigerator.

PASTA MARINARA

- Serves 2
- Pasta: 2 cups zucchini, squash or both
- 1/2 cup red or yellow bell pepper sliced into long thin pasta-like strips
- 1/2 cup Marinated Onion Rings (see recipe)
- 1/2 cup diced tomato
- 1/4 cup fresh basil, chopped
- 2 tbs. fresh oregano, chopped
- 1 tbs. fresh rosemary, de-stemmed and chopped
- 1/4 cup sun-dried tomatoes (for thicker sauce, add extra)
- 1/3 cup Marinated Portobello (see recipe)

- 1 tsp. minced jalapeno
- 1 tsp. minced garlic
- 1 tsp. minced ginger
- 1 tbs. lemon juice
- 1/4 cup minced shallots
- 1 recipe Exquisite Raw Marinara Sauce (see recipe)

With a vegetable peeler, shave zucchini and/or squash lengthwise into long, thin strips; when you've shaved all sides down to the soft and seedy center, slice the remaining portion into long strips.

In a serving bowl, combine zucchini and/or squash, bell pepper, Marinated Onion Rings, tomato, basil, oregano, rosemary, sun-dried tomatoes, Marinated Portobello, jalapeno, garlic, ginger, lemon juice and shallots. Set aside. Make a fresh batch of Marinara Sauce and pour it over the vegetable pasta.

Buffet: Serve roast fresh pork

The Associated Press

A "fresh ham" is an unsmoked pork hind leg, chef Frank Stitt writes in "Frank Stitt's Southern Table" (Artisan, 2004, $40). This recipe for roast fresh pork is among the cookbook's recipes and "gracious traditions," as the subtitle has it, from his Highland Bar and Grill. It's a dish that could well take pride of place on an Easter dinner table.

"A roast pork leg makes for a dramatic presentation, and it provides a vast amount of meat, making it perfect for a buffet," Stitt says. Be sure to remove the aitch bone for easy carving; your butcher can do this if you like, he points out.

Curing the pork in a brine for 24 hours adds both flavor and juiciness. "The brine recipe I provide comes from my friend Jeremiah Tower's book 'Jeremiah Cooks,'" Stitt says. Stitt is chef and owner of Highlands Bar and Grill, Cafe Bottega and Chez Fonfon, all in Birmingham, Ala., and won the 2003 James Beard Award for best chef of the Southwest. His cooking combines Southern traditions with Provencal flair.

ROAST FRESH PORK LEG WITH ONION AND BACON GRATIN

Makes 10 servings, with leftovers

For the brine:

- 2 gallons water
- 1 cup kosher salt
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 4 garlic cloves, crushed
- 1 tablespoon juniper berries, toasted (see note) and crushed
- 6 thyme sprigs, leaves removed
- 6 bay leaves
- 1/2 bunch flat-leaf parsley, leaves removed and chopped
- 4 dried hot chili peppers
- 2 lbs. freshly ground black pepper
- 1 tablespoon dried thyme
- 1 fresh pork leg (about 14 pounds), skinned, trimmed of fat, and aitch bone removed (have the butcher do this)

Onion and bacon gratin:
 2 tbs. unsalted butter, plus (optional) 1/2 tablespoon
 3 large yellow onions, quartered and sliced
 2 ounces slab bacon, cut into small lardons (1-by-1 1/4-inch-thick strips)

Six 1- to 2-inch-diameter spring onions with stems
 Kosher salt and freshly ground black pepper
 1 garlic clove, crushed
 2 tbs. freshly grated Parmigiano-Reggiano (Parmesan) cheese
 2 tbs. freshly grated Comte cheese or substitute Gruyere or Asiago mixed with a little Parmigiano-Reggiano
 1/2 cup medium-coarse bread crumbs
 1/2 cup heavy cream
 Preheat the oven to 425 F. In a large saute pan, melt 1 tablespoon of the butter over medium-high heat. Add the sliced yellow onions and bacon and cook until the onions are quite soft, 10 to 15 minutes. Transfer to a colander to drain. Meanwhile, trim the spring onions, then cut them, stems still attached, into 4 to 6 wedges each. Place the onions in the saute pan and add a pinch of salt and pepper, the remaining 1/2 tablespoon butter, and 2 tbs. water.

This photo provided by Artisan shows a Roast Fresh Pork Leg, a dish that could take pride of place on an Easter dinner table. The dish makes for a dramatic presentation, and provides a vast amount of meat, perfect for a buffet, says chef Frank Stitt of Highlands Bar and Grill, Birmingham, Ala. The recipe and photo are from his cookbook 'Frank Stitt's Southern Table.'

Bring to a simmer over high heat and cook until glazed, 5 to 7 minutes.

Rub the bottom and sides of a 10-inch gratin dish with the garlic. Scatter the cooked sliced onions and bacon on the bottom and season with salt and pepper. Top with a layer of the spring onion wedges. Scatter the grated cheeses evenly over the onions, then sprinkle the bread crumbs over the top. Pour the cream in along the edges of the gratin and dot the top with a little extra butter, if desired.

Bake until the gratin is golden and the cream is absorbed, about 25 minutes.

“A roast pork leg makes for a dramatic presentation, and it provides a vast amount of meat, making it perfect for a buffet.”

— Frank Stitt, chef

Combine water, salt, sugar, garlic, juniper, thyme, bay leaves, parsley, chili peppers, black pepper and thyme in a large pot and bring to a simmer, stirring until the salt and sugar are dissolved, then transfer to a deep pot. Place in the refrigerator to cool thoroughly before using.

Place the pork leg in the chilled brine, cover with plastic wrap, and refrigerate for 12 hours.

Turn the pork over in the brine and leave refrigerated for 12 hours more.

Remove the pork leg from the brine, wipe it dry, set it on a platter. Let it come to room temperature, about 1 hour. Preheat the oven to 325 F.

Place the pork in a large roasting pan. Roast until the internal temperature reaches 145 F to 150 F on an instant-read thermometer, about 4 hours. Remove from the oven and let the pork stand on a large rack set over a baking sheet for 30 minutes.

Serve the pork thinly sliced, with the gratin alongside.

FOOD & HOME

Books show home cooks top skills

By Barbara Albright
The Associated Press

WILTON, Conn. — Home cooks who take dessert very seriously, even if it's just to bake super cookies for the family, may get inspiration and dazzling glimpses of far higher achievement, as I did recently, from two books written by great professionals.

The first can prepare you to think like a pro and feel ready to tackle any dessert emergency. "Dessert University" by former White House pastry chef Roland Mesnier (Simon & Schuster, 2004, $40.00) offers "more than 300 spectacular recipes with technical lessons" and has much to teach the home cook.

The book, co-written with Lauren Chaitman, has 545 pages filled with more than 100 recipes and shows how the component parts come together to make show-stopping desserts.

This technique is a skill that many top-level pastry chefs use. At any given moment, they might have some ganache on hand, or maybe a bit of sweet pastry dough, a couple of cake layers in the freezer or a dollop of chocolate mousse. Armed with these, it is hardly any effort for the pros to turn them into something fabulous.

For the home baker it takes quite a bit more effort, and big pastry books with their lavish examples can be a little overwhelming, unless you relax and enjoy them for what they can show you.

Through a series of presentations from 1979, when Mesnier was hired by first lady Rosalynn Carter, until he retired in the summer of 2000, he made sure residents and guests at The White House never wanted for something to satisfy a sweet tooth.

This photo provided by Simon & Schuster shows Chocolate Chip Cookies, baked with a recipe from "Dessert University," a cookbook by former White House chef Roland Mesnier.

1 teaspoon baking soda
1/4 teaspoon salt
1 cup (2 sticks) unsalted butter, softened
1 cup granulated sugar
2/3 cup packed light brown sugar
2 large eggs
1/4 cup molasses
1 tablespoon pure vanilla extract

2 cups (one 12-ounce bag) chocolate chips
1 cup chopped walnuts

Combine the flour, baking soda, and salt in a medium mixing bowl.
In the bowl of an electric mixer fitted with the paddle attachment, cream together the butter, granulated sugar and brown sugar until thoroughly combined. Beat in the eggs, molasses and vanilla, scraping down the sides of the bowl once or twice as necessary. Stir in the flour mixture until just incorporated. Then stir in the chocolate chips and walnuts. Place the bowl in the refrigerator and allow the dough to chill for 1 hour.

Preheat the oven to 400 F. Line several baking sheets with parchment paper or Silpat pads. Drop heaping tablespoons or No. 40 ice-cream scoops of the dough 2 inches apart on the prepared baking sheets, flattening the slightly by hand. (Balls of dough may be placed next to each other on parchment-lined baking sheet, frozen, transferred to zipper-lock plastic bags, and stored in the freezer for up to 1 month. Place frozen cookies on prepared sheets as above, and defrost on the counter for 30 minutes before baking.)

Bake until just light golden, 8 to 10 minutes. Cool the cookies for 5 minutes on the baking sheets before using a metal spatula to transfer them to a wire rack to cool completely. Chocolate Chip Cookies will keep in an airtight container for 2 to 3 days.

A second recipe we enjoyed is the one for these Walnut Squares. This was an easy and satisfying recipe that one could make up to always have on hand in the freezer.

The recipe instructs you to cut the squares 1/4-inch thick. Make sure that you follow this directive as they will taste much better than if they are cut thicker. (On one test I was lazy, and the thicker cookies tasted a little doughy.)

WALNUT SQUARES

1 1/2 cups walnuts pieces
2 large egg whites, in separate bowls

Press on the salmon steaks to feel for the pin bones and remove them with your fingers or with pliers if they're stubborn.

In a large, nonstick frying pan, heat the oil over medium-high heat. Cook the steaks until just browned on one side; flip them, and brown the other side.

Remove the salmon from the pan; drain off the fat. In the same pan, cook the onion, carrots and garlic over medium-high heat until soft and slightly golden, about 7 minutes. Add the wine and 3/4 cup water to the pan to deglaze it. Put the salmon back in the pan, cover, and cook until done, another 10 to 12 minutes.

Remove the salmon from the pan, leaving the liquid and vegetables in the pan. Boil the sauce in the pan, cover, and cook until done, another 10 to 12 minutes. When steak is easier than stew

The Associated Press

Stews and braises featuring fish and vegetables are ideal for nights when you want something a little lighter yet still satisfying, and quicker to make than a meat stew.

This salmon, braised for half an hour or so in a herb broth, is among a variety of recipes, including soups, stews, pot roasts and side dishes, featured in "The Best of Fine Cooking: Comfort Food" (Taunton Press, $7.99), a newsstand-only special issue of the magazine.

"Braising the salmon infuses its flesh with the flavors of the aromatic vegetables and the wine," the editors say. "Once you get the hang of this simple technique, you can experiment with your own herb and vegetable combinations."

BRAISED SALMON STEAKS WITH CILANTRO

Makes 4 servings
4 salmon steaks (about 1/2 pound each)
2 tbs. olive oil

This photo provided by Taunton Press shows Braised Salmon Steak with Cilantro, a tasty dish easily made and offering a change of pace for cold-weather meals. The recipe is from "The Best of Fine Cooking: Comfort Foods."

1 onion, thinly sliced
3 medium carrots, peeled and sliced into thin rounds
2 cloves garlic, very finely chopped
3/4 cup dry white wine
2 tbs. chopped fresh cilantro
1 tbs. finely chopped fresh flat-leaf parsley
1 tbs. unsalted butter

Jerome rallies to down Buhl

Indians bounce back in Game 2 to force split

By Nathaniel Garrabrant Times-News writer

BUHL — On a blustery Tuesday afternoon in Buhl, the Jerome Tigers overcame the cold, blowing dust, and the pitching of Whitney Ordonez to hand the Indians their first loss of the season by the score of 4-3 in the opener of a non-conference doubleheader.

"It came down to defense," said Jerome softball coach Adam Reynolds whose team committed only a pair of errors to Buhl's six. "We just fielded the ball more than they did. When you've got two good pitchers that's what it going to come down to."

Indeed, and what it ultimately came down to was a single play.

With two outs at the top of the sixth, a drop ball on the third strike compounded by an errant throw to first allowed Vanessa Williams to reach first and two Tigers runs to reach home and tie the game at 2-2.

Then Chelsey Craig stepped up and hit an RBI single for a 4-3 lead which was preserved by alert defensive plays and pitcher McKenzie Mangum, who allowed no hits over the final three innings.

"It was really intense at the end," said Mangum. "We all really stepped up. I did pretty good. Sometimes I didn't hit my spots, but I'm pleased."

Leading off at the bottom of the sixth, Ordonez, who already had two RBIs from the first inning, looked to spark a Buhl rally, reaching first off of an error at third.

However, she'd be the last Indian to leave the plate as Jerome second baseman Kristine Petersen and first baseman Kim Ward combined for a double play on the next at bat.

Though the remainder of the contest went to Mangum's clutch play, early on it was Ordonez who brought the heat, striking out seven batters in the first four innings.

"It took me a while to figure out the pitching," said Reynolds.

Buhl shortstop Jamie VanPatten steals second base after the ball comes loose from Jerome shortstop Jennifer Bamburg during Game 1 of their nonconference girls softball doubleheader in Buhl Tuesday.

Three innings to be exact. With two down at the top of the third, the Tigers bats finally began making meaningful contact, as Mangum hit a single to join Craig on base, who'd garnered a leadoff walk.

Jennifer Bamburg was hit by a pitch to load the bases, only to have Ordonez recover, striking out Kim Ward on three pitches.

Though the Tigers' third-inning pressure didn't put runs on the board, it seemed to instill a sense of unease in the hosts, as errors and missed opportunities over the final four innings allowed Jerome to put its foot in the door and, eventually, take the game.

The Tigers picked up where they left off in Game 2, jumping out to a 4-0 lead in the top of the first. But Buhl regrouped with a pair of runs in the bottom of the inning and seven in the fifth for a 12-5 win in a darkness-shortened game.

Janna Lively and Jamie VanPatten both had doubles for the Indians, who returned the favor in handling Jerome's first loss.

The Jaynie Goodbody farewell tour

By Eric Larsen Times-News writer

WENDELL — Oh, Jaynie Goodbody is back for the Wendell Trojans! They'll be just fine. The area's top female track athlete is back for her senior season before heading to Stanford University on a scholarship. To say Goodbody has been dominant would be an understatement. Over the last four years, she's had more gold dinged around her neck than Mr. T.

Nationally, she was named an Indoor High School All-American after her second-place finish in the pentathlon at the National Scholastic Indoor Championships last weekend in New York City. She's a three-time Class 2A state champion in the 100- and 200-meter sprints, as well as the defending high-jump champion and final leg of the Trojans' 2004 state championship relay team.

"We're trying to rebuild the program and Jaynie will be the forefront of that," said Trojans head coach Steve Goodbody, also her father. "The question will be whether she competes in, being a multi-event athlete. She can do quite a few different things, so that will be an interesting part of our season."

The Trojan boys won the past four Canyon Conference championships and have a solid but young group of 35 athletes to work with.

Junior T.J. King returns after placing sixth at state in the discus, as do state qualifiers James Carrillo and Jose Salazar.

The Valley Vikings boys return a number of solid athletes. Seniors Chad Anderson and Jace Johnson are returning state qualifiers. They are juniors Austin Suggs and Domingo Orzoza.

The Vikings girls will be especially tough in the distance events, led by standouts Megan Bullers and Lisa Roemer. Candice Callen returns after qualifying for state in the hurdles, while Kyndra Barnes, Chelsea Johnson, Lindsey Wood, and Natalie Hanson all return after trips to state in 2004.

The Glenns Ferry track program has to battle for numbers against the schools' more established baseball and softball offerings, but the Pilots always field a number of solid competitors. Senior Sheila Olsen is a three-year state qualifier who returns in the 100-, 400-meter dash, long jump, and high jump.

Class 3A
The Gooding Senators return strong this Sawtooth Central Idaho Conference track season, especially in the girls sprints and the boys distance events. Gooding returns three out of four members of its 4x100-meter relay team: Ashley Abramovics, Kalynn Pereira, and Brittanee Toone.

"Our girls are pretty strong," Senators coach Kent Seifert said. "Ashley is really fast and returning our relay teams is pretty exciting."

On the boys side, state qualifying distance runners Kurt Nelson and Tyler Pickens return, as does hurdler Matt Metcalf.

"We had kind of a setback when Brad Allison broke his collarbone in three places skiing," Seifert said. "He's our fastest kid, but we have a lot of good young kids. It's amazing how much last year's freshman class has grown up. All our sophomores are 6-foot, 6-foot-2, and fast. They remind me of good high schoolers."

Seifert also got a nice surprise for his boys team when football player Brad Allison broke his collarbone in three places skiing. "Please see SMALL, Page D2"

Bruin girls as good as advertised

By Eric Larsen Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Here's what we know about the Twin Falls Bruins' track team: they're still fast, they're still deep, and they're still young.

How that all translates for the boys and girls teams that both took second place at last year's Shaker Bowl meet is anybody's guess this year though. In all, the Bruins return 18 state qualifiers, including Boise State-bound Aspen Clontz and blazingly fast junior Brody Miller.

The girls team may have the best shot at repeating or improving on last year's results, as Clontz is joined by quality sprinters Brittany Ward, Adri Browning, Jenny Sullivan, and Megan Miller. Chelsea and Ashley Lyons will be competitive in the hurdles, as will Rigi Olandez. Shaker Bowl's is a strong distance runner, while Amy Bratvold is a solid triple jumper and Hannah Heldenreich returns after qualifying in the shot put last year.

"The girls will be really competitive," Bruins head coach Marty Grindstaff said. "We have so many state qualifiers back. On the boys side, we graduated a lot of sprinters last year, so we're filling the holes and running a lot of young kids."

Miller and the boys squad in the sprints, while Brandon McNew returns in the high and triple jumps. Joel Ruprecht is the Bruins' top returning distance runner, while Brandon Stokes and Justin Durley look to carve out their own niche in the sprints and relays. Brandon Denny is the first Twin Falls athlete to compete in the pole vault in a number of years.

"Brody is a quality kid that's going to get a lot of points in the open sprints," Grindstaff said. "Ruprecht has been sick and he needs to get healthy, but he'll come on toward the end of the year. He was a sub 2-minute half-mile last year at state."

The Bruins put 111 athletes on their preseason roster, so they'll have plenty to work with. However, leadership will come at a premium, as there are only 17 seniors on the roster. The Bruins' talented junior class will have to step up if the Twin Falls athletic program is going to make another run at a state title.

Oakland wins NCAA play-in

The Associated Press

DAYTON, Ohio — It took eight years in Division I for Oakland to get its first win in the NCAA tournament.

As a reward, the Golden Grizzlies got the top-seeded North Carolina — in Charlotte, no less.

Oakland broke open a tight game behind Rawley Marshall's 28 points and Corney Scott's 21 to beat Alabama A&M 79-69 Tuesday night in the opening round of the NCAA tournament at the University of Dayton.

Seniors who can say they won a game in the NCAA tournament, a grinning Marshall said. "We'll ride this momentum and see how far it takes us."

The Golden Grizzlies (13-18) won their sixth game in a row, including three upsets in as many days last week by a combined seven points to take the Mid-Continent Conference title, giving them a berth in the field of 65.

"If we win the national championship, we'll finally get to 19-18," coach Greg Kampe said with a laugh.

Now they get to play the Tar Heels on their home turf. Oakland became only the fifth team with a losing record to win an NCAA tournament game, following Bradley in 1955 and the last three years at the Dayton opening round. Siena in 2002, UNC Asheville in 2003 and Florida A&M a year ago.

"There was a whole lot of adversity during the season," said Brandon Cassie, who shipped in with 15 points. "It brought us together. That's why we were able to win in all these out-of-the-ordinary places."

Ole Trotter scored 24 points and Joseph Martin added 22 for Alabama A&M (18-14), regular-season and tournament champion of the Southwestern Athletic Conference. As the Golden Grizzlies stretched the lead to 21 points with 5 minutes left, the emboldened Oakland student section began chanting. "We want Tar Heels! We want Tar Heels!"

Twin Falls high sophomore Brandon McNew clears the high jump during a meet in Rupert last season.

CSI baseball sweeps

The Times-News

ONTARIO, Ore. — The College of Southern Idaho baseball team got a little revenge on non-conference foe Treasure Valley Community College with a 6-1, 6-2 road sweep over the Chukars on Tuesday.

CSI (13-12), which split a series with TVCC (2-5) last week in Twin Falls, used strong pitching in Game 1 to earn the win. Chukars' pitcher, the team's usual closer, got the start, allowing just one run and the Chukars lone hit in three innings pitched.

Shawn has been our closer, but we just have not been able to get him into games," CSI head coach Boomer Walker said. "We wanted to get him out there and get him some innings.

Tim Mealer got the starting nod for CSI and came through with four hits and one run while walking none and striking out two in four innings.

"It's a guy who's a high-energy guy who's been throwing better for us," Walker said. "We wanted to get him in there in a starting role because we just didn't know who our fourth starter is."

CSI hosts the Community College of Southern Nevada for a pair of scenic West Albion baseball games on Friday and Saturday at 1 p.m. and on beginning at 11 a.m.

Peter needs committed family, strong role model

"I play basketball, football and team sports. My favorite subjects in school are PE, lunch, life-skills and after-school activities. I like all periods (classes), though. For him I like to hang out with my friends after school and go to movies, maybe play basketball or football play too."

Wednesday's Child

Peter Age 14

"I'd like a family that would do things after school, like let me go to the community center and shoot around. A good dad would take me out to play sports with me. A good mom would help me with homework or would help me with pretty much anything else." Peter would respond to a strong male role model in his life. He would also like a family who would support a continuing relationship with his sisters, grandma, aunts and uncles. Being the middle or older child also appeals to Peter. Peter is available for adoption through the state of Washington. For information, please call the North West Adoption Exchange at 1-800-927-9411.

High-speed Internet comes to Gooding

GOODING — Qwest Communications International Inc. on Tuesday announced that its high-speed Internet service, Gooding, is now available in Gooding as a result of the company's investment to upgrade the local telecommunications network.

DSL provides a high-speed, dedicated connection that provides immediate access to the Internet.

Qwest said it has invested about $300 million over the past two years to expand DSL access in its 14-state region. The company can now offer high-speed Internet access to more than 6.6 million households, or 67 percent of households with service in the 14-state local service area.

Qwest's expansion of DSL into Gooding offers residents and businesses the high-speed Internet that others in larger cities have become accustomed to using. I believe the citizens of Gooding will enjoy and benefit from the convenience this service offers them, Idaho Sen. Clint Stennett said in a Qwest statement.

Qwest representatives plan a public demonstration of the DSL service from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday at Coyote Joe's Coffee Shop, 425 Main St. in Gooding.

Longview declares quarterly dividend

TWIN FALLS — Longview Fibre Co., the Washington-based operator of a Twin Falls container plant, on Tuesday declared a regular quarterly cash dividend of 2 cents per share on the company's common stock, payable April 8 to shareholders of record March 24.

The company also said it has retained Goldman Sachs to assist it in evaluating whether "converting Longview Fibre to a public investment trust would benefit shareholders."

Today's board approval of a modest regular quarterly dividend reflects confidence in the improving operating profitability of cash flow and is also consistent with our continued emphasis on reducing long-term debt," President and Chief Executive Officer Richard H. Wollenberg said in a statement. In addition, our retention of Goldman Sachs to evaluate the company's operating structure reflects our desire to manage the company for the long-term value of Longview Fibre shareholders.

He said the company expect to conclude that evaluation by the end of fiscal 2005.

Former CEO faces charges

The Associated Press

DENVER — The Securities and Exchange Commission charged former Qwest Communications CEO Joseph Nacchio and six other executives Tuesday with orchestrating a "massive financial fraud" at the telecommunications company that concealed the source of billions of dollars in revenue later wiped off the books.

The civil lawsuit blamed Nacchio and others for creating a "culture of fear" and putting enormous pressure on employees to meet revenue and earnings goals through bogus sales procedures that became an addiction.

The suit is the most dramatic development yet in the government's three-year investigation of Denver-based Qwest Communications International Inc., the primary local phone provider in Idaho and 13 other Western states. It was filed hours after former WorldCom CEO Bernard Ebbers was convicted in New York of engineering a multibillion-dollar accounting scheme at his Mississippi telecom.

The SEC said the fraud at Qwest occurred between April 1999 and March 2002, allowing it to improperly report about $3 billion in revenue that was later restated and helping its 2000 merger with U.S. West.

Among other things, the SEC said Qwest repeatedly booked revenue from one-time sales while falsely claiming to investors that the income was recurring. It said the defendants reaped tens of millions in profits for themselves while they covered up the scheme from investors and the public.

Also named in the SEC's complaint were former chief financial officers Robert Woodruff and Robin Szellig; former Chief Operating Officer Afshin Mohebbi; Gregory Casey, a former executive vice president of Qwest's wholesale business; and James Kozlowski and Frank Noyes, two former executives.

The SEC described Nacchio, Woodruff and Szellig as the scheme's overseers, directing the key details to meet revenue targets "at all costs."

At one point in 2001, regulators said, Nacchio told employees that "the most im-

Albertsons profit drops after slow

business

By John Miller
Associated Press Writer

BOISE — Albertsons Inc., the No. 2 U.S. supermarket chain, plans to expand a cost-cutting program after 2004 earnings tumbled, a 20 percent, hurt by hurricanes in Florida, sluggish business in Southern California and Texas and changes in lease accounting.

QUARTERLY REPORT

Net income for the year ended Feb. 3 at Boise-based Albertsons slipped to $444 million, or $1.19 per share, from $556 million, or $1.51.

Sales rose 13.6 percent to $39.9 billion as the company benefited from purchases of Shaw's in the northeastern U.S. and Bristol Farms in the Los Angeles area.

In Twin Falls, Albertsons has delayed construction of a new store without announcing its reasons or a new schedule for construction.

The company, which has reduced costs since 2001 by more than $1 billion, plans to save another $250 million by the end of its 2006 fiscal year. It did not give details of how it would reduce expenses.

In 2004, Albertsons was forced to intensify investments in its southern California and Texas markets because business was more difficult than executives had anticipated.

The fourth quarter also included a non-cash expense of $3 million related to a change in lease accounting, amid pressure from the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission regulators for companies to correct such figures.

"We were not pleased with the performance we turned in during the fourth quarter," said Chief Executive Officer Larry Johnson in a statement on the company's Web site. "We missed our earnings targets and that is unacceptable."

Albertson missed targets for earnings at continuing businesses because it revised less than a month ago.

On Feb. 25, it slashed its forecast by about 8 percent to $1.29 to $1.31 cents per share. It did not report just $1.28 per share at continuing businesses.

Fourth-quarter earnings advanced 49 percent to $194 million as Shaw's and Bristol Farms businesses added profits and the company had an extra week compared with the year-earlier period.

The company forecast that first-quarter earnings from continuing operations will be diluted $1.33 and $1.43 per diluted share, as sales at existing stores rise.

The $0.04 per share cost of expensing stock options.

Comparable and identical-store sales are expected to be "positive" for the full year, Albertsons said.

The WTO ruling said Brussels had "not succeeded in rebutting the EU's claim that the EU was not guilty of wide-ranging breaches.

The ruling found fault with some parts of Brussels' current ruling. It said cheese made produced in their original region can carry certain well-known labels — something the EU says is needed to give customers a quality guarantee.

Under the system, only ham produced using traditional methods near the Italian city of Parma can be called Parma ham. The cheese must come from its native region in southern France and Madeira wine from the Portuguese island of the same name.

Letting U.S. Trade Representative Peter Altmeyer praised the ruling.

Employees give Jayco Inc. high marks

By Megan Hinds

TWIN FALLS — If the success of a company can be predicted by the satisfaction of its employees, recreational trailer manufacturer Jayco Inc. should enjoy a prosperous future in Twin Falls.

The Middlebury, Ind.-based maker of travel trailers and fifth-wheel campers opened its doors to the public Tuesday for a ribbon cutting that celebrated the first trailer made at the plant, 621 Washington St. S. The event took place just seven months after Jayco announced plans to find a location to build a Western manufacturing plant.

"It's a very, very good day for Jayco," Jim Jacobs, Jayco's vice president of sales and marketing, told a crowd of about 100, including members of Magic Valley's business community and state and local officials.

"Those included Gov. Dirk Kempthorne, who lauded Jayco's executives and management staff for choosing to locate the plant in Twin Falls, as well as state and local economic development officials for their work

About Jayco

Company history: Recreational vehicle manufacturer Jayco Inc. was founded in 1969 in Middlebury, Ind., by Lloyd Bontger. Several members of the Bontger family, including President and Chief Operating Officer Donald L. Bontger and Chief Executive Officer and Chairman Wilbur Bontger, are involved in the company's day-to-day operations.

Jayco makes campers, trailers, travel trailers, fifth wheel campers, sports utility trailers and small motor homes under a variety of brands. The company is privately owned by the Bontgers.

Size and sales: The third-largest North American producer of RVs, Jayco employs about 1,200 people at its 4.5 million-square-foot headquarters and main manufacturing plant in Middlebury.

Jayco produces more than 27,000 RV units in its 2004 model year and plans to build about 34,000 RVs in 2005. Jayco's RVs are sold and serviced at about 300 dealers in the United States and Canada, including Brockman's RV Sales in Jerome.

The company also has an Australian affiliate, Jayco Caravan Manufacturing, which employs 550 people and produces 40 percent of Australia's RVs. Annual revenue: About $450 million.

Number of workers: The company has more than 1,400 total workers.

The Twin Falls plant has 34 employees now and plans to grow to a staff of 80 within the year.

Source: Jayco Inc.

company has more than 1,000 trailers for sale waiting to be filled.

"The RV industry is a dynamic, rapidly growing business," Bontger said. "Most experts predict market growth for the RV industry for the next 10 to 15 years."

The West is the fastest-growing region of the country in terms of population growth, and it's also the region that's seeing the most growth in recreational vehicle sales, Jacobs said. That makes Twin Falls a perfect location for the company's Western expansion, he said.

"This will allow Jayco to grow," Jacobs said. "We hope Jayco Idaho will allow us to move our operational capacity closer to the market we serve."

After the ceremony, Jayco's Twin Falls plant employees were eager to show off the assembly line and ramp up production to nine per day by fall, Bontger said.

Family touts alternative farming

The Associated Press

UNIONTOWN — A northern Idaho farming family will battle drought- and high-fuel-prices this summer with a no-till farming system that it says will save scarce resources.

Dan Wolf and his sons, Frank and Ben, farm between Uniontown and Geneseo.

Their farming method drills seed and fertilizer directly into ground that has not been plowed.

The method is used by other farmers in the area, but the Wolfs say they're the only family that uses a no-till method on all of its cropland.

In New Zealand, allows them get around the stubble and plant seeds directly into the ground cutting an upside-down T-shaped cross-slot that shoots seed and fertilizer into the soil.

The cost to begin and support this system is similar to what farmers pay for other no-till drill systems — about $150,000. And while the no-till method remains controversial among farmers because it delays plowing and could make weeds harder to control, it has proven efficient for the Wolfs, despite the fact they have to spray for weeds.

The Wolfs have used the no-till system, in some fashion, since 1998 and found they were saving money by not having to drive equipment across the field several times in the spring to prepare the land for planting. "We spent more money on diesel fuel harvesting the crop than planting the crop," Dan Wolf said.

Frank Wolf said that although the stubble keeps his field colder at the beginning of spring, once the fields do warm up and the seeds germinate, the organic matter from the leftover stubble makes the ground retain 14 times the moisture and five times more oxygen compared with other drill systems.

The Wolfs have reported winter wheat yields ranging up to 125 bushels an acre, spring wheat as high as 95 bushels an acre and 5,300 pounds per acre on spring barley.

The family said more farmers should consider no-till and minimum-till methods considering higher fuel costs and the need to conserve moisture and topsoil.

"We feel more confident with this system than with conventional systems," Frank Wolf said. "In fact, we're hoping to see it as the future of farming."

Both sides claim victory in WTO fight over names

The Associated Press

GENEVA — Both sides claimed victory Tuesday in a trade fight pitting the United States and Australia against the European Union, centering on the right of foreign exporters to use geographic food names such as Florida oranges or Idaho potatoes to describe their products in European markets.

A World Trade Organization panel released a ruling on Washington and Canberra's complaints against the 25-nation EU, which were launched on the same grounds.

The United States and Australia claimed that the EU was breaching the rules of global commerce by discriminating against their producers by not granting them the right to use "geographical indications" for their products.

But the WTO ruling said Brussels had "not succeeded in rebutting the EU's claim that the EU was not guilty of wide-ranging breaches.

The ruling found fault with some parts of Brussels' current ruling. It said cheese made produced in their original region can carry certain well-known labels — something the EU says is needed to give customers a quality guarantee.

MONEY

Pay at the pump, save elsewhere

By James A. Fussell Knight Rider News Service

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Talk about gas pains. If analysts are right, because of rising oil prices, we'll pay an extra $100 this year just to drive around. It's enough to get you down every time you fill up.

But up drivers you can do more. We're going to recap that money — and much more. Sure, there are the old strategies of carpooling, taking the bus or garaging that gas guzzler. Most of us want to save money, right? So we've looked beyond transportation to find other ways to save that $100 and more. These tips just may make the price at the pump a little less painful.

1. Take your lunch to work. If you usually spend $7 on lunch, replacing just two of those lunches from home that costs around a dollar will save you more than $500 a year.

2. Buy a programmable thermostat. Most are less than $50. Unless you're the most disciplined thermostat hawk on the planet, it will quickly pay for itself by eliminating wasteful heating and cooling cycles when you're out or asleep. Every degree you lower your thermostat in winter, or raise it in summer, can save you 1 percent on your energy bill, says John Walker, a spokesman for Kansas Gas Service. On a monthly bill of $120, that's a savings of $12 a month, or $144 a year. Save more with every degree you change.

3. You can get the finest setback thermostat money can buy, but if you have an energy-efficient home, it's a moot point. Walker said. Install storm doors and windows.

caulk around drafty places and make sure your attic is properly insulated with R-30 insulation.

4. Check your water heater. The average water heater is the largest energy sucker in the home. Set it on medium, a more-than-adequate 120 degrees, instead of the very high 140 degrees, and save another 1 percent of your bill, Walker said.

5. If you have a water heater in an unfinished or unheated space, wrap it in an insulation blanket and cover the first few feet of the pipe coming out of the tank with a foam sleeve or fiberglass insulation.

6. Take shorter showers and install energy-efficient showerheads. Energysave.com gives this example: If you take a five-minute shower with an energy-efficient showerhead, compared to a 10-minute daily shower with an inefficient one, you can save as much as 48 gallons of water a day.

7. That could add up to as much as 17,500 gallons of water a year. Multiply by, say, four people in your house, and that's 70,000 gallons saved a year.

8. Find second-hand items. There is no limit on quantity, you can use items before the expiration date and you have enough storage.

9. Use the Internet to find the lowest price. Compare prices on sites such as Yahoo Shopping and Sam's Club; discount air, travel and hotel sites such as Hotwire and Priceline; and auction sites such as eBay and U-Bid. Don't assume discount stores are cheaper.

8. Buy generic. It's cheaper, but beware. Not all are good quality. Some brands are worth the extra money. Others differ in name only. For example, unless it's buffered or coated, aspirin is aspirin. Check expiration dates before buying.

9. Pay off credit cards each month. If you have to run a balance, get a card with a low-fixed interest rate, no less than 4.9 percent. Many store credit cards charge double-digit rates. Do a temporary interest rate.

10. On family car trips, instead of staying at a hotel, take sandwiches, snacks and drinks in a cooler. Save hundreds.

11. Tape TV movies. For each movie, you save $2 to $4. Plus, you can keep them as long as you want without any late fees. And don't forget libraries, which have a large, free selection.

12. Don't be afraid to admit your age. If you are 50 or older you could save as hundreds of places that offer senior discounts. You may have to belong to AARP to be eligible.

13. As a new washer, consider a front-loading model. They use 50 percent less energy and one-third less water, consumer experts say. Plus, they remove far more water in the rinse cycle, which translates into big savings in dryer time.

14. And finally, there are myosins on gasoline, slow down. If you just have to save money on gasoline, slow down. The faster you'll need to fill up.

Group sues to halt Wal-Mart construction

CENTERVILLE, Utah — A group has filed a lawsuit to prevent construction of a Wal-Mart Supercenter in Centerville.

The South Davis Regional Community Foundation, co-founded by former Centerville resident David Putnam Jr., filed the lawsuit in 2nd District Court in Farmington.

"We feel it's a very important cause to preserve the character of the special community of Centerville," Putnam said.

"And we don't feel a huge Super-Wal-Mart right in the middle of the community would be suitable for the community."

Putnam said the board of adjustment should not have granted a permit for the project because of the traffic and safety concerns outlined in studies.

He said it should not have such a large store in a small city with one free-way interchange.

"We have 2,100 schoolchildren in Centerville," City Manager Steve Thacker does not expect that the lawsuit will prevent the project from going forward.

Wal-Mart officials are hoping to receive a final approval from city leaders in April for a site plan and a development agreement with the parties.

American Express CEO gets $6M bonus in 2004

WASHINGTON — American Express CEO, paid Chairman and CEO Kenneth Chenault a bonus of $6 million for 2004, up from $5.5 million for 2003.

Chenault also received a base salary of $1 million, unchanged from the previous year, according to company's proxy statement filed Tuesday with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The financial services and travel company's financial advisers serving Magic Valley said the bonus was based on the company's 2004 results, which exceeded long-term targets.

The New York City company also granted Chenault about $3 million in restricted stock in 2004, up from the $887,345 he received in 2003.

The company's proxy posted 2004 net income of $3.4 billion or $2.68 per share, up 15 percent from 2003. Return on equity was 22 percent, and 2004 revenues rose 13 percent to $29 billion.

HP will offer voluntary severance pay in sites

NAMPA — Hewlett-Packard Co. is reorganizing its Imaging and Personal Systems Group, but company representatives declined to discuss how many employees may be affected.

Corporate spokeswoman Brigita Bengkamp confirmed that a voluntary severance initiative will be offered to employees at the larger sites, including Boise.

"We will shift our people as we have a new organizational structure to be even more effective," she said.

The Boise HP site employs about 4,000 workers and is the second largest in the region. An employer with a $290 million annual payroll.

Workers eligible for the severance plan will receive information about the initiative three weeks to decide whether they want to take the offer.

The refusal to say whether layoffs were the next step.

"We are looking at the voluntary severance initiative first before anything," Bengkamp said.

No details on the severance package were available.

The Boise site is home to the LaserJet printer, the firm's single-most successful product.

Fight

"It's a clear win for American farmers and food processors. For years, Europe effectively had a 'Do Not Apply' sign directed at foreign producers," he said.

"We believed that, under WTO rules, U.S. ethanol, ranchers and other food producers should have the same access to protection for geographical indications as European food products, and that the European system discriminated against us," said Aligier.

The WTO said was first rejected confidentially by the United States, Australia and the EU in December, but some details emerged then and both sides likewise claimed a win.

U.S. officials said the ruling would help producers of oranges and other citrus products from Florida, Texas and California, potatoes from Idaho and onions from Vidalia, Ga. EU officials said they were looking forward to including such products in its system.

"I am very pleased with this ruling and look forward to working together with all WTO members to strengthen the protection of quality agricultural production," said EU Agriculture Commissioner Mariann Fischer-Buelc.

The EU system currently lists 700 products — all from Europe.

Jayco

Continued from E1. Jayco employees say they're happy with their jobs, thanks to the company's family-friendly work atmosphere and incentive bonuses for workers.

These are the best jobs we've had here for a long time," said employee Julie Wells of Twin Falls, whose job involves applying decals to the outside of the trailers.

"I'm glad to see about my daughter; add fellow employee Johnny Moreno. Area economic development leaders celebrated the opening as a positive sign for the future of Twin Falls' light manufacturing industry."

Certainly having a company the quality and caliber of Jayco is wonderful for the community," said Dave McLindlin, Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce director.

"By doing that work, it stimulates the economy," he said. Kempthorne applauded the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce and Twin Falls City Council for sending letters to legislators supporting his plan.

Kempthorne touts GARVEE funding

TWIN FALLS - Kempthorne used a portion of his $45 million Kootenai County budget to recruit out-of-state members of the Twin Falls' business community to support his "Connecting Idaho" proposal.

The governor has proposed issuing GARVEE bonds to finance the bridge, but high-use roads and highways throughout the state and paying the principal, interest and other debt service costs with anticipated future tax revenue.

The plan includes a proposed third bridge over the Snake River Canyon about halfway between Twin Falls and Burley. More estimates for the bridge would cost about $184 million.

Improvements if the proposal passes matter with legislators. The proposed infrastructure is a proactive way to make Idaho more attractive to employers looking to locate in the state.

"By doing that work, it stimulates the economy," he said. Kempthorne applauded the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce and Twin Falls City Council for sending letters to legislators supporting his plan.

Qwest

Continued from E1. Qwest is seeking a court order that all seven repay an amount to be determined at trial and civil penalties and that would include interest.

The SEC is seeking a court order that all seven repay an amount to be determined at trial and civil penalties and that would include interest.

Charles Stillman, an attorney for Nachco, said his client had never misrepresented Qwest's financial condition.

Qwest's SEC suit unfairly seeks to impose to Mr. Nachco and others at Qwest responsibility for the results of a widespread industry downturn in a deteriorating economy," Stillman said. "As Mr. Nachco has consistently stated, he did nothing wrong and did not instruct anyone else to do anything wrong during his tenure at Qwest, and he looks forward to being vindicated."

Kozlowski's attorney, Kevin Evans, said the charges are "as sensational as they are insupportable." He said the SEC declined in 1999 to provide guidance on how to account for fiber-optic capacity swaps, one of the keys in the lawsuit.

Attorneys for the other former executives could not immediately be reached for comment. A Qwest spokesman, Steve Hammack, said the allegations involve long-age events that no longer concern the company.

The SEC also sent charges with five other former Qwest officials. SEC spokesman Don Hoerl declined comment on whether the agency is finished investigating the case, though a spokesman for the U.S. attorney's office in Denver said the government's criminal investigation was continuing.
