Fuel prices pinch schools

By Karin Kowalski
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — High fuel prices are eating into the budgets of several south-central Idaho school districts and bus companies.
"It's horrible; it's expensive," said Pam Wade, business manager for the Cassia County School District, which runs buses on 48 routes each day.
She's already increased this year's fuel budget by about 60 percent, adding $64,000 to keep buses running. She said spending on fuel went up 24 percent from February to March and 42 percent from January to March.
In Twin Falls, prices hovered Wednesday around $2.25 per gallon for unleaded gasoline, while diesel fuel was at $2.49 per gallon. School superintendents often cite fuel prices as one of the factors squeezing school budgets.

"Fuel impacts us directly," said Mel Wiseman, superintendent of the Shoshone School District.
Shoshone runs buses on six regular routes. It also has two buses for activities. The district budgeted $18,000 for fuel for the fiscal year that ends July 1, but already it has spent $16,000, Wiseman said.
Next year, if fuel prices remain high, Wiseman said the district will take a hard look at budgets and might have to do

Twin Falls canal opens for season

By Michelle Dunlop
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The hoisting of the headgates — a ceremony to commence Twin Falls Canal Company's centennial irrigation season — didn't exactly lift spirits Wednesday morning.
The water season's hazy outlook and the unanswered water call seemed to take precedence over what would normally be a joyous occasion — the ruin of water through Twin Falls Canal Company's system on its way to meet the demands of eager irrigators. Canal company board members and shareholders gathered for the annual ceremony on Wednesday morning at the Forks — the site south of Hansen where the Mainline Canal splits into the Highline and Loveline canals.
"It's a wonderful sight, isn't it?" said Vince Alberdi, manager of the canal company, as water poured through each of the three gates.
Alberdi estimates that Twin Falls Canal Company users can expect deliveries next week. Fill-ling those deliveries was the focus for both Alberdi and canal company chairman Dan Shevemaker.

"The water supply is close to what we had last year," Shevemaker said.
However, Shevemaker noted the importance of summer temperatures in the water mix. A hot, dry summer would make the prospect for Twin Falls Canal Company users pretty rough, he said. However, if temperatures remain mild similar to last year, the prognosis might be better.
Irrigators can take some comfort in increased precipitation in the area above Jackson Lake during March — precipitation that has not yet turned to runoff, said Mike Beus, a Snake River water manager with the Bureau of Reclamation in Burley.
"The water district predicted a little more fill than the year before," Beus said.

Although March was a better month for the area in terms of precipitation, it still didn't provide enough moisture to change the water picture much, he said.
"We didn't keep up with average, but we didn't get too far behind either," Beus said.
Bruce Bulcher, a canal company shareholder who farms in the Kimberly-Hansen area, found the news about Jackson Lake encouraging.
"It sounds like the water condition has improved," he said.
Bulcher planned for half-linch deliveries instead of the five-fifths he will receive from Twin Falls Canal Co. As a result, Bulcher may plant seed beans — something he didn't think he would have enough water to do.
"Managing the irrigation system has been a very taxing en-

The water call weighed heavily on board member Phil Bluck's mind. While Bluck and Alberdi speculated the call wouldn't help much this year, Bluck focused on the future.

Dalai Lama will visit, may strain services in Sun Valley

By John Miller
Associated Press writer

BOISE — Sun Valley is used to hosting hundreds of thousands of visitors annually, but a planned Sept. 11 visit by the Dalai Lama could draw 100,000 for one event — and that has law enforcement and tourism officials scrambling.
Details such as visitor housing and security loom large.
The Nobel Peace Prize-winning spiritual leader of Tibetan Buddhists will visit the famous mountain resort community on the fourth anniversary of the terrorist attacks that rocked America.

Walt Felling, the sheriff of rural Blaine County, met visit organizers Wednesday accompanied by officials including his disaster services coordinator.
"We listened to their presentation and we'll start working with them on the concept of the Dalai Lama coming materializes," Felling said in an interview. He said he fears the event could dominate his officers' time in coming months.
"I told them, 'I want a public information officer,'" he said. "This is not my event."

According to a tentative schedule, the Dalai Lama will speak at a land preserve owned by The Nature Conservancy, located south of Sun Valley near the tiny town of Picabo, population 50.
They will helicopter His Holiness to the site, down the long silver of valley and high mountains, to this open space filled with thousands of waiting people," according to a statement provided to the Associated Press by the local visitors bureau.

On Sept. 12, he'll meet U.S. business leaders in a private session, followed by an afternoon visit with as many as 12,000 Idaho children.
Finally, on Sept. 13, he is scheduled to bless a Tibetan prayer wheel in a ceremony in nearby Ketchum.
The Buddhist leader lives in exile in India and leads Tibetans who have resisted half a century of Chinese rule. A call to his New York Office to discuss why he chose Sun Valley for the Sept. 11 anniversary visit was not immediately returned Wednesday.
"When you are in the presence of the Dalai Lama, it's a great experience," said a spokesman for the event.

Kidnapped contractor pleads for life on video

Los Angeles Times

BAGHDAD — Iraq — A kidnapped American subcontractor was identified Wednesday after he was shown on Arab satellite television pleading for his life on a day when bomb blasts killed 16 Iraqis.
Al-Jazeera news channel broadcast a videotape of a man that U.S. officials confirmed was Jeffrey Ake, 47, of La Porte, Ind., sitting between three armed and masked men. Ake, chief executive of a mid-sized water-bottling machinery manufacturer, was kidnapped Tuesday while visiting a factory in northern Baghdad, said a source familiar with the incident.

Ake held up what appeared to be a picture of his family and, according to the television announcer, asked U.S. officials to save his life by withdrawing troops from Iraq.
Ake's entreaty came on a day when explosions rocked the cities of Kirkuk and Baghdad.
Iraqis guarding a Kirkuk oil pipeline were attempting to defuse a bomb when an explosion killed at least 11 members of the Facilities Protection Service. Dr. Mohammed Bakir of Kirkuk General Hospital reported that eight others were injured in the blast.
"After we were sure that we had defused the bomb that was planted under the pipe in the area," he said.

Papal possibilities spur brisk betting

Los Angeles Times

CASTELNUOVO DI STORIA, Italy — A book of numbers at his side, a pendulum in his pocket and his wife upstairs plotting astrological charts, Fabrizio Scamici grades that the next pope will come from South America.
"I held the pendulum over a map for 30 minutes and it drifted south," said Scamici, known in Italian gossip pages as a numerologist skilled at playing the lottery using the birthdays of saints. As a man, I think the pope should come from Asia because of all the poverty. But as a professional, my numbers and instincts tell me South America."
Cardinals will enter the Sixtine Chapel next week and ask God to guide them in selecting the Roman Catholic Church's 255th pope. In less religiously devout realms, oddsmakers, numerologists and those with supernatural proclivities are following their stars, hunches and bookies to predict which name will be announced while smoke wisps from the chapel's chimney.

"The responses for papal bets have been brisk, shall we say," said a Graham Sharp spokesman for William Hill, a British-based international gambling service. "We've done papal betting before, so we've got a reputation for this and there's certainly a demand for it."
The favorite for the new pontiff, according to William Hill, is Nigerian Cardinal Francis Arinze with 9-4 odds. The agency calculates the archbishop of Milan, Dionigi Tettamanzi, with 7-2 odds, and Honduran Oscar Rodriguez Maradiaga at 6 to 1. More distant prospects include German Cardinal Joseph Ratzinger at 9 to 1 and Brazilian Cardinal Claudio Hummes at 10 to 1. The dark horse, according to other betting firms, is Cardinal George Pell of Australia. His odds at becoming a successor to St. Peter are 139 to 1.

Some Roman bookmakers, however, grimace at the notion of putting money on a prospective pope. Sitting his off-track bettor's parlor, scattered with chips and the sounds of televised horse races from around the world, one oddsmaker was asked if any of his colleagues had placed a Vatican bet. "I certainly hope not. That would be in bad taste."

Eric Rudolph pleads guilty in Olympic bombing

ATLANTA — In the end, Eric Rudolph proclaimed himself willing to take the lives of others in his personal war on abortion — but he was not willing to sacrifice his own life.

Bargaining away his freedom in order to escape the death penalty, Rudolph pleaded guilty Wednesday to bombing the 1996 Atlanta Olympics and carrying out three other attacks on abortion clinics and a gay night-club across the South.

He issued a statement laced with Bible verses to justify bombs packed with roofing nails and screws, saying the attacks were "eye-for-an-eye retribution for a society and a government that sanctioned abortion."

"Because I believe that abortion is murder, I also believe that force is justified... in an attempt to stop it," Rudolph wrote in the rambling statement handed out after he entered his pleas in back-to-back court appearances, first in Birmingham, Ala., then in Atlanta.

Officials: No reports of outbreak from flu strain

Public health officials said Wednesday that they had no reports of infection from a potentially dangerous strain of flu virus that was errantly sent to thousands of clinical laboratories worldwide as part of a routine proficiency test.

Still, the World Health Organization, the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, and state health officials took no chances Wednesday as they followed up efforts to identify and destroy all samples of the potentially deadly H2N2 strain distributed to at least 4,000 hospital, clinical and reference laboratories in 18 countries.

Although lab workers handling viruses toil at vented lab benches and wear gloves, masks and goggles, the H2N2 virus poses a special danger because it hasn't circulated in the public since 1968. As a result, anyone born after 1968 would have at best limited immunity to it.

Air travelers: Leave your lighters at home

WASHINGTON — Starting today, there is one more thing

Nation/World in brief

that air travelers must leave at home: lighters.

Unlike guns, knives and other dangerous items that a passenger cannot carry on in his pocket but may stow in checked bags, lighters are banned from anywhere on a plane.

"It's been 3.5 years since 9/11 and they've finally figured it out," said Mark Peterson, a Sioux Falls, S.D., appraiser who was grabbing a smoke outside Reagan Washington National Airport on Wednesday.

The rule change is expected to produce a large number of seizures of lighters even though airports, airlines and the government have been telling travelers for the past 45 days about the impending ban.

"I'm sure we'll have a bunch of them," said George Doughy, executive director of Lehigh Valley International Airport in Allentown, Pa.

Sharon: We won't attack Iran over nuke program

JERUSALEM — Israel will not attack Iran to destroy its nuclear program, Prime Minister Ariel Sharon said Wednesday, a day after meeting President Bush in Texas.

Sharon told CNN he did not see "unilateral action" as an option.

He said Israel did not need to take a leading role in attempts to deny nuclear weapons to Iran and called again for an international coalition to deal with the issue.

Sharon said Iran was years away from possessing a nuclear weapon but only months away from overcoming "technical problems" in building one.

"Once they will solve it, that will be the point of no return," he said.

job acceptance

TWIN FALLS — A vice principal of two Twin Falls elementary schools will be staying put next year.

Jim Brown, a vice principal at Sawtooth and Harrison elementary schools, withdrew his appointment to the principal's position at Morningside Elementary School, said Human Relations Director Linda Baird via e-mail Wednesday.

The Twin Falls School Board accepted the withdrawal late Monday after an executive session. Baird said Brown felt the change in position was not in his best interests.

Brown has been in his current position since 2002.

The Morningside principal position will be open when Principal Dennis Smith retires at the end of the school year.

Jerome officials release statement

JEROME — County commissioners released a statement Wednesday confirming that an investigation related to personnel matters is under way in Jerome County, but offered little more detail.

In their statement, Jerome County commissioners also said the investigation involves only county employees — contradicting statements by Sheriff Jim Weaver that the investigation had spread to the Jerome Police Department.

Investigators with the Idaho Counties Risk Management Program have interviewed what they believe are all the relevant witnesses, the statement said. It will take a minimum of two weeks to complete the report because there are numerous interviews that still must be transcribed, the statement said.

After the report is received, county commissioners will review it with the sheriff and prosecuting attorney. The prosecuting attorney will decide what, if any, information will be released to the public after the investigation, the statement said.

Three crashes shut down U.S. Highway 93

TWIN FALLS — One person was hospitalized Wednesday afternoon and U.S. Highway 93 was shut down for about two hours when 10 vehicles crashed south of Twin Falls dispatchers said.

Idaho State Police Trooper Kevin Hight said blowing dust and drivers going too fast for the low-visibility conditions were the causes of the three accidents.

The accidents happened at about 4:45 near the intersection of U.S. Highway 93 and Idaho Highway 74, said De Silver, a supervisor for the Southern Idaho Regional Communications Center. There were only minor injuries.

Of the vehicles involved, seven were passenger vehicles, two were tractors with trailers and one was a pickup truck pulling a trailer.

Emergency crews from the Filter police and the department, Twin Falls police and Magic Valley Regional Medical Center all responded to the incident. Police closed the highway in both directions from 3:00 p.m. until 3:50 p.m. North for about two hours in order to remove the vehicles.

The Idaho State Police is investigating the accident.

Castleford will hold school levy vote

CASTLEFORD — The Castleford School District will ask its residents for more money in voting Tuesday.

The district is seeking a $58,000-per-year levy for two years. Superintendent Kelly Murphy said $58,000 is the amount needed to keep the small K-12 school open.

Murphy estimates that $58,000 of the levy will go for textbooks, $5,000 for classroom supplies, $5,000 for library materials, $5,000 for cleaning supplies and $8,000 for safety repairs to glass and concrete.

Polls will be open from noon to 6 p.m. at the Castleford Library at 500 W. Main St. in Castleford. Absentee ballots are available through the school district.

VIBRANT COLORS

Colorblind artist uses boyhood memories as basis for inspiration

By Laurie Welch
For The Times-News

DECLO — As a boy Robert Moore played along the banks of the Snake River near the Emerson Grange in Minidoka County, and now those boyhood memories guide him as he creates works of art sold in galleries nationwide.

Moore is colorblind, so he loads his palette in the order of the rainbow to track the colors he cannot see. With brushes in both hands, he mixes paint and adds layers to the canvases. He uses color vibrancy — streaming light through autumn aspen and reflecting back all of nature in its white bark.

"The aspen are a way for me to learn order. Almost any color can be reflected in the white bark. It allows me to design a composition with a graceful set of elements and, through that, study color," Moore said.

Moore understands nature's law of simple and complex order but considers himself always a student. He now applies what he has learned from the aspen to florals and portraits. Many of them hang in galleries like Inside Galleries in Jackson Hole, Wyo., and Scottsdale, Ariz.

"I like fresh color surprises, but I'm open to correction and I'm careful not to violate the order in nature," Moore said. He was born in Burley in 1957 and grew up on the old Schodde homestead near Heyburn. His parents, Elmer and Ona Moore, both were teachers at Minico High School.

"The Schodde farm was right on the river. The 100-year-old barn, cattails, bluffs and giant trees — those are my first memories," Moore said.

These recollections are mirrored in Moore's work. When the family left the farm and moved out to the desert, "it was like being extracted," he said. "That place was imprinted in my heart and I always wanted to return and paint there."

Moore earned his bachelor's degree from Eastern Oregon State College at La Grande. He taught art and coached at Minico High School for a "yearlong eternity," he said.

Moore returned to school at the Art Center College of Design in Pasadena in 1980. He graduated in 1987 with an illustration degree and has been painting full time ever since.

"I grew up farming. When you spend that much time outdoors with such close ties to seed time and harvest, you learn the principle if you don't do the work, it won't get done. I didn't want that indoor job. I knew I could be responsible to myself in the mountains working on the river working," Moore said.

study the mountains and he said this area offers diverse landscapes.

"The mountains and the desert have such different beauty, and it allowed me not to be sitting on a tractor," Moore said. Moore and his wife Rebecca now make their home on the banks of the Snake River near Declo.

Rebecca home-schools their children and, until recently, Moore had his studio in their home. The Schodde house is now a frame shop. Moore retains there often to paint.

Moore paints outdoors in natural light. He often works out of the back of his pickup or from the back of a boat. Sometimes you can find him packed-up with easels and paints on a four-wheeler, with his children in tow. Family is paramount to Moore.

"I got married late in life. There were some lean years — when I was alone. If it weren't for some people in the area who were willing to trade — there were some lean years," he said.

Other than God, Moore said his priority is taking care of his family. He sees his primary job as preparing his children for life and spending time with them while they are young. Moore credits his success as an artist with allowing that great reward.

"I always wanted to be able to have the house and the family and take the children with me when I'm working," he said. "I want to have them experience what I experienced growing up on the river — that adventure."

After that, Vivian went back to sleep, he joked said.

City dedicates the children's section of its library to Vivian Maltz

By Heather Pilkinton
Times-News correspondent

WENDELL — The children's section of the Wendell City Library has been dedicated to the memory of Vivian Maltz, who served as the community's librarian for 33 years.

Seventeen members of the community gathered for a special ceremony to honor her Tuesday, including Maltz's husband, Fred, and three of her four daughters. Those who knew her said Maltz was dedicated to the library and to encouraging the art of reading. She died on Christmas Day at age 83.

"The library was her whole life," said Maltz's daughter, Helen Nelson, of Lacey, Wash. "She gave everything to this."

Daughter Janie Carrico of Twin Falls described her mother's dedication in more detail. "She bought books for people who couldn't afford them," Carrico said, going on to add that Maltz would spend her own money to buy books for the library.

She also said her mother would take books to elderly patrons who couldn't come to the library.

Longtime library employee Eleanor Coleman described what it was like working with Maltz.

"She was tough," Coleman said. "But she taught me a lot."

When asked about the most important thing she learned from Maltz, Coleman answered simply, "Read the blurb. Everything you ever need to know about the book is in the blurb."

One of the major changes instituted by Maltz was cataloging all the books in the library. Coleman said before Maltz cataloged everything, it was hard to find a book in the library. However, because of her extensive cataloging, Maltz knew where every book was, even after her retirement.

Slavna Vasko of Twin Falls spoke of one such event. She and Carrico had been visiting Maltz — who was sick for quite some time before her death — at Bridgeview Estates when Coleman called needing to know where a very expensive volume was.

"Vivian was heavily medicated, and we hadn't been able to wake her when Eleanor called," Vasko recalled. "I remember I was trying to decide what to do when Vivian opened her eyes and sat up just a little. She said, 'For Heaven's sake, just walk in the back. The book is on the east wall, four shelves up, three books over. It's in a three-ring binder with a yellow cover.'"

After that, Vivian went back to sleep, he joked said.

Sure enough, the volume was right where Hall had said it would be.

Jerome chief: Immigration status not an issue

Hall answers tough questions regarding police relations with Hispanic community

By Dixie Thomas Reale
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — Immigration status won't be questioned during routine traffic stops, Jerome Police Chief Dan Hall assured people at a multicultural forum this week.

The forum, hosted by the Jerome Committee on Minority Relations, was held Tuesday at St. Jerome's Catholic Church to address accusations that Jerome police treat Hispanics differently than other people. Spanish-speaking translators were available to field questions from the audience.

Hall tackled the immigration question head-on.

"It may have happened in the past, but let's put past perceptions aside and work on the future of our community," he said. "Hereafter, the Jerome City Police Department will not be interested in a person's immigration status in a routine traffic stop unless another crime has been committed."

However, Hall said he could speak only for his department, one of three law-enforcement agencies in Jerome County. The Jerome County Sheriff's Department and the Idaho State Police may have different policies, he said.

One person asked Hall, "What if the driver does not speak English?" Hall said the city police make every effort to accommodate people, but interpreters are not always available.

Another person asked, "Why would a policeman need to see identification of other occupants of a car besides the driver?"

Hall said a policeman can ask anybody in the car for identification if he feels a crime has been committed. If the driver is arrested, the police need to identify the occupants of the car because they are potential witnesses.

If passengers in the car do not have identification cards, they will not be arrested, he said.

However, "People really do need to carry identification because in case of an accident or injury the police need to know who you are so they can contact your family," he said.

Several individuals said people without identification papers are afraid to complain about the police because they fear deportation. Hall said he wants to know about any officer's unusual interest in a person's immigration status.

He can be reached at the police department, located at 124 Lincoln St. S., or by phone at 324-4328. People also can complain to Mayor Charles Curcio at City Hall, 152 E. Ave. A, or by phone at 324-8189.

Minority-group plans participation in centennial

By Dixie Thomas Reale
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — Members of Jerome's Committee on Minority Relations have agreed to participate in the city's centennial celebration, which begins in 2007.

Jerome Police Chief Dan Hall suggested the incorporation of an event, such as a "Viva de Mayo or a Mexican Independence Day celebration," that focuses on the cultural diversity of the community and emphasizes minority contributions.

David Quinley, a Jerome High School teacher who serves as the advisor for El Puente/The Bridge, an English- and Spanish-language student newspaper, distributed copies of the publication to committee members. Quinley said the newspaper was started this school year with three journalism classes and gradually evolved into an after-school extracurricular activity.

El Puente/The Bridge is published bi-monthly at the Jerome High School and recently received the Northwest Award from the Jerome Chamber of Commerce. The award recognizes a chamber member that has exceeded business expectations in the first year.

Quinley said his students would benefit from working with the minority relations committee. And the committee would equally benefit, gaining access to youth in the community and their parents.

Mike Shaw, a consultant with the Idaho Association of Cities, distributed copies of a 71-page orientation guide for immigrants to Idaho. City Councilwoman Marjorie Schmidt had recently taken a copy of the guide for the Boise area and adapted it with Magic Valley agencies, businesses, addresses and phone numbers. Shaw then edited the Spanish version for clarity.

The guide is available in both English and Spanish and contains information related to emergency and safety, immigration, legal rights, driver's licenses, public benefits, social services, health care, schools, housing, transportation, finances and taxes.

Schmidt said the guide contains valuable information for newcomers to the community as well as old timers. Copies of the guide are free and can be obtained at Jerome City Hall.

Ada County officials consider moving fair

NAMPA (AP) — Ada County commissioners are looking to move the Western Idaho Fair out of the county fairgrounds to make room for a possible downtown center for Garden City, but officials in neighboring Canyon County are not keen on the potential of combining the counties' two state fairs.

Ada County Commissioner Judy Peavey-Derr said on Tuesday that combining the Canyon County Fair with the Western Idaho Fair would create the annual event to attract more big-name entertainers than either individual fair could alone.

Hansen finds site for new city well

By Margaret Jones
Times-News correspondent

HANSEN — Initial survey work for a new well to serve the city of Hansen has been completed and phase II of the water improvement project will soon be under way.

Mayor George Urle announced during Monday night's City Council meeting that a well site had been selected on the lower end of the Rolling Hills Park. Brodway Engineering will be working on the well's design in preparation of taking the project to bid.

In other matters, Urle informed the council that he would like to set up a student council to hold meetings and identify city problems and ways to solve them. Hansen City Council members voted to create this junior group and agreed one councilman will meet with the student council as an advisor on a monthly basis.

The City Council is urging town residents to prepare for the citywide cleanup as part of Johnny Horizon Day on May 7. Volunteers will be working to pick up trash and unwanted items that citizens have left at their property's curb. Practically anything can be left for pickup if it's sorted by item into categories such as lawn debris, water heaters, old car batteries, furniture and refrigerators and air conditioners as long as the coolant has been removed. Loose items should be placed in garbage bags or boxes. It is the mission of the council to have the city clean in time for its centennial celebration.

Residents were reminded that they need to follow the city's watering schedule. Under the plan, odd-numbered houses may water on odd-numbered calendar days while even-numbered homes do the opposite.

Organ donor's legacy is to leave better lives for others

DEAR ABBY: Our son, Ricky, always had a smile for everyone he met. He gave his whole heart whenever he could, especially to his sister, his family and those he loved. You could see his happy, smiling face and hear his laughter wherever he was.

On March 6, 2000, we lost our 19-year-old special son due to tragic circumstances. True to his giving, loving nature, Ricky was an organ and tissue donor. His final gift was to help more than 80 people live healthy, happy lives — from the young father who can now see his children grow up under the gift of Ricky's corneas, to the athlete whose heart is now healthy because of one of Ricky's heart valves.

We were able to grant our son his last wish because he let us know this is what he wanted. Ricky's gifts have also helped us, because we have the comfort of knowing that he is not truly gone, but lives on in others, now and forever.

Abby, because April is National Donate Life Month, won't you please encourage your readers to consider becoming organ donors? Thank you.

—RICHARD, ELLEN AND KRISTEN MULLANE

DEAR RICHARD, ELLEN AND KRISTEN: I'm honored to print your poignant letter as a reminder to everyone about what a precious gift that each of us can give if we wish — and our families agree. That is why it is so important to let our loved ones know what our wishes are well in advance. Have that discussion. Get the subject out on the table. Readers, for more information about organ donation, or a

DEAR ABBY: I have been married to "Lenny" for five years. I have three children from a former marriage who live with us. Lenny has two who live with his ex three hours away. They stay with us every other weekend.

Lenny's mother will drive 3 1/2 hours just to see her grandchildren in a school concert for one hour. My children have invited my in-laws repeatedly to come and watch them at sporting events. However, my mother-in-law will come only if it takes no more than 15 minutes to get there.

This is very disappointing because my parents are not into being grandparents. I had hoped that my in-laws would love my children as they love their other grandchildren.

I have spoken to Lenny about this. He says, "I can make them go." Because of this, I no longer feel my children should have to visit his parents on holidays if they don't want to.

I find this situation even more upsetting because I have explained to my in-laws that my children's father does not visit them, nor do my parents. Do you know what Lenny's mother's response was? She said, "It will make them stronger."

Should I continue to let this bother me, or should I have Lenny say something to them again about it?

—HURT IN PENNSYLVANIA
DEAR HURT: Let it go. It would be wonderful if your children had caring older people in their lives, but your parents are too preoccupied with themselves, and Lenny's parents are unwilling to open their hearts. The more you dwell, the more your hurt and anger will grow.

Since neither you nor your husband can change your parents, why not "adopt" grandparents for your children? A way to do it would be for all of you to spend some time volunteering at a nursing home.

Many nursing home patients have no one. They would love the company and appreciate the attention, and your children would be rewarded with love and gratitude. Please consider it.

A poll in Bartender magazine found that lawyers and doctors are tied as the worst tipplers of all professions.

The concept of the endothermic reaction (the principle at work in modern ice-packs) is nothing new. By the 1550s, Italians were using a mix of saltpeter and water to cool their liquor bottles.

Ever hear of the state of Franklin? It had its own constitution and state government for four years, but was never accepted by the Union. In 1788, Franklin finally disbanded, gave up its statehood dreams, and later became the western part of Tennessee.

Don't fall for the advertising hype for example, all beer is "cold-filtered." It simply means that particulates have been screened out of the brew. If it's done in a sterile place, cold filtering also screens out bacteria.

Gooding students attend conference

TWIN FALLS — Nineteen girls from Gooding Middle School and Gooding High School attended the fourth annual Girls in Science and Technology conference at the College of Southern Idaho.

The girls were welcomed to the conference by a Blackhawk helicopter from the Army National Guard in Gowen Field in Boise, which landed on the field east of the Eagle Dormitory at CSI.

Sarah Blackburn piloted the craft and later answered question from the girls.

The girls then attended individual tracks. First-year students stayed on campus to learn about careers in medicine, computer technology, horticulture, engineering, electronics, mathematics and information and communication technology.

Second-year students visited companies, including Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, Dell computers, KMVT, Seastrom Manufacturing, the Twin Falls Police Department Dispatch Center, U.S. Forest Service and PMT/Qwest.

Visits to one site allowed girls to see the research involved in processing potatoes to make french fries. Another site showed girls how to make ad-

Cassia schedules kindergarten registration

BURLEY — Kindergarten registration for the 2005-06 school year in the Cassia School District will be held April 22, except in Alma.

Second-year students residing west of Overland Avenue and Highway 27 should register at Mountain View Elementary School. Those who live east of Overland Avenue/Highway 27 should register at Dworshak Elementary. Registration will be held from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. at both schools.

Oakley and Raft River students should register from 8:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. at their respective schools. Declo students will register from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. and Albion students from 9 to 11 a.m. Parents of prospective kindergartners should call the school to make arrangements.

Children must be 5 years old by Sept. 1, 2005 to be eligible to attend kindergarten in the fall of 2005.

For registration, parents should bring the child's certified birth certificate, Social Security number and immunization records. The child will also be tested at that time.

Vaccinations must be obtained before registering, and children will not be allowed to begin school if immunizations are not current, the district reports.

Kindergarten packets, "Helping Kids Succeed," prepared by the teachers, will be given to parents during registration. They will explain to parents how to use the packets with their children. The packets contain information about what a student needs to know before starting school in the fall.

Parents may request either a morning or afternoon session, but a first choice cannot be guaranteed because of a need to balance enrollment.

Some students may be encouraged to participate in the Accelerated Student Achievement Program (ASAP) and attend all-day kindergarten. During spring registration, students must be evaluated to determine if they have the readiness skills necessary for success in school. The goals of the program are to have students reading at grade level when they begin first grade, and knowing and using the language skills necessary for learning. To accomplish this, students who need additional accelerated learning opportunities will receive twice the reading instruction during their kindergarten year than is offered in the regular kindergarten program by attending full-day kindergarten during the 2005-2006 school year. Special services will also be provided when needed. Dana Bradley is the program coordinator.

Transportation will be provided both ways to all-day kindergarten during the school year. Students attending morning sessions will have transportation provided to school in the morning and those attending in the afternoon may ride the bus home after school.

For more information about kindergarten or registration, call Dworshak, 878-6616; Mountain View, 878-6608; Oakley Elementary, 862-3203; Declo and Albion Elementary Schools, 654-2391; and Raft River and Alma Elementary Schools, 645-2561.

Couple commends giving community of Gooding

We recently attended a fundraiser for Kenny McCrae, a senior at Gooding High School who is raising funds to participate in the Down Under Bowl this summer in Australia.

Like all the citizens of Gooding, we really appreciate the businesses and citizens who continually, time after time, donate to and participate in fund-raisers for school youth.

We'd like to especially thank Rhonda and Pete Etchard for donating the pig, Ron's Custom Meats for cutting and wrapping, and Jase Stockham for donating his kill fee.

We have been so impressed with the service and high quality product that we work from the raffish at this fund-raiser. Citizens and businesses such as these make our little community extra special. Please continue to support your local businesses!

Organization raises awareness

By Heather Abel
Times-News correspondent

Hispanos Unidos is a club that gives students an opportunity to get together and learn about opportunities available to them after high school.

Cindy Mitchell and Jeannine Berriochoa are the advisers. "The Hispanic students wanted to have an organization where they felt they could grow culturally, where they felt they belonged," Berriochoa says.

The club is more than six years old, with about 15 students involved this year.

"This is a great club," says Ernestina Avalos, Hispanos Unidos president. The club helps students find out about college and encourages friendships.

"This is where they find out what's going on. It gives them a place to go and other kids to hang out with," Berriochoa says. "We've been very happy with our group. We just want these kids to have some place they call home base ... We want them to go on and further their education."

"Anybody can join," Mitchell adds.

Senior Severo Hernandez will go to college next year. His dream is to become a pilot in the Air Force.

"It's (the club) like a stepping stone to college," he says. "It's helping us out."

The club has participated in cultural days at the school and prepared an Hispanic-theme float for the homecoming parade. Members made burritos and sold them to purchase club sweatshirts. They have also conducted community service by wrapping Christmas gifts at the La Posada Hispanic ministry.

Six students will attend the INL-sponsored Hispanic Youth Symposium in Sun Valley in April.

"The point (of the symposium) is to increase the number of Hispanics that go to college," says club member Susie Villagomez. "There's just so many motivating speakers."

Villagomez, who attended the conference last year, and will attend this year as well, says the speakers tell what they've gone through and share their inspirational stories.

Students also meet other Hispanic students from across the state.

"This (Hispanos Unidos) is just giving us more opportunities to see what's out there for us," Villagomez says.

Club serves up Mexican dinner

Many Brazilians still go hungry

But obesity also becomes a problem

Knight Ridder News Service

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil — Diva Jose Vieira was excited when she learned that a new Brazilian television reality show will house 12 fat people for 10 weeks surrounded by their favorite foods.

The upcoming show has attracted more than 30,000 applicants, one more sign that Brazil — which revels in its image as the home of the "Girl From Ipanema," as the song goes — increasingly is worrying about its collective weight.

Whoever loses the most weight on the show will win $110,000, a fortune in a country in which the monthly minimum wage is less than $100.

The 42-year-old Vieira would be an ideal contestant. She stands only 5 feet 2 but tips the scales at 265 pounds. The street cleaner balked at applying, however, when she learned she'd have to submit a photo of herself in a bikini.

"I was too embarrassed to do that," Vieira said, sitting on the couch in her shantytown home.

Thanks to an increase in the consumption of sugar, soft drinks and fatty foods, 40 percent of Brazilian older than 20 — 38.8 million people — are overweight, according to a new government report. Ten and a half million are obese, the government found. Only 4 percent; 3.8 million, are below normal weight.

The problem isn't just one of looks. A second government report found that nearly 10 times as many Brazilians died in 2003 from obesity-related diseases — such as diabetes, high blood pressure, heart attacks and strokes — than, from malnutrition, which long has been the subject of government campaigns.

"Maybe they ought to begin a Zero Fat campaign," said Roberto da Matta, a Rio sociologist, playing off the government's Zero Hunger program.

The issue is sensitive in Brazil. Hunger is still a huge problem, and President Luiz Inacio Lula da Silva, who created the Zero Hunger campaign, reacted to the overweight report by saying its results were misleading.

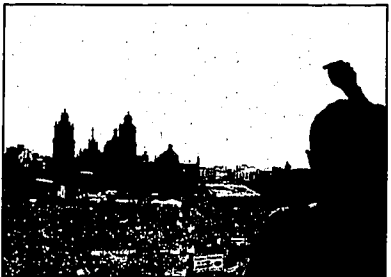

"Hunger isn't something to be measured by research," said Silva, who himself went without food at times as a child. "Not everyone wants to recognize that they are going hungry. They are ashamed."

A roadblock, not a barrier for migrants

Los Angeles Times

LA MORITA, Mexico — Sergio Cruz almost made it. He had walked five days through the desert, was robbed at gunpoint, abandoned by his guide and now was within 20 yards of the border.

But then he saw the line of trucks and sport utility vehicles flying American flags just over the barbed-wire fence separating Mexico from the United States. Frustrated, he and nine other travelers lay quietly in a ditch along the railroad tracks, hoping the men would go away.

Early Sunday, Enriquez Enriquez stumbled across the migrants and broke the news.

"Did anyone tell you about the Minutemen?" Enriquez, a member of Grupo Beta, Mexico's agency dedicated to protecting the health of migrants, asked the ragged group. "They are hunting for guys just like you. You couldn't get across now if you were sitting on George Bush's lap ... You can't cross here — wait a month or choose another place."

Enriquez had been patrolling La Morita, a desolate border region, all morning. His mission was to intercept people heading north and warn them about the Minutemen Project, an effort by hundreds of American volunteers to track and report illegal immigrants coming into southwestern Arizona.

— Sergio Cruz

The migrants frowned. "I would like to tell those people that we are not criminals," said the 22-year-old Cruz. "We came to pick crops. Our records are clean. We are not selling drugs, we only want to work. Who will pick the crops if we don't?"

Although only about 200 activists have shown up, their efforts have already had a dramatic, if perhaps short-term effect.

This vast desert border just west of Douglas, Ariz., is the busiest illegal crossing point in the nation. Enriquez said more than 400 people a day walk these harsh trails. But news of the Minutemen's arrival, combined with media hype in Mexico, has cut the traffic to a few dozen a day.

Some smugglers have refused to take clients to the border area until the activists leave. Others are directing them elsewhere, as far east as El Paso, Texas. An air of fear and indignation hangs over this side of the border, where misinformation is rife.

Rubén Valenzuela, a Mexican state policeman at a checkpoint near Agua Prieta, across from Douglas, said his unit had been dispatched to protect migrants.

"We came because they are shooting our people over there," he said. "They don't have the right to kill immigrants. People here are really angry about this."

Valenzuela and his comrades seemed surprised to hear that the Minutemen, who began arriving Friday, were under strict orders not to touch any illegal immigrant, only to report them to the Border Patrol.

"Well, they will only stop the immigration for a short time and then it will start again," he said.

Feral cat fix in Jackpot not a purr-fect solution

Officials in the town of Jackpot, Nev., may be chasing their tails with their current plan to control a climbing feral cat population.

This week, the Jackpot Advisory Board held a two-day "Cat Roundup" to trap an estimated 100 to 200 feral cats. But that's just the start.

The town, which has been overrun by feral cats recently, will join forces with the U.S. Humane Society's Rural Area Veterinary Service to trap, then neuter or spay the cats, and finally release them back into the community.

A team of about 15 volunteers — including veterinarians and vet students — were one hand Tuesday and Wednesday to help the project. Released cats will also have their ears tipped, so locals can tell if they've been fixed.

Give the town and its residents applause and a scratch behind the ears for their concern and generosity. Further emphasis on spaying and neutering pets is also a solid policy to curb the wild kitten explosion.

But this trap-and-release solution isn't the right fix for dangerous feral cats. Releasing the animals into the public, with no permanent situation to feed and care for them, could only exacerbate the problem.

Feral cats are free-ranging cats that have reverted from, or have never known, a domestic setting. Many of them are in a wild state and easily attack or bite humans they contact.

The Trap-Neuter-Return-Management method used by Jackpot is a growing trend in some American cities. Spaying and neutering eliminates the interbreeding of feral cats, which reproduce quickly. So the numbers of cats suffering the environmental stresses of the wild is reduced.

But in order for these programs to succeed, the cats have to be managed after their release with proper feeding and oversight.

Our view: Jackpot officials' plan to fix and release feral cats won't eliminate the problems the wild felines create.

What do you think? We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

to continue. They could continue to spread disease, attack other wildlife, songbirds and even humans.

Supporters of this kind of release programs say the cats can be domesticated. Perhaps. But in those cases, the cats must be worked with in homes individually. By and large, most of them remain wild and unadoptable.

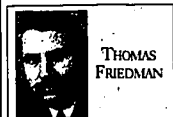

Even dealing with the animals on a limited space is dangerous. Twin Falls Animal Shelter director Debbie Blackwood says most of the facility's workman's comp claims are the result of working with feral cats. And those are trained personnel handling the cats, not volunteers.

It's a tough issue for a small community that wants to do the right thing. Obviously, declaring an open season on feral colonies (as some states do) would be wrong.

But as harsh as feral cat euthanasia may appear, it's more effective, cost-efficient and even more humane than sending felines back out into the wild to fend for themselves.

Throwing a 'Hail Mary' for jihad

So here's a question that I've been wrestling with lately: With all these reports about the handling of U.S. intelligence, and the CIA relying on bogus informants with names like "Curveball" or "knucklehead" or whatever, why have there been no serious attacks in the U.S. since 9/11? I've got my own pet theory about what's produced this period of calm — and, more important, why it may be coming to an end.

THOMAS FRIEDMAN

Let's start with the facts. Despite all the code reds and code oranges we've been subjected to by the Department of Homeland Security, and despite the mountain of newspaper articles about how underprotected our ports and borders are, the fact is that not only has there been another 9/11, but there has not even been a serious failed attempt that we know of.

I'm not complaining — I'm just wondering why. It still seems to me ridiculously easy to blow up a car in the heart of Chicago, and anyone who has flown on a private jet since 9/11 can tell you that security at these private terminals is still so lax that if you showed up in a Saudi headscarf with a North Carolina driver's license under the name of "Billy Bob bin Laden" and asked for flight directions for your chartered Learjet to Lower Manhattan, there's a good chance no one would stop you.

So, how then do we explain the calm? To begin with, I'd give a tip of the hat to the CIA, the FBI and the Department of Homeland Security. I have no doubt that their increased vigilance — and coordination with European and Arab intelligence services — has made it much harder for terrorists to operate. Moreover, thanks to Gen. John Ahizad's Centcom forces in Afghanistan, al-Qaida no longer has a whole country from which to plan, train and coordinate terrorist attacks with impunity. The fact that al-Qaida effectively controlled a country is what made it unique. Also, new U.S. visa policies have made it much harder for bad guys to get into America.

If your name is Muhammad and you are a 21-year-old single Arab man and you have not visited Disney World yet, well, you may want to consider Euro Disney, because your chances of getting a tourist visa are very low. Frankly, I wish this were not the case, because we are preventing a lot of good, talented Arab men and women from getting educated in America, which is the best way of building friends. This is one of the sad byproducts of 9/11 — but it has undoubtedly made it more difficult for the few bad apples to get in as well.

Despite all of that, I fear that we may now be entering the most dangerous period since 9/11. Why? Because I've always believed that one of the most important reasons there has been no new terrorist attack in America has to do with the U.S. invasions of both Iraq and Afghanistan. It is not only that the Bush administration has taken the fight to the enemy, but that the enemy has welcomed that fight.

To the extent that the Bush administration has taken the fight to the enemy, but that the enemy has welcomed that fight.

The reason things may be getting more dangerous now is that the formation of a freely elected government in Iraq may signal that the Baathist-Jihadist insurgency is being gradually defeated. The United States may even be able to withdraw some troops. And then is nothing worse for the Baathists and Jihadists than to be defeated in the heart of their world — and, even more so, to be defeated in the heart of their world by their own people. And then is nothing worse for the Baathists and Jihadists than to be defeated in the heart of their world — and, even more so, to be defeated in the heart of their world by their own people.

I fear that when and if the Jihadists conclude that they have been defeated in the heart of their world, they will be sorely tempted to throw a Hail Mary pass.

That is they may want to launch a spectacular, headline-grabbing act of terrorism in America that tries to mask, and compensate for, just how defeated they have become at home. The Jihadists have always understood that Iraq is the ballgame. Iraq is the big one. Winning there is what really advances their agendas.

The reason things may be getting more dangerous now is that the formation of a freely elected government in Iraq may signal

Seeing red in the Crayola critique system

BRUCE MCCALL

Of all the things that can make a person see red, school principal Gail Karvoski was not expecting parents to get huffy about, well, seeing red.

At Daniels Farm Elementary School in Trumbull, Conn., Karvoski's teachers grade papers by giving examples of better answers for these students who make mistakes. But that approach meant the kids often found their work covered in red, the color that teachers long have used to grade work.

Parents objected. Red writing, they said, was "stressful."

"The color has become so symbolic of negativity that some principals and teachers won't touch it," said Joseph Foris, principal of Pottersville Elementary in Pottersville, N.J.

He has instructed his teachers to grade with colors featuring more "pleasant-sounding tones" so that their instructional messages do not come across as derogatory or demeaning.

• From an April 3 Associated Press news item
To: All Teachers

that the student has written pure gibberish and is being sent back a grade. (The correct term: "reverse promotion.")

ORANGE: An optimistic hue for encouraging a poor performer to try harder next time. Parents may see your remarks; be sure to phrase your comments positively, e.g., "If you feel up to it," "You're a slave-driver," "This is not an attack on your sense of self-worth," etc.

BROWN: An earthy tone considered ideal for suggesting the student needs lots of fresh air and should seek a career in agriculture, stable-mucking or day labor as soon as he/she reaches dropout age, as an alternative to his/her continuing to occupy a valuable seat in a stifling classroom to no evident purpose. (Write in large block letters.)

PURPLE: Used to transmit the teacher's understanding that the student has anger-management issues, and that lighting time to his/her paper in class is a cry for help that the teacher, for one reason or another, has not yet seen your doctor, sorry, or make any other clinical recommendation; this can be considered as "interference with parent-child matters. Similarly, such comments as "You little creep" should be stated vocally so as to leave no possibly parent-agitating "paper trail."

MAGENTA: The mandatory color code for "I know you copied your whole paper from another student's work." A judgmental tone is taboo, however; the student obviously suffers from FTS, or Intellectual Property Theft Syndrome — a disorder often found among leading authors, indicating that he/she may be highly gifted and simply experimenting with his/her comments as a philosophical exercise. Optimal solution: Give a grade of A+.

YELLOW: Virtually unreadable on white paper and therefore highly suitable for "telling it like it is," since your uncensored comments will defy a clear reading. To be used in grading the papers of brats, bullies, future menaces to society and that kid you just can't stand. Let it all hang out.

RED: If you see this color in a classroom, gymnasium, cafeteria or any other school area, including the restrooms, call the Color Danger Hot Line.

Bruce McCall is a New York writer and artist whose favorite childhood Crayola color was purple, although he's still waiting for it to be produced.

smoke can affect many other people.

People who smoke in cars and houses are affecting every single person in that car or house. Yes, even with the windows open.

I couldn't help but write and comment on the absurd letter by Ivan Lincoln.

Why is it that the ultra-conservative, right-wing, Christian loudmouths in this town run everything down? "Grease" is a stage play and nothing more. It is not meant to be Christ-like in any way.

If the Rush Limbaugh, Sean Hannity, right-wing Nazis don't like it, don't go to it! It's that simple. You make it sound like pornography! I don't know anyone who goes to a play like "Grease" to act like Lee Wee Herman in a theater!

Running against the wind

By Eric Larsen Times-News writer

GOODING — Track and field must be so easy in California. No stinging rain flying sideways off them. No 30-m.p.h. winds whipping down the backstretch, just ready to stand runners up like sidewalk sandwich boards. And no wind chill making a 35-degree day feel closer to seven degrees below freezing.

But where's the fun in that? Neither the indolent weather or the athletes let up at the Farmers National Bank/20th Bank Track Invitational in Gooding Wednesday. Battling the elements and eight other teams, the Jerome boys ran away with the team title, outscoring host Gooding 145-124.

The boys got a number of strong finishes from their talented relay teams, along with a first-place run from Brett Boesiger in the 400-meter dash, and a 11-foot pole vault from Shane Humphreys, good for the gold.

Junior distance runner Troy Tolman captured two golds on the day, winning both the 800- and 1,600-meter runs. Tolman took the 800-meter run during the windiest part of the day, gusts big enough to knock spectators off balance blowing down the backstretch. After the race, Tolman ran his guns out and left it all on the line. Literally.

Tolman said, "My time was 10 seconds slower than last week, but I took as much out of me as I can run my PR."

Strategy was especially important the 400 meters, an all-out sprint for two laps that is considered the toughest event by many runners.

"I don't like to get out in front, so I'm thinking 'Stay back,'" Tolman said. "If there are a couple of guys two seconds ahead, I don't worry. It's all about those last 200 meters and I have a pretty strong kick and can come from behind."

On the girls side, a couple top distance performances by freshman Lisa Romer helped vault the Valley Vikings past second-place Jerome, 137-119, to win the team points race. Valley sprinter Zandra Nelson took first in the 100- and 400-meter given a new town, a new nickname and new uniforms. But the roster is mostly unchanged, and the Nationals' only real household name belongs to someone who won't use a bat or glove Thursday. Frank Robinson, a Hall of Fame player who 30 years ago became the majors' first black manager.

Every other major league club already has hosted a game this season. Then again, after more than 12,000 days between home games, what's another couple of weeks, right?

Kuhn felt a personal sense of disappointment when he couldn't persuade Senators owner Bob Shapiro to keep the team in the city or to sell it to someone who would.

Seemingly no matter the quality of play, the buzz around town is as loud as the team's bright red caps with the curly white "W" that have become ubiquitous from Capitol Hill to Georgetown.

Nearly 2 million tickets already have been bought for the 81 home games — the Expos have fewer than 75,000 sold last season — and Joseph Deodatus might just be the most powerful person in Washington these days. The Nationals' director of ticket sales is certainly among the most popular, fielding calls from congressional staffers, lobbyists, lawyers and others hoping to score seats for the home debut or later in the season.

This is, after all, a city where trading on influence isn't merely a way of doing business, it's a way of life. As Nationals president Tony D'Amico put it: "People can be a little bit more insistent in this marketplace."

Tavares and the rest of the team's front-office staff only recently moved into their headquarters at the stadium, where last-minute touchups were made Wednesday.

Hundreds of extra chairs were being set up on the field in front of the stands, the sort of additional seating used for World Series games. Mowers trimmed the grass, and Tavares was hoping to find a way to get rid of the faint white lines still visible from when the field was used last week by Major League Soccer's D.C. United. At the nearest Metro station, a yellow sign with black block letters announced: "Stadium this way," and a giant arrow pointed to an escalator.

With less than a day left, it wasn't quite clear what to call the site of the big game — negotiations were continuing on a multimillion-dollar deal to sell the stadium's naming rights.

a five-year endorsement deal with the company in 2000 for a reported $100 million, and has become such a major part of the company's endorsement stable — one stocked with superstars — that he has a building named after him at Nike's headquarters campus in Beaverton, a suburb of Portland.

Whether Nike can capitalize on Woods' feat through an ad campaign remains to be seen, however. Nike said it is working with Augusta National, which owns the rights to the footage.

"It was exciting in many different ways. It was exciting because it was a great moment in sports, and we always celebrate great moments in sports," said Nike Golf spokeswoman Joani Kornios. "It was exciting because it was a great moment for a member of the Nike family and it was exciting because it was a great moment for a part of our business that we're very proud of."

Nike seems to have a knack for hooking up with the right athletes at the right time.

When Brandi Chastain donned her jersey after the U.S. Women's soccer team won the World Cup back in 1999, the sports bar splashed across newspapers worldwide was itself stitched with the swoosh.

"The Shangri-La is always unforgettable moments in brand," Swangard said.

"This was one of those moments."

And certainly, with a stable of athletes that includes Woods, Michael Jordan and Lance Armstrong, Nike has done the right things to make sure it's in the right place, said Jim Andrews, executive editor of the IEG Sports Industry Report, a trade publication.

"Those three have obviously shown that Nike is very, very smart when it comes to sponsorships," he said.

Kiraly still among best on the beach

PORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — He was the youngest guy on the Olympic men's volleyball team in 1984, a fresh-faced and promising youngster whose dominating play helped the United States win its first gold medal.

Now 44, Karch Kiraly is the oldest guy on the beach — and still enjoying unparalleled success.

This will be his last season on the AVP Pro Beach Volleyball Tour. Then again, so was last year. And the year before that. He's spent nearly a decade thinking his career was winding down, only to capture a few more titles — and prove he's winning the fight against the sands of time.

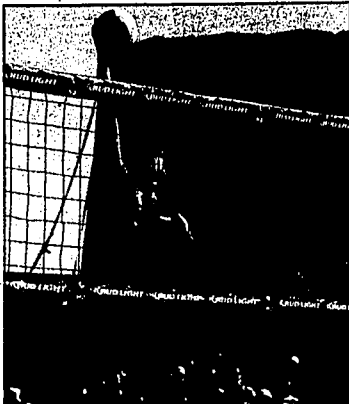

"My wife was going through a couple old boxes a few weeks ago and she came across an article that said it was amazing I was doing so well at this age, still having success," Kiraly said. "It was written nine years ago."

Kiraly and his partner, Mike Lambert, won three tournaments in 2004 and were the AVP team of the year. They were seeded No. 1 for the season-opening event in Fort Lauderdale earlier this month, yet were ousted early when Kiraly aggravated a shoulder injury.

His 147 victories and $3.1 million in earnings are the most in beach history. He's the lone American volleyballer to win three Olympic golds, indoor from 1984 and 1988, on the sand in 1996. Before Kiraly, the best U.S. Olympic finish was seventh in 1968.

"He's a phenomenal player, but what's more impressive is he's a phenomenal human being," said Mike Rangel, Kiraly's coach, friend and trainer. "He's so humble. I know a lot of pros in different sports, and believe me, Karch is unique."

That's true in many ways. Modesty keeps him from prominently displaying awards in his home. He's financially secure, but totes the kids in a minivan. He goes to bed at the same time and home schools his children; instead of giving them a book on Washington, D.C., he scheduled a four-day walking tour around the nation's capital.

He's also volunteering his time as a spokesman for Youth Without Borders, a group focused on aiding needy children in Tijuana, Mexico, through scholarship programs and refurbishment of child-care centers.

Along the way, he's found time to remain one of the games' best. "He's the greatest," said Lambert, the reigning tour MVP who turns 31 Thursday. "We'll probably never see another Karch. For me, it's like playing alongside Michael Jordan. I'm still the 14-year-old kid with his poster on my wall."

Kiraly was a four-time All-American, helping UCLA win NCAA titles in 1979, 1981 and 1982. He then led the men's national indoor team, before turning to the beach game.

He teamed with Kent Steffes to win gold in Atlanta at the first Olympic beach tournament.

Steffes, eight years younger than Kiraly, retired in 1999.

Kiraly's still going. "A lot of the other guys are taller, jump higher, stronger and they hit the ball harder," Kiraly said. "I still relish that challenge of being the oldest guy and still trying to find a way to get it done."

With one bad swing in Fort Lauderdale, Kiraly thought he was done — for good.

In his third match of the tournament, Kiraly took an awkward, swipe at the ball and immediately felt pain tearing through his right shoulder — the one that's been surgically repaired three times. He thought the worst.

"The three of us got together and we all cried," Rangel said. "First time I've seen Karch cry. We knew the last game of the day was probably going to be the last time not only Lambro and Karch played together, but the last time Karch would ever play."

They lost that consolation match, said teary good-byes, and Kiraly went home to California. Yet doctors found the problem was just related to some scar tissue, remnants of surgery past.

He's training and will be back for the tour's next event, April 22-24 in Tempe, Ariz.

Still, it was a reminder that the end of Kiraly's career is near — even though he still manages to coax his body into surviving Rangel's grueling twice-weekly, 45-minute plyometric workouts. Lesser athletes can't last 10 minutes in a Rangel session; Kiraly never misses one.

"It's the hardest workout he's ever done," Rangel said. "The only guy in his kind of shape would be like a Lance Armstrong. There's not a baseball player that could do this workout, handle the condition Karch is in."

Soon, Lambert's focus will turn toward Beijing and the 2008 Olympics, meaning his playing relationship with Kiraly will likely end. Kiraly will be at those Olympics, but behind a microphone, working as a broadcaster.

Kiraly's place in history is secure. Yet somehow, he's still not completely satisfied.

Don't feed the animals

Carlton, Dave, Eldon (Idaho Fish and Game warden), two inexperienced hound dogs and I stood over the bear. It was still quivering, but that would stop soon. We all bent down and lifted the bear up. He was about 300 pounds of black furry gelatin. We were standing in the pouring rain on a steep timbered slope overlooking Lewman, and it was midnight.

CALLS FROM THE WILD
Ron Yates

A week ago, this bruin had arrived at a home below us and across the South Fork of the Payette River. Iloe Shoo had been feeding raccoons on her patio. The bear kept coming back even though Iloe had stopped placing food out. Eldon had set and baited a live trap; naturally the bear avoided it. Instead, each night the bear would wander around Iloe's home looking in the windows hoping to find an easy meal.

Eldon had waited for the bear earlier this night and shot it with a tranquilizing dart. The bear ran into the river, waded across and disappeared into the forest. Eldon drove over to Dave's home. Dave worked for the State Department of Highways and was also a deputy sheriff. Dave had agreed in advance to help with the bear. Carlton and I were at Dave's filling out an accident report because Carlton had caused an accident on the Garden Valley road. We quickly volunteered to help nab the bear.

The water was waist deep and swift and the bear would drown if we couldn't keep its head above water.

The area the bear had disappeared into was directly below a switchback of Highway 21. We drove to this spot and slid down the hill until we reached the river. Eldon started the dogs on the bank, east where it had emerged from the river, and we were off. We listened to the dogs as they ran across the flat and up the mountain, back toward the true. Using the barking dogs as GPS, we found the bear about an hour later after a very difficult, wet, slippery hike back up the mountain. The bear had been slowed, but was not out. Eldon darted the bear again.

The distance to the truck was short—200 yards or so—but it was a steep, slippery climb. Eldon decided we would drag the bear down the hill, across the river and load it into the live trap before it woke up. Simple. We began—no, we slid. The bear had to be cared for, not just allowed to crash down the hill. We went down and I had the job of guiding the Jell-O bear over, around and through all that lay in our path. Dave carried Eldon's gun and pack and Eldon mugged the dogs. This was anything but organized.

Eldon's plan developed a hitch two hours later when we reached the river. The water was waist deep and swift and the bear would drown if we couldn't keep its head above water. Dave, Eldon and the dogs crossed the river to find a boat or canoe, leaving Carlton and me to watch the bear. Dave and I knew our plan for the event the bear woke up angry and we found ourselves unable to run or swim.

It was a long wait for a couple of hours, but dawned, and beginning 15-year-old shivering in the dark along the river—let me tell you. Eldon and Dave were soon crossing the river to watch the bear. They didn't have a boat; instead, they had a great big inner tube from the State Highway Department garage.

"After the crossing, Dave looked at the bear splayed out on the inner tube. His pistol began laughing. 'Give that bear a bat, a fishing pole and a cold drink,' Eldon, and you could check his license."

Passion for cycling grabs hold of the town of Burley

By Karla Barnes
Times-News correspondent

Cycling is a popular sport all over the world, and Burley Idaho is no exception. The sport has grown tremendously in recent years and continues to excel at a fast pace.

As spring releases its fragrance, cyclists in the Mini-Cassia area tune up their equipment and prepare to hit the road, or mountain whichever the case may be. Most cycling enthusiasts have been in spinning classes throughout the winter preparing for their bodies for the physical challenges that lie ahead.

The average couch potato has to wonder, what drives a person to take on the sport of cycling? Some do it for the exercise; others for adventure, some for the challenge of racing, others for the thrills or a reliever of day-to-day stress. One thing is certain, once you absorb yourself in this sport, you will notice benefits that you would never have imagined.

One man who knows these truths to be self-evident is Rock Temple. Rock owns and operates Rock's Cycling and Fitness in Burley; he is a key player in bringing cyclists together in the Mini-Cassia area.

If you own a bike, and live in the Mini-Cassia area, you have probably met Rock. Temple knows bikes like you and I know our relatives. He can go around town and give you a history on almost every bike. Rock tells the tale of one Schwinn 10-speed bike that re-sold six different times and he knew each owner by name. Rock can help everyone from beginners finding their first bike, to experienced road riders and mountain bikers with the equipment they need to look and ride their best.

Bikes have changed over the years, and depending on your needs and the depth of your pockets you have lots of options in equipment. Most local riders are enjoying models like Giant, Specialized and Cannondale, but there are more expensive bikes available.

Road bike trends are headed for lighter, stiffer and smoother rides. It is important for riders to have the right bike, so that they can enjoy the perfect riding experience once they hit the road.

Over 15 years ago Temple and a few friends formed two cycling groups, road riders and mountain bikers. The enthusiasm and size of the groups has grown year after year. Riders range from 27 to 63 years old, a few more men than women are in the groups, but that gap is narrowing.

On Tuesday nights at 6, a group of sometimes 20 or more road riders meet at Rock's Cycling and Fitness in downtown Burley, from here the opportunities are endless. Common rides enjoyed by the group are the Highway 30 ride; a ride up the Albion grade and back; the Malta loop, or

Burley's upcoming Centennial Ride

Cyclists from throughout Idaho and Utah are in anticipation of a big event coming up in Burley next month. Interested participants should be out tuning up for the 100 mile Burley Centennial Ride which will take place on May 21. The ride is part of Burley's ongoing festivities to celebrate its 100-year birthday. Organizers of the ride hope to make this an annual event.

The 100-mile ride will include three laps of just over 33-miles each. Riders can decide if they want to participate in 33 miles, 66 miles, or the entire 100-mile ride. Riders interested in the full 100 mile ride will begin at 7 a.m. at Centennial Park. Casual riders will begin at 8 a.m. at the same location. From there, cyclists will go across the freeway and over to Paul, then on to Rupert, into Declo, and finish up in Burley. Much of the ride will be taken on back roads to help insure a safer course.

The event is being sponsored by the Burley Centennial Committee and Rock's Cycling and Fitness. Everyone is welcome to participate. The ride is free to the public. Participants will receive a free t-shirt, and refreshments will be served at kiosks set up every 10 miles along the route.

If you would like more information on cycling in the Mini-Cassia area. Go to: groups.yahoo.com and click on Recreation and Sports, then type in rockcycling.

the B.K. (Burger King) loop. The rides average between 20 to 30 miles. These rides are not for beginners, people that want to participate need to be in good condition, otherwise the experience can be grueling. Thursday nights at 5:30 the mountain bikers meet at Rock's and drive to a pre-determined destination. Some of their favorite rides include the Fomerelle ride, Cottonwood Canyon, Cave Canyon and Little Cedars. The group has several other sites that they enjoy as well. "We have some incredible mountain biking here in southern Idaho."

Rock explained, "Our group has been riding in some other places, and realized we have some pretty good stuff right here at home."

Ducks Unlimited hosts 'Feathers and Lace'

TWIN FALLS — The Magic Valley Ladies Chapter of Ducks Unlimited will hold its annual "Feathers and Lace" banquet April 23 at the Red Lion Hotel Canyon Springs on Blue Lakes Boulevard North.

Everyone attending the event will receive this year's edition of the "Feathers and Lace" high-ball glass etched with the Ducks Unlimited logo. The glasses have become collectors' items because of the date of the event and the event name is etched into the glass, said Colby Meyer, event chairman.

Ducks Unlimited art, decoys, household items and outdoor equipment will be offered through live and silent auctions, raffles and games during the banquet.

The evening's featured game will be a "diamond mine" where 50 people pay for the opportunity to select a gem from the "mine," in hopes they have selected the one that is the real diamond, which will be determined by jeweler John Boyer with his magnifier.

Tickets are $65 for individuals and $120 for couples. A sponsor package for $320 includes a membership, two dinners and $100 in general raffle tickets. Sponsor memberships are vital to the organization as proceeds from one membership protects one acre of valuable wetlands, Meyer said in a press release.

For tickets or more information, contact Meyer at 326-4519 or cmeyer@duferti.com, or visit the Web site for Ducks Unlimited at www.ducks.org.

Loop drive open at Craters of the Moon

ARCO — The seven-mile

Outdoors in brief

loop drive in the developed area of the Craters of the Moon National Monument and Preserve is now free of snow and open to visitors.

"At our 6,000-foot elevation, winter conditions remain for a longer time than they do in surrounding areas," said Jim Morris, superintendent at the monument. "The road and some trails are open, but snow still covers much of the landscape."

Along the loop drive, the lava tube or caves area remains closed because snow and ice make access hazardous. The caves area and most trails are generally snow-free by mid-May. Spring storms may temporarily close the road, so visitors are advised to call for current conditions.

The park's visitor center is open from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. daily. A Golden Eagle Passport or National Park Pass can be purchased at the center for $5 each. These passes, respectively, provide entrance into all federal recreational areas or all national parks. The campground is open on a limited basis with a pit toilet and water available from a spigot in the visitor parking lot. Campground space is $6 per night.

Mule Deer Foundation grills up on April 30

TWIN FALLS — The Magic Valley Chapter of the Mule Deer Foundation hosts its 9th annual fund-raiser and barbecue on April 30 at the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds. Doors open at 2 p.m. with games and activities for the whole family. Fundraiser profits are sent to the Mule Deer Foundation for future projects on mule deer populations. Idaho profits have funded projects such as the bitterbrush planting in areas of the South Hills. The chapter will host another bitterbrush planting on April 2 on public lands near Elmo.

This year's banquet includes an early-bird drawing on April 9, for a Henry Golden Boy $200 call-rifle. You must purchase your dinner tickets and $40 in raffle tickets by the deadline in order to be eligible for the drawing.

Regular membership and single dinner tickets are available for $45; two dinner tickets go for $65. Young dinner tickets are $10 each. For more prices and information on Mule Deer Foundation events, call chairman Dan Hansen at 731-7270 or 536-1655.

Study Craters with Sawtooth Institute

ARCO — The Sawtooth Science Institute in Sun Valley will hold a Craters of the Moon National History Teachers' Workshop on April 29 and 30 at the Craters of the Moon.

The workshop is designed for teachers who are preparing to bring their classes to the Craters of the Moon National Monument for a field trip led by Doug Owen. Owen has degrees in geology and education from Kent State, taught junior high school science and was a geologist with the U.S. Geological Survey. He currently is lead interpreter and park geologist at the Craters of the Moon National Monument and Preserve.

On April 29, park scientists will make various slide shows and other presentations about the natural history of the Craters of the Moon to prepare for the field trip the next day. Participants will spend the day April 30 in the field visiting a variety of sites that classes can be taken to within the monument. They will learn about the geology, plants, animals and ecology firsthand and study what they will be looking at with their students.

The workshop is free to the general public. The teacher's transcript fee for undergraduate credit is $60 and for post-graduate credit is $72.

Space is limited to 15 participants, and early registration is encouraged. For more information or to register, call (208) 788-9686, send e-mail to ssi@smhs.edu or visit the Web site <http://smhs.edu> or visit the Web site <http://smhs.edu>.

The Sawtooth Science Institute is an outreach center of Idaho State University's College of Education and the Idaho Museum of Natural History.

Jerome Sporting Clays shoot takes place Sunday

JEROME — The Jerome County Rod and Gun Club will hold a Sporting Clays shoot Sunday, April 17, at the club range. Set-up is at 9 a.m., with shooting to start at 10 a.m. Drive north on Highway 93 toward Shoshone. Turn right at mile marker 64. The cost is $20 for members and $23 for non-members. Juniors ages 16 and under are $14. The price includes 100 targets. We will be shooting for four free gift certificates from Simerly's.

Three winners will be based on Lewis Clax System plus one winner for low score. Come and join the fun and bring a friend.

Cross-country skiing continues on North Valley

SUN VALLEY — Although recent warm weather has deteriorated snow conditions on the lower North Valley Trails, there is still plenty of skiing going on further north on trails in the Prairie Creek area and at Galena Lodge.

The Blaine County Recreation District groomed the mid-section of the Harriman Trail (Cathedral Pines to Prairie Creek) and Prairie Creek Loop last on Saturday, April 9. The next scheduled groom if on Sunday, April 10 and will focus on the trails around Galena Lodge.

If snow conditions allow, grooming will continue next week on a limited number of trails at Galena Lodge. Grooming will be focused on the trails with the best conditions and that see the highest use.

Spring weather conditions will determine how long the Blaine County Recreation District will be able to groom. The best bet is to check the Hotline, 788-6622, or the trails conditions page on the BCRD website (www.bcrd.com). Both the Hotline and website are updated every morning with current information on trail conditions.

Should grooming continue through next week, the North Valley Trails will have provided a 130 days of cross-country skiing this season. Although not a record (our highest year was 170 days in 2003), it is still a notable amount considering it wasn't until the second week in December before we had enough snow to open trails.

Our North Valley Trails surveys mailed out last week. If you did not receive one and would like to comment on the North Valley Trails or Galena Lodge, please call the Blaine County Recreation District at 788-2117.

'we fortunately escaped'

The Missouri River bottoms, through which the Lewis and Clark Expedition traveled early in 1805, are now beneath Lake Sakakawea, the result of placing Garrison Dam across the Missouri River, a part of the six-dam Pick-Sloan Plan.

Trail to the mouth of the Columbia River. Lewis and Clark's location 200 years ago this week. (Lewis and Clark Expedition, edited by Gary E. Moulton, will appear each Thursday. Copyright Lee Enterprises.)

April 13, 1805 — about 2 in the afternoon ... a sudden squall of wind struck us and turned the [white] perogoe so much on the side as to alarm Sharbono who was steering at the time, in this state of alarm he threw the perogoe with her side to the wind ... I ordered Dreyer to the helm and the sails to be taken in, which was instant executed and the perogoe being steered before the wind was again placed in a state of security, this accident was near costing us dearly, believing this vessel to be the most steady and safe, we had embarked on board of it our instruments, Papers, medicine and the most valuable part of the merchandise ... we had also embarked on board ourselves, with three men who could not swim and the squaw with the young child, all of whom, had the perogoe over-set, would most probably have perished ... however we fortunately escaped and pursued our journey.

BRIEFLY IN MONEY

Jim Bob's Bakery is back in business.

TWIN FALLS — There's good news for people missing their morning doughnut fix from Jim Bob's Bakery Inc.

The bakery reopened Monday morning, resuming its offering of freshly baked doughnuts, muffins, brownies, breads, coffee and the like.

Owner Dallas Taylor had to temporarily close the doors due to a knee injury he received in February. The Feb. 3 closure left two employees without work for a little over two months. It also sent the shop's 50 to 75 daily customers looking elsewhere for goodies.

The bakery, at 352 Second Ave. E., was opened in 1984 by Dallas' father, Jim Bob Taylor, who still works in the bakery. Jim Bob's Bakery is open from 6 to 11 a.m. Monday through Friday, and deliveries are available by calling 733-1060.

Chili feed tickets are $5 each and can be purchased in advance or at the door. The menu includes chili, cornbread and a beverage. Participants will vote on their favorite chili, and a people's choice award will be given. Hot dogs will be available for $1 each.

Fastenal reports Q1 increase in net sales

BURLEY — Winona, Minn.-based Fastenal Co., with branches in Burley and Twin Falls, on Wednesday said net sales for its first quarter, which ended March 31, grew 24.5 percent from a year earlier to $35.8 million.

Net earnings increased from $28.1 million a year ago to $37.0 million in the first quarter, an increase of 31.6 percent. Earnings per share grew from 37 cents to 49 cents, said the seller of industrial and commercial construction supplies.

During the first quarter, Fastenal opened 74 new sites, which represent 4.8 percent growth in the store tally since Dec. 31. Employment grew 5.4 percent since Dec. 31, to 5,799 site employees.

McDonald's boosts profit outlook for Q1

OAK BROOK, Ill. — McDonald's Corp., the nation's biggest fast-food restaurant chain, said Wednesday that it expects to report a first-quarter profit above Wall Street estimates.

McDonald's said particularly strong March sales as well as expected the better-than-expected showing, which analysts attributed to higher-priced menu items and operational improvements.

The company expects a post profit of 56 cents per share, up 40 percent from a year ago.

Excluding a tax benefit and expenses from stock-based compensation, McDonald's said earnings will be 46 cents per share.

That surpasses the 42-cent consensus estimate of analysts surveyed by Thomson Financial.

Total sales increased 6 percent for the quarter compared with a year ago. Excluding exchange rate effects, sales would have risen a more modest 6 percent, McDonald's said.

So far this year, McDonald's same-store sales are up 4.6 percent from the same period of 2004.

The Golden Arches are everywhere—and it started 50 years ago Friday, when a milkshake machine salesman opened his first McDonald's in this Chicago suburb and began turning a small chain of hamburger stands into an empire that would include 30,000 restaurants, serve 50 million people a day, and become a symbol of the House votes to get rid of the estate tax in 2010

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — When Rep. Kenny Hulshof's parents died, he waited in suspense to find out whether their estate — a 514-acre farm, a life insurance policy, a house, a combine, three tractors and some irrigation equipment — would trigger estate taxes.

"I'm sitting across the mahogany desk from our longtime family accountant with an auditing machine with the tape on it," the Missouri Republican said. "I'm breaking out in a cold sweat."

The House, including Hulshof, voted 272-168 on Wednesday to eliminate the estate tax in 2010 and beyond.

Supporters said the families of farmers and small businesses shouldn't have to worry about liquidating those assets to pay a tax.

House Minority Whip Steny Hoyer, R-Md., said the lawmakers' story actually distorts a Democratic argument for keeping the estate tax — the levy hits only a tiny minority of wealthy estates.

"The bottom line was he didn't pay a tax," Hoyer said. "This House bill prevents the tax on inherited estates from reappearing after a one-year

Fishing store must leave Mackay business park

The Associated Press

MACKAY — A fishing-equipment business that six months ago was welcomed as a way to ease rural Idaho's economic squeeze must leave a Custer County business park amid complaints that its sales show government-subsidized advantage over local retailers.

Gone Fishin' Enterprises opened last fall in the $15 million Oscar Wornick Business Park. The park gets local, state and federal funding. The Mackay City Council, which manages the park, has asked the company to leave by June 1.

The maker of fishing lures and fly-tying materials sells fishing gear to wholesalers, including 3-M Corp.'s Scientific Angler division, which distributes to chain and federal funding. The Mackay City Council, which manages the park, has asked the company to leave by June 1.

But it also has a retail shop, and Mackay officials say the company's low rent — about $335 a month, or 11 cents per square foot for 8,500 square feet — puts other retailers at private locations at a disadvantage.

Economic development officials in Custer County say it would be a blow to the county's economy if the company were to move elsewhere. Gone Fishin' employs 21 people in a county where the 6.7 percent unemployment rate is nearly 60 percent higher than Idaho's statewide average.

"There aren't a lot of options for rural communities," said Tim Solomon, executive director of the Regional Development Alliance, adding that he's now trying to find where Gone Fishin' a new home. "A company that size can't afford down time."

Should Gone Fishin' leave, the economic effect on Custer County could be $20 million over 15 years, Solomon said.

Lured to Idaho from Washington state in 1958, Gone Fishin' had been lured as a win-win for both the company and Mackay when it became the park's sole occupant last fall. In September, Gov. Dirk Kempthorne called Gone Fishin' the kind of rural development that Idaho needs.

Mackay Mayor Otto Higbee declined to comment on the council's decision, citing "possible pending litigation."

Joe Stanislaus, a Gone Fishin' accountant, said the company has a lease agreement in place in order for it to sell on the Internet. The merchandise sold locally is small compared with what the company does on the Web.

Stanislaus also said the city hasn't compared what Gone Fishin' sells at its shop with what is offered by local retailers.

State guards unclaimed property

The Times-News

BURLEY — The state is safeguarding unclaimed property for hundreds of people and businesses whose last known addresses are in Magic Valley.

The Idaho State Tax Commission is looking for those folks, and asking they'll call to claim the property.

It's stuff for which Idaho businesses have been unable to find the rightful owners, such as payroll checks, contents of safe-deposit boxes, tax funds, stock dividends, workers' compensation benefits and the like.

The Idaho Legislature in 1997 changed state law governing unclaimed property. Now after property that's safeguarded by the tax commission remains unclaimed for 10 years, it will transfer to state ownership and be deposited in Idaho's general fund.

The first time that will happen is in 2007. Before the 1997 law, the tax commission held unclaimed property for its rightful owners in perpetuity.

The Times-News on Thursdays prints names of a sampling of unclaimed property owners whose last known addresses are in Magic Valley communities. Today's list is from Burley and Sun Valley. The tax commission said each person or business listed today, or the person's heir — owns unclaimed property worth more than $100.

Watch for other towns in coming weeks.

Stocks sink on worries about earnings

NEW YORK (AP) — A sharp slide in oil prices wasn't enough to keep stocks aloft Wednesday as March retail sales fell short of expectations and investors grew apprehensive about the second consumer spending. The Dow Jones industrial average sank below 100 points in the face of gloom corporate outlooks and anxiety about first-quarter results.

A bleak forecast from Harley-Davidson Inc. started the day on a sour note, and things only got worse for equity investors after the decline in fuel prices failed to lift stocks. The energy sector itself dropped 2.46 percent, making it one of the worst-performing segments of the market as the oil price failed to deliver a positive performance for the day was health care.

This surprised some analysts, as it suggested a shift away from the commodity-driven stocks that have led the market but few were alarmed by the pullback.

"The decline today reflected fear, really, of earnings announcements, and it was retail sales. But the traditional ingredients for a bear market, I just don't think are in place yet," said Ken Tower, chief market strategist for Citigroup's CyberTrader. "We're looking at this as a bottoming process, money is moving out of the energy sector into other areas, particularly the long-lost health care sector."

The Dow closed down 104.04, or 0.99 percent, at 10,403.93.

The broader gauges also fell. The Standard & Poor's 500 index lost 13.97, or 1.18 percent, to 1,173.79. The Nasdaq composite index fell 31.03, or 1.55 percent, to 1,974.37.

Trading in the Treasury market was also choppy, partly because of a poorly received five-year note sale. The price of the 10-year note declined slightly, but its yield held steady at 4.36 percent. The U.S. dollar slipped against other major currencies; gold prices rose.

Traders surround a post on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange Tuesday, investors unnerved by the nation's soaring trade deficit stocks lower.

Crude futures, sagged after the International Energy Agency forecast slower growth in oil demand this year, and the U.S. Department of Energy reported a larger-than-expected build in fuel supplies.

Light, sweet crude for May delivery slid $1.64 to settle at $50.22 per barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange. Analysts said the lack of a positive reaction in stocks suggests investors may be skeptical about whether the declines will stick.

"I would've expected the market to act a little bit better because the price is doing so well," said Todd Clark, head of listed equity trading at Wells Fargo Securities. "But with the retail numbers coming in lighter than expected, we're starting to have evidence that higher gas and fuel prices are starting to crimp the consumer, and I think the fear is that that won't change any time soon."

McDonald's

his hamburger stand. He saw a revolutionary machine for preparing and called the Speedee Service System and decided it could be replicated all over the country.

Kroc formed a partnership with the brothers before buying them out in 1961.

And Kroc took the business to places that weren't so sunny. "Everybody thought it would never be able to go in Illinois, that people wouldn't get out of their cars in January," said Philip Kirsch, author of the book "O'Connell's Road, Golden Arches" about chain restaurants.

They did. People flocked to Kroc's first McDonald's. With Kroc watching, and sometimes carrying a pumkinie to scrape gum off the sidewalk, they lined up to order 15-cent burgers and 10-cent fries. Or simply stood outside watching the all-male staff — Kroc once threatened his employees thinking only about burgers and fries — prepare food assembly-line style.

It was unlike anything anyone in town had ever seen. But Gundlach, now 62, recalls playing a colossal order for his high school classmates.

"I remember ordering over 100 hamburgers, 50 french fries and got the whole order in about 10 minutes," he said. "They were going like crazy."

Kroc, who died in 1984, understood something about the people who don't like surprises. He insisted his restaurants look the same, serve the same food and follow the same grill and fryer procedures, offering customers a consistent experience whether in Boston or Budapest.

"I know executives who go to Singapore and China and wherever... and they end up eating McDonald's," Ziaja said. "The reason they do it is they want to know what they are going to get."

Another reason for McDonald's success? It was well-positioned for America's changing lifestyle. In the '50s, as more Americans were climbing into cars, McDonald's was there to satisfy the demands of a faster, more mobile country.

Later, as more women went to work and mothers were increasingly hustling kids to after-school events, McDonald's sold busy parents "You Deserve a Break Day."

McDonald's also shrewdly recognized what people like to eat and how much of it they want.

Sam Monahan, host of Sara's Secrets on the Food Network, executive chef of Guinness magazine and food editor for "Good Morning America," said the folks at McDonald's "understand that Americans are totally into bigger is better."

After several years of stagnant U.S. sales and its first-ever quarterly loss in 2002, McDonald's has been profitable for the past two years. Its profits jumped 55 percent in 2004 from the year before to $2.28 billion.

McDonald's refuses to take the blame for obesity and other health problems, saying those are the result of the choices people make. "It's all about personal responsibility," said spokeswoman Lisa Horowitz.

At the same time, McDonald's has been a leader in the fast-food industry in introducing healthier food such as salads and recently launching a campaign teaching children to eat well and get some exercise.

But as McDonald's continues to make such changes, it remains the face of the fast-food industry and the face of American capitalism and, some say, American culinary imperialism.

The Golden Arches have become a target of protests and boycotts around the world, including the ransacking of a half-built restaurant in France and the deadly firebombing of a McDonald's in Indonesia.

"Our size works for us," said Irwin Krieger, who owns seven McDonald's restaurants in New York City. "And sometimes it works against us."
