Flash floods deluge area

As a dump truck rebuilds the washed away portion of Tremansy Street, Kay Powell, a part-time employee of the city of Albion, tries to redirect the water in Albion on Tuesday. Forecasters say the wet weather is likely to persist for at least another week.

High waters damage homes, destroy bridges in Albion

By Julie Pence
 Times-News writer

ALBION — It's not the first time Albion has experienced flooding, but it might be the worst flooding the city's 262 residents can remember.

"It's the biggest mess I've ever seen," resident Pat Butz said. "Benign" and 2 inches of rain fell on the southern Cassia County community late Monday afternoon in less than three hours. The deluge caused Marsh Creek, which flows through the middle of Albion, to overflow its banks and flood at least a dozen homes, Mayor Donald Danner said. Three bridges in the area have been washed out.

"It was rushing like a torrent. You can't believe how fast it was going," said Butz, who was unable to work his Monday evening shift at Cassia Regional Medical Center because of the flooding.

By Tuesday morning, three inches of water covered the first story floor of his home.

With more rain forecast for Wednesday and Thursday, Danner and other volunteers were scurrying to stack sandbags around the Butz residence before the next storm hit.

Floods are nothing new to this town that was settled in the 1860s, since it is nestled in the shadow of Mt. Harrison. Bracing for spring floods is just a fact of life when the snow starts to melt, but Tuesday's flood might have been more impressive than any in recent memory because rain has been pouring in heavy amounts intermittently for over a week.

Mike Beus, of the Burley Bureau of Reclamation office, said the mountains as well as flatlands on the south side of the

Police search for missing children

Brother and sister unaccounted for after triple homicide at Coeur d'Alene home

The Associated Press

COEUR D'ALENE — Police used a helicopter and dogs Tuesday to search a forested area for two children missing from a home where three homicide victims were found the day before.

An Amber Alert was issued for the 5-year-old boy and 8-year-old girl by Kootenai County authorities, who said they had no clues about the children's whereabouts.

"Our main concern now is the two children we cannot find," Sheriff Rocky Watson said.

The FBI was assisting in the search, while neighboring Spokane County, Wash., sent sheriff's officers and police detectives to assist at the crime scene, Watson said.

Watson could not say for certain if the children were abducted from the home, located along Interstate 90 about eight miles east of Coeur d'Alene.

"We just know there are two children who are normally in that house who are not," Watson said. "We don't have any leads of travel or people of interest."

The Amber Alert was issued for Shasta Greene, 8, who is 3-foot-10 and 40 pounds with long Auburn hair and hazel eyes, and her brother Dylan Greene, 9, who is 4 feet and 60 pounds with a blond crewcut and blue eyes. Both children lived at the house with their mother.

"We are counting on someone out there knowing something about the family that will lead us to these children," Watson said.

The victims in the house were identified as Brenda Greene, 40, mother of the missing children; Slade Greene, 13, brother of the missing children; and Mark McKenzie, 37, of Coeur d'Alene, Watson said.

Watson did not know the relationship of the missing children and the others. A Mark McKenzie is listed as a neighbor of Brenda Greene, according to property records.

Watson said the deaths were not a case of a murder-suicide. Sheriff's Capt. Ben Wolfinger said the bodies bore obvious signs of trauma but he did not elaborate.

The children's father, Steven Greene, is not a suspect, Watson said. Investigators have talked with him and described him as distraught.

The lead detective told me he was furious, Watson said. "I didn't ask for details of why he was ruled out."

Sempra officials tout plant

By Michelle Dunlop
 Times-News writer

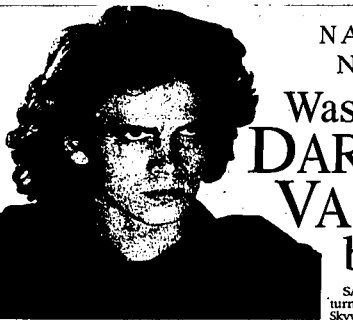

JEROME — At one of their first public appearances in Magic Valley, representatives of a proposed coal-fired power plant emphasized community input to a fairly calm crowd Tuesday in Jerome.

"What this process is about is doing what the community wants to do — not just what we want to do," said Marty C. Swartz, director of project development for Sempra Generation.

In April, Sempra Generation — a subsidiary of San Diego-based Sempra Energy — announced its plan to locate a 600-megawatt coal-fired power plant northeast of the city of Jerome. Next week, Sempra's first application in a lengthy permitting process will be discussed at a Jerome County Planning and Zoning Commission meeting. Swartz, joined by two Sempra coworkers, presented information on the station and proposed facility at the Jerome Rotary Club meeting Tuesday.

"We have been uniformly impressed by their openness into our community," local attorney

NATURE VS. NURTURE Was DARTH VADER born bad?

SAN RAFAEL, Calif. (AP) — The father turned evil. The son didn't. Was Anakin Skywalker the proverbial bad seed, or did he just have a tougher upbringing than his boy Luke?

George Lucas' chronicle of the Skywalker family, which concludes with "Star Wars: Episode III — Revenge of the Sith," makes a nice cinematic case study of the old nature vs. nurture debate. Are good and evil bred in the bone, or cultivated through life experience?

"Revenge of the Sith" completes Lucas' prequel series about the roots of Anakin, a dashing pilot and Jedi knight who turns to the dark side and is transformed into Darth Vader.

How about it, George? Was Anakin born bad?

"No," Lucas told The Associated Press. "That's why most people got upset about 'Episode I.' They said, 'Well, he should be a monster.' But he's not a monster. He has sort of heightened skills and awareness, and he's smarter than most people, but at

Group puts 36 percent of Idaho's nursing homes on 'watch list'

By Terry Smith
 Times-News correspondent

BOISE — Thirty nursing homes in Idaho have been placed on a national watch list because of regulatory violations that harmed patients or placed them in immediate jeopardy.

Facilities on the watch list represent 36 percent of Idaho's 82 licensed nursing homes.

The National Nursing Home Watch List is maintained on the

To learn more ...

The National Nursing Home Watch List can be viewed online at www.memberofthefamily.net. Information on nursing home inspections is also available from the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services at www.medicare.gov under the subhead "Compare Nursing Homes in Your Area."

Six of the facilities listed are in Magic Valley. The National Nursing Home Watch List is maintained on the Internet by Maryland-based Member of the Family LLC, a privately owned nursing home organization that collects data on some 16,000 nursing homes nationwide.

Information used in developing the watch list is taken from annual inspection and complaint investigation reports written by state regulatory agencies. In Idaho, this falls under the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare Bureau of Facility Standards.

The number and type of violations vary with each facility. The two most common infractions at Idaho facilities are failure to prevent or properly care for bedsores and failure to give adequate nursing care and services to get or keep the highest quality of life possible.

Other violations include failure to protect patients from abuse, mistreatment, neglect or theft, failure to provide a safe physical environment, failure to meet nutritional needs, and failure to report and investigate incidents of abuse, mistreatment or neglect.

Many facilities have only one or two violations. Others have more. Several nursing homes have been guilty of violations causing harm or immediate jeopardy in three or more of their most recent annual inspections.

In order to be placed on the watch list a nursing home must have been cited for one or more violations that caused harm or placed patients in immediate jeopardy. Violations of less severity are not taken into consideration in developing the list.

"Somewhere we had to say when you get to this point, of causing actual harm or immediate jeopardy, or means said."

GEORGE MIDDLEBURY'S QUOTE OF THE WEEK
 "Laugh at yourself, but don't ever smile at someone else's expense. If you are laughing at yourself, you are laughing at the things that you are doing wrong. If you are smiling at someone else's expense, you are smiling at the things that they are doing wrong. Have the nerve to go into uncharted territory."
 Alan Alda, Actor and Director

 and Rotarian Rob Williams told the group.

Swarz outlined the company's reasons for locating a coal plant in Idaho. The plant will be built in Jerome County near both rail lines, which facilitate coal transport from Wyoming, and a major power substation, allowing Sempra to transmit its power easily.

"Our goal. We provide affordable, reliable power for the Pacific Northwest. It is not for California," Sempra has other projects under development — such as a facility in Nevada — that will provide power to California, Swartz said. Whether Idaho receives any of Sempra's power generation, however, remains up to Idaho Power Co., he said.

"I can't make Idaho Power buy my power," Swartz said. "Idaho Power is one of our key customers in this process, but I can't make them do it."

Sempra currently operates two coal-fired power plants in Texas. It also owns and operates several natural gas power plants. Although the company is exploring renewables, such as wind, Swartz said those sources don't generate electricity consistently like coal. Therefore, the company is looking to add more coal into its energy-generation portfolio.

"The United States has a wealth of coal reserves, making stable supplies and prices, unlike natural gas, Swartz said. "It's plentiful," he said. "With today's technology, we think it can be environmentally responsible."

Sempra officials are working to finalize what they consider a "state of the art" plant design. Information about its emissions, Sempra will hold open houses for the public as the permitting process progresses, said Swartz.

"This position is very sweet and very glib," Villegas said. "That is for the people of Idaho to decide."

Sempra representatives again argued their case for the Jerome County Planning and Zoning Commission meeting that will be held on Monday.

"Times-News reporter Michelle Dunlop can be reached at 735-3327 or by e-mail at mdunlop@magicvalley.com.

Coming Sunday
 The Times-News will take a closer look at many aspects of Sempra Generation's plans to build a 600-megawatt coal-fired power plant northeast of Jerome.

Pedro Villegas, manager of government affairs for the company, said, "You deserve those answers. And you'll get them from us." Villegas and Swartz fielded questions on Sempra's water rights for the Jerome plant. The facility will require 7,600 acre feet of water for production each year. Sempra has options on groundwater rights for that amount, Swartz said.

"This should not be an impact on other water right holders," Swartz said. "Water right transfers will mark one of several opportunities for public comment. However, much of the jurisdiction about Sempra's decision to locate in Jerome County rests with county commissioners. Several residents and legislators have questioned whether the state needs siting provisions to expand that determination to include all of the state's other counties and state entities.

Sempra has located power plants in states with siting commissions, Villegas said. So, the prospect of siting legislation will not deter Sempra, he said.

"Our position is very sweet and very glib," Villegas said. "That is for the people of Idaho to decide."

Sempra representatives again argued their case for the Jerome County Planning and Zoning Commission meeting that will be held on Monday.

National Nursing Home Watch List

Annual inspections or complaint investigations are conducted by the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare Bureau of Facility Standards. Inspection and investigation reports later than those listed on the chart have not been taken into account on the watch list database and may later change a facility's status. Nursing homes can be removed from the list if they pass later inspections with no violations that cause actual harm or immediate jeopardy to any of their patients.

 "Something to look at," said Denise Steele, who co-founded Member of the Family. The other founder is Edward Waters, a Maryland medical doctor with nursing home experience.

Steele and Waters co-authored the book "Danger Zone: Unlock the Secrets of Nursing Home Medical Records to Protect Your Loved One." Steele said the organization's overall purpose is to improve the quality of care provided by nursing homes nationwide.

"I'm not here to bash them — some of them do a good job — but someone who is just awful," he said. "We're not here to bash them — some of them do a good job — but someone who is just awful," he said.

Health authorities in Idaho generally agree there is room for improvement in nursing home care, but believe information on the watch list can be misleading.

"My concern is it tends to evoke a bit of panic," said Mary Edger, Magic Valley regional ombudsman with the Idaho Commission on Aging.

"I don't think they gave enough information about the facilities they were passing judgment on," she said. "I'm not saying it's a bad Web site, but if someone were asking for information about nursing homes, I probably wouldn't send them to that Web site."

Steele said an Idaho Department of Health and Welfare spokesman said "It's a watch list and that's how everyone should view it. People should not judge these facilities based only on the watch list."

Steele acknowledged that information on the watch list is not always current, but said the list is updated with new information every 90 to 100 days.

Nursing homes can be removed from the watch list if they pass later annual inspections without a violation causing actual harm or leading to immediate jeopardy, he said.

"When violations are found, regardless of the severity, nursing homes are required to develop and implement corrective action plans."

"The department is always concerned when there's immediate jeopardy or actual harm to a patient," Ross said. "These violations are mostly limited to isolated cases. It's rare for us to find a situation where the nursing home can't get the situation right."

Generally the department is pleased with the nursing home industry in Idaho, Ross continued. "We've had some problems, but overall I'd stack the deck against nursing homes in any other state."

Steele said the watch list is valuable because it's easy to read and because it shows patterns and trends.

The overall national failure rate of nursing homes is 70 percent," he said.

"I really think there is quite a bit of room for improvement. From our point of view, from our experience, when you see these types of violations, especially when they're repeated from year to year, it means you need to take a closer look."

Keith Holloway is chief executive officer of Western Health Care Corporation in Boise. The company specializes in management and consultation for nursing homes and assisted living facilities in Idaho and other Western states. It manages one of the nursing homes on the list, Parke View Care and Rehabilitation Center.

Regarding the two violations at the Health and Welfare Bureau, "I don't want to have that. That's not good enough."

Holloway said it is alarming that 30 of 82 nursing homes in the state have been cited recently for violations causing harm or immediate jeopardy. He said one of the reasons might be that the Health and Welfare Bureau of Facility Standards is stricter than agencies in many states.

"Some people would criticize the regulatory environment in Idaho," he said. "I think we can complain about that."

"We need to be more vigilant. You're never going to achieve perfection. In every phase of your operation, but you need to work for it."

Harman described as kindly at sentencing

FOOT HOOD, Texas (AP) — The Army spokesman convicted of mistreating prisoners at Iraq's Abu Ghraib prison was kindhearted and helpful while serving in an Iraqi city, witnesses said Tuesday at her sentencing hearing.

When other U.S. soldiers just wanted to sit in the shade after a long workday, Spc. Sabrina Harman ran around in the hot sun playing games with Iraqi children, testimony indicated. Even a prisoner who dealt with her at Abu Ghraib called her "just like a sister."

Even Spc. Matthew Wideman, the only witness offered by the prosecution, conceded that Harman was a great person, always willing to help anybody.

Harman, 27, was found guilty late Monday on six of the seven charges she faced for her role in the mistreatment of Iraqi inmates in late 2003. She faces up to 5.5 years in prison.

U.S. troops, militants clash in Mosul; Clerics shot dead

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — U.S. troops clashed with militants in a Mosul neighborhood Tuesday, killing 20, the military and Iraqi officials said in Baghdad.

gunmen killed a Shiite Muslim cleric, and two missing Sunni clerics were found shot dead, police said.

The killings of the clerics threatened to increase sectarian tensions in Iraq a day after the government vowed to crack down on anyone targeting Shiites and Sunnis. The defense minister said Iraqi troops no longer would be allowed to enter houses of worship or universities.

"I am hearing that Iraqi National Guards are raiding mosques and Shiite town houses," Defense Minister Saadoun al-Dulaimi said Monday. "We have issued orders to all units that say it is strictly prohibited to all members of the defense ministry to raid mosques, Shiite town houses and churches."

On Tuesday, U.S. troops and militants clashed in the northern city of Mosul, and heavy exchanges of machine-gun fire were heard, according to an Associated Press reporter at the scene.

U.S. forces were seen advancing into the eastern neighborhood of Dhubbat—a known insurgent stronghold in Iraq's third-largest city.

Senate passes version of highway spending bill

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Even on the brink of a partisan meltdown, Democratic and Republican senators found something they could agree on Tuesday: a $295 billion highway bill providing funds for popular traffic-easing projects.

The measure, approved 89-11, has drawn a veto threat from the White House, which considers it too pricey in the face of the federal budget deficit.

The Senate bill now must be reconciled with a $284 billion House measure that falls within the president's spending limit. But the House bill also has drawn—the wrath-of-deficit hawks because it includes thousands of projects sought by lawmakers for their districts.

House and Senate negotiators hope to reach a compromise before authorization for the federal highway program expires in two weeks.

Floods

Snake River are already saturated, so whatever hits the ground is going to run toward the river instead of sinking into the soil. The situation in Albion is so extreme that the city council declared a state of emergency Tuesday. The reason is the city's wastewater system is overloaded, and the entire city of Albion is threatened, according to a press release.

School buses didn't run because of the bridges that were washed out.

Some 40 miles west of Albion, people living in the South Hills are also coping with flooding. Rock Creek is also overflowing its banks.

"One of our fields is pretty well inundated," said Shari Helman, who lives 14 miles south of Hansen.

"The flood isn't as bad as it was in 1984, she recalled, when on Mothers' Day weekend, she began using a row boat to get to her car every morning. That siege lasted for three weeks.

Since then, a number of homes have been built in the Rock Creek Canyon, but it still appear to be at risk for flood damage, Helman said. That's because planning and zoning regulations don't allow new houses to be built on a flood plain.

But many of the Albion homes are older, they were built before such regulations were in existence, Danner pointed out. Hence, some are sitting right where the water runs during flash floods. Butz said he figures he'll be OK since his 1901 home is insured.

The floods in southern Cassia and Twin Falls counties were a surprise, but residents near Carey in Blaine County had been watching the water rising in Little Wood Reservoir for some time. There was some spilling from the reservoir on Monday night as well as overflow from the Little Wood River.

Neighbors joined forces to load and stack sandbags to prevent water from flowing through three homes on the south end of Carey. Mayor Rick Baird said he was up into the early morning hours working shoulder to shoulder with a group of residents who volunteered to help those homeowners avoid a muddy mess.

John Peck, principal at the Carey High School, released students Tuesday morning to help with the sandbagging.

The National Weather Service is predicting more heavy rain in central Idaho starting today. There is a flood warning imposed on Blaine and Lincoln counties through Friday.

Forecasters say the wet weather is likely to persist for at least another week. Since the drought started in 2000, the recent rains might seem out of the ordinary, but May is usually one of the wettest months on the plain, said weatherman Thomas Andretta.

Kathleen L. Turner of the Wood River Journal contributed to this report.

Protesting Cubans demand U.S. arrest militant in exile

HAVANA (AP) — Hundreds of thousands of Cubans answered Fidel Castro's call to file past the American mission early Tuesday in a "March against Terrorism" demanding that the United States arrest a Cuban exile sought in a deadly airliner bombing three decades ago.

"Down with terrorism!" the 78-year-old Castro shouted in brief comments before leading the march outside the U.S. Interests Section. "Down with Nazi doctrines and methods! Down with the lies!"

Wearing his traditional olive green military uniform and cap, the Cuban president walked six or seven blocks westward, despite an accidental fall in October that shattered his left kneecap.

Protesters were calling for the arrest of Castro's longtime foe, Luis Posada Carriles, a Cuban exile who recently traveled to the United States, where he is seeking political asylum. Venezuela has requested extradition of Posada in the 1976 airliner bombing that killed 73 people.

Posada denies involvement in the airliner bombing. In his first media interview since arriving in the United States earlier this year, Posada said he has come to realize the U.S. government is not looking for him.

Cuban President Fidel Castro, center, leads a march Tuesday to the American mission in Havana, as Cubans demanded that the United States arrest Cuban exile Luis Posada Carriles.

"At first I hid a lot," Posada said in story Tuesday in the Miami Herald, describing the time after his arrival in Miami. "I thought the (U.S.) government was looking for me."

"Now I hide a lot. People have recognized me in the market, at the doctor's office, mostly older people," said last week in the interview at a luxury condominium in Miami. U.S. officials have said they are not actively seeking Posada because there are no American warrants for his arrest.

A Department-of-Homeland-Security official said last week that Posada has applied for asylum in the United States. To be eligible for political asylum, he must prove that he has a well-founded fear of persecution in his native country, said the official, who asked not to be named.

Man won't talk, but plays piano

LONDON (AP) — Hospital authorities caring for a patient who refuses to talk but willingly plays the piano for hours said Tuesday they were investigating a number of new leads about his identity.

The tall, blond-haired man, who is in his 20s or early 30s, has not said a word since he was found, distressed and dressed in a dripping wet suit, on the Isle of Sheppey in Kent county, southeast England, on April 7.

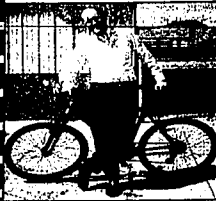

When staff at the Medway Maritime Hospital in Gillingham gave him written materials, he drew detailed pictures of a grand piano and, when shown the piano in the hospital chapel, sat down and played for two hours, causing staff to nickname him "Piano Man."

Baffled staff said their problems have been compounded by the fact that all the labels were cut off the man's clothes.

"That is a real twist — and it's enough of a mystery without that," said Adrian Lowthorpe, spokesman for the West Kent National Health Service Trust, which is caring for the man at a psychiatric unit in Dartford in north Kent.

Politician switches parties

TORONTO (AP) — A Conservative lawmaker defected to the ruling Liberal Party on Tuesday, all but assuring that Prime Minister Paul Martin's scandal-rocked minority government will win a confidence vote later this week.

Belinda Stronach, who lost a bid as leader of the Conservative Party last year, was appointed to Martin's Cabinet as the new minister of human resources and social development for a relatively inexperienced member of Parliament.

Her surprise announcement means Martin's minority government will have a much better chance of winning a confidence vote scheduled for Thursday.

"I regret to say that I do not believe the (Conservative) Party's leader is truly sensitive, to the needs of each part of the country and just how big and complex Canada really is," Stronach told a news conference.

Lawmakers back talks with separatists

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Spanish lawmakers Tuesday endorsed a government proposal to hold talks with the armed Basque separatist group ETA if it renounces violence, the latest effort to end the group's decades-long campaign of independence that has killed hundreds of people.

Prime Minister Jose Luis Rodriguez Zapatero has insisted that his proposal for negotiations would rule out concessions toward ETA's goal of Basque independence and focus only on terms for its dissolution and the status of more than 500 ETA prisoners. His request for parliamentary support for those negotiations was an unprecedented gesture.

Vader

the same time, he makes rather bad decisions.

Lucas chose to start with Anakin's boyhood, showing him progressing from cheery precocious innocent in "Episode I — The Phantom Menace" to churlish, loveless puppy in "Episode II — Attack of the Clones," to twisted terminator in "Revenge of the Sith."

As a prodigy with skills beyond his years, Anakin became seduced by the thought that he was destined for greater things than the average Jedi, said Lucas pal Steven Spielberg.

"I think it was simple ambition that turned him to the dark side," Spielberg said. "The trilogy says to me it's the dangers of that ambition. Look, he was in pod races at too young of an age. In this case, it was sort of the evil result of ambitions, being too ambitious for his own good."

Born into slavery on the desert planet Tatooine, Anakin was a mama's boy raised in a single-parent home never knowing who his father was. Identified by the Jedi as the next big thing, Force-wise, Anakin is whisked away to grow up under the tutelage of such galactic godfathers as Obi-Wan Kenobi, Yoda and Mace Windu.

As a teenager, Anakin returns to Tatooine and slaughters a band of renegade "bad people" for killing his mom, the Jedi apprentice's first steps toward a life of malevolence.

"Anakin comes from a single-mother upbringing. He had such an extreme attachment to his mother, and because of that, losing her obviously had massive impact," said Hayden Christensen, who plays Anakin.

In "Revenge of the Sith," Anakin's fear of losing the person he most loves — his wife, Padme Amidala — makes him an easy mark for the evil emperor-to-be, who tempts the young Jedi to the dark side with promises of boundless power that would allow him to save his woman.

"He really had to do with greed and the flip side of greed, which is possessiveness," Lucas said. "If you're a Jedi, you can't have possessiveness. You can love people, you can care about people, but you can't hold on to them. As a result, that's where he goes wrong, and it takes him down a path of gaining power, and that power corrupts itself. And pretty soon, he's thinking about becoming the emperor of the universe."

No one is born with a Napoleon complex. Yet our genetic raw material does establish tendencies for how each person will respond to environmental factors, said Alan Hiller, a child psychologist at Maimonides Medical Center in New York.

"We come into the world with a personality, a character. Some kids are more irritable, some more sensitive, some kids are easygoing," Hiller said. "We all come in with a particular set of biological pieces to make up who we are. How things act on those pieces determine how we navigate the rest of our lives."

Anakin does have a biological predisposition to great power in his sky-high level of "mitchlorians," the microscopic mojos from which Jedi and their evil counterparts, the Sith, derive their potency.

Then, so too does Luke, who inherits Dad's innate powers. "The Force is strong with this one," Darth observes on his first encounter with Luke in the original "Star Wars," during a dogfight in space.

"The Force runs strong in my family," Luke comments in "Return of the Jedi," hinting to Princess Leia of her own hidden powers as he reveals they are brother and sister.

Lucas grows up with a better support system, raised in a stern but loving home by his Uncle Owen and Aunt Beru, Anakin's step-kn, on their Tatooine moisture farm. And unknown to him, he has Obi-Wan watching over him from a distance, biding his time until young Skywalker is ready to learn the ways of the Force.

Of course, Luke's aunt and uncle are slain by Vader's thugs. And he faces a similar threat of loss — in Luke's case, his sister — yet resists the temptation to chuck his altar-boy ways and sell his soul to the emperor.

At the end of "Episode VI — Return of the Jedi," Luke's good heart is so strong, he drives his father back to the side of right as Anakin renounces decades of depravity and dies with a loving gaze fixed on his son.

"However Luke managed to become selfless, because he wasn't really trained in the same way a Jedi would be trained, but in the end, when push came to shove, he made a decision to be selfless," Lucas said. "He did not want the power to control the universe. He didn't want to be the emperor's right hand. He didn't want to destroy his father, and he refused to go along with the program."

Luke got the message. Anakin didn't.

"I think it comes from someone's obsession and someone's ambition, letting their ambition get the better of them," Christensen said. "That's something that Luke didn't really have. Although he had this sense of wanting to have something bigger, leave Tatooine and all that."

"But Anakin believed the hype. He thought he was the chosen one. That's a much different level of wanting something more. Absolute power, that's not something Luke wanted."

And it was not something Lucas wanted for Luke. For all the nature-vs.-nurture theorizing — Lucas has — the easiest answer on why Luke doesn't follow dad down the path of evil.

"It makes a good story," Lucas said, laughing.

EDITORIAL

Curbside recycling worth its weight in good savings

When you're in the editorial, don't put it in the trash can—even if you disagree with it.

If the Twin Falls City Council moves ahead with its initial plans, curbside recycling will be coming to a driveway near you. Apparently, settlement for a politically and environmentally popular trend—household recycling—has grown enough to make Twin Falls residents pay for it.

The City Council voted unanimously this month for a public hearing to discuss new charges for monthly garbage pickup and a curbside recycling program. City residents currently pay $4.65 a month for their garbage pickup. The recycling bin would boost the monthly charge to $5.70.

If approved, the city's recycling program would start Oct. 1 with residents using two trash containers delivered from PSI Environmental Systems, the city's contracted waste collector.

One would be a 95-gallon container for regular trash and a 15-gallon container for recycled products. If you look around you in an increasing number of venues, you'll see recycling is growing in acceptance and as a social cause.

But perhaps the best part of the deal is that the recycling could create additional savings, not just in the landfill but also from the recycled products. PSI is offering to give half of the revenue from the sale of recycled products back to the city.

That obviously would be a good deal. The question is how will the city use those funds? Would it cut other utility costs for Twin Falls residents? That matter, along with how this service would affect the Kivans Club recycling program, is worth discussion.

A main reason this program will flourish is the feel-good sentiment of recycling. Less trash in the landfill and more products being reprocessed and reused is good for public policy. But for it to be viable, a profit has to be made by those doing the service.

If PSI is willing to share in the recycling returns, it looks like a win-win situation for Twin Falls and its residents.

Read the fine print on new nukes

The great taboo against nuclear power seems to be over in Washington. This is a mixed blessing.

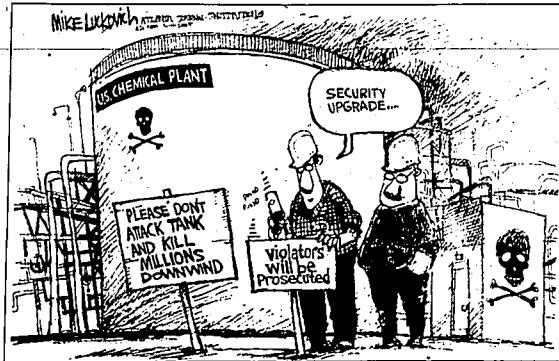

More than 65,000 protesters marched on the Capitol to hear energy experts like Jackson Browne and Benjamin Spock—and, of course, Jane Fonda, an authority because of her role in the "The China Syndrome."

Celebrities and politicians, warning of meltdowns and cancer epidemics, demanded the shutdown of all nuclear plants. Protesters dressed as mushrooms chanted, "Two, four, six, eight, we don't want to radiate." I went to the rally sympathetic to the movement but left unsure of which was scarier, nuclear power or its enemies.

Now some prominent environmentalists are having second thoughts, as Felicity Barringer reported in Sunday's New York Times. Given the threat of global warming, they say, encouraging new nuclear power plants may be necessary.

On the one hand, this risk-benefit analysis is a mixed improvement over the doom-and-gloom speeches and the chanting mushrooms. But by looking to Congress to chart a grand new energy policy, environmentalists are making the same mistake they made when they helped create the nuclear industry.

Environmentalists originally supported nuclear power because of its obvious benefits:

no dirty air from smokestacks, no need to strip the ground for coal or dig for oil. Economic benefits, however, were not so obvious to investors, who were leery of the plants' costs and new problems, like accidents and waste disposal.

But Washington decided that nuclear power was so good for the environment and national security—how would America cope with the crisis when fossil fuels ran out?—that it should be subsidized.

If Washington hadn't acted, nuclear power plants wouldn't have been built so fast, maybe not at all. But if the industry had been forced to deal with the costs and the risks on its own, it might have developed cheaper, simpler, more reliable plants.

Instead, it built unwieldy plants that were prone to problems, making them costly to operate and increasing public fears. Even though the fears about the American industry were overblown, they led to tighter regulations and more expense.

Some proponents of nuclear power argue that the U.S. industry was killed by too much regulation; others say it simply lost out to the fossil fuels we were used to be running out of. Whatever the reason, investors looking for a profit lost interest long ago in building nuclear plants in America.

But now, just as in the 1950s, some environmentalists and politicians are seeing something that investors don't. They think that uranium could once again be the fuel of the future—with their guidance.

Sens. John McCain and Joseph Lieberman are working on a plan in which conservatives would support limits on fossil fuel emissions if liberals agree to subsidies for corporations working on new nuclear technologies.

The rationale is the new environmental crisis, global warming, which may turn out to be more real than the 1950s crisis of vanishing fossil fuels.

But even if environmentalists and politicians are right this time about the problem, there's little reason to trust them to figure out which form of energy will be the solution.

Starting with nuclear power, they've backed one loser after another for the past half-century. They promised that their subsidies would move us beyond fossil fuels and produce electricity from vast solar arrays, solar towers, geothermal heat, ocean waves, sugar beets, corn, manure and something called biogas (you don't want to know). But when the subsidies ran out, the electricity stopped.

If politicians are determined to combat global warming, their best bet is to try something they understand: imposing taxes.

A tax on carbon emissions would make investors take into account the risks of global warming. I don't know if it would make them want to build new nuclear power plants, but I trust them to figure it out better than anyone in Washington would like to see the energy future. And at least they don't dress up as mushrooms.

Extremism is real culprit in Newsweek flap

Reaction to an inaccurate Newsweek report that led recently to rioting and death in Afghanistan suggests hysteria is, indeed, contagious.

To briefly recap, Newsweek reported in a small blurb (May 9) that American investigators at Guantanamo Bay had flushed a Koran down a toilet in an attempt to get Muslim terror suspects to talk. Once the Newsweek story was broadcast abroad, the usually reticent hate-America crowd erupted in mass panic. Havoc ensued.

At least 15 Afghans died and many more were injured. All because of a story that may not have been true. The "knowledgeable U.S. government source" who told Newsweek's Michael Isikoff and John Barry about the flushing apparently wasn't knowledgeable. At the risk of seeming insensitive, may I suggest that c'est la guerre and urge everyone to fall back on the tried-and-true: Breathe deeply and focus.

What we need here is a little perspective. All we can agree that flushing a Koran down a toilet, if physically possible, would be both insensitive and rude. If knowledgeable U.S. government sources generally have a higher tolerance threshold for such offenses. Put it this way: You could flush a Bible down a toilet in front of Goober in Kabul, and it's unlikely that Mayberry suddenly would be awash in blood. Without disrespecting true believers of Islam, one also could debate the relative miseries of seeing our favorite scripture disappear into the plumbing versus, say, watching airplanes fly into buildings, killing thousands of innocents, or the deaths of innocent suspects captured after 9/11. Not kidnaped members of an Afghan boy's choir.

To repeat: Newsweek's mistake was regrettable, but we should be allowing ourselves to mirror the emotional reactions of people who were by no measure justified in their response—even if the story had been proven true.

The same people feigning over a reported act of blasphemy didn't flinch while executing women for stepping outside sans burqa. I'm afraid my moral outrage is all tapped out.

While the world was reacting in righteous indignation to the Newsweek report, another story was circulating about Turkish women in Germany being executed by family members in "honor killings," sanctioned by certain interpretations of the Koran. Their offenses? Acting like Western women. Or in the pithy words of a 14-year-old Turkish boy who was justifying an execution: "The whore lived like a German."

Before the good Muslim world objects, let me assert once again: I don't see how Islam isn't the problem here.

The problem is ignorance and the right-wing Islamic faction that will use the Koran for its purposes, whether to incite a riot or murder a woman who refuses to wear her headscarf. The enemy is extremism.

I have no interest either in defending Newsweek or in justifying interrogators' methods, but let's be blunt: This rampant in Afghanistan didn't need a reason to riot; they needed an excuse. That the media provided one is regrettable, but that regret needs to be tempered by perspective and objectivity.

Instead, much of the anger the past several days has been directed not at the Islamist extremists who went berserk, but at the reporters who apparently got the story wrong. What if they'd been right? Should Newsweek not have reported it? Would the riots have been justified if someone had flushed a Koran?

We might debate these questions, but meanwhile, we should resist the urge to overreact as some have in suggesting that the press should be restricted or stifled. Although imperfect, a free press is one of our nation's highest expressions of freedom and the thing that separates us from the same right-wing, authoritarian, extremist forces that we condemn. Yet an alarming number of Americans, their faith in journalists damaged by recent scandals, have lost sight of the meaning and importance of a free press.

A recent University of Connecticut survey found, for example, that only 14 percent of respondents knew that freedom of the press was part of the First Amendment. Only 55 percent of those surveyed strongly agreed that newspapers should be allowed to publish first without government approval of a story. Now there's a finding to warm the cockles of a Taliban heart.

Once we start asking government permission to publish, we become partners in propaganda and cohorts of authoritarianism. Far better to risk mistakes—and even riots from the lunatic fringe—than to forfeit the right to question authority.

Mistakes will be made, but freedom means living to say, "I'm sorry."

Howard Allen — local legend

To know Howard Allen was to know more than a mayor. He was also a reservoir of Twin Falls history.

In many ways Allen was perfectly suited to lead a city, work on a city council, and clean up a downtown region that was headed into a gritty abyss during the 1950s.

Today, we all enjoy a Twin Falls community that sparkles with commerce, strong neighborhoods and clean surroundings. And we can thank Allen, who passed away Monday at age 79, for his role in building a leading Idaho city.

Allen was a gentleman first, then a politician. His warm demeanor was a defining characteristic in his many leadership roles.

No wonder then that he was made mayor in his first term as a City Council member.

When he chose to retire in 2003, all three of the candidates vying to replace him said he was the example to follow.

Twin Falls is a prosperous western city that originated from the hard work of Allen's ancestors. His work in public service certainly would have made them proud.

T.F. zoning ordinances lack sound reason

Bentonville, Ark. Sounds as back-woodsy as you can get, but I bet the folks at Wal-Mart headquarters are rolling their eyes at what they have run into in Twin Falls, Idaho.

Now I'm sure that with the many stores that Wal-Mart has erected, it has run into almost every excuse for not letting it come into a town, but would someone please explain to me the latest from the Twin Falls Planning and Zoning?

According to The Times-News story of Tuesday, May 3, planning and zoning assistant Renee Camway said, "The stores planned tire and lube shop doesn't meet the terms of the FUD, which the city approved in January.

Automotive and truck service and/or repair shops are permitted in the park, but tire shops are not." What would be the difference between a tire shop and a truck or automotive repair shop? Not even Mayberry would have an ordinance like that.

Now what happens to Wal-Mart in Twin Falls is of little concern to me, but bringing to light the city's absurd ordinances is of concern. Although I am no longer a stockholder in Lee Family Radio, I am privy to its operation. A few months ago, "The Buzz" Radio installed a studio on Blue Lakes that would give the station visibility as no local radio stations have been in the business district for years. The rub came when the station installed a small, insignificant home-type TV tower to relay the signal to Connor Ridge above Burley. This is a no-no with the planning and zoning's antiquated ordinance. Pleas for a variance have fallen on deaf ears with no affordable solution. Again the same mentally ex-lis' as with Wal-Mart. The recent confrontation with the business on South Blue Lakes concerning landscaping is another.

The owner would have had to remove tons of concrete and plant grass, diminishing access to his business. Actions such as these are a deterrent to business and waste time and money.

Common sense is not an epidemic at Twin Falls Planning and Zoning.

Public needs to know more to stop plant

I have been reading all the articles and opinions on the subject of Semptra.

People seem to be concerned about the air pollutants and the water resources. We need to consider the impact this could have on our property values and the health of future generations. Our children and grandchildren will all be affected by this the most.

Mercury, a burn-off of coal, is very hazardous to the fetus and growing child. We absorb this through things like eating fish from our lakes, ponds, rivers and streams.

So if fish are affected by the ingestion of water, wouldn't we be affected?

If water resources doesn't do something to protect our water, farmers and dairymen won't be the only thing to be impacted.

City wells around the valley are going dry. Domestic wells are going dry. With all the water calls, this affects some of these wells also. When these wells also. When these wells are dry, I guess we go thirsty. Our water is too great of a commodity to use in the Magic Valley to share with California or any other state.

Spunk up. Let's tell our officials how we feel. Semptra is not a good idea for Jerome County or any other county in the Magic Valley or, for that matter, even Idaho. I think I would rather have people come to Idaho than mercury pollutants!

Let's protect our water, air, lives and the legacy we leave for our children. Don't be misguided by Roy Prescott or Semptra. This is not good for our economy — just their pockets.

I believe The Times-News does need to investigate this issue more thoroughly and inform us of public meetings.

If it doesn't, it will be neglecting all the fine folks who buy and read its paper. We need to be informed so we can stop Semptra from moving in and destroying our environment. Let it go back to California and put in its coal-fired power plant there.

Let's contact our local and state officials and tell them not to sell out our lives for any amount of money.

We the people of this state, should have the right to say no to this and our government to agree with the people, not line their pockets with money at the cost of our health and our children's health.

I hope that more people get serious about this before it's too late.

HIGHER Taxes Insurance Medical Costs

Don't be a Dummy!

Most medical costs for car crash victims are paid by YOUR insurance premiums and taxes. When vehicle occupants are not properly restrained, the cost of crashes increases because unbelted crash victims sustain more severe injuries and more fatalities than belted crash victims. Belted crash victims average 60 to 80% lower hospital costs than unbelted crash victims.

Medicare, Medicaid and other taxpayer-funded sources pay 24% of the medical costs for traffic crash victims. The long-term cost for a seriously injured person averages $1.1 million.

CSI names interim vice president

TWIN FALLS — The College of Southern Idaho named Claudene Buetner to be its interim executive vice president and chief academic officer.

Buetner, the college's dean of Health Science and Human Services, will take over the position on July 1.

Jerry Beck, the executive vice president and chief academic officer, will assume the position of interim president that day upon retirement of President Jerry Meyerhoefer.

Buetner will be responsible for education policy, planning, budget, faculty and staff development, hiring, administrative leadership and community relations for the college.

"This is a very big responsibility," Buetner said upon accepting the new role. "I'm just a little nervous, but very happy to be given the opportunity to show that I can do the job."

Buetner started at CSI in 1972 as a registered nursing instructor.

She was named nursing chair in 1994 and Health Sciences and Human Services Dean last year.

The college's administrative team will start searching immediately for a person to fill her position.

T.F. Republican Women will meet on Monday

Idaho State Attorney General Lawrence Wasden will speak. The Idaho State Republican Women's meeting, to be held Oct. 7 and 8, will be hosted by the Twin Falls unit.

Details will be discussed at this meeting.

Reservations for the meeting are free and can be made by calling Joyce Grindstaff at 543-5755 by Friday.

United Co-op will host meeting on Saturday

HEYBURN — United Co-op Inc. will hold its seventh annual meeting of the members at 11 a.m. Saturday.

The meeting is open to all members, residents of the city of Heyburn and special guests. Festivities start with breakfast being served from 8 to 10:30 a.m. Registration of members is from 8 to 11 a.m. Entertainment starts at 10 a.m.

An arts and crafts show featuring local artisans will be open from 9 to 11 a.m.

The business meeting will start at 11 a.m. and will be followed by door prize drawings for members.

CSI offers 'Back to School' workshop

TWIN FALLS — A "Back to School" workshop through the Center for New Directions at the College of Southern Idaho will be held from 1 to 3:30 p.m. May 26.

Participants will learn about the services available at CSI, financial resources and college procedures.

Participants also will explore the myths that prevent adults returning to college from realizing their goals.

This free workshop is designed for any person who is considering college classes full time or part time and is unsure of where to start or what resources are available. If you are interested in attending this workshop please call 732-6680 or 1-800-680-0274, Ext. 6680.

Voters approve levies

Twin Falls Superintendent: 'Our patrons are to be commended'

By Karin Mowalski
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Residents of four Magic Valley school districts approved supplemental levies in elections on Tuesday.

Superintendents said they appreciated the help from district patrons even during what some consider to be difficult economic times.

Levies are on the books this year in 54 districts statewide totaling about $68 million.

Residents in Jerome and Castelford recently passed levies for next year.

In Twin Falls, voters approved a one-year, $1.2 million supplemental levy. The vote was 1,574 "yes" votes to 857 "no" votes, for about a 70 percent approval rate.

For the owner of property worth $100,000 in assessed value, the levy will be $69.32 for one year, not counting a homeowner's exemption.

Superintendent Wiley Dobbs said he was very grateful for the outcome.

"Our patrons are to be commended — they stepped up and helped us out," Dobbs said.

The levy will help with textbooks for science and reading, 2.5 positions that could be reading coaches or others, more teachers than the state pays for, gas, utilities and general operating expenses.

It will also help pay for a $250,000 district improvement plan required by No Child Left Behind.

It's the district's first supplemental levy since one failed in 1995.

Voters in Cassia County overwhelmingly approved a one-year, $623,435 supplemental levy. The vote was 610 to 52 for the levy, or an 87 percent "yes" vote.

The district has had the same levy amount for at least seven years, Superintendent Mike Chesley said.

"The Cassia County patrons have shown once again that they are very much behind education," Chesley said.

In the Richfield School District, voters approved a one-year, $75,000 supplemental levy.

The vote was 71 for it and 62 against it.

"It was probably closer than we would have liked," said Superintendent Miller. Please see LEVIES, Page B3

Gooding supports skate park

Youths offer to clean up graffiti, work on projects

By Heather Pilkinton
Times-News correspondent

GOODING — The City Council has reaffirmed its support behind an effort to give skateboarders in Gooding a new home.

The show of support for a new skate park came four days after several young skaters held a protest outside of the Gooding County Courthouse. They were angry with the Gooding Police Department, which has prohibited them from skateboarding on public thoroughfares since a rash of vandalism and graffiti occurred in the city.

Linda Devaney, president of the Gooding Chamber of Commerce, told City Council members she was uncomfortable with derogatory remarks she had heard from community members regarding the skateboarders.

"The kids are at a loss," she said. "This is really part of their lives."

Devaney also told the council that the skateboarders were aware the activity could cause difficulties for local businesses.

"They know there are places they can't skate," she said, adding that the youths were willing to help clean up graffiti and work on beautification projects around town.

But Devaney said it was wrong to assume the skateboarders knew who was responsible for the graffiti. "They don't really know," she said.

Mayor Herb Stroud commended Devaney for her willingness to work on behalf of the skaters.

"I agree that the kids need a place," said Stroud, adding that the council had no problem with a skate park as long as the kids took care of it. "I'm proud of the kids for taking responsibility."

Councilwoman Sharon Selfert said the council had already given the green light for a Gooding skate park and wanted to learn more information about grant opportunities.

Polly Huggins told Selfert and the rest of the council that she had written grants for the skate park.

"Currently, there is $4,796 in hand for the park," said Huggins, adding that she also was responsible for $5,000.

"We're just waiting for hand back," she said.

Skateboarder Justin Bollinger presented the council with things he and other skateboarders have been doing to raise money.

"We held a car wash on Saturday," he said. Bollinger said the skateboarders also were willing to go to other communities to help clean graffiti.

Valley High Senior finds passion in welding

By Cathy Roemer
Times-News correspondent

HAZELTON — Joe Miller exemplifies the spirit of the students in Valley High School's 2006 welding class, says art teacher Karen Rogerson.

"They are energetic and creative," Rogerson said. "Their enthusiasm has made the ordinary into extraordinary."

Miller popped into his talents this year in a welding class. As an Idaho farm kid, he has been around machinery, the shop and fix-it projects as long as he can remember. But a welding class with shop teacher Marlin Mussmann sparked Miller's creative talents.

Mussmann came up with the idea of fashioning metal into art to "keep the class interesting," he said.

"It worked. Once Miller started creating acetylene torch-style art, he was hooked. From horseshoe decorations to belt buckles and wildlife wall crests, his art collection adorns his wall at home.

"I get a picture of something in my mind and start making it," Miller said. "Sometimes it turns out to be something different than what I started with, but I've learned to just go with it."

His recent interest in guitar playing prompted him to announce that he was making a heavy metal guitar. For the old farm body he used a disc blade from an old farm implement and came up with something that's "too heavy to hang on the wall," he said.

"Scrap metal from old farm equipment is a staple in Mussmann's welding class. True to their creativity, his students have scoured family farmsteads for metal the school can't afford to buy.

"As a class, we had to figure out how we could keep going without spending a lot of money," he said.

"I have watched in amazement at what the kids can do."

Valley's welding department still uses acetylene torches rather than the more modern, cleaner-cutting plasma cutters.

"The cut isn't as clean with acetylene,"

Mussmann said. "But it helps students develop skills grinding and polishing to get a finished look."

Although Miller took welding so he could "learn how to fix things myself," he has learned how to work with metals of varying thickness and what level of heat to use to create successful projects.

More important, Miller said metal working has taught him patience.

"To do a good job you have to take your time and not rush it," he said.

Students also have taken their vocational art into the business world by selling their finished products in the community. Proceeds are used to buy more metal.

Miller lives with his parents, Blaine and Corianne, on a farm in Hunt. He said he values the education he received at Valley High School.

"The people here are good people," he said. "They encourage you and keep you working hard."

He plans to major in business and agriculture at Brigham Young University-Idaho in Rexburg and eventually return to the family farm.

"I like being a part of the Magic Valley and living in a smaller town where you know everybody and they know you," he said.

Jarbidge will remember local historian

Plans proceed despite raging river

By Virginia S. Hutchins
Times-News writer

JARBIDGE, Nev. — Residents of this tiny town in the Jarbidge River canyon are determined to memorialize one of their elders this weekend, despite a muddy river and a rain-swollen river.

And they promise help for any out-of-towners who get stuck on their way into the canyon on Saturday.

"We're having horrendous weather. Our river is raging and we're all kind of holding our breath," Jarbidge postmistress Jane Smith said Monday evening, following about a day and a half of heavy rain that turned partly to snow on Monday afternoon.

Smith collaborated with other Jarbidge residents to plan "Jarbidge Remembers Helen Wilson Day," set for Saturday. Wilson — an activist, local historian and feisty community leader — died March 11 at age 94, but organizers waited until May to memorialize her because some of the remote town's summer residents, typically, return this month.

"They're going ahead with Jarbidge Remembers Helen Wilson Day, though the weather could endanger the only road into Jarbidge from the north. Jarbidge residents and an Elko County crew have worked hard to fix problem spots in the road, Smith said, and they'll keep watch on the road all week.

After descending into the canyon, the road to Jarbidge follows the Jarbidge River. With the river running high — carrying tree limbs and entire small trees with it — drivers are going to be more cautious, Smith said. "That means sticking to the side of the road farthest from the river in case water undermines a section of road, and watching with extra vigilance for oncoming vehicles."

"It's an awesome sight to see the river raging like this and see those trees go floating by," she said.

If you're of a mind to participate in Wilson's memorial, Jarbidge residents hope you won't be scared off. Residents are ready to help travelers get to town if they get stuck on the road, Smith said. And you'll be treated to a sight of the Jarbidge River — also augmented by mountain snowmelt — at its peak.

Wilson's niece is expected in from California to participate on Saturday, and everyone's welcome. At about 10:45 a.m. Saturday, Please see JARBIDGE, Page B3

Judge rejects motion for a new trial in Johnson case

By Patti Murphy
Times-News Correspondent

HAILEY — Fifth District Judicial Court Judge Barry Wood denied a defense motion Tuesday to give convicted murderer Sarah Johnson a new trial.

Outside the courtroom, Blaine County Prosecutor Jim Thomas said the defense's latest attempt to score a new trial involved "lies, more lies, and damn lies."

"They've sunk me to an all-time low," he said. "They made a Hall Mary last ditch effort. It's the same strategy they had in the trial — grasping at straws. That's why it took the jury less than 12 hours in a six-week trial to come back with a guilty verdict."

Johnson will be sentenced

June 29. She faces life imprisonment.

Defense attorney Bob Pangburn requested a new trial asserting that the jury had mingled with family of the victims and could have overheard conversations and opinions about the case.

The defense also contended that several family members and friends wore photo buttons of the victims. Alan and Diane Johnson provided "inappropriate communication" to jurors.

Delores A. Henderson

BUHL — Delores A. Henderson, age 80, died peacefully on May 16, 2005. She had lived a long and active life. Born Jan. 10, 1925, to Marshall and Emily Hess in Laramie, Nev. Delores spent her early years in that farming and ranching community. On April 7, 1941, she married Jack T. Henderson. When World War II broke out, Jack enlisted and so did Delores. She was proficient as a motor vehicle operator and served as a proud member of the WAC driving ambulance. After the end of the war, they moved to Buhl, Idaho. After working alongside her husband in the potato industry, Delores returned to school and became a licensed practical nurse in 1961. As an LPN, she worked for Dr. Vernon Anderson, Filer, Idaho, and later with Dr. Katz and Dr. Wright in Twin Falls, Idaho. Delores survived by her two daughters, Patricia JoAnn Kaster (Jerry) and Jean Hansen, their children, Sam Kaster (Marianne), Karl Lynne Kaster, Bobby Kaster (Maricia) and BJ Hansen. In addition to her daughters and their children, she is also survived by four great-grandchildren, Kenzie and Alyssa Kaster (Sam) and Jacob and Haley Kaster (Bobby). Delores loved to garden, knit, crochet and sew. Her

Howard L. Allen

TWIN FALLS — Howard L. Allen, 79, a life Twin Falls native, died May 16, 2005, at the Clear Valley Regional Health Center with his family at his side. Howard was born Dec. 30, 1925, in Twin Falls to George F. and Anna Anderson Allen. He graduated from Twin Falls High School in 1943. He attended Idaho State College in Pocatello before enlisting in the U.S. Marine Corps to serve his country during World War II in the South Pacific. On Sept. 22, 1947, Howard married Joan Benoit in Twin Falls. Howard and Joan became the parents of three children, Judy, Laurie and Tom. After his discharge in 1946, Howard attended Jess J. Hansen School of Watchmaking in Denver, Colo. He returned to Twin Falls where he joined his brother, Charles, to continue managing the family business, Sterling Jewelry Company, begun by their father, Clarence, in the early years of Twin Falls. Howard was proud that the two brothers claimed the title for over 40 years until the business closed in 1988 and they retired.

Howard served as president of Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce for two successive years in 1967 and 1968. In 1961 he was elected ruler of the Twin Falls B Elks Lodge.

Howard's retirement only extended his commitment to his community. He served as Twin Falls City Councilman from 1952 through 2003, and was elected mayor in his first term of office serving in that capacity 1992-1994. Howard was a sports enthusiast and an avid golfer. He was an honorable, Christian man who gave tirelessly of his devotion to his family, community and church. His community service was recognized in 1956 when he received the Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce Lifetime Achievement Award. More recently Howard was the force behind the organization of the Twin Falls Centennial Commission driving forward his plan for an appropriate celebration for his beloved Twin Falls. biggest joy was spending time with her family, taking her grandchildren camping and fishing and in recent years watching her great-grandchildren participate in their sports and school activities. She spent many happy days in the mountains of Idaho with her husband and their family. She once boasted that she had cooked breakfast for 16 people over the campfire. Whether camping or at her home, Delores always had a pot of coffee on for company and a joke to share. She was preceded in death by her father, mother, stepfather, one brother, a sister and her husband. In lieu of flowers, the family requests that donations be made to the Buhl Quick Response Unit, 203 Broadway N., Buhl, ID 83316. A memorial service will be held at 11 a.m. Thursday, May 18, 2005, at Farmer Funeral Chapel, 130 Ninth Ave. N., Buhl.

Police charge work release inmate with DUI

The Times-News
TWIN FALLS — When Kevin J. Kirkland fled from work release, he told officers he was headed to Colorado to see his dying father. A day later, he was arrested for felony driving under the influence in Twin Falls.
 According to police reports, Kirkland's work release supervisor called the Twin Falls County jail at 4:30 p.m. Saturday and asked permission to be an hour late returning from work. Deputy Stacey Thomas gave permission, but wanted a written excuse from Kirkland's boss. At 10 p.m. Saturday, Kirkland called Sergeant Rick Scruggs and said he was headed to Colorado and wasn't returning to jail. Kirkland called back at 10:25 p.m. and spoke to Sgt. Susan Stringer. He said he was in Helper, Utah, and was heading to Montrose, Colo.

 Stringer said his father, Gerald Kirkland, was dying and he wanted to see him one more time. Kirkland said he thought his father was in Montrose Community Hospital. He then gave Stringer his cell phone number and said he would be coming back until he had seen his father. Stringer told him she would file an escape charge on him, but Kirkland said he didn't care. According to the affidavit, Kirkland said that even if he had to do an extra year in jail, it was worth it to get to see his dad.

 He said his girlfriend was driving him to Colorado, but if she got tired he was going to drive, even though he admitted to not having a valid driver's license. According to the police reports, Stringer called several hospitals in the general area where Kirkland said he was going. None had any information on a Gerald Kirkland.

 At 11 a.m. Sunday, Idaho State Police arrested Kirkland in Twin Falls for felony driving under the influence. Kirkland had previously been arrested for driving under the influence in Delta, Colo.
 He also has received two DUIs in the last five years in Idaho, according to the affidavit.

Hansen considers adding eight classrooms to school

By Margaret Jones
 Times-News correspondent

HANSEN — The Hansen School District is considering a proposal that would add eight classrooms to the present elementary building.
 On Monday, School Board members voted to send letters out to district residents concerning the elementary grades, the condition of the building and the estimated costs of an expansion.

Kindergarten class sizes are continuing to increase to the point where the addition of mobile units isn't going to handle the growing number of students.
 In other business, Claire Major, director of Advanced Regional Technical Education Coalition, spoke of the possibility of forming an AITEC charter school. She left information for the board to study and the matter will be discussed at a later meeting.
 It was announced that faculty member Renea Remaley was honored as a "Shining Star of Idaho" for her work with students on drug awareness and drug prevention.
 The board accepted the resignation of Dorothy Barnes who has served as the elementary secretary for 24 years.

Johnson

 "We have a whole courtroom full of family and friends saying, 'We know this guy, we've known her all our lives. Take our word for it, she's guilty.' At a minimum, the buttons are a way of communicating sympathy to the jury," Pangburn argued during the hearing.

Johnson, 18, convicted in March of two counts of first-degree murder, appeared in the Blaine County courtroom in an orange jail jumpsuit. She looked thinner and more rested than during her six-week trial. Her hands remained handcuffed in front of her during the hearing.

Patrick Dunn for the defense was Patrick Dunn, part of Johnson's defense team. Dunn said he had seen "police, family members of the defendant, witnesses, prosecutors and jurors" all in the same areas during breaks in the trial.
 Dunn said he reported his concerns to Ada County Court Bailiff Hal Cloutier, who was charged with overseeing the jury.

Cloutier disagreed that Dunn had made a report to him regarding the jury. Cloutier did acknowledge that he allowed the jury to split up, saying "I was running my errand and not keeping track of them."
 Cloutier said later that if there had been any complaint he would have reported it to the judge, who had a pattern of admonishing the jury at every break in the trial to not talk or listen to the trial or read or listen to media.

Pangburn brought up the issue that Blaine County Prosecutor Justin Whatcott had run into jury foreman Katy Jensen in a nightclub in Boise, saying that he noticed "constant eye contact between Jensen and Whatcott" during the trial.

When questioned about the episode, Whatcott said that he and Jensen did not speak to each other.
 "I had only been in the place about a couple of minutes. Most of it spent in the men's restroom," Whatcott said. "As I was waiting for my friends, Ms. Jensen came out of the restroom and we just looked at each other for a second and then we both left."

Whatcott also said reported the incident to Pangburn, who said it didn't need to go on the record.
 Thomas and Whatcott met with jurors last week and had them sign affidavits stating that they had no inappropriate contact with family members during the trial.

Following the presentation of testimony and arguments, Judge Wood said that there was "absolutely zero evidence that any juror did anything" to indicate misconduct.
 "The button speaks for itself," Wood said. "I question the characterization of it having a message of 'convict her.' The jury saw hundreds of pieces of evidence. They saw photos of Mrs. Johnson with no head. They saw pictures of Alan coming out of the shower in a defensive mode and the blood on the floor where he was shot. They saw pictures of Alan after being shot. This button was not evidence; photos were."

Levies

 perintendent David Hocklander. The levy will cost a taxpayer with $100,000 of assessed value in property about $172 per year, not counting a home owner's exemption.

This is the district's third successful request for a supplemental levy of the same amount.
 Hocklander said this year's levy will help the district's finances. The school board also cut the music program for all grades and used some of the district's emergency money to balance the budget, Hocklander said.
 Voters in the Kimberly School district approved a one-year, 7.5 percent supplemental levy to help next year's budget. The vote was 286 for the levy to 165 against it.
 That's a 63 percent approval rate.
 For $100,000 in assessed value, the levy will be about $100 for one year.

Superintendent John Garner said the levy will not go to add staff or programs, but will help the district cope with rising costs such as insurance, fuel, and supplies.
 "They all took a deep breath because we're not talking about cuts," Garner said of the school board members.
 Garner said he's aware of hard economic times, but he's grateful that residents voted for the levy.
 The levy is the district's first since the 1980s.

 participants will congregate in front of Wilson's Jarbidge. Listen to an oral obituary, then walk in a procession from the house to the town's community hall, a building that Wilson worked much of her life to preserve. A rideless horse will lead the procession because Wilson, at 6 weeks old, arrived in Jarbidge on horseback in her mother's arms in 1910.

A memorial service will follow inside the community hall led by a preacher who visits Jarbidge one Sunday a month. Expect some improvisation, as people share their stories about Wilson. After the service, Jarbidge residents plan a potluck meal, brightened by the colors that Wilson loved and recorded in the watercolor and other dance music that she relished.
 The special day will end at about 4 p.m. at the historic Jarbidge cemetery, where one final ceremony remains for a memorial honoring Wilson. She was buried in Southern California, but Jarbidge folks want to commemorate her in the old Jarbidge cemetery.

MORNING BREAK

Golfers swing at 101 mph

The speed of a typical golfer's swing is 101 mph. This day in history: Mount St. Helens erupted on May 18, 1980, killing 57 people and covering a widespread area with a thick layer of volcanic ash. Amyntas of Alexandria performed the first nose job, nose Jobert. Elee's mother after she woke up under the daisies and made a loud ruckus.

Abby's Kentucky pecan pie is slice of Southern history

DEAR ABBY: I have been making your pecan pie recipe for 30 years and have received many compliments along the way. Several years ago, a festival was held in our small town on the courthouse lawn. Among the activities was a contest for the best pie, which I entered, using your recipe. To the delight of my wife and friends, and the chagrin of the other contestants—all ladies of the town—I took first prize! Of course, I had to bake one for each and every one of my close friends. I think it's time you reprinted the recipe.

Love your column, Abby. —DAVID HARPER, FAYETTEVILLE, TENN. DEAN DAVID: I'm taking your suggestions, and I'm delighted that the pie was such a hit for you. My mother, Pauline Phillips, a woman with a notorious sweet tooth, discovered it in the early '60s when it was served to her at the now-demolished Phoenix Hotel in Lexington, Ky. The recipe was created by the hotel's pastry chef, who kindly shared the recipe with her. Readers, too, I'm sharing the recipe with you:

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

Abby's Famous Pecan Pie
9-inch unbaked pie crust
1 cup light corn syrup
1 cup firmly packed dark brown sugar
3 eggs, slightly beaten
1/3 cup butter, melted
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 heaping cup pecan halves
Heat oven to 350 degrees. In a large bowl, combine corn syrup, sugar, eggs, butter, salt and vanilla; mix well. Pour into unbaked pie crust; sprinkle with pecan halves. Bake at 350 degrees for 45 to 50 minutes or until center is set. (Toothpick inserted in center will come out clean when pie is done.) Cool. If crust or pie appears to be getting too brown, cover with foil for the remaining baking time. You can top it with a bit of whipped cream, but even plain, nothing beats this! The original recipe stated that the pie should be baked 45 to 50 minutes in a preheated 350-degree oven. If an electric oven is used, it may be necessary to add 15 to 20 minutes to the baking time. (Begin testing the pie with a toothpick after 45 minutes.)

Readers, this recipe is included in my set of cookbooks, which contain more than 100 mouthwatering recipes for soups, salads, appetizers, main courses and desserts. Some people have told me they have held "Dear Abby Dinner Parties" using the cookbooks. The set can be ordered by sending a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $10 (U.S. funds) to: Dear Abby Cookbook Set, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, IL 61054-0447. (Postage is included in the price.)

DEAR ABBY: Can you explain to me why everybody in the neighborhood can hear a barking dog except the dog's owner? PETER INCANTON, OHIO DEAR ABBY: For the same reason that the parents of screaming children in restaurants ignore it. They've grown so used to it that they no longer hear the disruption.

Ever wonder who started golf's Ryder Cup? It was Samuel Ryder, a wealthy Englishman who made his fortune selling penny packets of flower seeds. His prize in 1926: a champagne and chicken dinner for all competitors and $5 for the winner.

We have it on good authority that there are 132 men in the White House: 32 of them are bathrooms.

The most popular condiment for a hot dog is mustard. After that, it's ketchup, onions, relish, chili, sauerkraut and mayonnaise, in that order.

Whereas 70 percent of hot dog eaters prefer more than one topping, there are still 7 percent of you who want your hot dogs plain.

For an average-sized paperback book, it takes a block of wood about the same size to make it.

It's a point of record that Charles Lindbergh, for good luck and comfort, took a Felix the Cat doll with him on his famous trans-Atlantic flight.

The term "mauger" comes from a type of crocodile that lives in East and India.

Sports linguists tell us that "golf" came from the ancient Scottish word "gowf," which means "hit."

"Howya gonna keep 'em down on the farm?" Despite encroaching civilization and the huge poultry industry, there are still an estimated 4.5 million wild turkeys living in the United States.

Talk about plans, not projects, Virgo

IF MAY 18 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Learn to shoulder your responsibilities with grace and set a sterling example in the year ahead. Little setbacks will only serve to teach you wisdom — especially in April, June and August. Remember that flexing your muscles makes you stronger and more capable. In September and October you can throw caution to the wind and grab chances that come your way as promises made then will be fulfilled and brighten your life. The more organized and conscientious you are the better the coming year will be and the better equipped you will be to succeed in your ambitions.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Maybe your get-up-and-go got up and went. Try switching gears and tackling things from a different angle. This isn't the time to take offense or start a feud, as hard feelings could last.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Spice up relationships by playing hard to get or doing something surprising. But don't take a chance on a new hookup — no matter how tantalizing. You have to play by the rules.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Don't give in to whims. You are a bit wiser than usual, but socializing at the wrong time with the wrong person can cause some gossip. You efforts will be more highly valued if you stick to the traditional.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Pressures and troubles could occupy your mind but it isn't the right time to break free even if others urge you otherwise. Avoid getting entangled in recriminations or finger-pointing.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): It could feel like you are operating within the confines of a straitjacket, so do the best you can under present circumstances. Partners or others close could seem unpredictable or unreliable.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): It is a good time to talk over plans with family members or discuss promises made in the past. It is not a good time to start a new creative project or pursue a new romantic attraction.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): In an effort to entertain others you could go off the deep end or exceed the limits of good taste. It isn't that you are doing anything wrong that could trigger hostility, it's just that others are just too busy to play.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your ambitions could run into serious roadblocks in the week ahead so it is a good time to sit back and refrain from pushing too hard. Old problems might need your attention. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Communication is the best tool to keep relationships on an even keel. Shared finances could be the center of a controversy. Avoid those filled with much stubbornness or rigid attitudes.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Resist the urge to be in command. You can't control all the strings of micromanaging everything. Trust that others can think for themselves; a laid-back outlook will bring the most success.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Watch out for bad timing. You could be in a lighthearted, sociable mood when everyone else is in deadly earnest. Don't offend others by being silly or frivolous at the wrong moment.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): There is safety in numbers. Obtain consensus from a large number of people rather than making a lone decision. Innocent flirtations should not be given too much weight.

Word-lovers toss dictionaries aside in Merriam-Webster game

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — The response from the "vocabulary nerds" was so "ginormous" that the lexicographers let out a "whoop."
"Confuzzled?" You must be a "linguivenee."
The editors of Merriam-Webster dictionaries got more than 3,000 entries when, in a light-hearted moment, they asked visitors to their Web site to submit their favorite words that aren't in the dictionary.

"It was a lot of fun," Arthur Bicknell, a spokesman for the Springfield-based dictionary publisher, said Monday. "We weren't expecting so many. They only had two weeks."

Some of the proposed words even gained multiple submissions to the editors came up with an unofficial Top 10 list. First place went to "ginormous" — bigger than gigantic and bigger than enormous — followed by "confuzzled" for confused and puzzled simultaneously — and "whoop," an exclamation of joy. A "linguivenee" — a person incapable of making up new words — placed 10th.

Ag secretary will host round-table on beef safety

HYUUM, Utah (AP) — Agriculture Secretary Mike Johanns plans to host a discussion next month with beef industry officials that he hopes will speed the reopening of the Canadian border to import cattle.

Johanns toured a beef processing plant south of Logan Tuesday and met with Utah producers who are struggling with the smaller cattle population since the border was closed because of a mad cow disease scare.

Johanns said the Agriculture Department would continue the increased testing of cattle that followed the December 2003 discovery of mad cow disease in a Washington state heifer. Johanns said nearly 351,000 cattle have been tested and that a decision on whether to keep up that pace would be "a ways down the road."

Department investigators reported earlier this month there is still a slight risk of mad cow disease in the United States, especially in Washington, Idaho and Montana, where high-risk animals from Alberta were shipped. That's the region where the four cows with the disease in North America came from.

"We don't have any doubt that we have a very, very safe product. In fact, a completely safe product," Johanns said.

There is a case pending in the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals that Johanns hopes will result in the reopening of the U.S.-Canadian border for beef transportation, but he could not estimate how quickly that might happen.

"Even as a lawyer I'm frustrated at times because you do have to move through these hoops," he said.

Johanns announced that the USDA will hold the round-table discussion at the University of Minnesota's St. Paul campus to discuss the safety of North American beef and its economic effect of the issue on the industry. The discussion is expected to include government officials, beef producers, packers and academics.

There's a misconception that beef may not be safe, Johanns said. He hopes, once the public hears more, safety concerns will be alleviated and the industry can speed up again.

Dave and Teresa Berry will have thier back yard re-landscaped in The Times-News' 'It's a Switch' contest.

By Steve Crump

TWIN FALLS—
Raindrops permitting, by the time summer arrives Marilyn Andrus will have a brand new back yard at her Elizabeth Boulevard home.

And she'll have her daughters to thank for it.
"My mother has no time to devote to landscaping her yard," said daughter Kerl Peterson, who lives next door. "She is limited financially. She works hard and really deserves a back yard she can enjoy this summer."

So Peterson, a 31-year-old stay-at-home mom, and her 29-year-old sister Dawn Beaver, a bookkeeper, nominated Andrus' lawn for a makeover in The Times-News' "Backyard Switch" contest. They won, along with Dave and Teresa Berry of Twin Falls.

Sometimes in June, the Berry will work on Andrus' yard with $2,000 worth of landscaping services from Kimberly Nurseries and the expertise of the company's president, Dave Wright, and his staff.

Across town at the Berrys' Monroe Street resident, Peterson and Beaver will return the favor with $2,000 and the landscaping advice of Craig Kelley of Kelley Garden Center.

It's the third year for the T-N's "It's a Switch" promotion, but the first that the renovation projects have moved outdoors.

The Berrys and Peterson and Beaver have a 48-hour period to complete the jobs, and they must agree on the same two days to do the work.

Andrus, 60, lives in a new ranch-style town home, but works four jobs to make ends meet. That's pretty much crowds out any yard work.

"Mom is the most selfless person I know," Peterson said. "She is the mother of seven children and adores her nine grandchildren. She works very hard."

Dave Berry, 40, and his wife, Teresa, 35, live in a 27-year-old split-level house with a back yard they say needs help.
"When we bought this house, everything was overgrown and under-watered," Dave said. "Many trees were dead. We want to have the yard we see from our windows to be beautiful and peaceful."

And transformation has already begun.

"We re-landscaped our last house by pulling out dead trees, overgrowing shrubs, etc., and planted shrubs, flowers and trees," Dave said. "We have also started landscaping this house by pulling out dead and overgrown things."

It's not as though there won't be lots of help with both projects. In addition to Andrus' extended family, the Berrys have five children, aged 9 months to 13 years.

Just about anything goes in remaking Andrus' and the Berrys' yards except installing new sprinkler systems, according to Janet Goffin, the Times-News advertising director.

The work must be completed by June 15, and photos and an article about the Backyard Switch will be published in the Food & Home section on Wednesday, June 22.

There were 25 entries for Backyard Switch.

BO'S KITCHEN Bo Carl

ward to the newest cars to hit the road, my father would hungrily await the Sears catalogue and its latest offerings to enhance the backyard scene. While other men longingly gazed upon the new Ford Mustang, with its aerodynamic features and chromed headers atop a powerful V-8 engine, he drooled over dyna-flow heat distribution and chromed smokestacks perched atop a space age fuel burner. Somehow, he equated the previous year's shoddy technology with his inability to produce the perfect burger. For him, each new advance meant an improvement in his culinary talents. For us, the unfortunate recipients of his creative endeavors, nothing made of metal was going to help those poor parcels of ground beef. No matter what he did, those burgers on the grill always ended up indistinguishable from the charcoal briquettes under the grate. Out of sarshot, we kids joked that the briquettes were reincarnations of dad's long dead burgers.

Each year, we witnessed a predictable evolution of emotions pass over him as he labored over the grill. What was a source of pride on Memorial Day, the grill would start raising doubts about its engineering design by Independence Day. By Labor Day, the poor thing had major flaws and should be recalled. Finally, by Halloween, the hapless contraption was given an ignoble sendoff, being relegated to the back of the garage, while my father started flipping through the catalogues of next years models.

One year, a strange transformation came over my father. Missing were the catalogues. No complaints were heaped upon the grill, even though the dinners were no better. Strangers of all-was-the-perpetual-smile, which dad sported, as he spouted phrases such as "take-charge attitude" and "proactive approach to the future." He would spend long secretive hours with pencil and paper, making drawings and scribbling arcane figures, all of which disappeared from sight, as soon as one of us got close enough to steal a peek at his work.

Come Thanksgiving, we were rewarded for our patience, as dad came driving home towing a rented trailer, which was heavily laden with brick and steel. Out came the shovels and a wheelbarrow for mixing mortar and soon he had all of us sweating madly, as he joyously put his plans into motion. He wouldn't let any of us kids actually touch his creation. Each brick and trowel of mud, he lay in place with a gleam in his eye and an off key song on his lips.

First, we thought that he had overestimated the amount of bricks he needed, but it soon became evident that we had misjudged the scope and scale of his dream, as his monument to grilling stretched longingly toward the heavens. With a base 16 feet long and 6 feet wide, his grill was larger than our kitchen.

How to grow vegetables that will really impress your neighbors

Every year about this time someone asks about growing bigger vegetables. Big, beat-the-socks-of-your-neighbor vegetables. Record holders.

You can grow in the winner's circle if you first choose the right varieties. Ed Hume, of Ed Hume Seeds, sends along these tips:

Cathy Walworth

This is the one you see winning all the contests.

The world record is now more than 1,000 pounds. Give the vines plenty of space in the garden and remove all but two of the largest fruit per vine. Water and feed like crazy.

• 1-cube Radish — These need deep soil. The record holder was over 20 pounds and three feet long. Make a big raised bed or mound of soil for this one. This radish is tender, crisp and spicy. So grow the world record, you'll win for a good time.

• Red Ace Beet — Grow these in a two-foot deep container. Sow several seeds, then snip out all but the two strongest. In 1994 lan Neale of South Wales grew a beet that weighed in at 40 pounds, 8 ounces.

• Imperator Carrot — For the heavyweight record, pick out the stout young seedlings, cut a half inch off of the tip of the roots and grow the carrot as a multi-forked vegetable. In 1978, "The Carrot Grower" in New Zealand that weighed 15 pounds, 7 ounces. Remember to plant these guys in deep soil. To grow the world's longest carrot, do as Bernard Lavery of South Wales did: Grow it in a plastic drainage pipe. Lavery's carrot grew to 202 and one-and-a-half inches long. The pipe was supported at a 30-degree angle from the ground.

daily. Parsnips are slow to mature so sow the seeds early. Parsnips are often overlooked, but are good fried or boiled.

Deep soil, generous amounts of water and frequent feeding seem to be the keys to success. Hume said. And be sure to ask the Old Timers for all their tricks. You just might grow a record winner.

library. This paperback is also available using up on-line book vendors.

Lavery shares all the tips and tricks for growing gigantic vegetables. He also includes the real dirt on what Guinness expects of world record holders. Just in case you decide to go for broke.

Gardening in containers can be easy

Container gardening: The fun of creating and maintaining a self-contained garden. Annuals, perennials, compact shrubs, ornamental grasses, herbs, succulents and vegetables, sold or in combination with each other, are what containerized gardens are made of. Creating one of your own isn't difficult, but you need to consider all these parts:

Container

This can be anything your imagination can muster up. Ideas range from old-fashioned drainage holes and hold a sizeable amount of potting mix, enough for the number of plants you plan on using. White wooden half barrels, window boxes, hanging baskets and concrete urns make ideal containers. A large hole is drilled through the side fits the bill, as does that old jolly of a wheelbarrow you can't even give away.

If the container you've chosen doesn't have or limits you from making drainage holes, you'll need to plant your garden selection in a pot with drainage and then place it on top of a 2-inch layer of small stones spread into the bottom of your decorative container.

Growing mix

You shouldn't use soil, and for very good reasons. Topsoil and garden soil are heavy and watering adds to this weight, which makes for some very heavy hanging baskets and window boxes. It also filters very little when it comes to drainage (often becoming caked and waterlogged).

On the other hand, growing mixes are the result of extensive research and modern technology. They combine specially mixed peat mosses for aeration and moisture retention, perlite (increases drainage and aeration), vermiculite (holds moisture and provides nutrients), compost (provides nutrients), water absorbing polymers (minimizes watering needs), nutrients (in the form of various fertilizer blends), biological growth enhancers for roots and lime (pH balanced for optimum growth).

When growing mix eliminates the necessity for adding a layer of drainage stones before adding the mix, it allows more things to keep in mind:

- Don't recycle used growing mix from previous years. After a season of growing, benefits have been depleted by the previous plant.
- To prevent the spread of insects and disease from previous plants, sterilize containers inside and out with a solution of 1 part bleach to 9 parts water. Don't forget to wash under pot rims.
- As you fill the container, water the potting mix as you go. It makes the first watering much easier.
- Never fill the container to the brim. Leave two inches of space at the top so when you water, the liquid doesn't gush over the edge of the container, it soaks in instead.

Fertilizer

Many potting mixes now contain what is called a slow-release fertilizer. This fertilizer feeds the granules of fertilizer have a sulphur coating that slowly releases the fertilizer's nutrients to the roots over an extended period of time, often three to six months. The potting mix will cost a bit more, but you will not need to add any additional fertilizer all season.

If the potting mix you've chosen doesn't contain an IBDU, you can easily add it yourself. Look for it at your local garden center/home center stores; follow label directions, mix thoroughly into the potting mix before planting.

But this doesn't mean water-soluble fertilizers such as Miracle Gro and Peters aren't recommended. They have been used for many years, and are great fertilizers in a plant-friendly form that are ready to be used as soon as they are applied. Just choose one method or the other to avoid over-fertilizing.

Water

Plants need water for photosynthesis. How often you water depends on the location of your container garden; full sun, water, shade etc. How often also depends on the plants you chose; some prefer to run a little on the drier side, while others are a moisture lifestyle.

Regardless of how often you water, when you do water, make it a thorough one. You want to water the drains out the bottom holes for a few reasons. First, it ensures all the roots receive water; no one is left out. It also helps keep the soil temperature cooler; remember these gardens are above ground, and on a hot August afternoon the soil in the container can get pretty toasty, a condition the roots don't take kindly to.

When should you water is the age-old question. If at all possible, do it early in the morning, so the plants have ample water for their daytime chore of photosynthesis. If, however, you must water at night, try hard not to wet the foliage; disease and insects find wet foliage a welcome invitation in the evenings.

Location

Your choice of plants will determine whether the location will be sunny, shady or in-between. Lower-growing plants finds itself nestled in a corner or up against the side of the house, make a point of rotating it once a week to keep all the plants growing evenly.

Pinching and preening

It's so important to remove spent flowers before they go to seed; annually we continue to flower right through September if they are kept deadheaded. It's a plant's mission to produce seed for reproduction. If you pinch off this week's spent flowers before they can go to seed, the plant automatically tries again. You deadhead again, they send another round of flowers.

Plants

Your choices are limited only by your imagination. Just remember to marry plants that have similar light and water requirements. Since they will all be located in one space, Next, try to pick out plants in three dimensions: from three inches above the rim upward, from three inches above the rim to the rim, and below the rim.

Decide what plant you want to fill that focal point just above the rim. Add a trellis to coax a trailing or vining plant to climb above the main clump of flowers, and tuck some potato vines along the edge to cascade gently down the sides.

Remember, not all gardens must flower. Colorful foliage can create stunning displays.

Begin the process by selecting plants to create a desired effect, ask the experts at your garden center or check out the Simply Beautiful website.

Simply Beautiful is the brand name for a company that sells garden plants and they've developed a plant-by-number system for creating container gardens. It's similar to the paint-by-number pictures we did as children, except you use plants instead of paint. Go to www.plantbynumber.com for information.

Buying A Home: Understanding The Process

(MS) — Home ownership is the quintessential American dream. Each year, couples, families and singles make the decision to take the home ownership plunge and set out on a course of finding their ideal home.

Step 1: Financing a home without a warranty course in home buying is not a wiser venture. As an informed individual, you will be better equipped to make the right decisions for your future and avoid being taken for a ride.

Step 2: Affordability: Before you visit a real estate, decide on a price range. The best way to do so is to sit down with a financial consultant to mortgage broker who will help your current debt against your income and savings.

You will then be presented with a good example of the mortgage amount for which you'll qualify (you'll need a pre-approval).

A realtor may ask to see a pre-approval to help you determine your price range and to also be sure that you are serious about buying a home.

Step 3: Finding a home: Finding your prospective home can be a time-consuming process. Currently it is still a seller's market, meaning that sellers are receiving top-notch offers for homes and home-buying market that is in high demand. You may find yourself outbid or too late for many properties. Consult with a real estate broker, who can current listings and up-to-date information, or on your own search by visiting open houses.

Step 4: Making an offer: In most cases, you'll be required to make a formal offer on the house in the form of a written contract. It will state your intended offer price as well as information on the down payment and proposed closing date. Your broker can help you with the information in your favor, like "flexible closing date," "no other existing house to sell," etc. You are usually required to have a deposit or a binder and which will be held in escrow by a third party. Should the sale fall through, your deposit will be refunded.

Step 5: Securing a mortgage: Now that you

From oven to table: Let the good times roll

By Susan LaFempe
Los Angeles Times

Baking bread at home has been out of style for years — for good reason. These days — for many — you can find terrific baguettes, focaccia or country breads at the market or bakery, so why mess with kneading and proofing and all that pioneer-woman stuff?

Still, great bread and great just-baked bread are two different things, and something's been lost along the way: the yeasty aroma that lingers in the air and makes a home seductively inviting, the toothsome contrast of crisp crust and soft warm center that you get only when the bread's served straight from the oven.

Wouldn't it be wonderful if there were a postmodern way to reap the real rewards of freshly baked bread without either resorting to a bread mix or sooturning yourself into an olive-studded, obscenely artisanal European loaf nerd?

Meet the crusty roll. It fits into your weekend, gives your casual Sunday supper a lift and delivers all the warm, fresh deliciousness you're looking for. You don't have to wait for rolls to cool before slicing as you do with loaves, so you can pop them in the oven as your guests are arriving, serve them with the appetizing aromas, and then toss the hot rolls into a basket as everyone's sitting down to the meal.

There are crusty rolls for every occasion and all kinds of cooks. Every bread-loving cuisine has a favored crisp-crust roll: rye, sourdough, French rolls, dark rye rolls with slashed tops sprinkled with coarse salt and caraway seed in Germany and Austria, Mexican bolillos.

Most cookbooks will tell you that any bread can be made into rolls and that obtaining a crisp crust is the result of adding steam during the baking process, but these truths are better applied to some recipes than others.

My standby recipe for hard rolls is a simple, basic bread — just yeast, salt, flour and water. It's best made by hand, so I get the satisfying experience of kneading (for which I always give myself upper-body workout credits) but the heavy-duty stand mixer produces great re-

I make the dough in the late morning on a weekend and leave it to rise for a couple of hours while I run errands or go to the gym. (This recipe takes longer to rise than many breads because there's no sugar.) In late afternoon, I form the dough into rolls and leave it to rise again.

Come suppertime, our meal of chili or a pot of soup is suddenly... special... delightfully rustic... a homey combination of hearty flavors.

To achieve the right crust on these rolls, I brush the tops with water and then, just when I'm putting the rolls in to bake, I toss a tray full of ice cubes into a small cake pan that's been in the oven while it heats. The ice cubes immediately sizzle and steam and I quickly shut the oven door.

Other crust-enhancing techniques vary with recipes, but I use the ice cube trick with all crusty rolls.

If you want a darker crust on these basic rolls, you can brush them with milk or a beaten egg mixed with two tablespoons of milk. For poppy seed rolls brush with an egg white mixed with one tablespoon of water and sprinkle with poppy seeds.

I'd been searching for years for a bread recipe that would allow me to jazz up a Sunday breakfast or brunch. (I couldn't see getting up at 4 a.m. so bread could rise.) Though some bakers say you can let any dough rise in the refrigerator overnight and then bake it the next day, I'd never had the nerve to experiment.

Then I found a recipe in Bernard Clayton's "The Complete Book of Breads" that required overnight refrigeration for proper crust formation. It's a loafers' dream: Dough is made in the food processor, it rises once (and that's while you sleep) and it turns into smooth, crisp-crust whole-wheat rolls with a delicate honey-lemon flavor.

Your food processor might not be up to the challenge of kneading this dough (mine isn't); it might stall at some point. Never mind. It's worth doing the minding quickly in the processor and then turning the dough out and kneading awhile by hand. If you have a heavy-duty electric stand mixer, you can use that.

These rolls are brushed with oil before refrigerating, so the texture is both chewy and crisp. The crust is a perfect contrast to the slightly sweet, lignity wheat center — with the surprising lemon notes from the zest.

Mexican crusty rolls — bolillos — have long been a favorite of my husband's, but his delicious bakery versions are huge, too big to put in a bread basket at the table.

This version is authentic in flavor and has the right crunch in the crust, but I make them the size of dinner rolls (I cut the risen dough with a sharp knife into plum-size pieces and pat each piece into a rectangular shape. Folding the two long sides of the rectangle into the center and twisting the ends, I smush the dough into a football (or pot sticker) shape. Then I put the rolls in the baking sheet seam side up so they crack open a bit while baking.

These petite bolillos are finished with a cornstarch glaze for a satiny deep-brown finish and then sprayed with saltwater a few times during cooking. The saltwater spritzing not only crisps the crust, but gives an extra tang to your first few bites of roll.

I love fast-rising yeast and often use it when making rolls, though I have to confess, I still leave plenty of time for rising.

Manufacturers of fast-rising yeast say using it cuts rising time in half, but variables such as weather, the temperature of your kitchen and whether there's a "proving" (very low) setting on your oven are also important in figuring out the amount of time — with fast-rise or regular yeast — your dough will need to rise.

You can't hurry bread. But with crusty rolls, once they're out of the oven, you don't have to wait.

Artichokes without artifice

By Leslie Brenner
Los Angeles Times

You can keep your artichokes "à la bergamote" and your baby ones shaved, this artichoke dressed over with olive oil on a plate. Sure, bergamote is delicious, stuffed with mushrooms, ham, bacon and parsley, heated in white wine and finished with butter. And I love eating shaved artichokes — in a restaurant.

But lately when I eat big, fat, gorgeous, screamingly fresh artichokes piled up on the tables at the farmers market, all I want to do is whack off their long stems, boil them and serve them in their most classic preparation: artichokes vinaigrette.

There's nothing like pulling off those succulent leaves, dipping them in dressing — or melted butter, or olive oil, or (just admit it) mayonnaise, and scraping the flesh with your teeth.

There's something so sensual about the whole process. It's almost like a dance. As you stack up the leaves on the side of the plate (or you fling them into a communal bowl), the new leaves get more tender and taste some the deeper they go. In this case you go, until finally you're pulling them off by the handful, almost eating them whole. You pull the prickly pinkish, then almost purple parts away. Scrape the silk of the crown (a teaspoon works best). Then cut into the crown and savor every fleshy morsel, dipping into the vinaigrette. Or the mayonnaise.

In the crown, you get the artichoke's marvelous flavor distilled — that distinctive, almost grassy flavor that's such a tease in the leaves. How perfect that you can't have it until you've earned it by working your way through them.

The big globe artichokes are lovely to share "à deux," or to set out as an appetizer before anyone sits down. But for the most satisfying eaten alone, at a fully set table, as a main course.

The classic artichoke starter, what you'd find in a bistro in Paris, is "artichaut" vinaigrette; the sauce is a simple one made with red wine vinegar, a little Dijon mustard, good olive oil, some chopped shallots, maybe some chervil and parsley.

But a friend lately found herself with a name leftover "house vinaigrette" she had made from Thomas Keller's cookbook "Bouchon." It's simplicity itself.

Just red wine vinegar, carola oil and lots of Dijon mustard. Keller doesn't even include salt or pepper, but curiously, it doesn't need it. At any rate, because of the technique — it's whisked first in a blender with just half the oil, then the rest is whisked in — it has an ultra-creamy consistency. It's something between a vinaigrette and a mayonnaise. It's a perfect dip for artichokes.

Another friend told me her trick: Stir a generous squeeze of Meyer lemon into some Best Foods mayo. It takes the industrial edge off the mayo, and you can make it as thick or thin as you want. The Meyer lemon fla-

Artichokes vinaigrette is a bistro classic.

It's perfect with the 'chokes. — So how best to cook those puppies? The artichoke world is divided into people who steam and those who boil. At my local farmers market shopping for 'chokes, I scanned the crowd, looking for French chefs who might shed some light on the classic preparation.

I found two: Bruno Lopez, chef de cuisine at the Hotel Bel-Air and Alain Giraud of Four Stars Private Cuisine, both in Los Angeles. I asked them what they could tell me about artichauts vinaigrette.

The French comic Coluche once pointed out, Giraud said, that an artichoke is the only food that the more you eat it, the more you have on your plate.

Well, yes, that's true. But should you boil them or steam them? I wondered aloud.

"The housewife boils it," said Giraud; the two chefs agreed this was right and proper.

Anything but salt in the water? It's commonly said a little lemon juice keeps the color nice and bright.

"Some chefs don't use lemon," said Giraud. "There's no problem if it's darker and a little oxidized."

The flavor's better (without it), said Lopez. "It's the natural taste of the artichoke." In the Los Angeles Times Test Kitchen, we tried steaming and boiling, using the jumbo-size green globe artichokes from Sun Coast Farms, with their long stems still attached.

To prepare them, start by cutting off the stem at the base, making it flush, so the artichoke doesn't wobble on the plate. (The stems are delicious, by the way, pare off the hard outer skin, then cook them any way you like.)

It slice and saute them and toss them with pasta and olives.) Then pull off the small outer leaves at the base, trim the bottom, use kitchen shears to cut the points-off-the-remaining-leaves and cut off the top with a big knife.

Steaming (in salted water) took 45 minutes and resulted in a fairly dried-out artichoke with an unpleasantly spongy texture.

The flavor and texture were far superior when we boiled them in plenty of salted water. I knew that the fresher artichokes are, the more quickly they cook, but surprisingly these were tender in just 14 or 15 minutes. We didn't use any lemon, but the artichokes stayed vivid green. And they were not soggy — a concern to some with boiling, but we drained them upside down immediately and they were fine.

But what if they sit around for a week or more? How much longer would they take to cook? We kept them eight more days, then did another boiling test. This time it took 17 minutes. Makes you wonder how long ago those artichokes in the supermarket — the ones that take 40 minutes to boil — were picked.

And the 8-day-old artichoke? It tasted only marginally less wonderful than the farm-fresh one.

BOUCHON HOUSE VINAIGRETTE

Makes 2 cups

1/4 cup Dijon mustard
1/2 cup red wine vinegar
1 1/2 cups canola oil

Combine the mustard and vinegar in a blender and blend at medium speed for about 15 seconds. With the machine running, slowly drizzle in one-half cup of the oil. Don't be tempted to add all the oil to the blender or the vinaigrette will become too thick. It should be very creamy.

Transfer the vinaigrette to a small bowl and, whisking constantly, slowly stream in the remaining 1 cup oil. (The dressing can be refrigerated for as long as 2 weeks. Should the vinaigrette separate, use a blender or immersion blender to re-emulsify it.)

ARTICHOKES VINAIGRETTE

Serves 4
4 (1-pound) artichokes, trimmed
Vinaigrette
Fill a large stockpot with water and bring to a rapid boil. Add enough sea salt so that the water is almost as salty as sea water. Add the artichokes and boil, uncovered, until it's easy to remove a leaf from one of the artichokes, about 15 minutes if they're very fresh, or up to 30 minutes if not.
Drain upside-down and serve each artichoke with some vinaigrette on the side for dipping.
Each serving (artichoke only): 60 calories; 4 grams protein; 13 grams carbohydrates; 6 grams fiber; 0 fat; 0 saturated fat; 0 cholesterol; 397 mg sodium.

Sodium content of diet entrees worries some

Knight Ridder News Service

Capitalizing on the runaway success of Florida cardiologist Arthur Agatston's diet books, Kraft Foods is rolling out a line of South Beach Diet convenience foods, but the products are raising red flags for nutrition and health experts who say they're too high in sodium, a risk factor for high blood pressure.

There are 950 to 1,350 milligrams of sodium per serving in the eight new South Beach Diet frozen entrees and 1,260 mg to 1,530 mg in the frozen refrigerated wraps — 50 to 100 percent more in some cases than comparable Healthy Choice, Lean Cuisine and Weight Watchers products.

"That's very high," says Dr. Salah Amer, a cardiologist from Miami-Dade, Fla., and board president of the American Heart Association. "You should not have more than 2,000 mg of sodium the whole day. This puts you at risk of high blood pressure."

Hypertension directly increases a person's risk of cardiovascular disease and according to the heart association.

Agatston's position: Obesity is the overriding threat, and his goal is to help people lose weight. That's the key, he says, to reversing the so-called metabolic syndrome, a group of symptoms including above-normal weight, blood sugar and blood pressure considered a harbinger of heart disease and diabetes.

"The big health problem in the country today is diabetes and prediabetes obesity," Agatston said in a telephone interview. "That's a much bigger health issue than sodium intake as far as most hypertension."

"If you have heart failure, you have to watch some products that are high in sodium. But America is overfed ... If you lose the weight and reverse the metabolic syndrome, blood pressure comes down."

Obesity is only part of the picture where high blood pressure is concerned, said Marlon Nestle, a professor of nutrition, food studies and public health at New York University and one of the nation's leading authorities on diet and health.

"Weight loss would be good, but you also don't want people to have strokes," Nestle said in a phone interview. "We are talking cardiovascular health here."

The heart association's Amer agreed: "You should lower the weight and lower the salt. They go hand in hand; it should be parallel."

Agriculture Department guidelines, part of the newly revamped food pyramid, recommend a daily sodium intake of no more than 2,300 mg. None of the South Beach meals, by themselves, exceed that.

"If you have one of these meals a day and the rest of your meals have no salt, that's OK," Amer said. "But normal people have breakfast, lunch and dinner."

Indeed, if you ate a bowl of raisin bran and milk for breakfast (400 mg), grabbed a six-inch turkey sub and a small bag of chips for lunch (1,200 mg) and snacked on a single-serving bag of microwave popcorn (320 mg), having Kraft's South Beach Diet Caprese-style chicken (1,350 mg) for dinner would put your sodium intake for the day at 3,270 mg — more than 40 percent over the limit.

Health professionals generally recommend that people with high blood pressure restrict their sodium intake even further, to 1,500 mg a day.

"If you have a high risk for heart disease, blood pressure or are overweight, you need to cut down on table salt and those frozen and canned foods," says Belkis Delgado, a registered dietitian with Baptist Health South Florida. "You want to avoid food that contains more than 800 mg of sodium in one serving."

The Center for Science in the Public Interest, a Washington-based nutrition advocacy group, filed suit earlier this year to force federal regulation of sodium content in processed foods. The sodium levels in the South Beach entrees and wraps are "quite shocking," said Michel Jacobson, the center's executive director.

"It's unfortunate that Dr. Agatston didn't exercise more control over the nutrient content of these South Beach meals."

In fact, said Agatston, "We have absolute control and review the nutritionals every day and make changes."

Agatston acknowledges he would not recommend all of the products to some of his patients with advanced heart disease or high blood pressure.

"We're not saying everybody should have these foods all day by any means ... but for those on the run ... these are lifesavers," he said.

Like the mega-selling South Beach Diet books (eight million copies and counting), the Kraft products emphasize low-carb vegetables, lean proteins, heart-healthy fats and high-fiber whole grains.

The entrees, which retail for $3.79, earn good marks from nutrition experts for their relatively high fiber content: 3 to 9 grams in the entrees and 15 grams in the wraps. The daily fiber goal is 25 to 35 grams, according to the 2005 Dietary Guidelines for Americans.

Agatston and Kraft spokeswoman Kathy Knuth both said the sodium has to be there for taste and food preservation. And the sodium levels may come down as the product line evolves, the Kraft spokeswoman and Agatston say.

"We are always looking at ways of improving the nutritionals," Knuth said. "Sodium restriction, per se, is not one of the principles of the South Beach Diet, but it is something we're looking at from a nutritional standpoint."

Says Agatston: "We're working on it ... The next generation will have less sodium and taste great."

Bo

Three smokestacks towered out of the top, majestic guardians of the altar below.

The grill had two sections; one and was topped with a spit large enough to hold a whole cow or a small elephant. The other end was a tribute to my father's imagination. Two spits, each 6 feet long and 2 feet wide, were mounted on a rotary stand, looking like a Ferris wheel, which was designed, according to my father, to give an even distribution of heat to the cooking process. Atop each section was a stainless steel roll-top hood, which when closed would allow my dad to smoke up to two thousand pounds of meat at one time.

The fact that we never had more than 30 people for a party was irrelevant. This was his tribute to torching meat, his temple for his taste buds and the ultimate religious experience for my father. He had built a shrine to appease the goddess of the barbecue throughout the eternity of mankind.

The magnificent monument to my father's love for the grill was built two weeks before Memorial Day, just in time for an inaugural cookout. Mere family was not enough for such an event. My father had us go door to door, inviting the entire neighborhood. He went out to buy the meat and the ultimate religious experience for my father. He had built a shrine to appease the goddess of the barbecue throughout the eternity of mankind.

Memorial Day 1950 was his first party for the neighborhood. More than 800 people — friends, family and total strangers — assembled in our yard and spilled out into the street. The block was closed off to traffic to accommodate the overflow. Makeshift tables were thrown up to seat everyone. The beds of pickup trucks were filled with soft drinks on ice. Unfortunately, along with the soft drinks, there was also an abundant supply of alcoholic beverages. My father knew that he would be lots of kids present and he decided not to have any alcohol present. There were plenty of gentlemen who couldn't abstain and many a flask or back-pocket bottle could be seen appearing to strengthen a soft drink, just to live up to the occasion.

On top of everything else, dad's best friend, Buddy, was present. Now Buddy was one of those good-natured types who always had a joke to tell or a humorous anecdote to share. He was also one of the very versions of what is now called a micro-brewer, though he didn't restrict his talents to ever making beer. One of his concoctions was an adaptation of the potato, which I've never found in a recipe book. This joy hit me potent enough to strip the chrome off of a '57 Chevy, was affectionately known around the neighborhood as "Rocket Fuel."

Being that there were two sections to the grill, Buddy the Brewmeister was recruited to supervise the spit, while my father fortified food around the Ferris wheel. Buddy, the self-acclaimed "adicionado of ale," was one of those cooks who believed that everything barbecued from burgers to bratwurst, should be generously beasted with beer and the side of beef spinning on the spit was spared no suds.

The day was going great, with kids gaily playing games, adults sharing tales and the appetizing aroma of succulent searing flesh permeated the air. The side of beef was slowly spinning on the spit, as my father began to load the rotisserie with steaks and burgers. Unfortunately according to Murphy's Law, every moment of merriment must experience a minute of misery and this Memorial Day proved no exception to the rule.

One hungry guest decided that the meal wasn't cooking fast enough and decided to help with the preparation. Sadly, being marinated more than the meat, he didn't use the best judgment, as he poured a tall glass of Rocket Fuel to help speed the searing of the steaks. As he began to pour the pure alcohol on the beef, some ran down his side and collided with the hot coals below. The resulting fire was something akin to a nuclear reaction.

Blown back by the blast, the hapless helper bounced off of my dad and right into the rotisserie, shattering the bottle of rocket fuel. Now, both ends of the grill were lit with an energetic rivalling a volcanic eruption, as meat fat caught fire, further fueling the flames.

The fire began to burn with an energetic rivalling a volcanic eruption, as meat fat caught fire, further fueling the flames.

Finally, my stunned father sprang into action, moving an instant sunburn. He charged the fire and slammed down the roll-top hoods. Breathless, he swapped back, expecting the flames to be snuffed out, but then a design flaw in his great grill appeared. The third smokestack, an aesthetic last-minute addition to the blueprints, was connected to both ends of the grill. Now, it fed oxygen to the flames, which were now sizzling out the tops of the other two stacks. We watched in horror, as the roll-tops discolored and warped and the smokestacks began to glow red.

Slowly, as the stacks glowed white and began to slump, my father's mood grew dark and his spirits sank. Though friends tried to console him by reassuring him that it was still an exciting evening, his spark was gone. For him, the quest for the ultimate grill ended that fateful day in May.

A vegetarian pasta dish that you'll love

The Associated Press

Pasta is an appealing meal option for vegetarians, since the basic ingredient comes in countless shapes and forms, cooks quickly, and dresses up wonderfully well with vegetables and herbs.

In this case, linguine is the pasta called for in a recipe that's one of "five easy dishes" featured in the May issue of Real Simple magazine.

This pasta's long, narrow ribbons curl tastily around the recipe's peppery sauce of capers and olives spiced with a zing of red pepper flakes.

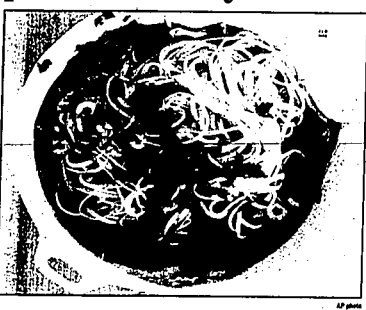

Depending on how hearty a meal you want to offer, this dish could stand alone, be accompanied by cheese and crusty bread, or follow a first course of soup.

Keeping to the easy style, dessert could be a choice of fruit, grapes or early berries, with or without ice cream.

LINGUINE WITH CAPERS AND GREEN OLIVE SAUCE

Makes 4 to 6 servings

- 1 lb. linguine
- 2 cloves garlic, thinly sliced
- 1/4 tsp. crushed red pepper flakes
- 26-oz. jar marinara sauce
- 6 1/2-oz. jar Spanish olives, drained and roughly chopped
- 3 1/2-oz. jar capers, drained and roughly chopped
- 1/2 cup fresh flat-leaf parsley, coarsely chopped
- 1/2 tsp. lemon zest

This photo provided by Real Simple magazine shows Linguine with Capers and Green Olive Sauce, an easy dinner dish that takes only about 20 minutes to get to the table. Pasta is an appealing dinner option for vegetarians. Here, the basic ingredient — linguine — has a peppery sauce of capers and olive spiced with a zing of red pepper flakes.

1-lb. box linguine
 Heat the olive oil, garlic and crushed red pepper in a large saucpan over medium heat until fragrant, about 2 minutes. Add the marinara sauce, olives, capers, parsley and lemon zest. Reduce heat to low and simmer for about 15 minutes. Meanwhile, cook the linguine according to the package instructions.
 Drain and add the linguine to the sauce, tossing to coat. Transfer to a large serving dish and serve family-style.

FOOD & HOME

Warm McBride makes family living easy

The two-story McBride would be so nice to come home to. Craftsman window grids and wooden handrails give it a cottage flavor, while handsome brick veneer wainscoting and slender wooden posts add to the sense of nostalgia.

Natural light spills into the entry through a sidelight. On the right, a wide arched opening leads into an even brighter space, expanded by a window bay that fills the entire front wall. A built-in bookcase five feet in height spans the rear wall. Some families will want to make this a dining area, while others may prefer using it as a den, library or home office.

Laundry appliances are across the entry hall in the large utility room. Just past a coat closet and powder room. A door in this passageway provides direct access to the garage.

The vaulted great room at the heart of this home is a perfect setup for family living at its best. A long eating bar wraps around the kitchen edge closest to the great room and spacious, rectangular nook.

When workers can stay involved with activities there, enjoy watching flames in the gas fireplace across the room, and keep an eye on the back yard as well.

A high shelf over the eating bar extends all the way to the side wall. Eighteen inches deep, it is ideal for growing plants or displaying art. Counters wrap around all four sides of the kitchen, and there's plenty of cupboard space, including a pantry.

Luxuries in the McBride's vaulted master suite include a dual vanity, spa tub, walk-in closet, and fully enclosed toilet and shower.

Two more bedrooms are upstairs, plus a bathroom and walk-in storage closet.

For a review plan, including scaled floor plans, elevations, section and artist's conception, send $25 to Associated Designs, 1100 Jacobs Dr., Dept. W, Eugene, OR 97402. Please specify the McBride 30-489, and include a return address when ordering. A catalog featuring more than 400 home plans is available for $15. # Learn to how to grow azaleas and rhodies

The Boston Globe

Most varieties of rhododendrons and azaleas share basic needs. They prefer the acidic soil but should not be planted in low or poorly drained spots or where they will be exposed to road salt.

Loam-their mature size and select a site with suitable room to avoid future pruning, which rhodies dislike.

They are shallow rooters; dig a planting hole wider but not deeper than the root ball. If roots have circled the inside of the growing pot, tease them outward with a three-pronged cultivator or cut them loose so they will not continue to grow in circles, which would kill the plant.

Fill the sides of the hole with a mix of compost and quality soil. This is a good time to plant some ground covers around the water bed such as foam flowers and epimedium.

Water deeply. Give new plants an inch of water a week until the ground freezes.

Broad-leaved evergreens need to go into the winter fully hydrated as for protection.

Do not cultivate the soil beneath rhododendrons; their roots are close to the surface. Pull weeds by hand.

Ground covers are preferred. If you do mulch, use less than 3 inches of extra coarse bark or you could smother the roots.

Do-it-yourself air conditioner maintenance

DEAR JIM: My central air conditioner was serviced last year and I don't think it needs it again, but I want to do some simple maintenance myself this year. What can I do to myself to lower my cooling bills?

SENSIBLE HOME
James Dulley

—RON H.

DEAR RON: If your air conditioner seems to be working properly and it was serviced just last year, there really is no need for another expensive service call this spring. Other than checking the refrigerant pressures, you can check many of the same items as the technician does.

It helps to understand how an air conditioner works when doing your own checkup.

The outdoor compressor, through phase change (gas to liquid) heats the refrigerant warmer than the outdoor air. It then gives off this heat through the condenser coils and fan outdoors.

The refrigerant flows indoors, changes back to gas, and chills the coils in the indoor blower. With all this transferring of heat from hot outdoor coils and cool indoor coils, the key to maintaining high efficiency is adequate airflow over the various sets of coils. If either the outdoor or indoor coils do not receive the proper amount of air flow, your monthly utility bills will be higher.

Starting outdoors, make sure there is nothing blocking the air flow through the condenser coils. Obstructions include shrubs which have grown too close, garden tools or toys stored against the outdoor unit or leaves and debris inside the outdoor cabinet. If you see many leaves inside the unit, switch off the circuit breaker to it and remove the outdoor cover. Remove the debris you find inside.

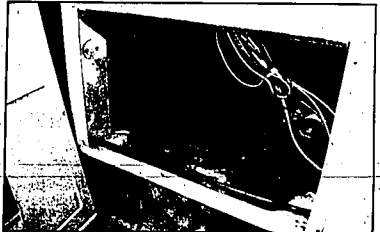

While the cover is off, check for any bent fins on the coils. These can get damaged if children push sticks in through the wire grill. Bent fins can be straightened with the tip of a knife. When you replace the cover, make sure to replace all the pieces and securely tighten all the screws. Even if you did not remove the cover, check the tightness of all the screws. If part of the cover is missing or the screws are loose, the condenser fan will draw air in the gaps instead of through the coils as it is designed to do.

With the electricity still turned off, remove the indoor cover over the blower motor and evaporator coils. Using a soft brush attachment, vacuum off any dust and then wipe them down with a damp cloth. Just a thin layer of dust can reduce the heat transfer effectiveness. While the cover is off, check the drain hole in the drip pan under the evaporator coils. This pan catches the water as the air conditioner dehumidifies the air. If the hole to the floor drain is clogged, the moisture will just get back into the indoor air again.

Change the filter or service the air cleaner in the return air duct.

I have seen them so clogged with dust and pet hair that a little air gets through. Replace the cover and tighten all the screws securely. Also run the vacuum brush gently over the wall thermostat to dislodge any dust buildup in it. Send inquiries to James Dulley, The Times-News, 6906 Broadway Dr., Cincinnati, Ohio 45244 or visit www.juldy.com.

DEAR JIM: We installed a light-colored roof to lower the attic temperature, but now it is getting dark streaks on it. What can I wash it with, and are zinc or copper strips better to stop this from coming back?

—JIM R.

DEAR JIM: Light-colored shingles will keep your attic cooler and lower your air-conditioning bills. Use a copper sulfate solution or other commercial roof cleaner to kill the existing mildew and lighten the stains. Putting strips of either zinc or copper along the roof peak will retard the growth of mildew as the metal ions flow

Kitchen

We had other barbecues that summer, but never again on the great grill. It was eventually converted into a rather attractive flower box. My father actually became a pretty good backyard chef, once he gave up the pursuit for higher technology and began searching for better cooking techniques. He eventually learned to grill a medium-rare steak and juicy burgers, all on a simple patio grill. So I guess the experience wasn't all bad.

I'm not about to advise you on the best outdoor grill, but I can share with you some of my favorite grill-top recipe. Here's wishing you a happy and memorable Memorial Day.

BLUE CHEESESTEAK

Makes 4 servings
Hard to include low-carb options for you Atkins devotees. You can obtain lower carbs by skipping the marinade, but you will be missing out on some great flavor.

- 4 (12 oz) sirloin steaks
- 1/2 cup beef broth
- 1/2 cup ranch dressing
- 1/4 cup soy sauce
- 1/4 cup red wine
- 1 tbs garlic puree
- 1 tsp. black pepper
- 1/4 tsp. tamarind pulp
- 1/8 tsp. whole cloves
- 1-cup blue cheese crumbles

Place both sides of steaks with a fork and lay them out in a flat bowl. In a blender, combine remaining ingredients except cheese and blend well. Pour over steaks. Flip steaks to insure that both sides are coated. Cover and refrigerate overnight. Broil steaks to desired doneness. After first flipping, top each steak with blue cheese and allow cheese to melt.

ALDER-SMOKED SALMON

- Serves 6
- 1 (15 x 6 1/2 x 3/8-inch) alder grilling plank
- 1/2 cup rice vinegar
- 1/2 cup low-sodium soy sauce
- 2 tbs. honey
- 1 tsp. ground ginger
- 1/2 lb. freshly ground black pepper
- 1 tsp. garlic puree
- 1/8 tsp. tamarind paste
- 1/8 tsp. hickory smoke seasoning
- 1 lemon, thinly sliced
- 1 (3 1/2-pound) salmon fillet
- 1/2 cup chopped green onions
- 1 tbs. sesame seeds, toasted

Soak the plank in water weight down. Lay a brick to cover, for at least 1 hour; drain. To prepare grill for indirect grilling, heat one side of the grill to high heat. Combine vinegar and the next 8 ingredients (vinegar through lemon) in a large zip-top plastic bag seal. Shake to combine. Add fish and seal. Marinate in refrigerator for 2 hours, turning once. Place plank on grill grate over high heat; grill 5 minutes or until lightly charred. Carefully turn plank over; move to cool side of grill. Remove fish from marinade; discard marinade. Place fish, skin side down, on charred side of plank. Grill salmon, covered with a grill lid, 15 minutes or until fish flakes with a fork. Sprinkle with green onions and sesame seeds.

MARINATED PORK TENDERLOIN WITH GRILLED SALSA

- Makes 6 servings
- 1 cup fresh lime juice (about 8 limes)
- 2 tsp. black pepper
- 2 tsp. dried oregano
- 2 tsp. ground cumin
- 1 1/2 tsp. low-sodium soy sauce
- 2 tsp. garlic puree
- 2 tsp. finely chopped chipotle chilies
- 1 tsp. paprika
- 2 lbs. pork tenderloin
- 1 1/2 tsp. olive oil

- Cooking spray
- 1/4 cup coarsely chopped fresh cilantro
- 2 tbs. chopped green onions
- Grilled tropical salsa
- 2 (1-inch) slices fresh pineapple (about 2 lbs.)
- 1 red bell pepper
- 1 yellow bell pepper
- Cooking spray
- 2 kivas, peeled and chopped
- 1 banana
- 1/2 cup chopped red onion
- 1/2 cup chopped cilantro
- 3 tbs. fresh lime juice
- 1 tbs. brown sugar

- 1-1/2 tsp. minced crystallized ginger
- 1/2 tsp. garlic puree
- 2 chipotle chiles in adobo sauce, minced
- Combine first 8 ingredients in a 2-quart baking dish. Trim fat from pork. Place pork in dish, turning to coat; cover and marinate in refrigerator 1 hour, turning pork occasionally. Remove pork from dish; discard marinade. Brush with oil. Insert a meat thermometer into thickest portion of pork. Place on a grill rack coated with cooking

- spray; grill 25 minutes or until thermometer registers 160° (slightly pink). Cut into 1/4-inch-thick slices. Sprinkle with cilantro and green onions. Serve with Grilled-Tropical Salsa.
- Grilled tropical salsa: Preheat grill. Place first 3 ingredients on a grill rack coated with cooking spray; grill 3 minutes on each side. Discard stems and stems from bell peppers; dice pineapple and bell peppers. Combine pineapple, bell pepper, onion, and remaining ingredients; toss gently.

Burley turns into 2A titletown

By Eric Larsen
Times-News writer

BURLEY — The problem with championship trophies is they usually don't travel well. Either the base gets scratched in transit or one of the figurine's arms gets bent.
Area Class 2A golfers made sure trophy transit woes won't be a big concern this year, as three of the four trophies handed out Tuesday at the Burley Municipal Golf Course will stay in the Magic Valley.
Topping that list Magic Valley

Christian's boys team, which came away with the state meet's championship with 671 total strokes, just four fewer than runner-up Glens Ferry. Despite Tuesday's persistently stiff winds, the Conquerors shot 338 on the day — only five strokes higher than on Monday.
The weather didn't really help that much, but all of us were really striking it good today," freshman Zach DeKruyf said. "All of us had pretty good rounds. Some of us could have played better, but all of us basically played well this week."

DeKruyf finished with rounds of 76 and 61, while senior James Jarvis led the Conquerors with rounds of 72 and 77. No. 3 golfer Cory Paulson was one of the few male golfers whose score improved Tuesday, as he finished with an 82 to Monday's 93. Jesse Boer rounded out the Conqueror's qualifying scores with a 92 and 98.
After leading by one stroke after Round 1, Glens Ferry continued its strong play Tuesday. No Pilots golfer shot above 89 on the tournament. Chris Laib and Willie Hunt both finished shot final rounds of 84, while Kyle Brown and James Snyder both shot 87 and Tanner Shrum an 88 Tuesday. It wouldn't be enough though, and it became evident as scores began trickling into the clubhouse.

"It's like watching yourself die," Snyder commented as the Conqueror's final scores were being posted.
The Wendell boys finished fourth, only three shots behind third-place Grace.
Wallace dominated the girls team points race, finishing with 936 total strokes behind Cara Hayman's 98 and 94. The Miners were the only girls team to finish under 1,000 strokes for the tournament. The Wendell Trojans came in second at 1,034 strokes, but in a 12 Monday, followed by a 91 Tuesday.

"It was rough," Lancaster said. "The weather made it tough, but I don't know, it was pretty close because everybody had to deal with the weather." I

Burnham takes second at state

Minico senior Zach Sanford watches his drive on Hole No. 11 during the rain-delayed first round of the State 4A golf tournament at the Rupert Country Club on Tuesday.

By Kevin Colbert
Times-News writer

RUPERT — Any other day, Jordan Burnham's round may have earned her a state title.
The Jerome standout played perhaps her best round of the season but still came up three strokes short Tuesday at the Idaho Class 4A girls state golf tournament at Rupert Country Club.
Sull, second place is certainly worth a high prize, especially when Bishop Kelly's Maddie Shells shot a spectacular 73 to take championship.
So don't feel too bad for Burnham. The best part? She's just a freshman.
"It gives me a lot of confidence playing with the older girls," she said.
Burnham was dead on for all 18 holes, excelling in every facet of her game. She played in the fairway almost all day. Her short game was tremendous. Every makeable put, she made.
"My whole game was solid," Burnham said.
Her coach was just glad his freshman stepped forward when the lights were the brightest.
"She's very capable of it. It's just good to see her do it at such a big time, such as state," Tigers coach Rick Burke said. "The sky's the limit for her."
Burnham held off Caldwell's

Andrea Haney, who fired a 78, and Bishop Kelly's Kacey Valia (81).
Bishop Kelly won the girls team title.
The Minico girls finished last in the 12-team field with a 431 team score. Kimaree Anderson paced the Spartans with a 92.
The Minico boys finished their tremendous season with a second-place overall finish. The Spartans finished with a 608 team score. Bishop Kelly won with a 605.
"We thought at the start of the year what we had coming back that we had a chance of challenging for the title," Minico coach Bob Lantz said. "... We're pretty proud of them, actually."
Zach Sanford led the way early for the Spartans, firing a 1-under 34 on the back nine of the first round to finish in a four-way tie for fifth place with a 3-over 74. The Minico No. 1 entered the day at 4-over par after a triple-bogey on Hole No. 7 on Monday. He bounced back with birdies on holes No. 12 and 13 before bogeying No. 17. He carded a two-round total of 153.
"Things were a lot better today than they were yesterday—that's for sure," Sanford said. "I just started putting and kept it in play, never got into real huge trouble."
The Spartans also got a lift from Michael Konrad and Brenner Antone. Konrad shot a sparkling 68 — the low round of the tournament — in Round 2 to go with his 75 in the opener. Antone added a 153 total.

Moscow's David Nuhn won the individual crown after firing a 70, two strokes better than groupmate Keaton Skyles of Nampa. Kris Sayer of Hillcrest won a three-hole playoff with Post Falls' Nick Cuchessi for third place.
Nuhn, a senior who finished tied for second at state last year, was a model of consistency both days. He was the only golfer to finish under par and carded just one bogey.

"The big thing was hitting greens. I think I hit 15 greens over the two days," Nuhn said.
Nuhn put his imposing frame to good use off the tee, routinely out-distancing his competitors by a good 10 or 20 yards. That extra length on his drives paid off, as he used the soft, rain-soaked greens to his advantage with his high-arching iron shots.
"As of late I've really been working on my tee shots because that kind of dictates whether you're going to have a good or bad hole," Nuhn said.

Playoff decides 3A boys golf title

By Nathaniel Garbrandt
Times-News writer

BUHL — On the second and final day of the 3A state golf tournament at Clear Lakes Country Club in Buhl Tuesday afternoon, Kellogg's Derek Jarvey was afforded two opportunities to make the biggest shot of his life.
The first, a birdie attempt on the 18th green resulted in the Wildcat senior settling for par on the hole and a one-hole playoff against Benette, which had risen from 14 strokes back after Day 1 to tie Kellogg at 676 after 36 holes.
The rain-soaked tees having provided him with a one-stroke lead on the par-three No. 1, Jarvey converted — his second opportunity, a seven-foot putt or par, into a state team championship.

"It was the most nerve-wracking hole of my life," he said. "But you just have to look back and see who you're representing and do what has to be done."
It was Jarvey's second playoff victory in as many days, with the Wildcat No. 1 having taken fourth in Monday's individual competition. A single stroke earlier against Marsh Valley's Blake Kingston.
Playing the second 18 holes solely for his team, Jarvey improved by four strokes, carding a four-over-par 76. Only two players shot lower, with Fruitland's Devin Burmette recording a 75 and Fayette No. 1 Van Hill carding a 74.
Hill's performance, however, didn't earn him immediately into the playoffs. A single stroke earlier Jarvey's ball in some rough next to a stump 20 yards from the green, forcing a chip that made Jarvey's task a little easier.
"I can't verbalize it. I just can't verbalize it," said an emotional Jarvey after the playoff. "I walked back to the clubhouse for the presentation of the championship trophy and banner. We had such a tough front nine that I was just hoping to hang on for second place."
Miller's team had gone into Day 2 with 335 strokes, tied for first with Shellye.

Pistons pound Pacers, Spurs slam SuperSonics

The Associated Press

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Indiana coach Rick Carlisle used all four of his second-half timeouts in the final quarter, trying to slow down the Detroit Pistons. It didn't work.
Ben Wallace had 19 points, 11 rebounds and three blocks to lead Detroit to an 86-67 victory Tuesday night over the Pacers, and a 3-2 lead in the Eastern Conference semifinal series.
The Pistons held Indiana without a field goal for a stretch 10:39 — including the first 6:26 of the second half — turning the game into a 22-point advantage. The defending NBA champions turned the game into a rout with a 30-4 run over the second and third quarters.
The outcome was a foregone conclusion by the fourth quarter, but the final few minutes provided a couple of oddball

Detroit Pistons forward Rasheed Wallace dunks the ball in Game 5 of the NBA Eastern Conference semifinals against the Indiana Pacers at the Palace in Auburn Hills, Mich., Tuesday.

Carlisle didn't have any left, the Pacers were called for a technical foul with 2:17 left.
Seldom-used Pistons former first-round pick Darko Milicic made the foul shot. He also made a hook shot that drew cheers.
Game 6 is Thursday night in Indianapolis. Of the previous 123 series tied 2-2, the winner of Game 5 advanced 103 times (84 percent) in best-of-seven series.
Indiana's Jameal O'Neal had 14 points and Stephen Jackson scored 12. Reggie Miller was held to eight points — his third single-digit scoring game of the series — and Jamal Tunley scored just two.
Spurs 103, SuperSonics 90
SAN ANTONIO — Manu Ginobili and Nazr Mohammed made sure the San Antonio

Spurs didn't have to sweat it out in the closing seconds of this Game 5.
Manu Ginobili celebrated his return to the starting lineup with a career playoff-best 39 points and Mohammed scored one of his 19 points during a 17-3 third-quarter run, sending the Spurs past the Seattle SuperSonics 103-90 Tuesday night and setting them within a victory of the Western Conference finals.
Ray Allen led Seattle with 19 points, but he was practically invisible in the first and third quarters — the ones coach Nate McMillan called "the most important quarter of our season" prior to tipoff.
Allen was scoreless in the opening period and his only point in the third was a free throw with 4:2 seconds left. He missed three foul shots that quarter after being 55-of-59 from the line in the postseason.

It's not easy being a fan or a player these days

The fan who threw a cup of beer at Jason Giambi in Oakland obviously wasn't thinking clearly. With the price of suds at the ballpark, it would have been a lot cheaper to toss a few peanuts instead.

Or maybe some spare change, like the Detroit fan who hit Allen Iverson with a quarter during a playoff game last month in Auburn Hills, Mich.

That seemed cheap enough at the time, until a fellow fan pointed the guy out to police and he was arrested on charges that could land him up to 90 days in jail.

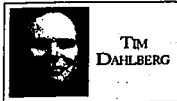

It's dangerous being a player these days, too. You can be at risk chasing a ball down in the right-field corner or simply walking back to the dugout after making yet another out.

It's not all that easy being a fan, either. Just ask Jennifer Bueno, whose nose was broken when she was hit by a baseball. Frank Francisco threw a folding chair in the stands last year in Oakland, or the spectators the Dodgers bullpup sent after one day at Wrigley Field five years ago.

Luckily, Giambi is off the juice these days so the latest incident of fan rage over the weekend didn't spark any "roid rage." Giambi is already so beaten down that he seemed to accept getting hit by a baseball as being simply another indignity he will have to put up with the rest of his well-paid career.

Giambi said a day later. "There's nothing to talk about." Actually, there's plenty to talk about. Both sides in these incidents should start listening before things really begin getting out of hand.

The November brawl in Detroit may have shocked the nation with the graphic video of Ron Artest and his Indianapolis teammates tangleing with fans, but two seasons learned on both sides of the court have already been forgotten. Maybe that's because penalties usually aren't too severe, though that might change when justice is finally done in Detroit.

"They think they can get away with things, first of all. There haven't been enough consequences meted out over the years," said Richard Lapchick, a sports sociologist who runs the Institute for Diversity and Ethics in Sport at the University of Central Florida. "Fans think somehow the broken is a license to behave as badly and rudely as they want to."

Yankees outfielder Gary Sheffield said much the same thing after charges were dropped against a Red Sox fan he says hit him in the face while he went after a ball last month at Fenway Park.

"If you feel that's setting an example, so be it," Sheffield said.

Player-fan confrontations, of course, have been around as long as organized sports. From the day the first ticket was sold, fans entered the art of heckling during the 1912 season. Ty Cobb got so fed up with the heckling of a New York High-Schooler that he charged into the stands after the man. The fan had lost part of his hand in an industrial accident and Cobb gave him a vicious beating. In 1961, two fans ran out of the right-field stands onto the field at Yankee Stadium, only to get punched and kicked by

Oakland Athletics security restrain Eric Anduri of Lafayette, Calif. after he threw a cup of beer at New York Yankees' Jason Giambi as Giambi returned to the dugout in the eighth inning against the Oakland Athletics in Oakland, Calif. Saturday. Anduri, whose age wasn't available, was arrested and charged with battery, public intoxication and throwing objects on the field.

Cleveland center fielder Jimmy Piersall.

But the recent spate of incidents is troubling, mainly because it's likely indicative of deeper problems in the relationships between today's fans and players.

Teams are partly to blame because they sell high-priced seats next to courts and fields where players can't help but occasionally collide with fans. They encourage fans to hate the other team, then compare notes on who they think all the beer they can drink.

Players seldom help their own cause. Most refuse to even try to relate to the fans who actually do pay their salaries, while some think nothing of giving fans an obscene gesture when things go bad. Others go even further, as Albert Belle did in 1991 when he threw a ball at a heckling fan and hit him in the chest.

"There's a joint responsibility here. The athletes sometimes are arrogant to the fans and very often present themselves as being distant," Lapchick said. "The fan sees the athlete making all this money living a lifestyle the fan would like to lead himself. There's kind of a hostility set up between the two groups that carries into the arena."

Lapchick traces the bad behavior back to the early 1990s, from which time he says there has been a general decline in civility in every part of the nation's social fabric.

"That was evident recently even at Dodger Stadium, a place where mild-mannered fans for decades did little more outrageous than listen to Vin Scully on their transistor radios and bounce beach balls around.

Last year, though, fans got in a bottle-throwing altercation with outfielder Milton Bradley, while earlier this month a game was interrupted when fans enjoying a $2 ticket promotion in the left-field pavilion littered the field with debris.

It's a sign of the times, and one we may as well get used to. Because, until both sides learn to behave, the worst is yet to come.

Dixon to testify to Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — Washington Wizards guard Juan Dixon will testify before Congress next week. Dixon is the athlete slated to appear when two House committees hold separate hearings on steroid use and testing in major pro sports, but lawmakers on one panel already proposed a bill to govern drug-testing in sports; the leaders of the other plan to join Sen. John McCain in introducing legislation this week.

Dixon, who led Maryland to the 2002 NCAA title, was one of five NBA players slated to appear at the House Government Reform Committee hearing Thursday. NBA commissioner David Stern, players' union attorney Billy Hunter, and Houston Rockets trainer Keith Jones will be at that panel; third hearing on steroids, after Major League Baseball in March and the NFL last month.

The House Commerce trade and consumer protection subcommittee is conducting its own steroids inquiry and will hold hearings Wednesday and Thursday. Stern, Major League Baseball's chief executive, and Selig, NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue, Major League Soccer commissioner Don Garber and union officials are among the witnesses scheduled to appear.

That subcommittee's chairman, Florida Republican Cliff Stearns, proposed the Drug Free Sports Act on April 28. That bill would have the Commerce Secretary oversee the drug-testing rules and calls for a two-year suspension for a first offense and a lifetime ban for a second. League that don't comply would be fined $5 million.

"It would be easier for the sports if they would work with us, instead of against us," Stearns said Tuesday in a telephone interview.

"One purpose (of the hearings) is to ask these athletes and other people why they should not be subject to the same standards that are used in the Olympics. The second purpose is to get their views on the bill and ask them for suggestions to make it more palatable to their way of thinking so we can just get an understanding of what they would accept."

Selig said Monday he would support federal legislation calling for two-year bans for first-time steroid offenses unless the Major League Baseball Players Association agrees to toughen the sport's drug policy.

"Unfortunately, sometimes you have to legislate at the federal level — if not to solve the problem, at least to begin to address it. I'm not saying the Stearns bill is the perfect bill, but it is a strong bill. There could be changes, but I think something similar to that could become law," said Energy and Commerce Committee chairman Joe Barton, a Texas Republican.

Stearns said he might invite athletes to attend future hearings.

On Monday night, Government Reform Committee spokesman Dave Marin said the NBA players were asked to testify because they've been quoted in media reports as saying the league doesn't have a steroid problem.

Marin wouldn't identify them, other than to describe them as current players whose teams are not allowed to have a steroid reserve for the Wizards, who were eliminated in the postseason's second round by the Miami Heat on Saturday.

NBA Players Association spokesman Dan Wasserman, agent Bill Duffy and Marin confirmed Dixon would appear.

Derby winner Giacomo has plenty to prove

BALTIMORE (AP) — Giacomo isn't the only Kentucky Derby winner to ever enter the Preakness with plenty to prove.

Remember Charismatic only? Before Giacomo pulled off the second-biggest upset in Derby history at 50-1 odds, there was Charismatic's 1998 Derby blockbuster at 31-1. When the Preakness rolled around, Charismatic was dismissed at 8-1 — the fifth choice in the field — before defeating favorite Medford by 1.5 lengths.

The love isn't there for Giacomo either. At least not yet.

Abeet Alex, third in the Derby but just a length behind, was expected to be tabbed the favorite to take the Preakness on Wednesday's post position draw. High Fly, 10th in the Derby for trainer Nick Zito, could be the second choice, followed by Giacomo.

Trainer John Shirreffs doesn't care about the odds. In fact, he's not surprised the Preakness will have a full field of 14 for the first time since 1992.

Heck, Giacomo hasn't even scared off High Limit, who finished last in the 20-horse Derby field, 44.5 lengths behind. Or Going Wild, who was 16th and has lost his last three races by a couple of 85.25 lengths.

Or four new shooters, including New York-bred gelding

Galloping Grocer, winless in five starts over the last seven months, or Hal's Image, 2-for-16.

These Derby also-rans in Saturday's Preakness at Pimlico. The last Derby winner to face so many familiar faces — you guessed it — Charismatic.

While Shirreffs is making his first run through the Triple Crown races, trainer D. Wayne Lukas leads all the angles. He trained Charismatic, and will saddle Going Wild in search of his sixth Preakness victory.

Lukas agrees Charismatic and Giacomo received little respect before the Preakness, but at least his horse — a claimer, no less — came into the Derby after a victory. Giacomo, fourth in the Santa Anita Derby in his last start, entered the Kentucky Derby with only a maiden win last Oct. 22 in seven races.

Giacomo's Derby win was "a little more topsy-turvy," he said. "I don't think this one makes as much sense as Charismatic's did. He (Charismatic) ran down that stretch with authority in the Preakness."

Giacomo ran down the stretch at Churchill Downs with abandon, weaving past 10 horses and causing Clashing Arguments in the final strides for a half-length victory.

The Preakness, though, is 1

Rice will not race in Indy 500

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Buddy Rice is out of the Indianapolis 500 after the defending champion's back injury proved to be more severe than first diagnosed.

Dr. Henry Bock, the medical director at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, announced Tuesday he has informed the Rahal Letterman Racing team that Rice will not get medical clearance in time to qualify for the May 29 race.

Rice injured his back and sustained a concussion in a crash during practice on the 2.5-mile oval last Wednesday.

The back injury was first thought to be a deep contusion, but Bock said further evaluation revealed a partially torn spinal ligament in his mid-to-lower neck area that is essential to maintaining the alignment of the spine. Doctors have recommended rest and rehabilitation, and Bock said Rice's condition will be reassessed in about three weeks.

"Needless to say, I am extremely disappointed that I won't be able to defend my Indy 500 championship," Rice said in a statement issued by the team. "I have spent the last several months thinking about, working towards and planning how I would defend my Indy 500 victory."

"Physically I feel fine, but I have to trust the Speedway and IRL medical team because they are looking out for my safety. I am optimistic that I will be cleared for Texas (June 11) and will be able to get back in the car. I plan to stay here in Indy and help our team in any way I can."

The crash sent Rice to the hospital for an overnight stay.

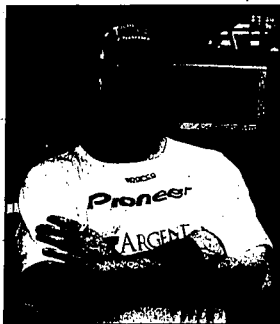

The day after he was released from the hospital, Rice said he didn't know why he suddenly spun out of control and slammed backward into the Speedway's energy-absorbing SAFER Barrier.

"I really don't know what happened," Rice said after returning to the Speedway on Friday. "It could have been driver error or maybe a gust of wind. But I know it was a pretty hard hit."

The 20-year-old Rice was expected to be a strong contender for the IRL IndyCar Series championship this year, but got off to a slow start and is 11th in the points standings following a season-best third-place finish last month in Japan.

Team co-owner Bobby Rahal said the team's first concern is Rice's complete recovery.

"This has been a difficult obstacle for Buddy, but we have been assured by Dr. Bock that, in this case, that the time off will be the solution," said Rahal, who won the Indy 500 in 1986. "Our intent is to move forward over the next two weeks with a replacement driver who will qualify and race the No. 15 Argent-Pioneer Honda car."

Indianapolis 500 winner Buddy Rice watches practice at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, May 10. Rice, injured in a crash last week, will not drive in this year's race.

Rahal's team has two other drivers in the race — rookie Danica Patrick, the only woman in the field, and Vitor Meira. Rahal said the team will announce the substitute for Rice when practice resumes on Wednesday.

Twenty-two drivers qualified for the 33-car field on Sunday, with more qualifying scheduled Saturday and next Sunday.

Two other drivers have been injured since practice for the 500 began May 10.

Rookie Paul Dana broke two bones in his back and sustained a concussion, while two-time IRL champion Sam Hornish Jr., who flipped after running over debris from Dana's wreck, walked away with only a bruised and cut knee. Dana is out of action for the rest of the month, while Hornish qualified second to pole-winner Tony Kanaan on Sunday.

Jack Nicklaus waves to spectators from the Swilken Bridge on the 18th on the second day of the British Open Golf championship on the Old Course at St. Andrews, Scotland July 21, 2000.

A farewell to Jack

At least at St. Andrews

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press writer

Jack Nicklaus always keeps everyone guessing about when the next round of golf will be his last.

Some thought it might have happened last year at the Memorial. Nicklaus showed more emotion than usual when he walked off the ninth green, he said after winning his card that the 18th hole of the final round to shoot a 1-under-71.

"If that was my last round, I was very pleased with shooting under par the last round I played in a tournament," Nicklaus said that day. "And if I play again, then that doesn't mean anything."

He played again at this year's Masters.

Nicklaus shot 77 in the second round, missing a 4-foot birdie putt on his last hole and missing the cut by a mile. Wiping tears from his eyes as he walked off the ninth green, he said after turning his card that he was done competing at Augusta National.

Probably "I have the ability to come back," Nicklaus said. "Billy Casper came back after how many years? He just wanted to come back, and he wanted to play one more round. I don't think I'll do that. But I have the right to do that."

This summer, he has no choice.

Nicklaus will play the British Open for the last time because former champions are no longer exempt beyond 65.

The Golden Bear, golf's greatest champion, thought he had said goodbye in 2000 at St. Andrews when he waved to an adoring gallery from the stone bridge over the Swilken Burn as he walked up the 18th fairway. Everyone thought they were part of a historic moment.

"I'll go home and tell everybody how I saw Jack Nicklaus go over the Swilken Bridge for the last time dressed in his yellow shirt on a sunny day," said one fan, Carol Anne Dolg of Canada. "It doesn't get any better than that."

Jack is back.

The Royal & Ancient Golf Club simply made Nicklaus an offer he couldn't refuse. St. Andrews is his favorite links course on earth, and the R&A rearranged the rotation to make sure that when Nicklaus turned 65 the British Open would be held on the Old Course.

Once again, Nicklaus will pause atop the Swilken Bridge, preferably on a Sunday, and make one last look at the Old Course where he won two claret jugs. That scene will set off enough cameras to make Frank Charles blush.

And then the guessing game will resume.

Nicklaus stopped by London home from the Old Course project in Spain, and he told reporters Monday that the British Open will be the end of his competitive career.

"From a tournament standpoint, that will be it for me," Nicklaus said.

It wasn't clear if Nicklaus was talking about any tournament, or just major championships. He stopped playing the PGA Championship in 2000 at Valhalla (a course he designed), and even though he is exempt for life, it's highly unlikely Nicklaus would take up a spot in the 156-man field.

Still to be determined is whether he plays the Masters, although signs point to him showing up only for dinner.

The emotion at Augusta National was genuine, but the circumstances were strange.

Nicklaus said he played only because Masters chairman Hootie Johnson asked him to come back and say goodbye. If that was the case, why did tournament officials have Nicklaus finish the second round at No. 9, instead of allowing for a traditional farewell on the 18th?

And then there's the Memorial.

Nicklaus created this tournament, one of the purest events on the PGA Tour, won it twice and serves as the tournament host. It has a limited field, so he is not taking a spot away from anyone.

"I'll play here as long as I can play and I can contribute to the tournament," Nicklaus said last year at the Memorial. "I may play here one more year or 10 more years. If I'm going to play somewhere, this is where I'll play."

He made the cut last year at age 64, the second-oldest player to do that in PGA Tour history. Told that Sam Snead was 67 when he made the cut at the 1979 Westchester Classic, Nicklaus joked, "I'll be back when I'm 68."

Nicklaus also is playing on the Champions Tour outside Kansas City, Mo., next month, but only because he designed the golf course and can play the pro-am format with his son. Already, there is talk that Kansas City might be his final appearance in the United States except for ally season events.

Nicklaus has never felt obligated to tell anyone when he will stop playing for good.

It shouldn't matter.

Ben Hogan's professional career ended when he drove off in a car, at the 1971 Houston Open. Byron Nelson ceased into retirement after he earned enough money to buy his ranch, and played his final Masters in 1966.

Besides, Nicklaus has never been about ceremony. R&A executive Peter Dawson was asked earlier this year whether officials planned any kind of tribute for Nicklaus playing in his final British Open.

"Jack is not one for that sort of thing," Dawson said. "He'd rather be treated like a competitor than a monument."

Maybe that's why Nicklaus was coy last year at the Memorial about his future in tournament golf.

"You'll be in suspense, hopefully for a lot of years," Nicklaus said. "Because you never know when I might show up."

He'll be at the British Open, and then he'll be gone. Maybe.

Marquette searches for new nickname

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Miami Heat star Dwyane Wade was snubbed, along with thousands of other outraged Marquette fans, students and alumni, when the university declared it was ditching the Golden Eagles moniker and forever burying the old Warriors nickname in favor of "Gold."

What kind of name was that? And what kind of mascot could represent an inert metal?

Gold? Instead of digging it, the public panned it.

Critics said it was a symbol of greed that conflicted with the school's Jesuit principles. They called it uninspired, unnecessary, unacceptable.

It made the school a national laughingstock. Wade, who led Marquette to the 2003 Final Four, called the campus to get the mascot. He wasn't satisfied to hear the decision was handed down out of the blue by a 38-member board of trustees that got together to reconsider the school's decision to drop Warriors in the early 1990s.

"I'll always be known as a Golden Eagle," Wade insisted. "And the people before me, they'll always be known as the Warriors. And the new class coming in, unfortunately, they're always going to be known as 'The Gold.'"

Not anymore.

The nickname lasted barely a week before the school made a stunning about-face. After getting hammered by more than 4,000 e-mails and countless phone calls, on the airwaves and across the Internet, the red-faced trustees met in emergency session and reversed field.

While still insisting that Warriors was out, in part because of the tenuous connection to the cartoonish Willie Wampum mascot of the 1960s, the board decided to put the issue into the hands of students, faculty, staff and some 100,000 alumni worldwide via Internet voting next week.

The list of 10 names is being finalized, but four former school nicknames — "Golden Eagles," "Golden Avalanche," "Toppers" and "Blue and Gold" — will be among the choices. Write-in votes will be allowed, but "Warriors" votes will be discarded.

The top two finishers will be put up for another vote in mid-June and the winning moniker — the school's fourth nickname in 11 years — will be announced by July 1, when the school joins the reconfigured Big East Conference.

The story over the university's nickname started a year ago at graduation when two trustees offered the school $1 million each to go back to Warriors, which it dropped in favor of Golden Eagles because the name and logo offended some American Indian groups.

Among those advocating a return to Warriors — a nickname used by 27 universities across the country, including Wisconsin Lutheran College in Milwaukee — was university President Robert A. Wild.

In conversations with American Indian tribes and bands during the last year, however, Wild realized it was impossible to di-

Former Marquette star Dwyane Wade slam dunks against South Florida in the first half in Milwaukee, on Jan. 11, 2003.

"We're dealing with a human dignity issue, and that's real basic stuff for a Catholic and Jesuit university," Wild said.

He believes much of the firestorm over the Gold nickname grew out of anger from those who supported a return to Warriors. Many alumni across the country still think of themselves as Warriors — 92 percent of them, according to an online survey conducted by the university.

At a rally after Gold was announced as the new nickname, one student held a sign that read: "Exodus 15:3: The Lord is a warrior."

When trustees realized that Warriors wasn't going to make a comeback, they decided to ditch Golden Eagles too.

"It seemed like a bright idea at the time," Wild said. "When we saw where we were headed with Warriors, we said, 'Look at what Syracuse has done. They went from Orangemen to Orange. Hey, one of our oldest traditions really has been our school colors, blue and gold.' We had the Golden Eagles. We had the Golden Avalanche when we had a football team. We tried to tap into that."

It turned out to be fool's gold. Wild said he didn't think alumni would withhold donations to the university and he insisted the school won't have golden egg on its face for long.

"This is a blip on the radar screen," he suggested. "The board of trustees had the good sense to say, 'All right, clearly the alumni were affected. Let's move on.' That's what we're trying to do."

Big Sky welcomes Northern Colorado

GREELEY, Colo. (AP) — The presidents of the Big Sky Conference schools voted unanimously Tuesday to admit Northern Colorado to the conference as the school gears up to return to Division I competition.

The Bears will join the conference on July 1, 2006.

"It's one of the greatest things that could happen to this athletic department and school in decades," Northern Colorado Athletics Director Jay Hinrichs said. "Moving forth with our transition to Division I, as well as our increased involvement in national intercollegiate athletics. We've got a great partner in all of the Big Sky institutions."

Presidents from the eight current conference members met in Portland, Ore., to make Northern Colorado its ninth member.

"They add a lot to the conference," Big Sky commissioner

Doug Fullerton said. "They are within our geographical footprint and bring a market with them."

Fullerton said there were a small number of issues involved. "We want them to be playing right at the top of 1-AA football so there are some scholarship requirements," he said. "But other than that, Northern Colorado is meeting most of the issues. We wanted to firm up the eligibility for championships."

Northern Colorado will compete with 50 scholarships this fall, go to 57 next year and 63, the number required in Division I-AA in 2007-08, the Bear's first year in Division I.

Northern Colorado won't be competing for conference championships immediately. That will be determined by the sport and on some transition criteria that the NCAA imposes on an institution that moves from Division II to Division I.

"Because of that, volleyball will be competing in 2006-07," Hinrichs said. "Football and basketball in 2007-08, our first year after we've completed the transition."

After spending 23 years in the Division II North Central Conference, the Bears played in the six-team Great West Football Conference last year. The remaining 15 sports competed as independents.

"There was no decision here because it is paramount in our strategic plan to focus on a conference," Hinrichs said. "Doing what we are doing including the start of a $15 million recreation and athletic facilities as well as adding scholarships, those things come as you are increasing your scope and going to Division I."

Johnson accepts Suns cheerleader role for now

PHOENIX (AP) — With a bloodshot left eye, a swollen cheek and a bruised lip, Joe Johnson watched his Phoenix Suns teammates practice on Tuesday and said he wasn't sure when he might be able to play again.

"Not in this series, I don't think," he said, "but I think in due time, it's just a slow process right now, and we're trying to make sure everything is all right."

Johnson underwent surgery, and a metal plate was inserted in his cheek to keep the displaced bones together while they heal.

Despite his battered appearance, Johnson said he was mostly pain-free.

The Suns' guard, one of the top 3-point shooters in the NBA, said his vision was not damaged.

He is to undergo an examination on Thursday; then will know more about the prospect for a return if the Suns advance to the conference finals. He believes that he could play again this season with a protective mask.

Meanwhile, he will be on the bench in street clothes for Game 5 against Dallas on Wednesday night.

Johnson said he'd received a call from Stackhouse.

"He just told me that him and his family were keeping me in their prayers," Johnson said.

There are no hard feelings about how the injury occurred, Johnson said.

"It was a basketball play, man," he said. "We went up for a defensive stop and kind of nicked me a little bit, and knocked me off balance."

Idaho faces risk of deficit, group says

BOISE — Idaho is among 27 states whose tax structure hurts low-income residents and puts public programs at risk if the economy sours, a Washington, D.C.-based tax policy group said Tuesday.

Those states failed to maintain a mix of taxes that keep pace with needed government services, the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities said Tuesday.

Idaho's risk is on par with California, Hawaii and Washington state, the group said. With Idaho's economy accelerating in the first quarter of 2005 — it added 17,000 jobs compared with a year ago, and a state budget surplus is expected — lawmakers now should revamp the tax system, said Don Reading, an economist who introduced the study at the Idaho Statehouse.

"We need to broaden the sales tax," Reading said. "With this structural deficit, we're going to go into crisis in the future."

Other measures could include capturing taxes from internet commerce, dropping tax exemptions for services and corporations and revamping property taxes, he said.

Crosby Service moves to a new location

BUHL — Crosby Service, an Industrial and household sewing machine repair service, has moved to 4178 N. 1625 E. in Boise. For the past year, the home-based Crosby Service was at 929 Robertson in Buhl.

Owner and operator Ronald Crosby got his start in the sewing machine repair business over 20 years ago.

"I was hurt in an industrial accident in 1980," Crosby said. "After that I went to the Union Special Technical Training Center and learned how to do it."

He spent 10 weeks at the center to pick up the skill. Now, his specialty is industrial sewing machines like those used in bean warehouses and by mail order.

However, he works on household machines as well.

Crosby started the part-time business in Filley in 1990. He moved to Buhl and has been there since. The telephone number for Crosby Service is 543-4424.

Boise Cascade will delay initial offering

WASHINGTON — Boise Cascade Co.'s initial public offering has been delayed as the wood and paper-products company with a corrugated-container plant in Burley continued to drum up investor interest.

The Boise company was originally expected to price Monday night and begin trading Tuesday.

Instead, it is now expected to price sometime this week, with no clear indication of which day, according to market data and research provider Dealogic.

Boise Cascade, formerly part of retail chain OfficeMax Inc. of Itasca, Ill., is hoping to sell 16 million shares at $24 to $26 apiece.

The components that make up Boise Cascade were purchased from OfficeMax by a Chicago private-equity shop Madison Dearborn Partners LLC in October, and are being flipped into an IPO less than a year later.

Boise Cascade's balance sheet is heavy on debt, and all proceeds from the offering are destined not for the company's coffers, but to its current owners' pockets.

Investors have been increasingly restless to the price ranges being underwritten by similarly structured deals, most notably PanAmSat Holding Corp. and Warner Music Group Corp., which performed poorly after they hit the market at reduced prices.

Group against Wal-Mart will meet

By Megan Hinds Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Does Twin Falls need a Wal-Mart supercenter?

A group of community members, business people and others says no.

The Concerned Citizens League of Twin Falls, a fledgling, nonpartisan, grassroots coalition opposed to Wal-Mart Stores Inc.'s planned Twin Falls store, will meet this week to discuss the retail giant's business tactics and to develop a strategy to keep Wal-Mart out of the city.

Wal-Mart is prepared to address locals' concerns in the

If you go ...

The Concerned Citizens League of Twin Falls, a new coalition of community members and business owners who are opposed to Wal-Mart's proposed Twin Falls store, will meet at 7 p.m. Thursday at the Twin Falls City Council chambers, 305 Third Ave. E.

While the group is using a public facility, City Hall is not organizing the meeting. The public is invited.

coming months, a company spokesman said.

Last month, Bentonville,

Ark.-based Wal-Mart submitted its plans to build a nearly 200,000-square-foot supercenter in the North Haven Business Park at the southwest corner of Washington Street North and Pole Line Road. Those plans are pending a Twin Falls Planning and Zoning Commission public hearing May 31 to debate Wal-Mart's applications for three special-use permits to operate the business 24 hours per day, to operate a drive-through pharmacy and to operate a tire and auto-care facility.

Thursday's meeting isn't organized by the city, but rather by the anti-Wal-Mart coalition.

The group is made up of about 50 to 60 local community members, small- and large-business owners and managers, labor, peace and political activists, church leaders, and educators, said Bill Haines, of Twin Falls, the group's organizer.

The group says Wal-Mart's philosophy of "always low prices" comes at the expense of American manufacturers as well as good-paying jobs, Haines said Tuesday. A Twin Falls store could hurt the city's existing small and medium-sized businesses, he said.

"They say they bring jobs, but they take jobs from local businesses," Haines said.

"The citizens' coalition also takes issue with how Wal-Mart's plans have been presented to the public. The North Haven development was presented to the public and approved by the city as a business park, not a retail center, and possibly light manufacturing, not a Wal-Mart, Haines said.

"There was never really an opportunity for public hearings before now," he said. "That was a different business that was supposed to go into there."

GAMING FOR GOOD

George Haldin, Nintendo of America's senior vice president of marketing and corporate communications, introduces Nintendo's new game 'The Legend of Zelda - Twilight Princess' at the Nintendo press conference Tuesday in Los Angeles.

As life skills, video games are for real

Knight Ridder News Service

SAN JOSE, Calif. — At the Charles Schwab company's call-center headquarters in Phoenix, chip resources vice president Chip Luman has learned a secret about financial services technology and the employees who operate it: Video-game players often display exceptional business skills.

"The people who play games are into technology, can handle more information, can synthesize more complex data, solve operational design problems, lead change and bring organizational change," said Luman.

Luman is among a host of professionals — in fields including business, medicine and education — who have noticed a surprising number of social benefits from the increasing rate that Americans are spending with "Super Mario," "Halo of Nations" and "The Sims."

Moreover, almost all the games they cite are mainstream hits from an industry that often is vilified as frivolous and exploitative. Some of the games that have the most positive potential are either famously controversial or rated Mature because of violent or provocative content.

The industry heads into its annual convention this week — E3, the Electronic Entertainment Expo in Los Angeles — as anti-game forces in numerous states are pushing for governmental intervention. In California, for example, the Assembly is preparing to vote on a bill that would prohibit the sale of certain violent games to anyone under 17.

But at the same time there's a growing wave of research and firsthand reports about children, parents, workers, corporations and even medical patients experiencing notable benefits from computer or video games.

The potential teaching value is a key area of research for linguistics professor James Paul Gee at the University of Wisconsin-Madison.

Gee has studied a wide range of games, including "Deus Ex," "The Elder Scrolls III: Morrowind," the "Splinter Cell" series, "Ratchet & Clank: Going Commando" and "Fable." He concluded that numerous popular games, including many with a Mature rating, are designed with cutting-edge teaching principles that could be adapted for schoolwork or employee training.

Manhattan Home Depot molds to pampered tastes

Los Angeles Times

NEW YORK — Shortly after Home Depot opened its first two Manhattan stores late last year, Ken Richmond noticed something about his decidedly upper-crust clientele.

"Maybe I've never hung a picture if I live in a $7 million condo," sympathized Richmond, manager of the 59th Street store across from Bloomingdale's.

And for the spackle-challenged whose fallen pictures had gouged a chunk out of their walls, he had the appropriate remedy: caulk. Repeating Your Walls. With its oversized orange

The stores have doormen (de rigueur for high-end retail) and concierge desks. Situated in the basement of a new high-rise, the 59th Street entryway doesn't even resemble a traditional Home Depot. Products are on display in museum-style cases.

Home Depot reports jump in Q1 profits

Penney's first-quarter results beat estimates

The Times-News and The Associated Press

TWIN FALLS — Six retailers with Magic Valley stores reported quarterly financial results Tuesday.

Among the highlights:

Home Depot

The Home Depot Inc., the largest U.S. home-improvement chain, reported a more than 13 percent jump in first-quarter profit on solid gains in revenue, though sales at stores open helped a year were up only modestly.

The results beat Wall Street expectations.

The Atlanta-based company said it earned $1.25 billion, or 57 cents per share, for the three months ending May 1, compared with a profit of $1.1 billion, or 49 cents per share, for the same period last year.

Excluding one-time items, Home Depot said it earned $1.21 billion or 60 cents per share. On that basis, analysts surveyed by Thomson Financial were expecting earnings of 55 cents per share.

Revenue in the quarter rose 8 percent to $18.97 billion but missed analysts' estimates of $19.26 billion.

The results that compares sales at stores open at least a year — rose 2.1 percent in the quarter, compared with 7.7 percent a year ago.

"While we don't like to sound like a weather report, whether it impact our business, our financial performance, or our total analysts in a conference call.

In the call, chief executive Bob Nardelli said new and improved sales helped drive the overall sales in the quarter. The company's average sales ticket rose 5.7 percent to $38.25 in the quarter, compared with $35.11 a year ago.

J.C. Penney

J.C. Penney Co. continues to sparke amid mid-tier department stores. Helped by improved sales of fashions and sharply higher internet business, Penney announced a fourth first-quarter earnings rise that beat estimates and upgraded its outlook.

Penney's strong performance is a bright spot in the otherwise gloomy retail sector, whose customers have been hit by higher gasoline prices and a weak job market. The tier has been squeezed by high-end players like Neiman Marcus Group Inc., whose well-heeled customers have been slow to benefit from a recovery, and discounters like Target Corp. and Wal-Mart Stores Inc., which offer budget consumers low-price goods.

"Our vision is to become the preferred shopping choice for middle America, a customer segment that continues to show that it is resilient and rewards retailers that meet or exceed customers' expectations," said Myron Ullman, chairman and chief executive at J.C. Penney.

Gaming

Continued from E1. For instance, Gee noted that some games, such as the historical strategy game "Risk of Nations," can be partly customized to suit each player. In choosing different ways to play, the player can learn to succeed in whatever manner is best for him or her personally.

But he also believes that some may have inherent cognitive advantages, including the seemingly lightweight "Pokemon" and "Yu-Gi-Oh" video games. Those games, said Gee, feature such intricate jargon that children who are encouraged to discuss them can build crucial vocabulary skills.

"They're absorbing a tremendous amount of complicated language," Gee said. "The standard complaints about most video games are legitimate: Games make kids sedentary. They're violent and sexist. They're routinely sold to young girls. They're shallow and addictive."

And all of these allegations have gotten considerable support from a loose coalition of politicians, educators, health officials, law enforcement officers and religious leaders. The inventory of rebuttals, however, is expanding.

"There's a growing interest in the workout value of dance games that require strenuous activity to perform the fast-paced, fun moves on the screen. The hallmark games are from Konami's "Dance Dance Revolution" series, and a PlayStation 2 Xbox version of the arcade hit "Pump It Up" is scheduled for release in August.

One of a number of intriguing new investments in the Virginia Public Insurance. "They learn that they have to develop the teams, structure the tasks and build rewards in very different ways than they might have naturally," Beck said.

Manhattan

Continued from E1. One idea of home repair has been to pick up a phone to call the super.

One customer asked storm contractor Richmond to recommend the best hammer. Richmond said that was a tip-off that the man didn't know he was doing because he should have asked what the best hammer was for a specific job, Richmond said.

"It's very difficult to do those questions," Richmond said. "People in Midtown Manhattan are not used to doing it your way."

Richmond wouldn't divulge specific figures but said sales had increased each month since his store opened in December.

Indeed, Manhattanites seem to have taken to the store. Jennifer Schlesinger, who was shopping with her mother and daughter, used to have problems finding what she needed at neighborhood stores.

"It was very difficult to get any kind of hardware," she said.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

Bobby Wolff

"The test of a man's or woman's breeding is how they behave in a quarrel. Anybody can behave well when things are going smoothly."

— George Bernard Shaw

On today's deal from the 1997 Vanderbilt finals, put yourself in West's shoes and be prepared. When you have made your opening lead, you will need to defend in tempo!

Do you lead a passive trump, a neutral diamond, or an active club king or spade queen against South's heart slam? At the table, West led a top club; give yourself a minute to look at dummy before reading on.

Declarer takes the ace as your partner signals an even number, then draws two rounds of trump with the ace and king, partner following. Now comes the spade king as partner plays the five. On a second spade from declarer — do you split your honors or not?

At the table the player sitting West did split his honors and let through the contract in so doing. Declarer now won dummy's ace and passed the spade-10, discarding his club loser. The spade-nine in dummy meant declarer no longer needed to rely on the diamond finesse — and a good job too, as the cards lay. Had West followed low unconcernedly, declarer would have been unable to risk the spade finesse, so would surely have gone down by leading a diamond to dummy's jack at the end.

By the way, note how well West had done to lead clubs initially. If he had not, a careful declarer would have built a club discard for himself on the diamonds by cashing the diamond king and then ace, to lead up to the diamond jack if necessary.

ANSWER: Raise to two hearts rather than bidding one spade. It is acceptable to introduce a five-card spade suit or a really good four-card spade suit over one heart rather than raising partner. But here you might want to get your support across at once. With three trumps and a ruffing value, this hand seems likely to play well in hearts.
