Floods threaten Jarbidge

Elko County declares state of emergency

By Dave Woodson and Adella Harding For The Times-News

ELKO, Nev. — Elko County commissioners declared a countywide state of emergency Wednesday because of widespread flooding that has taken out bridges in Jarbidge and washed out roads elsewhere in northern Nevada.

Jarbidge is the most threatened community, with two bridges out of service and residents facing isolation if there is more flooding.

"There is a detour so people can get in and out, but the bridge at the south end is gone

The swollen Jarbidge River flows through the historic town of Jarbidge on Tuesday. Two bridges, including this one, are impassable because of the flooding.

and the one in town isn't safe," Jennie Creechley told the Elko Daily Free Press on Wednesday morning by telephone from the Outdoor Inn in Jarbidge.

"We're just hoping it doesn't rain again," she said.

Mountain City District Ranger Dan Dallas said that the north bridge at Jarbidge is "impassable."

There's a 20-foot hole in the back of the bridge." And he said the south bridge over the Jarbidge River toward Jarbidge is "impassable." Please see FLOODS, Page A2

SLIPPIN' QUIETLY AWAY

Waldo Faught, left, with his wife Shirley and Beth Tows, stand in the Magic Grange north of Shoshone on Wednesday. The Magic Grange was founded in 1928 and moved to the current location after a fire in 1972. There are only four members of the organization left, including a 95-year-old founder in Paul Bancroft.

Grange closing brings an end to a way of life

By Rusty Tows Times-News correspondent

SHOSHONE — Sitting on a dry hill north of Shoshone, surrounded by dead and dying trees, Magic Grange hardly looks like the social center of the neighborhood.

Founded in 1926 in a dispute with Wood River Center Grange four miles away, the Magic Grange is the epitome of the good old days.

Part religious, part mystical, part political and mostly social, Grange meetings gave neighbors a place to vent, compare lives and keep abreast of the latest in agriculture technology. Amazingly, there is a founding member of Magic Grange still living. But at 95, Paul Bancroft is one of only four remaining members. And they're reluctantly chosen to hang up their cowboy hats to allow an era to pass.

The Grange was a nice organization for the farmers and was quite profitable in the early days, but young people don't want to belong anymore," Bancroft lamented from his home in a Shoshone retirement center. "I don't know why, really."

Bancroft and his in-laws established the Grange Charter in 1926. They were able to raise $75 through potluck dinners to purchase a railroad building in Kimauna. With horses and wagons, the 30-by-40-foot wooden hall was carried 30 miles to Shoshone. First placed east of the Darmh School, the building was later moved to a site north of Johnny's Country Store.

Bancroft and his wife, Ruby, raised two daughters, Wanda and Roberta, on their north Shoshone ranch.

"Christmas parties were special for our family," Bancroft reminisces. "We didn't travel very far in the winter because roads and cars weren't very good. We had our parties close to home."

Magic Grange Christmas parties were a rite of passage for generations. Youngsters met their first Santa, teenagers giggled as they whispered Santa's secrets and young families brought their own children to watch dads and granddads play Santa Claus. Families provided

Interests collide in the countryside

Ohio dairy farmer Frank Surtliff was grinding cattle feed when he saw them again, all-terrain vehicles shredding his alfalfa fields.

When he shouted over the engine whine that the riders were trespassing, they smashed him over the head, he said. "I went down, and they just started in on me ... hit me, kicked me, broke my leg," said Surtliff, 46. "I crawled into the truck, drove back to the house and dialed 911."

One man paid a $100 trespassing fine. Another spent five days in jail. All denied wrongdoing.

new residents moving to the country for peace and quiet.

As Bob Buxter, a county supervisor in Riverside, Calif., put it, "You have these two clashing interests. One is the off-roader, the other is the farmer, rancher and the flood of new residents moving to the country for peace and quiet."

Grenade thrown at Bush rally

FBI: The device didn't detonate due to a malfunction

The Associated Press

TBILISI, Georgia — A grenade hurled in a crowd during last week's speech by President Bush in the Georgian capital was live and considered a threat against the president, though it failed to explode because of a malfunction, the FBI said Wednesday.

In a letter to the U.S. House spokesman said Secret Service agents in Georgia were examining whether security changes are needed to make sure that some people at Freedom Square were seen getting around metal detectors at Bush's July 10 speech.

Initially, Georgian officials said the grenade was found on the ground, was inactive and posed no danger to Bush.

But FBI agent Bryan Paarmann said Wednesday that the grenade, wrapped in a dark handkerchief, fell about 100 feet from the podium where Bush was speaking and "simply failed to function."

He identified it as a live hand grenade, whereas initial Georgian statements said it appeared to have been an "engineering grenade," a device that is not designed to spread shrapnel.

"We consider this act to be a threat against the health and welfare of the president of the United States as well as the welfare of the multitudes of Georgian people who turned up for this event," Paarmann said. Bush spoke to tens of thousands of people in Freedom Square, a main plaza in Tbilisi, as part of a visit aimed at cementing relations between the United States and the ex-Soviet republic's new pro-Western leadership. He offered strong support for Georgia's democratic developments, and the crowd response was favorable.

President Mikhail Saakashvili also was on the podium when Bush spoke, raising the prospect that the grenade could have been directed at him. Saakashvili, who came to power after the 2003 Rose Revolution that ousted Eduard Shevardnadze, has provoked enmity with the United States over his insistence on restoring control over two de-facto independent separatist regions.

Bush spoke from behind bulletproof glass as Washington White House spokesman Scott McClellan said at the time.

No arrests have been made in the case, and police have appealed to the public for videotapes that may contain footage of the incident. A reward equal to $11,000 is being offered.

"Work is going on in a lot of directions; that's all that can be said," said Inter Ministry spokesman Guram Donadze.

Most diabetics are not controlling their sugar

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A dismal two-thirds of the nation's 18 million Type 2 diabetics don't have their blood sugar under control, putting them at high risk — of the disease's nastiest complications, even death. Yet most are unaware they're doing so poorly, frustrated diabetes specialists said Wednesday.

The report, I think, is sobering," said Dr. Lawrence Blonde of the American Association of Clinical Endocrinologists, which released the latest statistics at its annual meeting.

Dr. Paul Jellinger, president of the American College of Endocrinology, was more blunt: "It's horrible."

Type 2 diabetes is the most common form of the illness, and experts estimate a third of the people who have it don't know it. An additional million have "pre-diabetes," an impaired sugar tolerance that can lead to the full-blown disease.

Type 2 diabetes sneaks up on you, as the body gradually loses its ability to use insulin, a hormone crucial to converting blood sugar into energy. High glucose levels damage blood vessels and nerves — eventually leading to blindness, kidney failure, amputations of feet and legs, and heart disease. Diabetes is the nation's sixth-leading killer.

After the fire, a sparse, gray, block building replaced the wooden hall.

alone or with a variety of medications, can prevent that damage. The best measure of control is an A1C level below 6.5. But 67 percent of Type-2 diabetics aren't meeting that goal.

family inherited farms took another hit from pressures to subdivide. Farms were often were owned by the old.

The little gray Grange lived on like the little train that could — it just kept chugging, getting larger and closer to the center of the line.
Down to four members today, remaining Grangers are being pressured to close by the state Grange organization and the land owner who holds the lease for the land.

The Faughts members since 1963, say they want to continue. "It's a shame no one wants to join the Grange anymore, it was a good place to meet your neighbors. Now days, neighbors hardly visit except at funerals."
Maybe just one or two more members will join. Maybe someone will want to help with the annual bingo booth at the Lincoln County Fair.

"We retired and moved to town," Waldo Faught explained. "Young people in the community should take over the Grange."

The bridges and road into Jarbridge are on public land managed by the U.S. Forest Service, and Dallas said there is a Forest Service plan to build a road from Jarbridge to "maintain access in and out of town."
The Forest Service expects to start work on Jarbridge in the next few months.

Blonde checked a different database that showed between a fifth and a third of diabetics had A1C readings above 9 — not even mild cases of diabetes.
A normal A1C level is 5. While diabetes specialists differ on whether 6.5 or 7 signals good control, the new study says the risk of serious complications by 25 percent to 40 percent.

Diabetics doesn't necessarily hurt you. You can live with it, I'm not in pain, I won't take this (medicine) today," said actress and singer Della Reese, a Type 2 diabetic who helped launch the endocrinologists' public-education campaign.

visions of the countryside."
Nationally, millions of acres have been developed in recent decades. At the same time, use of off-highway vehicles — a catch-all term for four-wheelers, dirt bikes, and dune buggies — has exploded, up 700 percent to 36 million users since 1976.

That infuriates landowners such as Harlan Brown, who installed heat and motion-sensitive cameras to catch off-road miscreants who created a muddy quagmire in his 100-acre Maline woods.
"Your land is not your land," said his wife Judy. "You think it's yours, but it's not. The clothes have made victims of riders as well as property owners."

In North Carolina three years ago, Joshua Woodruff, 22, died of internal injuries after he hit a steel cable while zooming down a hill on his private Off-Road Farmer Ted Arnold said in an interview that he had strung up the cable after making many muddy quagmires in his 100-acre Maline woods.

Arnold said he had liberally posted no-trespassing signs and warned riders.
No criminal charges were filed against him.
State and local officials in Maine, Vermont, Ohio, Minnesota, Wyoming and Michigan in recent years have enacted or are weighing new measures to combat illegal off-roading. But angry homeowners say the laws often do little to curb abuse, while off-roaders argue that some violate civil rights.

In California, Riverside County supervisors are expected to vote this summer on what could be the nation's toughest law. The current draft would ban the activity on private property four days a week, even on the riders' property. Riding would be banned outright on private lots smaller than 2 1/2 acres. Grading to create off-road trails or tracks would require a costly permit and public hearings.

Off-roading is increasingly dangerous, destructive and very difficult to control, except at huge public expense," said Buster, one of the supervisors. The county has long been a hot spot for professional dirt bikers and weekend amateurs, and riders are outraged at the attempt to rein them in.
"It's not total insanity. We might as well be in Russia," said Ed Waldheim, president of the California Off-Road Vehicle Association. "Off-roading is the most incredible family sport there is, and to deny a kid riding on Sunday — that is repressive, totally against the spirit of the desert — where snowmobilers, kids on dirt bikes and others were once free to barrel across unfenced, unposted land."

Gunmen kill Iraqi ministry official

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Insurgents gunned down a senior Iraqi Interior Ministry official Wednesday and the bodies of seven men shot in the head were found outside Baghdad, part of an escalation in violence that a senior U.S. military official said was called for during a recent meeting in Syria by leaders of terrorist Abu Musab al-Zarqawi.

An Iraqi girl looks up at Spc. Cole Hansen from Canby, Minn., while he stands guard for fellow soldiers from the U.S. Army who are searching the houses and questioning the girl's mother in the outskirts of Ramadli on Wednesday.

The spiraling violence has killed nearly 500 people since the April 28 announcement of the new Shiite-dominated government. Prime Minister Ibrahim al-Jaafari recently pledged to use an "iron fist" to prevent an outbreak of sectarian violence — which al-Zarqawi and his al-Qaida in Iraq group have tried to foment.

A senior U.S. military official, who told reporters he did not want to be named after briefing them, said the recent upsurge in violence can be attributed to a meeting in neighboring Syria about a month ago by lieutenants of the Jordanian-born al-Zarqawi, who may have attended.

The meeting was held to try and manage the Jordanian-born al-Zarqawi, who may have attended. The meeting was held to try and manage the Jordanian-born al-Zarqawi, who may have attended.

White House faces dilemma over exile

MIAMI (AP) — Caught between its hard-line policy against Fidel Castro and its war on terrorism, the Bush administration has arrested an anti-Castro exile accused of masterminding a deadly 1976 airliner bombing.

Luis Posada Carriles, 77, was seized Tuesday by federal agents. He had been in hiding in Miami for two months and had petitioned for asylum in the United States.

Posada, a former CIA operative and Venezuelan security official, is wanted by Venezuela for possible retrial in the plane bombing that killed 73 people. Castro wants Posada to be sent to Venezuela.

In a series of speeches, Castro repeatedly accused the United States of a double standard in the war on terror and led a protest Tuesday by tens of thousands in Havana.

The majority of Americans would never be in favor of harboring a terrorist," said Wayne Smith, a former U.S. envoy to Cuba who now heads the Cuba program at the Washington-based Center for International Policy.

If the United States grants asylum, Smith added, "we will be seen as hypocrites and as being against terrorism only when it suits our purposes."

Bush mulls exit delay for Greenspan

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan frequently urges Americans to postpone retirement and stay on the job longer.

He may soon get the chance to do so himself. Bush administration officials are mulling whether to encourage Greenspan, 79, to continue as Fed chairman for at least a few months beyond the Jan. 31 expiration of his term, according to sources told of the possibility.

This would give the White House more time to broaden the search for possible successors, looking beyond the academic and policy worlds to the corporate world, as they have been urged to do by some financial analysts.

Greenspan did not comment for this article but indicated in a commencement speech Sunday at the University of Pennsylvania's Wharton School that he still intends to leave the Fed early next year.

New pope reaches out to non-Catholics

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Although 78 and seen by some as a transitional figure, Pope Benedict XVI moved quickly in the first month of his papacy, standing firm on the moral code for his flock while reaching out to Jews and other non-Catholics and seeking to break down a half-century-old barrier with China.

When he was elected as pope April 19 in one of the shortest conclaves in modern history, there were questions of how the former Cardinal Joseph Ratzinger, seen as a severe guardian of church orthodoxy, would fill the shoes of his crowd-pleasing predecessor, Pope John Paul II. His first appearances in papal white seemed to dispel the doubts.

During his general audience Wednesday, Benedict spoke in a half-dozen languages, including reading a greeting to pilgrims in John Paul's native Polish noting it would have been the "unforgettable pontiff's" 85th birthday. "He intends to make a dynamic mark," Vatican expert and papal biographer Marco Pollid said of Benedict. "The cardinals made a prestigious choice."

Meyerhoeffer leaves a long legacy in T.F.

When the College of Southern Idaho's founding president, James "Doc" Taylor, died in 1982 this newspaper remarked editorially that there would never be a need to build a statue to Taylor on campus. The campus itself was his memorial.

When the College of Southern Idaho's founding president, James "Doc" Taylor, died in 1982 this newspaper remarked editorially that there would never be a need to build a statue to Taylor on campus. The campus itself was his memorial.

Our view: The College of Southern Idaho's growth and achievement in the past 22 years directly reflects Jerry Meyerhoeffer's leadership.

What do you think?
We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

It's hard to imagine life here without the cultural attractions that the Fine Arts Center makes possible. And there aren't many Twin Falls residents who don't take advantage of some campus facilities, ranging from the Boys and Girls Club to the Frontier Field complex to the Community Education Center to the Eldon Evans Expo Center to the CSI Fitness Trail.

• Athletes. There's no weekend-night Mecca in the Magic Valley like the CSI gym, home to the seven-time national champion volleyball team and the winningest team (.645 percentage) in the history of junior college men's basketball.

CSI sports have united south-central Idaho and have given this remote farming-region something-to-do on Saturday nights.

A few scullfaws have been associated with CSI sports over the years, and at times we wished for more transparency in the athletic program. But on balance Meyerhoeffer's tenure has been a spectacular success between the white lines.

In many ways, the college Meyerhoeffer leads has improved the lives of thousands of its neighbors, many of whom have never taken a single class at CSI. Lots of folks on the Twin Falls campus and at CSI's satellite campuses in Burley, Halley and Gooding share credit for that. But president Meyerhoeffer set tone with his liberal philosophy that a community college is only worthwhile when it serves the community.

His interim successor, longtime CSI administrator Jerry Beck, should continue those traditions, but there's no question that Meyerhoeffer's tenure has been a larger-than-life figure who has embodied real progress in making life in the Magic Valley better for everybody.

The same may be said for Taylor's successor Jerry Meyerhoeffer, who announced his retirement on Monday at the age of 67.

Meyerhoeffer's 22-year tenure marks the conclusion from a back-pasture junior college into an increasingly indispensable educational and information technology center for all south-central Idaho.

The numbers tell part of the story:
• In the spring of 1983, there were 2,837 academic students enrolled at CSI, and 1,091 technical students. During the just-concluded school year, CSI had 5,722 academic students and 1,352 technical students.

Meyerhoeffer inherited a budget of $6.9 million in 1983, which, when adjusted for inflation would equal about $13 million today; for the 2004-2005 academic year, it was $27.9 million.

The College of Southern Idaho Foundation now has an endowment of nearly $18 million and spends more than $600,000 annually on scholarships that go to 27 percent of CSI students.

When Meyerhoeffer became president, the foundation didn't exist.

Beyond the numbers, CSI on Meyerhoeffer's watch has transformed the way life is lived in the Magic Valley.
• Economic development. Dozens of businesses and thousands of jobs exist in this area because of the technical and training support that CSI supplies. Indeed, it's hard to envision economic development as we know it — and certainly the 650 Delo jobs in Twin Falls — without CSI.

• Distance learning. It's now possible to earn a variety of four-year degrees at CSI through Boise State University, Idaho State University and other institutions, without leaving the Magic Valley. That fact has opened the door to a college degree for people who could — for reasons of family, finances or jobs — have afforded to leave the area to go to college.

• Access. CSI charges $1,900 a year in tuition and

The personal stakes in the Senate fight over confirmation of judges could not be higher. President Bush has asked his prestige on a direct challenge to Senate Democrats by renominating for the circuit courts seven judges whose confirmation was blocked in the past because of the threat of Democratic filibusters.

The White House has pressed Majority Leader Bill Frist to outlaw a repetition of such tactics by lining up 50 votes to sustain a ruling by Vice President Cheney that judicial filibusters are not protected by Senate rules.

DAVID BRODER

More than five of the 55 Republican senators to desert the president on that issue, it would be a heavy blow to his last days in office.

Frist, who has made the issue his personal cause, also has much riding on the outcome. He has received strong support from staunch conservatives when, as expected, he seeks the presidential nomination in the fall. His own Democratic Minority Leader Harry Reid also has high stakes. His first months as leader, the Nevada has compiled a spotty record of verbal gaffes and parliamentary gambles. But if he is able to turn back Bush and Frist on this point, his stature among his fellow Democrats would be vastly enlarged.

But dwarfing all these individual dramas is the question of what the vote means for the Senate as an institution. Two of the main props of the Senate's identity are its unlimited debate, going back to the Senate's earliest years, has been curtailed through the centuries, with the only ceiling being the one set by its closure rule — the ability of a supermajority to vote to bring debate to a close.

The second prop is the continuity of Senate rules, which carry over automatically from one Congress to the next, unless changed by the prescribed procedure — which requires 67 votes.

For traditionalists, the Frist effort — the so-called "nuclear option" — is an assault on both these institutional props. That explains why some Republicans with long memories and years of service such as Indiana's Richard Lugar, a 28-year veteran, have expressed such deep misgivings about the prospect of the "nuclear option."

However, they are part of a distinct minority on the Republican side. Only 20 of the 55 GOP senators began their service before the Republicans secured a majority in January of 1995.

Except for the 18-month hiatus in 2001-02, when a party switch in Vermont's Jim Jeffords allowed Democrats Tim Wirth to become the majority leader, the other 35 Republicans have never experienced the frustrations of minority status. Nor do they know how important Senate rules have been in protecting the rights of individual senators.

Many of the newer Republican senators moved from the House of Representatives, where there are no permanent rules and where the majority party needs to give minimal consideration to the views of the minority.

Many of the newer Republican can senators moved from the House of Representatives, where there are no permanent rules and where the majority party needs to give minimal consideration to the views of the minority.

That is why you find a sharp generational split among Senate Republicans on the "nuclear option." John McCain, class of 1987, and Trent Lott, class of 1989, have been at the center of negotiations with Democrats about a possible compromise.

Lugar, who is enough of a party loyalist that in the end he may well vote with Frist, has proposed to try to eliminate filibusters, simply because I think they protect minority rights, whether they're Republicans, Democrats or other people."

In the end, the outcome may rest in the hands of veterans such as Arlen Specter, class of 1981, and John Warner, class of 1979, who have both been trying desperately to avert the showdown. Not all the "old bulls" agree. Although their Democratic predecessors often filibustered against civil rights bills, Mississippi Sen. Trent Cochran and Alabama Sen. Richard Shelby both told me they are comfortable ending that tactic when it comes to judgeships.

But I was struck by the comment of Utah's Robert Bennett, class of 1993, a second-generation senator who learned his love for the institution at his father's knee.

Bennett puts much of the blame for the current crisis on the Democrats. For blocking passage of Unalut Robert Bennett, class of 1993, a second-generation senator who learned his love for the institution at his father's knee.

That is a thought for Republicans to ponder.

Lifetime appointments on federal courts should end

These United States of America were settled by devotees of the William Jaynes. Our judges are as honest as other men and not more so ... and their power (as) the more dangerous, as they are in office for life and not responsible, as other functionaries are, to the elective control."

I just hope that before Sempra slips the ring on your finger, Jerome, that you inquire about his recent past.

What we must take back the future of our country from the hands of a few men answerable only to God for their actions. We have some honorable people in Congress, and I urge them to conduct an immediate investigation into a means to eliminate lifetime appointments for judges.

The political party controlling judiciary appointments controls the future morality of this nation. The politicians know this, and every effort will be made to block any appointee not subscribing to their ideology.

is a mere thing of wax in the hands of the judiciary, which they may twist and shape into any form they please."

On Sept. 28, 1820, Jefferson wrote the following in his "Notes on the State of Virginia": "Our judges are as honest as other men and not more so ... and their power (as) the more dangerous, as they are in office for life and not responsible, as other functionaries are, to the elective control."

I just hope that before Sempra slips the ring on your finger, Jerome, that you inquire about his recent past.

Don't give Sempra everything it wants

I asked my brother in San Diego, "What about Sempra?" He wrote back, "When San Diego Gas and Electric was headquartered in California, it was a run-of-the-mill power company building gold pan-chutes but subject to contractually responsibilities.

Response to Jerome: Sempra buying it up (and immediately shaking out of its fund reserves and conditional deposits something like $3 billion). Sempra, being out of state, couldn't be forced to cough up. San Diego Gas and Electric and Sempra since then have been a pauper, notwithstanding participation in the Enron cap that swatted $49 billion of Sacramento and the rest of us."

I guess I'll just make some studies, thinking that Jerome people are pushovers."

I just hope that before Sempra slips the ring on your finger, Jerome, that you inquire about his recent past.

Get your oxygen here while you still can

Clean Air. Oh yes, I would like to have some. Our homes have teleline lines, electric lines, gas lines and water lines. Do we also need an air line? Where are they going to get that air in? They will get it from the "Montana pipe line."

Are quality? Does that mean they're oxygen and more other things in our air? It would make more sense to report the oxygen level. That way, we would know when to start popping them oxygen-filled balloons that we get at the quick stop, "imported from Montana, Wyoming." Do not pop near open flames."

Inversion? Does that mean we are not getting any fresh air in to the cabin? There is no oxygen in our air? At the same time, our oxygen is being consumed by vehicles, home heating, industry and living creatures. What about them companies that bottle up oxygen? Are they taking oxygen out of our air? Oh wonderful, it gets hard to breathe so we can go to the hospital and get that oxygen they have done took out of our air.

We can get an indoor and outdoor temperature gauge with humidity gauge. A bonus would be if it also had a barometer. A barometer with a graph so we can also see the trend. The barometer will go up, time to go fishing. The barometer is going down, it's movie time or other indoor activities that people may do. Would the barometer affect Stanley's Helen Roper would love it if it did. What we really need is an indoor and outdoor oxygen level gauge. It's 10 above zero, but we need to open the window anyway.

Now we have another forest or range fire. The next thing you know, the breeze will be blowing that into town. Now we really need outdoor oxygen level gauge. Let's get some more balloons.

Urge Simpson to back Crapo's downwinder bill

The reaction of our delegation to the National Academy of Sciences report on atomic fallout could have gone for Idahoans or against us.

The NAS report admitted all of America received radiation doses, many higher than those presently compensated for cancers caused by the weapons of mass destruction our government used in Nevada. But they did not help the Idahoans directly aimed at with wind direction in Idaho. Instead, the NAS suggested a "probability" scheme that they admit will deny most victims' legal claims to the mere $50,000 compensation for the cancer.

The good news is that Sen. Crapo saw beyond the time-consuming high hurdle of the legislation suggested by the NAS and has introduced legislation to include all of Idaho in the present compensation program starting with the Bunker Buster or some reason, he is not yet going to bat for Idahoans who deserve fallout compensation. As Sen. Crapo has said after listening to so many brave Idaho families (testify in Boise, "Idahoans should not have to wait for that.")

You can share your thoughts with Congressman Simpson locally at 734-7219 or toll free at (877) 762-8762.

Now I must address the two letter writers who suggested I should love, not criticize, the plutonium refinery and multiple commercial nuclear power plants planned for Idaho.

First, I have already spoken out against the proposed coal-fueled plants. While Mr. Huebner claimed he had proof of plutonium's safety, he hasn't shared it. I will e-mail official copies of the recent plutonium-239 accident reports from the New Mexico lab to anyone. That's the lab Mr. Huebner claims is safe.

but the accidents and fear of terrorist strikes are why these projects are being shoved into Idaho.

I can also e-mail anyone the government report on the New Mexico plutonium lab that found excess plutonium in the autopsies of local citizens.

You can e-mail me at nifty@coyote.net if you would like to read the official reports your smiling politicians and health department won't talk about.

Rupert needs to act on flooded streets

We the undersigned are residents who reside on East South Fifth, Maple Circle and Maple Street in Rupert writing regarding the flooding conditions at this intersection.

This condition has existed for many years during snow and rainstorms, which covers sidewalks and yards. This is a very dangerous condition—not only for drivers and children but also since you are unable to see where the potholes are located. It therefore creates more of a hazard to all cars and people in general.

We have called the city quite a few times regarding this problem, and to our knowledge, it has responded twice by pumping.

There is a school bus stop at this intersection and children have to wade through the water, thereby having to spend the rest of the day with wet shoes as well as wet pants because the water is fairly deep.

We have heard many excuses from the city: for example, no money, etc.

It seems to us it is the city that should be responsible for repaving these streets.

Hospital's top priority is profit, not patients

To all residents of the surrounding Magic Valley—unfortunately, mostly the sick and elderly.

It appears that nobody really gets involved until things affect them directly, but Magic Valley Regional Medical Center has many unhappy employees who have been told not to talk about problems on the job. This doesn't make for devoted employees who are dedicated to their job instead of just waiting for a pay check.

The newest problem is our loss of lab. Years ago, John Saxton started a service called Physicians Lab. They went to the homes of shut-ins and assisted living centers and long-term care units to do lab care that was so badly needed for their health care.

He sold to Lab Corp, assuming it would continue to offer care to those needing it, but soon it only bothered with where it could get the most profit. So in one year, John bought it back and once again, we had the care we need.

In 2000, John sold to Magic Valley Regional Medical Center with a signed agreement that it would continue this service that was needed so badly for at least five years. But now that five years is up, I fear the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center has forgotten the chief principle here is health care and is inhumanely checking the dollar signs (it is only into big business).

As of June 1, your shut-ins and elderly are to find a ride to the lab. If fasting, they go out before breakfast, through rain, sleet or snow to have blood drawn.

This area is losing a great man and a great service that he has devoted his life to—not the money people but the needy. John has usually got most of his day's work done when most people start their day.

We can only hope that Saint Alphonsus at Crossroads Hur- rics and comes in and that it will be more compassionate and help our elderly and shut-ins with the health care they deserve.

I've been a nurse for 40-plus years and have enjoyed this excellent service and suffered the loss of it with my residents. I deeply feel the loss to our many communities by our health-care system.

NBA MVP records triple-double

The Associated Press

PHOENIX — Steve Nash added the most impressive night yet to his marvelous MVP season, leading the Phoenix Suns within one victory of the Western Conference finals.

Nash had 34 points, 13 rebounds and 12 assists in his third career triple-double and first in the playoffs — and the Suns turned on the jets in a fourth-quarter subside to beat the Dallas Mavericks 114-108 on Wednesday night.

Phoenix took a 3-2 lead in the best-of-seven conference semifinal series, with Game 6 on Friday night in Dallas. Historically, when it's a 2-2 tie, the victor in Game 5 has gone on to win the series 84 percent of the time.

Jim Jackson, the 13-year NBA veteran moved into the starting lineup for the injured Joe Johnson, made seven of eight shots in the fourth quarter for 15 of his 21 points. Amar'e Stoudemire rebounded from his 15-point performance in Game 4 with 33 points and a career-playoff high 18 rebounds and 21 points and 12 rebounds in the second half. Shawn Marion added 16 points and 10 rebounds for the Suns.

Dirk Nowitzki had 14 points and 10 rebounds for the Mavericks, who led 55-48 at the half. Jerry Stackhouse scored 29 points off the bench. Josh Howard had 19 points and 10 rebounds, and Jason Terry scored 17 points.

But no one on the Mavericks could match the energy and effectiveness of Nash, who came off a 48-point, but losing, effort in Game 4. This time, he scored, and did a lot of rebounding elsewhere.

The Mavericks played the second half and reached a triple-digit score in 83 minutes, left in the third quarter.

He was on the bench, though, for a quick breather when Jackson had 19 points and 10 rebounds, but refused to report to New Orleans following a midseason trade from Houston, took charge with three baskets in a 3-

Phoenix Suns' Steve Nash (13) passes around Dallas Mavericks' Darrell Armstrong (10) during the first quarter of Game 5 of a second-round playoff series, Wednesday, in Phoenix.

Scrutinizing sports and steroids

In the face of congressional scrutiny, professional sports is moving to tighten its drug policies and game suspensions.

4TH	25	1 year	Indefinite suspension
5TH	25	Indefinite suspension

NOTE: Proposed changes to start June 30 in the NBA include suspensions of 10 and 25 games, then dismissal from league.

Sports commissioners want to toughen drug policies

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The commissioners of Major League Baseball, the NBA and the NHL told Congress they want to toughen their steroid policies, drawing praise Wednesday from lawmakers intent on legislating standardized drug-testing across U.S. pro sports.

In an unusual gathering of some of the most powerful people in American sports, the heads of management and unions from that trio of leagues plus Major League Soccer testified before the House Commerce and Consumer Protection subcommittee about the proposed Drug Free Sports Act.

Cliff Stearns, R-Fla., put it: "Commissioner Selig has come out in support of the bill, and that might be out of frustration." Since his earlier trip to Capitol Hill, Selig asked Major League Baseball Players Association executive Director Donald Fehr to agree to increase penalties for positive tests — including a lifetime suspension for a third offense — and ban anaphthalmics.

"I have one objective in all of this, and I've told you this a lot, and I've told everybody else, and I told the owners last week: My job is to rid this sport of steroids and rid any suspicion," Selig said outside the wood-paneled hearing room.

"I'm very comfortable telling you today that my program would rid the sport of steroids. I spent a lot of time talking to trainers, doctors, general managers, managers, players. I've devoted my life to this now."

Several lawmakers lauded Selig during the five-hour session, reserving their toughest questions for Fehr and NBA union head Billy Hunter.

Raft River hopes to continue state tradition

By Kevin Colbert Times-News writer

BOISE — When it comes to Class 1A boys track and field, Raft River is the closest thing to a dynasty as you'll find.

Last season, the Trojans racked up state title No. 5 in eight years at the state meet in Boise. This year, they're back for more and have the arsenal to take home No. 6.

"I think the expectations are pretty high," Raft River coach Jeremy Qualls said. "The kids know what they want to accomplish, but I think they try to view it as not necessarily defending a state championship but pursuing another one. They've handled it really well and have the desire and talent to get it done."

As expected, Raft River dominated the District IV meet in Tuleton last week, finishing with 228 team points. Camas County was second with 68.5.

Raft River returns nine athletes from last season's state meet, six of whom are seniors. Just like last season, the Trojans have tremendous sprint relay teams. The defending state champion 400- and 800-meter relays are stacked and poised again for repeat performances — Joe Edwards, CJ Tuckett and Troy Tuttle return to those relays. While Tuttle and Edwards also run the 1,600 relay.

also cop individual gold, as he is the top returnee in the triple jump after taking third last season. But Tuckett finished just third in his own district behind Murroughs Bridges Ward and Trojans teammate, Regan Ward.

Regan Ward should also compete for a crown in the pole vault after taking fifth last year. He vaulted 12 feet at districtics. Braden Barrett earned a fourth-place finish in the high jump last year and could battle with Nezperce's Ted Harris for the championship. Both leaped 6 feet in Boise a year ago.

Newcomer Paden Baker, Tuttle and Landon Hansen finished 1-2-3 in the 400. Tuttle took fifth last year at state, but both he and Baker will have to peak in Boise to make a serious challenge.

Sophomore Ace Jones didn't qualify in the pole vault as he did a year ago, but could provide a boost in the 300 intermediate hurdles.

"It's almost the same team (as last year), but it's a little bit better," Hansen said. "We added Pat Baker and Joe (Edwards) and Ace (Jones) are doing really well."

In the 200, Edwards and Baker will be in the heat but Tuttle championships while Edwards will also be a force in the 100. As was the case a year ago, Qualls said he expects Nezperce to be the Trojans' highest hurdle on the way to a title. Nezperce took second last season.

Padres make it seven straight

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Khalil Greene hit a pair of three-run homers off Homero Ramirez (2-3) for a career-high six RBIs, and Adam Eaton won his fourth consecutive start to lead the surging San Diego Padres to an 8-4 win over the Atlanta Braves on Wednesday.

San Diego Padres' Khalil Greene follows through with his swing producing a three-run homer in the second inning against the Atlanta Braves, Wednesday, in San Diego. Greene's homer reached the third deck of the Western Metal Supply Co. building in leftfield at Petco Park.

The Padres have won seven straight and 16 of 19, a span that's vaulted them from fourth in the NL West to sole possession of the division lead.

San Diego has swept consecutive three-game series against Atlanta and Florida — the top two teams in the NL East — and has won six straight series. It was San Diego's first three-game sweep of the Braves since May 1991.

Cubs 2, Pirates 1

PITTSBURGH — Jose Macias' sacrifice fly drove in the go-ahead run, and the Cubs rallied with two runs in the ninth against Pittsburgh closer Jose Mesa for the second time in less than 20 hours.

The Pirates had won 40 consecutive games when leading after eight innings, and Mesa (0-3) had converted 23 successive save opportunities.

Mets 10, Reds 6
NEW YORK — Chris Woodward, Mike Cameron and David Wright homered, and Mike Piazza went 4-for-4 as the Mets completed their three-game sweep.

Tom Glavine (3-4) won consecutive starts for the first time in more than a year and Jose Reyes had two hits in the Mets' 22-19, who matched their season high of three games over 500 going into the weekend Subway Series against the Yankees.

Marlins 8, Dodgers 3
LOS ANGELES — Carlos Delgado, Miguel Cabrera and Damon Easley homered in a five-run sixth inning for the Marlins.

Josh Beckett (6-3) allowed two runs and five hits in six innings and singled home a run for the Marlins' second win of three, from the defending NL West champions after getting swept in a three-game series at San Diego.

Nationals 1, Brewers 0
WASHINGTON — Jeffrey Hammonds singled home the winning run for the Nationals with one out in the ninth inning.

Hammonds, in a 6-0or-13 slump entering the game, took advantage of a rare start to 2-for-4, winning the game when he pulled a grounder down the third-base line with the bases loaded and the infield in.

Gary Majewski (1-0) worked the ninth inning to get the win for the Nationals, who once again failed to provide run support during another superb outing by Esteban Loaiza.

Giants 3, Rockies 2
DENVER — Deliv Cruz hit a tiebreaking triple in the ninth inning of the lowest-scoring game at Coors Field this season.

Pedro Felix led off the ninth with a single against Brian Fuentes (0-3), then Cruz lofted a drive over right fielder Brad Hawpe's head. Hawpe got the ball in quickly, but the relay throw was late after first baseman Todd Helton couldn't get the ball out of his glove.

Cardinals 8, Phillies 4
PHILADELPHIA — Yadier Molina hit a three-run homer and Albert Pujols added a two-run shot, helping the Cardinals overcome another homer by Bobby Abreu.

Chris Carpenter (6-2) allowed three runs and five hits, striking out seven in six innings for his second straight win.

Abreu hit a three-run drive in the sixth inning, giving him homers in nine of the last 10 games. By that time, the Phillies already trailed 8-0.

Dbacks 7, Astros 6
HOUSTON — Troy Glaus hit a two-run homer, Russ Ortiz pitched well enough to win and the Arizona Diamondbacks crushed an Andy Pettitte before holding off the Houston Astros 7-6 Wednesday night.

Glaus finished 3-for-5, helping the Diamondbacks match a season high with 14 hits against an Astros team that had won three straight, including consecutive shutouts.

American League White Sox 7, Rangers 0
CHICAGO — Mark Buechele won his sixth straight decision and Jermaine Dye doubled three times, to help the bases loaded, to help the Chicago White Sox beat the Texas Rangers 7-0 Wednesday.

A.J. Pierzynski homered in his fourth consecutive game.

Athletics 13, Red Sox 6
OAKLAND, Calif. — Eric Chavez hit a three-run homer, David Wells topped in his first start in three weeks and Oakland routed Boston.

Wells (2-4) lasted only 1 1/3 innings, his shortest outing since June 2001 with the White Sox.

The A's tagged him for seven runs and nine hits in his first start since April 25 because of a sprained right foot.

Angels 2, Indians 1
CLEVELAND — Bartolo Colon pitched eight strong innings on three days rest and Los Angeles rallied for two runs in the ninth off Jake Westbrook to beat Cleveland.

Colon (5-3) allowed just four hits but appeared to be on his way to two runs before the Angels finally figured out Westbrook (1-7), who took a one-hitter into the ninth.

Twins 3, Blue Jays 2
MINNEAPOLIS — Jacques Jones and Michael Cuddyer homered to hit Minnesota over Toronto.

Cuddyer was 3-for-3 and Kyle Lohse (6-2) pitched six solid innings to give the Twins their second win by a starting pitcher in the last nine games.

Dave Bush (0-4) rebounded from a rough outing against hapless Kansas City, giving up seven hits and tying a season high with six strikeouts in a complete game.

Twins 6, Devil Rays 4
DETROIT — Dmitri Young homered and Omar Infante drove in two runs as Detroit beat the sloppy Devil Rays.

Tampa Bay made three errors, leading to four unearned runs in its fourth straight loss.

Orioles 7, Royals 4
KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Melvin Mora had two home runs and four RBIs; and the Baltimore Orioles beat the Royals 7-4 on Wednesday night for their sixth straight victory in Kansas City.

David Newhan also homered for the Orioles, who have hit seven home runs in the first two games of the three-game series and increased their major league-leading total to 60.

Twin Falls faces tough 5A field

Minico, Jerome enter wide-open 4A state tourney

By Joe Paisley Times-News writer

COEUR D'ALENE — The 5A state softball tournament may be in Coeur d'Alene this week, but the road to a championship will likely go through the Boise area.

Top-ranked Timberline (24-3), the district 1B champion and runner-up Borah (23-4), are the favorites in a pretty balanced bracket.

Twin Falls High (24-3) will certainly have to defeat Boise's best to advance far. After a first-round game against Meridian, the Bruins would face either Engle or Timberline in an elimination game or semifinal. Twin Falls split with both teams during the regular season.

Play teams are ranked No. 1 by IdahoSports.com, but rankings mean little in state tournaments.

"I think we're going to be competitive," said Bruins head coach Nick Baumert. "The team that makes the least amount of mistakes should be the winner, working on defense and the short game. Those will come into play."

Play teams are going to throw its best pitchers. That makes eras a likely game-breaker when each hit will be tough to come by. The Bruins must make the most of anything they get.

"(Leadoff hitter) Kara (Gambrell) gets on, we can do some things," Baumert said. "The same with Amber (Peterson) at No. 2, setting the table for Justine (Williams) and Harny (Jayme Harrison)."

No. 5 twin Sara Standley is a strong batter while the bottom of the order has begun hitting well, starting with the recent Region Four-Five Six tournament. Twin Falls cruised through.

The difference between the semifinals and a championship game berth could be these batters. Twin Falls can't afford easy outs against the state's best.

Meridian has a strong pitcher in Chelsea Pinkley, who threw 15 innings during the loser-out bracket to help the Warriors claim third in the District II tournament, eliminating Engle 3-2 in eight innings and Mountain View 4-1. Jackie Wright is a strong hitter, as is Paige McCreary.

Timberline has won the District III title for three straight years, losing in the title game in 2005.

Mandy Klein is a dominant pitcher, throwing three no-hitters so far this spring. Shortstop Shy Crigg has power at the plate as does first baseman Kristen Butch.

Eagle is paced by pitcher Becky Tsatsa. Shortstop Amy Gaudin is a consistent hitter. Junior Cook added hitting power to the lineup. The key for Engle is hitting. The Mustangs need more runs. The Mustangs need more runs.

Eagle lost to Timberline three times this year, 2-1, 1-0 and 1-0. "Our defense and pitching is solid," Schneidt said. "It all comes down to hitting."

In the other half of the bracket, Borah takes on Mountain View in the nightcap after host and District I champion Coeur d'Alene faces Idaho Falls.

"Borah's hitters are better than Timberline's," Schneidt said. "Overall Borah is a little more solid."

The pitcher for the Lions could be 2004 Idaho Gatorade Player of the Year and pitcher Heather Dixon. The Dixie State signee is a good hitter and an even better right-handed pitcher. Amanda Bunt is the team's No. 2 pitcher and a power hitter as well.

The team's defense committed an uncharacteristic five errors against Timberline in the District II championship game, which could be their undoing this weekend.

Coeur d'Alene (18-6) should pose a stiff challenge for Idaho Falls and probably Borah in the semifinals. Jenn DeLong is a capable hitter and standout pitcher. Kyle Chandler is another quality batter.

Class 4A
Minico (15-11) has a top-tier pitcher in Amber Warth (15-10) along with quality hitters in Callie Asher, Wendy Meiners, catcher Raquel Roberts and senior Micah Boehler.

Warth's fastball gives the Great Basin Conference champion Spartans as good a chance as any in Post Falls. She can flat out bring it. And she can flat out make her a tough hitter, making her a tough hitter at the 4A level.

Lakeland (13-12) is Minico's first-round opponent and is a tough draw. Mallory Twidit is a good pitcher.

Jerome (21-10) has opening Thursday as 5 p.m. PDT against Moscow (9-14). The Tigers had made one of two free throws in first Prenton and then Bonnevile to qualify for state.

McKenzie Mangum (16-7) is a good pitcher in her own right while Jennifer Bamberg is a power hitter. Vanessa Ridgeway and Chelsea Cray are speedy runners who leadoff the Tigers lineup.

Stackhouse made six of his first seven shots and scored 15 in the first half.

The Suns came out tentative, and Dallas used a 7-0 spurt to go to 16-25 when Erick Dampier made one of two free throws with 10:32 left in the half.

Phoenix closed to 36-35, but Nowitzki and Stackhouse scored to boost the lead back to six.

Dampier, who had played well in Dallas' victories and mooned watched from the bench in foul trouble in the defeats, was 0-for-7 from the field and scored just two points, but grabbed 14 rebounds.

Minico, Filer head to state with high hopes

By Joe Paisley Times-News writer

FILER — Filer rarely struggles at the plate. But the Wildcats must avoid errors if they're to make the most of their third-year spot in the Class 3A state baseball tournament.

The three-time Sawtooth Central Idaho Conference champions have been focusing on defense in practice during their 12-day layoff between the district championship game and their state opener against Weiser at 1 p.m.

Since scouting reports on the Wolverines are slim, head coach Kent Knigge is focusing on his own team.

"Hitting the ball hard covers up a lot of evils," Knigge said. "We have to stay focused and make the routine play."

Filer's failure to do so helped Buhl jump out to an 11-5 lead in the district title game.

The Wolverines' string of shutout batters by Tyler Knigge and Dustin DeMello allowed Filer's hitters to pound out a 13-11 victory.

"There's a lot of desire," coach Knigge said. "We have to eliminate the bonehead mistakes."

Head coach Paul Jamieson singled his last outting and will look to bounce back this afternoon against the Wolverines. His pitching may well carry Filer's trophy hopes this weekend.

"We're not going to mess around," Knigge said. "If we need him to pitch on one day's rest, we will."

Filer's Jared Denton slides into second base safely past Jerome's Andrew Addey during the second inning of their recent conference game in Filer.

Knowing they have a chance until the very end should keep the Wildcats from hanging their heads if things start off badly.

"The whole key is not to get too high or too low," Knigge said. "You've got to keep the ship on the ocean."

Class 4A
The Minico Spartans have an excellent chance to come home with a trophy.

The Spartans have a good mix of pitching and hitting with the team's hitters improving as the season progressed. The team has a 2.30 earned run average.

"Pitching has definitely been one of our high points," said Spartans coach Ben Frank. "I really don't feel there is an aspect of the game where we struggled."

The team bats at a .337 clip and has made the most of its base runners by stealing 12 bases this spring. That aggressive play-inning has helped the Spartans pile up the runs and a 21-7 record.

All that makes Frank a confident coach.

"The team shares the same confidence," Frank said. "We have great senior leadership and the tools to do it. Pitching is the name of the game and we've got it."

Sophomore Matt Tracy bats well for average while Cory Warburton and Jarred Tracy are both powerful hitters.

"Our batters' legs have been very consistent," Frank said. "Our 7-9 have caught fire. The last couple weeks."

Frank expects defending state champion Hillcrest to be a tough semifinal opponent if it gets past a hard-hitting Bishop Kelly squad. The Knights have something to prove after a team-wide suspension forced them to forfeit the Division III championship to Caldwell, a team they had run-ruled twice before.

The Knights have reportedly won 12 games by 10 runs or more this season, making them an awfully tough second seed.

Moscow eliminated Kuna in a state play-in game and is Minico's first-round opponent.

"We don't know too much about them," Frank admitted. "I've heard Hillcrest is the team to watch."

Pocatello is also a possibility, performing well of late, Frank said.

Many European meets don't want Jones

LONDON (AP) — Organizers of many of Europe's most prestigious track meets don't want Jones Jones — whether or not she's guilty of doping.

Those willing to have the three-time Olympic champion — including a June 1 meet in Milan, Italy, where she meets her first European appearance of the year — can get her at a bargain price.

Jones has been shunned since being linked to the BALCO steroid scandal in the United States.

"We will not invite her, or any other athlete under investigation, until the BALCO situation is cleared," said Svein Arne Hansen, director of the Bislett arena in Oslo, Norway.

"We are not saying she is guilty, just do not want our meet to be about doping," Hansen also heads the Euro Meetings group, an association representing Europe's top meets.

It has recommended not inviting Jones to any events. Not all organizers are falling in line.

"I'm definitely against doping and against the doping culture," said Franco Angelini, head of the Regione Lombardia meet in Milan.

"But I'm an organizer of athletic meets, not a judge. Until someone is found guilty, there is the presumption of innocence."

Many say Jones is running too poorly to be invited. In her first 100 race of the season on April 30, she clocked a modest 11:28 seconds in Martinique.

Her career best is 10:63, and she ran faster as a high school sophomore in 1991 — 11:17.

Several meet organizers interviewed by The Associated Press said Jones commanded appearance fees of between $75,000 and $150,000 after winning three gold medals at the 2000 Olympics in Sydney.

The Worldkiss in Zurich, the world's most prestigious one-day meet, didn't invite Jones last year. And she's been overlooked again.

"Our position in this matter was already taken last year when we decided before the Olympics," Worldkiss meet director Hansjoerg Wirtz said.

"Only a clear position in such matters brings the credibility back."

Europe's six Golden League meets — Paris, Rome, Oslo, Zurich, Brussels and Berlin — Berlin seems the most open to inviting Jones. Rome also looks like a possibility.

"I'm not in a position in Berlin to say if she's guilty or not guilty. I follow the IAAF rules, under the IAAF rules she can perform."

Berlin meet director Gerhard Janetzky said, "The International Association of Athletics Federations lets street organizers pick their own fields."

Jones qualifies by placing among the top three in an event at the U.S. championships, she can run in the World Championships Aug. 6-14 in Helsinki, Finland.

"We have to be very clear about it," IAAF spokesman Nick Davies said. "She hasn't been charged by anybody to our knowledge, so she is totally free to compete internationally."

On the other hand, the meet directors are private businessmen and free to choose who they want.

German match-fixing suspect starts talking

FRANKFURT, Germany — The suspected mastermind of the match-fixing scandal has admitted the accusations against him and provided new evidence, authorities said Wednesday.

The man, officially identified only as Ante S., was arrested in January and taken into custody along with his two brothers, Milan S. and Filip S. The three Croatians are said to have run a betting ring and bribed soccer referees to fix games.

"He has given comprehensive evidence," said Frank Thiel, spokesman for the Berlin prosecutors' office. "He has broadly admitted the accusations against him."

News of the scandal broke in January when referee Robert Hohmann admitted receiving money from the three men to rig games. Hoyer has been suspended of fixing at least 10 games, mostly in lower divisions.

Also, second-seeded Nicole Pietrangeli defeated Nicole Pietrangeli, who had defeated Albino, 6-3, and will face fifth-seeded Anna-Lena Groenefeld in the quarterfinals.

Decay reaches Strasbourg quarters

STRASBOURG, France — The seeded Nathalie Dechy of France beat Iveta Benesova of the Czech Republic 6-3, 6-2 Wednesday to reach the Strasbourg International quarterfinals.

The clay-court tournament is a warmup for the French Open, which begins Monday in Paris.

The 31-year-old French course from Ravenna to Rosignano Veneto in 5 hours, 40 minutes and 53 seconds, won her third stage of the year's series.

Daniilo D. Lira retained the overall lead's pick jersey, 9 seconds ahead of fellow Italian Ann Basso.

Also Wednesday, Spanish Arrabal defeated seventh-seeded Amy Frazier of the United States 4-6, 6-3, 6-2, sixth-seeded Karolina Sprenk of Croatia beat the Zheng of China 6-4, 6-3, and Madagascan's Julia Radanovic eliminated Jaly Vakulenko of the top international sprinter.

Russian Vera Douchevina dominated France's Emilie Lot 6-3, 6-1 and will play Medina Garrigues in the final eight.

Two horses euthanized as Churchill quarantines

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Two thoroughbred horses at Churchill Downs have been euthanized and three barns have been quarantined because of a discovered serious symptoms of the equine herpes virus.

Tests were being conducted Wednesday to see if any more horses had contracted the upper respiratory and neurological ailment, Churchill Downs spokesman John Asher said.

"In the worst case scenario, it causes a loss of coordination," Asher said. "That's what happened with the two euthanized horses."

None of the horses scheduled to race in Saturday's Preakness in Baltimore were affected by the quarantine, Asher said.

Asher said he did not have the names of the two euthanized horses, but one was put down over the weekend and the other in the last three days. The horses were trained by Ronny Werner and Bill Cesare, neither of whom could be immediately reached for comment.

The equine herpes virus is contagious and spreads by air, but can only travel about 35 feet and can be killed by disinfectants, Churchill Downs spokesman John Asher said.

The outbreak shouldn't impact the track's spring meet, which runs through July 10.

Rusby Ford, equine programs director, said that veterinarians' office, said the first horse started showing signs of an infection on May 10. The diagnosis was that the herpes virus case Monday night, and more tests are still being done, Ford said.

At the time, we're going on the presumption that it's the presumptive diagnosis of this is the herpes virus," Ford said.

The source of the infections in the three barns has not been determined. The Kentucky Department of Agriculture is investigating.

The quarantines could last as long as a month, leaving the horses trained by Werner, Steve Amussen, Paul J. McCree and Jesse uncut to train or race on the track until then, Asher said.

Flesch wants to change history

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Steve Flesch is constantly tinkering with his technique.

He's always changing balls and trying different techniques. Rarely does the same pitter make enough of a difference.

When Flesch is at home, he doesn't even hit balls on the range. That would be too mundane and boring for the left-handed swinger.

Yet, when Flesch returned to the Colonial this week as the defending champion, the most comforting thing he found was that it's still the same old course.

"Nothing has changed. It's just a new test," he said. "It just suits my game. I feel really comfortable here, obviously."

Hogan's Alley really hasn't changed much. The same mistake was the only pitfall in win consecutive Colonials — doing that twice more than a half-century ago.

There are three-lined fairways, plenty of doglegs and some difficult par 3s on the demanding windswept course. The PGA Tour event. The par-70, 7,054-yard course isn't like so many modern-day layouts where length is the key.

It's a test of the hitter, he said. "The more trouble there is," Chris DiMarco said.

Colonial tees off Thursday with the top of the top six from the money list.

Phil Mickelson, the 2000 Colonial champion who is No. 2 on the money list, is the highest-ranked player in the field. Forns, DiMarco and Fred Funk are the others.

Flesch has the chance to join Ben Hogan by going back-to-back here.

Flesch has been reminded of that often. During a practice round, a playing partner pointed to a wall near the No. 1 tee where the names of the yearly winners are engraved, along with the expanded gap since Hogan's last repeat victory in 1953.

Flesch has a streak of eight weeks that sub-par rounds at Colonial, a feat not even Hogan accomplished. Only former champions David Frost and Kenny Perry have matched that.

Sorensten absent but still a presence

NEW ROCHELLE, N.Y. — Annika Sorensten is taking the week off, but she's still a big part of the Colonial's atmosphere.

The name of the PGA Tour's most dominant player came up in almost every interview and conversation on Wednesday, the day before the 72-hole tournament.

Cristie Kerr, second on the money list to Sorensten this week, is the only player in the top 10 in the world who would play the second 10 are entered.

If Kerr wins, she would pass Sorensten on the money list and be just $3,000 short of $1 million for the year.

fore and he's running really well in 2005.

Sprinter Rachel Jaynes will pitch the state's top runners, while fellow sprinter Lindey Heimkes is always a danger to grab a medal or two. Heimkes will participate in the 400-meter race and will anchor the Wildcats' 4x400-meter and medley relay teams.

As usual, the Kimberly Relay team will be among especially, making their relay teams dangerous. Kimberley's 4x200-meter team will challenge the state's top teams. The boys' 4x100-meter team is the pre-meet favorite.

Both are returning state champions. The girls' 4x100-meter team will be coached by Eric Milburn said. "Our 4x2 team is going for its third straight title, so the kids are pretty motivated to keep that winning tradition going."

Junior Tyson Anderson can run with the state's best in the 100- and 200-meter sprints, while senior Cameron Allen will challenge for a long jump medal.

As far as talent level, we're just as good as anywhere else, but we have kids that really push themselves," Milburn said. "They've been here before, they've been state winning, and now they want to keep that going with a new group of kids."

Senior's Alynn Pereira holds the state title in the 100-meter hurdles, but will be challenged by South Fremont sophomore Britta Barschi. "We have 12 boys and 12 girls going on that's the best we've ever done," Bennett coach Kent Seifert said. "We're expecting Ashley and Kalyrin to compete right in with the very top."

First-year pole vaulters Cody Rogers and Kirt Nelson should be competitive, despite their lack of experience.

"Kirt Nelson, last year finished fifth in two-mile, and this year he's in the pole vault," Seifert said. "I told him, 'You get a medal in the pole vault, I guarantee you'll be the first one to make state this year.'"

Declo junior sprinter Nicole Darrington will hope to continue her surge of strong running in the 100-meter, 200-, and 400-meter dashes. Darrington's Hornets teammates Trevor Dornack and Andrew Dierker are strong distance runners who could challenge for medals. Junior Jerica Zollinger and freshman Marissa perform well for medals in the high jump, as will senior Tyson Johnson and Wood junior Judd Spencer.

Senior's Darrington, Burley, Jerome, Wood River, and Minico will send a number of solid athletes to this year's Class 4A state meet, few are likely to make state, but challenges for medals.

The exceptions are Burley junior Stephanie Johnson and Jerome senior Darrington. Johnson will continue their battle in the girls distance events, as both are favored in the 4A ranks. Johnson and Darrington will compete in both the 3,200- and 1,600-meter runs, while Lee is close behind.

Burley freshman Diana Bisher could make a strong high jump, while senior Britany Hamblin will be competitive in both the long and triple jumps. The Minico Sparrows will have a shot at a medal in the 110- and 300-meter hurdles. Schenk is likely the areas top 4A athlete, and will be one to watch.

Bruins carry high hopes to state track

By Eric Larson
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Overachieving is a word, not usually used to describe the Twin Falls Bruins track program.

Not because the Bruins haven't overachieved, but because the expectations are to win and win often: But for an extremely young team that qualified 27 athletes for the 5A or Class 5A State Track and Field Meet, the tag seems to fit.

"(The young qualifiers) are encouraging, because it's just going to make us that better next year," Bruins head coach Marty Grindstaff said. "They really came around quickly."

The Bruins aren't ready to look toward next year yet, as two days at Boise State University's Bronco Stadium will be the measuring stick as to how successful a year 2005 really has been. The girls team should compete for a state trophy, while the boys team is expected to be in the top as many in the state.

"The girls have a real good chance to medal," Grindstaff said. "Of course, it depends on how they compete. The prelim times look good enough and we could be in the top three somewhere."

Junior Brittany Ward has been nothing short of stellar this season and has the Bruins looking forward to a championship run. The twin state long jump champion is looking to go for three in a row and by all means should reach that goal. After jumping a school record 19-foot-5 inches on May 7, Ward gave notice she's definitely the girl to beat. She's also the state's top seed in the 200-meter dash and its No. 3 seed in the 100-meter dash.

"Brittany has looked real good in the long jump and her best is quite a bit away from anyone else," Grindstaff said. "She's been in real strong in the 400 and 200, and Aspen Clong has done really well in the 100-meter sprint."

Clong will have another opportunity to try out the track she'll be practicing on for the next few years at Boise State summer meet in the current second in the 100-meter sprint. Chelsea Irons and Hannah Hickman should do well in the 100-meter hurdles and shot put, respectively.

"Hannah is right toward the top in the shot and discus," Grindstaff said. "She didn't throw her best in discus, but if she throws personal records, she'll really close it out."

It should come as no surprise who the highest expectations are placed upon for the Bruins boys. Junior sprinter Brody Miller is more than ready to make up for what ended as a disappointing state meet in 2004 that was marred by a disqualification in the 100-meter finals.

This year, Miller is back for the 100- and 200-meter opens and will run the anchor leg on the Bruins' 4x100- and 4x400-meter relay teams.

"Brody came out of the 400 meters and the long jump and into the relays and that made them a lot tougher," Grindstaff said. "I'm just real pleased with our guys."

Sophomore high jumper Brandon McNew could challenge for a medal, as he is well caught in the middle of 6-11 inches or so higher. The Bruins also qualified all eight of their boys and girls relay teams, which is a big reason for Grindstaff's optimism.

"I'll be really disappointed if we don't do well," Grindstaff said. "And we should, if we don't do well, we should be in the top three somewhere."

Area's top athletes could shine at state

By Eric Larson
Times-News writer

BOISE — The Magic Valley's top athletes are looking to shine at state track meets at Boise State University this weekend. While big meet nerves and new competition always turn up as wild cards, a number of area athletes are expected to shine.

Foremost among the area's Class 3A state qualifiers is Filer's Brian Orloski. The senior is a heavy favorite to take gold in both the shot put and discus. His discus seeding is a 100- and 200-meter sprinter, but will face some stiff competition from Middleton's Kyle Rork and Fayette's Mike Hurd in the 300-meter dash.

"We think Brad has a legitimate shot in both the hurdles, though he'll have his work cut out for him with the state champion in both (Hurd) back. Wildcats head coach LaRiel Patterson said in the shot put and discus, he's a heavy favorite, but anything can happen at state. We're certainly hoping for the best for him, but it's a long haul for us over the last four years."

Wildcats sophomore Casey Dabney will be one of the favorites to win the 100-meter sprint medal after qualifying well in the 100-, 200- and 400-meter dashes.

Those are always wide-open events, and there's always some really good kids around the state and some really good times. Patterson said.

"I had to call and tell Momma and I had to tell my wife," the former coach said. "I had to call head-to-head, you just don't know, but Casey's a no. 1 or 2."

Several headed to college football Hall of Fame

NEW YORK (AP) — Cornelius Bennett found out about his election into the College Football Hall of Fame about a week ago, and was asked to keep it to himself until it was formally announced.

"I can't keep the good news totally secret."

Bennett finished seventh in the Heisman balloting as a senior in 1996 and won the Lou Holtz award for the nation's top lineman or linebacker.

Huarte won the Heisman for Notre Dame in 1964, quarterbacking the Fighting Irish to a share of the national title.

Davis finished second in the Heisman voting as a senior in 1974. He was the first to come in 1972 when he scored six touchdowns against Notre Dame.

He is the fourth member of the 1980 Pittsburgh team to make the College Hall of Fame, along with Dan Marino, Hugh Green and Jim Houston.

Texas fullback Roosevelt Johnson, Oklahoma running back Joe Washington, Stanford defensive lineman Paul Wiggins and Illinois wide receiver David Williams.

Don Nehlen, the winningest coach in West Virginia history, and Pat Dye, who won four Southeastern Conference titles in 12 seasons at Auburn, round out the class.

Jerry and Ann Moss celebrate with the trophy in the winner's circle after their horse Giacomo won the Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs, May 7, in Louisville, Ky.

Giacomo's stunner rocks owner Moss' life

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jerry Moss is used to people questioning his judgment.

He pegged the Police song "Every Breath You Take" as a hit when others predicted failure — and the tune ended up No. 1 on the charts.

He had a similar belief in Giacomo five months before the colt's stunning Kentucky Derby victory at 50-1 odds.

"Critics are entitled to opinions," he said, "I never let those opinions get in the way."

Neither did Giacomo, who darted through 17 horses to win the Derby by a half-length. The colt will try to win the second leg of racing's Triple Crown on Saturday when he runs in the Preakness.

Aflect Alex was made the 5-2 favorite for the Preakness Stakes on Wednesday, while Giacomo was the fourth choice at 6-1 and drew the ominous No. 13 post.

"I didn't believe that the colt finished second to Declan's Moon in the Hollywood Futurity. Giacomo had only won one race before that. The Kentucky Derby was victory No. 2."

Moss won the Derby on his first try, a day before his 70th birthday.

He and wife Ann hadn't been to Churchill Downs since 1994, when their filly Sarahlu won the Derby-ere Kentucky Oaks. That same year, Moss' friend Bert Bacharach was in Louisville, too, because he had a Derby starter with just one win.

"I find great, great joy that this guy pulled that feat off," said Bacharach, who wrote such pop classics as "Hotel California" and "Fallin' On My Head" and "I'll Never Fall In Love Again."

Bacharach had what he called "a little bet" on Giacomo. "I didn't believe that horse was going to win, but you got to bet on your friends," he said.

In 1957, he met Bacharach when they worked in the famed Brill Building hit factory that was home to such writers as Carole King and Neil Sedaka. Bacharach was a staff writer; Moss worked in a music publisher's stockroom. Each of them earned $50 a week.

By 1962, Moss had moved to the West Coast and met trumpeter Herb Alpert of Tijuana Brass fame.

They started A&M Records out of Alpert's garage, nurturing it into music's largest independently owned label with a roster that included The Carpenters, Cat Stevens, Joe Cocker, Sting, Sheryl Crow and Janet Jackson.

But that success never prepared Moss for Giacomo's stunning victory.

"I've had some tremendous hits and they brought me to incredible heights, but nothing quite like this," he said. "This thing has changed my life. I wake up and look at my wife and I just say, 'We won the Derby.' I'm quite every day."

Moss and his wife make a big deal out of raising their horses. He's in charge of the colts and Ann handles the fillies. The couple is known to give $50 to anyone who comes up with a good name.

"It's about the only thing now that keeps me up at night," he said. "Naming a horse is the hardest thing in the world. It's like creating a brand."

For colts, Moss seeks names that signify strength and durability and for fillies, he likes names that link the sire with the mare. Kudos, Roman, Palermo and Lexicon are some examples.

"One-word names are really good for me," he said. "I like to see if you can find a word you can't find in the dictionary."

For fillies, Ann favors names of a spiritual nature. Or they name them for a friend, as filly Flute and Giacomo, the name of rock star Sting's 9-year-old son.

Sting and his wife, Trudie Styler, called the couple the day after the Derby.

"They were just absolutely thrilled," Moss said. "I think Trudie even got a bet down, so that made it greater."

So did Moss, who favors making exotic wagers over a $2 bet. "I'm not a big bettor," he said. "We're putting up $50,000 to be in the race. That's a pretty sizable bet, so I don't bet a lot of money."

Moss got into the racing business in 1970, when he and brothers Herb and David Alpert claimed Alpert Tune for $12,500. She finished third her first time out and then won.

"We thought that was all we needed to know in horse racing, and then we got into it," he said. "I got hooked. We claimed some more horses. And then a friend of mine said, 'Man, you should be claiming horses. Why don't you buy a horse?'"

He did, for $60,000. The horse didn't do well, souring Moss' interest in the business. So Moss exited racing.

"Then I realized I missed it," he said.

In 1978, Moss was introduced to trainer Bobby Frankel through Bacharach. Moss and Bacharach bought six horses for $300,000. One of them, Fighting Fit, became a consistent runner and earned $1 million.

"We started building on from there," he said.

In 1993, Moss and Alpert left the business. Moss found out he had cancer, and eventually recovered. He started another music business, which kept him from spending much time at the track.

Five years ago, he sold a music publishing company and got out of the business. Now he and Ann spend mornings at the barn.

"We can do whatever we like," he said. "I'm not responsible to anybody but myself and my ambition in the racing game, and we love it. We just absolutely love it."

Derby winner.

John Shirreffs, who trains Giacomo, doesn't feel slighted by the odds.

"It's always kind of a comfort feeling when there's not a lot of pressure," Shirreffs said, before the draw. "To be 1-5 would be awfully tough. We're going out there and see what happens."

High Fly, the Florida Derby winner, is one of three Preakness horses trained by Nick Zito. Only three other trainers have saddled three starters in one Preakness.

Zito's other starters are Noble Causeway and Sun King, both 10-1.

The new shooters are Malibu Moonshine and Scrapper T, both 20-1; Galluping Greener at 30-1; and Halo's Image at 50-1.

Post time is 4:15 p.m. MDT. The winner's share of the $1 million purse is $650,000.

Derby runner-up looks to step up

BALTIMORE (AP) — The morning after the Kentucky Derby, Kiaran McLaughlin stood outside his barn at Churchill Downs wearing the smile of a winner. He wasn't, of course, but the trainer didn't mind.

"Not that anybody remembers who finishes second in the Kentucky Derby," he said, "but it was a great thrill for us."

Don't worry, Kiaran: People won't soon forget Closing Argument.

Giacomo may have pulled off the second-biggest upset in Derby history, but Closing Argument was sensational in defeat, losing the lead in the final strides and finishing a half-length back.

In the process, Closing Argument became the highest-priced runner-up in Derby history, returning $70 for a $2 place bet. If Giacomo returns a mile to win, the exacta payoff is $9,814.80.

McLaughlin believes he may win the argument. Closing Argument is the second leg of the Triple Crown. After all, he said, Closing Argument moved forward off his third-place finish in the Blue Grass on April 16.

"I don't know that the horse has to move forward, yet again, to win the Preakness," McLaughlin said. "I would think if the runs that same race, he's going to be awfully tough to beat."

Tim Ritchey, who trains Derby third-place finisher Aleet Alex, said Closing Argument could be tough to catch in the Preakness, which is a sixteenth of a mile shorter than the 1.25-mile Derby.

"The 3-year-olds that have gone forward, like Giacomo and Closing Argument, and shown they can run that far (in the Derby) can run a 1.3-16th miles as well," Ritchey said Wednesday. "Closing Argument is legitimate."

Closing Argument was among 10 Preakness starters arriving Wednesday at Pimlico. The son of a former champion was trained over from Belmont Park in New York.

"He's in top form," exercise rider Danny Wright said after settling Closing Argument into his stall. "He's come out of the race very good and we're all hopeful."

Giacomo arrived from Kentucky, stepping off a horse van about 1:30 p.m., and being led into stall 40, the traditional home of the Derby winner. Trainer John Shirreffs, along with TV cameras and dozens of reporters, watched the gray son of Holy Bull's every move.

"What an honor to go in that stall, what an honor," Shirreffs said, turning to gaze at a sign above the stall that lists 14 former tenants. "Look up, Secretariat, Seattle Slew, Spectacular Bid ... It's awesome."

Shirreffs, based at Hollywood Park in California, stayed in Kentucky with Giacomo the past few days. He said his colt is coming into the race in excellent shape after a half-mile workout Tuesday, and is set for a gallop around Pimlico on Thursday morning.

"He looks pretty good, he's on his toes a little bit and he's freshened up since the Kentucky Derby," Shirreffs said. "He came out of this breeze well, he shipped well and we'll see how he handles the surface here. I don't think it'll be a problem, but it's always a plus if he likes the track."

The Preakness drew a full field of 14 for the first time since 1992, with Aleet Alex the morning-line favorite at 5-2 and Giacomo the fourth choice at 6-1.

High-Fly was the second choice at 9-2 and Closing Argument was next at 5-1.

Closing Argument is one of the most consistent horses in the race. The bay colt has won three of eight starts for owners Philip and Marica Cohen, with three runner-up finishes and two stals. The bottom line is earnings of $986,994 for a colt purchased for $100,000 at a sale for 2-year-olds in training in Ocala, Fla.

Closing Argument had just two starts before the Derby, winning the Holy Bull Stakes on Feb. 5 before his next start in the Blue Grass in between. He missed the Florida Derby with a minor foot bruise, but the time off may have kept the horse fresh for the Triple Crown races.

"I think the one little hiccup of the Florida Derby was actually a plus for us at the end of the day because we ran a winning race," McLaughlin said in assessing the Kentucky Derby.

McLaughlin, who spent 10 years training in Dubai before returning two years ago to open a public stable based at Belmont, also worked for trainer D. Wayne Lukas.

"He's been around a lot of Derby horses and around the prep scene," Lukas said. "I wouldn't surprise me if Kiaran's horse ran well because he's an excellent horseman."

It probably won't surprise the bettors, either.

Aflect Alex tabbed Preakness fave

BALTIMORE (AP) — Aleet Alex made the 5-2 favorite for the Preakness Stakes on Wednesday, while Kentucky Derby winner Giacomo was the fourth choice at 6-1 and drew the ominous No. 13 post.

The last time the Derby winner did not go off as the Preakness favorite was 2001, when Monctech was the slight second choice behind Pindot Given, who won the race.

Aflect Alex, the Arkansas Derby winner, earned the favorite's role after a strong run in the Derby ended with a third-place finish, just a length behind Giacomo. Alex was the slight favorite No. 12 post — the same gate he broke from in the Derby.

Giacomo came into the Derby with just one victory before pulling off the second biggest upset at 50-1 odds. Since 1930, when the starting gate was first used, only six horses have started in the Preakness from post Nos. 13 and 14 — and none have won.

A full field of 14 3-year-olds was entered for Saturday's 1.316-mile race, the first time since 1992 the Preakness drew the maximum entries. High Fly, 10th in the Derby, was the second choice at 5-2 and Derby runner-up Closing Argument was the third choice at 5-1.

"I just think when you look at the race as a handicapper is 'Can we beat the Derby winner?' Pimlico oddsmaker Frank Carroll said. "Last year, Smarty Jones ... 'No we can't.' This year, Giacomo ... 'Yes we can.'"

A record-tying 10 Derby horses are in the field, with four new shooters. The only other time as many Derby horses were in the field occurred in 1999, when Charismatic was a long shot

Volunteers help renovate new United Way home

TWIN FALLS — The United Way of South Central Idaho has taken possession of a U.S. Housing and Urban Development house at 421 Second Ave. W. in Twin Falls. The property was transferred to the United Way by the city of Twin Falls.

Many volunteer hours have been expended on the house, but some of the most visible work has been due to the efforts of the members of the College of Southern Idaho Horticulture Club and horticulture professor Dave Kiegl, the club adviser, the United Way reports.

A spring semester club project, students removed diseased and dead trees and shrubs in preparation for the new landscape plan which was developed by club members. The landscape plan included a sprinkler system and drought tolerant plants. The student volunteers expect to complete their work by mid-May.

Community volunteers Bill Evans, Mark Cornelison, Chris Huddleston and Scott Edwards provided additional renovations of the property, including upgrading it to meet disability access requirements, as well as preparing the property for eventual office use.

Volunteers from the CSI Horticulture Club helped with landscape renovations to the new United Way office of Magic Valley home. ## LETTERS OF THANKS

Rupert woman helps family support son in Iraq

We wish to thank and publicly recognize a person who has shown support for our troops.

Every week, we send a care package to our son in Iraq. Packages from home are an integral part of our commitment to keeping his and his fellow soldiers' spirits upbeat. The Postal Service made this easier and affordable with its flat-rate boxes, which are a godsend, not to mention what the packages do for our troops.

More importantly, we wish to express our gratitude to Jerril Cole at the Rupert Post Office for contributing many items for us to send to our son, Sgt. Matthew Torres and his comrades. She does this "just because" and to thank young men and women and their families for serving our country and sacrificing so we can remain a free nation.

God Bless you, Jerril, and may God continue to bless the USA and our troops.

EMS gets new management

Volunteers might become employees of Jerome-based company

By Karma Metzler Fitzgerald Times-News correspondent

SHOSHONE — Lincoln County's all-volunteer emergency medical service personnel could become paid employees of Divine Medical Services, owned by St. Benedict's Family Medical Center of Jerome by June 1.

But the proposed change is getting a hesitant welcome from the closely knit EMS team in Lincoln County. Current Lincoln County EMS volunteers were handed job applications at a Monday meeting and briefed on the procedures for getting pre-employment physicals, drug screens and fitness tests.

All current volunteers will be hired contingent to passing the battery of tests, said Kristen Goodwin, St. Benedict's chief financial officer.

"Along with this does come some bureaucracy," Goodwin said. "But we want this to be a win-win situation for everyone."

St. Benedict's officials and Lincoln County volunteers say they hope the transition will put an end to nearly five months of being in "limbo."

The county has been running its emergency services since Jan. 1, after Lincoln County commissioners opted not to renew their EMS contract with Southern Idaho Medical Services, known locally as SIMS, which had provided the service since 1986.

Lincoln County has an agreement with eight surrounding counties to provide backup when needed. Right now, Jerome County EMS units are dispatched whenever there is an emergency medical call in Lincoln County. That system has led to a few misunderstandings on the job, said Mike Bright, Lincoln County's acting

SIMS told callers not to dial 911

By Karma Metzler Fitzgerald Times-News correspondent

SHOSHONE — Until very recently, Southern Idaho Medical Services was telling people not to dial 911 but to call them instead.

When a Times-News correspondent called the home number listed for SIMS owners Gary and Melody Russell Monday morning, a recording said, "If this is an emergency, don't call 911 — call 420-8060."

Melody Russell said the telephone number is for Gary Russell's cell phone. She said that Southern Idaho Regional Communications Center in Jerome, known as SIRCOMM, does not dispatch for private companies, so SIMS must rely on telephone referrals for business.

When asked if SIMS was assuming any liability in telling people not to call 911, Melody

Russell said, "that's a good question."

The message had been changed by Tuesday morning, Melody Russell said they've never been given a reason why the county did not renew its contract with SIMS, which had provided emergency medical services in Lincoln County since 1986.

County Commissioner Lawrence Calkins said renewing the contract "was not in the public interest."

He would not say if commissioners had received complaints about SIMS and its service.

The Russells have been plagued with their own health problems. Melody Russell suffers from multiple sclerosis and is bound to a wheelchair. Gary Russell underwent a second liver transplant two years ago, but "has felt better the last one

Students lobby for open campus

By Heather Pilkinton Times-News correspondent

WENDELL — Students at Wendell High School have petitioned their school board to open the campus and allow students to leave the grounds for lunch.

James Carrillo and Brandon Griffith, representing the Wendell Student Council, tried to sell the board on the idea Tuesday. They suggested the program could be an incentive available to upperclassmen who maintain a decent grade point average.

But board members passed on rendering a decision in light of concerns from the school administration, citing the need to conduct research of their own.

The topic of an open high school campus is not something unique to Wendell. A majority voters in the Buhl School District indicated on Tuesday that they would prefer their new high school to be a closed campus. Buhl High School is an open campus now, as are a majority of the high schools in Magic Valley.

In order to put their plan together, Carrillo and Griffith said they had talked to several schools in the area that offered open campuses.

"We have a growing community and a growing school," Carrillo said. "This means our cafeteria is overcrowded. Fifty-five seniors are graduating this year. However, there are 79 incoming freshmen, which equates to 14 more students during lunch."

Both Carrillo and Griffith said allowing an open campus would provide a fiscal benefit for the community as it would allow students to save money if they choose to go home. They said it also would mean less work for cafeteria staff.

Carrillo and Griffith suggested also suggested the campus could be open to juniors and seniors only. Carrillo said permission slips could be signed by parents before a student would be allowed to leave campus for lunch. The student also could be required to maintain a 2.0 grade point average.

"Participating in open campus would be a privilege," Carrillo said. "For example, if students weren't allowed to leave tardies in a trimester, they wouldn't be allowed to leave."

Although the board commanded the keys for a well-delivered presentation, there were some questions about the feasibility of an open campus.

Council member John W. Wright said he had had to receive Lincoln Avenue in Jerome — where the nearby high school is an open campus — during a rain storm.

"It's one place you don't want to be," Wright said.

Principal Don Fowler also shared his thoughts on an open campus. Fowler made it clear there were some definite concerns.

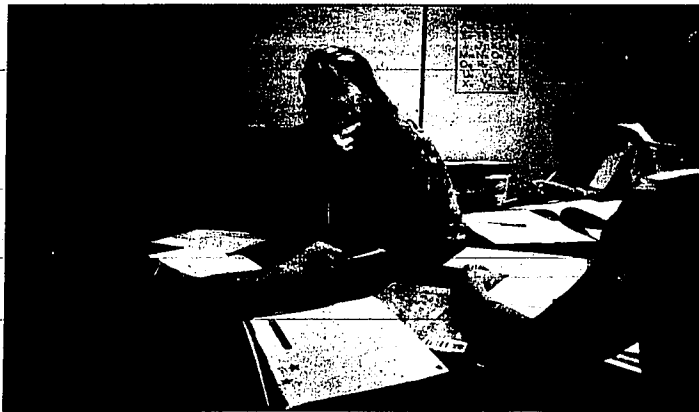

"Our primary concern is for the health and safety of the students," Fowler told the board.

Fowler said he was afraid that the students would be in a rush to get to the place of choice, get their lunch and get back to campus during their 35-minute lunch break, possibly leading to increases in speeding and accidents.

He also inquired as to who would monitor the parking lot to make sure that only approved students were leaving campus.

"I'm talking to a student over here, who's going to check the cars over on the other side to make sure they're allowed to leave," Fowler asked. "What if I'm in Twin (Falls) for a meeting? The rules are good, but who makes sure the rules are being followed?" Carrillo responded that other students could possibly handle the responsibility.

Center helps students overcome learning disabilities

By Karin Kowalski Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Three students gather around a teacher to practice phonics, misplaced modifiers and reading out loud in an informal atmosphere.

The City of Halley Westcott, a seventh-grader, the language class at the Southern Idaho Learning Center feels like fun, not work, but the result has been improved grades at her regular school.

"Honestly, it's actually helped me on my comprehension," Halley said on Tuesday.

The learning center is a nonprofit group that diagnoses and helps children with learning disabilities. Today the organization is celebrating its move into a new building, Director Melody Lenker said.

The City Council adopted an ordinance Tuesday making it unlawful to place the signs on the poles without the written permission of the utility owner or the city. In addition to that element of the new policy, the ordinance requires anyone intending to construct a sign within Jerome to get a permit from the city building official.

According to the final version of the ordinance, signs must be

Open house

The Southern Idaho Learning Center will hold an open house from 4 to 7 p.m. today at its new headquarters at 564 Shoup Ave. W.

Fees are on a sliding scale. Lenker said the center focuses on looking at the whole child's academic, medical, emotional and family aspects.

"Our job is to figure out what's blocking their learning," Lenker said. Students have learning disabilities when they have at least average intelligence, are under performing, in at least one skill area and the problem is related to how they process information, Lenker said. For instance, a student might have trouble sequencing letters and numbers, which shows up as struggles in reading and math, or a student might struggle with hearing separate sounds in words, which could manifest itself as dyslexia.

Lenker said learning problems can result from brain injuries, but most learning disabilities are hereditary.

Emily Walker, a fourth-grader, said classes are sometimes fun and sometimes boring. Her mother, Heidi Walker, said the center has filled a void by helping her daughter improve her language skills and grades.

"Emily's just like night and day," Walker said.

The new building has three classrooms, smaller conference rooms and offices. It's also handicapped-accessible, which was a big inadequacy of the center's old location on Blue Lakes Boulevard, Lenker said. Accessibility helps the center's users, and it improves the center's chances to qualify for grants.

The center moved to the new building late last year. Before that, the building was used for radiologic therapy, Lenker said. Magic Valley Regional Medical Center helped with furniture and rent. The center rents the building for about $6,000 a year.

Jerome City Council adopts new sign ordinance

By Dixie Thomas Reale Times-News correspondent

JEROME — Garage and yard sale signs can no longer be tacked to utility poles in Jerome. The City Council adopted an ordinance Tuesday making it unlawful to place the signs on the poles without the written permission of the utility owner or the city.

In addition to that element of the new policy, the ordinance requires anyone intending to construct a sign within Jerome to get a permit from the city building official.

Building signs — those attached to buildings — can be up to 35 feet tall with a surface area of 200 square feet. With a special-use permit a building sign can be 350 square feet but no higher than the height of the eye line of the building.

In the light manufacturing zone, businesses are allowed one freestanding sign facing each adjacent street, but the signs cannot obstruct a motorist's line of sight at intersections. All signs must be kept in good repair. Existing signs will be grandfathered.

There are several types of signs that are exempted from the application and permit requirements in Jerome's new sign ordinance. Exemptions include: Priority signs, Political signs, Nameplates, Commemorative plaques, Religious symbols.

Detectives interview man in Coeur d'Alene slayings

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — A man considered a "person of interest" in the deaths of three people and disappearance of two children has begun talking with detectives, a Kootenai County sheriff's officer said Wednesday evening.

Police walk around a house Tuesday where officials say three homicide victims were found Monday east of Coeur d'Alene.

Robert Roy Lutner, 33, of Hayden, contacted authorities, sheriff's Capt. Ben Wolfinger said. Wolfinger would not say where Lutner was when he made contact, but other news reports said the interview was in Coeur d'Alene.

Wolfinger also would not discuss whether the missing children were with Lutner, but the fact that an Amber Alert was still in place hours after the man was located indicated the search for the children continued.

"I don't know about the children. That is the first question our detectives are going to ask him, obviously," Wolfinger said shortly before 6 p.m. PDT. Sheriff's officers have said that Lutner may have been one of the last people to see the homicide victims alive Sunday night.

Police in several states had attempted to locate Lutner after Kootenai County authorities said late Tuesday he was a person of interest in their case. Wolfinger said Lutner knew he was being sought.

Lutner was on probation for an unemployment fraud conviction and had left information Tuesday with a probation officer that he intended to visit his father and stepmother in the Boise area, Wolfinger said.

The contact with Lutner came as Wolfinger said investi-

The 'woad' not taken No more cash for county's weed bounty

...POTATELO (AP) — A program that paid people cash for bags of a weed that's spreading rapidly across southeastern Idaho was so popular officials halted it prematurely after participants claimed $37,000 in bounty money in just six days.

Bannock County's "Bag of Woad" program paid people $10 for every 40 pounds of Dyer's woad brought to a local landfill beginning May 9, part of an effort to eradicate the invasive plant that crowds out native species, clogs drainage ditches and reduces roadside visibility.

The $25,000 project was scheduled to continue until this Friday, but officials ended it Saturday after getting more than $12,000 over budget.

The county will use money from a trust account to make up the difference, and next week plans to send out checks worth $3,500 to pay off the IOUs people were given when they brought in the bags of weeds they pulled.

Gun activists oppose judge nominees

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Some gun-rights activists are opposing two of seven nominees to fill a vacancy on the Utah Court of Appeals.

They oppose the nominations of 3rd District Judge Robert Hilder and former 3rd District Judge Scott Daniels, who more recently served as a Democratic state representative.

Gun Owners of Utah opposes Hilder's nomination because he upheld the University of Utah gun ban and set up a program of installing gun lockers in state courthouses.

"We have concluded that he has a strong personal bias against the lawful carrying of self-defense weapons by private citizens," the group said in an e-mail this week urging gun owners to lobby against Hilder.

Idaho bishop says 'simply no excuse' for his actions

BOISE (AP) — Accused of mishandling allegations of sexual misconduct by priests when he was a top aide in a California diocese, the leader of Idaho's 144,000 Catholics has been diligent in preventing future abuses by clergy and lay people, Diocese of Boise officials say.

Prior to this week's release of hundreds of pages of personnel files from the Orange, Calif., diocese as part of a court-ordered settlement with abuse victims, Boise Bishop Michael Patrick Driscoll reiterated an apology for permitting priests to remain in the ministry after they had victimized children among other actions.

"There is simply no excuse," Driscoll said in a lengthy statement issued May 5 by the Boise Diocese and posted to its Web site. He declined further comment Wednesday.

Jerome schools predict growth

Officials expect property tax revenues to rebound

By Cathy Roemer
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — The Jerome School District is anticipating a gradual enrollment increase during the next three years that will take it to nearly 4,300 students by the 2008-09 school year. "Those numbers were provided by MGT of America, a management research and consulting firm, which was hired by the district to evaluate local population and growth demographics."

Jim Gibson, the school district's business administrator, said since the district receives extra funding based on enrollment it was important to a look ahead with budget projections.

For the coming year, Gibson said he expects about 49 new students, which "will help us fund added positions."

Property taxes are the second biggest funding machine for local schools.

"This year is the first time in 15 years there has been an actual reduction in adjusted market value," Gibson said.

The dense of Moore Business Forms reduced revenue to the district, but Hiltex-Poly took its place.

"We'll be back into upward movement of property values before long," Gibson predicted.

Expenses in the district shows salaries and employee benefits coming in as top budget consumers; salaries using about 55 percent of the total and benefits 21 percent. Overall, 58 percent of the total budget goes into the classroom while another 32 percent is direct classroom support, Gibson said.

School employees could see a one-time monetary bonus by Oct. 5, if state revenues exceed $124 million by June 30. The Legislature passed House Bill 395 earlier this year allowing for a bonus pay of 1 percent to state employees.

Jim Cobble, the district superintendent, said only employees who earn less than $68,635 annually would be eligible. He was sure if the same guidelines applied to state employees in other government agencies.

According to the legislation, school districts may distribute the money, if and when it comes, at their discretion, but it must be used for salary bonuses.

"Benefits are included in the bonus so it isn't likely it will be a full 1 percent," Cobble said.

In other business during the Jerome School Board's Tuesday meeting, Cobble said a charter school may be in the works to replace the Advanced Regional Technical Education Coalition, known as ARTEC, which has been phased out.

"There's no doubt Jerome benefited the most from ARTEC, so we'd like to see something like it continue," Cobble said.

Magie Valley schools would be joining together to promote the charter school, but nothing is certain yet, he said.

Filer grants permission to use property

By John E. Swzyse
Times-News correspondent

FILER — The Filer City Council approved a request Tuesday to use vacant property as an interim holding area for plants grown by Conservation Seeding and Restoration Co.

Company representative Steven Paulson sees the two-acre site, located at 830 Adell Ave., as a temporary solution for a lack of space in the company's greenhouse facility north of Curry.

"We take small containerized plants grown in the greenhouse and bring them over here to harden them off outside," Paulson said. "This is no long-term situation, and at the very most you're looking at turps, some 10-foot post and maybe some gravel paths."

The Kimberly-based Conservation Seeding and Restoration Co. works with federal, state and privately controlled habitat organizations by providing plants in yellow dogwood and poplar only flower — that are native to Idaho and used for landscape reclamation.

In other business, Snake River Metal asked the council for possible solutions for dealing with complaints about delivery trucks blocking the roadway in front of the business on Fair Avenue.

Louise Brutke, who owns the company, suggested marking off a no parking zone or changing the current no parking ordinance. He said that future plans are to build a section on the north side of the current building where trucks can pull off the road to unload.

"Right now, we've either got to block traffic and spend time getting trucks lined up, with the driveway or we can go out there and quickly load or unload," Brutke said.

Council members said that painting a no parking zone and the use of traffic cones would be acceptable solutions to the problems regarding blocked traffic.

Snake River Metal, which specializes in the production of sheet metal roofing products, moved into the old C&F Foods building about three months ago.

EMS

EMS supervisor.

"The blumpest thing is we're bucking a new set of standards," Bright said. "There's a feeling we'll become a quick response unit for Jerome County's paramedics and there are some hurt feelings over that."

There have been personnel issues and confusion over which agency would respond to 911 calls within Lincoln County. There have also been misunderstandings over when the paramedics are needed and when they should turn back and let Lincoln County EMS crews handle the emergency.

"It's had its bumps," said Lee Ross, an emergency medical technician. "A lot of things were miscommunicated at first, but I think it will smooth out."

Ross said most Lincoln County residents were probably unaware of any changes, and at no time was the safety of county residents in question.

"I think we've provided as good or better service," she said. "I have seen definite improvement and I'm hoping to see more."

Goodwin and Lincoln County Clerk Liz Kline both said the contract between Lincoln County and Divine Medical Services is not signed yet, and the two parties are still negotiating the final details. Both said it should be signed by the end of the month.

Bright said many members of his crew are hesitant about having "big city people run a farm community service."

"They want to spend money on things that aren't necessary for our community," he said.

For example, Bright said Lincoln County's call volume doesn't warrant having a full-time paramedic on board, although it would be super nice.

Bright said the team averages about 300 calls a year with just more than half of those being transportable. Out of that number, only 18 percent to 25 percent require a paramedic.

"If we need a paramedic, we call one," he said.

Lincoln County Commissioner Lawrence Calkins said the county currently pays $3,000 a month out of the general fund to St. Benedict's for current service. However, a new taxing district was created in January to cover the costs of EMS in the county. Those tax revenues become available next January.

Calkins said that figure would remain the same once the new contract is in place, but Divine Medical Services' will keep whatever money its staff collects in billing and insurance. The current collection rate is about 25 percent, he said. Divine Medical Services officials expect to generate a 65 percent return on reimbursements, Calkins said.

County commissioners believe the change will "improve the service to the community," Calkins said.

Divine Medical Services is a new entity created to handle the emergency needs for both Jerome and Lincoln counties. Once up and running, employees from both counties should be able to work as teams to ensure residents are covered for all emergencies, said Ken Sheldon, the interim director of EMS for St. Benedict's.

"It's always scary when there's a change," Sheldon said. "We're going from two separate systems into one. The people of Lincoln County are not going to notice a difference because they will still have quality ambulance service. What's different is the way we are managing the business of EMS for both Lincoln and Jerome County."

and a half years," his wife said.

Gary Russell was involved in an accident several years ago in Twin Falls while transporting a patient to what was then Twin Falls Clinic and Hospital. He collided with a car at the intersection of Blue Lakes Boulevard and Pole Line Road while running with lights and sirens, he said. The case never made it to trial and was investigated by the county's insurance company, Gary Russell said.

The county had sued the Russells earlier in the year because they kept the county's newest ambulance after their contract was canceled. The Russells maintain the title to the ambulance was in their names, and they did all the grant work to obtain the vehicle. The lawsuit was settled, however, and the county retained ownership of the ambulance.

Melody Russell said SIMS has 10 people on its team, including a paramedic.

"We have a tremendous amount of equipment and training," Melody Russell said. "We just want to help."

Kempthorne lobbies for potatoes

Governor asks Schwarzenegger to exempt spuds from cancer warning

BOISE (AP) — Gov. Dirk Kempthorne has met with California Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger in an effort to exempt french fries from a California list of foods resulting in warnings that they could cause cancer.

California is revising a citizen-right-to-know law passed in 1986 and will likely include specific warnings about food-based acrylamide.

The chemical was previously considered an industrial agent until a 2002 study reported that it occurred naturally in many foods, including french fries. It occurs in cereals, for instance, though high levels in potatoes have been a focus, scientists say. It is related when the food is baked or fried.

Studies have linked acry-lamide to cancer in animals, according to the World Health Organization, and McDonald's and Burger King have been sued in California for not providing warning labels about their fries.

Some consumer advocates say Kempthorne is misguided, arguing he should be lobbying the food industry to slash levels of the chemical.

But Kempthorne wants potatoes — Idaho's No. 1 agricultural product accounting for $2 billion of the state's economy — off the table in the law's revision, concerned that certain changes could stoke fear among consumers and dent potato sales that have already been hurt by low-carbohydrate diet trends.

"It could have negative economic impact on Interstate commerce," said Mike Journe, a Kempthorne aide. "How are you going to get away from something like this, naturally occurring?"

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration is currently assessing the chemical in food, according to a statement on its Web site.

Scientists unveil online forecast for California earthquakes

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Californians wondering if tomorrow's forecast will be sunny can now find out if there's also a chance of afternoon tremors.

however, are slim most of the time, scientists say.

"It doesn't tell us when the 'Big One' is coming," said Liz Jones, scientist in charge of the USGS office in Pasadena. "It tells us there's an increased chance of shaking."

California residents already can view real-time earthquake maps with the click of a mouse. The maps are usually posted and updated within minutes of a tremor occurring. Now they can click on real-time, color-coded maps that provide earthquake probabilities in a specific region. Areas shaded in red represent a high chance of strong shaking within the next 24 hours (less than a 1 in 10 chance) while those in blue represent a very remote chance, say, more than 1 in a million.

Commission rejects Teton Village plan

JACKSON, Wyo. (AP) — The Teton County Commission on Tuesday voted 3-2 against expansion of the Jackson Hole ski resort town of Teton Village.

Republican Commissioners Jim Darviche, Leland Christensen and Mary Jorgensen voted against the plan, which was four years in the making, while Democrats Mike Gierau and Andy Schwartz supported it.

"It just felt too big for them and that is a profound disappointment," said Liz Brimmer, a consultant for the ranching family which crafted the plan. Snake River Associates, and the Jackson Hole Mountain Resort, which was among supporters.

The family will go back and look at their options and clearly will go forward with a series of subdivisions," she said. That fallback plan could include up to 10 subdivisions, which Brimmer said would not provide the housing opportunities for working families that the rejected plan contained.

Islamic rebels claim control of Uzbek town

KORASUV, Uzbekistan (AP) — A Muslim rebel group claimed Wednesday it had seized control of a small Uzbek town on the border of Kyrgyzstan and vowed to build an Islamic state. Diplomats briefly toured a nearby city where government troops fired on demonstrators, reportedly killing hundreds.

The United Nations human rights chief called Wednesday for an independent investigation into recent killings in Uzbekistan and expressed concern over reports of excessive use of force by authorities. Rebel leader Bakhtiyor Rakhimov said his forces controlled Korasuv, a town of 20,000, and were ready to fight any government troops that came to crush his rebellion. An AP reporter in Korasuv saw no sign of government officials in the town.

"The town is in the hands of people. People are tired of slavery," Rakhimov told. The Associated Press while leaning down from the back of a horse. "We will be building an Islamic state here in accordance with the Quran."

Fox meets with U.S. rights leader

MEXICO CITY (AP) — President Vicente Fox tried to smooth relations with the U.S. black community Wednesday after saying Mexican immigrants take jobs that "not even blacks want, promising to work with the new lawes passed to improve labor rights for minorities in the United States.

The meeting between Fox and Jackson at the president's residence was a sharp contrast from a few days ago, when Jackson called on the Mexican president to issue a public apology.

Some 25 million people of Mexican heritage live in the United States.

For meet with Jackson for more than an hour, but didn't participate in a news conference following the talks because he had to leave for a trip to northern Mexico. Fox has made no public reference to his comment Friday. Instead issuing a often inconsistent statements through his aides.

Iran: U.N. sanctions preferable to giving up nuclear program

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Iran will endow U.N. economic sanctions rather than give up nuclear fuel development, the vice president said Wednesday ahead of a new round of meetings with European countries trying to rein in its nuclear program.

Iran is vowing to restart its uranium reprocessing activities, an early step in preparing new uranium for either power reactor fuel or a nuclear weapon.

Washington believes Iran is secretly developing nuclear weapons under cover of a peaceful nuclear program. Iran denies this, saying its nuclear program is geared merely toward generating electricity, not bomb.

Israeli aircraft attacks Hamas militants, threatening cease-fire

GAZA CITY, Gaza Strip (AP) — An Israeli aircraft Wednesday fired at a group of Hamas militants who were about to shoot mortar shells at a Jewish settlement in the Gaza Strip, the army and witnesses said. The new violence threatened a fragile cease-fire declared in February.

The airstrike came minutes after militants fired four mortar shells at the Gush Katif settlement bloc.

"The army said it spotted two Palestinians preparing to fire more mortars when it attacked."

Hamas said one of its members was critically wounded while conducting a "holy mission." After the airstrike, militants fired a fifth mortar shell, the army said.

After the Israeli strike, Palestinians continued firing mortars, more than a dozen together, as well as two Qassam rockets, the military said. An Israeli was slightly wounded when a mortar shell exploded near the synagogue in the largest Gaza settlement, Neve Dekalim, witnesses said.

The mortar fire was in apparent retaliation for Israel's killing earlier Wednesday of a militant near the edge of the Rafah refugee camp in southern Gaza. Military officials said the Palestinians fired rifles and aimed anti-tank grenades at Israeli soldiers, who shot back.

It also identified the dead man as a Hamas member. There has been a sharp drop in fighting since the truce was declared by Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon and Palestinian leader Mahmoud Abbas, although there have been sporadic flare-ups in violence. Israel has repeatedly said it reserves the right to respond to attacks that Palestinian security forces fail to prevent.

"What do you expect us to do if they are attacking us?" said Ranaan Gissin, a spokesman for Sharon.

Lawrence of Arabia died on this day in 1935

This day in history: On May 19, 1935, T.E. Lawrence, also known as Lawrence of Arabia, died in motorcycle accident. Which has more legs, a millipede or a centipede? If you know the metric system you'd think that a centipede (100) should beat "cent" (100) by a factor of 10, but that would be wrong. Depending on the species, millipedes have between 36 and 400 legs; centipedes have between 24 and 200. The average adult giraffe tongue measures just under 2 feet in length. Your "funny bone" is called that only because somebody was trying to be punny; its real name is the humerus.

RANDOM KINDS OF FACINESS Jack Mingo Erin Barrett

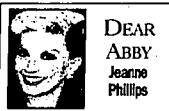

No one knows for sure where the penguin got its name. Many speculate logically that the name came from the Welsh words pen, meaning "head," and gwyn, meaning "white." Misnomer of the week: The "crab-eater seal" eats krill, not crabs. It's only the female mosquitoes that suck your blood. They need the extra nutrients in order to reproduce. So what do male mosquitoes eat? Fruit, juices, mostly. During the Cold War, the U.S. Federal Emergency Management Agency advised that each of the following material blocks radiation as well as 4 inches of concrete, 18 inches of wood, 5 to 6 inches of brick, 8 inches of hollow concrete block, 7 inches of soil, 6 inches of sand, 10 inches of water or 14 inches of books or magazines. We prefer the last one—it gets mighty boring reading concrete while waiting for radioactivity to dissipate. If you vote by absentee ballot but die before Election Day, what happens? Your vote is still supposed to be counted. Which brings up a question: How can a 17-year-old legally cast a vote in the United States? It can happen if they fill out an early absentee ballot for an election that's a few days after their 18th birthday. The word for frog in Sanskrit translates to "cloud" because legend had it that the little croakers were miniature makers of thunder. The year 1911 saw the first roadside diner with an indoor toilet.

Rejection is common for HIV-positive singles

DEAR ABBY: Your advice for the attractive HIV-positive young woman was perfect if the guy was perfect—but it's not. As a middle-aged gay man, my status should shock no one yet I'm usually rejected once I reveal my status. I see three imperfect choices for her: Be open about her HIV to anyone she meets (she will thereby benefit) by having a reputation. Tell her suitors up front during the first romantic outing. Or wait until weeks into dating only to be disappointed again and again. I chose the second. I take care of this nasty notification business as early as possible, preferably not in the heat of passion. The lies an HIV-positive person encounters can be quite an education. I'm nearly always told, "Thanks for telling me, being honest with me. It's OK, we'll just play safe," and the guy never calls me back. I now have a wonderful partner (he's negative) who loves me as I am. One day. There she'll be equally blessed. —STEVE IN L.A.

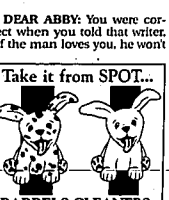

DEAR STEVE: I don't think a person's illness or disability should define her or him. I advised the woman to take the time to get to know someone—and let him get to know her—before having sex, and that when she was ready for physical intimacy, she should disclose. Many people disagreed, but not all. Read on. DEAR ABBY: I have AIDS and I'm happily married. I have lived with HIV for many years and have always been up-front about it. People respect me for being honest. When I was dating, I always let the man know. If he wasn't open, then I knew he wasn't "Mr. Right." Honesty is the best policy. —MARRIED WITH AIDS IN FLORIDA DEAR MARRIED: I agree. And in a case like this, honesty is a must. Thanks for sharing your success story. DEAR ABBY: I have lived with HIV for 14 years and am involved with HIV+ education programs. I have found it's best to get the message over with up front. While it's painful if someone you're interested in drops you because of your status, it's better to find out early than waste time on someone who can't handle it. Take it from someone who's been there many times over. Some cities offer social events specifically for people who have HIV and there are several online dating resources. Two of them are www.pozmatch.com and www.pozpersonals.com. —BEEN THERE. DONE THAT IN TEXAS DEAR R.T.D.T.: Your letter will comfort more people than you know. Thanks for writing. And by the way, dear readers, here's an online resource for people with herpes: www.hivdate.com and www.himates.com.

DEAR ABBY: You were correct when you told that writer, "If the man loves you, he won't take it from SPOT..."

HOW TO TELL WHEN A RESTAURANT IS RUN BY AN INSURANCE COMPANY

MORNING BREAK

Aries: Avoid agitation and carry on as planned

IF MAY 19 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY, persevere in the face of any small slowdowns as the universe could be merely testing your resolve in the year ahead. Do not neglect your health and be sure to keep up with routine dental visits and checkups. The more you gladly accept your lot in life, the sooner you will achieve your ambitions. October is the month in which you can be the recipient of ample rewards for past good actions, so be on the alert for helpful assistance from others and a chance to climb a bit higher on the ladder of life.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Keep your cool. You could feel caught between a rock and a hard place because you must follow through on a commitment that could try your patience. Avoid agitation and carry on as planned.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Love and romance could be the focus of your day, but the boss is unlikely to appreciate private phone calls or a date in company time. Save your amorous urges until later this evening.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): With delectable Venus dancing through your sign you could bend over backward to be agreeable. Don't be a pushover when it comes to the rules, however, if a stiff backbone is called for.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Jupiter and the moon make a fine sight in the night sky and could lighten your heart, as well. If you have a significant other this might be a good night for a romantic dinner for two.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your

HOROSCOPE
Jeraldine Saunders

best path to success is found by sticking to conventions and being as organized as possible. Rule your roost with a gentle hand, as a partner might be quick to rebel against unreasonable restrictions.

VRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Upsets at the workplace could mean you must take on more than your fair share or cause delays in important projects. Count your lucky stars that you have the resources to survive small setbacks.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A little agitation or a few surprises could cause some upsets. Don't let others get your goat with teasing or a refusal to cooperate.

Later this evening you can charm your way into peace.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Even if you feel the weight of responsibilities weighing on your shoulders be assured that good things are happening in the background. Someone is working quietly on your behalf.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your generous nature may be rewarded today. But don't get carried away and ignore your responsibilities. This is not the right time to sign contracts or make large purchases.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): The universe is unfolding along helpful lines — even if you can't see it from your spot in the cosmos. Don't stoop to perform petty acts of retribution. Remain honorable in all matters.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You are at a super level of attractiveness and your fun-loving side is on display. The mood of the day, however, could squish your exuberance, as hard work is the only sure way to success.

Grackles flock to Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — Like a scene from the horror movie "The Birds," large black grackles are swooping down on downtown Houston and attacking people's heads, hair and backs.

Authorities closed off a sidewalk after the aggressive birds, which can have 2-foot wingspans, flew out of magnolia trees Monday in front of the County Administration Building.

"They were just going crazy," said constable Willbert Jue, who works at the building. "They were attacking everybody that walked by."

The grackles zeroed in on a lawyer who shoed a bird away before he tripped and injured his face, Jue said. The lawyer was treated for several cuts.

It appears that the birds are protecting their offspring. On Monday a young grackle had fallen out of its nest and adult birds attacked people who got too close, Jue said.

Another bird attacked a deputy county clerk.

"I hit him with a bottle," said Sylvia Velasquez. "The other birds came, and one attacked my blouse and on my back."

Two women came to help her after she fell to the ground, and the birds attacked them as well. The group escaped by running into the building.

"This is a very Hitchcock kind of story. Very Tippi Hedren," said downtown worker Laura Annada Smith, referring to one of the stars of Alfred Hitchcock's movie "The Birds."

Burning daylight for dinner

It's time to come clean, all you Dutch oven aficionados. And I don't mean finding ways to make your 14-inch Lodge pan slick and glossy.

A dirty little secret hiding under the blackened pot needs to be revealed.

To put it quite simply, there is no secret ingredient to Dutch oven cooking. None, nada, zip.

Devil's delight

By Karla Barnes
Times-News correspondent

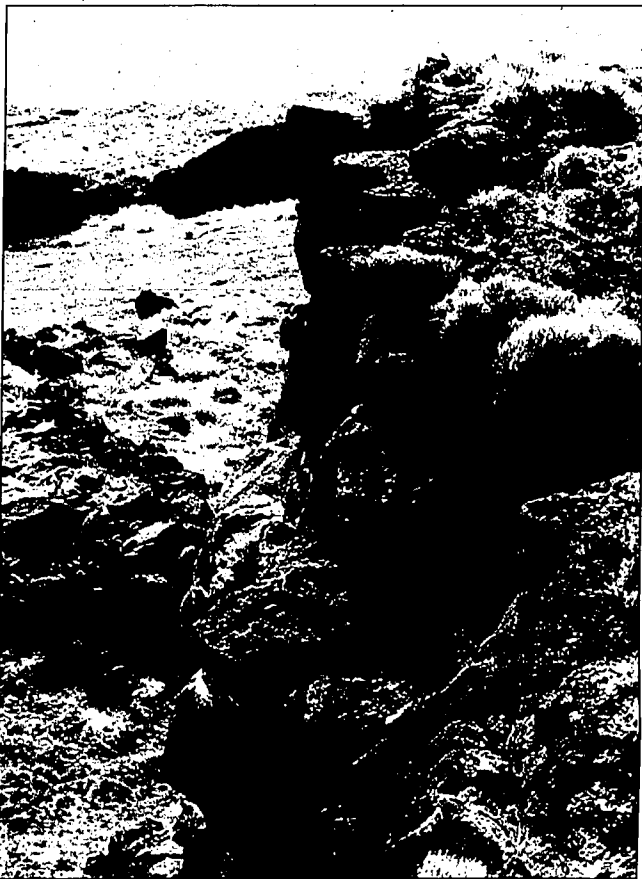

History runs deep through the Snake River canyon in and around the Devil's Corral area. Throughout the centuries mankind has enjoyed and utilized the scenic and recreational opportunities unique to this geologic wonderland. One man who has experienced the remarkable beauty of the Devil's Corral first hand is Meridian resident, Donovan Yingst.

Yingst, is 78 years old and hard of hearing, but his mind is sharp as ever. Donovan grew up on the north rim of the Snake River canyon just west of the Devil's Corral area. As a boy he used to get on his horse and disappear for hours on end. Donovan and his friends spent many enjoyable days exploring what he called "our playground."

"There was once an old house down in the corral," Yingst said, "and there was a beautiful fishing stream that had the biggest, most elusive trout I have ever seen in my life. There was a trail running through here that we didn't know was

Now don't get your britches in a bunch just yet. Does Dutch oven cuisine stick to the ribs? You betcha. Does a simmering oven filled with meat, spuds and seasoning of any kind go well under the starry skies above? Like nothing else, pardner.

After years of eating Dutch oven vittles, I honestly cannot remember a single portion ever tasting bad. Some recipes and recipes are better than others, but never was it so bad that it could choke a pig.

The secret, however, wasn't in the hardware. The magic of Dutch oven cooking is the endless amount of time required to cook the meal. Some call it slow-cooked perfection. I call it starvation.

If the Dutch really invented the "Dutch oven," they just might be skinniest people in the western world. That's because a Dutch oven black pot is the antithesis of the microwave.

Whatever your recipe suggests for appropriate cooking time, add an hour and you'll have dinner.

But any time you have to wait an extra hour for food, you probably aren't going to complain in the end, are you?

I know. I know. Tell me I don't know what I'm doing. Say what you want of how the black lacquered finish adds flavor to any meat.

Ramble on if you must about the superconductivity of cast iron hardware and how it's almost impossible to burn food in a Dutch oven.

But to me, it's the wait that puts a burr under my saddle.

A couple years ago I made the mistake of trying to cook beef brisket in a Dutch oven. If you're from the Southwest, you know that you should measure brisket roasting time in days, not hours. So maybe this was a lost cause from the start.

After six hours of cooking, and two bags of charcoal briquettes consumed, my family started to dig in. Unfortunately, we needed two more days in the kitchen oven to tenderize the meat. And yes, it was good. But when you take three days to work on a dish, what food lasts? Basically, the same principle exists for any food cooked in the cast-iron oven. By the time you burn the coals into chalky-white embers, sear the meat in grease, throw in the vegetables and get the meal going, you've burned off an hour.

Then comes the simmering routine where you repeatedly lift the oven lid, stir ingredients, smell the wafting aroma and taste the taste buds.

I reached a Dutch oven epiphany on one campout as my youngest son started eating ice cold hot dog wieners rather than wait for the main dish. I began thinking to myself, "Would I wait this long for dinner in four-star restaurant?"

Of course not. Sewer rat may taste like a rack of lamb with enough time and seasoning in a Dutch oven. But sometimes, you just want to eat before sundown.

This rant could continue for days, but I digress. You see, there's a campout this weekend, and if we want to eat by Friday night, the fire, the pot and the food need prep time right now.

Get the salines. Honey, I'm starving already.

'escaped... rattlesnake'

Throughout April and May the Lewis and Clark Expedition was battered by shifting winds. It made navigation difficult, given the winding river and tall cut banks. Periodically the party had to dry out its gear, however, there were no absolute disasters on the water. Toussaint Charbonneau was perhaps the least skilled boatman among the Corps of Discovery.

May 17, 1805—Capt. Clark narrowly escaped being bitten by a rattlesnake in the course of his walk, the party killed one this evening at our encampment, which he had informed me was similar to that he had seen; this snake is smaller than those common to the middle Atlantic States, being about 2 feet 6 inches long; it is of a yellowish brown colour on the back and sides... it's belly contains 176 scuta on the belly and 17 on the tail... we were roused late at night by the Sengs, of the guard, and warned of the danger we were in from a large tree that had taken fire and which leapt immediately over our lodge. We had the log removed, and a few minutes after a large proportion of the top of the tree fell on the place the lodge had stood; had we been a few minutes later we should have been crushed to atoms.

Hunters may take courses in late summer

Question: I moved to Idaho this spring and would like to hunt big game this fall. Since I was born after 1975, the regulations indicate I must pass a hunter education class before I can purchase my hunting license. How do I find a hunter education class before this fall?

Answer: If you're under 30 years old you are correct about the necessity of completing a hunter education class prior to purchasing your new Idaho hunting license.

There are several methods to enroll in a hunter education class. Students are registered in the Magic Valley region during 2 primary time periods: spring and late summer.

ASK THE OFFICER
Gary Hompland

Sign-ups are held at several locations around the region to accommodate the public's busy schedules. Volunteer instructors teach and schedule classes around their availability. At sign-ups, parents and prospective students to select and sign up for the class that best fits their schedule.

Since you've already missed the spring sign-up period and most spring classes you only have a couple of options available for the remainder of this year. You could wait and register during the next period for late summer-early fall classes. A second option for adults and juveniles over 14 years that may have conflicts with the course schedules includes independent study and online courses.

The independent study and online classes still require a field day with an instructor to assess gun handling and safety skills.

For more information about the availability of these classes call your local Fish and Game regional office or see the Idaho Department of Fish and Game Web site below.

Don't forget controlled hunt applications for deer, elk, and antelope must be submitted at least 30 days before the hunt.

Hunters harvesting black bears have 10 days after the date of kill to check their bear and complete a harvest report. Department employees must also attach a metal tag.

Fish and Game opens talks for fishing regs

JEROME—Removing the special bass regulation on Dierkes Reservoir is the climate of a restrictive trout limit on Mormon Reservoir are just a few of the changes the Idaho Department of Fish and Game is seeking comment on this Thursday, May 26.

Idaho Fish and Game biologists will be on hand at the sportsmen's comments from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m., at the Idaho Department of Fish and Game Regional Office, 868 East Main in Jerome.

Along with the Magic Valley Regional changes, anglers will also have the opportunity to comment on statewide regulation issues, as well.

Some of the statewide proposals include:

- Remove statewide bag limit on northern pike and walleye, except where these species are being actively managed by IDFG.
- Allow ice fisherman with a two-pole stamp to have 10 fishing rods instead of five.

- Revisit methods to monitor fishing efforts and catch rates for white sturgeon.

Individuals not able to attend, but wishing to comment may do so via e-mail at ifg@idfg.idaho.gov or by regular mail to IDFG, P.O. Box 428, Jerome, Idaho 83338. The deadline to submit comments to IDFG is June 15.

special, but it turns out it was part of the Oregon Trail.

Many years have passed since Donovan and his friends enjoyed this unique area of southern Idaho.

It has been over 15 years since he's set foot on this soil that he enjoyed as a child, and according to Donovan, "Boy, it has really changed over the years."

This month is Archaeology and Historic Preservation month in Idaho. Yngst and a group from IOCA (Idaho Oregon California Trail Association) took a field trip recently to the Devil's Corral area, now known as the North Rim Park. When you get a group of history buffs out on a section of "the trail" stories and folklore begin to unfold.

For those of you who don't know the history of the corral, the following is a sampling of some local trail history during our outing to the corral.

This location has served as a multi-purpose region for hundreds if not thousands of years. People, both ancient and civilized peoples have appreciated the shelter and uniqueness of the Devil's Corral area.

Donovan Yngst, center in cap, chats with Lyle Lambert as other IOCA members visit at Devil's Corral.

canyon many years ago by Archaeologists.

During the mid 1800s, early travelers on the Oregon Trail sometimes chose to follow a route along the north rim of the canyon, known as the North Alternate Route en route to Oregon.

In the late 1800s, horse thieves were corralling their loot in this natural corral setting.

Rod animals were often stolen from ranchers and railroad workers.

By 1891, a family by the name of Kinsey moved into a home in the canyon, and opened a wildlife park in the corral.

They had bears, goats, deer and even a seal on display for the price of $1. Other early settlers held one of Twin Falls's first church services at Preacher's Rock just north of Shoshone Falls on the north rim. Historians recall that a large group of people crossed the ferry that Sunday to attend.

Modern uses

Much later, events such as the Evel Knievel's canyon jumping attempt drew large crowds to the canyon rim. Knievel's goal of reaching the north side failed, but it still holds a place in Magic Valley history.

It seems there is always something exciting happening on the North Rim of the canyon in Jerome. Last July, the BLM announced that this 7,200-acre area would be known as North Rim Park.

There is a section of the corral that remains private, so visitors should exercise respect for private property.

As well as being a historical location, the North Rim Park is one of the most popular recreation areas in south central Idaho. Preliminary plans for the future of the North Rim Park are in the process of being developed.

For now, Motocross, four-wheeling and off-road activity is in high gear along the canyon rim. Hiking, biking and scenic overlooks up to 600 feet deep can also be enjoyed. The lava outcroppings and sagebrush covered terrain make a comfortable home for deer, antelope, rabbits and a variety of other flora and fauna.

This central park of the Magic Valley offers amazing potential for future recreation.

Organizers hope to include rock climbing, equestrian trails and walking trails as they further the development that is upcoming at North Rim Park.

Many interested parties have been working hard to clean up the area. The Jerome county sheriffs office and BLM staff are now patrolling the park and curbing vandalism and abuse to offer protection of this amazing resource for future generations to enjoy.

Geologic time speeds up at youngest Cascade volcano

SEATTLE (AP) — Volcanoes erupt and simmer, dinosaurs rise and vanish, continents slide and collide. These events occur in geologic time, over millions of years.

Then there is Mount St. Helens. Young, restless and unique in the Cascade Range. The mountain that blew itself apart 25 years is now rebuilding its shattered dome — in a generation.

Last fall, magma began rumbling up toward the blasted crater from a chamber 4 to 6 miles down. It's been welling up at a rate of as much as 10 cubic yards per second, though the current pace is about 3 cubic yards per second.

At that rate, 1,300 feet of mountain lost in the 1980 eruption could be replaced in a few decades, said Willie Scott, a scientist with the U.S. Geological Survey at the Cascades Volcano Laboratory in Vancouver, Wash.

"It's kind of great to have it happening nearby," Scott said. "Where kind of along for the ride."

Before 1980, St. Helens was promoted as "America's Mount Fuji" and known for its conical symmetry — a perfection that sprang from its relative youth. It hadn't been through an ice age or subjected to millennia of erosion.

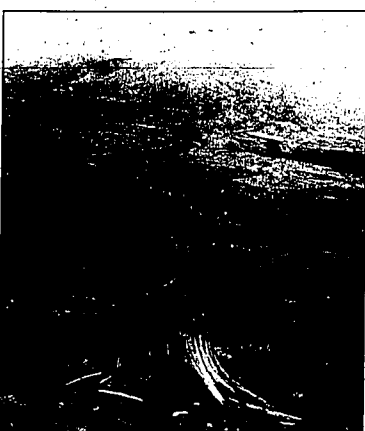

"The former summit of the volcano... was a big lava dome that was sitting on the volcano like a scoop of ice cream," Scott said. It probably dated from the 16th century, when the peak was rebuilt after a period of volcanic activity in the 1480s. "It was by far the youngest volcano in the Cascades."

There'd been eruptions in the St. Helens area for hundreds of thousands of years, but for centuries they only produced small lava domes, Scott said.

Volcanic eruptions don't always build a big central edifice, and St. Helens didn't start producing the lava flows that built the mountain until about 4,000 years ago, Scott said.

"It's done just about everything in those 4,000 years," Scott said. "Throughout its history, it's had this penchant for big explosive eruptions."

The mountain emerged over a rift basin, "a crack through the Mount St. Helens is obscured by clouds Tuesday as viewed from the Johnston Ridge Observatory one day before the 25th anniversary of the massive explosive eruption that altered its shape and killed 57 people on May 18, 1980.

crust," as geologist John Pallinger at the Cascade volcano lab put it.

Far below the surface, movement in the St. Helens seismic zone — caused by shifting in the blocks that wrap up western Washington and Oregon — intersects with tectonic plates that form the earth's crust.

To the north and west, the Juan de Fuca plate is diving under the continental shelf — creating enough friction and pressure to melt rock, said USGS scientist Craig Weaver at the University of Washington. A big arc in the plate causes it to shove southeast under St. Helens while the fault line, trending north and west, is buffeted by action that starts with the Sierra Nevada plate to the south.

Youth and an explosive temperament make St. Helens a special structure, Scott said.

"If we'd been around 12,000 years ago, we might think Mount Baker or Mount Adams were quite special. That's when they were active," Scott said.

The dome is a brittle stone skin over hot, fluid magma. If the lava extrusions continue, the dome will eventually fill the crater and magma pushing out to the surface will spill down the outer flanks of the mountain.

"It's not unlike piling gravel up. You get a nice cone with 25-30-degree slopes. When the lava dome gets larger and material's cascading down all sides of it, it finally fills the crater rim and starts flowing down the flanks," Scott said. "That's one way you create these smooth symmetrical cones."

But there's no way to tell what's going to happen next at the mountain, now the focus of a busy tourist season as a result of the anniversary and recent activity.

Sawtooth Science Institute will offer June ecology workshops

SUN VALLEY — The Sawtooth Science Institute is offering ecology workshops in June.

• Wet Your Waders: A Water Quality Primer will be held June 23 and 24 at the College of Southern Idaho in Twin Falls. Data collection techniques will be practiced using Texas Instruments programmable calculators, CBL2 data packs and sensors. Data will be collected from various locations along a local waterway, and the impacts of agriculture, urbanization, aquaculture and municipal water treatment will be evaluated using simple statistics. The class is intended for those who have a least a cursory understanding of programmable calculators or who are eager learners. Space is limited to 15 participants.

• Boss Spackman will be the instructor. Spackman is a professor of water resource management at CSI and is working on a Ph.D. in soil science with an emphasis on water quality research.

Cost for the workshop is $65. Teachers will be charged an additional recording fee of $50.

• Craters of the Moon Geology will meet June 24 and 25 at the Craters of the Moon.

Park service and Bureau of Land Management geologists will examine geologic history of the monument and surrounding region.

Participants will be introduced the broad spectrum of hypotheses that exist to explain the origin of the Eastern Snake River Plain and Yellowstone volcanic system.

They will learn to recognize volcanic features generated by basaltic volcanism and how they formed. They also will learn about how and why the various kinds of lava in the monument formed, what causes the variation in chemistry and the geologic processes at work within the monument. Space is limited to 15 participants.

Doug Owen, lead interpreter and park geologist at the Craters of the Moon National Monument and Preserve, will conduct the workshop. Owen received degrees in geology and education from Kent State, taught junior high school science and was a geologist with the U.S. Geological Survey.

The workshop fee is $65. An additional recording fee of $50 will be charged to teachers.

Confirm Memorial Day campsites in advance

BOISE — If you're planning to go camping in an Idaho state park for the Memorial Day weekend, you're not alone.

Memorial Day weekend — traditional start of Idaho's camping season — is one of the busiest times of the year for many of Idaho's state parks.

The Idaho Department of Parks and Recreation (IDPR) would like to encourage you to plan ahead and confirm your campsite in advance.

"All of our parks are open and ready for the traditional summer kick off weekend," IDPR Director Robert Meinen said.

JACKSON, Wyo. (AP) — Recent heavy snowfall has boosted mountain snowpack above Jackson Hole but likely won't increase runoff enough to fill Jackson Lake this summer, water officials said.

"The last few weeks have made a tremendous difference on the demand side," said Mike Beus, a water operations manager for the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation.

Because of heavy rain, eastern Idaho farmers are not tapping into reservoirs for irrigation,

"And it appears that many campers are taking advantage of our reservation system to confirm their campsites before they head out for the holiday weekend."

Reservations are accepted 90 days in advance of your intended stay and no later than two days before your anticipated arrival.

A reminder to campers before they head out for their holiday weekend excursion: the $4 motor vehicle entry fee (MVEF) will be collected in addition to camping fees.

This is a per vehicle, per night fee.

"Campers can take advantage of the discounts provided by the Idaho State Parks Annual Passport," said Jennifer Couture, IDPR Communication Manager.

The $25 sticker covers all motor vehicle entry fees until December 31st of the purchase year, paying for itself after just six day-use visits or camping nights, making it a tremendous value."

Memorial Day Weekend campsites should be advised that reservations will not be accepted after Wednesday, May 25.

Snow may boost Jackson Lake water level which could ease water demands from Jackson Lake reservoir in Grand Teton National Park. Still, a deficit from last year's runoff might not be fully reversed this summer, officials said.

The drought prompted the bureau to drop the lake to some of its lowest recorded levels last fall and Tuesday, the reservoir was only 34 percent full.

Although bureau officials are still waiting for spring runoff, Beus is not optimistic there will be enough water to keep the lake as full as boaters would like.

The bureau will have to drain some water this summer to maintain flows in the Snake River for the benefit of natural resources and summer river recreation, he said.

Bureau officials will discuss options for releasing water during a public meeting Thursday at 7:30 p.m. at Snow King Resort. Jackson-area precipitation in May, the wettest month of the year, reached 2.25 inches as of Tuesday, according to Jim Woodmency, chief meteorologist for mountainweather.com.

Delta shares rise as meeting approaches

ATLANTA—Delta Air Lines shares got a much-needed lift Wednesday from an analyst's assertion that the struggling carrier may not be in jeopardy of bankruptcy until next year, positive comments that came a day before the company's annual meeting.

Wigan-airline analyst Jamie Baker said in a research note that the probability of a Chapter 11 filing by the Atlanta-based carrier is not as likely. "We mistakenly underestimated management's resolve in avoiding a filing last year and believe that once again Delta will pull out all the stops possible to prevent a filing in the fourth quarter or the first quarter of next year," Baker said.

Shares of Delta rose 29 cents, or 0.6 percent, to close at $43.30 in trading Wednesday on the New York Stock Exchange, where they were traded in a 52-week range of $2.46 to $8.17. General analyst David Weisner's recent analysis had suggested Delta might be ripe for a bankruptcy filing by this fall based on high prices of fuel and worrisome comments by the airline in a recent regulatory filing.

Just last week, Delta's stock fell to its lowest price in at least 32 years, but has rebounded since then.

Delta, meanwhile, was preparing for its annual meeting of shareholders Thursday at a convention center near the Atlanta airport.

At the meeting chief executive Gerald R. Allen was expected to address shareholders, who were scheduled to vote on nine proposals.

The board proposals include election of nine directors and ratification of the appointment of the company's independent auditor.

Delta's hub in Salt Lake City is the only nonstop commercial flight destination from the Twin Falls airport.

Sugar farmers oppose pact

By John Miller
The Associated Press

BOISE—U.S. Agriculture Secretary Mike Johanns has hit a roadblock as he stumps for a Central American Free Trade Agreement.

Idaho sugar beet farmers are opposing the pact, known as CAFTA, because of provisions allowing 107,000 metric tons of sugar to be imported into the United States.

Sugar beets are an $800 million industry in Idaho and the state's third-largest crop, and the farmers have won support from the state's Republican congressional delegation and Gov. Dirk Kempthorne. They've also persuaded the Idaho Farm Bureau Federation to lobby against it.

Many of the 6,000 cane and beet sugar producers in other states—including Minnesota, Louisiana, Florida, North Dakota, Oregon, Nebraska and Washington—also say CAFTA is a bad deal unless the sugar provisions are lifted. Johanns, in Boise this week, tried to reassure growers that they won't be hurt.

"The amount of sugar authorized by CAFTA is under 2 percent of domestic consumption," Johanns said. "That's something like two packages a day. There isn't enough sugar in CAFTA to impact the program."

But many farmers say lifting restrictions on sugar imports from the Dominican Republic, Costa Rica, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras and Nicaragua could lead to flooded markets and lower prices for their crops. They also worry other deals will follow with sugar-producing nations such as South Africa and Thailand.

"We're concerned it could also set a precedent for other trade agreements they're negotiating now," said Mark Duffin, executive director of Idaho Sugarbeet Growers Association.

The industry has struggled recently in the region. Amalgamated Sugar Co., a $600 million growers cooperative based in Boise, shuttered operations in a Nyssa, Ore., plant starting in February. Amalgamated's Magic Valley plants are in Twin Falls and Paul.

Ralph Burton, Amalgamated's president, said the Nyssa plant was due to free-trade agreements and U.S. marketing policies that permit large sugar imports from overseas. That resulted in a cutback in this season's acreage by about 16 percent.

"We've already got an oversupply of sugar," Burton said. "CAFTA bodes to be a template for things to come."

However, U.S. policies governing the sugar industry have been called unfair by governments such as Australia and Thailand. U.S. sugar producers control nearly 85 percent of the domestic market, helping keep prices double those of the rest of the globe, Johanns said. That wouldn't change under CAFTA, he added, saying the strict quota system would still be enforced.

The agreement was signed by President Bush last May but still needs congressional approval. Bush says he wants the pact to open Central American markets to American products, including agriculture, technology and manufactured goods—by helping eliminate tariffs now seen as a barrier to U.S. trade.

Tariffs levied by CAFTA countries are as high as 15 percent on Idaho potatoes, 89 percent on dry beans and lentils and 30 percent on beef, Johanns said.

"Without a level playing field, it's difficult for us to compete," said Mike Webster, an Idaho rancher and member of the Idaho Cattle Association, which backs CAFTA. "That's not just good business in cowboy talk, that's just plain good common sense."

CLICK AND PRINT

Ellen Lichtenstein, right, a communications senior from Birmingham, Ala., talks to Prof. John Hall, Director of NYU's Communications Studies Program, about her grades, Wednesday at New York University. Lichtenstein says for half her classes this past year she no longer had to visit a library to get all the articles and books her professors had placed on reserve. Instead, she accessed most material from the Internet.

Publishers raise concerns over e-reserves

The Associated Press

NEW YORK—There's been a change in Ellen Lichtenstein's study patterns.

For half her classes this past year, she no longer had to visit a library to get the reading materials professors had placed on reserve. Instead, she only needed Internet access and a password.

"It's as simple as logging into my e-mail account, clicking on a few links and printing it," said Lichtenstein, 21, a New York University communications senior from Birmingham, Ala. "There's no going to the library, waiting on line, walking to Xerox it, there's none of that."

And publishing companies are worried precisely because of that ease and convenience—it's another way for publishers to lose sales.

The Association of American Publishers already has contacted one school, the University of California, San Diego, claiming "blatant infringement" as being made of numerous books, journals and other copyrighted works.

Allan Adler, the group's vice president for legal and government affairs, said he was investigating other universities, which he would not name. He suspected the practice might be widespread on campuses nationwide, but said publishers could never know because such items are generally on password-protected sites.

U.S. copyright law offers greater leeway for noncommercial uses like education, but such "fair use" exemptions are not automatic. Rather, courts ultimately must apply a four-part test that balances, among other things, the amount copied and its effect on potential sales. A password can help but does not guarantee an exemption. Libraries have largely been permitted to make a limited number of copies available through reserve systems. In which students borrow a book or a binder of photocopied articles for a few hours at a time. Students can make copies for themselves under fair use.

But when FedEx Kinko's Office and Print Services tried to extend that premise and packaged collections of articles, book chapters and other items as "course packs" in two New York stores, publishers sued the FedEx Corp. unit and prevailed. Kinko's was told to pay $2 million to eight publishers in that 1991 case.

Many librarians and professors see electronic postings as akin to library reserves, but publishers see them more as course packs subject to permission and royalty.

Making materials available to all students at once, 24 hours a day, hardly counts as limited access typical of hard-copy reserves, said Allan Ryan, director of intellectual property for Harvard Business School Publishing, the university unit that sells business case studies and the Harvard Business Review.

Troy Williams, chief executive of Questia Media Inc., said companies like his would have no incentive to scan in hard-copy materials and rack down rights to do so if schools were permitted free access. He said Questia has spent $150 million to put 60,000 books online. Nonetheless, electronic distribution is rapidly replacing paper. Two years ago, University of Arizona libraries stopped paper reserves of articles and book chapters entirely and have seen book reserves in decline.

"Students want the 24/7 access," said Frances Maloy, president of the Association of College and Research Libraries and a librarian at Emory University. "They want it online. They don't want to have to go to the library."

State guards unclaimed property

The Times-News

REPORT—The state is safeguarding unclaimed property for hundreds of people and businesses whose last known addresses are in Magic Valley.

The Idaho State Tax Commission is looking those folks, and hoping they'll call to claim the property.

It's stuff for which  I d o h o business-owners have been unable to find the checks, contents of safe deposit boxes, tax refunds, stock dividends, workers' compensation benefits and the like.

The Idaho Legislature in 1997 changed state law governing unclaimed property. Now after property that's safeguarded by the tax commission remains unclaimed for 10 years, it will transfer to state ownership and be deposited in Idaho's general fund.

The first time that will happen is 2007. Before the 1997 law, the tax commission held unclaimed property for its rightful owners in perpetuity.

The Times-News on Thursdays prints names of a sampling of unclaimed-property owners whose last known addresses are in Magic Valley communities. Today's list is from Declo, Gooding, Halley, Heyburn and Rupert. The tax commission said each person or business listed today—or the persons heir—owns unclaimed property worth more than $100.

Watch for other towns in coming weeks.

Rural group's leader will help cities prepare for growth

By Elisabeth A. Devens
For The Times-News

GOODING—The new facilitator of a rural economic development coalition said he intends to work alongside leaders of individual communities to develop each area's goals and direction.

"We're making sure businesses fit the community and making sure the areas have infrastructure to support growth," said Kelly Bangert, 42, of Jerome, who was named May 12 as the new leader of the Rural Magic Valley Economic Development Association.

The organization serves Gooding and Lincoln counties, along with the rural cities of Kelly Bangert will replace current facilitator Jim Scott, who retires at the end of this month. Bangert, a member of the Jerome School Board, has worked in law enforcement for 20 years. Much of his interest in economic development began with his current position as police chief in Hazelton, he said.

"When I got hired on in Hazelton, the mayor at the time got me involved in community development training," he said. "I've also been involved in several economic development programs in Hazelton, such as a city park and, most recently, helping a grocery store locate in the area."

Bangert will work with RMVEDA board and other local and state economic development leaders to recruit businesses to rural Magic Valley and encourage existing businesses to expand.

"That's a big part of being involved in economic development—it's a team thing," Bangert said. In the past four years, RMVE-

DA has logged several business success stories, including the recent recruitment of Iowa-based cargo trailer manufacturer Kleier Built LLC to Gooding and Rocky Mountain Hardware manufacturing's expansion to Shoshone.

Scott estimated the organization has helped create about 100 jobs in the past four years, and is pursuing a number of potential job-creation leads.

"It's going to be exciting," Bangert said. "There are a lot of good things going on in the Magic Valley right now where economic development is concerned." Bangert comes to the association from the state of Oregon. Please see LEADER, Page D6

Town rallies around Starbucks after vandalism

The Associated Press

DURANGO, Colo. — An angry spree of anti-corporate vandalism at a new Starbucks coffee shop here has created a backlash in town — an outpouring of support for the bean behemoth and the owners of mom-and-pop coffee shops.

In mid-April, soon after Starbucks opened on Main Avenue, a vandal attacked the storefront window, first by urinating on it and later by spray-painting "Go back to Seattle, you corporate scum."

The next week, someone shattered the window.

The episodes actually have locals treating Starbucks like something of an underdog.

Joe Lloyd, owner of Durango Joe's coffeehouse, sent a message to Starbucks manager Traci Mortari.

"We were actually picked up after the vandalism, with many new customers specifying that they were there to show support during this difficult time, employees said.

Mortari, like many local managers for big corporations, is a former Starbucks-based Starbucks spokesman Phil Smith said vandalism is rare at the stores, but it's hard on the employees when it does occur. However, he said, "We are extremely happy about the community response."

Across the street from Starbucks, Thomas Barnes, a maker of custom saddles and cowboy hats, has to take his hat off to Starbucks.

"We love it," he said, as he sucked down a Starbucks coffee shop called Blend.

Joe's was one of many locals who spoke out publicly on Starbucks' behalf. He said he studied the competition and learned that Starbucks is one of the most socially and environmentally progressive corporations in the land. He bought stock.

"It is very clear that whoever was responsible for the mischief at Starbucks made some wrong assumptions about big corporations and Starbucks," said Bob Kunkel, who heads up business development for the city of Durango.

Across the street from Starbucks, Thomas Barnes, a maker of custom saddles and cowboy hats, has to take his hat off to Starbucks.

"We love it," he said, as he sucked down a Starbucks coffee shop called Blend.

Joe's was one of many locals who spoke out publicly on Starbucks' behalf. He said he cup-carrying visitors to his stores were stopping mocha frappuccinos all over his $16,000 silver-studded saddles.

"He put up a sign banning food and drinks in the store, but soon had to relent.

"It was dead in here," Barnes said. "A lot of our high-end clients are Starbucks drinkers. The crimes against Starbucks left Kunkel and Chamber of Commerce officials something of a headache because it wasn't the first big chain to move into historic downtown Durango.

Main Avenue features many homegrown enterprises, but several coffee purveyors, but also includes Domino's Pizza, Subway and Cold Stone Creamery.

More than 20 brand-name businesses, from banks to real estate brokers, are in the central business district, Kunkel said.

And Durango has exported chains of its own. Rocky Mountain Chocolate Factory has spread from its birthplace here to 283 stores in cities across the United States and Canada.

But Starbucks, whose new Durango store is one of 1,500 it expects to open in 2005, is a symbol of unpopularity and corporate culture in a downtown holding its own in terms of local character, mused several coffee drinkers at another establishment.

But they said they don't condone the vandalism.

Lloyd said that Durango Joe's business hasn't been hurt by Starbucks. In fact, it forced him to raise his game.

"When Starbucks comes in, you get all your ducks in a row," he said. "You make sure your service is above par and your quality is superb."

Stocks post gains on benign inflation data

NEW YORK (AP) — Wall Street posted big gains for the third straight day Wednesday as a benign reading of consumer inflation relieved investors. The Dow Jones industrial average jumped more than 130 points, pushing the indicator a gain of more than 300 points so far this week.

Investors were also encouraged by a decline of nearly 24 barrel in oil prices, which alleviated another source of persistent concern, and Dow component Hewlett-Packard Co. turned in a solid earnings report.

Despite the pronounced uptick, however, it was not clear that the market had completely shaken off the lingering worries about inflation and rising interest rates that have dogged it over the past several weeks.

Investors focused on the consumer price index data released early Wednesday, particularly a report on Tuesday that showed an unexpected spike in prices at the wholesale level, which had put a damper on stocks early in Tuesday's trading.

But the Fed's head of financial trading SG Cowen & Co. said that while investor sentiment has been positive over the past few days, it remains unclear that oil prices and a favorable reading on consumer inflation, "people are cautious."

"It's been a very tough market," he said. "It seems clear to me that we've done this before — it's rallied and then sold off again. I'd like to see a sustained rally before we get too excited about getting to 11,000. And I don't see that happening until the Fed stops raising rates."

The Dow rose 132.57, or 1.28 percent, to close at 10,464.45 after gaining more than 191 points over the previous two days.

Broader stock indicators also advanced. "The Standard & Poor's 500-stock index rose 1.76, or 1.00 percent, to 1,188.66 and the Nasdaq composite index rose 26.50, or 1.32 percent, to 2,030.65.

It was the highest level for the Dow and the S&P 500 since April 12, and the highest level for the Nasdaq since March 15. The last time all three indexes posted three consecutive days of gains was Feb. 23-25.

The Labor Department reported before the market opened that the consumer price index, the most closely watched barometer of inflation, rose 0.5 percent in April, led by higher energy and food prices.

But without the swings in those two volatile price categories, inflation in what's known as core prices was flat in April, a major improvement from March, when that measure shot up by 0.4 percent, its largest gain in more than two years.

Kevin Kentop, chief investment strategist for Financial Research Services Group in Philadelphia, said the CPI reading reassured investors that the Federal Reserve's gradual tightening program was keeping inflation in check.

"The buyer's strike might be over," Kentop said, referring to the postal workers' strike that is under way during April and early this month. "Investors have been very pessimistic lately. There have been a lot of concerns about inflation, economic sluggishness and earnings growth decelerating. I think we're starting to move past that."

Inflation fears ease slightly with consumer-prices report

Consumer prices excluding the volatile energy and food segments rose 0.2 percent in April, the Labor Department said Wednesday in a surprisingly tame report that helped ease inflation fears.

It was the first time since November 2003 that the so-called core measure of the consumer price index showed no increase. Economists had expected it to rise 0.2 percent, after a worse-than-expected 0.4 percent jump in March.

Falling prices for clothing, hotel rooms and new cars were credited for the benign showing in April.

Including the food and energy sectors, however, inflation in April rose 0.5 percent. The rise was paced by a 4.5 percent bump in energy prices and a 0.7 percent increase in food prices.

It was the biggest monthly jump in energy prices in two years. But many economists noted that oil prices had fallen in May.

The same core-inflation report cheered investors and analysts. They interpreted it as a sign that inflationary pressures were easing, giving the Federal Reserve room to become less aggressive in its diet of measured interest-rate hikes that began last June.

Major stock indexes staged a strong rally, marking their best three-day gain in more than six months.

The report was an especially strong relief coming after March's surge in core inflation, which had caused concern that the economy might slow even as inflation leapt up.

There seems to be an ebbing of inflation pressures, and this creates an opportunity for consumers, because for quite some time they were falling behind in their purchasing power," said Anthony Chan, senior economist at D4.

The rural Magic Valley association was initially funded in 2001 by a $45,000 grant from the U.S. Department of Agriculture as part of Gov. Dirk Kempthorne's Rural Economic Development Professional Outreach Program.

As the grant funds diminish each year, the coalition is working toward being more self-sustaining.

For the current fiscal year, the coalition's members still need to raise $3,000 from private donors to balance the budget.

Notice of Opportunity to Comment

USDA Forest Service, Sawtooth National Forest
Minkidoka Ranger District, Cassia and Twin Falls Counties, Idaho

Proposed Access Road to Private Property in Rat River

The Minkidoka Ranger District of the Sawtooth National Forest is requesting comments on an application by a private landowner to construct a short, seasonal access road to his property. The owner holds a 160-acre parcel surrounded by national forest in the Rat River Division, located in northern Utah (legal description is T. 14 N., R. 14 W., SE corner of Section 27 of the Spring Creek drainage). Currently there is no road access to his land. He has applied to construct approximately 1/4 mile of road for the purpose of salvaging dying trees, wildfire protection, a summer cabin and recreation on his property.

The Code of Federal Regulations, 36 CFR, Part 251.110, paragraph (c) states that "...as appropriate, landowners shall be authorized such access as the authorized officer deems to be adequate to secure them the reasonable use and enjoyment of their land."

The property is located within the boundaries of an inventoried roadless area and the required environmental analysis will be completed. Approximately one-half (1/2) mile of construction would occur within the IRA and one-quarter (1/4) mile outside this boundary. The Sawtooth National Forest land and Resource Management Plan (RMP) shows an area currently 34 miles of unclassified and 7 miles of classified roads within the boundaries of this IRA. If permitted, a seasonal road will be constructed through the appropriate Forest Service land ownership.

The Forest Service encourages your substantive comments on this proposed action, along with supporting reasons that the responsible official should consider in reaching a decision [36 CFR 215.6 (a)(9) published in the Federal Register, 6/15/04]. Your comments should help prepare an environmental analysis of the proposed action. Send substantive comments to Scott Nannenga, Minkidoka District Ranger, 3550 S. Overland, Burley, Idaho 83302, Phone: 208-375-0430; FAX: 208-377-4878; or you may hand deliver your comments to the above address during normal business hours from 8:00 to 4:00, Monday through Friday, excluding federal holidays. Comments may be submitted electronically by email at comments-intern-sawtooth-minkidoka@ia.fs.us.

To maintain eligibility for appeal, each individual, or for an organization, an authorized representative must submit substantive comments and must sign the comments or other write verify their identity. The opportunity to comment ends 30 days following the date of publication of this legal notice.

Additional information on the proposed action may be obtained by contacting Scott Nannenga, or Glenn Luckey at the Minkidoka Ranger District, 3550 S. Overland, Burley, ID 83318; phone 208-375-0430; FAX: 208-377-4878.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

Bobby Wolff

"One should not be too severe on English novels; they are the only relaxation of the intellectually unemployed."

—Oscar Wilde

On today's deal from the Dyspeptics Club, South might have been forgiven by any partner except his actual one for taking his eye off the ball.

On the opening top-diamond lead against four spades, South ruffed high, then played a spade to dummy's 10 for another diamond ruff high. He went back to dummy with a trump to ruff the last diamond high. Now he led a third trump to dummy, planning to lead a low club to the nine to endplay West. However, East thoughtfully inserted the 10, and when South played the king, West won his ace. Now a low club came back to East's jack, followed by a third club to West's queen. Next came a low heart.

South played low from dummy, and when East's 10 forced the ace, declarer next finessed dummy's heart jack with some confidence. Unluckily, East had both the high hearts, so down South went. As North pointed out, at trick one West is known to have the diamond ace, so South should simply discard a heart on the opening diamond-king lead. Say West continues with a trump. South can win, play heart ace and king, then ruff a heart high, and return to dummy with a trump to ruff the diamond nine high. Then he would go for a club with a trump and play the diamond queen, throwing a club from hand. West is endplayed into either presenting South with a ruff and discard or leading around to the club king.

North 10 9 8 4, 7, K 2, Q 3, 4 3 2. South A K Q J 6 3 2, A 9 3, K 9 5. West 7, 8 6 4, A K 7 2, A Q 7 6. East 5, Q 10 7 5, J 10 8 6 5, J 10 8.

Vulnerable: East-West. Dealer: West. The bidding: South West North East 1 Pass 2 All pass. Opening lead: Diamond king.

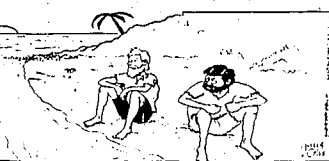

BID WITH THE ACES

South holds: 7, 8 6 4, A K 7 2, A Q 7 6. South West North East: 1 Pass 2 All pass.

ANSWER: Bid three clubs. Your partner's cuebid shows a limit raise or better in diamonds. You are too good to sign off now; your attractive shape entitles you to make a descriptive bid below the level of three diamonds to let partner describe his hand further.
