Londoners hold silent vigil

Los Angeles Times

LONDON — United in a grief for which words seem insufficient, Londoners summoned by 12 mournful strikes of Big Ben's bells at noon Thursday flooded streets and sidewalks in silent defiance against the terror that gripped their city a week earlier.

So thorough was the hush that birdsong and leaves rustling in a gentle wind were all that could be heard for 120 seconds after the bells tolled.

The normally frenetic Thames embankment and Knightsbridge retail district looked like still photos. The city's 6,000 red double-decker buses, and its shiny black taxis, trucks and motorbikes pulled to the curb where drivers shut off their engines.

From ethnic Brick Lane to the lawn of Buckingham Palace, Britons and visitors turned their thoughts from investigators' pursuit of the perpetrators to the loss of at least 49 lives at the hands of fanatics. The death toll rose by one Thursday, to 53, including the four attackers.

"It's a very sad day, but it's also an important day because we have shown that we are together," said Peter Moore, London's town crier, after strolling his own voice and footsteps alongside thousands of others in Parliament Square.

They will never succeed, these people, the 63-year-old in red levis said of the men who on July 7 struck three Underground stations and a packed bus in the first suicide bombings to afflict Western Europe. "We will press on regardless. We went through the war and we'll get through this."

Papa's pals

As in life, friends surround Hemingway in death

By John Miller
Associated Press writer

BOISE — Tillie Arnold was working at an Idaho mountain resort back in 1939 when she came across an adventurous writer named Ernest Hemingway, who was at the lodge's restaurant eating marinated herring and drinking a beer for breakfast.

"I burst out laughing and said, 'Mr. Hemingway, is that breakfast?'" Arnold wrote in her 1999 book, "The Idaho Hemingway." "He said, 'Yes, daughter. Have some. It's good, for the kidneys.'"

The encounter at the Sun Valley Lodge was the springboard for a relationship that made Arnold part of Hemingway's tight-knit circle of friends — a group that is remaining close even after death.

Arnold, who died in January at the age of 99, will be buried in a plot next to Hemingway's grave on July 21, the author's 106th birthday. The body of Arnold's husband, another old Hemingway pal who died in 1970, has been dug up from an Iowa graveyard to be placed in the plot in Ketchum next week.

Historians and Hemingway buffs say the burial of Tillie and Lloyd Arnold helps complete the circle of friends Hemingway made during his two-decade relationship with Idaho, where the Nobel Prize-winning writer shot himself to death in 1961 after a career that produced

School bond aid program booms

Critics say taking money from state lottery funds robs Peter to pay Paul

By Karlin Kowalski
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Several school districts are reaping the benefits from the state giving breaks on bond interest, but critics see the program as unfair and headed for financial trouble.

The bond levy equalization program, which started in 2004, helps districts by paying between 10 and 100 percent of interest on new bonds, depending on an index of need. The money for the program — $2 million for fiscal year 2005 — comes out of lottery money that goes to all districts to help with building "maintenance." Both bond issues and lottery money can be used for the same kinds of projects.

Brian Bridwell, the business manager for the Buhl School District, said the equalization funds helped the district pass a $9.65 million bond issue in May 2003 for its new high school. The program reduces the amount of interest Buhl pays each year.

"It's a substantial dollar amount," Bridwell said.

Bridwell said the program and low interest rates were selling points for the bond issue.

"We were able to take advantage of it at the time and it helped the Buhl School District," Bridwell said.

Buhl typically uses lottery money for repairs relating to safety. For instance, it will be using some lottery money to repair broken concrete near Pappell Elementary School.

In Jerome, Business Manager Mike Gibson said the district uses lottery money for a bunch of maintenance projects, such as replacing carpeting on Jefferson Elementary's playground.

Bond levy equalization might make it easier for the district to convince voters to approve a bond issue to replace and upgrade deteriorating schools. The Jerome School Board might approve a bond amount and schedule an election at its meeting next week.

Paying for the program

The program is called equalization, said Jason Hancock, a budget and policy analyst for the Legislative Services Office, because it's

All-female village in Kenya is a sign of burgeoning feminism across Africa

The Washington Post

UMOJA, Kenya — Scattered cross-legged on tan sisal mats in the shade, Rebecca Lolosoli, matriarch of a village for women only, took the hand of a frightened 13-year-old girl. The child was expected to wed a man nearly three times her age, and Lolosoli told her she didn't have to.

The man was Lolosoli's brother, but that didn't matter. This is a patch of Africa where women rule.

"You are a small girl. He is an old man," said Lolosoli, who gives women to young girls running from forced marriages. "Women don't have to put up with this nonsense anymore."

Ten years ago, a group of women established the village of Umoja, which means unity in Swahili, on an unwanted field of dry grasslands. The women said they had been raped and, as a result, abandoned by their husbands, who claimed they had abandoned their community.

Sung by the treatment, Lolosoli, a charismatic and self-assured woman with a crown of putty dark hair, decided no men would be allowed to live in their circular village of mud-and-dung huts.

In an act of spite, the men of her tribe started their own village across the way, often monitoring activities in Umoja and spying on their female counterparts.

Hoping to be imprisoned, man shoots postal worker

The Associated Press

SNELLSVILLE, Ga. — Earl Lazenby had delivered mail for years to the aging brown home with a well-kept lawn and a National Rifle Association sticker on the front door. The home's owner was always friendly, sometimes chatting with Lazenby at the grocery store in this Atlanta suburb.

But what Lazenby didn't know was that William Crutchfield was deep in debt and looking for a way out. Crutchfield apparently watched with envy as Olympic bomber Eric Rudolph was headed to prison for life and aspired to the same fate — allowing him to live off the government while behind bars.

So he allegedly hatched a twisted plan: Kill a federal employee, walk down his driveway carrying a .380-caliber pistol and greet his mail carrier at the curb. He then opened fire on Lazenby, drove to the police sation in his Chevrolet Cavalier and told the secretary, "I just shot the letter carrier." "He took his mail and then said, 'Hello.' And then just started shooting," Lazenby said from his hospital bed Tuesday. "He just casually got in his car and drove away."

Lazenby was shot seven times, once in the arm and six times in the abdomen. A neighbor heard shots, came outside and called 911 as the 52-year-old grandfather lay in the grass of a nearby lawn thinking he might die.

looking for a place of their own became a successful and happy village. About three dozen women lived and ran a cultural center and camping site for tourists visiting the adjacent Samburu National Reserve. Hemingway has finished, eventually attracting so many women seeking help that they even hired men to haul firewood, traditional women's work.

The women felt empowered with the revenue from the camping site and their cultural center, where they trip to New York. They just said, "frankly, that they wanted to kill me," Loloi said, laughing because she thought the idea sounded so absurd.

Sebastian Lesnik, the chief of the male village, also laughed, describing the clear division he saw between men and women. "The man is the head," he said. "The lady is the neck. A man would let you tell it advice, from his neck."

"She's questioning our very culture," Lesnik said in an interview at a bar on a sweltering afternoon. "This seems to be the thing in these modern times. Troublemaking ladies like that."

In a mix of African women's gumption and the trickling in of influences from the outside world, a revolution of feminism has taken root in a village with some extreme levels of sexual violence, the battle against HIV/AIDS, and the aftermath of AIDS. Many of them are widows who have said they felt compelled to rise up in protest after their husbands died in 1994 slaughter of Tutsi tribal members by the Hutu majority.

"We are at the start of something for African women," said Margaret Auma Odihambo, a leader of western Kenya's largest group of women who's husbands have died of AIDS complications.

"I would like to speak out for change, her patch of the continent shows the difficulties of changing the rhythm and power structure of village life. A woman is nothing in our community," she said, referring to the members of her tribe, including the men in the village across the road.

"You aren't able to answer men or speak in front of them whether you are right or wrong," she said. "This is to change. Women have to demand rights, and then respect

Marty Peterson, who sits on two boards trying to preserve Hemingway homes in Idaho and Cuba and who helps guide the "The Hemingway Review," believes Hemingway may have been an accidental tourist. He and Hemingway clearly liked to be around her.

"Hemingway was probably smitten with her," said Peterson. "She was too much of a lady to ever have anything more than an upstanding relationship with him. But she was a great woman to look up to, and Hemingway clearly liked to be around her."

Tillie Arnold's letters in her later years often recounted her experiences with Hemingway, Nuffer said. She described his slight speech impediment—he had trouble with his "Ls"—and daily walks on the frozen roads outside Ketchum during the winter.

"Once he said she wrote that Hemingway held onto his Sun Valley friends because he felt they would respect his privacy. Sometimes he would say, 'It's our secret.' Nuffer said she trusted her with what he told her, because she would never repeat it."

meant to equalize districts' ability to pay for bond issues.

Vicki Reynolds, associate director of the Idaho Association of School Administrators, said the current equalization setup has an aspect of robbing Peter to pay Paul.

"I know we're concerned because the bond levy equalization is booming as more districts ask local voters for bond issues. At the pace I'm growing, Rep. Scott Bedke, R-Oakley, said the program will use up all the lottery funds in a few years."

Bedke said school bond issues typically last 20 years, so the full impact of bond levy equalization won't be seen until 2025. The program is already costing about $2 million more than the original projections and it will likely keep growing.

"I'm not the deputy state superintendent of school support services, said the program had seven districts in the first year and 17 in 2005. At least 25 are on bonds for fiscal 2006.

Bill Hunt estimated for 2006 fiscal year, lottery money will be $13,450,000. Of that, $4,527,500 comes from Jerome County, which has the largest percentage of bonds for bond levy equalization, leaving $8,922,500 for regular distribution to schools.

Reynolds' equalization sends high percentage payments to districts with low property values, high unemployment and lower job retention.

"Lottery money, a part of our budget since 1990, is distributed based on attendance numbers, Hill said.

Bedke said the equalization program is not fair to districts, such as Cassia County, that started bond issues to build schools without help.

"We built ours; they need to build theirs," Bedke said.

Districts that are considered property rich, such as Twin Falls, would benefit more from lottery money than from possible aid on bonds, Bedke said.

Fixing the program
 Rep. Maxine Bell, R-Jerome, said changing the minimum 10 percent bond on bond interest could make the program cost less and work better.

She said school districts don't need encouragement to pass bond issues, but the bond levy equalization probably helps.

Bedke spearheaded an effort in the Legislature last session to change the minimum amount of bond issues. The state would pay 0 percent, instead of 10 percent. He also wanted to change the source of money to the permanent building fund, which receives some lottery money. Hill passed the House, but couldn't make it through the Senate.

Bedke said he's not sure if using the permanent building fund would be a long-term solution because it, too, could be overwhelmed by the cost of bond levy equalization. Hancock said the permanent building fund has $21 million for fiscal 2006.

Nevertheless, Bedke said

Suicide bombers strike near Green Zone in Iraq

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Suicide bombers struck near the heavily fortified Green Zone on Thursday, a day after a devastating attack on Iraqi children that provoked outrage and even brought a denial of responsibility from al-Qaida in Iraq.

Iraqi and U.S. forces announced some rare successes: Capturing one suicide bomber before he could detonate his explosive belt, and arresting a key suspect in the kidnapping of an Iraqi envoy to Iraq.

The coordinated attacks by a suicide car bomber and two men strapped with explosives occurred near a police station 150 feet from the Green Zone, site of the U.S. Embassy and major Iraqi government offices.

U.S. officials said it appeared the attackers planned to detonate the car bomb first — then the two pedestrians would blow themselves up in the middle of the troops, police and rescue workers rushing to the scene.

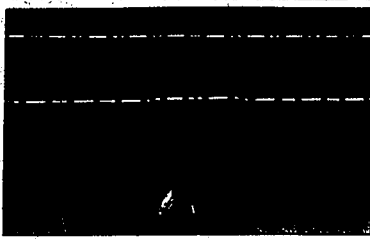

But an Iraqi policeman shot one of the bombers, setting off his explosive vest, a U.S. statement said. His colleague was wounded by shrapnel from the blast before he could detonate his own vest, the statement said.

The surviving attacker was in critical condition at a U.S. military hospital in the Green Zone, the military said. Five policemen and four civilians were also injured by the blasts and gunfire, officials at Yarmouk Hospital said.

An Internet statement in the name of al-Qaida claimed responsibility for Thursday's attacks, but the authenticity could not be confirmed.

Would-be bombers are rarely captured in Iraq. A 19-year-old Saudi was taken into custody after he somehow survived the explosion of his fuel tanker in December, a blast that killed nine people. A Yemeni was arrested in 2003 when his car bomb failed to detonate at a Baghdad police station.

There was no word on the identity of the failed bomber, but his arrest could yield valuable intelligence on the shadowy network of Islamic extremists, many of them believed to be foreigners linked to al-Qaida.

In another blow to the terror network, about 30 suspected al-Qaida members were arrested in the past week, including a key suspect in this month's killing of Egyptian envoy, Ihab al-Sherif and attacks on senior diplomats from Bahrain and Saudi Arabia, the U.S. command said.

Khamis Abdul-Fahdawi, known as Abu Seba, was captured Saturday following operations in the Ramadi area west of Baghdad, the military said. He is a suspect in the attacks against diplomats of Bahrain, Pakistan and the recent murder of Egyptian envoy al-Sherif, the U.S. statement said.

Another top suspect, Abdullah Ibrahim al-Shadad, or Abu Abdul-Aziz, was arrested during a raid Sunday in Baghdad, the statement said. It identified him as the operations officer for al-Qaida in Iraq, led by Jordanian Abu Musab al-Zarqawi. Abu Abdul-Aziz was cooperating with coalition forces, according to the U.S. command.

In an Internet statement Thursday, al-Qaida in Iraq acknowledged that Abu Abdul-Aziz had been apprehended but played down his importance.

NASA not ruling out July for launch

CAFE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — NASA said Thursday that it will not make another attempt to launch space shuttle Discovery until at least Sunday — and even that is a "highly optimistic good-luck scenario."

Deputy shuttle program manager Wayne Hale said the space agency still probably faces several days of troubleshooting to figure out what caused the faulty fuel-gauge reading that forced the cancellation of Wednesday's launch.

The only way the shuttle would be able to fly on Sunday is "if we go in and wiggle some wires and find a loose connection," said Hale, who conceded that was unlikely to work.

Wednesday's liftoff would have been the first shuttle flight in 2.5 years since the grounding of the space program after the Columbia accident. With little more than two hours to go and the astronauts on-board, the flight was canceled because a fuel gauge read full when it should have read empty.

Hale said the space agency had 12 engineering teams around the country trying to figure out why, but so far they haven't solved the problem.

"I wish I had more answers for you," he said.

He wouldn't rule out the chance of launching Discovery in July, and NASA officials have no immediate plans to move Discovery from the launch pad back to its hangar, which would require more days of delay.

NASA has until the end of the month to send the shuttle and its seven astronauts to space on their 12-day mission or it must wait until September. The launch timing is dictated by both the position of the space station and NASA's desire to hold a daylight liftoff as it can photograph the spacecraft during its climb to orbit and watch out for possible damage.

"I'm not ready to give up on a July window," Hale said. "We still have several days ahead of us."

On Wednesday, shuttle managers found themselves on the defensive, explaining why they pressed ahead with the launch when the same type of potentially fatal problem with the fuel gauges cropped up during a fueling test just three months ago and was accepted as an "unexplained anomaly."

The space agency requires all four of its hydrogen-fuel gauges to be working to ensure that the main engines shut off in space at just the right moment. If the engines shut down too soon or too late because of erroneous gauge readings, the results could be catastrophic.

Autopsy finds toddler was killed by police in shootout

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An autopsy found that a toddler whose father had just been shot died of a gunshot wound to the head, authorities said.

The 34-month-old boy was shot in the head by a police officer during a shootout with a man who was being taken to a hospital.

Police Chief William Bratton said the officer who shot the boy was not the same officer who shot the man's father.

The boy died from a single gunshot wound to the head, and his father died of multiple gunshot wounds, the reports said.

Police Chief William Bratton said his condolences to the girl's family, but adamantly maintained that Pena was responsible for his and his daughter's deaths.

Bratton said the realization that it was a police officer who actually shot the girl was "hard to take, for both himself and his officers."

"Help me, as chief of police," said for the officers involved. "It's very tough to deal with that," Bratton said.

Assistant Police Chief George Caspan added, "Some officers are going through therapy right now and I don't know if some will even come back (to work)."

A toxicological examination to determine whether Pena had drugs or alcohol in his system, will take several weeks, Harvey said.

Lita Camilo, one of the attorney's representing the girl's family, said the autopsy results did not come as any surprise.

Harvard to probe flouride flap

BOSTON (AP) — Harvard University said it is investigating whether a chemistry professor who edits a newsletter funded by a toothpaste maker played down research showing an increased cancer risk from drinking fluoridated tap water.

The school will work with the National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences to review Chester Douglas's research into fluoride exposure and osteosarcoma, a rare form of bone cancer, Harvard Medical School spokesman John Lacey said.

The institute awarded a $1.3 million study grant in 1992 to Douglas, who found that the odds of having osteosarcoma after drinking fluoridated water were "not statistically different" from the odds for who drank non-fluoridated water.

Elise Bassin, a doctoral student supervised by Douglas who studied some of the same people, reported in her 2001 thesis that boys who drank fluoridated water appear to have an increased risk of developing the bone cancer.

The Environmental Working Group, an advocacy group based in Washington, D.C., filed an ethics complaint against Douglas last month after discovering that he cited Bassin's research in his final grant report. In it, he said her work supported his claim that there was no significant risk from fluoridated water, even though Bassin had found a strong link between fluoride levels in tap water and an increased osteosarcoma risk for boys.

Collapsing building buries baby, four others

NEW YORK (AP) — Rescuers clawing through bricks pulled a 7-month-old baby and four other victims to safety Thursday after a former supermarket under demolition suddenly collapsed, sending a shower of rubble onto a Manhattan sidewalk and street.

Firefighters and police were on the scene within minutes of the collapse, which trapped the pedestrians beneath the remains of the crumbling building in upper Manhattan. Some of the victims may have been waiting at a nearby bus stop, which was crushed in the accident.

"I thought it was a terrorist bomb, people were running everywhere," said Ruznel Gayle, who was a half-block away when she heard a loud boom. "I saw them pull a baby out of the debris. Everyone was pitching in and helping, but I stood frozen in fear. I've never seen anything like this."

"The baby girl was expected to survive, and none of the pedestrians' injuries were life-threatening," said Mayor Michael Bloomberg said. One person suffered two broken arms and two broken legs. Fire Commissioner Nicholas Scoppetta said.

He said the building's front wall and roof came down, taking the surrounding scaffolding with it.

The cause of the collapse was under investigation; authorities ordered a halt to the demolition of the former Gristedes supermarket. Work began several weeks ago as the property owner cleared the way for a 31-story apartment building.

Man convicted of manslaughter in wife's death

A bee collects pollen and nectar in the Butterfly Gardens in Chillicothe, Ohio, Thursday.

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — A former pharmaceutical executive who slammed his wife's head on the concrete garage floor at their mansion was convicted Thursday on a lesser charge of manslaughter.

Jonathan Nyce, 55, had admitted the violence but argued that the death of 34-year-old Michelle Nyce was accidental.

His lawyer said the two scuffled at their $1.6 million home outside Trenton as she returned home from a trest with her lover, a Guatemalan immigrant who had once landscaped the couple's property.

Nyce was also convicted of tampering with evidence because he stuffed his wife's body into her Toyota Land Cruiser and drove it into a half-frozen creek to try to make her death look like an accident.

The passion-provocation manslaughter verdict carries a sentence of five to 10 years in prison. Tampering with evidence carries a three- to five-year term. Sentencing was set for Sept. 9.

Vermont killer gets death penalty

BURLINGTON, Vt. (AP) — A man who kidnapped a supermarket worker and fatally beat her as she prayed for her life was sentenced to death Thursday by a federal jury in Vermont's first capital punishment case in almost a half century.

The jury took only about 10 hours to decide that 25-year-old Donald Fell should be executed. "We'll be there in the front row," promised Lori Hubbard, a daughter of victim Terry King.

Fell was found guilty June 24 of kidnapping the 53-year-old King as she arrived for work in Rutland, taking her to New York state and bludgeoning her to death during an alcohol and drug-induced stupor.

The abduction came as Fell and his accomplice fled after fatally stabbing Fell's mother and a friend of hers.

Administrative cuts make valid sense for T.F. district

As if running the district wasn't enough, Twin Falls School District Superintendent Wiley Dobbs will add a few more duties to his job this year including oversight for food service, transportation and safety.

If your student complains about the low-fat pizza you know what to do. All kidding aside, the district's decision to restructure its administrative duties and not fill the director of operations position amounts to a sound fiscal response in the face of budget shortages.

and subcontractors.

- Brent Gies, director of data analysis and program improvement, will work with federal programs, technology and elementary principals.
- Curriculum Director LaVonne Peterson also will work with federal programs, secondary principals and alternative education programs.
- A secretary position will switch from data analysis to the fiscal affairs department to help work with budgeting, budgets for federal programs and transportation and to be a liaison with the schools.

Our view: Twin Falls

School District wisely starts at the top to save money for next year's budget shortfall.

What do you think?

We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

The Twin Falls School Board in its last board meeting opted to save almost $300,000 in the 2005-06 fiscal year budget with cuts in tutoring programs and leaving vacancies for two positions. One is a teaching position, the other is the director of operations post left open when Miller left the district for the College of Southern Idaho.

The operations director may be just one position, but it will have a significant impact on most of the administration for Twin Falls.

- Dobbs will oversee matters of food service, facilities, counselors, transportation, safety, recycling, wellness for federal programs and transportation and to be a liaison with the schools.

Those shifts in administrative tasks make sense by doing what most operations would do in the private sector. And the district has done so before in the past by combining its human resources and public relations positions, as well as other positions at the administrative level.

The $1.6 million shortfall in the coming year's $46 million budget will continue to require careful planning and additional savings from the district.

But when budgets are tight, it's appropriate for school districts to cinch the belt. When it happens at the highest levels of administration, it's even more encouraging.

Ready to romp in Washington

It's a civil war in Washington. The combatants have an eye-for-an-eye mentality. The battlefield is heated and nasty.

Republicans versus Democrats' Nah. This one pits the media against the White House.

MICHAEL GOODWIN

It's a war the media can't win, and shouldn't wage. The intense grilling that White House reporters inflicted on presidential spokesman Scott McClellan on Monday over whether political guru Karl Rove leaked the name of a CIA operative was no ordinary give-and-take. It was a hostile hectoring that revealed much of the mainstream press for what it has become: the opposition party.

Forget fairness, or even the pretense of it. With one of its own locked up — Judith Miller of The New York Times — much of the Beltway gang has declared war on the White House.

Reporters apparently have decided to become spokesmen to the job. Can't blame them. With Dems reduced to Clinton Jewels and Hillary Cloward Jewels, virtually every study that looks at Mad magazine's Alfred E. Neuman, somebody has to offer a substantive alternative. The press has become the opposition.

The mainstream media are basically liberals with press passes has been documented on several occasions. It measures reporters' political identification and issue positions. But bias has now slipped over into blatant opposition, a stance the media will regret. Instead of providing unvarnished facts obtained by aggressive but ill-minded reporting, the media will be reduced to providing comfort food to ideological comrades.

Already held in lower esteem by the public than lawyers and Congress, the press risks looking like a special interest group. Its claims to represent "the American people," as one McClellan inquirer did, are easily ignored when it serves as an echo chamber for the anti-Bush.

Indeed, as soon as Monday's bash-by press session ended, Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass, called on Rove to resign. If everybody resigned when Kerry demanded it, Washington would be empty.

In fairness, the media have many reasons to feel frustrated. The Bush White House has not only restricted information, but has aggressively moved against traditional press privileges. In the past year, about 25 reporters have been subpoenaed or questioned in courts about their sources. According to the Newspaper Association of America, the most famous case has seen The Times' Miller sent to prison for up to four months after she refused to disclose who in the government talked to her about CIA agent Valerie Plame.

Federal prosecutors are probing whether a crime was committed by someone who blew Plame's secret status. Rove has canceled as the latest press assignee. His lawyer denies any wrongdoing.

Miller — a former colleague of mine — has taken her punishment with grace. Her husband, book editor Jason Epstein, told Editor & Publisher magazine, "She was quite prepared to take the consequences and the judge had no choice, she understood that." Epstein said Miller believed she had to protect her source, even if that meant jail.

"I don't see how it could have been avoided because the law is the law," he said. "She exhausted her appeals and had no place left to go."

What a refreshing, hopeful point of view. Here's hoping it spreads. Then the press can get back to reporting on the president instead of fighting him.

The revolt of Israeli political center

Gush Katif, the Israeli settlement bloc on the heart of the Gaza Strip, is an unusual place — a bizarre combination of "Fiddler on the Roof" and Club Med, barbed wire and big budgets, surfers and settlers, all surrounded by more than 1 million Palestinians. In the last year, though, the heart of the Israeli center, the most important political force in the Arab-Israeli conflict today, concluded that this Jewish outpost was a bridge too far, and the Army has been ordered to uproot its settlers as part of a general withdrawal from Gaza.

What is playing out in Israel today is a huge drama in which this insurgent Israeli center, having awakened to just what a danger the extremist settlers pose for Israel's future, is finally confronting them. And the settlers, like long-indulged children who are finally being spanked, are becoming unhinged. This is a dangerous time because the settlers, who do not really respect the authority of the Israeli state, will try anything.

When I was in Israel two weeks ago, a group of teenage settlers, inspired by a witches' brew of Jewish fascism and messianism, took over an abandoned Arab home next to Gush Katif and scrawled on the side in Hebrew "Muhammad is a Pig." When the Palestinians next door saw it, they began stoning the house. Some settler boys got hold of a Palestinian teenager and started pounding him with rocks, an act the Israeli army described as an attempted "lynching." The boy was saved by an Israeli soldier and a journalist who dragged him behind a wall.

Why did they write "Muhammad is a Pig"? The explanation starts with the reemergence of this Israeli center.

The Israel left was blown apart by Yasser Arafat's rejection of the peace deal at Camp David. The Israeli right was blown apart by the four years of Palestinian uprisings, which made it clear that Israel could not indefinitely occupy the West Bank and Gaza without losing its Jewish majority and democratic character. The collapse of the Israel left and right has created the New Israeli Center.

The New Israeli Center wants to simply disengage from as many Palestinians as possible, keep only those Jewish settlements adjacent to Jerusalem and Tel Aviv, and wait for a new Palestinian leadership to emerge.

But the New Israeli Center needed a leader who had the legitimacy and toughness to pull this off. It turned out to be Ariel Sharon, the man who led the settlement movement in the first place but has now concluded that Israel must get rid of Gaza to retain its Jewish character.

Sharon's transformation has shocked the settlers, and many have vowed to disobey.

The settlers believe that such a move would be a betrayal of Israel, not the State of Israel, said Moshe Halberstam, a philosopher at the Hartman Institute and the Hebrew University. "They insist that the state is not sovereign when it comes to the Land of Israel. This struggle is the Land of Israel versus the State of Israel" — and the state is winning.

That is why those settler kids wrote "Muhammad is a Pig" on that Arab home. They want to trigger a religious war between Muslims and Jews — a war that would force all Israelis to stand with the settlers and abort the evacuation. So far, it has not worked. The Israeli army immediately erased "Muhammad is a Pig," and Lital arrested the boys who led the stoning.

This Gaza withdrawal is the revolt of the Israeli majority against being taken hostage by the minority of the settler majority," said the Israeli writer Avi Shavit. "And that is why these settlers go berserk — because they have gotten so used to controlling our destiny, no matter who was in power. Now, for the first time, there is a clear message: "Enough is enough."

In this sense, Shavit added, there is something heroic about what the Israeli center is doing: "It is disengaging from Gaza by a minority — without even knowing where exactly it is going next." This assertion by the vital center in Israeli society is a sign of "something really healthy," Shavit concluded, "but it is a real battle," and the forces of "evil" are "trying to get support from the outside world."

Indeed, the struggle in Israel today is a microcosm of what needs to happen in this whole region.

Sharon described the settler youths who wrote "Muhammad is a Pig" as "extremist mad dogs who are trying to terrorize Israeli society and tear it to pieces through violence against Jews and Arabs, and offending Muslims and violating the symbols by thuggery and disobedience."

It's time the Arab-Muslim world talked to its Islamic fascists, suicide "martyrs" and hate-spewing preachers the same way.

Concerns remain on Gooding school spending

Since April, we've requested media coverage regarding concerns with decisions in the Gooding School District. Conversations with other Gooding residents reinforce our realization that most of Gooding is unaware of the Sports Annex, the imposed tax levy, the high "withdrawal" rate of GFIS students, and 49 percent teacher turnover in past years. Our taxpayers need to be aware of these issues in order to determine if they are concerned as well.

Unfortunately, when an article is finally published about these issues, readers learned more about how the district office felt than about the concerns of the patrons. The public remains uninformed.

One example we are unable to determine the justification of the construction of the Sports Annex. We are fully aware of input to the school district and the decision to build a Sports Annex was not in the best interest of the school district when the elementary and middle school were in need of additional classrooms. The district decided to build it anyway.

We don't understand how the school district could justify spending $437,000 to build this structure at the same time it imposes a $160,000 levy to assist with an anticipated increase in kindergarten enrollment. Both occurred in the fall of 2003. Board members were subcontractors on this project, but we are unable to determine if this was volunteer or paid — or if procedures were followed legally. Similar examples of questionable decisions and practices compound our concerns.

The district now claims an obligation to the taxpayers to be compensated for our requests. They have spent hundreds of thousands of taxpayer dollars for pet projects and certain employees. All we seek is documentation to clarify past decisions and financial expenditures. We've already paid for their decisions — do we have to pay again to seek accountability?

"Fulfillment of the expectations of a thorough system of public schools will continue to depend upon the vigilance of district patrons, and the dedication of school trustees and educators, the responsiveness of state rules, and meaningful oversight by the Legislature."

Our schools and our children's education depend on the vigilance of its patrons. Synonyms for "vigilant" include watchful, attentive, alert, wary, cautious, observant, aware. An antonym for "vigilant" is "oblivious." We no longer wish to be "oblivious." We have a right to ask questions and expect accountability for their decisions.

For more information about our concerns, see <http://home.earthlink.net/~diannarowe/pauls>

Keep your wits on Sempra arguments

Now I get it I've been conflicted lately reading the op-ed pieces on Sempra.

I've recently applied the public involvement on this important issue for the region. Personally, I welcome the prospect of a company diversifying an area by bringing the employment and tax base of Jerome County. But as a resident of the Magic Valley, I certainly would not open the gates to the valley without a strenuous critique of Sempra and its plans, which is why I enjoy the public response to the issue.

On the other hand, I was beginning to think that many of the letters I have been reading are the offspring of somebody's bad joke: the crops, animals, ever fish of the region will be polluted beyond economic reversal; clouds of black soot will cover the Magic and Wood River valleys; Come on guys! Get real. Now I get it! Sempra flat says it. People are closing their minds on this issue. What will that accomplish? I believe that the majority of the great people of this great valley will not buy into the close-minded rhetoric. We didn't buy into it when the left took us only the Yale paleontologist called. In fact of John Kerry could lead this country. Don't buy the hyperbole and demagoguery here either.

If you have an open mind, continue to hold Sempra to the fire. It needs to prove itself to the people of this valley. Do more, though! Start to speak up! Let's show the millions of whoever that bad joke teller is that the Magic Valley is populated by open-minded, thoughtfully critical citizens.

Last year a German teenager named Sven Jaschan released the Sasser worm, one of the costliest acts of sabotage in the history of the Internet. It crippled computers around the world, closing businesses, halting trains and grounding airplanes.

JOHN TIERNEY

Steven Landsburg's cost-benefit analysis showing that the spreaders of computer viruses and worms are more logical candidates for capital punishment than murderers are.

Landsburg, an economist at the University of Rochester, has calculated the relative value to society of executing murderers and hackers. By using studies estimating the deterrent value of capital punishment, he figures that executing one murderer yields at most $100 million in social benefits.

The benefits of executing a hacker would be greater, he argues, because the social costs of hacking are estimated to be so much higher: $50 billion per year. He says that one-fifth of 1 percent of that crime—one in 500 hackers—would save society $100 million. And Landsburg believes that a hacker more than one hacker in 500 would be deterred by the sight of a colleague on death row.

I see his logic, but I also see practical difficulties. For one thing, many hackers live in places where capital punishment is illegal. For another, most of them are teenage boys, a group that has never been known for fearing death. They're probably more afraid of going live years without computer games.

So that leaves us with E: something worse than death. Something that would approximate the millions of hours of tedium that hackers have inflicted on society.

Hackers are the Internet equivalent of Richard Reid, the shoe-bomber who didn't manage to hurt anyone on his airplane but has been annoying travelers ever since. When I join the line of passengers taking off their shoes at the airport, I get little satisfaction in thinking that the man responsible for this ritual is sitting somewhere by himself in a prison cell, probably with his shoes on.

He ought to spend his days within smelling range of all those socks at the airport. In an exclusive poll I once conducted among fellow passengers, I found that 80 percent favored forcing Reid to sit next to the metal detector, helping small children put their sneakers back on.

The remaining 20 percent in the poll (meaning one guy) said that wasn't harsh enough. He advocated requiring Reid to change the Ode-Eaters Insoles of runners at the end of the New York City Marathon.

What would be the equivalent public service for Internet sociopaths? Maybe convicted spammers could be sentenced to community service testing all their own wares. The number of organ-enlargement offers would decline if a spammer were thought he'd have to appear in a public-service television commercial explaining that he'd tried them all and they just didn't work for him.

Convicted hackers like Jaschan could be sentenced to a lifetime of removing worms and viruses, but the computer experts I consulted said there would be too big a risk that the hacker would enjoy the job. After all, Jaschan is now doing just that for a software security firm.

The experts weren't sure that any punishment could fit the crime, but they had several suggestions: Make him spend 16 hours a day fielding help-desk inquiries in an AOL chat room for computer novices. Force him to do this with a user name at least as uncool as KoolDude and to work on a vintage IBM PC with a 2400-baud dial-up connection. Most painful of all for any geek, make him use Windows 95 for the rest of his life.

I realize that this may not be enough. If you have any better ideas, send them along.

Note to readers:

Thursday's John Tierney column was mistakenly run from a previous date. The following is the latest version from the New York Times columnist.

Which of these punishments does he deserve?

- A) A 21-month suspended sentence and 30 hours of community service.
  - B) Two years in prison.
  - C) A five-year ban on using computers.
  - D) Death.
  - E) Something worse.
- If you answered A, you must be the German judge who gave Jaschan that sentence last week.
- If you answered B or C, you're confusing him with other hackers who have been sent to prison and banned from using computers or the Internet. But those punishments don't seem to have deterred hackers like Jaschan from taking their place.
- I'm tempted to say that the correct answer is D, and not because of the many years I've spent running virus scans and reformatting hard drives. I'm almost convinced by

Act to stop government's plutonium party

Time is running out to learn about this deadly plutonium-238 chapter. No time to think is the politicians' game, but this is no game.

How much plutonium-238 do doctors recommend for pregnant women? Obviously the answer is zero. So why have our politicians volunteered Idaho to cluster all plutonium-238 dirty work venting a smile?

The government admits this clustering is a terrorist target. We are just less important than other states, and our politicians are easier to buy. There are no 24 hour anti-aircraft weapons on standby to protect our nuclear site from terrorists now, and there won't be any with this incredibly deadly cluster.

While they never had a terrorist strike in New Mexico, the officials reports found "excess plutonium in the autopsies of citizens who never worked at the facility." According to the whitewashed lies in Idaho's so-called Environmental Impact Statement, that never happens.

Two recent plutonium-238 accidents has happened in New Mexico, despite the "rules safety measures" we are told will make us "safe." The people of New Mexico fought back, and now we are going to suffer. We need to fight back, too! Come to the hearings and say "No!" July 28 at the Red Lion Hotel Downtowners in Boise at 7 p.m.

God did not create us with plutonium in our bodies. Stop the politicians before your children forever bear the radioactive body burden of their nuclear-fueled lust.

Bookstores host Potter parties

TWIN FALLS — The wait is nearly over for Harry Potter enthusiasts eager to read the series' sixth installment.

"Harry Potter and the Half-Blood Prince" goes on sale one hour after midnight. It's an excuse to celebrate at two Twin Falls bookstores.

Barnes & Noble Bookellers is having a party tonight from 9 p.m. to midnight with games, trivia contests and prize drawings.

Star Manager Bob Edwards said the store can play one of the series' books on tape at about 11 p.m. Edwards said the store received a shipment of about 200 books, plus about 300 reserved copies.

Firefighters snuff blaze that threatened homes

MOUNTAIN HOME — A fire Wednesday threatened five homes in Mountain Home and burned nearly 300 acres before being controlled by the Mountain Home Rural Fire Department and crews from the Bureau of Land Management.

The blaze started at about 5 p.m. and was aided by strong winds and high temperatures.

Crews finally contained the S-Curve Fire, was called, at about 11 p.m.

WORKING A LITTLE MAGIC
Volunteer groups mobilize to paint homes for elderly

By Julie Pence
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — Norm Wright has taken at least one week of his past 10 summers to help paint a house for some of the Magic Valley elderly who are on fixed incomes.

As captain of his First Federal Savings Bank team, Wright corals about 15 other bank employees, and they slip the paint on a house that has had prior approval by the board of directors for Paint Magic.

"It's not the greatest meeting guy, but this is something I can go on and do. I don't care if it's hot. It's something I enjoy," Wright said. "It also gives me a chance to get to know people I work with all day at the bank."

Paint Magic is a volunteer organization that was started in 1988 primarily to spruce up homes for the elderly who have limited incomes. The first year 20 senior citizens got their houses painted. Since then thousands of volunteers have spruced up 404 houses.

Last year Wright said his crew was assigned an extra house that took him into an extra week of brushing paint. This year the house that the First Federal team is working on is a little smaller.

It belongs to Shelton and Pauline Ellis. They had applied six times before their house was selected.

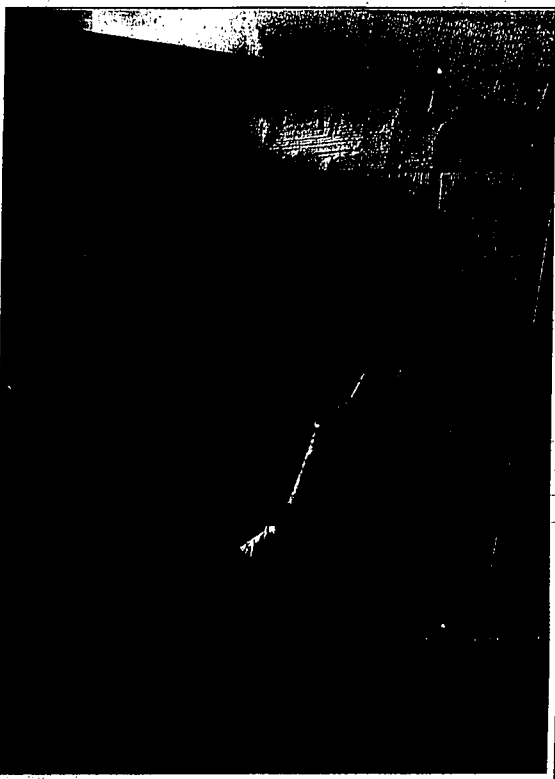

Shelton is a World War II vet, so we've been talking about that," Wright said.

After finishing the paint job, the First Federal group also repaired the roof, gutters, and windows.

"I want to make it look like I should want my own house to look," Wright said.

Fellow First Federal team member Shawna Struffler said she keeps coming back each year to participate because "it makes me feel good. I know I'm doing something good for someone else. People are so appreciative when you do it for them."

Greg Taylor, who is a Times-News employee and the vice president of the Paint Magic board, said he's taking a look at establishing a chapter in the Mini-Cassia area for next year. There were probably a dozen houses from Minidoka and Cassia counties that would have qualified if there had been people to paint them, Taylor said.

Denise Smith, a First Federal Savings Bank team member, paints a home in Twin Falls on Tuesday as part of Paint Magic. First Federal has volunteered with the Paint Magic program for the past 10 years.

Collection agency goes after Wendell mayor

City official says fees for surgery were waived

By Heather Pilkinton
Times-News correspondent

WENDELL — Mayor Paul Isaacson is facing a civil lawsuit over what he calls a big mismanagement.

The lawsuit stems from contract surgeries Isaacson underwent in June and July of last year. He said he had been given nearly blind prior to the surgeries.

"I would be sitting in city council meetings and not being able to see who was sitting next to me," he said. "I would have to hear the voice before I would know who the person was."

Isaacson said he had approached Dr. William Fitzhugh about having the surgeries done. However, his income was limited.

Fitzhugh would waive the rest of the fees, Isaacson said. He explained that Fitzhugh wanted to use a new type of lens called Chrysalin, which is a soft lens that utilizes the eye muscles for movement.

In a recent interview, Fitzhugh said the information Isaacson had given was inaccurate. Due to privacy laws, Fitzhugh said he was unable to comment any further unless Isaacson signed a release form.

Isaacson said the agreement he had with Fitzhugh was that his surgeries would be used to advertise the new lens.

"I do have the mayor of a town receive the new type of lenses was good publicity," he said. "He then said, however, that after the surgeries were done, he began receiving bills for the services at St. Benedict's."

Murtaugh looks at new well to boost pressure

By Julie Pence
Times-News correspondent

MURTAUGH — Summer for city folks in Murtaugh is often meant low water pressure for flushing toilets and sprinkling lawns.

The low pressure comes from everyone running water at the same time," Mayor Carl Murtaugh said.

But that's about to change. By next summer a new well should be on line. It will be capable of delivering more than five times as much water at one time than the well on which people rely now.

"It's going to be a good option," Melugin said. It hasn't been easy getting that new well. Three years ago city and state officials put together grant and loan money of about $710,000 and began drilling. But after capturing only a trickle of warm water at an 80-foot depth, they were forced to look for more money and another site.

Now officials for the town of about 200 people are waiting to see if cost estimates to complete the well are within budget, said community development consultant Susan Riddle.

City water users are obligated to pay about $110,000 of the $910,000 project over the next three years.

Finding the new underground stream might have happened just in time. A recent test for arsenic in the old well turned out to be over the new limit the Environmental Protection Agency has set for 2006.

The old limit is 50 parts per billion, but it's about to be lowered to 10 ppb. A test within the past two years showed an arsenic level of 12 ppb, said Chad Chorney, who's in charge of monitoring arsenic in drinking water for south-central Idaho.

A consistent reading above 10 ppb could mean hundreds of thousands of dollars to filter out the poisonous element, as several Magic Valley cities and counties with community wells are discovering. EPA scientists have determined high levels of arsenic in drinking water cause kidney and liver cancer as well as damage to the nervous system.

Cake awaits Burley

Week's worth of centennial events culminate Saturday

By Terry Smith
Times-News correspondent

BURLEY — Dedication of Centennial Park will be delayed until August, but other party events continue unabated as Burley residents celebrate the city's 100th year.

A highlight Saturday will be the police escort of 90 square feet of birthday cake from Smith Food and Drug Center on Main Street to Storybook Park. Music, dancing, wagon rides, games, cake and ice cream and a Harry Potter party will wrap up the city's week-long celebration.

It's been a busy week. Events have included go-cart races, a barbecue, a sourdough pancake breakfast, a tour of historic buildings, vintage car rides, a "roaring 20s" night, a "big band" dance and more.

A highlight Tuesday was a quilt show at the Leo Hotel, a former house of ill repute infamous for other undercover activities.

Hundred-year birthday parties don't happen very often, explained Bev Stone, of the Burley Centennial Committee.

The birthday cake, being prepared at Smith's bakery, will measure 8-by-10 feet. Stone said. It will be hauled by flatbed trailer, complete with police escort to Storybook Park starting just after 4:30 p.m. Saturday.

Originally planned also for Saturday, the dedication of Centennial Park is delayed until the park is finished in August.

"We're OK with that. We just want to move forward and not rush it," Stone said.

"We'll have a special evening when it's finished for all that contributed and volunteered. I've been just absolutely ecstatic with everyone's help," she said.

Community Development Director Brian Tibbets said construction of the park is running about a month behind schedule.

"With this being built 100 percent by volunteer labor we're just trying to get everything completed together. But we're moving forward to get it done," Tibbets said.

Remaining tasks include pouring sidewalks and pads, erecting a wrought iron fence, landscaping, laying sod, connecting the fountain and planting an archway, a gazebo and the new "irrigator" statue.

The "irrigator" was designed by local artist Robert Carey. The completed 7-foot high bronze statue, made at the Adonis Bronze Foundry in Alpine, Calif., should be delivered today, Tibbets said.

Centennial Park is located near Burley City Hall east of Overland Avenue and south of 14th Street.

Tibbets said nearly $72,000 has been raised so far but another $2,500 is needed to finish the project.

He and Stone are confident the money can be raised.

Centennial events continue

- Today: 7:00 and 9:00 Night 7 p.m. — Concert and sock hop at Storybook Park
8:20 p.m. — Harry Potter party at Burley Public Library Saturday
11 a.m. to 5 p.m. — Games and wagon rides at Storybook Park
1 p.m. — Homemade Ice Cream contest at Storybook Park
4:30 to 5 p.m. — Mini-para-de of birthday cake down Main Street from Smith Food and Drug Center to Storybook Park
7 to 10 p.m. — "Colors" rock and roll concert at Storybook Park

Donations for Centennial Park can be made by calling Community Development Director Brian Tibbets at 678-2224.

Ex-HP workers eligible for more funds

BOISE (AP) — About 350 Hewlett-Packard Co. employees in Boise who quit voluntarily in May in exchange for up to 14 months in pay are eligible for more money from the U.S. Department of Labor to help them get a new job.

The federal agency issued a National Emergency Grant worth $866,000 — enough to pay education and job search costs for about 200 workers.

The grant will provide high-tech industry occupational skills training for workers in Idaho, Ada, Canyon, Elmore and Gem counties. U.S. Labor Secretary Elaine Chao said in a statement.

Police remove child-biting dog from K-9 unit

MERIDIAN (AP) — An Ada County sheriff's police dog is being booted from the K-9 unit after attacking a 13-year-old boy and biting his face, neck and shoulder in this Boise suburb June 29.

Duce, a 4-year-old Belgian Malinois, has been quarantined since the mauling, will probably be sold to another law enforcement agency or traded for another dog, Sheriff Gary Ramey said.

The dog's handler, a sheriff's deputy, will face unspecified disciplinary action after the dog escaped from his yard and knocked Jacob Yoneda from his bicycle in a Meridian residential neighborhood.

Evalin Mary Felton Korsen

PAUL — Evalin Mary Felton Korsen, an 88-year-old Paul resident, passed away July 13, 2005, at Highland Estates in Burley.

Also assisted The American Red Cross in the blood drives. Evalin is survived by four children, David (Sondra) Korsen of Mesquite, Nev., Dan (Linda) Korsen of Paul, Bill (Carmen) Korsen of Gooding and Beth (Greg) Williams of Paul; 14 grandchildren, 24 great-grandchildren, and one great-great-grandchild; five sisters, Pat (Bill) Pettigall, Lou (Don) Greenwell, Margu Brannen, Barbara (Allen) Draper and Beverly Morgan.

Doris Arlene Liggett

HORSESHOE BEND — Doris Arlene Liggett passed away peacefully at home on July 12, 2005, after a short battle with cancer. She embraced her Holy Father with love and spirituality, strength and readiness. She lived her life by the Golden Rule and is "home" at last.

decided to settle down and with their young daughter Ardis Arlene, moved to Idaho field, Idaho. They built the Pheasant Club Cafe and Motel with a rodeo arena in the back, with their own hands and put-on Jackpot Rodeos on the weekends. They had two daughters born to them while they were there, Billie Lee and Dee De Lorraine.

She had the tourist trade but was most proud of the fact that it was the working man's restaurant. She never hesitated to open in the middle of the night for the loggers that wanted to get an early start or the fire crews that came through the summers. She would often stay up all night making sack lunches for various groups.

A funeral will be conducted at 11 a.m. Monday, July 18, 2005, at the Layton Chapel in Horseshoe Bend, Idaho. Burial will follow in the Pioneer Cemetery. Arrangements are with the Potter Funeral Chapel in Emmett.

After 20 years of marriage in 1956 Doris left Richfield taking her two younger daughters with her. Andie was in college at that time. Doris stayed with her younger sister Lilly and Tom case and family for a short time in Wilder, Idaho. She then bought a grocery store in Parma, which she later sold.

In 1973 Doris moved back to Horseshoe Bend. She tended bar at the Long Branch for many years before retiring in 1985. Doris loved fun and loved to dance and appreciated her many friends. She enjoyed gardening in her small garden and loved her flowers.

"Doris" education was very important to her so she stayed in boarding houses in Idaho and worked for her board and room and walked five miles to and from the high school to receive her high school diploma. In 1936, Doris' first love, William "Bud" Swan rode the rails out from South Dakota and they were married on Nov. 14, 1936. They spent a few years wrangling horses on the Owyhees and following the lettuce "he" loading freight and "he" packing down through California, Arizona and New Mexico. Bud supplemented their income with a few years here and there and after a knife fight in Old Mexico they

She went to college in Caldwell for a couple of years and then married Doyle Brooks. They were married for less than two years. She then bought a ranch in Horseshoe Bend, Idaho.

In lieu of flowers, donations can be made to the American Legion Auxiliary of Horseshoe Bend.

Fern 'Buff' Ambrose

Fern 'Buff' Ambrose, 98, of Jerome, died Saturday, July 9, 2005, at her home.

In Horseshoe Bend she and her retirement ran the ranch by themselves. They ran cattle, horses and did all the haying and grain themselves. Doris worked hard on the ranch and on top of that worked various times at the Saw Mill, Quinsels Store and the Ponderosa in Banks. She was also president of the IZA. She was briefly married to Herb Liggett for four months.

Doris is survived by her daughter, Dee Dee Lorraine Gomez; brother, Wallace "Wally" Steiner; sister, Lilly Case; brother, Harold "Buddy" and wife, Jean Steiner; six grandchildren, 11 great-grandchildren, one great-great-grandson and many nieces and nephews who loved her dearly.

On Dec. 1, 1925, she married her sweetheart, Fines Ambrose, in Jerome and they farmed northwest of town until the beginning of World War II. They then moved to Survivors include her daughter, Arlene DeMars of Jerome, and a son, Tommy Ambrose of Idaho Falls.

Fern was preceded in death by her husband in 2001 and a daughter, Rosemary. A memorial service will be conducted at 2 p.m. Saturday, July 16, 2005, at the First Presbyterian Church with the Rev. water system — said preliminary tests are turning up well below the 10 ppb.

Murtaugh is also going through the process to renew its wellhead protection plan. The plan ensures that the aquifer from which city residents get their water is reasonably protected from contamination, said John Baker of the Idaho Department of Environmental Quality.

The plan maps out an area that includes the city as well as an area extending about two miles south of town where the aquifer flows toward the city well. No new landfills, hazardous waste sites or injection wells are to be located there.

Appeals court overturns ban on Canadian cattle imports

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A federal appeals court on Thursday overturned the ban on imports of Canadian cattle, despite a lower court's ruling that renewing the imports could spread mad cow disease in the United States.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture was not immediately available to comment on when it would lower restrictions on imports of Canadian cattle, which were banned in May 2003 after a cow in Alberta was found to have mad cow disease.

The unanimous decision by a three-judge panel of the 9th

U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals overturned a Montana judge who blocked the USDA from reopening the border in March, saying it "subjects the entire U.S. beef industry to potentially catastrophic damages" and "presents a genuine risk of death for U.S. consumers."

The judges said they would issue another ruling soon explaining their rationale.

The decision came a day after the Justice Department urged the appeals court in Seattle to reopen the border to imports. Justice Department attorney Mark Stern said lifting the ban is based on "good science" and would not result in the "infestation in American livestock."

During the hearing, the three judges suggested that the U.S. District Judge Richard E. Cebul perhaps should have given deference to the USDA's decision.

Judge A. Wallace Tashima said the law "goes invest the secretary of agriculture with a certain amount of discretion," Judge Connie Callahan agreed, saying the USDA is "entitled to some deference. It's their whole job to keep up with the science to make those decisions."

Memorial service set for Groene

By Nicholas K. Geranos
Associated Press writer

COEUR D'ALENE — A memorial service for little Dylan Groene, whose remains were found in western Montana seven weeks after he was abducted from his home in Coeur d'Alene, is scheduled Saturday, his family said Thursday.

Dylan would have turned 10 on Thursday.

The boy and his sister Shasta, 8, were abducted on May 16 after three members of the household were sludge-gunned.

Shasta was recognized by customers and staff at a Denny's restaurant here on July 2 and the man with her was arrested.

That man, Joseph Edward Duncan III, 42, a registered sex-offender, has been charged with the counts of murder and three counts of kidnapping in the deaths at the family's rural home. Duncan was scheduled for another court hearing Friday, this time to face charges of being a fugitive from a child molestation count filed in Minnesota.

Duncan has been held without bail since his arrest.

The Fargo, N.D., resident was released on $15,000 bail earlier this year after being charged with molesting a 6-year-old boy in Minnesota. Police in Fargo had been looking for Duncan since March when he failed to check in with a probation agent.

Also Thursday, The Pacific Northwest Inlander, a free weekly based in Spokane, Wash., reported that law enforcement officers recovered a video camcorder from Duncan's vehicle that contained footage of him and his children and threatening to kill the two children during their captivity in western Montana.

The newspaper cited unidentified sources for the information. The FBI and Kootenai County sheriff's office declined to comment on the report Thursday. County Sheriff Rocky Watson said previously he believes the motive for the attack on the family was to acquire the two young children for sex.

Public defender John Adams said Thursday he has not yet received any information from law enforcement officers on what was found in the Jeep, and is upset by rumors involving his client.

"The vast majority of people want trial by rule of law in courtrooms," Adams said, not "trial by press and anonymous sources."

In Idaho, Duncan faces three counts of first-degree murder and three counts of first-degree kidnapping in the slaying of Brenda Groene, 40, her 13-year-old son Slade and her 37-year-old boyfriend Mark McKenzie. Federal prosecutors have said they will bring federal kidnapping and murder charges against him in the abduction of Shasta and Dylan Groene, and the slaying of Dylan. On Wednesday, Steve Groene, father of the children, asked a judge to allow 18-year-old Steve Groene one fall to attend Saturday's memorial service. First District Judge John Mitchell granted the request.

Woman pleads guilty in scalping incident

BOISE (AP) — An Idaho woman blamed mental illness and substance abuse as she pleaded guilty to scalping a teenage girl, saying she only intended to give her a haircut.

Marianne Dahle, 26, of Caldwell, pleaded guilty to a charge of aggravated battery before 4th District Judge Kathryn Siedken on Wednesday, the day her trial was to begin. Sentencing has not yet been set, and Dahle could face up to 15 years in prison.

Prosecutors said Dahle lied up a 15-year-old Nampa girl — who has been identified publicly only by the first name of Sheila. On Jan. 18 and used a 4-inch knife to cut away the entire crown and back portion of her scalp. The attack happened at Kirkham Hot Springs, 70 miles northeast of Boise, where Dahle had invited Sheila and a 16-year-old female acquaintance to soak in the pools of warm water and party.

Investigators said they believe Dahle and Sheila were part of a clique of young female "punks" who were mohawk haircuts.

Woman cited for leaving infant in van unattended

WEST VALLEY CITY, Utah (AP) — A woman has been cited for leaving her infant boy in a van with the windows just slightly rolled down for at least a half-hour while she shopped.

Police were called after 1 p.m. Wednesday to a Wal-Mart in West Valley City when a man noticed the infant in a car seat.

The door was unlocked and the man took the 3- to 4-month-old child from the van and into the store, police Officer Jeff Conger said.

The man had left the officer by the time officers had arrived.

The infant was lethargic for about a half-hour as employees applied damp towels to the boy's body and called paramedics, Conger said.

By the time the baby was taken to a hospital, he was responsive and apparently doing well, he said.

The mother told police she went inside the store to meet her sister, and apparently forgot about her child and continued shopping, Conger said.

The mother, whose name was not released, was cited with misdemeanor child neglect.

Police: Meth found in baby crib

COCALILLA (AP) — A north Idaho woman has been arrested for investigation of drug possession and injury to a child after Bonner County sheriff's deputies allegedly found more than a gram of methamphetamine in her baby's crib.

Stacy Jane Blewins, 28, was booked into Bonner County Jail on Tuesday and charged in 1st District Court.

According to court records, deputies were scrutinizing living conditions at Blewins' home on July 11 with a state Health & Welfare worker who had previously reported possible use of the illegal stimulant as well as child abandonment and physical abuse of two children, a 7-month-old child and an 11-year-old.

Mom is tired of bearing brunt of daughter's anger

DEAR ABBY: My beautiful, intelligent 18-year-old daughter, "Lara," has just completed her first year of college. She's attending school out of state in the same city where her father, "Grant" — my ex — is living.

Abby Grant left when Lara was 5 months old. He left us for his sister, with whom he had been having an affair, because she told him she was pregnant with his child. The divorce was very hard on us, and my daughter has been in counseling for years — including at the college. Lara spends her holidays with her father, her aunt and their two children. She's aware of the incestuous relationship and vents a lot of anger at me for the rough time we've had. In the past, Lara's therapists have told me she directs her anger at me because "she can't get angry at the person she should really be angry at — her father." My daughter refuses to tell her current therapist about the incestuous relationship because she's afraid it will be reported to the authorities and the children will be taken away. The sister bought Lara a car and a cell phone, and pays the phone bill, car insurance and some of Lara's other expenses. I suspect the thought of losing the car and cell phone have something to do with my daughter's hesitation to level with her therapist.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

How can I get Lara to stop abusing me because of her repressed anger at her father?

— LOVINGMOTHER

DEAR LOVINGMOTHER: The most effective way to stop someone from abusing you is to quit tolerating it. The next time your daughter becomes abusive, inform her that you do not deserve to be treated that way and will not listen. Tell her that unless she is willing to level with her therapist, she might as well quit because it's a waste of everyone's time. Say it in a loving tone as you can, and do not raise your voice. Then politely end the conversation. You have suffered enough.

DEAR ABBY: Would you please suggest to teenage baby sitters or young houseguests that they ask permission from the homeowner about using their computer before just jumping on it?

I recently hired a lovely young lady to baby-sit our son. I didn't think to mention that she should stay off our computer because it contains sensitive personal and business data. Our son later informed us that she had been on the computer even while he was still awake. That's not what we pay her for. Parents should instruct their teenagers that other people's home computers are off-limits.

— FURIOUS IN MINNESOTA

DEAR FURIOUS: I have a better idea. Owners of home computers with "sensitive" information on them should install a password to prevent the kind of activity you have described. And if I were you, I'd find a more mature baby sitter with a more professional attitude than that "lovely young lady" — because while she was on your computer, she was neglecting your son.

DEAR ABBY: I have never seen this addressed in your column before. When conversing with someone who has a severe stutter, is it impolite to help the person finish his or her sentence? I am in the customer service industry. If I know the word the customer is trying to say, is it OK to help — or should I let the speaker finish on his or her own?

— WANTS TO DO THE RIGHT THING IN LAS VEGAS
DEAR WANTS: Although your impulse to be helpful is noble, it is impolite to interrupt others when they are talking. The polite way to handle the situation is to allow the person to finish the sentence.

Members of 'Queen' wrote hit songs individually

Speaking of royals, Queen may have been the only rock band whose members have each written a No. 1 one song. Freddie Mercury wrote "Bohemian Rhapsody"; Brian May, "We Will Rock You"; Roger Taylor, "I'm a King of the Hill"; and John Deacon, "Another One Bites the Dust."

What does the index finger of the Statue of Liberty have in common with a typical gorilla's arm span? Both are 8 feet long. According to the Washington Post Magazine, Democrats tip better than Republicans, and lawyers and doctors are the worst tippees of all professions. How many married priests does the Roman Catholic Church have? At last count, about 400. If a married male minister from another Christian denomination converts, he may be allowed to become a priest. Women ministers, however, still can't convert and become Roman Catholic priests, whether they're married or not.

MORNING BREAK

Aquarius – joint ventures take on importance and require a lot of drive

IF JULY-15 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: If at first you don't succeed, try again. Your determination and refusal to take no for an answer can mean you achieve great success in the year ahead. Challenges that frustrated you in the past can be overcome in the future. Don't get carried away in September when you tend to trust to luck instead of relying upon facts. Buckle down and work hard to achieve your dreams and ambitions — especially in November and December when there will be nothing blocking your way.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Strut your stuff. Your stamina is at a peak, so it's a good time to tackle big jobs that require a great deal of muscle or staying power. A new romantic attraction might be in the stars for singles.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Drive and ambition are in the air. Follow the example of those who have unwavering fortitude. If you stick close to those who are making big strides you can ride along on their coattails.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Set priorities. Too many irons in the fire can cause a flare-up that might cramp your style. Choose your friends wisely and don't be tempted to play hooky when serious work is at hand.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Being overly sensitive can create

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

a roadblock. Don't let hostilities deter you from doing what needs to be done. Stick to your ambitions and concentrate on getting the small details right.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Make your mark. Big business may be calling and you can answer. You have the knack of turning a gamble into a sure thing today. Helpful clues or discoveries might be right in your own backyard.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Work like a dog and eventually tails will wag. Don't get emotionally involved in who is supposed to pay what — rather, concentrate instead on pooling resources for the benefit of all.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Know which side of the bread is buttered. Place focus on your plucky bank and ally yourself with those who can enhance your reputation. Use brainpower to overcome obstacles in the way.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Anything is possible. Steamroll over the obstacles in your path and achieve whatever you desire. You have the strength and determination to make all your dreams come true. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Take pride in your passions. Some things are falling into place. Work behind the scenes and stay out of the spotlight. Concentrate your energies on making those in the family circle happy. Put effort into building a firm foundation that can be relied upon.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Actions speak louder than words. Joint ventures take on dramatic importance and hooked up with the right person, you will make an unbeatable team.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Career and business matters can move forward without effort if you aren't afraid to spend a few extra dollars. If push comes to shove, stand up for your values as ethics will win approval.

"Before I started taking XANGO I was having trouble breathing, had an irregular heart beat, my blood pressure was way up, and blood sugar levels were all over the place. Then I began taking XANGO. All of a sudden my pulse rate came back to normal and my blood pressure came down. I stopped taking my medications for those two. Now I'm off my oxygen. I was on four liters of oxygen a day."

Midge invasion leaves state officials in a quandary over ethics of eradication

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Officials at the state Department of Environmental Protection are in an ethical quandary. They need to rid the agency's headquarters of an insect infestation but they don't want to use pesticides.

"In the days of old we would've just got some bug spray or let the exterminators kill them," spokeswoman Jessica Greathouse said. "But we're the Department of Environmental Protection, and we have the first environmentally friendly building in the state, so we want to try every alternative we can."

Thousands of tiny winged insects called midges have invaded the building in the past six weeks.

"They're a nuisance. They get in my office and in the hallways," said Cap Smith, chief of administration and building manager. "And they're in the way."

Berry Crutchfield, an entomologist with the Department of Agriculture said eradicating the insects will be difficult unless the department determines their source.

"That's the great mystery," Smith said. "Where are they coming from?"

HOMEWRECKING HOUND

Mad Hatt'r wants you to meet 'Sylvia,' doggone it

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — The metaphor is as subtle as a rottweiler: The "other woman" in A.R. Gurney's comedy "Sylvia" is a dog.

"It's a play about unconditional love and the rewards of tolerance," said Michael Johnson, whose new Mad Hatt'r Theater Company will stage its second production starting Thursday at the Black Current Theater in downtown Twin Falls. "It's perfect summer theater fare."

"Sylvia" is a story of empty nesters. The kids are in college, the suburban home has been sold and the couple has moved to New York City. Kate (played by Anne Loebbs) is the wife whose career as an innecity-English-teacher is taking off; the long-married couple is reconnecting with old friends. The only glitch is the career of her husband, Greg (Mark Goodman).

Greg is losing interest — and his edge — as a stockbroker. Disgruntled and restless, he's in a full-blown mid-life crisis.

Soon Sylvia (Mya Goodman) enters the picture; this homewrecker has four legs, a tall, shaggy fur and big soulful brown eyes. A cross between a lab and a poodle, this "other woman" moves in and begins to move Kate out.

"Give a dog a woman's name and you'll begin to think of it as a woman," Gurney has written. Sylvia intrudes between husband, sleeping in their bed, making weekend visits with them and helping to celebrate an anniversary. Greg even takes Sylvia out to lunch; he's found a restaurant to cater to her.

The notion of a dog becoming the third party in a marriage dispute provides the funniest moments in the play.

"I think just about anyone with a dog can understand that," Johnson said.

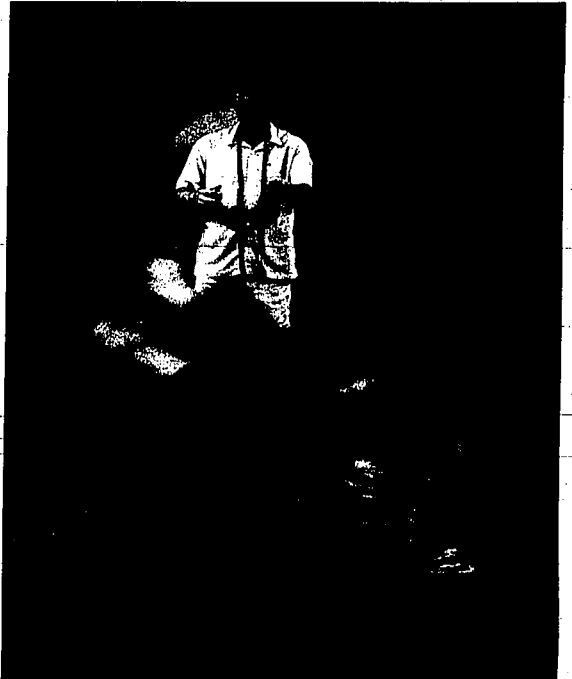

Dustin Hobble plays three roles — another dog owner, Kate's college buddy and a marriage counselor.

Johnson, who is directing the production, organized Mad Hatt'r late last year to do contemporary theater in Twin Falls, and the troupe mounted its first production last winter. It works in the old Rogerson Hotel restaurant, which for this production will have new theater seats.

"It actually cuts down our seating capacity a bit, but we're hoping to overcome that by selling out every night," Johnson said.

"Sylvia" runs through Aug. 13.

Times-News writer Steve Crump can be reached at 735-3223, or write to him at scrump@magicvalley.com

Playing the title role in the play 'Sylvia,' Mya Goodman rehearses with husband Mark Goodman, playing the role of Greg, at the Black Current Theater in Twin Falls on Wednesday. The play opens on Thursday.

Stitch by stitch: A glimpse into a fascinating past

By Karen Bossick
The Wood River Journal

HAILEY — Pieces of lives, patches and tatters. Pieces of lives, stitches and secrets.

That's what "Quilters" is made of. The homespun musical, which opens Wednesday at the Liberty Theater, showcases the courage and spirit of this nation's pioneer women who settled this land back when there were no SUVs to cross the prairie, no electric blankets to snuggle under at night, no microwaves with which to cook up a quick meal.

"Our marquee calls this 'the joyous American musical.' It does deal with some of the heartbreak that these women endured. But there is also the sense of joy, the sense of survival that pervades the play," said the play's director, John Glenn.

The Broadway musical was nominated for six 1985 Tony Awards, including Best Musical and Best Book of a Musical. It also was nominated for the 1984 Helen Hayes Award for Best Musical in Washington, D.C.

It ran for nine months when Company of Fools presented it in Richmond, Va., 20 years ago and the Fools have been chomping at the bit to put it on here.

Written by two Denver women, Molly Newman and Barbara Damashek, "Quilters" is the portrait of sturdy, strong-willed women who wrote the stories of their lives from birth to death — with each stitch in their quilts.

Even to an inch, if they were skilled quilters.

The play is based on excerpts from books and interviews with real women who made those quilts from pieces of wedding dresses and blouses. They were women who used them as bandages, to keep warm, to put out fire, yes, and to document life.

There's the story, for instance, of one woman who's trapped inside during a prairie sunset. She's able to keep her seal only by completing the butterfly pattern on her quilt.

The cast of the Company of Fools' production of 'The Quilters.'

There are tales of crossing the prairie in a Conestoga wagon and living first in a dugout, then a log cabin. Of throwing hides on the roof to block the howling winds and of

OVAC presents all Gershwin, all the time

The Times-News

OAKLEY — Go see "Crazy for You," a musical revue, and you'll watch a play break out.

But heck, it's music and words by George and Ira Gershwin, so who cares?

Starting tonight, Oakley Valley Council will present its version of Ken Ludwig's 1992 Broadway retooling of a 1930s musical by the Gershwins, long after George and Ira were gone.

"Crazy For You" uses seven Gershwin songs from "Girl Crazy" including "Bidin' My Time," "Embraceable You," "I Got Rhythm," and "But Not for Me." Thirteen other Gershwin songs were added from Broadway shows such as "Thee-ness Girl," "Oh Kay," "Show Girl" and "Ladies First." Hollywood films like "Shall We Dance" and "Damsel in Distress" and one addition, "Naughty Baby," which was not written either for the stage or films.

George, the composer, and Ira, the lyricist, essentially wrote the soundtrack for the jazz Age, refining what a show tune meant.

"We wanted audiences to believe that each song was written especially for 'Crazy for You' — that they couldn't possibly have come from anywhere else," Ludwig told an interviewer. "(One night) we overheard a couple talking about the show. The woman asked, 'Am George and Ira Gershwin still alive?' And her husband said, 'They must be.' They're still writing musicals."

Katie Clark, Timber Muhlestein, Cynthia Patterson, Diana Westergard, Temperance Davis and Jillian Hale are dancers, and Jan Wells, Austin Stoker, Burke Anderson, James Booper, Braxton Segers, Logan Hansen, Travis Newcom, Carlson Elston and Barrett Anderson are cowboys.

OVAC veterans Burton Anderson and Connie Elson are co-directing the production, which runs through July 30.

Words and music

Depp plays Willy Wonka in remake of sweet classic

New to the valley

'Charlie and the Chocolate Factory'

Tim Burton's reimagined version of the Roald Dahl classic about the strange candy maker Willy Wonka — played by Johnny Depp — and the poor boy who wins a chocolate-bar contest that awards a tour of the candy factory. With Freddie Highmore, David Kelly, Helena Bonham Carter, Noah Taylor, Missi Pyle, James Fox, Deep Roy and Christopher Moltisanti. Written by John August. PG for quirky situations, action and mild language.

'Look at Me'

Agnes Jaoui's blistering profile of a Parisian literary lion and his loves is darkly comic in the manner of vintage Woody Allen and brilliantly observed in the way it shows how fame deforms the star, his family and his fans. With Jaoui, Jean-Pierre Bacri and Marlou Berry. In French with English subtitles. PG-13 (profanity, sexual reference)

'Wedding Crashers'

Vince Vaughn and Owen Wilson play a pair of divorce mediators who spend their weekends as uninvited guests at strangers' nuptials, guilting the buffets and bridesmaids, and one of them falls in love with a crazy politician's daughter. With Rachel McAdams and Christopher Walken. Directed by David Dobkin. R for sexual content, nudity and language.

Continuing

'Batman Begins'

Batman has finally come home. Not just to a story that painstakingly details his origins, but to an ominous style that suits it beautifully. Christopher Nolan's 'Batman Begins' distills the mindless carnage and compulsive weirdness that mostly characterized its quartet of predecessors and unapologetically positions its hero at the dark end of the street. With Christian Bale in the title role, this is a film noir. Batman, a brooding, disturbingly bleak work that starts slowly but ends up crafting a world that just might haunt your dreams. Though his name might not have initially been on everyone's lips, Christian Bale turns out to be an excellent fit for Nolan's conception of the Dark Knight. Always a humorless, almost sullen actor, Bale uses those qualities to create a painfully earnest character driven to a life of crime-fighting almost against his will. With Michael Caine, Liam Neeson, Katie Holmes, Gary Oldman and Morgan Freeman. (220) PG-13 for intense action violence, disturbing images and some thematic elements.

'Bewitched'

As a real witch accidentally cast as a sorceress in a TV remake of the beloved '60s sitcom, Nicole Kidman is dizzy and fizzy but not funny. Will Ferrell is funny, eclipsing Kidman in a satire meant to skewer Hollywood for making female characters weak in order to make males look strong. PG-13 (discreet nudity, sex and drug references)

'Cinderella Man'

Russell Crowe as Depression-era boxer Jim Braddock. His stinging simplicity and quiet urgency rebel Spencer Tracy at his humblest, and most tiatic. Superlative film from Ron Howard with exceptional performances from Paul Giamatti and Renee Zellweger. PG-13 (intense boxing violence, profanity)

In this photo provided by Warner Bros. Pictures, Johnny Depp stars as Willy Wonka in 'Charlie and the Chocolate Factory.'

'Crash'

A raw, edgy study of intersecting lives in Los Angeles, and both the fear and paranoia on the underside of the American "melting pot." Boasting coarse racial epithets and frank depictions of ethnic prejudices, this large ensemble drama will have people talking, and angling for a long time. R (violence, profanity, adult themes)

'Dark Water'

Brazilian Walter Salles, who previously directed the Oscar-nominated films 'Central Station' and 'The Motorcycle Diaries,' guides this stylish remake of a Japanese film through treacherous territory to create a distressing, subtly suspenseful film full of emotional resonance. A new apartment becomes a real nightmare for a young mother (Jennifer Connelly) and her daughter (Ariel Gade) in this thriller. By concentrating on character and narrative to tell the story, and the pacing that piques a lot of movies, Salles evokes the unspoken fears that fill contemporary urban life. With John C. Reilly, Tim Roth, Dougray Scott, Pete Postlethwaite and Camryn Manheim. (1:44) PG-13 for mature thematic material, frightening sequences, disturbing images and brief language.

'Fantastic Four'

Fantastic is a tough adjective to live up to, and though the film takes its best shot, it fails to be anything more than a mild summertime diversion. Based on the Marvel comic book, it's a prototypical air-conditioner movie, and it's probably only worth 10 bucks if your apartment is really really hot or if you're a Jessica Alba completist. More superhero sitcom than comic-book adventure, the movie never really gets a compelling main story going. 'Fantastic Four' works best during its first half establishing the alterative quartet's super powers after an accident transforms their DNA, creating Mr. Fantastic (Ivan O'Connell), the Thing (Michael Chiklis), the Invisible Woman (Alba) and the Human Torch (Chris Evans). Once that's established, the movie loses its way, and it becomes clockwinding time. With Julian McMahon. (1:45) PG-13 for sequences of intense action.

'Herbie: Fully Loaded'

With Danica Patrick's mania reigning, this is an ideal moment for the studio to strap Lindsay Lohan into a crash helmet for a female remake of the old racecar romance, 'The Love Bug.' But 'Herbie: Fully Loaded' wears out its considerable charm rapidly and spends its final half-hour spinning its wheels. G

'The Longest Yard'

Adam Sandler in a so-so remake of the 1974 Burt Reynolds bone-crusher classic about convicts versus guards on the gridiron. The difference between the 1974 original and this is the difference between embattled masculinity and playful boyishness. PG-13 (sexual references, drug references, violence)

Basque in some fun this weekend

The Times-News

(GOODING — Indoors and out, it's a good weekend to celebrate the heritage of the Magic Valley's Basques.

The Basque Festival — the umbrella activity for the Basque Picnic — will be renewed for the 24th year this weekend. The picnic starts at noon Sunday at the Gooding County Fairgrounds, with lamb, Basque rice, beans, salad and bread on the menu.

As is traditional, following the picnic there will be kids' games, weight-carrying competition for adults, an auction, music and a performance by Basque dancers.

'Housewives' garners 15 Emmy nominations

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Prime-time TV soap operas rarely bring home Emmys.

"Dallas," "Knots Landing" and "Dynasty" never won best-series awards. "Dynasty" set a record as the biggest also-ran in Emmy history with 24 losses and no wins.

But "Desperate Housewives," a dark satire about life in suburbia, may have found a way to finesse the system. ABC's freshman hit — which premiered on Thursday with 15 Emmy nominations — asked to be considered in the comedy series category, usually hope to half-hour sitcoms.

The play worked for another, so-called dramatic legal farce "Ally McBeal," which was named best comedy series in 1999 on its second try.

"The proof is in the pudding," says "Desperate Housewives" reality on its way to the Emmy. "Ally McBeal" said from the author of "The Sopranos" and "Golden Girls" that she had the hands of a goldsmith. "I'm going to have to have some more time to do it," said David O'Neil, executive producer of Fox's drama "Hawaii, 5-0." The series received five nominations, including a best dramatic actor bid for star Hugh Laurie and a writing nomination for an episode by Shore.

ABC's show is competing in a field that includes best comedy series.

winner, the quirky "Arrested Development" and "Will & Grace," which matched "Desperate Housewives" with its 15 nominations Thursday.

Also named to the category were "Scrubs" and "Everybody Loves Raymond," which wrapped after nine seasons and received a hearty farewell of 13 bids.

Wisteria Lane, home of the housewives, should be buzzed with the fact that only three of its stars, Teri Hatcher, Marcia Cross and Felicity Huffman, were nominated for best comedy series actress. Eva Longoria, who was also nominated by the Golden Globe Awards, was conspicuously missing from the Emmy list as well.

Also overlooked was Nicolelette Sheridan, who had gotten a Golden Globe supporting actress nod for the show.

Maybe the sexually frisky characters played by Longoria and Sheridan were just too hot for Emmy voters to handle, suggested O'Neil.

It's also interesting that, in an industry regularly accused of bias against older actresses, the nominated "Housewives" are all 30 or older; Longoria is 30.

"It's sad about it," Cross told the Associated Press. "I really thought Nicolette was a shoe-in. In terms of Eva, my prediction is she's leaving us all behind. She looks best in the past."

acknowledging call that have frozen to death in the minus-30 temperatures that have blown in on a blizzard.

And there's a happy puppy dog song of a woman who sets up her quilt frame under the arbor as the dreams of her Dream Cowboy.

The Fools will tell the stories through her monologues, short scenes, dance, and original music like "The Lord Don't Broom Mama in My Hand" that has a heavy dose of western swing and gospel influences.

"It's not a history lesson about her quilt," said the director R. L. Rowsey. "One person said, 'To say Quilters is about quilting is to say 'My Fair Lady' is just teaching English.' It's really beautiful stories of humanity."

The play revolves around a man named Sherida played by Matty Benitez, who is sharing her life story with her daughters in the process of stitching together the Legacy Quilt.

"Sarah," took me 25 years to make one quilt — 25 — after putting the kids-to-bed every night," Glenn said.

Playing her daughters — and an assortment of other props and characters from dead cows to windmills and prairie wagons are Trina Wagner, who played Pappy Cline for the Fools the past two years; Kelly Kennedy, a regular featured performer at Colonial Williamsburg; and Sharon Barto, who was in the Fools production remembering Anne Frank and "The Pied Piper."

Newcomers to the Fools are Trina Wagner, Sarah Heiden, Dani Miller, Jessica Rice and Patricia Pulver.

They will be consumed not just by memorizing their lines but by the clothes they must put on, as well.

Lace-up boots, heavy stockings, corsets, petticoats, corset covers, bustle pads, blouses, heavy heavy skirts — it's amazing these women were able to cook, clean and get all the ironing done in all these clothes," Kennedy said.

As the women spin their tales, they will transform the stage from a blank palette to a quilt with 29 blocks made by 49 members of the Desert Sage Quilters.

The Quilters, who comprise 100 quilters from Idaho, Nevada, Utah and Montana, made the patterns from fabrics Glenn spent a full day picking out at the Gathering Place in Rupert.

"They were so cute," Sarah Weda said. "When they showed us the quilts, they showed them as a fashion show."

The culmination will be a Legacy Quilt made by 79 members of the Richmond Quilters Guild 20 years ago. They spent seven months and 1,597 work hours stitching it. The Fools paid a hefty bill to insure it for its journey to Halley.

"The unflinching of this quilt is an emotional event," said Rowsey. "It's magnificent, as beautiful as anything you could hope to see. It truly is a work of art."

Movies

old-school, Looney Tunes cartooning style. PG (potty humor)

'Mindhunters'

A stale and stupid thriller, shot three years ago and just now released, in which a group of FBI profiler trainees get dropped on an island for an exercise and start dumping dead Christian Slater, Kathryn Morris and LL Cool J lead the team — nowhere. R (violence, profanity)

'Mr. & Mrs. Smith'

Marriages, even the happy ones, can sometimes feel like combat zones. But what if a marriage really was a combat zone, with the husband and wife literally trying to kill each other? This is the domestic universe of 'Mr. & Mrs. Smith,' and you think that premise sounds farfetched, especially for an action-based romantic comedy, you don't know the half of it. Plot contrivance and major league implausibility are the bread and butter of a film whose motto might be 'look all you want but don't think too hard.' Fortunately, when your stars are Brad Pitt and Angelina Jolie, playing married assassins unaware of each other's vocation until they receive orders to kill each other, looking — and listening — will keep you well satisfied. Directed by Doug Liman ('The Bourne Identity'). With Vince Vaughn and Kerry Washington. (R, Tu, June 10) PG-13 for sequences of violence, intense action, sexual content and brief strong language.

'Monster-in-Law'

Jennifer Lopez and Jane Fonda star as Brideszilla meets Godzilla in a comedy so anemic that even Dracula wouldn't bite. With Michael Vartan. PG-13 (profanity, adult situations)

'Rebound'

Marin Lawrence stars as a troubled college basketball coach attempting to bounce back by leading a junior high team. With Wendy Raquel Robinson, Breckin Meyer, Horacio Sanz, Maggie Medina. Directed by Steve Carr. PG for mild language and thematic elements.

'Star Wars Episode III: Revenge of the Sith'

Part 3 of the three prequels explains how Anakin Skywalker becomes Darth Vader, but fails to explain how George Lucas gets away with the clunkiest dialogue in the universe. Hayden Christensen can't carry the weight of the Anakin role, Ewan McGregor tries to put some pep in Obi-Wan, Natalie Portman looks lovely and the galaxy of fiery planets, neo-Decco dylscapes and awesome lying ships is rendered with stunner-of-the-art precision. It's long, and then it's done. May divorce be with you. PG-13 (violence, darkness)

'Unleashed'

Martial arts star Jet Li functions as a vicious attack dog for crime boss Bob Hoskins. Until H.G. Wells' classic formula to awaken his better nature. An action movie with heart? It's an ungainly mixed breed. It's strong violent content, profanity, some sexuality and nudity.

'War of the Worlds'

Steven Spielberg's feverishly involving update of the 1898 H.G. Wells classic starring an uncommonly fine Tom Cruise and Dakota Fanning as a father and estranged daughter fleeing invading aliens. PG-13 (intense violence and gore)

Cowboys grind out wins

By Nathaniel Garrabrant
 Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Take away several key players from a team and you’ll find that the greater part of depth is often scrappiness. Bringing an injury-depleted lineup to lim

“Our guys scrapped through for seven innings and got a win,” said Cowboys coach Tim Stadelmeier. “It was tough for us because we had four guys out of the lineup that are normally in there and some guys stepped into some spots that they’ve never played before and came in and batted.”

After building a 4-0 lead through the first two innings, a battle hardly seemed in the works.
 With Pocatello suffering control problems on the mound and several miscues at shortstop, Twin Falls was quick to take advantage. After the hosts garnered a pair of walks to open the game, third baseman Paul Gerrish drove a RBI single to open scoring in the bottom of the first.

Center fielder Tyler Anderson then reached home on an error at shortstop, followed by Gerrish putting Twin Falls up 3-0 off a wild pitch. The fourth run came by way of another error at short in the second, scoring Matt Sherman.

Half an inning and six Runnin’ Rebels runs later however, Twin Falls’ goal shifted from run to rally.

Pocatello drove in five runs including a two-RBI, go-ahead single by catcher Alex Hancock to make it 5-4. The bottom of the Rebels lineup had loaded the bases with no outs. Shortstop Jeremy Lennon then put the Rebels up by two, driving in Hancock with a sacrifice fly to right field.

“We got kind of a slow start,” said Pocatello coach Rick Endo. “The guys came out in the third inning and hit the ball well, but then we fell flat again.”

But Twin Falls’ offense never died, scoring at least a run in each inning and racking up 11 hits by game’s end.

Leading off the bottom of the third, Nick Carr smacked a double to center field and was driven home two batters later by Chance Elam to cut the deficit to 6-5. Carr then put the Cowboys back in the lead in the fourth with a line drive that bounced off second base to elude the Pocatello shortstop and score Drew Bernhard and Paul Gerrish.

“I was pretty good, but I just did my best to get my bat on the ball,” said Carr, who went 2-for-4 on the day with a double and two RBIs. “We’ve been hitting the ball pretty well lately. I’m pretty proud of these guys. It just seems that everything is coming around for us.”

Twin Falls pitcher Zach Rupp-Smith collected the win after entering the game with the score tied 4-4 in the third, throwing 76 pitches in five innings while allowing one earned run.

“It was pretty good,” he said. “My fastball was working pretty well.”

The Rebels looked to regroup in the fifth with Eric Hill on Eric Hill to make it 8-7, but an RBI from Cowboys center Drew Bernhard in the bottom of the inning en-

Wie advances with two more APL match wins

LEBANON, Ohio (AP) — Michelle Wie is three wins away from an invitation to the Masters...

The 15-year-old from Hawaii birdied three of the final five holes and beat Jim Renner 3 and 1 in her second match of the day Thursday to advance to the quarterfinals of the U.S. Amateur Public Links.

She conceded that Augusta National has crept into the back of her mind.

"Obviously I'm thinking about that, but I'm taking it one match at a time," she said.

Wie, the first female to qualify for a men's USGA championship, earlier won 6 and 5 over C.D. Hockersmith.

The 6-foot girl who nearly made the cut on the PGA Tour twice and was tied for the lead last month in the U.S. Women's Open might be on the verge of her most stunning feat of all.

Augusta National traditionally invites the winner of the Public Links to the Masters and chairman Hootch said he would welcome Wie or any other female who qualified.

Wie is confident she will play in the Masters, although she's not sure when.

"I don't feel any kind of urgency," she said. "I'm just playing. Hopefully, I'll get in one of these days. It could happen this year, it could be next year, it could be 20 years down the line."

Wie would have to win two matches for a second straight day to reach the first round. She next played Matt Hendrix, who defeated Andrew Black of Chattanooga, Tenn., 3 and 2, in the quarterfinals in the morning.

The semifinals are Friday afternoon, followed by the 36-hole championship on Saturday.

"It was kind of joking and I actually said that I hoped I might not," Ogden said. "And here we go."

So far, she has met every challenge. Wie avoided an early defeat when Renner missed 6-foot birdie tries on his first two holes. She took over from there, going 3 up at the turn with an 18-foot birdie putt on No. 3.

Renner, a junior at Johnson & Wales University in Miami and the NAA medalist, won two of the next three holes. He out-herled her, but then Wie hit a low 3-iron shot from 220 yards into 15 feet and made the birdie to go 2-up.

Ogden lost in the quarterfinals a year ago to eventual winner Ryan Moore, who has since turned pro. Ogden said she would be intimidated if Wie out-drives him.

"I'm a pretty small guy," he said. "Everybody I play with hits it past me."

Michelle Wie makes a putt on the first hole during the third round of the men's Amateur Public Links Championship at the Shaker Run Golf Club, Thursday, in Lebanon, Ohio.

Tie atop BC Open leaderboard

ENDICOTT, N.Y. — Rookie Matt Hendrix, playing on his only sponsor exemption of the year, shot a 9-under 63 and was tied with Glen Day for the first-round lead at the B.C. Open.

Mike Springer, Jason Bolin, Ben Crane and Brandon Poppas were all a stroke back at the old En-Joe Golf Club course.

Mathias Gronberg, Omar Uresti, Mark Wilson, Chris Smith and Arjun Atwal all had 65s. Hank Kuchne, coming off a loss for the second at last week's John Deere Classic, was part of a three-way tie at 66.

Moodle leads by one at Canadian Women's Open

HALIFAX, Nova Scotia — Janice Moodie birdied the final hole to cap a 6-under 66 and led the one-stroke lead over Emily Bastel after the opening round of the Canadian Women's Open.

Bastel edged the par-3 13th at the Glen Arbor course in her career-best 67. Linda Stahl was third after a 68, while Brittany Lang, Angela Stanford, Johanna Head, Sherri Turner, Cathy Johnston-Forbes, Mihai McKay and Li Mi Chung were another stroke back.

Chun, Wightman advance at Publix

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Co-medalist Mari Chun, a 17-year-old from Hawaii, survived two close matches Thursday and advanced to the quarterfinals of the U.S. Women's Amateur Public Links.

Chun, who will enter Stanford this fall, had a five-hole lead after Hannah Jun, a junior at UCLA, after seven holes. Jun stormed back to get within one after 16 holes, but Chun won the third-round match 1-0.

Chun will meet 14-year-old Jane Bah of Torrance, Calif., in the quarterfinals on Friday morning. The semifinals are Friday afternoon and the 36-hole final is Saturday.

Angela Park lost 1-up to Juli Wightman of Brigham Young in her second-round match. Park bogeyed No. 8, which allowed Wightman to take the lead.

Sheena Lawrick drove in both of Canada's runs with a pair of holes in one Sheena Lawrick drove in both of Canada's runs with a pair of holes in one in the Pan Am Games and in qualifying for the 1997 Pan Am Games. Some of the United States' biggest stars weren't in the lineup.

U.S. coach Mike Candrina started Alicia Hollowell, a newcomer to the team, instead of ace Jennie Finch or Cat Osterman.

Edwards, who combined with Brady Black for the victory, got a strikeout to end the game.

The win is Jerome's fourth straight conference victory and puts the Tigers in the hunt for the No. 4 seed (15-11) at the district tournament, July 27-30 at Upper Valley.

"We are peaking at the right time," said Hills.

The loss spelled a 3-for-3 effort by Winnfield for the jobcans, who out hit Jerome 10-6 but stranded nine runners.

Gunderson and Steven Anderson both had a pair of hits for Burley (7-11).

The Times-News

MERIDIAN — Two wins to open the wooden bat Meridianana B's Shoo-out by the Twin Falls Class A American Legion baseball team improved the Cowboys record to 17-17.

Twin Falls has won nine out of its last 10 games including a 6-2 win over Kuna and a 9-1 defeat of Highland Thursday.

Head coach Steve Finley said the team is "another great day to be a Cowboy," said coach Devin Kunz.

Cowboys pitcher Mitchell Dunn scattered Kuna's five hits in the 6-2 victory.

"Mitchell threw awesome," Kunz said.

Connor Watkins rapped a three-hit single in the third inning to make it 5-0 Twin Falls. Josh Barnes started a big day with a two-RBI triple in the second to open the scoring.

"Those were clutch hits," Kunz said.

Barnes hit another triple against Highland's Nick Bergesen dubbed a three-run double to spark a five-run fourth. Remington Pullen went 3-for-3 at the plate and drew a walk.

A-Rod rips Schilling in ninth inning

BOSTON (AP) — Alex Rodriguez and the New York Yankees got the best of Curt Schilling this Friday night to close within 1.5 games of first place in the AL East.

Schilling (1-3) gave up a double to Gary Sheffield to start the ninth, then Rodriguez homered to left-center.

Schilling, who had been in the disabled list since his first relief appearance since a late-season turndown in 2002.

Royals 12, Tigers 9

DETROIT — Matt Stairs hit two home runs, including a grand slam, and drove in six runs and Zack Greinke won for the first time since May 31.

Greinke (2-11) had lost five straight decisions and hadn't won in seven starts. He pitched two runs and five hits in 5 1-3 innings, walking and striking out three. Mike MacDougal played the ninth for his 12th save.

Chris Shelton homered and drove in three runs and Mike Monroe homered and had two RBIs for Detroit.

White Sox 1, Indians 0

CLEVELAND — Jose Contreras pitched three-hit ball for seven innings to stop Chicago's season-high seven-game losing streak.

Cleveland lost for the sixth time in seven games.

Contreras (5-5) struck out seven in his second consecutive win. He issued three walks and 11 clean up hitter Victor Martinez — but improved 2-0 with a 1.63 ERA in five career starts against the Indians.

Dustin Hermanson gave up the Indians' fourth hit but earned his 22nd save.

Devil Rays 3, Blue Jays 0

TORONTO — Casey Fossum and Danyal Baez combined on a six-hit effort for Tampa Bay's first shutout of the season.

Dan Burt Foster homered and Jorge Cantu had two RBIs for the Devil Rays, who have won just two of their last 13 games.

Fossum (4-7) allowed four hits, struck out four and walked a batter in 7 2-3 innings. Baez finished for his 14th save in 20 chances and Tampa Bay's first shutout in 125 games, since Aug. 23, 2004, against Seattle.

Angels 3, Twins 2

MINNEAPOLIS — Steve Finley, Malcom Irtanis and Adam Kennedy each had two hits and an RBI to lead Los Angeles over the Minnesota Twins 3-2 Thursday night, snapping the Angels' season-high four-game losing streak.

Bob Boone, acquired by Minnesota this week after being designated for assignment by the Seattle Mariners, batted third and went 0-for-4. The Twins have lost five of seven and fell 10 games behind the White Sox in the AL Central.

Riders speed down a turn outside L'Argentiere-La-Bessoe outside Briancon, French Alps, during the 12th stage of the Tour de France cycling race between Briancon, French Alps, and Digne-les-Bains, southeastern France, Thursday. Overall leader Lance Armstrong, of Austin, Texas, is seen at center.

Armstrong suffers setback Lance maintains lead, loses teammate in crash

DIGNE-LES-BAINS, France (AP) — Not everything went according to plan for Lance Armstrong on Thursday at the Tour de France.

The American retained his overall lead on the last of three days in the Alps. The loss of Manuel Beltran, however, could be critical in the upcoming Pyrenees.

David Moncoutie won the 12th stage, becoming the 15th Frenchman since World War II to win on Bastille Day, France's national holiday.

Beltran, one of several riders Armstrong relies on to lead him up the "Tour's brutal climbs, loaded wheels with another rider and crashed on the day's first ascent, hitting his head. He was so dazed, he didn't know where he was.

"He was asking, 'Where is the peloton? Where is the peloton?'" said team manager Johan Bruyneel, adding the Spaniard gingerly picked himself up off the sun-baked tarmac.

Beltran, who goes by the nickname "Triki" and has been part of Armstrong's Tour-winning team since 2003, remounted his bike with difficulty and pedaled on for about 6 miles until a race doctor said he should stop, Bruyneel said.

"We could see that he really didn't know where he was. There was no power at all and after a while he didn't even realize that he had crashed," Bruyneel said. "So we forced him to stop."

Beltran, 34, was taken to a hospital where a brain scan found no initial sign of serious injury, although he was being kept overnight for observation.

Not since 2001 has Armstrong finished in Paris without all of his teammates. Beltran's role has been to lead the American on mountain ascents, using his uphill speed to shake off rivals.

The mountains that separate

France and Spain come Saturday after a mostly flat stage Friday from Miramas to Montpellier in southern France.

Armstrong still has several strong climbers among his remaining seven support riders. They include Yaroslav Popovych, who helped Armstrong leave rivals behind with brutal acceleration on the first Alpine stage, and Jose Luis Rubiera, known as "Chechu."

"I feel very confident that with those seven guys we can manage," Armstrong said.

"There is no one really who can pick up what he was doing," Bruyneel said. "We need all the guys and everybody knows his role and he and Chechu were working in the early mountains. His going to be tougher on the team of course, because it's one guy less and his job will have to be shared with a few guys."

"It's tough to lose a rider but the good news is that he doesn't have anything serious and that is the most important," he added.

Moncoutie took the lead on the Col du Corobin, the fourth of five ascents on the 116.2-mile trek from Briancon, and cycled alone into Digne-les-Bains past cheering crowds. The Colidis team rider completed the route in 4 hours, 20 minutes, 6 seconds.

"It's fabulous," Moncoutie said. "I'm so happy to win. It's July 14th."

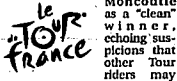

Armstrong cruised in with his main rivals in a group more than 10 minutes back. Armstrong was 41st.

His lead over second-place Michael Rasmussen of Denmark stayed at 38 seconds, with French rider Christophe Moreau still third, 2:34 behind the six-time champion.

Italian Ivan Basso remains 2:40 back, fourth overall, with Jan Ullrich of Germany 4:02 behind in ninth.

Moncoutie is way down in the overall standings, so Armstrong did not lay chase when he and a group of other racers far from him time-wise rode off ahead.

French television hailed

Moncoutie as a "clean" winner, echoing suspicions that other Tour riders may be doping. The furious racing speeds so far this year and the arrest Wednesday of Italian rider Dario Frigo have renewed such doubts. Frigo's wife was caught with suspected doping products in her car.

Cycling's governing body said Thursday that all blood and urine doping tests from the first week of the three-week race were negative. Armstrong has been repeatedly tested.

Customs officers checked at least two vehicles from two separate Tour teams Thursday but found nothing suspicious.

straight bogey on the 13th hole. He finished with a 3-over 75, the same as Watson, who was along for the a largely ceremonial ride neither player wanted.

His long goodbye will almost surely end tomorrow, unless Nicklaus can do something spectacular and muster up the 68 he probably doesn't have in the bag anymore. Nicklaus knows it better than anyone, but he doesn't seem to want to let go, and certainly will never allow himself to give in.

He played a round on a golf course that requires tremendous concentration, paused for a moment to honor the dead, and finally went out of his way to talk with reporters afterward.

Still, he wasn't going to concede a thing when asked if he was prepared for his final walk across the Swilcan Bridge on Friday.

"What do you think? What would you think? Am I prepared? I'm here. If I wasn't prepared, I wouldn't be here," Nicklaus said.

The truth is he's been preparing for this moment for quite some time. There will be different emotions Friday, when the British fans who have grown to treasure Nicklaus say goodbye and he walks over the bridge on the 18th hole for the final time after 164 major championships.

He wanted to put those thoughts away for another day. Today he wanted to talk about something more so serious.

"It's just so crazy," Nicklaus said. "I just can't understand why people would kill each other."

"How did we get this way?"

Rice famous for racing, not receptions

NASCAR THIS WEEK

By Linda Brittan
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — His friends will call the "Famous Jerry Rice," but most of his days are centered around cars, not football.

Working full-time as an auto technician for the Rob Green Auto Group, Twin Falls resident Jerry Rice also spends a considerable amount of time wrenching on his own Grand National car that he races at the Magic Valley Speedway — and couldn't be happier doing so.

"It's me that's all it's all about," Rice said. "You build the car, set it up, work on it again and drive it yourself. Then every time I get to the track I wonder what is going to happen that night, that is what's so fun about all this."

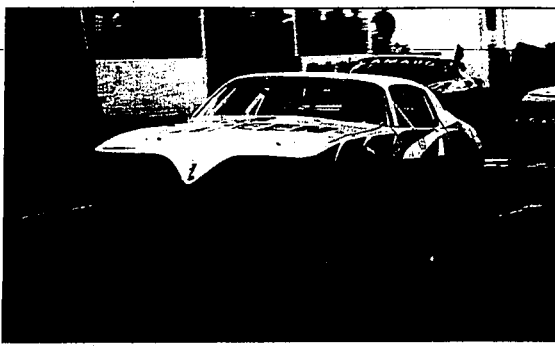

Rice always looks forward to the competition every race day since he knows what it's like to be out of it.

Last year, Rice was sidelined with a blood clot in his lung and missed three races towards the end of the season.

"Yeah, that was too bad, we were leading in the points at the time," Rice said. "But I'm pretty healthy this year and my goal now is just to stay competitive."

Currently second in the point standings, Rice is already drawing up a new game plan for the Chase for the Grand National which begins in two weeks.

"My strategy so far has been to not wreck the car," Rice said. "I'm trying to save all my resources for the last five races. We're just going to throw it all out there. I'm sure everyone else will be bringing out their best stuff too. It's definitely going to be exciting for the fans."

Jerry Rice warms up his Grand National division car for the start of a previous main event race at the Magic Valley Speedway.

Earnhardt Jr. buoyed by first Nextel win of 2005

By Mike Harris
Associated Press writer

This season has been a whole new experience for Dale Earnhardt Jr.

Before apparently turning a miserable race around two weeks ago, this "place finish" at Daytona and then solidifying the number one with a victory Sunday at Chicagoland Speedway, NASCAR's most popular driver went from a "boiled and wilted" for leading his DEI team into a losing "spiral."

The crew on his revered red No. 14 Chevrolet was joined on the way out of tracks and Junior's possible departure from Dale Earnhardt Inc., the team his father founded, was "a subject of much speculation."

Earnhardt's fall from grace was sudden. "Little E" has been a star since the day he first drove a car in NASCAR's top stock car series in 1999 — partly because fans of his father, a NASCAR icon killed in a crash in the 2001 Daytona 500, have switched their allegiance to the son and partly because Junior's talent, hip-hop style and charisma have captured the imagination of younger fans.

And he has given all of them plenty to cheer about, improving each year.

The last two years in particular apparently set the stage for a strong run at the Championship this year.

Earnhardt finished third in the points in 2003 and won a career-best six races and finished a very consistent runner-up in the first season the title was determined by the 10-race play-off-style Chase for the Nextel Cup championship.

But it has turned out to be a mostly disappointing season, thanks at least in part to an ill-advised swap of cars and crewmen with DEI teammate Michael Waltrip.

"I don't think the boss bothered me," Earnhardt said after the victory of this career. "That kind of solidifies me in the sport because if everybody cheers for you, so people feel like you never pay your dues. So I'm getting booted a little bit, I'm paying my dues a little bit."

He has certainly paid some dues in 2005.

Until that strong run at Daytona on July 2, Earnhardt had just five top-10 finishes in 16 starts. Until he led the final 11 laps at Chicagoland, Junior had been out front for just five laps all season.

Dale Earnhardt Jr. celebrates with his teammates in Victory Lane after winning the NASCAR Nextel Cup at the USG Sheetrock 400 race at Chicagoland Speedway, last Sunday, in Joliet, Ill.

Winning, especially the way he did — with spectacular pit work all day and a two-time pit stop that gave him track position at the end — was a real boost to Earnhardt and his crew.

"As tough a year it has been, though, Earnhardt says, it hasn't all been bleak as the team has tried to work its way out of the disappointing slump.

"This is the honest truth: As bad as some of the finishes are that we've had — as hard as they are to stomach sometimes and to understand — I've had a good time," Earnhardt said. "I've had fun with this team."

"I never anticipated them being as good a bunch of guys as they are. They all like me and get along. They don't put me in a bad position by putting me in the middle of a dispute. They are all giving their best and I feel like part of it."

A big part of that positive attitude has been interim crew chief Steve Hirtel, who left his post as DEI's technical director in May to replace Peter Egan and rely on Hirtel to spur a real chemistry with Earnhardt after switching from Waltrip's No. 15 team over the winter.

"I haven't run any better than Earnhardt most of this season, but I did seem that he quickly developed a rapport with new crew chief Tony Eury Jr., Earnhardt's cousin and longtime crew chief during his career, said some of Earnhardt's problems in the first half of the season have stemmed from NASCAR's new aerodynamic rules — shortening the rear spoiler and softening the tires — that have made the cars more difficult to drive.

"The guys have worked hard all winter. They didn't sit on their hands and rely on Hirtel to carry them to the front," Hirtel said. "Michael Waltrip's driving style is more conducive to this new tire. Junior had never really shown an affinity for that kind of setup."

"It's not like somebody had gone in there and messed everything up. The business changed and it coincided with us making a change with Junior. I had seen a bunch of things from being on the outside looking in that could be made better based primarily on the success that Michael Waltrip and Tony had."

Thanks to the success of the past two races, Earnhardt is back in the race for the Chase, which will include the top 10 and any other drivers within 40 points of the leader after the first 26 races.

Heading into Sunday's race at New Hampshire International Speedway, the 19th of the season — Junior is 13th in the standings, 115 points out of 10th and 491 points behind series leader Jimmie Johnson. And despair suddenly has turned to optimism.

"About a week or two ago — right before Daytona — I decided to quit worrying about making the Chase, and to not let all the criticism and opinions of everybody bother me," Earnhardt said. "I kind of went back to old-school thinking, the way you do when you're a rookie and you're trying to focus on every lap, every turn, every day."

"I have all the confidence in the world in my team and in Steve. Hopefully, we can keep doing what we did at Chicago. If we can, maybe we'll make the Chase."

Kentucky Speedway sues NASCAR over awarding of races

SPARTA, Ky. (AP) — Kentucky Speedway filed suit Wednesday against NASCAR and International Speedway Corp., alleging the companies have violated federal antitrust laws by illegally restricting the awarding of Nextel Cup races.

The speedway, which currently has NASCAR Busch and Craftsman Trucks series races on its schedule, is one of several tracks that have unsuccessfully sought a race in the elite Cup series.

The suit, filed in U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Kentucky at Covington, also alleges antitrust violations relating to various restraints of trade involving the Busch and Craftsman races.

NASCAR sanctions and oversees its racing series, while ISC owns or controls 12 of the 22 tracks at which the Cup cars currently race. Both companies are controlled by the France family.

"We have alleged that NASCAR and ISC have violated the federal antitrust laws," said Dan Chesley, an attorney representing the Kentucky track. "In my opinion, the facts clearly support a conclusion that NASCAR and ISC have colluded to exclude competition in order to financially benefit themselves."

"By doing so, they have harmed not only Kentucky Speedway but also all stock car racing fans nationwide. Stock car racing is the most popular spectator sport in the United States, and we intend to do our best to see that fair play and fair racing is established."

NASCAR spokesman Jim Hunter did not immediately return a phone message left Wednesday afternoon at his office by The Associated Press.

The speedway wants the court to require NASCAR to award the track a 2006 Cup date and implement a competitive bidding process to permit full and fair competition for the right to host a Nextel Cup race," according to the lawsuit.

The 1.5-mile oval track opened in 2000, nestled on the Kentucky countryside just off Interstate 71. It's a 30-minute drive from Cincinnati and a 90-minute drive from Kentucky's two largest cities, Louisville and Lexington. Track officials also say it draws fans from two other major Ohio cities, Columbus and Dayton.

The track was independently financed, Jerry Carroll, the leader of the track's five-man ownership group, has said the track's status as an independent hurts its standing with NASCAR. Only four independent tracks, Dover, Pocono, New Hampshire and Indianapolis — host Cup races.

Last month, Bill France Jr. now retired after decades as

BRIEFLY IN MONEY

Economic Advisory Council will meet

TWIN FALLS — Three Magic Valley communities will make pitches for funding as the Idaho Economic Advisory Council meets July 21-22 in Pocatello to hear requests for nearly $3 million in economic and community development grants.

Among them, Jerome is requesting $500,000 to extend water mains; add new fire hydrants, a rail siding and street lights; and make wastewater improvements at a publicly owned industrial park. That work will allow Scoular Co., an Omaha, Neb.-based agribusiness company, to build a new $3.5 million facility and A. Scott Jackson Trucking to build a new $2.4 million shipping and storage operation at the park. The two companies will add a total of 29 jobs, Idaho Commerce and Labor said.

Paul hopes for a $500,000 grant to renovate a publicly owned industrial building that will allow Kodak Northwest Inc. and its 48 jobs to remain in the city. Commerce and Labor said. A Texas firm has offered to buy the company, which produces industrial snow-removal equipment, but the city and the newly formed Mini-Crete Commerce Authority are forming a consortium to purchase the business and keep it in Paul.

The council will also review a request for $219,000 from Burley to extend water and sewer service and make road improvements to accommodate construction of the Fairfield Inn, a locally owned franchise of Marriott International, which will add 22 jobs.

Entrepreneur training program is available

TWIN FALLS — A training program to help entrepreneurs succeed is now available in many of Idaho's rural communities, Idaho Commerce and Labor said.

The Idaho Small Business Development Center partnered with Commerce and Labor to certify Idaho's rural economic development professionals to teach the NLevel entrepreneurial training program.

"Encouraging entrepreneurial development is a key strategy to provide more job opportunities to Idahoans living in the state's rural areas," said Wendell Secrist, business development manager with Commerce and Labor.

Many of Idaho's rural areas, the bulk of new jobs do not come from new companies relocating to a community. Secrist said only about 1 percent of new jobs in rural communities come from relocations, while 44 percent are generated by entrepreneurs in the community and 53 percent by expansions of existing businesses.

"The 10- to 12-week course NLevel course gives entrepreneurs a step-by-step approach to develop a business plan — either for a new business or for expanding an existing business. For information, visit the ISBDC Web site at www.idahowebdc.org or call 1-800-225-3815.

Martha Stewart will offer a 'how-to' book

Martha Stewart is writing a "how-to" book for aspiring entrepreneurs. She says her own company attempts to recover from her imprisonment for obstructing justice.

Martha Stewart Living Omnimedia Inc. announced plans for "Martha's Rules," to be published in October by Rodale Inc. The book is not an autobiography or memoir but a handbook for people wanting to start their own business, executives said.

Stewart's company reportedly has received a $2 million advance for the title.

"My goal with this book is to help people turn their passions into successful businesses, as I did myself through many of the things I learned over the years," Stewart said in a statement.

Stewart's homemaker empire, once valued at $1 billion, began as a catering business in Connecticut.

A GOODING SUCCESS STORY

Cory Clifton welds a frame at the Kiefer Built trailer manufacturing plant in Gooding. The plant's grand opening and ribbon-cutting ceremony was Thursday.

Kiefer Built plant opens to public

By Megan Hinds Myers Times-News writer

GOODING — Cory Clifton is one of those success stories that economic development leaders like to brag about.

After earning his welding certificate from the College of Southern Idaho in May, Clifton found work at Kiefer Built LLC's new trailer-manufacturing plant in Gooding.

It's a change from working with his father at a dairy equipment repair business. But Clifton says he enjoys his welding job, building steel, steel-framed and aluminum trailers that haul horses, livestock and cargo.

The teamwork-oriented atmosphere at the Kiefer Built plant and the compensation package the company offered were the clinchers, Clifton said Thursday. Welders' wages at Kiefer Built start at $11.50 per hour.

"Oh yeah, it was great, and (workers have) good benefits," Clifton said.

Clifton and fellow employees were hard at work Thursday. Economic development leaders, community members and the governor toured the Kiefer Built plant and a companion living-quarters business, RC Conversions, as part of the company's grand opening and ribbon-cutting ceremony.

The Kiefer Built facility — a 126,000-square-foot former fresh-potato warehouse — looks completely different than it did just less than a year ago when the Iowa-based company announced its intentions to establish a plant there, said Joel Kolker, plant manager of Kiefer Built plant and a companion living-quarters business, RC Conversions, as part of the company's grand opening and ribbon-cutting ceremony.

Ex-Qwest CFO pleads guilty

The Associated Press

DENVER — A former Qwest Communications International Inc. chief financial officer pleaded guilty Thursday to a single-count felony charge of conspiracy to defraud, becoming the highest-ranking officer to admit to wrongdoing in a scandal that forced the telephone company to erase billions of dollars in revenue.

Robin Szeglia, 44, faces up to 10 years in prison and a $1 million fine, though sentencing guidelines recommend a term of 15 to 21 months, U.S. District Judge Walker D. Miller delayed formal acceptance of the plea until a Nov. 4 hearing.

Szeglia admitted to improperly selling 10,000 shares of Qwest stock in 2001 for a net profit of $125,000. She sold the stock at $41 per share in April 2001 based on what the government said was nonpublic information. Denver-based Qwest is the local phone provider in Idaho and 13 other Midwestern and Western states.

Prosecutors said Szeglia knew some business units would fail to meet revenue targets in the first two quarters that year, and that Qwest improperly used nonrecurring revenue in trying to meet those goals, and "I plead guilty, sir," Szeglia told the judge in a low voice, adding that she is taking medication for depression. Free on bond, she left court without comment.

Szeglia could play a crucial role in the government's three-year effort to punish anyone involved in Qwest's multibillion-dollar accounting scandal. Until now, federal prosecutors have had poor luck successfully prosecuting former Qwest managers, but Szeglia may have been in a position to know what executives knew and when they knew it, including former CEO Joe Nacchio.

Szeglia, Nacchio and five other former executives were accused in a civil complaint of orchestrating massive financial fraud. The Securities and Exchange Commission wants all seven to repay an amount to be determined at trial and civil penalties.

The SEC has said the fraud at Qwest occurred between April 1999 and March 2002, allowing it to improperly report approximately $3 billion in revenue that helped clear the way for its 2000 acquisition of the regional phone company U S West. The revenue was later restated.

Qwest agreed last year to pay $250 million to settle SEC fraud charges in a deal that did not include individuals. Szeglia has reached a deal with the SEC, but details have not been disclosed.

Former Qwest Communications International Inc. chief financial officer Robin Szeglia and attorney Terry Bird, right, arrive at the federal courthouse in Denver, Thursday, where she pleaded guilty to one count of insider trading.

Cost-conscious Dell Inc. tries to incorporate style, too

The Associated Press

DALLAS — From boring old beige computer cases to the more recent gray and black models, style isn't a word often associated with computer maker Dell Inc.

But as the company continues to push into consumer products with plasma televisions and digital music players, it's adding a dash of flash to a revamped lineup of desktop and notebook computers.

Many of the new models were designed in response to customers' desire for sleeker, more stylish computers, says Jeff Clarke, a Dell senior vice president.

Business travelers wanted a more travel-savvy laptop, so Dell — which in Twin Falls is a major call center employer — came up with the slivery, featherweight, 2.5-pound Latitude X1, a design licensed from Sansum Electronics Co.

For consumers, Dell's new white-on-silver Dimension 9100 and 5100C desktops are slimmer and have a more accessible layout of ports and connectors than previous tower models.

The XPS line of desktop and laptops, meanwhile, have glowing lights — which serve no function beyond lending a sleek appearance — and interchangeable faceplates that cater to video game fans willing to pay a premium for the latest technology.

With analyst firm IDC expecting PC shipments to grow by 10 percent this year — down from 12 percent in 2004 — Dell certainly isn't the only one turning an eye toward style. Most everyone in the business is doing what they can to conceal the often boring, utilitarian functions of today's home computing appliances in more eye-catching boxes.

"As the market gets to be more commodity-like you need to distinguish yourself in whatever way you can," said IDC analyst Roger Kay.

Packard Co., but already made the switch to silver-on-black with its Pavilion desktops. Computers pose a challenge for designers because they remain little more than boxes that haven't changed much in decades, said Jean-Jacques Thierard, a design director for Audiovox Inc. and chair of consumer electronics for the Industrial Designers Society of America.

Flashover Corp. and other niche players tout space-age designs that are in high demand with computing enthusiasts.

Dell's main rival, Hewlett-Packard Co., has already made the switch to silver-on-black with its Pavilion desktops. Computers pose a challenge for designers because they remain little more than boxes that haven't changed much in decades, said Jean-Jacques Thierard, a design director for Audiovox Inc. and chair of consumer electronics for the Industrial Designers Society of America.

He called Dell's new systems a little bit edgier than they used to be, but added: "It's an efficient business and an efficient machine. I think that was translated into the design."

Kay of IDC says tech consumers want something called "design drama."

"It's something that sort of looks cool but exactly what that is is a little bit hard to pin down," he said.

The industry's leader in capturing that certain something in design has long been Apple Computer Inc., whose trademark, green-and-white iMac and minimalist iPods are as much fashion accessories as pieces of technology.

At Dell, meanwhile, it's been more than four years since the computers went from beige to black and gray.

For any design, the key is striking a balance between cost and cool, said Ken Musgrave, Dell's director of industrial design and usability.

"We're not going to be charging a premium for design," he said. "We would not exchange a user's experience of the product for the sake of aesthetics. They're part of the story but not the entire story."

Delta, other carriers

raise cap on pricey fares

The Associated Press

ATLANTA — Delta Air Lines Inc., the nation's third largest airline, blamed persistently high fuel costs for its decision Thursday to raise the cap on its most expensive fares by $100, a move that was quickly matched by several rivals.

Atlanta-based Delta said that effective immediately, one-way walk-up fares are capped at $599, up from $499, for economy class and at $699 for first class. The move comes six months after it announced a ticket price overhaul designed to draw in more business travelers.

The carrier said that it will continue to offer the fares without a Saturday-night stay-over requirement. It also is keeping its reduction of most special service fees to $50 and 1,000 bonus miles for tickets purchased on the company's Web site.

The cap adjustment affects only full-fare walk-up and some three-day advance purchases. United Airlines and Continental Airlines matched the move, according to spokesmen there, and other rivals said they were studying it.

Delta, whose hub in Salt Lake City is commercial air travelers' only nonstop destination from Twin Falls, declined to say how much its one-way fare cap increases will generate in additional revenue.

"When Delta launched SimpleFares in January, our fare was selling at $45 per barrel compared to as much as $61 per barrel in recent weeks," said Paul Matson, Delta's chief marketing officer. "We have serious intentions to keep the current fare caps in place, we have been forced to find ways to offset this dramatic spike in costs."

Following the nationwide launch of Delta's fares program in January, other major carriers lowered their most expensive fares.

Industry expert Terry Tripler, who runs a ticket fare Web site called cheapests.com, said Thursday that he expects other airlines to hike their one-way fares following Delta's changes. "You could almost bet the rent on that one," Tripler said.

He was right, with Houston-based Continental and United, a unit of Elk Grove Village, Ill.-based UAL Corp., doing so within a few days of Delta's announcement.

American Airlines, a unit of AMR Corp. in Fort Worth, Texas, and Northwest Airlines Corp. based in Eagan, Minn., are each studying Delta's fare change, spokesmen said. Northwest had twice before tried to raise fares above $50, but failed in being able to maintain the increase.

Makers of electronics benefit from users' modifications

The Washington Post

Fans of the TiVo digital video recorder have discovered how to break it open and install a larger hard drive. Early users of the Roomba, a robot vacuum cleaner, are reviewing the device as a "mobile service robot." Owners of the new Sony PlayStation Portable have figured out how to use the game machine to surf the Internet and exchange instant messages.

In the digital era, every consumer-electronics product comes with microchips and software programming, and for a new generation of tech-savvy users, these are the raw materials needed to make a digital toy or appliance do tricks that its creators did not envision.

Sometimes tinkers become a consumer electronics firm's unofficial research-and-development unit. As innovations wind up as built-in features down the line, TiVo's most ardent fans came up with a way to record TV shows by sending commands via the Internet long before the company got around to officially offering that feature.

And before the iPod was the ubiquitous gadget it is today, early users of Apple's digital music player enabled it to store address and text files—a feature—the company now provides.

Customers also came up with the idea of recording their own talk and music shows and making them downloadable for the iPod—a phenomenon called "podcasting" that has become so popular that Apple recently rolled out how-to use-to-stream-line the process.

Americans have always liked to fiddle with things, from building better hair radios to jacking up car engines in the driveway. The urge fuels a multimillion-dollar industry in after-market auto parts, and automakers keep a close eye on how enthusiasts find new ways to use their products. Mitsubishi Motors, for example, sponsors teams that modify its Lancer Evolution performance car for auto shows.

For TiVo, the same instinct creates a drive to push the limits on anything that can be modified, such as the software. The first thing it did when I got my hands on a programmable TiVo computer was to try and make it do something it wasn't supposed to do," said Paul Salo, director of Institute for the Future, a Silicon Valley think tank.

Salo said he thinks it makes good business sense for gadget makers to keep an eye on the enthusiasts, tweakers and hackers that users are making. It's not the executives in the boardroom who figure out how to make a great gadget, Salo said, but the fanatics and renegades and people in garages... Hackers create markets.

Roomba's creator, iRobot Corp., is such a believer in letting programmers play with the appliance that it has said it might release tools to facilitate reprogramming.

But many consumer-electronics makers discourage such activity. At the very least, they who crack open the case on a new handheld computer, video game console digital music player is probably violating the warranty. At worst, hackers can undermine a computer's business-critical security.

Tivo supported a "TiVo underground" of hackers as long as users weren't devising ways to bypass the monthly subscription fee. But some users discovered that trick, and TiVo has started to ramp up security on the box, shutting some of the software doors that make modifications possible. "Companies walk sort of a fine line on this," said Michael Gartenberg, research director at Jupiter Research, a technology analyst firm.

Consumer-electronics giant Sony Corp. generally has not favored unauthorized tinkering on its wares. When one user hacked into a Sony robotic dog and posted directions on the Internet to make the toy dance to music, the company threatened to sue.

Now, the company is waging a quiet battle against attempts to modify its PlayStation Portable, or PSP.

Though PSP sales have lagged behind those of rival Nintendo's Game Boy, the device has been a smash with hackers, who have reprogrammed it for wireless Web surfing, loaded it with movies from DVD players and turned it into a calculator or drum synthesizer.

But whenever programmers work around the PSP's safeguards, Sony releases software that owners must install to play the latest games and that wipes out the homemade features. The company has updated the software twice, and the PSP came out in North America only three months ago.

"PSP contains robust technology and was designed to run specific applications," Sony said in a statement. "Consumers should be aware that any hacking or homebrew applications may cause damage to the PSP and will void the warranty." The company said the software updates have been made to "prevent this type of damage and protect against various forms of piracy."

Sony has reason to view such hacks as a threat to its bottom line, analysts say.

The same modifications that let PSP users send instant messages also make it possible to download illegal copies of games off the Internet.

Some programmers say that isn't their intent but acknowledge the problem.

"I wish there was a way we could do this without the piracy, which is both our hand in hand," said Sajed Chertan, a senior at a university in Ottawa. Chertan has designed free software that helps PSP users edit video content, such as recorded TiVo shows, onto the device. The software has been downloaded 650,000 times, he said.

Phillip Torrone, an editor at the tech-oriented Make magazine, said, "Sony's hard-line stance could be self-defeating. Each attempt to thwart hackers makes them more determined to do their tricks, he said. Even mainstream users who

I think the really smart companies should release their products to the alpha geeks for six months and let the alpha geeks play around with them.

—Phillip Torrone, Make magazine editor want to jazz up their devices turn to the Internet where they can get not only underground help but learn how to get pirated software and movies.

Torrone says he plans a homebrew version of chess for the PSP; he thinks he has a better idea for gadget makers. "I think the really smart companies should release their products to the alpha geeks for six months and let the alpha geeks play around with them," he said. "It seems to me they'd save a lot of money on R&D, and they'd come up with much more solid products."

Plant

Continued from D6 scope out potential Western manufacturing sites. He described the Gooding warehouse as a sort of diamond in the rough.

"This facility had warrants on it," Koller said. "We had to walk around with flashlight." The Gooding Urban Renewal Agency—with the help of a state grant—purchased the building for $650,000 in order to lease it to the company for 10 years. Kiefer is paying property taxes on the building and will have the option to buy the property when the lease expires.

The plant's 37 workers now churn out a trailer per day, which isn't enough, said Troy Preut, Gooding's plant manager. Kiefer Bull has room to grow, and production will increase with market demand, Preut said.

That translates to more jobs, the company plans to have about 75 workers in Gooding within a year. Preut said the success impressed him on the quality of the area's work force and his employees' eagerness to learn.

"People in everything from fast food to construction to desk work have come here," Preut said. "All it takes is someone with a little ambition and their head on their shoulders to come learn how to work here."

In a speech at the ribbon-cutting ceremony, Gov. Dick Kempthorne applauded the efforts of state and local economic development officials in recruiting Kiefer Bull to Gooding. The move, he said, will help diversify Gooding County's largely dairy-based economy, he said. "The world's population continues to grow, and someone needs to feed it," Kempthorne said in an interview after his speech. "Do you want to diversify your portfolio?"

2005 CHEVROLET CORVETTE CONVERTIBLE

Keeping the image, boosting the power

By Ann M. Job
For The Associated Press

The flip-up headlamps are a new feature, but there's still no mistaking the Chevrolet Corvette.

One of America's most recognized and long-lived sports cars, the Corvette debuted a sixth-generation, more-sophisticated model for 2005.

With a fresh, streamlined look, this Corvette is the first since 1962 with exposed headlamps. It's also 5 inches shorter and 1 inch narrower than its predecessor and weighs a bit less.

A new, 400-horsepower V8 makes this the first production Corvette capable of going 186 miles an hour.

And there are high-tech features now such as keyless access that lets a driver enter and start the car without using a traditional key. In fact, the car is turned on and off with the push of a button. An easy, power-operated and completely lined soft top is a $1,995 option for the 2005 model.

Starting manufacturer's suggested retail price, including destination charge, is $44,510 for a 2005 Corvette coupe and $42,245 for a convertible, which was the test car.

Competitors include the 2005 Alfa Romeo Spider, which starts at $85,745, and the 2005 Chrysler Crossfire convertible, which starts at $35,110. Dating to 1953, the Corvette has blended a bold, uniquely American appearance with a two-seat sporty image.

The car also is known for American-style power. Indeed, Chevrolet's first small-block V8 was introduced in Corvettes in 1955, and Corvettes have a long racing heritage.

The 2005 Corvette, also known as the C6 by aficionados, denotes it's the sixth-generation model, has a showy, streamlined, aerodynamic body that, like its predecessors, sits low to the ground.

In fact, I looked up at passengers inside a Chrysler PT Cruiser that was in the lane next to me.

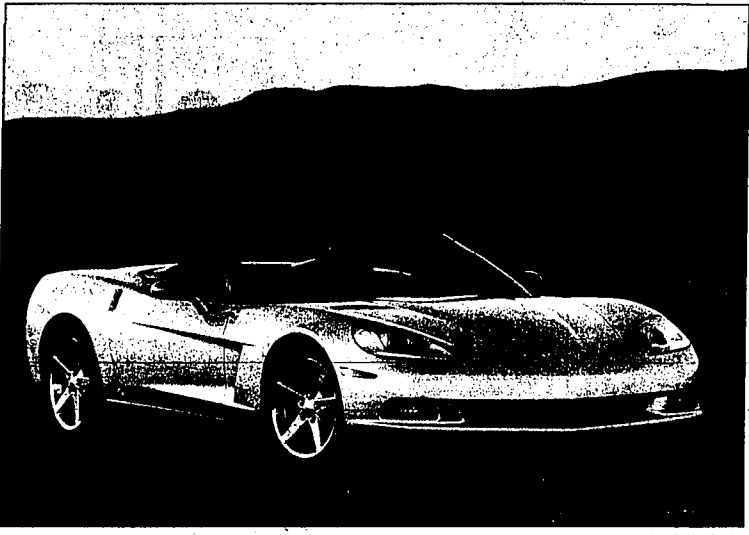

I couldn't see much of the traffic in front of me, because so many vehicles on the roads today are taller than the 4-foot-tall Corvette. For example, a Cadillac Escalade stands 6 feet tall.

But the agility of the new Corvette, plus ample power, meant I didn't have to stay behind the traffic too long.

The new engine — a 6-liter overhead valve V8 — rumbled to life the second the ignition fired. It's a low, almost sinister sound that had me fighting the urge to gun the engine a few times.

Horsepower is up from last year's 350, while torque has risen to 400 foot-pounds at 4,000 rpm. Chevy officials estimate a 0-to-60-mph time of 4.2 seconds, which is in the range of any well-known sports cars.

The test Corvette had a four-speed automatic transmission, which made driving in rush-hour traffic less of a chore than the six-speed manual would. But I still found myself managing the Corvette's power carefully, because it was very easy to get up on the bumper of the car ahead, with just a nudge of the gas pedal. It also was easy to get up over the speed limit and not realize it.

The 2005 Chevrolet Corvette Convertible boasts new look and power.

Price $42,245

Options: $1,995 (soft top), $1,500 (navigation), $1,295 (OnStar), $325 (satellite radio), $800 (destination charge)

The power was so much at the ready, it didn't take much to push my head back into the head restraint. And always there was the wonderfully rich-sounding V8. Indeed, some pedestrians turned to look at what kind of muscle car was nearby.

Dodge's Viper SRT-10 convertible has a deep, aggressive engine note, too, but it's from an 8.3-liter V10 with 500 horsepower and 525 foot-pounds of torque at 4,200 rpm.

The Crossfire's top engine is a less-throaty and less-powerful, 215-horsepower, 3.2-liter V6 with 229 foot-pounds of torque at 3,000 rpm.

Thankfully, the Corvette's fuel economy isn't as bad as I had feared. The government rating is 18 miles a gallon in city driving and 26 mpg on the highway. And during the test drive, which had a majority of highway miles, I averaged 24.9 mpg. This compares with the Viper's government rating of 12/20 mpg and the Crossfire's 21/28 mpg.

The new Corvette body structure, even on the convertible tester, had a rigid, solid feel. I didn't notice cowhobble, for example, on the car. Cowhobble, or the vibration or shaking of the windshield glass and supports, can be a factor in some convertibles.

The Corvette moved through curves and mountain twists with an ease that I don't recall from earlier models. The low car stuck closely to the pavement, with no sense of tipiness or unsettling weight shifts.

The longer I drove, the more I realized the Corvette provides fun, comfortable driving on challenging roads. Brakes were strong, too.

The speed-sensitive, magnetic power-assisted, rack-and-pinion steering had a precise feel, even if it wasn't quite as crisp as I had expected for a powerful sports car.

Traction control, side airbags, the pressure monitor and an Active Handling safety handling system are standard features.

I appreciated the optional head-up display that projected my speed and other pertinent information onto the lower part of the driver windshield. This reduced my need to scour the closely grouped gauges below.

Seats are low to the floor, so driver and passenger must drop down into them. They provide good support, though large people may want to test the comfort of the form-fitting buckets.

Storage space is still a drawback, as it has been in earlier Corvettes.

Cargo room under the large rear window is just 5 cubic feet with the top down, 11 cubic feet with the top up, for example. And people have to hoist items up and over the rather high-sitting rear deck lid, which was at waist height on my 5-foot-4 frame.

Map pockets on the two large doors also are shallow, and I feared each time I opened the Corvette doors that items I had in the pockets would fall out.

The center console's storage spot is shallow, too.

Chevrolet officials are looking for about 33,000 sales of Corvette convertibles and coupes annually. This would be an increase from the 30,856 sold in calendar 2004.

Through June this year, Corvette sales totaled 16,634, or right on pace with the forecast. The vast majority of Corvette convertible buyers are men, and two-thirds are married, according to marketing research.

Some 70 percent of buyers are between 45 and 64 years of age, and household income is in the $100,000-plus range.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration reported one safety recall of the new-generation Corvette, and it came early in the 2005 model year. The agency said 5,225 cars were recalled because brake lines might be exposed to exhaust heat and reduce brake power.

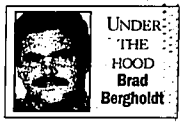

NHTSA did not report crash test results on the 2005 Corvette.

Because the vehicle is new, Consumer Reports does not provide a reliability rating.

Daytime lights kit can help drivers adhere to wiper laws.

Q. Having recently heard of the new law requiring the use of one's headlights when operating the windshield wipers, my concern is of remembering to do this consistently. Is it possible to modify my '96 Accord to do this automatically?

— June Taylor Winters, Calif.
 A. More than a dozen states have passed legislation requiring the use of vehicle headlights during conditions necessitating the use of windshield wipers or when there is reduced visibility.

UNDER THE HOOD
 Brad Bergoldt

Can your Accord be modified to do this on its own? Sun, I haven't yet found a wiper/headlight retrofit kit on the market, but they're sure to come soon. A sharp and willing automotive electrical shop also could create such a kit, using a sturdy relay or two, a pair of fuses, some wire and the right electrical connections.

The simplest solution is to purchase a daytime running lights kit and have a qualified technician install it. The better kits run about $50 and require only three electrical connections — power ground and low-beam headlights. The DRL module's internal circuit senses charging system voltage and turns on the low-beam headlights only when the engine is running.

Q. What's the best way to cure squeaking belts? Mine really sound off for a few minutes each morning.

— Jerry Poulsen, Milpitas, Calif.
 A. Belt noise can occur for a variety of reasons: a glazed friction surface, contamination, improper tension and incorrect pulley alignment. Start by checking your belt(s) for excessive looseness. This is far more of an issue with individual V-belts, as the automatic tensioner or used on single, serpentine belts generally does a good job.

If a belt shows more than superficial and infrequent cracking, glazing or oil contamination, it should be replaced. Dangle alignment also might be the culprit, particularly with a serpentine belt. A replacement alternator or other belt-driven accessory might mount up slightly fore or aft, or be canted at an angle, causing the belt to disengage as it passes through the pulley.

What about spray-on belt dressings? In my opinion, they're a short-term solution that covers up the real issue and can make a bit of a mess. My favorite replacement belt is the Goodyear Gatorback. They run more quietly and offer longer longevity than any other I've tried.

NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE
At 10:00 o'clock AM on October 5, 2005, in the Office of First American Title Company, 150 Third Avenue North, Twin Falls, Idaho, First American Title Company, Inc., successor by merger to First American Title Company, as Trustee, will sell public auction, to the highest bidder, for cash, a few items of the United States, all payable at the time of sale, the following described property: First National Bank of Twin Falls County, Idaho, and described as follows, to-wit:
The Northwest 3/4 of Lot 14 in Block 55 of Buhl Township, Twin Falls County, Idaho, according to the plat thereon, recorded in Volume 1 of Plats, Page 53, records of said County.

Information concerning the foreclosure action may be obtained from the Trustee's office, phone number is (208) 755-5511. According to the Trustee's records, the street address of 150 Third Avenue North, Twin Falls, Idaho, is some-times associated with said property.

Said sale will be made without covenant of warranty, or any other covenants or encumbrances, to satisfy the obligations secured by, and pursuant to the power of sale conferred in and by the following instrument: A certain deed, a single woman, as Grantor, to First American Title Company, an Idaho corporation, et al., as Grantee, in and to said County of Buhl, Wood and Loss B. Wood, husband and wife, dated August 3, 1996, and recorded August 3, 1996, in Instrument No. 1068-014098, the beneficial interest subsequently assigned to Mountain States Finance Company by Assignment of Beneficial Interest, dated August 1, 1996, as Instrument No. 1068-014098, all records of Twin Falls County, Idaho.

The above Grantor(s) are named to comply with Section 45-1506(4)(a) Idaho Code. No representation is made that they are, or are not, personally responsible for the payment of the debt. The default for which this sale is to be made is the failure to:

- make the monthly installment of $278.83 due for the 3rd day of September, 2004, and a like sum of $278.83 due for the 3rd day of each and every month thereafter;
- comply with Paragraph A.4. of said Deed of Trust, to pay at least ten days before delinquency all taxes and assessments affecting said property. Real property taxes are delinquent for 2001, 2002, 2003 and 2004, with penalty and interest accrued thereon.

The principal balance is $10,910.62, together with interest thereon at 12.00% per annum (if the amount of $455.55, and a late fee of $13.40 for each payment monthly installment, all of which are due on the 3rd day of each month). All delinquencies are now due together with any late charges, advances to protect the security, and fees and costs associated with this foreclosure. The Beneficiary elects to sell or cause said property to be sold to satisfy its obligation. On or about the 3rd day of June, 2005, the Beneficiary, First American Title Company, Inc., Successor by merger to First American Title Company, By: Darlene DeW-Nelson, Trust Officer.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE Bobby Wolff

"To rise from error to truth is rare and beautiful." - Victor Hugo

South faces a difficult decision after East's overall, for he is long in his opponent's suit and has great strength, which might in theory make a penalty double attractive...

East should be able to deduce why West (with what is obviously relatively weak hands) did not lead the suit of East's overall.

The best does happen. West's suits gets established immediately, and when declarer starts diamonds, South can strike a killing blow by putting up the diamond queen on the first round.

This card has no value to West if South has the diamond jack, but with East holding three diamonds to the jack, declarer is faced with a choice of poisons.

Hand analysis showing North and South cards: NORTH 7 5 4, 10 6 5 4 3 2, AK 10 9 6 5, 2. SOUTH AK 3 2, K Q, 4 2, AK J 5 3.

Vulnerable: North-South Dealer: South

The bidding: South West North East 1♠ Pass 1♦ 2♣ 3NT All pass

Opening lead: Heart four

BID WITH THE ACES 07-15-B

South holds: AKQ 3 2, K Q, AK J 5 3

South West North East 1♠ Pass 1♥ Pass

Dbl. Pass 1♥ Pass

ANSWER: Rebid two clubs. This is not perfect, but the sequence of doubling and then changing suits shows a very strong hand and should let partner, with a maximum hand, explore for the right game.
