Deadly day for Marines

Michael Davis, 5, right, and Jessica Davis, 6, center, wait while their grandmother, Marie Gallagher, places a flag Wednesday at the base outside the 25th Marine Regiment's 3rd Battalion Headquarters & Service Company, in Brook Park, Ohio. Upon learning that 14 more Marines were reported killed in Iraq, the children asked Gallagher to take them to the base so they could place their flags there.

Roadside explosion kills 14 servicemen from Ohio

BAGHDAD, Iraq — U.S. Marines were traveling in a lightly armored vehicle to assault insurgent positions near a way station for foreign fighters infiltrating from Syria. Suddenly, a thunderous explosion rang out. The vehicle flipped over in a fireball.

Fourteen Marines were killed, as was a civilian translator. Another Marine manager to scramble from beneath the overturned amphibious vehicle often used to ferry Marines for beach landings. He was wounded but alive.

The attack Wednesday in western Iraq was the deadliest roadside bombing suffered by American forces in the war.

The victims were from the same Ohio-based Reserve unit as were six members of a Marine sniper team killed on Monday in an ambush claimed by the Islamic extremist Ansar al-Sunnah Army.

roses was placed at the gate of the Marine headquarters, an old brick schoolhouse.

The deaths brought to 23 the number of Marines killed in the past week in fighting along the volatile "Euphrates Valley" of western Iraq and marked one of the bloodiest periods for U.S. forces in months. In all, 44 American service members have died in Iraq since July 24—all but two in combat.

President Bush lamented the deaths of the 14 Marines, calling the attack a "grim reminder America is still at war."

"These terrorists and insurgents will use brutal tactics because they're trying to shake the will of the United States of America. They want us to retreat," Bush told some 2,000 lawmakers, business leaders and public policy experts in Grapevine, Texas.

The heavy loss of life cast new attention on a long-time AFOS complaint — the lack of protection provided by their armored amphibious vehicles, or AVs. The vehicles are designed to be dropped from ships for coastal assaults. Although fast and maneuverable, the vehicles have armor plating that is lighter than those used by the Army — a critical issue in a war where the roadside bomb is the most common threat.

Moreover, American commanders have warned that while insurgent bombings have been declining in number, they have been increasing in power and sophistication. Villagers reached by telephone said the blast blew the vehicle into pieces, and a large crater could be seen nearby.

"This is a very lethal and unfortunately very adaptable enemy we are faced with," said U.S. Army Brig. Gen. Carter Harra, a Pentagon staff officer and former commander of U.S. forces in Mosul.

Marines have been fighting for months in a string of towns along the Euphrates to try to seal a major infiltration route for foreign fighters slipping into Iraq from Syria.

Cassia County considers CAFOs tonight

Woodbury CAFO conditional-use permit

- Total: 9,999 animal units
- Mature cows: 4,396 milking cows and 900 dry cows for a total of 5,296 animal units
- Replacement heifers: 4,703 animal units
- Land: 3,635 acres currently zoned as multiple use and used as farm ground
- Location: 900 S. 450 E., Burley
- Annual water use: 155 acre feet for stock water purposes and 63.09 acre feet for parlor wash for a total of 218.77 acre feet.

BURLEY — Tonight, Cassia County officials will consider requests for a dairy and a feedlot expansion after a flurry of similar requests in recent months.

At its July 7 meeting, the county planning and zoning board decided to request an evaluation from the state's Confined Animal Feeding Operation siting team for a dairy proposed by Drin and Linda Woodbury. With the evaluation complete, residents will have the opportunity to comment on the siting report — but only on the siting report.

Earlier this week, county commissioners upheld the planning and zoning board's decision to grant David Funk's request for a 6,290-animal-unit dairy near the Twin Falls County-tyline. Darrell Funk's permit requests for a dairy and a feedlot also were recently approved by planning and zoning. The Oak Valley Dairy, proposed by Mike and Sarah Aardema, was permitted for 5,172 animal units by planning and zoning on July 21. Up to 10,000 animal units will be allowed at Oak Valley once the owners show proof of acquiring an additional 3,771 acres.

The Woodburys have applied for a conditional-use permit for a 9,999-animal-unit dairy that will be located outside the county's designated area for CAFOs. Questions over the operation's location, size and ownership have arisen as well as concerns over road improvements that may be needed for the dairy.

David Shirley, attorney for the Burley Highway District, said in a letter to the county that the district has no objections to

Snuppy's the one: Researchers create world's first cloned dog

Feat suggests there could be a market for cloning pets

By Rick Weiss
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — South Korean researchers Wednesday said they have created the world's first cloned dog: a playful black, tan and white Afghan hound named Snuppy.

The puppy, grown from a single cell taken from the ear of a three-year-old male Afghan, marks a milestone in the race to fabricate genetically identical dogs for research and as companion animals.

The achievement required a staggering amount of work. Multiple surgeries on more than 100 anesthetized dogs and the painstaking creation of more than 1,000 laboratory-grown embryos led to the birth of just two cloned puppies — one of which died after three weeks.

But the feat suggests that a market in cloned dogs, through which people grieving the loss of their favorite pets could order genetic duplicates, may not be as futuristic as some had thought. By last spring, a seven-year-old, multi-million dollar U.S. effort, the success has clinched South Korea's quickly growing reputation as a premier center for cloning and stem cell research.

The researchers said canine cloning will allow them to test stem-cell therapies under development for people and dogs, cure some dog diseases along the way.

Duncan a suspect in California murder

10-year-old boy was kidnapped, killed

RIVERSIDE, Calif. — A convicted sex offender suspected of killing three people in Idaho and abducting two children, one of whom was later found dead, is under investigation in the 1997 kidnapping and killing of a 10-year-old Beaumont, Calif. boy, the Riverside County sheriff said Wednesday.

Joseph Edward Duncan III, 42, is linked by a single fingerprint to the scene of the killing of Anthony Martinez, Sheriff Bob Doyle told a news conference in Riverside, 60 miles east of Los Angeles.

Duncan was arrested last month for investigation of bludgeoning to death three people at a home near Coeur d'Alene and kidnapping Shasta Greene, 8, and her brother Dylan, 9, on May 16. Duncan was seized when people at a restaurant recognized the girl with him. Dylan's body was interred in Montana.

Confirmation of the fingerprint match was received on Monday, the sheriff said. "He's our suspect. This is huge," Doyle said. "We followed up 15,000 leads over eight years. You can imagine the elation that everybody has."

FBI agents involved in the Idaho investigation contacted Riverside authorities on July 14, and said Duncan mentioned the name Martinez and the general area.

"So they called us to say, 'Hey, you guys have a case?'" Doyle said.

Investigators flew to Idaho to fingerprint Duncan. They tried to interview him but he refused to talk.

On April 4, 1997, Anthony was forced into a white car in the town of Beaumont as his friends looked on. The children were playing when a stranger offered them a dollar to help find his lost cat. Sixteen days later a ransom note in the boy's name, bound body in a desert area about 70 miles to the east.

The kidnapper was described at the time as blue-eyed and mustachioed, but efforts to track him down proved fruitless despite the extremely high profile of the case. Before the end of that April, authorities had evaluated more than 100 people as suspects.

After circling waters led a ranger to Anthony's remains in the middle of the desert. Duncan wept and prayed, and authorities vowed to capture the killer. "I know who he is. I'm going to get it," then-Sheriff Larry Shihm pledged at the time.

U.S. journalist critical of Basra Highway police abducted and shot dead

By Abbas Fayadh Associated Press writer

Steven Vincent

BASRA, Iraq — An American freelance journalist, who accused Basra's police of being infiltrated by Shiite militiamen in a recent New York Times column and his internet blog, was found shot to death in the southern city after being abducted by armed men driving a police car. Steven Vincent, whose work also has appeared in The Wall Street Journal, and his female Iraqi translator were abducted at gunpoint by five men Tuesday evening as they left a currency exchange shop, police say. Col. Karim al-Zaidi said Wednesday. Vincent's body was discovered Tuesday night on the side of the highway south of Basra. He had been shot in the head and body al-Zaidi said. "The Weidli, was seriously wounded. "I can confirm to you that officials in Basra have recovered the body of journalist Steven Vincent," U.S. Embassy spokesman Pete Mitchell said Wednesday. "The U.S. Embassy is working with British military and local Iraqi officials in Basra to determine who is responsible for the death of this journalist. Our condolences go out to the family. State Department spokesman Tom Casey also condemned Vincent's "brutal murder" and said the U.S. was working closely with Iraqi and multinational forces to investigate the killing. Italy's state-run RAI television said Wednesday that one of its producers had been killed in Iraq last month. Adnan al-Bayati, who worked as a freelance producer and translator for RAI, was shot and killed by three armed men at his Baghdad home on July 23, RAI said. The broadcaster contacted The Associated Press on Wednesday after being reports of Vincent's death and realizing that al-Bayati's death had not been covered by the international media. Police said Vincent, a writer who had been staying in Basra for several months working on a book about the history of the city. In an opinion column published July 31 in the Times, Vincent wrote that Basra's police force had been heavily infiltrated by members of Shiite political groups, including those loyal to radical cleric Muqtada al-Sadr. Vincent quoted an unidentified Iraqi police lieutenant as saying that some police were behind many of the assassinations of former Baath Party members that have taken place in Basra. "He told me that there is even a sort of death car," a white Toyota Mark II that glides through the city streets, carrying off-duty police officers in the pay of extremist religious groups to their next assignment," he wrote. Vincent also was critical of the British military, which is responsible for security in Basra. "It's a matter of representing the power of turning a blind eye to abuses of power by Shiite extremists in the city.

of the roads, then the impact would be minimal. Twin Falls County Commissioner Bill Brockman, who ranches in eastern Twin Falls County, said he has received many phone calls on the subject, both in favor of the delay development and against. According to Idaho code, Twin Falls, Jerome can claim a limit load limits or charge Cassia County for extra road maintenance, he said. "I'm standing up for the Murrah," Brockman said. "I think they (Cassia officials) have a moral obligation to be good neighbors," Brockman said. Christensen responded, "We understand that all communities anywhere in the United States have issues like this, where there is economic development in a boundary area." Cassia County has to deal with Jerome, Blaine and Power counties, which could have adverse effects on Cassia roads, he said. "We have our jurisdictions, and there isn't anything in Idaho law to mitigate those impacts," Christensen said. Stansky said for now his board is taking a "wait-and-see position."

property taxes and building permits while Twin Falls County will get nothing but torn-up roads, he said. It costs about $80,000 a mile to repave the roads to support the extra weight of many feed, manure and milk trucks traveling along 20 miles of roads in Twin Falls County 24 hours a day. Stansky said the district maintains about 62 miles of paved roads and 46 miles of unpaved roads. Before the Cassia County Planning and Zoning Commission approved the most recent dairy requests adding up to around 25,000 cows, Stansky and other Murrah District officials complained to them. The thousands of cows on the west end of Cassia County are part of the county's push to build economic development. Gossner Cheese Co. plans on making cheese in the recently closed J.R. Simplot Co. potato processing plant from the milk of 20,000 cows. Cassia County officials are not sympathetic to Murrah officials' worries. "We haven't really offered anything as far as compensation for impact," Cassia County Commissioner Paul Christensen said. "There will be an increase of trips to feed; now if operators stay within weight limits, especially in the spring when the first rains coming out of the Woodbury proposal. "However, it should be noted that the roadway system to and from the dairy would need substantial improvements to support the increased flow of traffic by trucks," Shirley wrote. The highway board does not have the scientist funds to pay for the needed improvements, Shirley said. Orin Woodbury told The Times-News that he would be willing to consider contributing to road improvements if necessary. However, he pointed out that the highway district has upgraded roads for other dairies and feedlots in the past without donations from owners. "If you're bringing a multi-million dollar project in, they should be able to help with roads," Woodbury said. Woodbury's neighbor, Rick Wrigley, along with other members of the Wrigley family, noted a variety of issues in their letter to the county including concern over who would own and manage the operation. "I have been a neighbor to Mr. Woodbury for 25 years," Wrigley said. "He is a good neighbor and friend... I am not anti-dairy and I am not against a dairy on Mr. Woodbury's property. But we would like to go on record that we do oppose the site, the unacceptable access road to the site, the runoff and other issues."

Woodbury acknowledges that his property is for sale and says he's also considering other ownership arrangements for the dairy, such as a joint venture. "We're just looking at all the options," Woodbury said. The level of opposition to his dairy proposal surprises Woodbury, who feels he should be able to make improvements on his own land. "I don't agree with statements recently made by Cassia County Commissioner Chris Garcia that residents living in agricultural areas should try to buy as much property around them as possible if they don't want a dairy or feedlot nearby. The board also will hear Von and Hyrum Gibby's request for a conditional-use permit to expand their feedlot, which is also located outside of the CAFO overlay zone. Over the next 10 years, the Gibbys intend to build a total of 5,000 animal units at their Valley View Farms LLC feedlot, located at 600 E. 650 S. Twin Falls County Planning and Zoning Commission met at 8 tonight in the City Council Chambers in Burley City Hall. Continued from A1 "Wouldn't it be great if the first beneficiaries of stem cell medicine were our best friends?" asked Gerald Schatten, a reproductive scientist at the University of Pittsburgh School of Medicine who serves as a consultant for the Korean team. Snuppy's birth announcement, published in the Thursday issue of the journal Nature, was greeted with scorn by some animal rights activists, who decried the work as inhumane and wasteful given the global glut of unwanted dogs. The cruelty and the body count outweigh any benefit that can be gained from this, said Mary Beth Sweatt, a vice president at People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals in Norfolk, Va. Others expressed concern that publication of the team's advanced techniques may help rogue scientists create the first human clone. But the researchers and others defended the achievement as an important step toward boosting the usefulness of dogs as biomedical research tools. From dachshunds to Great Danes, dogs are extremely diverse, and many of the more than 400 breeds are predisposed to particular diseases. Scientists hope clones with specific illnesses will help them decipher the molecular underpinnings of those syndromes and develop treatments for the human diseases those dog ailments mimic. "Dogs are really good models for biomedical research," said Mark Washburn, a researcher at Texas A&M University who a few years ago abandoned a costly effort to be the first to clone a canine.

Astronaut completes repairs on shuttle's underbelly

By Marcia Dunn
Associated Press writer

SPACE CENTER, Houston — Spacewalking repairman Stephen Robinson was barely back inside Discovery and out of his spacewalk Wednesday when Mission Control called: What would he think about going out again to take care of another trouble spot?

NASA said it may order a fourth spacewalk, on Friday, to repair a torn thermal blanket beneath a cockpit window.

The news came moments after Robinson pulled off the first-ever repair of a shuttle's thermal shield in space. Using his gloved right hand, he gently plucked out two potentially dangerous bits of filler material protruding from the shuttle.

His success drew a big sigh of relief from NASA, which feared that "this ceramic filler, which might cause the shuttle to over-heat during its descent through the atmosphere and lead to another Columbia-type disaster. At the same time, the space agency feared that the repair itself could cause more damage.

There was no immediate word from the exhausted but exhilarated Robinson on how he felt about going out another spacewalk to deal with the thermal blanket.

A camera attached to the space shuttle's robotic arm shows astronaut Steve Robinson heading toward the underbelly of Discovery to remove gap fillers in this view from television on Wednesday.

Engineers are concerned that a roughly 1-foot section of the blanket could rip away during re-entry, whip backward and slam into the shuttle, perhaps causing grave damage. They expect to know by Thursday afternoon whether the danger is real and whether any blanket trimming is required.

During Wednesday's repair job, Robinson never had to pull out his forceps or his makeshift hacksaw, which he took along just in case the filler material was stuck between the thermal tiles and he needed to employ more force. But he had to be careful not to bump into the shuttle's fragile thermal tiles and make things worse.

Standing on the end of the international space station's 58-foot robot arm, he tugged out the first piece as the two linked spacecraft passed over Massachusetts. By the time he had pulled out the next fabric strip 10 minutes later, he had crossed the Atlantic and was zooming over the French coast.

"That was the ride of the century," Robinson exclaimed. "Steve, we trained for four years, you're going to spend the next four years signing autographs," said his spacewalking partner, Sotchi Noguchi.

Robinson, a 49-year-old mechanical engineer and musician who took his childhood space-cadet lurches into orbit with him, became the first person to venture beneath an orbiting shuttle.

His crewmates inside the shuttle kept an eye on him via the robot-arm camera. This spacewalking partner watched from 75 feet away. But Robinson described what he was seeing and doing the entire time, so his colleagues would know he was safe.

"I'm pulling, it's coming out very easily," Robinson called. "The offending gap filler has been removed."

The second piece slid out even more easily with just a gentle tug of Robinson's right thumb and index finger.

"I was absolutely relieved and I think you could probably hear the sigh of relief throughout the building" after the first piece came out, flight director Paul Till said. "And when he pulled the second one out, it was a huge relief and it definitely felt like the rest is downhill from here."

The mood aboard Discovery also improved dramatically. Space station flight director Mark Ferring said he could hear "a palpable change in the tone" of the astronauts' voices.

During the six-hour spacewalk, Robinson and Noguchi installed a massive toolbox filled with spare parts, on the space station.

NASA had spent four days analyzing the potential threat of the so-called thermal tile gap fillers and what to do about them. Officials insisted it was absolutely safe to simply remove the fillers. Their primary purpose on those two spots was to prevent the silica glass fiber thermal tiles from rubbing against each other and chipping during liftoff.

With the gap filler problem behind them, teams of engineers and thermodynamic experts turned their attention to the torn, crumpled blanket beneath the commander's side window. The blanket is covered with a quiltlike fabric and stuffed like a pillow, and serves as insulation. The insulation would blow harmlessly away if the blanket came apart, the concern is where the top layer of fabric might go and how much damage it might do at high descending speeds, despite its less than 1-ounce weight, said deputy shuttle program manager Wayne Hale.

Tests show animal does not have mad cow disease

By Barry Shichter
Knight Ridder News Service

FORT WORTH, Texas — Concerns over another possible case of mad-cow disease were laid to rest Wednesday when new rounds of tests at a federal veterinary laboratory in Iowa and Britain's counterpart facility in Weybridge, England, proved negative for the always fatal brain-wasting disease.

"Needless to say, we were very pleased with these results," said John Clifford, the Agriculture Department's chief veterinarian.

It was a quiet case in the prolonged and costly fight to stamp out the highly unusual disease, bovine spongiform encephalopathy, or BSE.

While enduring criticism for the handling of a Texas cow that was found positive for BSE seven months after it was confirmed negative, the department disclosed last week that a private veterinarian had "forgotten" about a brain tissue sample taken in April from a cow with suspicious calving problems. The USDA did not disclose the cow's location.

Cows with calving problems are typically considered downers — alive, but unable to walk — that require BSE testing under federal guidelines.

The chemicals used by the unnamed veterinarian to preserve the sample made it impossible for animal protection investigators to run an initial screening test, known as rapid BioRad.

Instead, an immunohistochemistry test was made and the result carried tell-tale staining that showed up when BSE is present. But this came in an abnormal pattern, Clifford said earlier.

Wednesday, he explained that the initial non-definitive result was caused by "artificial or spurious" staining. "And while this staining did not resemble BSE, we felt the prudent course was to conduct the additional tests."

"Through all the twists and turns of this saga, we continue to come to the conclusion that the U.S. beef supply is safe and the nation's herd is free of BSE," said Matt Brockman, executive vice president of the Fort Worth-based Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association.

The first case, a Canadian-bred dairy cow, was discovered in Washington state in December 2003. The second was the native-born Texas beef cow whose BSE contamination was confirmed June 24.

At no time was the U.S. food supply at risk, since both carcasses were incinerated. Both animals were born before the 1997 ban on cattle feed made from rendered cattle parts, a product scientists believe spread the disease. The vast majority of beef now consumed comes from cattle born after 1997.

A rare human disease, variant Creutzfeldt-Jacob, is believed contracted from BSE-infected beef. The only U.S. case involved a Florida woman who lived in Britain when BSE-contaminated beef products were sold.

Martha Stewart's sentence extended

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — Martha Stewart's release from home confinement and her electronic ankle has been delayed three weeks to the end of the month, her lawyer said Wednesday.

Attorney Walter Dellinger said in a one-sentence letter that the home-and-earrings marketing queen "has agreed to an extension of the terms of her home confinement until Aug. 31."

Those conditions include staying inside her home north of New York City except for 48 hours a week of employment, food shopping, doctor appointments and church. And Stewart must always wear the ankle, about which she has repeatedly complained, saying it irritates her skin.

"I am not allowed to take it off at any time, and I am not allowed, while in my home, to have any padding under the strap," she once told fans during an Internet chat. "I hope none of you ever has to wear one."

Stewart even boasted once that she had learned from the Internet how to remove the transmitter, although probation officials said she never did.

It wasn't revealed what Stewart did to earn the extra three weeks of confinement. Dellinger's assistant, Ann Kienlen, said he would not elaborate beyond his one-sentence announcement.

The chief U.S. probation officer in New York, Chris Stanton, would not confirm or deny the extension of Stewart's confinement. A call to Stewart's company, Martha Stewart Living Omnimedia Inc., was not immediately returned.

The New York Post reported Sunday that Stewart was seen riding an off-road vehicle on her estate and attended a yoga class nearby. Stanton would not say if those were probation violations or if they constituted part of her employment.

Stewart's release from the ankle and home confinement had been expected Aug. 10. Her original five-month confinement sentence followed a five-month prison term for lying about a stock sale.

DNA frees man after 26 years

By John Palm
Associated Press writer

MIAMI — A man who spent 26 years behind bars as Florida's "Bird Road Rapist" was released from prison Wednesday after DNA evidence cleared him in two of the attacks and cast doubt on whether he was responsible for any of the crimes.

"Victory," 67-year-old Luis Diaz said as he walked out of the courthouse a free man. He said he planned to spend time with his family, was not bitter about the time he lost and didn't blame prosecutors.

PATRICK FARRELL/The Associated Press

Luis Diaz, 67, reacts as a circuit judge throws out his five rape convictions on Wednesday in a Miami courtroom. The Cuban-American man, who spent 26 years behind bars for a series of rapes, was released from prison Wednesday after DNA evidence cleared him in two of the attacks.

Diaz was convicted in 1980 and sentenced to life in prison for seven of 25 sexual assaults that occurred between 1977 and 1979 in the Bird Road area of Coral Gables, south of downtown Miami.

The Bird Road Rapist would attack young women drivers, signaling them to pull over by flashing his headlights and then forcing them to have sex at gunpoint.

Diaz was arrested after a victim who worked as a gas station attendant spotted a driver she said looked like her attacker. She gave police the license plate number which led them to Diaz.

The convictions were based on identifications made by eight victims in all, even though some of them initially described a much heavier and taller Hispanic who spoke English, Diaz, a Cuban-American, spoke little English and, because of his work as a fry cook, smelled of onions — something no victim mentioned.

In 1993, two victims recanted their identification of Diaz, and those two convictions were thrown out. But five other convictions remained, until lawyers asked for DNA testing.

Evidence gathered from the two of the rape victims was discovered, and DNA testing of the semen conclusively excluded Diaz, as the attacker in both cases.

Lightning strike kills Utah Boy Scout

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A bolt of lightning killed a 15-year-old Boy Scout and injured three others while they slept in a log shelter during a violent storm.

we need help."

"There was a big flash and a big boom," said Dr. Stephen Morris, a trauma surgeon at the University of Utah's burn unit who was with the troop. "Somebody came running down the trails saying, 'Help

Morris said he tried in vain for 90 minutes to revive the boy, who had no heartbeat and wasn't breathing after the strike Tuesday night.

The family of the victim, Paul Ostler, released a statement thanking leaders and doctors at the scout camp "who tried so valiantly to save Paul's life." Two of the injured boys were flown to the University of Utah burn unit. One 13-year-old boy was in good condition and the family of the other asked that no information be released by the hospital.

The third boy, also 13, was released Wednesday after being treated for minor burns, said his father, Doug Edwards.

The accident marked the second deadly lightning strike to hit a Boy Scout camp in the last week.

Woman on life support dies after giving birth

Cancer-stricken 26-year-old was brain-dead but kept alive long enough to incubate baby

By Matthew Barakat
Associated Press writer

ARLINGTON, Va. — A brain-dead woman who was kept alive for three months so she could deliver the child she was carrying was removed from life support Wednesday and died, a day after giving birth.

"This is obviously a bittersweet time for our family," Justin Torres, the woman's brother-in-law, said in a statement.

Susan Torres, a cancer-stricken, 26-year-old researcher at the National Institutes of Health, suffered a stroke in May after the death of her husband.

Her family decided to keep her alive to give her fetus a chance. It became a race between the fetus' development and the cancer that was ravaging the woman's body.

Doctors said that Torres' health was deteriorating and that the risk of harm to the fetus finally outweighed the benefits of extending the pregnancy.

Torres gave birth to a daughter, Sharon Anne Catherine Torres, by Caesarean section on Tuesday at Virginia Hospital Center. The baby was about two months premature and weighed 1 pound, 13 ounces. She was in the neonatal intensive care unit.

Dr. Donna Hilden-Archer, the hospital's director of neonatology, described the child as "very vigorous." She said the baby had responded when she received stimulation, indicating she was healthy.

Doctors removed Torres from life support early Wednesday with the consent of her husband, Jason Torres, after she received the final sacrament of the Roman Catholic Church.

"We thank all of those who prayed and provided support for Susan, the baby and our family," Jason Torres said in a statement.

"We especially thank God for giving us little Susan. My wife's courage will never be forgotten."

This is obviously a bittersweet time for our family.

— Justin Torres, brother of deceased mother

English-language medical literature contains at least 11 cases since 1979 of irreversibly brain-damaged women whose lives were prolonged for the benefit of the developing fetus, according to the University of Connecticut Health Center.

Dr. Christopher McManus, who coordinated care for Susan Torres, put the infant's chances of developing cancer at less than 25 percent. He said 19 women who have had the same aggressive form of melanoma as Torres have given birth, and five of their babies contracted the disease.

A Web site was set up to help raise money for the family's mounting medical bills, and as of two weeks ago, people from around the world had donated around $400,000.

The family said it must pay tens of thousands of dollars each week that insurance does not cover.

Jason Torres had quit his job to be by his wife's side, spending each night sleeping in a reclining chair next to her bed.

The couple have one other child — 2-year-old Peter, who has been staying with his grandparents.

Associated Press writer Kristin Geilneau in Richmond, Va., contributed to this report.

Clerics pledge oath to new Saudi king

By Salah Nasarwi
Associated Press writer

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia — Hundreds of tribal chiefs, Islamic clerics, princes and commanders pledged loyalty Wednesday to Saudi Arabia's new King Abdullah, vowing to "hear and obey" in a traditional Islamic ceremony that seats his status as monarch, after a decade as de facto ruler.

Abdullah's investiture strengthens his hand to push forward with what have been the hallmarks of his unofficial rule — limited steps toward reform and a crackdown on Islamic extremism and militants linked to al-Qaida.

"I promise God and you that I will adopt the Quran as the constitution and Islam as the course, and that all my concerns will be to establish righteousness and justice," Abdullah said in his first address to the nation as king. "I appeal to you to support me and help me carry this trust and don't hesitate to advise me."

Saudi new King Abdullah bin Abd al-Aziz, center, is surrounded by hundreds of Islamic clerics, tribal chiefs and other prominent Saudis on Wednesday before he receives oaths of loyalty in a traditional Islamic investiture ceremony that bestows his legitimacy.

Western dignitaries flowed through a Riyadh palace to congratulate the 81-year-old Abdullah and express condolences for the death of his predecessor and half brother, King Fahd, Abdullah. In white robes and a cream-colored cloak, sat with Britain's Prince Charles and France's Minister, Tony Blair as well as the king of Sweden and other European heads of state. One key meeting will be with Vice President Dick Cheney.

Saudi Arabia is a major U.S. ally in the Middle East, and Abdullah has worked to repair ties strained by the Sept. 11 attacks. In which 15 of the attackers were Saudis.

Foreign Minister Saud al-Faisal said he expected U.S.-Saudi relations to continue to improve and vowed a "total war" on terrorism.

"We stand firmly against (terrorism) not only militarily with security forces, but also with an ideological plan dealing with the causes and roots of those who joined the evil-doers," al-Faisal told reporters.

The allegiance ceremony — known as "bayah" — is key for Abdullah, who has been de facto ruler since Fahd suffered a debilitating stroke in 1995. Fahd died Monday at age 84.

Yemenis say they were held in secret U.S. jail

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Two Yemeni men say they were held in solitary confinement in secret, underground U.S. detention facilities in an unknown country and interrogated by masked men for more than 18 months without being charged or allowed any contact with the outside world. Amnesty International charged Wednesday.

Amnesty and human rights lawyers argued that the report added to long-standing claims that the United States has held "secret detainees" in its war on terror.

"We fear that what we have heard from these two men is just one small part of the much broader picture of U.S. secret detentions around the world," said Sharon Critoph, a researcher at Amnesty International who interviewed the men in Yemen.

Navy Lt. Commander Flex Plexico, noting that it was difficult to respond to a report he hasn't seen said, "We have said many times that the Department of Defense does not engage in the practice of renditions" — the transfer of terror suspects to third countries without court approval.

Plexico, a spokesman for the department, said it was important to note that training manuals of al-Qaida terrorist network "emphasize the tactic of making false abuse allegations." U.S. officials have denied allegations of secret detention facilities, saying they hold terror suspects only at the U.S. Naval base in Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, and in Iraq and Afghanistan. Lawyers who represent detainees say the CIA or other U.S. government agencies have used clandestine jails for terror suspects.

"The fact that there are underground CIA facilities somewhere where people are being tortured has been known for a while," said Michael Ratner a constitutional rights lawyer.

British charge first suspect

LONDON — British police filed their first charges in the London terror investigations Wednesday, accusing a 23-year-old man of withholding information about the July 21 transit bombers.

World in brief

Police say that in the week after the attack, Ismail Abdurrahman of southeast London had information he knew might help police capture suspects involved in "the commission, preparation or instigation of an act of terrorism."

He was charged under anti-terrorism legislation and is to attend a hearing in London on Thursday.

The charges could mark an important step forward for police seeking to build cases against the 17 people in custody in connection with the July 21 assault, in which bombs planted on three subways and a bus failed to fully detonate.

Police also are trying to uncover the larger network that may have supported those attackers, who struck exactly two weeks after four suicide bombers — also on three trains and a bus — killed 52 victims on July 7.

Crashed plane could have landed elsewhere

TORONTO — Toronto's airport was under "red alert" because of the threat of lightning when an Air France jetliner landed in a fierce rainstorm despite having enough fuel to reach another airport — a decision that was made by the pilot, airport authorities said Wednesday.

Investigators searching the wreckage of the Airbus A340 found the flight data and voice recorders — the so-called "black boxes." Officials hope the recorders will provide clues to what caused the aircraft to skid off a runway Tuesday at Lester B. Pearson International Airport and burst into flames.

All 309 passengers and crew escaped alive.

State puts its foot down to unseal court records

An Idaho Supreme Court panel acknowledged last week what was already apparent in some parts of the state: Court record systems are keeping Idaho citizens in the dark.

The panel found files in all 44 Idaho counties that should have been opened up in state court records searches, but were still sealed.

That oversight will return under a Supreme Court mandate to install new software in all court record computers, starting this September.

The flaws in county record programs were first exposed in eastern Idaho counties where pedophiles' court records were hidden away after their sentences.

The courts claimed a computer glitch was the cause for that case's disappearance. But that excuse didn't hold up after the paper discovered criminal cases involving sex offenders that were likewise sealed by the courts.

When reporters searched these records the county computers responded with the reply "case not found."

Judges will seal some case files to protect private and sensitive information, such as names of victims and telephone and address numbers.

But when these cases are closed and sentences given, there's absolutely no excuse for keeping those records under lock and key.

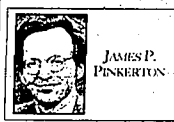

The Supreme Court panel says the new software will not only identify all civil and criminal cases, but it will also state the judge's explanation for sealing the case and for what period of time.

That still opens the door to sealing criminal cases from the public. But at the very least, the new program gives the public more rational response to public record searches, than the equivalent of "go fish."

Our view: New software for county court archives should help criminal records stay open to the public. What do you think? We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

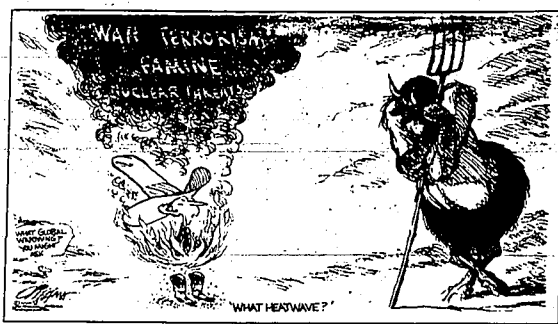

A survivor in the White House

George W. Bush has big problems. Fortunately for him, his opponents have bigger problems. Friday's Gallup released a poll showing the president's approval rating at 44 percent and his disapproval rating at 51 percent.

JAMES P. PINKERTON

So while the president has gained some legislative victories lately — a transportation bill, an energy bill, the Central American Free Trade Agreement — those were mostly low-yield affairs, the subject of heavy compromise, with little genuine energy.

But Bush's foes aren't doing any better. Saddam Hussein still is in jail. And many leading Bush antagonists are in the final stages — Jacques Chirac, Gerhard Schroeder and Kofi Annan — are on their last legs.

Howard Dean — have not proven particularly effective in rallying the "loyal opposition." Dean is simply a stereotypical liberal; the American people do not want to be led by a San Francisco Democrat.

And it's possible they'll excavate some "gotcha" item. But much more possible is that the Democrats, through knee-jerk hostility to a religion-minded cultural conservative, will convince a critical mass of the country that the incoming party of Al Smith and John F. Kennedy has been loath for a better phrase, the Catholic-bashing party.

Simpson wilderness plan considers all Idahoans

Mike Simpson is doing the right thing in working to protect the Boulder-White Clouds as wilderness. My grandparents introduced me to the Wood River Valley in 1957. As a young child, I remember being in awe of the vastness of the wilderness and loving the majestic beauty of the mountains surrounding this valley.

I feel fortunate to live so close to such beauty and always smile when remembering hiking and backpacking trips to the Boulder-White Clouds. Professionally, I can attest to the fact that people come to Idaho because of its spectacular beauty. Often, they only intend to come for short vacation, but they end up buying a home and spending every spare moment they have here.

INL plutonium plan loaded with suspect ideas

Last week, the spin doctors from the Department of Energy unpacked their charms and snake oil in Sun Valley and embarked on their road show to promote the consolidation and the siting of a new plutonium Laboratory. Needless to say, they failed miserably in their mission.

Disturbingly, several people I spoke to at the meeting voiced the suspicion that this plan is already a done deal, and all we were witnessing was a ploy at a democratic process. What shocking cynicism, one may say — but is it any wonder that we are cynical, given the climate of lies and deception which today characterizes the government in Washington?

Realizing that our annual journey through Twin Falls to meet a grandson returning from a two-year church mission at the Twin Falls airport, I was struck by the beauty of the hanging flower baskets fastened to the street lights on Shoshone Street. It made me aware for the first time what an attractive street this really is.

The amorphous world of Sen. Hillary Clinton

The conventional wisdom is that Sen. Hillary Clinton has moved right, becoming hawkish in war, socially centrist and tough on immigration as she prepares for a presidential bid in 2008.

No, wait, the conventional wisdom is that Sen. Hillary Clinton has always been a social moderate and is just redefining positions she's always held.

No, scratch that. The conventional wisdom is that Sen. Hillary Clinton is a socialist ideologue who secretly hates the military and wants to create a nanny state through universal health care and government-run day care.

Which of these is true principally depends on which you want to be true, as one can find some evidence for all. Clinton is, if nothing else, reliably flexible. What she personally believes seems to depend largely on the audience.

When in Mexico... Te quiere, you guys!

That's both the beauty and the problem of Hillary Clinton. She's whatever she needs to be to advance the only agenda to which she is unwaveringly loyal: the power of Hillary Clinton. She puts one in mind of a delighted self-portraitist, always discovering new textures and palettes. And like all politicians, she benefits from the Uzi-style news cycle that numbs Americans into sensory exhaustion and glazed-eye passivity.

Who can remember the last thing anybody said? Illegal immigration, one of the issues Clinton globbered onto after Sept. 11, is a case in point. If you caught Clinton's WABC Radio interview back in February 2003, you heard her say that she is "you know, adamantly against illegal immigrants."

This quote has been resurrected repeatedly to demonstrate Clinton's shift to the right, especially as a direct comparison to President George W. Bush, who seems more interested in schmoozing Mexican President Vicente Fox and, like Clinton, attracting Hispanic voters than in taking seriously the problem of sealing our porous borders.

How bad is it? The day of the London bombings, while the world was riveted on body counts, the Texas Border Sheriff's Coalition was meeting in Del Rio, Texas, where those living closest to the problem—described plausible and sickening doomsday scenarios. With 6,000 to 7,000 trucks daily crossing the U.S.-Mexico border, we are extremely vulnerable to a deadly attack, they warned.

Of greatest concern among illegals are non-Mexicans. Typically, Mexicans are returned home while non-Mexicans are taken to U.S. detention centers, where limited space means most are released and (insert whoopee cushion here) ordered to return for detention hearings.

To date, some 1 million non-Mexicans have entered the U.S. through Mexico, of which about 700,000 have disappeared, according to a report in the Dallas Morning News. No one knows how many might be terrorists, though rough estimates are that about 70,000 of those non-Mexicans are Saudis between the ages of 18 and 34. Ponder that as you abhor racial profiling and replenish your stores of duct tape.

Now, if you were Sen. Hillary Clinton and were, you know, adamantly against illegal immigrants, you might do everything in your considerable power to tighten our borders. Instead, one week after the London bombings, Clinton voted against amendments to the Department of Homeland Security spending bill that would have paid for more border agents and more detention beds in fiscal 2006.

Some who voted against the amendments expressed concern that those spending increases were predicated on cuts to first-responders, such as police, firefighters and EMTs. One could argue reasonably that the real first-responders are the agents who keep the bad guys out in the first place, but let's move on.

More telling than a particular vote may be Clinton's mid-July speech to the National Council of La Raza, a Hispanic human rights organization. Speaking to thunderous applause, Clinton mentioned nary a word about immigration and all but lauded its role in a hot dance while pushing every hot button near and dear to Hispanic (and especially Mexican) hearts.

She promised improved education and health care (hard to believe, I know) as well as help with lead paint and childhood asthma and teen rape and bad breath. OK, I'm joking on the last two, but it's still early.

Meanwhile, she did vow support for the DREAM Act (Development, Relief and Education for Alien Minorities Act), which, if passed, would guarantee in-state college tuition rates for the children of illegal immigrants, as well as amnesty to some 65,000 illegal immigrant students who graduate from U.S. high schools each year.

DREAM is a nice idea if you're in a nanny frame of mind. But if you're serious about national security, then you're serious about illegal immigration. And if you're serious about illegal immigration, then you don't reward illegal immigrants with expensive promises while failing to make good on pledges to keep illegal aliens out.

And if Hillary Clinton is serious about being president of the United States, she'd better make up her mind.

Most skateboarders stick to the street

LAKE FOREST, Calif. (AP) — Yeah, it's not some cool, hip jump over the Great Wall of China on a skateboard. You'll just never convince Donny Duhadway that pro skater Danny Way's leap last month was anything more than a stunt.

"It's not even skateboarding, like a daredevil thing," the 16-year-old street skater with braces and shoulder-length curly hair said during a break at an Orange County skate park. "That's not cool."

The growing gulf between vert skaters' aerobics and the more popular closer-to-the-ground technical finesse that Duhadway and others embrace will be on display at ESPN X Games 11.

Other sports at the games, which begin Thursday in Los Angeles, are motocross, BMX freestyle and wakeboarding. Inline skating has been dropped and a surfing event was held Tuesday in Mexico.

Way, whose China jump drew national headlines, again will take to the massive mega ramp he created — and which debuted at last year's X Games. He's expected to dominate in the big air contest, which will be broadcast live Sunday on ABC.

HOF jockey Day to retire

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Hall of Fame jockey Pat Day is retiring, bringing to an end one of horse racing's greatest and most lucrative careers.

Day, who won the 1992 Kentucky Derby aboard Lil E. Tue, has 8,804 victories and is the career money leader with purses totaling $27,941,512. His 32-year riding career comes to a close just months after he returned to racing following hip surgery.

Day's agent, Doc Danner, said the 51-year-old jockey will make an official announcement Thursday morning at Churchill Downs. Track spokesmen in a job.

Asher confirmed a news conference was scheduled and said Day would discuss his future.

"He's just at a plateau in his life where he can't do anything off to do other things," Danner told The Associated Press.

Day made the decision while contemplating along the bank along the Kentucky River this week, Danner said Wednesday. Day's decision came after he missed his first Kentucky Derby in 21 years, then cut back on his riding schedule this winter and spring.

Fellow Hall of Fame jockey Jerry Bailey described Day as a "great rider, great human being."

Bailey, preparing to ride at Saratoga Race Course, said Day regularly helped younger riders with advice about racing as well as life.

"It didn't matter if it was a fast track or he was knee deep in mud, he'd come back and say, 'I love my job,'" Bailey said. "He and I always bring us up, and in this game it's not always easy to keep your chin up."

Day finished runner-up four times in the Derby. He was elected to the Hall of Fame in 1991, and ranks fourth in career victories. He won 23 races this spring at Churchill Downs, lifting his career total at the track to a record 2,481.

After surgery in March to replace torn cartilage, Day resumed racing in mid-May and earned his first stakes win about a month later, guiding Two Trail Stoux to a start-to-finish victory in the Grade II $330,000 Fleur de Lis.

His last race was the $1 million Delaware Handicap at Delaware Park on July 17.

Last summer, Day rode only weekends and select weekdays at Saratoga, using the rest of his time to raise money and awareness for the Race Track Chaplaincy program.

Street skaters are relegated to a tape-delayed broadcast on ESPN.

Although X Games manager Chris Slepcoff calls street skaters the "rock stars" of the insular skate world, they're largely unknown outside it. With studied cool and a wariness of the corporate world, they also trail vert skaters in major endorsements from non-skate companies, which can be a key source of income for pros. It's the result of the gap between the crowd-pleasing drama of mid-air flips and the sometimes imperceptible nuances of street tricks.

"People that don't know anything about skateboarding don't really know what they're seeing" in street skating, said pro skater Rick McCrank. "They don't know it's that harder than the next thing. But on vert, it's more spectacular. You could just be doing the easiest thing on vert, and someone would think it was amazing."

For amateur street skater Donny Duhadway, seen here in Mission Viejo, Calif., Tuesday, and the vast majority of skateboarders nationwide, launch ramps and big air elicit scorn and big bored yawns.

AROUND THE VALLEY

Expect delays as road work begins

TWIN FALLS — Temporary repairs to the intersection of Washington Street and Pole Line Road will begin today, the Idaho Transportation Department announced. The repairs will make the pavement smoother and safer for motorists until the intersection is rebuilt in 2006 as part of Stage 1 of the U.S. 83 Twin Falls Alternate Route project. Motorists can expect possible delays of 10 to 15 minutes while flaggers direct one-way traffic through the work area. Crews will grind the existing roadway and then repave it. The grinding and paving is expected to be completed on Monday. To minimize effects on motorists, crews will work mid-morning through early afternoon. Blasting will take place throughout the construction corridor the next few weeks, beginning with a section near the Lazy J Miller Park on Friday. Flaggers will direct traffic through the blast areas when necessary. Motorists should anticipate delays of up to 10 minutes. The use of alternate routes around the construction zone is encouraged.

T.F. Municipal Band will play tonight

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Municipal Band will perform its ninth summer concert at 8 p.m. today in the Twin Falls City Park. The selections will be: "Country Dances (An English Morris Dance Tune)," "Thus Overture" by W.A. Mozart, "The Turkey Bear's Picnic," "Hymn for a Child," "Brazil," "The Penny Whistle Song," "In the Mood," "Highlights from Pachelbel's 'King of Cotton' and the grand premier of 'City Park Thursday Night' composed by Theodore Hadley as part of the 100th Anniversary March Project. Be sure to bring your favorite teddy bear and your crazy hat for the festivities at the concert. The band will be joined by David Gluck and Nichole Golay, Gluck is chairman of Studio Composition at State University of New York at Purchase. He tours regularly with his band, Rhythm & Brass, as drummer, percussionist, composer and arranger. Golay recently served as instructor of oboe at the University of Virginia and principal oboe of the Charlottesville Symphony Orchestra.

Popplewell sets fall kindergarten screening

Starting today, parents can call Michele Wright at 543-8225 to make an appointment. When attending the screening, be sure bring the student's certified birth certificate and immunization records. Children who will be 5 years old by September 1 are able to register for the upcoming school year.

Herrett Center offers a look at Neptune

TWIN FALLS — "Neptune: The Littlest Giant" will be this month's astronomy talk at 8:45 p.m. Friday in the Rick Allen Community Room at the Herrett Center for Arts and Science. Centennial Observatory manager, Chris Anderson, will discuss man's history with Neptune, including early astronomers such as Galileo, who mistook it for a star. He also will talk about the weird magnetic field, mysterious internal heat source and 1,200 mph winds that have been observed at Neptune's equator. Weather permitting, all who attend the astronomy talk will be able to view Neptune through Herrett telescope immediately after the discussion. Cost is $2 for adults, $1 for children and $5 for families. Those who attend one of the evening's Family Planetarium shows will be admitted free. Those who want to participate only in the telescope viewing may show up at 8:45 p.m. Cost is $1 per person. Buhl makes bus route changes

In effort to save money, some kids could ride longer

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

BUHL — Some students will no longer be able to take the bus to school this fall and others will have to ride longer because the Buhl district has changed its bus routes to save money. Immediate changes include the loss of transportation services for students living on the Bell Rapids project and consolidation of a few bus routes to keep down the cost per student and cost per mile driven.

"We had one student that completely lost their stop," Superintendent Richard Hill said. "The district was willing to pay the parents in lieu of picking the student up at home if brought to another stop. The parents decided that it would be best to just transfer their student to Hagerman."

The other 25 or so students affected will still have bus service, but it may mean longer rides to and from school and possibly a different bus than ridden in the past.

"I think that in estimation, pick-up times for some students may be about 15 minutes earlier," Doug Scott with Northside Bus Company explained. "We hope not any longer."

The state Legislature has capped reimbursements for transportation to all districts. The changes made should save the district about $25,000, according to Scott. The savings should keep the district within the cap, ensuring reimbursement from the state of 85 percent of operating expenses for daily bus service. "Northside Bus Company, which provides the district with bus services, doesn't know yet how the changes will affect its bottom line."

"We will definitely see a loss but won't know the exact amount until after the year passes," Scott said. Changes may need to be made to the routes again next year because the state cap is expected to lower yet again. "The state continues to cut back on education more year after year. One problem is that the money we get back from the state is based on the number of students riding the bus. With a lot of students having both parents work, it is easier to just drop your kids off at school, district school board Chairman Ken McDonald by riding the bus, the better."

"We are sorry about any disruption in services," Superintendent Richard Hill said. "It is purely a matter of economics and balancing what is best for the district and what is best for students."

Some Rupert residents complain about odor

By Terry Smith
Times-News correspondent

RUPERT — Foul odors from the city's aging and overloaded sewage treatment plant continue to plague residents in the vicinity of the facility.

"There is such a stench that people can't even stay at our house—they have to go to Burley to stay in a motel," Debra Cantrell told officials at the Rupert City Council meeting Tuesday.

"If other cities can keep the odor out, then why can't we?" she asked.

Cantrell was part of a delegation of some 100 half-dozen residents who attended the council meeting to complain about ongoing odor problems with the plant.

"We've been putting up with this for three years now," she said. "It is fair to assume that our wastewater odor problem is going to continue until we get a new plant."

Residents acknowledged the plant doesn't stink every day. But when the odor gets bad, they said, it's strong enough to make them sick.

The plant is located one mile south of the city. On Tuesday night, it gave off an annoying but tolerable smell akin to rotting meat. Up to a mile northeast of the facility, residents said the odor sometimes smelled up to four miles away.

The plant was built in 1979. City officials acknowledged it now handles three to four times more waste than it was designed to process.

A $18 million wastewater treatment plant is scheduled for completion in August 2007. Bids will be accepted in January and construction is expected to begin next spring.

Several residents expressed dismay that the project is taking so long and accused city officials of not working hard enough to resolve the problem.

"Rupert is in violation of not keeping the odor down, and there are ways to fix it," Cantrell said. "According to the DEQ, there are chemicals you can put in to make it not stink," she said.

JEROME — The City Council on Tuesday adopted a tentative budget of $24.86 million for the 2005-2006 fiscal year.

The money will come from the following sources: 41 percent from borrowed funds; 26 percent from federal and state grants; 14 percent from services charge; 9 percent from general taxes. The remaining 10 percent will come from cash carryover from previous years, inter-government revenue, licenses, permits and other miscellaneous sources.

The city's taxable property values have increased 12.4 percent over the past five years. The city's budget is based on a tax base of an estimated $218,446,938. The proposed mill levy needed to balance the budget is less than 0.0089 (0.809 cents for each $100,000 of assessed value), which was the levy required in the 2004-2005 fiscal year.

The tax revenues (estimates) coming from the county are higher than the city's estimate based on last year's figures. So the mill levy will be less," City Administrator Travis Rothweiler said.

The largest increases in the budget are represented by grants and loans:

- $26.8 million — Improvements at the wastewater treatment plant. With the passage of an $4,800,000 revenue bond in November, the city will make improvements to the wastewater treatment plant to enable the city to meet more stringent Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) nutrient removal requirements for wastewater permits. If the revenue bond is approved in November, this loan will bring the city's total debt from $5,329,917 to $12,856,074. The $6.8 million will be repaid through increased user fees of about $6 per household per month and industrial users will be assessed according to their share of the daily wastewater load.
- $2.7 million — Fiber-optic cable will be installed from the city limits to the butte in the city.

Idaho soldiers receive awards

Personnel presented with Combat Action Badge

The Times-News

FOB WARNOR, Iraq — The executive officer for the 116 Brigade Combat Team, representing Brig. Gen. Alan Gayhart, made a special trip to Walter Reed Army Medical Center to present the unit's first Combat Action Badge awards to four soldiers and airmen, according to a news release from Capt. Monte Hilbert, public affairs officer with the 116th.

In late July, Lt. Col. Robert Lytle was able to combine his attendance at the U.S. Army War College in Carlisle, Pa., with the trip to visit the soldiers and airmen and present them with the first Combat Action Badges to be awarded to the 116th, which is stationed at Forward Operating Base Warrior in northern Iraq.

The Combat Action Badge was awarded to Spc. Jason Brase of TF 2-116 Armor; Air Force Tech. Sgt. Jamie Dana, who was wounded while attached to the 116th's Headquarters, Headquarters Company; Spc. Jessie Ingram of the 116th Engineer Battalion, wounded while attached to TF 1-163 Infantry; and Spc. Kyle James of TF 3-116 Armor.

Thanks to the staff of the 42nd Infantry Division, the requests for the awards were expedited to take full advantage of the opportunity to have the awards presented personally by a member of the brigade staff, the news release said.

The 116th Brigade Combat Team supports the efforts of the government of Kirkuk Province in the areas of communication, infrastructure, economics and security. The 116th Brigade Combat Team is composed of units from Idaho, Oregon, Montana, Utah, North Dakota, Maryland and New Jersey. The unit is comprised of headquarters and staff sections, the 2nd and 3rd Armor Battalions, the 1-148th Field Artillery Battalion, the 1-163rd Mechanized Infantry Battalion, the 145th Support Battalion, the 116th Engineer Battalion and various intelligence, signal and specialized units. The 116th BCT is one of several Army National Guard units deployed in Operation Iraqi Freedom III.

Spc. Jason Brase of TF 2-116 Armor, injured in Iraq, holds the Combat Action Badge and certificate presented by Lt. Col. Robert Lytle at Walter Reed Army Medical Center in Washington, D.C.

Sheriff says 12-year-old stabbing victim was raped

WALLACE (AP) — A 12-year-old girl who was bound, stabbed and left for dead in a remote campground two weeks ago also was raped.

Authorities say Tuggle, who had served nine years in an Idaho prison for copying his 2-year-old stepister before his release in 2004, traveled to the town of Ahoi, Idaho.

The girl was released from Sacred Heart Medical Center in Spokane, Wash., on Saturday.

Police captured Tuggle July 27 after a week-long manhunt that concluded when a clerk at a convenience store in Wallace became suspicious of a thin, haggard man wearing camouflage fatigues who was looking for food.

Before returning to Idaho last month, Tuggle had been living in Hayden, Colo., as a registered sex offender following his release from the Idaho state prison south of Boise.

This case, as well as another in which four members of a family living near Coeur d'Alene were killed and two kidnapped following a brutal May 17 attack allegedly by another convicted sex offender.

Remarrying can hit an unsafe speed

DEAR ABBY: The letter from "In Love Again," whose wife died of cancer four months ago and who insists has ready to remarry, impelled me to write. My husband died suddenly nine months ago. He was only 47. (I am 48.) I joined a grief support group for people under 50.

DEAR ABBY: My father, a prominent minister of a large church, married his secretary three months after my mother's death from cancer. After mother's funeral, Dad was besieged by a hoard of single women offering food help and more. His marriage may have been partly in self-defense.

Call me cautious, but that's an awfully short time.

Camouflage doesn't fool colorblind soldiers

Colorblindness can sometimes be a good thing. The military discovered in World War II that colorblind soldiers weren't easily fooled by camouflage.

RANDOM KINDS OF FACETNESS: Jack Mingo, Erin Barrett

This day in history: On Aug. 4, 1704, England got a piece of the Rock when it seized Gibraltar during a war with Spain. Although Spain tried to forcibly take back the 2.5-square-mile peninsula in 1783 and has grumbled about it for the two centuries since then, the Rock of Gibraltar remains in British hands.

When a new grows up and leaves the water for dry land, it's called an eel. You've probably heard of Jack Russell terriers, but do you know who Jack Russell was? The "Red John" (Jack) Russell was an English signmaker who bred dogs as a hobby. Although he developed this fox terrier offshoot in the 1800s, the breed wasn't recognized by the American Kennel Club until 1997.

Despite suburban legends about drinking six or eight glasses a day, there isn't really a best amount of water you're supposed to ingest. Your body knows what it needs — "drink when you're thirsty" isn't a bad rule.

If you want to see evolution in its slow-motion glory, consider your wisdom teeth. Their high leverage strength became unnecessary as we learned how to soften tough meats and vegetation with fire. As a result, human jaws are shrinking and wisdom teeth are on their way out.

Baby Boomers might remember the much-advertised "Micronite filter" of Kent cigarettes. The one of your very own that "Micronite" didn't make the cigarette safer — on the contrary, it was actually asbestos.

I agree with you and with "In Love's" pastors that four months is not soon to become engaged. If he can find a support group like the one I had, he should go. It gave me tools to cope and affirmation that I wouldn't miss what I experienced the stages of grief.

DEAR BEEN: There's nothing wrong with you. I'm happy for you. However, you knew your present wife for 12 years before you married her. "In Love" has known his lady friend only four months.

DEAR ABBY: My first wife died unexpectedly in 1997. Eight months later, I married a widow I'd known for 12 years. Some of my youngest children were so angry they refused to attend the wedding. That really hurt.

To make a long story short, we celebrate every month of marriage with an anniversary card that I create on my computer, flowers from the grocery store, and dinner at a nice restaurant. We just celebrated our 163rd month anniversary. Tell that man to get married!

DEAR ABBY: My first wife died

Idaho Statesman changes owners

SEATTLE — Gannett Co. said Wednesday it is giving Knight Ridder Inc. three of its papers in Washington and Idaho in exchange for the Philadelphia (Pa.) Democrat and an undisclosed amount of cash.

Knight Ridder will take over The Idaho Statesman in Boise and two Washington state newspapers, The Olympian in the state capital and The Bellingham Herald.

The deal, which is subject to regulatory review, will close once that process is completed, probably the first week in September, the companies said.

Gannett, based in McLean, Va., publishes 101 daily newspapers in the United States, including USA Today. Knight Ridder, based in San Jose, Calif., is the nation's second-largest newspaper publisher.

Mike Petrik, a Knight Ridder marketing vice president, will become president and publisher in Boise, replacing Leslie Hurst, who was named president and publisher of The Lansing (Mich.) State Journal.

Knight Ridder said the Statesman will report to Hillary Schneider, the company's senior vice president.

The transaction declined to comment on the change in ownership and management, referring calls to Gannett's corporate headquarters.

Report says West's wages stay ahead of inflation rate

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. — Wages and salaries earned by workers in 13 Western states, including Idaho, have stayed ahead of inflation over the most five years, trailing only the Midwest, the government says.

Earnings rose 17.5 percent between June 2000 and June 2005 in the West — 3.9 percentage points faster than the inflation rate in the region during the same period, the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics reported.

Among the four regions in the report, earnings in 12 Midwest states stayed ahead of inflation by 5.8 percentage points, primarily because prices rose more slowly than in the West.

Nationwide, workers' earnings rose 5.8 percent during the past five years, or 3 percentage points faster than the rate of inflation.

The bureau's employment cost index, which measures earnings and benefit costs, rose 23.2 percent for the West in the past five years, 9.6 percentage points ahead of the inflation rate.

State honors employees

Administrator, auditor uncovered alleged tax evasion scheme

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Two state employees on Wednesday were honored for their efforts in uncovering an alleged multimillion-dollar tax evasion scheme in the dairy industry.

Idaho's Unemployment Insurance division administrator Mark Whitworth and Cheryl Harrington, a senior tax auditor, received the Internal Revenue Service's Excellence in Partnering award, the state said in a statement.

In 2002, Idaho Commerce and Labor staff, led by Whitworth and Harrington, conducted audits of several south-central Idaho dairies to determine whether they were abusing the in-kind payment rule for employees. The audits were launched after state and federal officials attempted to educate dairy owners in the region about the proper use of in-kind payments, the state said.

Whitworth and Harrington, two Idaho Commerce and Labor employees, were not able to prosecute this case," IRS officials said in a statement. Please see TAX, Page C8

Culinary aspirations

Jay Garner of Richmond, Va., prepares Sailor sandwiches on the island of his upscale kitchen at the Garner family home in Richmond, Va., on July 30. Garner and his family opted to remodel their kitchen using high-end appliances, including a GE Profile refrigerator and an Advantium combo microwave/halogen oven. Retailers say rising interest in such appliances has intensified competition.

As America's foodie culture grows up, business opportunities expand

The Associated Press

In years past when Jay Garner of Richmond, Va., prepared what has become one of his family's signature meals — the sailor sandwich, a grilled combination of pastrami, knockwurst and Swiss cheese on mustard-laden eye bread — he could, at best, cook two at once in a frying pan.

But after an extensive kitchen renovation that included the installation of a $2,500 gas range with a built-in griddle, Garner boasts that he can now make six at a time, and with better results. The fact that Garner hasn't yet concocted sailor sandwiches in batches that large is only partially relevant to understanding why the 43-year-old technology consultant and food enthusiast believes it was worth spending $33,000 to outfit his kitchen with restaurant-style equipment and marble-top counters.

"My wife loves it," he said. "She likes it when people come over and say, 'Wow!'"

Garner is not alone in his quest to improve his cooking and the look of his homes with industrial-chic kitchen appliances and cookware. His preference for high-quality and expensive equipment, such as a Wolf range, All-Clad pans and J.A. Henckels knives, is emblematic of the growing seriousness with which many Americans approach food and cooking.

The so-called foodie subculture has moved gradually from the fringes to the Kitchen

...from Julia Child and Jacques Pepin teaching cooking on public television to the proliferation of farmers' markets...

A selection of kitchen appliances is displayed Monday at the Williams-Sonoma store in Boise.

...Song said it'll be a few years before she whips up many meals just for fun.

Just because more Americans are interested in food and spending big bucks on their kitchens, don't get the wrong impression. On average, stoves and ovens are getting less of a workout each year, said Harry Baltzer, a Chicago-based vice president at NPD Group, a consumer marketing research firm.

Baltzer said the corresponding restaurant-quality-minis-restaurant appliances and cookware "is aspirational," reflecting a lifestyle busy Americans would like to have, in which they spend more time preparing meals in the kitchen, rather than ordering takeout for the sake of convenience.

"The movement is really toward recreational cooking," he said. The high quality and the wow factor in kitchens is not just about America's surging interest in home design, it's the creation of a "great room," in which the kitchen is not walled off from the rest of the house.

Gamer and the rest of American foodies are no longer satisfied merely mimicking cookbook techniques, buying funny-looking organic mushrooms or getting adventurous about looking up to eat. Increasingly, they want the tools of the trade, too, and they want them on their own, even if they aren't always getting as much use as planned.

"These are things that I hope to use more in the future when I have more time," said Washington resident Kat Song said of the appliances she recently bought while remodeling her kitchen at Wolf Cove in Silverdale. She bought a Sub-Zero refrigerator and a Miele dishwasher. Of course, with one young child and another on the

In a way, high altitude Alpine lakes are kind of like the fresh cut diamonds of the natural world. Because of their relative scarcity, these emerald and blue tinted pools stand out even in relation to their spectacular mountainous surroundings.

Idaho outdoor types are fortunate to have access to numerous Alpine lakes in the state's many mountain ranges. Arguably the greatest concentrations of these remote bodies of water are found in the Sawtooth, Pioneer, Boulder, White Cloud and Smokey mountain ranges to the north of the Magic Valley.

Combined, these five distinct mountain ranges contain a lifetime's worth of alpine lakes just waiting to be discovered.

Following are a number of short hikes to alpine lakes in the three to eight mile round trip variety. Expect snow-free trails and an abundance of alpine flowers to greet you on these condensed alpine outings.

The hikes

Hikers of reasonably good fitness will find the following hikes on the easy to moderate end of the difficulty scale. Of course ratings are subjective at best, so if you're not sure of your abilities allow plenty of time to complete these hikes.

For each hike relevant details are included before each trail description. Hiking distances given are calculated for the entire round trip.

Fourth of July and Washington Lakes

Location: White Cloud Mountains
Hike distance: three miles for Fourth of July Lake and five miles for Washington Lake.

Elevation gain: 500 feet to Fourth of July Lake and 850 feet to the pass before dropping to Washington Lake.

Directions: From Ketchum, drive 45 miles north on Highway 75 until you reach the turnoff for the Fourth of July Creek road or Forest Service Road 209. Turn right and drive 10 miles to the trailhead for Fourth of July Lake.

I hiked to these two highly popular lakes one recent afternoon. The roughly 1.5-mile hike to Fourth of July Lake crossed over the nearby creek several times while passing through mixed forest and meadow.

After reaching mountain lined basin in which Fourth of July Lake resides, hikers can continue for another mile to the larger and more sparsely populated Washington Lake. Along the trail to Washington Lake you'll cross over a high pass where a small unnamed lake is located to the right of the trail. Washington Lake is located just beyond the pass.

For additional information about hiking in the White Cloud Mountains contact the Sawtooth National Recreation Area Headquarters at (208) 727-5013.

Baker Lake

Location: Smokey Mountains

Hike distance: three miles

Elevation gain: 900 feet

Directions: From Ketchum, drive north 15 miles on Highway 75 until you reach a right turn for Baker Creek and Forest Service Road 162. Take this road for nine miles until reaching the Baker Lake trailhead.

Accessing high mountain lakes doesn't get much easier than Baker Lake. Perhaps that's why this hike is so popular.

From the trailhead, the wide and well-maintained trail to Baker Lake winds through cool forests and open meadows filled with alpine flowers. Keep a sharp eye out for elk, deer, mountain goat and other resident wildlife species.

Baker Lake is found in a depression bounded by trees and meadows on two sides and steep talus and boulder-covered hills descending from an unnamed peak standing just over 10,000 feet in elevation on the other two sides.

For additional information on hiking in the Smokey Mountains contact the Sawtooth National Forest's Ketchum Ranger District at (208) 622-5371.

Titus Lake

Location: Smokey Mountains

Hike distance: three miles

Elevation gain: 500 feet

Directions: A highlight of this hike is the straightforward highway access. From Ketchum, drive north 29 miles on Highway 75 to the Titus Lake Trailhead, located on the right side of the highway just before Galead Summit.

Titus Lake is a bright emerald green lake located in a small mountain basin just 1.5 miles from the trailhead. The hike to the lake passes through cool forests of mixed conifers before arriving to expansive views of the mountains in upper Titus Creek. Perhaps more than any of the other listed lakes, Titus is perfect for those days when you don't have much time or you're just looking for something a little more laid-back.

For additional information on hiking in the Smokey Mountains contact the Sawtooth National Forest's Ketchum Ranger District at (208) 622-5371.

Big Rainbow Lake

Location: Trinity Mountains

Hike distance: six miles

Elevation gain: a 400 foot climb to the pass followed by a 300 foot drop to the lake basin

Directions: From Mountain Home, drive north 30 miles before turning left on the Anderson Dam Road. Take this road 14 miles to the Falls Creek area. Follow Falls Creek and the Trinity Mountains Road north 19 miles before finally reaching the turnoff for the trailhead at Big Trinity Lake. A note of caution, the Trinity Mountains Road is quite rough in places.

The hike to Big Rainbow Lake crosses over a moderately high pass before dropping into a wonderful lakes basin, filled with eight alpine lakes. Once in the basin, be attentive for numerous turnoffs to other lakes, which, fortunately, are well-signed. Big Rainbow Lake is located near the far southern end of the lakes basin in the shadow of nearby 9,451-foot Trinity Mountain.

For additional information on hiking in the Trinity Mountains contact the Boise National Forest's Mountain Home Ranger District at (208) 587-7961.

Mexican rock sensation sets sights on U.S.

New York Daily News

NEW YORK — Jaguares might be the biggest rock band you've never heard of — or understood, if you typically take your rock on English.

The band has been nominated for a Grammy. They've sold millions of albums. They've landed the No. 1 spot on Billboard's Top Latin Albums & Hot Latin Tracks charts, and they've led Mexico's ravenous underground-rock scene into the mainstream.

Jaguares' sound — a VH1-friendly, melodic brand of guitar rock with acoustic touches — is almost enough to propel the band, which plays live as a five-piece. But vocalist/guitarist Saul Hernandez's imaginative and emotional lyrics are a big draw for many.

"They're very poetic," says Otto Conde, a jaguares fan. After all, the band's very name comes from a dream Hernandez had that he was playing inside a jaguar's mouth.

The band also presents a power-to-the-people message: "They'd compare to U2 in English," Conde says — minus the bug-eyed sunglasses and over-exposure of Bono, of course. Jaguares plan to roll through 26 cities on their latest U.S. tour.

Teaching the teacher

Youths dance to learn about their heritage, culture

By Coreen Hart
Times-News correspondent

BURLEY — "Young ladies and gentlemen," Maria Hernandez says. "Your attention, please."

The dancers move into position and stop their chatting. The music begins to "Los Machetes." This boy and girl dance originated with sugar cane workers in southern Mexico. Each boy carries a simulated machete and wears the traditional shirt. The girls wear full-skirted dresses with rows of ribbons stitched around them, and high-collared peplum blouses.

"Heads up and smile, please," Hernandez shouts over the music.

Such is a rehearsal for the dance group, which is made up of 28 students from ages 12-17. The group was started when students in the Burley Junior High School Spanish Club wanted to learn traditional Mexican folk dances.

Hernandez, their adviser, was caught in a dilemma. How could she teach what she did not know?

The answer came when she found videos and audiotapes with the right music and instruction.

"I order the tape, and some of the students will take it home and learn it," Hernandez said. "What I know, I learned from them. They teach each other."

Hernandez's mother, Josefina Arredondo, is on hand at rehearsals to help if needed. She is present at all rehearsals and has served as driver for some of their public appearances.

"Marta is very active, and very sharp," Arredondo says. "She started teaching junior high and then formed the Spanish Club."

The music switches to "Jarabe Tapatio." It's the dance they've nicknamed, "Johnny Bravo."

Skins swirl and the ribbons catch the light. Student Yessenia Iribre is outspoken about her reasons for performing.

"It means a lot to me. I support my heritage," she says.

Yellow dancer Maria Aguirre echoes her passion.

"Just because we're in America doesn't mean we're not Mexican," she says.

The dancers have taken prizes in a few competitions, both as individuals and as a group. Joana Iribre and Maritza Rios brought home first place for their performance of "La Bambola" at Idaho State University's Young Language Fair. At the same fair, Erika Fuentes and Nichari Martinez took second place for their rendition of "La Negra."

"I keeps you out trouble and you just enjoy it," dancer Iribre Caldera says.

Times-News correspondent Coreen Hart can be reached at 436-1186 or by e-mail at jimnvenne@siglink.net.

Juan Alvarado wields a gage machete as he performs in 'Los Machetes.' He is a member of a dance group started by the Burley Junior-High School Spanish Club.

Next appearances

The dance group will appear at the Hispanic Heritage Fiesta, scheduled Aug. 13 to 14 at Twin Falls City Park.

They also will be in the Cassia County Parade on Aug. 15, which travels along Overland Avenue.

Would you like to sponsor the dancers?

They are seeking help to obtain more costumes and with other aspects of their performances. For details, call 260-1042. While the young men's costumes are relatively inexpensive, the young women's dresses cost more than $125 each for the fabric and for someone to sew them.

Car show, talent show take place at fiesta

TWIN FALLS — The Hispanic Heritage Fiesta, Un Día en el Valle, will hold its sixth annual car show from noon to 6 p.m. Aug. 14 at the Twin Falls City Park.

Car registration and check in will be held from 7 to 10 a.m.

the day of the event. The entry fee is $25.

Free entertainment during the car show will be by Top Fresh Entertainment, featuring Mad Ro and Untouchable.
