ISP: Police allegedly shot in self-defense

By Sandy Miller
Times-News writer

JEROME — A 40-year-old man was shot Saturday night by Jerome city police after he allegedly lunged at them with a "carving-type kitchen knife," said Lt. Dan Thornton, a detective with the Idaho State Police Investigations Division on Sunday.

William Leroy Davis Jr. was in serious but stable condition Sunday evening at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center. He was in custody of the Jerome County Sheriff's Office, Thornton said.

It all began about 8:30 p.m.

Saturday when police responded to a call from some acquaintances of Davis' who had taken him to St. Benedict's Regional Medical Center in Jerome.

"They wanted him evaluated for mental or drug issues," Thornton said.

He said three police officers responded to the call. After talking with Davis' acquaintances inside the hospital, the officers went outside to the emergency room driveway where Davis was sitting inside a car.

"Police asked him to get out of the vehicle," Thornton said. "He got out and had a large carving-type kitchen knife in his hand."

Thornton said a witness happened to walk by and "saw Davis lunge at the officers." An officer or officers then opened fire, Thornton said he believed Davis was shot twice in the torso.

"We're not prepared to comment on the names or number of police officers who opened fire," Thornton said. "Three officers were present when this happened. We're just making sure we have our facts correct before we release anything."

Davis was stabilized at St. Benedict's and then flown to Magic Valley Regional Medical Center where he underwent surgery. On Sunday, he was in serious but stable condition in the hospital's intensive care unit, Thornton said.

Thornton said the city of Jerome asked the ISP to conduct the criminal investigation as an outside agency. The Jerome Police Department placed the three officers on administrative leave pending its own internal investigation which is department policy.

"The Jerome Police Department is conducting an administrative investigation which is standard in such cases," Thornton said, adding that such investigations examine if police policies and protocols were followed.

Davis had not been formally charged as of Sunday evening, but was likely to be charged today, Thornton said.

"We are anticipating filing criminal charges and are working with the Jerome County Prosecutor's Office," Thornton said.

Thornton said Davis had a record in Ada County.

"He has arrests in Ada County," Thornton said. "He has a booking photograph."

The Times-News contacted the Ada County Sheriff's Office Sunday night but officials would not say just what those arrests were for.

Thornton said he didn't know where Davis was from, but "Please see SHOOTING, Page A2

'TORN APART'

Shriener Slaughter finds a place to sit and rest her head in front of her uncle's home after it was destroyed by a tornado Sunday in Newburgh, Ind. A tornado ripped across southwestern Indiana and northern Kentucky, killing at least 22 people, wrecking homes and knocking out power to thousands, state and county authorities said.

EVANSVILLE, Ind. — A tornado with winds exceeding 150 mph tore a path of devastation through western Kentucky and southern Indiana as residents slept early Sunday, reducing dozens of mobile homes to splinters and turning entire blocks of buildings into piles of rubble. At least 22 people were killed and 200 others injured.

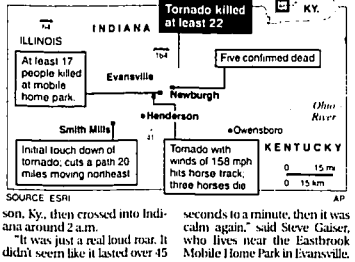

Rescuers who arrived at the hard-hit Eastbrook Mobile Home Park shortly after the tornado struck reported seeing children wandering in the debris, looking for their parents, and parents searching for missing children. Children's bicycles and other toys were strewn amid mattresses, chairs and insulation.

The tornado, the deadliest to hit the state since 1974, hit a horse racing track near Henderson, Ky., then crossed into Indiana around 2 a.m.

"It was just a real loud roar. It didn't seem like it lasted over 45

Senior citizen bloggers defy stereotypes

CHICAGO — Forget shuffleboard, needlepoint, and bingo. Web logs, usually considered the domain of alienated adolescents and home for screeds from middle-aged pundits, are gaining a foothold as a new leisure-time option for senior citizens.

There's Dad's Tomato Garden Journal, Dogwalk Musings, and, of course, the Oldest Living Blogger.

"It's too easy to sit in your own cave and let the world go by," said Vancouver's Ray Sutton, the 73-year-old Oldest Living Blogger. "It keeps the old head working a little bit so you're not just sitting there gawking at TV."

Web blogs, or blogs, are online journals where people post entries on topics that interest them. They may offer links to

Bloggers say their hobby keeps them thinking about current events, makes them friends to strangers around the globe and gives them a voice in a city that often neglects the wisdom of the elderly.

"It brings out the best in me," said Boston-area blogger Millie Garfield, 80, who writes My Mom's Blog. "My life would be dull without it."

Three percent of online seniors have created a blog and 17 percent have read someone else's blog, according to the Pew Internet & American Life Project. Compare that to online 18- to 29-year-olds.

Lawmakers worry over some uses of Patriot Act

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Lawmakers expressed concern Sunday that the FBI was aggressively pushing the proets of the anti-terrorist USA Patriot Act to access private phone and financial records of ordinary people.

"We should be looking at that very closely," said Sen. Joseph Biden, D-De., who is a member of the Senate Judiciary Committee. "It appears to me that this is, if not closed, being close to abused."

Sen. Chuck Hagel, R-Neb., a member of the Senate Intelligence Committee, agreed, saying the government's expanded power highlights the risks of balancing national security against individual rights.

"It does point out how dangerous this can be," said Hagel, who appeared with Biden on ABC's "This Week."

Under the Patriot Act, the FBI issues more than 30,000 national security letters allowing the investigations each year, a hundred-fold increase over historical norms, The Washington Post reported Sunday, quoting unnamed government sources.

"The security letters, which were first used in the 1970s, allow access to people's phone and e-mail records, as well as financial data and the Internet sites they surf. The 2001 Patriot Act removed the requirement that the records sought be those of someone under suspicion.

As a result, FBI agents can receive digital records of a citizen as long as the bureau can certify that the person's records are "relevant" to a terrorist investigation.

Calling the recent growth in the number of letters a "stunner," Biden said, "Thirty thousand seems like an awful, awful stretch to me."

Department spokesman Brian Ruckhass said Sunday that he could not immediately confirm or dispute the 30,000 figure, but he said the department is using the security letters was justified.

"The Department of Justice inspector general in August 2005 found no civil rights violations with respect to the Patriot Act," he said.

Issued by the FBI without review by a judge, the letters are used to obtain electronic records from telecommunications service providers." Such providers include Internet service companies but also universities, public interest organizations and almost all libraries, because most provide access to the Internet.

Last September in an ACLU lawsuit, a federal judge in New York struck down this provision as unconstitutional on grounds that it restrains free speech and bars or deters judicial challenges to government searches.

That ruling has been suspended pending an appeal to the New York-based 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. In a hearing last week the court suggested it might require the government to permit libraries, major corporations and other groups to challenge FBI demands for records.

The Patriot Act provision involving national security letters was enacted permanently in 2001, so it was not part of Congress' debate last summer over extending some Patriot Act provisions.

Civilians flee while U.S. forces battle al-Qaida

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Scores of terrified Iraqis fled a besieged town Sunday, waving white flags and hauling their belongings to escape a second day of fighting between U.S. Marines and al-Qaida-led militants along the Syrian border. U.S. and Iraqi troops battled insurgents house-to-house in the U.S. military said.

The U.S. commander of the joint force, Col. Stephen W. Davis, told The Associated Press late Sunday that his troops had moved "about halfway" through Husaybah, a market town along the Euphrates River about 200 miles northwest of Baghdad.

At least 36 insurgents have been killed since the assault began Saturday and about 200 men have been detained, Davis said. He did not give a breakdown of nationalities of the detainees. Many were expected to be from a pro-insurgent Iraqi tribe.

Davis would not comment on U.S. and Iraqi government casualties but said the militants were putting up a tough fight because "this area is near and dear to the insurgents, particularly the foreign fighters."

"This has been the first stop for foreign fighters, and this is strategic ground for them," he said by telephone.

Earlier Sunday, Brig. Gen. Donald Alston, a U.S. military spokesman, told reporters in Baghdad that none of the 3,500 U.S. and Iraqi troops had been killed so far.

The U.S. Marines said American jets struck at least 10 targets around the town Sunday and that the U.S.-Iraqi force was "clearing the city, house by house," taking fire from insurgents holed up in homes, mosques and schools.

The Marines said in a statement that about 450 people had taken refuge in a vacant housing area in Husaybah under the control of Iraqi forces.

Others were believed to have fled to relatives in nearby towns and villages in the predominantly Sunni Arab area of Anbar province.

U.S. officials have described Husaybah, which used to have a population of about 30,000, as a stronghold of al-Qaida in Iraq, led by Jordanian extremist Abu Musab al-Zarqawi. Husaybah had long been identified as an entry point for foreign fighters, weapons and ammunition entering from Syria. From Husaybah, the fighters head down the Euphrates valley to Baghdad and other cities.

Officers capture inmate who walked out of prison

HOUSTON (AP) — A death row inmate who slipped out of a Texas jail last week wearing street clothes was captured Sunday as he talked on a pay phone in Shreveport, La., about 200 miles away, authorities said.

Charles Victor Thompson had a bicycle with him when Shreveport police, acting on a tip, approached him around 8 p.m. Sunday, Harris County Sheriff's Lt. John Martin said.

"He was standing in front of a liquor store and appeared to be intoxicated," Martin said.

When the officers asked his name, he said "You know who I am." Then he identified himself as Charles Thompson, Martin said.

Martin wouldn't discuss the tip that led to Thompson's arrest and said authorities were still trying to determine exactly how Thompson got from Houston to Louisiana and how he had help in his escape. A $10,000 reward had been offered for information leading to his capture.

Thompson, 35, is scheduled to be in court Monday in Shreveport, and if he waives extradition, he will be returned to Texas immediately, Martin said.

Thompson was convicted in 1999 for the shooting deaths a year earlier of his ex-girlfriend, Dennise Hayslip and her new boyfriend, Darren Keith Cain. An appeals court threw out his sentence, but on Oct. 28 another jury sentenced him to death.

On Thursday, Thompson was in the Harris County jail awaiting transfer to a state prison when he was taken to a room for a meeting with an attorney, though not his attorney, of record, authorities said.

After the attorney left, Thompson was alone. Somehow, he removed his handcuffs, changed out of his bright orange prison jumpsuit into the clothes he wore during his sentencing, and got out of the prisoner's booth in the visiting room, authorities said.

Using a falsified ID badge, he got past at least four jail employees and walked out of the building.

Martin had said Friday that Thompson's escape resulted from "multiple errors" by jail personnel. He said the attorney who had met with Thompson was not believed to have been involved in the escape.

Governor opens special legislative session to deal with hurricane recovery

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Hurricane Katrina and Rita decimated city neighborhoods and parishes and livelihoods across Louisiana, and the cost was still rising Sunday as the Legislature opened a special session to deal with the crisis.

The agenda for the 17-day session runs the gamut, from shifting the oversight of levees to offering tax relief for businesses and residents recovering from the storm.

Overshadowing anything lawmakers do will be the gaping hole in the state budget — a deficit already estimated at nearly $1 billion in an $1.87-billion budget for the 2005-06 fiscal year.

Gov. Kathleen Blanco took an ax to state spending on Saturday, cutting $431 million from state agencies almost across the board, including a $222 million hit to health care services and $71 million cut in spending on public colleges.

The Legislature could restore that money, but the state constitution still requires a balanced budget, and estimates of lost tax revenue and recovery expenses have been rising.

"State government must work leaner but smarter than ever before," the Democratic governor said as she set out her plans for the special session.

Blanco is asking lawmakers to tap at least $153 million of the state's "rainy day" fund and borrow money to help the state cope.

She also is backing a statewide building code and unified state oversight of the levee system that provides hurricane protection for New Orleans and other parts of the state.

Survey: Gas prices drop by an average of 23 cents

CAMARILLO, Calif. (AP) — Retail gas prices plunged an average of 23 cents nationwide in the past two weeks, marking a return to pre-Hurricane Katrina levels, according to a survey.

The weighted average price for all three grades declined to $2.45 a gallon on Friday, said Trilby Lundberg, who publishes the semi-monthly Lundberg Survey of 7,000 gas stations around the country.

Self-serve regular averaged $2.43 a gallon nationwide. The price for mid-grade was $2.53, while premium-grade hit $2.63.

The average pump price for all three grades on Aug. 29, the day Katrina made landfall on the Gulf Coast, was $2.65, according to the survey.

The lowest average price in the nation for regular unleaded among the stations surveyed was $2.06 a gallon in Tulsa, Okla. The highest was $2.74 in Miami.

Writing students see work published

By Jami Whited
Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS — For many writers, writing itself is its own reward. But for many students in high school, it is merely an assignment.

Creative writing instructor Debra Kemper is changing that. Throughout the 2004/2005 school year, she watched her students' work progress and decided to publish some of their writings in a literary magazine.

"Reaching Beyond" is filled with 45 poems, short non-fiction stories and prose by last year's junior and senior students.

"They had to have two or three things in it," Kemper said. "They chose things they were proud of."

There were between five and eight boys in her classes of 25 students each semester and the students were excited to see their work published.

"It was fun to watch the kids put things together," Kemper said.

Want to 'Reach Beyond?'
Copies of the literary magazine, "Reaching Beyond" are available for $3 by calling Debra Kemper at 733-6551, ext. 3057.

The magazine gelled this fall when Amy Knopp's class of Yearbook 1 students did the layout, which included 21 pieces of artwork.

Adrianna Castro, 17, was in Knopp's class last year and thought the literary magazine was a great idea and enjoyed seeing it realized.

"It helps us learn about the publishing experience and lets us know if we want to do that for a career," she said.

Castro's poem, "Love is Like Rain," is included in the magazine and the senior said she will probably submit a couple of poems and a short story she wrote last year into this year's magazine.

"What they've seen, they've liked," Kemper said. "I'm hoping the kids will look and say 'Let's improve this and that, let's change this.'"

One thing she's started this year is "Drive-by Sharings." Students work on a piece on a particular day and take it to a different class and read it out loud.

"I've gotten tremendous things from that," Kemper said. "I hope they choose some of that work to put in the book."

Teachers like being "victims" of the sharings and it also helps other students become aware of the magazine and take an interest in the book.

This year, about 15 copies were given to students. A student from last year's class even e-mailed Kemper from Europe and wanted a copy.

While the magazine was prepared completely within the school, Kemper hopes to be able to take it to a professional printer at the end of this school year.

"There's tons of potential. The students are really working hard for the next edition."

From a rock 'n' roll themed homecoming to sporting pocket amplifiers and playing music in the common room and hallways, it appears that Wendell High School students are becoming more musically inclined.

This year, the school is offering a guitar class, and the students are finding time during breaks to form small groups and hold jam sessions. "The best thing about this new class is that it's mixing different groups of kids together, and they're finding out they have something in common," says school counselor Jennifer Goodbody. "Music is the great multi-dimensional" and students from different interests are realizing they have similar influences and tastes."

Music teacher D.J. McCarty agrees.

"When I was in high school I took guitar classes and I really enjoyed the experience," he says. "As a guitar player I wanted to show students how fun it is to play and give them an opportunity to share their musical tastes. Kids form cliques. In this class I've seen the kids meld together. Over the past few weeks, I've seen kids who probably would never hang out together, hanging out together."

TROJAN NEWS Adam Thompson

The class has about 40 students. Because of certain limitations and volume levels, students have begun bringing miniature amplifiers to school and using those to play in the halls during lunch hour. Some of the students attract small audiences, and other students "jam" together, playing classic riffs and sometimes their own material.

"In the class, I'm teaching the students basic note reading skills and how to play scales," McCarty said. "To test how far the students have come, I had them play and sing a song in front of the class. The students played everything from punk to rock 'n' roll. Our next test will be duets, and my overall goal is to get the students to form small bands based on their musical tastes and interests."

Many students are wearing band shirts, which gives them the opportunity to support and show their favorite bands and influences. The shirts show a wide range of musical interests, from rock to reggae bands.

A true hero

Tilly Smith, 10, from Oxshott, England, right, talks with former President Bill Clinton, left, who is serving as the United Nations Special Envoy for the Tsunami Recovery, in New York on Thursday.

British youngster credited with saving 100 tourists from tsunami visits U.N.

The Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS — Tilly Smith, just 10 years old, put her geography lessons to good use by quickly recognizing the warning signs of a tsunami, the United Nations saved about 100 people from near-certain death at a Thai resort.

On Thursday, Tilly visited the United Nations and was to meet former President Bill Clinton, who is serving as the U.N. Special Envoy for the Tsunami Recovery.

"My mum didn't realize what was happening on the beach because she wasn't taught about tsunamis when she was younger," said Tilly, who was in New York with her mother, father and sister. The Smith family all escaped the lethal waves after Tilly's early warning during their vacation on the island of Phuket.

"Two weeks before the Dec. 26, 2004, disaster that took at least 178,000 lives, Tilly had studied tsunamis in her geography class in Oxshott, a community of about 5,000 just south of London. The children were shown a video from an earlier tsunami.

Tilly was armed with that knowledge when the Smith family decided to go for a morning walk on the idyllic beach near the Hurvitt Phuket Resort.

Suddenly, "I saw this bubbling on the water, right on the edge, and foam sizzling just like in a frying pan," she remembered. "The water was coming in, but it wasn't going out again. It was coming in, and then in, and then in, towards the hotel."

She recognized it as an indication that earthquake-driven waves were only minutes away. Tilly turned to her mother, Penny, and said, "Mum, I know there's something wrong. I know it's going to happen — the tsunami."

Attorneys deliver closing arguments on 'intelligent design' in Pennsylvania trial

The Associated Press

HARRISBURG, Pa. — A lawyer for eight families suing a federal judge on Friday to overturn a policy that requires the discussion of "intelligent design" in biology classes, said it improperly promotes religion in schools.

A lawyer for the school board defended the policy, explaining that it was intended to call attention to a new "science movement."

The families' attorney, Eric Rothschild, said the concept promotes the Bible's view of creation with its belief that evolution cannot fully explain the origin of life or the emergence of highly complex life forms.

"Intelligent design became the label for the board's desire to teach creationism," Rothschild said in closing arguments.

Patrick Gillen, a lawyer for the Dover Area School Board, argued that the concept was intended to call attention to "a new, fledgling science movement."

"Intelligent design became the label for the board's desire to teach creationism."

Darwin's theory is "not a fact," has inexpressible "gaps," and refers students to a textbook for more information.

The school district's policy "has the primary purpose and primary effect of advancing science education," Gillen said.

The lawyers wrapped up a six-week trial that featured expert witnesses for each side debating intelligent design's scientific merits. Other witnesses

Kimberly students show achievement

BULLDOG BUSINESS

Between Halloween and the Sadies Hawkins dance, Kimberly High School students have been hyped up on candy and fun. In the past few weeks, though, students have used some of that energy to achieve a few accomplishments.

First, the Kimberly debate team traveled to Wood River High School on Oct. 28 for a district competition. They ended with a team total of 10 out of 12 rounds won, and of the first-year novice competitors, four received honorable mentions.

Others included Kelsey Young, Danny Wade, Stephanie Palne and Maria Onalinda. McKay Niel and Edith Jones placed second, while Emily Clements and Ashley Evans received first place, while Stephanie Palne and Edith Jones placed third overall. Their next tournament will be at Hillcrest High School on Friday and Saturday.

The Kimberly FFA gives a big thanks to the businesses and organizations that helped the Agriculture Sales Team go to Nationals. The team placed seventh overall, earning a gold team emblem, with Jaysa Crist placing second individually. Both Jaysa and Kelly Soutir received gold emblems with Sara Weaver and Jamie Thomas achieving silver emblems.

On Wednesday, several freshmen and the FFA Officer Team will attend another contest at the College of Southern Idaho.

Students get close to city, judicial system

MVHS MOMENTS

Jennifer Miller

Ghastly creatures and rock stars filled the halls on Oct. 31 at Magic Valley High School, intermingling easily with the Addams Family and Barbies.

The Halloween festivities wrapped up with the parade of babies" and the announcement of the winners of the pumpkin-painting contest. Receiving grand prize was Jessica Ramirez.

First place went to Amanda McCall, second to Ashley Pressell and third to Tony Sanchez. All contributors received a certificate of participation.

There was much excitement in the Magic Valley government class this week, as students got up-close-and-personal with local government and the judicial system. The class was visited by the candidates for the Twin Falls city council seats, and had the opportunity to grill the candidates on their views and visions. The class also attended a jury trial and the Idaho Supreme Court hearing.

The Main Street Players, MVHS' drama club, is gearing up for two big events in the upcoming weeks. Several members will travel to Burley this Saturday to compete at the District IV Drama Competition with representatives from the Twin Falls High School drama program. In addition, the Players are diligently preparing their production for All-in-It Week, which will be performed at 5:30 p.m. Nov. 11. Parents and community are invited to attend this short presentation, which will be followed by displays and food of various countries in the cafeteria.

Superstars this week are Jessica Belk and Veronica Baniay. Both girls have displayed a great desire to help others and uphold commitments. Their names were added to Dianne Davidson's Superstar board.

Jennifer Miller is the English and speech teacher at Magic Valley High School in Twin Falls.

Immigrants' U.S. educational performance linked to homeland

Los Angeles Times

A study released Tuesday confirms what many teachers have long suspected: The performance of immigrant students in U.S. schools may reflect the education they received — or didn't — in their home countries.

Foreign-born children, especially those from Mexico, are far more likely to drop out of high school if they had a spotty educational record before coming to the United States, according to a study by the Pew Hispanic Center. But those who start U.S. schools by the second grade are scarcely more likely than native-born American children to drop out, the findings show.

Adding to the debate, data also show that immigrant students from Asia, Eastern Europe and the Caribbean are far less likely than their American-born peers to leave school.

The report helps illuminate the challenges facing U.S. education, particularly in states such as California, as they struggle to cope with the largest wave of immigration in the nation's history.

"There's no question that that rings true," said Katherine O'Connell, an assistant principal at Belmont High School in Los Angeles, where district data show nearly half of 5,500 students are still learning English.

"You're talking about teaching them the whole notion of schooling, teaching them content that they've never had ... giving them algebra and biology and history and geometry when they've never learned to read," she said.

The Pew study, which was based on U.S. Census data, examined 15- to 17-year-olds who had come to the United States from more than 40 countries. Those from Mexico — by far the largest foreign feeder to California — were the most likely of any nationality to have left school, or never to have enrolled in a U.S. school.

Mother of five defends her right to plan a large family

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are in our mid-30s, married 13 years. We have four wonderful young sons, ranging in age from 10 to 2, and I'm expecting our fifth and final child. Abby, you would not believe the number of people who feel free to make comments like, "You do know how to prevent pregnancy, don't you?" or begin to lecture me about how much it's going to cost to send them all to college.

DEAR ABBY: Jeanne Phillips

I am a college graduate, with a car that I love and for which I am well-paid. My husband is also college-educated and successfully self-employed. We are by no means short of money. I like these things get said because we are perceived as younger than we actually are. (People often assume we're in our mid-20s, but still it's rude and oftentimes hurtful.) Our children are healthy, happy and well-cared-for.

reply, "Of course we do, but our dream has always been to have a large family." (What are they going to tell you — that you're wrong?) And to the person who lectures you about the cost of higher education, give a wink and grin and say, "Thanks for pointing that out. When the time comes, we'll bill you up for a loan."

I hope you since you are all resolute, your mother will help you and your brother to join Alateen.

Alateen is an international group that was started in 1957 to provide support to young people like you, whose lives have been affected by someone else's drinking. Once you attend a meeting, you will find you have a lot in common with everyone you meet there. To find out more about them, visit www.al-ateen.com.

— MOM WHO LOVES A LARGE FAMILY
DEAR MOM: There is no end of presumptuous comments that people make, trying to be "helpful" or simply out of intrusiveness. Rather than losing your temper, try to handle them with humor. For those "wis" who say, "But do know how to prevent pregnancy, don't you?" smile and

DEAR ABBY: I am a 14-year-old girl whose father is an alcoholic. Dad needs help, but he doesn't want to get it. I'm very sad and depressed that my dad is always drinking. My mother has decided to move away with my little brother and she says it's for our own good because she doesn't want us to suffer what she did when she was a child. I understand and agree with her, but what is Dad going to do if we leave him? Is he going to drink more than he already does? Is he going to die? Please help me.

DEAR ABBY: What do you think about church leadership (the minister and board of trustees) who would invite the congregation to an afternoon meeting in the sanctuary to address a conflict between members and leadership, and then turn off the air conditioning for the meeting in sweltering 100-plus degree heat?

RISMAIRCK, N.D. — A North Dakota man has served an unusually steep sentence for having an unlicensed cat: two days in jail. William T. Butch's silence on taxes won't help his campaign

The Lewiston Morning Tribune

For some months now, U.S. Rep. Butch Otter has been acting like a candidate for governor of Idaho. It's time he started talking like one too.

That might not be so important in the election still being a year off — if Otter's declared candidacy were not already opposed by another, that of Democrat Jerry Brady. There's one more reason Otter might want to get into the act as well: Brady proposals, including the GOP's 11-year-old promise, appeared to founder when some committee members displayed weak knees and House Revenue and Taxation Chairwoman Dolores Crow brandished a stiff arm.

Meanwhile, a north central Idaho group calling itself Idaho Property Tax Reform remains determined to circulate petitions for a constitutionally-defying ballot initiative that has more chance of approval by the electorate than the courts.

Suppose that initiative makes it on the same ballot on which Otter's candidacy will appear. What will the former legislator and lieutenant governor say of it?

He might want to say something now, and not only because of the looming initiative. As long as the governor's leading candidate for governor remains silent on the issue, Chairwoman Crow is her party's most prominent speaker in it. And Crow is on record favoring all manner of tax breaks, including property tax breaks, for corporations and even land speculators, but opposing those for ordinary homeowners.

As Brady makes his suggestions for tax relief, including doubling the value against which the homeowner exemption can be applied, is Otter sure he wants to let Crow represent the debate's other side?

If Alito fails test, no one passes

Pop quiz: Which of the following abortion regulations is more restrictive, more burdensome, more likely to lead more women to forego abortion? (a) Requiring a minor to get the informed consent of her parents, or to get a judge to approve the abortion. (b) Requiring a married woman to sign a form saying that she notified her husband.

CHARLES KRAUTHAMMER

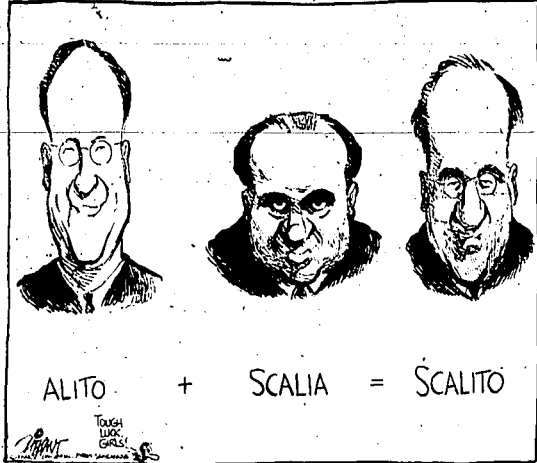

Can any reasonable person have any doubt? A minor is intrinsically far more subject to the whims, anger, punishment, economic control and retribution of a parent. And the minor is required to get both parents involved in the process to get them to agree to the abortion.

The married woman just has to inform her husband. Even worse than that, she just has to sign a form saying that she informed him. No one checks. Moreover, under the Pennsylvania law I draw my example from, she could even forego notification if she claimed that (1) he was not the father, (2) he could not be found, (3) he raped her, or (4) she had reason to believe he might physically harm her. What prosecutor on earth would subsequently dare try to prove to a jury that, say, she actually had no such fear of harm?

Remember, the question is not whether (a) or (b) is the wiser restriction. The only relevant question is which is more likely to discourage the woman from getting an abortion.

The answer is obvious. Why is this the relevant question? Because when in 1991 Judge Samuel Alito was asked to rule in Planned Parenthood v. Casey on the constitutionality of Pennsylvania's spousal notification requirement, Supreme Court precedents on abortion had held that "two parent consent requirements" for a juvenile "did not constitute an 'undue burden' and thus were constitutional. By any logic, therefore, spousal notification, which is far less burdensome, must also be constitutional — based not on his own preferences, but on the Supreme Court's own precedents.

This may all seem arcane, but it requires slogging through arcane to see just how dishonest, disreputable and disgraceful is the charge, trumped by just about every liberal interest group, that Alito is so extreme and insensitive to women's needs that he supports spousal notification for abortion.

Alito's Casey opinion no more tells you whether he "supports" the policy of spousal notification than whether he likes foie gras with his pudding. The only thing it tells you is that based on scrupulous parsing of Supreme Court precedents — or more particularly, of Sandra Day O'Connor's precedents on permissible restrictions on abortion — he concluded that spousal notification met the court's own standard for constitutionality.

The O'Connor standard was that the law could not impose an "undue burden." What did that mean? She spelled it out and set the bar pretty high. A state regulation that "may inhibit" abortions to some degree "was not enough to create an 'undue burden.'" It required more. It required "absolute obstacles or severe limitations on the abortion decision."

So how to apply this test? Alito said: Let's see how the Supreme Court applied it. The court had found in previous decisions that there was no undue burden when you require a minor to notify or get consent from both parents, or to get judicial authorization. So surely, spousal notification, which is obviously less burdensome, was also constitutional.

Alito's Casey opinion no more tells you whether he "supports" the policy of spousal notification than whether he likes foie gras with his pudding. The only thing it tells you is that based on scrupulous parsing of Supreme Court precedents — or more particularly, of Sandra Day O'Connor's precedents on permissible restrictions on abortion — he concluded that spousal notification met the court's own standard for constitutionality.

Ah, say the critics, but when Casey ultimately came up to the Supreme Court, O'Connor disagreed with Alito and found that spousal notification is indeed an undue burden. To which I say: Such is Alito's reward for having tortuously striven to follow O'Connor's logic. Brilliant Alito is, but alas not brilliant enough to divine O'Connor's next zigzag — after Alito had blown hundreds of neurons trying to figure out the logic of her past (pre-Casey) rulings.

In the coming days you will hear that Alito "supports" strip searches of 10-year-olds and the private possession of machine guns. The Brady anti-gun campaign has already called Alito "Machine Gun Sammy." You will also hear that he is hostile to minorities, immigrants, women, workers, the disabled, the environment — you name it. These claims are based on the same distortion that we see in attacks on Alito's abortion ruling in Casey — the deliberate confusion of a constitutional judgment (almost invariably based on the Supreme Court's own precedents) with a personal policy preference.

It was disgraceful when that same deliberate distortion was used in television ads to accuse John Roberts of "supporting" people who blow up abortion clinics. It remains disgraceful today.

Twin Falls needs to keep Clow on board

Please join me in re-electing Lance Clow to the City Council on Nov. 8. Lance is an honest and dedicated worker for our city. He listens to all sides of an issue before making a decision that affects the city. He cares about the future of Twin Falls.

It is important to have Lance on the council. We need an experienced and qualified person to help shape the future of our city.

A vote for Lance will ensure we are well represented on vital decisions that concern the city. Remember to vote on Nov. 8.

Rail connection still a better idea than airport

To Karma Fitzgerald: I read your article today in the Times-News about the proposed airport location.

Has anyone considered building a high-speed rail system from Joslin Field direct to Keatum and Sun Valley on the old Union Pacific rail bed that once connected the Sun Valley area to the main Union Pacific rail line?

I would think that a rail line would be more practical than clogging Highway 75 with passengers that departed from Timmerman Hill.

People seem to be hell-bent on a proposed airport no matter how impractical the idea to me seems to be.

Democrats can't ignore security concerns

Enough is enough! Satan rages throughout the earth and the petulant little wits who run the Democrat Party are still trying to overturn the last two elections. Is there no Democrat who has a concern for the country rather than the party?

Rather than focusing on serious problems facing our nation, we are treated with whether George Bush skipped some of his National Guard meetings or whether the intelligence information about Srdilam was incorrect or whether "Scooter" Libby lied about a non-crime. Books question environmental certainties

One of the key reasons I stopped supporting "Big Oil" environmental groups like Greenpeace, Sierra Club and the Natural Resources Defense Council was because it became clear to me their real agenda was to create as many nuisance suits as possible — not surprising since most of the "Big 10" have class action lawyers on their boards of directors — no matter how much sound science refuted the claims they were making.

I've found a partial list of books I've found very useful for differentiating history from historical science from silliness, some of which the invaluable 32-page bibliography in Michael Crichton's "State of Fear" led me to:

Wilfred Beckerman's "A Poverty of Reason"; Abston Chase's "In a Dark Wood: The Fight Over Forests & the Myths of Nature" and "Playing God in Yellowstone: The Destruction of America's First National Park"; Gale Christianson's "Greenhouse: The 200-Year Story of Global Warming"; Peter Huber's "Hard Green: Saving the Environment from the Environmentalists"; Bjorn Lomborg's "The Skeptical Environmentalist"; Christopher Marnes' "Green Rage: Radical Environmentalism and the Unmaking of Civilization"; Aaron Wildavsky's "But Is It True? OPINION

Science class a wrong forum for intelligent design

Asking questions is one of humanity's unique traits. Some questions can be answered through science, while others lie outside its realm. The essence of science is asking questions about the physical world around us, posing possible explanations (in the language of science, hypotheses) and testing the validity of those hypotheses.

Perhaps the biggest question humans have ever posed is "How did Earth's tremendous variety of life develop?"

Can this key question be addressed using scientific methods? Most definitely. When Charles Darwin developed his idea of how populations of organisms change through time — evolution — he turned to the process of science and tested his hypothesis by gathering evidence. Through time, his ideas about evolution have been rigorously tested by thousands of scientists and are almost universally accepted. All this testing of related hypotheses strengthens our confidence in the validity of Darwin's idea.

Evolution, therefore, has been raised to a higher status than simple hypothesis. Using the language of science once again, it is a theory. The meaning of theory in science differs significantly from its common usage, which is why the term is often the source of considerable confusion.

Scientific theories do not imply uncertainty. Instead, they are extremely well tested and verified principles that are accepted by the scientific community as a whole. Along with evolution, other theories that are well established include the plate tectonic theory, cell theory and atomic theory. Some people embrace a different view to explain the diversity of life, and that is the basis of intelligent design, which is currently getting attention as an alternative to evolutionary theory.

Can we test the ideas of intelligent design using scientific methods? No. We cannot use scientific methods to test supernatural phenomena, such as the existence of a creator. Faith, as important as it is to our well-being, just doesn't qualify as scientific evidence. Does that make the question unimportant? Absolutely not. History shows us the tremendous impact of religion and philosophy upon humanity. Why, then, is there a controversy over teaching intelligent design along with evolutionary theory? As biologists, we want questions addressed in the proper forum. Because the existence of a creator cannot be tested using science, it is inappropriate to attempt to teach about it in science courses. It is a fascinating question that fully deserves more discussion. We support this discussion — in religious and philosophical venues, not in science classrooms.

Former owners are glad cats are in a home

I realize that there aren't too many cat people in this world. In fact, the really good ones are kinda hard to find.

My fiancé and I are a young couple who aren't quite ready for kids. We had decided to try our luck with raising cats. A friend had given us the two runts of the litter that her cat had. My fiancé and I took turns bottle feeding our 1-week-old bundles of joy every two hours at first, then every four, then every six until finally they could eat on their own.

They turned into very healthy happy cats. They were our babies. Plainly put, we raised them from the beginning so all they knew were "mum and dad." They weren't like normal cats. They weren't raised around any other animals or people, so they were one of a kind.

We had some unexpected hardships come up and my fiancé and I were forced to move out of state without much notice. We couldn't bring our babies. We had left them behind with a friend, when out of the blue, my friend had some problems of her own and had to move from her home and was forced to give our kitties to the Buhl Animal Shelter. I tried to call the shelter shortly after she had taken them there, but they said they couldn't help us.

I just want to say we appreciate whoever adopted my babies. Hopefully, Meeka and Mayab were adopted together into a good home. Not a day goes by that I don't think about them and look at the millions of pictures I have of "my kids."

Three "Must-do" Steps to Work Toward Successful Investing

You've probably seen plenty of magazines featuring pictures of affluent-looking people who have "made it big" in investing. While these photos may grab our attention, the articles can be more illuminating — because, if they're honest, they will usually reveal that those investors who supposedly "hit the jackpot" actually earned their prosperity by diligently following a few simple steps over many years.

And you, too, can make the same moves. What are these "secrets to success"? Here are three to consider:

Create a plan - If you don't have an investment plan, you are susceptible to making all kinds of costly mistakes. For example, you may be tempted to chase after "hot" stocks in order to discover that, by the time you buy them, they are already cooling off. Or, you may randomly invest in a stock here, a bond there, a CD next month, a Treasury bill next year, and so on. But you won't increase your chances of success just by adding more and more investments. That's why you need to create an investment plan that's based on your risk tolerance, your specific goals and your time horizon. By putting together a diversified array of high-quality stocks, bonds and other vehicles, you may be able to make steady progress toward your objectives. You can draw up this type of plan by yourself, of course, but you may find it easier — and more productive — to work with a financial professional who knows your situation and who can make objective recommendations.

Keep investment performance in perspective - Many people make one of two mistakes when it comes to tracking their investments. They either forget about what they own, or they zealously follow every single price movement, large or small. Both of these moves can be troublesome. If you pay absolutely no attention to what you've invested in, you could someday find that your investments are no longer suitable for your needs. On the other hand, if you are constantly fretting about price movements, you'll be tempted to make hasty "buy" and "sell" decisions that ultimately may work against you. Instead of following either of these paths, look for a middle ground. Be aware of how your investments are performing, but always keep this performance in perspective. A stock could have a bad month, or even a bad year, and yet still have a promising future. Conversely, another stock may be "hot" at the moment but face daunting challenges for future success. The bottom line? Review your portfolio regularly — at least once a year. Evaluate how your investments have done in the recent past and what they may do in the coming months and years. Most important of all, try to determine if your holdings are still doing what you want them to do. Are they growing at the pace you need? If they're designed to provide income, are you getting the amount you want? Again, when you're reviewing your portfolio, you can benefit from working with a financial professional.

Invest for the long term - It sounds easy — but it's not. To really invest for the long term, you need patience, perseverance and the ability to focus on events that won't occur for several decades. That's not to say you won't have short-term goals, such as a down payment for a house, a family vacation, etc. And there are some investments that are well-suited for these needs. Overall, though, you will probably find that most of your portfolio will be devoted to achieving your long-term objectives — a comfortable retirement, college for your kids, etc. So, you must build — and maintain — the mix of investments that have the "staying power" you will need.

There you have it — three moves you'll need to make to be a successful investor. By following these suggestions, you may never land on a magazine cover, but you should be pleased with the results.

Questions:

1. True or False — You should create an investment plan based on CD rate and "hot" stock tips?
2. True or False — A long term perspective is a good investment strategy?

French president: Restoring order is priority

PARIS — French President Jacques Chirac on Sunday promised arrests, trials and punishment for those sowing "violence or fear" across France

— as the urban unrest that has triggered attacks on vehicles, nursery schools and other targets reached central Paris. Youths set ablaze nearly 1,300 vehicles and torched businesses, schools and symbols of French authority, including post offices and provincial police stations, late Saturday and early Sunday.

Police clashed with rioters south of the capital Sunday night, the 11th consecutive night of unrest. About 10 police were injured, two seriously, in Grigny in the Essonne region, the Interior Ministry said. LCI television reported that shots from a pellet gun were fired.

The violence took another alarming turn Saturday night with attacks in the well-guarded French capital. Police said 35 cars were torched, most on the

Bush tells Latin Americans to defend their democracy

BRASILIA, Brazil — In a clear jab at Venezuelan President Hugo Chavez, President Bush called on Latin Americans on Sunday to boldly defend strong democratic institutions and reject any drift back to the days of authoritarian rule.

Bush's remarks came after Chavez, the leftist leader and friend of Cuba's Fidel Castro, spent the past two days hurling criticism at the United States at the Summit of the Americas in Argentina.

Bying three upcoming presidential elections in Latin America, Bush said, citizens must choose "between two competing visions" for their future.

One, he said, pursues representative government, integration into the world community and freedom's transformative power for individuals.

"The other seeks to roll back the democratic progress of the past two decades by playing to fear, pitting neighbor against neighbor and blaming others for their own failures to provide for the people," he said. "We must make tough decisions today to ensure a better tomorrow."

Archaeologists unroll site of ancient church in Israel

MEGIDDO PRISON, Israel — Israeli prisoner Itanil Razlo was removing rubble from the planned site of a new prison ward when his shovel uncovered the edge of an elaborate mosaic, unrolling what Israeli archaeologists said Sunday may be the Holy Land's oldest church.

The discovery of the church in the northern Israeli town of Megiddo, near the biblical Armageddon, was hailed by experts as an important discovery that could reveal details about the development of the early church in the region. Archaeologists said the church dated from the third century, decades before Constantine legalized Christianity across the Byzantine Empire.

"What's clear today is that it's the oldest archaeological remains of a church in Israel, maybe even in the entire region. Whether in the entire world, it's still too early to say," said Yoram Tepper, the excavation's head archaeologist.

Survey: Raised medians favored

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — A majority of business representatives said they favor raised medians on Blue Lakes Boulevard North, according to a survey conducted by the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce.

According to a chamber statement, nearly 240 "Chamber-member representatives" filled out surveys. Fifty-three percent said they support raised medians and u-turns at Intersections. Thirty-nine percent were opposed, and seven percent had no opinion.

The "raised median" option was one of five listed on the survey. Of the others, 51 percent of the survey respondents favor combined driveways for businesses and 42 percent said they favor short median sections. The two other options had higher approval ratings. Seventy percent said they favor a hi-grip roadway with striping, and 76 percent said they support acceleration and deceleration lanes.

The respondents were also asked to rank project goals. Safety Improvements and accident reduction received the highest ranking, followed by accessibility. Aesthetics and landscaping was listed as the third-ranked priority.

The options to improve traffic flow and reduce accidents on Blue Lakes Boulevard are being considered by city officials and the Idaho Transportation Department for the Blue Lakes North Corridor Project, which is scheduled to start next year.

HAVING A CRAFTY TIME

Madison Virgil, 8, of Twin Falls and her grandmother, Zandra Edwards, look at a dress offered at the Classy Kids booth Saturday during the 26th annual Harvest Time Festival show at CSI in Twin Falls.

Festival draws large crowd to CSI campus

By Michelle Dunlop
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — They're not kissing cousins, but they sure do like to hold hands a lot.

With her pink cowboy hat on her head and her seven-year-old cousin Preston Hurd in tow, Sarah Hurd, 3, navigated crowded, dusty aisles at the 26th annual Harvest Time Festival on Saturday.

The cousins joined nine other family members to take in the arts and crafts show at the College of Southern Idaho. Rows of vendors lined the Eldon Evans Expo Center trying to tempt the "wholy herd of Hurd's" into buying wares ranging from homemade mustards and jams to photographs of foreign lands to hot pepper plants.

Preston and Sarah's grandmother, Connie Hurd, however, had two themes in mind for her purchases: snowmen and moose.

"I'm getting ready for holidays," she said.

A mother of five boys, Connie Hurd had to wait until her sons married to do "girl things," said one of her four daughters-in-law, Krista. And, Grandmother Hurd isn't missing a beat — rounding up the bunch to take in two craft shows in the past two weeks.

Preston Hurd, 7, of Jackpot, Nev. and his cousin Sarah Hurd, 3, of Boise, hold hands Saturday as they stroll through the rows of booths at the Harvest Time Festival at CSI in Twin Falls.

With eight granddaughters and two grandsons, Hurd admits she has to be careful not to spoil the girls too much. But, four-year-old Fallon Hurd vigorously shakes her head no when questioned whether her grandmother spoils her.

"Yet, if Connie Hurd wants to change that, Fallon will oblige and be satisfied with a 'princess' doll she spotted a few dollors down the way." Fallon said.

Danielle Flores could certainly be accused of trying to turn little girls into princesses with her line of Classy Kids clothing. Ribbons and bows abound on the racks of elaborate girls' dresses Flores has displayed.

Classy Kids is a family effort — with Flores' mother cutting, pinning and sewing dresses and Flores adding the adornments. The women got the idea for a business after Flores' daughter was born 11 years ago.

"People started seeing my daughter and saying how cute her outfits were," she said.

Business really took off about five or six years ago, Flores said. Today, the Winnemucca, Nev. resident usually makes it to about 30 craft shows a year, including several in Idaho.

"Idaho just treats me right," she said.

On Saturday, visitors to the Harvest Time Festival weren't treating Bill and Florence Beck's SC Indian jewelry station right. But, the pair have come to expect that from this event.

A member of the Shoshone tribe, Bill Beck began crafting custom-made Native American jewelry in 1973. His wife's family, who are Navajo, have made jewelry even longer than that. Holding up a silver bracelet, Beck explains the time and effort that goes into each piece. Three horses line the bracelet, each composed of dozens of tiny, brightly-colored stones that Florence Beck puts in place out in the couple's garage in Twin Falls.

Orders from regular customers, word-of-mouth buyers, and sales at South Dakota craft shows keep the two busy. And, this is just a hobby, Bill Beck said.

"I've got to work to support my silver habit," he said, smiling. "I just enjoy doing it."

Woman's journey leaves remarkable history

By Jami Whitte
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Ursula "Sue" DeVries was a hardworking, dedicated woman, who has been faced with unspeakable horrors during the war and haunted by all she had survived, said she lived longer than she thought she would.

She died Nov. 1 at age 73. "She had quite a history," her husband, Allan, said.

She was born in Neustadt, Oberschlesien, Germany, the oldest in a family of eight children. Her German father, though disabled, was drafted into the war and killed.

She worked at an aunt's restaurant in Berlin. During a vacation home, the restaurant was bombed and her aunt was killed. Shortly after that, the Gestapo, the secret police of Nazi Germany, saw DeVries walking around taking pictures along a street.

The 16-year-old girl was held prisoner for about six months and then had to work in an underground factory for about three years. Her family had no idea where she was for a long time.

She and four other girls worked with British and American prisoners of war in the factory.

When he first met her, Allan wondered where she got a southern brogue to her English.

"It was from working with the American prisoners," he said. "The workers stayed in a boxcar along a railroad and one day while she was cooking, a man yelled, 'What are you doing in there?' She said the food was terrible so she was making her own bread."

She was surprised to see Adolf Hitler looking in the room. Sometimes she'd trade her German bread for candy from the soldiers, but she had to be careful — if she got caught she'd get in trouble.

Guards let everyone go when Russian and American soldiers were attacking.

The girls were going to board a boat, but DeVries had a bad feeling and wouldn't get on. The other girls stayed with her.

A few yards from shore, the boat blew up. As the Russians invaded the area, they raped, murdered and tortured many people. DeVries and her friends saw many brutal crimes. The five of them, dressed in factory uniforms and short hair, looked like boys, which helped them escape. They traveled at night and hid during the day as they headed across the border.

Blaine County jail costs $10.3M

By Kathleen L. Turner
For The Times-News

HALLIEY — Representatives of jail architect Lombard Conrad and Kretzenbeck Constructors put an excitement mark on budget scenarios last Monday as they attempted to gain commissioner approval on a dollar amount for the proposed Public Safety Facility.

The current scenario puts the cost estimate for the facility at $10,303,840.

LCA and Kretzenbeck representatives told a cautionary tale, warning of cost increases to come if the county were to delay action on the facility. They warned that all available subcontractors, materials and crew drywall, were being allocated to rebuild after natural disasters along the U.S. Gulf Coast and that if commissioners did not close in on a decision they would be left without availability of quality workers and materials.

Commissioners, unimpressed with the horizon mark, wanted to know just what that elusive bottom line might be.

Commissioner Dennis Wright asked County Clerk Maura Riemann if she was comfortable with the estimated $700,000 annual loan payment a 20-year agreement would require. Riemann replied she would be more comfortable with $600,000.

"It would seem that we could come up with a total we can't exceed," Wright concluded.

Sherrill Wall, funding officer, said he plans to be able to make the jail profitable by changing a fee to each of the 20 beds planned for work release. Funding still far short of the jail's total would generate $100,000 per year.

"I can generate income," Fleming said. "We can generate half a million out of that in a snap."

Fleming then suggested he could put a pro forma together to show how the jail would turn a profit.

Wright noted he had been hurried out of his statement before in handling the nursing home. He did not want a repeat.

"We need to move forward," Fleming urged, continuing, "I will show you the income the jail will generate and how that payment will be made."

The representative for Kretzenbeck continued to urge approval, requesting a formal confirmation at the earliest possible date.

Commission Chair Sarah Michael examined the budget scenario and the pro forma, as she noted that proposed costs showed what a 10 percent, a 20 percent and a 30 percent cost increase would do to the budget.

She noted that the emergency fee remained a part of the budget, asking if that wasn't a sort of double indemnity.

In cost-cutting, thinking the gap discussed the possibility of building only the jail portion of the facility and moving the dispatch center out of the facility, both of which proved objectionable on the part of Fleming and the construction company. It was felt that costs would escalate beyond what would be saved by waiting to build the sheriff's office portion of the facility.

Fleming noted that the dispatch center, while only an 800 square foot room, also only represented a $200,000 cost.

Michael pointed out that she was uncomfortable removing the dispatch center since that was part of the advisory ballot statement and that was an important issue for North Valley voters.

"I think it has to be a priority," Michael stated.

Michael asked for agreement from the other commissioners on moving forward with construction drawings. Both Bowman and Wright agreed.

Bowman said she felt more comfortable with the numbers after the meeting.

Michael concluded, "I hope we can OK this for the final financial confirmation needed for the county to get the expense approved as 'ordinary and necessary.'"

Adela will be remembered day after day, and will look down upon those who cared for her and will accompany her to her last resting place. She will be remembered by her parents, Blas and Alma Bautista; her grandparents, Lee and Maria Sanchez; along with various aunts, uncles and cousins and friends.

A vigil service will be held at 7 p.m. Monday, Nov. 7, 2005, at Little Flower Catholic Church, 1601 Oakley Ave., Burley. The funeral Mass will be celebrated at 11 a.m. Tuesday, Nov. 8, 2005, at Little Flower Catholic Church with the Rev. Father Juan Garatea as celebrant. Burial will be in Gem Memorial Gardens. Friends and family may call one hour prior to the vigil service and one hour prior to the funeral Mass at the church. Arrangements are under the direction of Rasmussen Funeral Home, 1350 E. 16th St., Burley.

Lawrence Edward 'Larry' Kolsen

JEROME — Lawrence Edward "Larry" Kolsen, 73, of Jerome, died Nov. 5, 2005, at his home surrounded by his family.

He was born July 30, 1932, in San Francisco, Calif., the son of Gurman Peter Kolsen and Agnes H. Kirwan Kolsen. Larry was raised in Pingree, Idaho, and graduated from Snake River High School. He served his country in the U.S. Navy. In 1952, he married Idonna Rowley. They had four children. They later divorced. He married Lola Blunt in 1974. They made their home in Jerome. Larry loved truck driving, bull riding and would rather buy a new car than a new set of tires. Most of all, he loved his family. He will be remembered as a wonderful husband, father, grandfather and friend who was kind, gentle and soft-spoken.

Larry is survived by his wife, Lola Kolsen of Jerome; his children, David (Betty) Kolsen of Jerome, Kristy (Dennis) Pope of Blackfoot, Sandra (Duane) Kuhn of Gooding, Susan (Ted) Gavin of Meridian, Kent (Melissa) Kolsen of Gooding and Dana (Bobby) Peterson of Jerome. He is also survived by his brother Jack (Betty) Kolsen, three sisters, Kathryn Atwood, Carol Bliton, Joan Kolsen, and 19 grandchildren, three great-grandchildren and many extended family members and friends. He was preceded in death by his parents, his brother Peter Kolsen and grandson Brody Kolsen.

A funeral service for Larry will be conducted at 2 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 8, 2005, in the Jerome LDS 7th Ward Chapel, 50 East 100 South, Jerome, with Bishop Alan Leavitt officiating. A visitation will be held this evening at Farnsworth Mortuary, 1343 S. Lincoln, Jerome, ID 83338, where family and friends may call from 6 to 8 p.m., and again on Tuesday one hour prior to the services at the church. Interment to follow in the Jerome Cemetery.

Ketchum looks to boost growth

By Susan Bailey For The Times-Tribune

KETCHUM — First planning consultant Tom Hudson told city officials on Oct. 26 that he saw "a rich heritage, great sense of place, a strong heart and a connection between residents." Then, he told them the bad news.

"The social fabric is being frayed," Hudson, owner of the Hudson Company in Moscow, Idaho, said. "This is no longer an everyday place for residents."

In addition, "the invisible hand of capitalism" could use a correction between residents.

"It isn't an 'either/or' situation," Hudson said. "I've heard people say you have to either be a destination tourist area or a community. As a fellow Idahoan, I'm here to tell you there are mechanisms available for you to allow for a continuance of community here while continuing to embrace and sustain tourism."

Hudson spoke to members of City Council and the Planning and Zoning Commission about his goals in talking on the Downtown Master Plan.

P&Z member Jack Rutherford told Hudson, "I think we're at very great risk of losing our character."

City Council member Terry Tracy said he could not understand why council after council did not implement Comprehensive Plan goals.

Hudson said action was imperative for Ketchum since growth was accelerating.

"Growth magnifies decisions," said Hudson. "Luckily, nothing breeds momentum like momentum."

Hudson said he had been hired to create momentum. Hudson will talk to city officials with his eye on actions to be taken, not just talk.

"A Comprehensive Plan is a conceptual framework," said Hudson. "It is not an action plan. The Downtown Master Plan will be the tool for action."

Hudson said many projects slated for development in Ketchum don't appear to jive with the Comprehensive Plan. "You've got long walls facing pedestrians on new buildings and you see you want a walking downtown," said Hudson. "Those walls are cold and unfriendly. You have to reward people for walking and those stark walls are not rewarding."

Union rallies to repeal 'Right to Work' law

LEWISTON (AP) — Idaho union leaders say they have about 25 percent of the 47,481 signatures needed by February to put a proposed repeal of the state's so-called "Right to Work" law before voters in the November 2006 general election.

Still, just 40 people showed up at a pro-initiative rally Saturday in Lewiston — another sign that generating significant opposition to the 1985 law could be difficult in a state where just 7.9 percent of workers are members or are represented by a union, according to 2004 U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics figures.

Only 12 states have lower union representation than Idaho.

AFL-CIO president Dave Whaley said the movement to repeal the 1985 law that prohibits making union membership necessary to get a job has had difficulty attracting people in cities, including Boise, to gather signatures. He characterized the turnout for such rallies in Moscow, the University of Idaho's home, and Lewiston, where many workers at timber company Potlatch Corp., are union members, as the best in the state.

Overcoming the fatigue factor

How many times in the past week have you said to yourself or someone else, "I don't have the time or energy?" As you do a quick body scan, you realize that once again your stuff simply strutteth off without you. If you can relate, you are in good company.

Being chronically tired has morphed into a national epidemic that affects as many as half of all Americans and serves as the most common complaint echoing through physicians' offices across this country.

Multiple polls indicate we are steeped in the mind-set — too little time to do everything that needs to be done, including time to recharge our batteries. "Most of us are busier than we've ever been," says nutritionist Susan Smith, author of The Energy Edge. "What we're lacking isn't time, it's the energy."

Low energy may be far more than fatigue. It can drone on as chronic exhaustion, often attached to chronic stressful reactions — mental confusion, irritability, insomnia, mood swings, food cravings and lowered immunity. Exhaustion, often attached to chronic stressful reactions — mental confusion, irritability, insomnia, mood swings, food cravings and lowered immunity. Exhaustion, often attached to chronic stressful reactions — mental confusion, irritability, insomnia, mood swings, food cravings and lowered immunity.

Although most fatigue is not generally rooted in serious illness, persistent lack of energy for more than a month can be a sign of a condition requiring medical attention. More often, the cause of our personal energy crisis is a chronic lack of self-care — too little sleep, erratic eating with poor choices, too little exercise or sunlight, and overlooked schedules.

When we don't make the connection between the power drain and simple patterns in daily living that enhance energy from strategic eating, exercise, studies and thinking patterns, to rest, relaxation and play.

For fatigue not caused by a medical condition, here are three simple solutions to enhance energy with minimal effort:

1. Drink more water. Mild dehydration, a common factor for fatigue, can easily occur from skipping a meal, working in dry air, changing climates, traveling by air or drinking too much caffeine or alcohol. "The fatigue, simple headaches, lack of concentration and dizziness you feel at the end of a workday can result simply from not drinking enough water," explains Liz Applegate from University of California at Davis. "These are symptoms that too many of us have come to expect — and worse, to accept."

Begin the day with a glass of water and continue to sip 8-10 glasses throughout the day. If you need it, if you wake during the day it's dark yellow or scant, it's an indicator you need more fluids. Be sure to drink most of the day's water before 6 p.m. to avoid unnecessary interruptions in sleep.

2. Eat for high energy. Throughout the day you can maintain a consistent energy flow by eating evenly spaced meals and snacks, with breakfast. Avoid high-calorie, high-fat meals, which make you feel sluggish, and high-sugar foods, which actually promote sleepiness.

Or eat the sweet treats as part of a meal to blunt the effect on blood sugar levels.

3. Try the one-breath meditation as a mini-break. Deep breathing anytime is one of the simplest, most effective ways to activate your energy. It can be as simple as this brief, on-the-spot meditation. Take a deep breath of air and imagine yourself drawing vitality into every fiber of your being and new light into every corner of your mind. As you exhale, release tension from your thoughts and muscles.

Office workers swap chairs for exercise balls

By Matt Christensen
Times-News writer

SHOSHONE — Wander into the Farm Service Agency, and you'll find office workers bouncing. No, not off the walls — on the floor.

Gail Slagel got the idea to trade in her chair for an exercise ball from her husband, who caught a glimpse of desk jockeys bouncing around an office in the Wood River Valley. Slagel got a ball for Christmas, and she has raved around her office since.

Besides being loads of fun, Slagel said, the ball is therapeutic. "I used to have back pain — not anymore."

The balancing act it takes to stay on took some getting used to. By the third day, she had the hang of it.

"Now you can't take it from me," she said. "Pay attention to that discomfort," said a local ergonomics expert.

Prolonged use of exercise balls as seating might actually hurt the body, said Doug Anderson, director of Magic Valley Regional Medical Center.

But Slagel has no complaints. Sometimes she'll do a few sit-ups or back bends, but mostly she bounces.

"I'm a motion person. I prefer to be moving all the time."

Something she couldn't do in a chair. And besides limiting her mobility, the chair was awkward and caused pain.

"See, I'm very stable. And even with a regular chair and my feet flat on the floor, my desk is too high."

When she got the ball, Slagel positioned four step-aerobic platforms around it so she'd have something to rest her feet on.

"Needless to say, clients find the set-up peculiar," Anderson said. "Oh yes," she said. "The clients are very curious when they walk in and see us bouncing."

After Slagel spent five months suns chair, co-worker Marilyn Gardner became curious, as well.

"Finally," Slagel said, "Marilyn thought, 'Oh gee, I'll try that.'"

Now the four-person office has two ball believers. Slagel's is peat white; Gardner chose blue.

The blue sphere, however, has since been replaced. At the office two weeks ago, Gardner noticed she was sinking. Her ball had fized out. But it was only one workday before balance was restored with a shiny gray one.

Gardner said she's in better shape since she gave up chairs.

"When you sit on a chair, they're so convenient," she said. "When you sit on a ball, you don't move, so you have to twist and turn. Office workers don't get as much exercise, you know."

But maybe that is a good thing, Anderson said.

"When a person is at work, they're putting stress on their body, but not exercising. And from an ergonomics perspective, if the ball may be causing damage."

Anderson said work time should be spent with the body in a position that's relaxing, and office workers shouldn't purposely stress their bodies.

"It's a double-edged sword," he said. "They're using more muscles, but they're probably also causing strain."

Instead, he recommends exercise during the lunch break, or just wait until work is over. And if you feel it's necessary to get some activity during the workday, use the stairs instead of the elevator. Walk instead of using the intercom or phone to contact a co-worker. Or park your car farther away."

Not all steps are equal: Health experts say pedometers at work don't tell the whole story

By Matt Christensen
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — When an office worker settles into her chair each morning, she's not expecting to get a workout — even though she takes more steps during her day than a postal worker.

Pedometers, pager-sized gadgets that measure how many steps a person takes, are popping up in workplaces across the country.

To find which occupations sock away the most steps, The Times-News strapped the devices to four workers from various professions: a mail carrier, an office worker, a nursery employee and a restaurant cook and server.

The results are somewhat surprising, Matlock, who has a desk job, accumulated more steps than Randy Thiessen, a letter carrier. Wendy Witkowski, who cooks and waits tables in a restaurant, walked the fewest steps.

And Jill Patterson, who helps customers at a tree farm, tallied the most. So it's Matlock and Patterson who are the healthiest workers, right?

Turns out, that's probably not the case. Health experts say pedometers are not a good way to gauge how much exercise people are getting and that people shouldn't be fooled into thinking that because they take more steps, they're getting healthier.

Doug Anderson, a certified occupational therapy assistant at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, said pedometers are "hoody-winking people into thinking that just because they're getting more exercise than they actually are."

"Pedometers are an easy way out," he said. "People think, 'Look how many steps I took today,' and believe they're getting healthier. It's how you accumulate those steps that's important."

Anderson said a person needs 30 consecutive minutes of cardiovascular activity several times a week to reap health benefits.

Thiessen, the letter carrier, is likely getting the most from his steps because they're taken all at once in his route — not in short increments like those of an office worker.

Don't tell that to Patterson, who says she gets all the exercise she needs at the nursery. She took 14,220 steps in an eight-hour shift, which equates to about seven miles.

On the day she wore the pedometer, Patterson was also doing some heavy lifting. She tore down hay bales from a Halloween display.

"I don't do any exercising at home, I don't want to," she said. "I usually get enough exercise at work."

Matlock feels the same way. "I know I walk a lot at work," she said. "I have to stay active because sitting kills me."

The Jerome office worker hustles up and down the stairs in her building several times a day and often makes trips to the courthouse across the street for documents.

Only Witkowski, the restaurant employee, said she was surprised by how many steps she accumulated.

"We're up and running all the time," she said. "Still, it was a lot more than I expected."

Anderson said it's that kind of reaction that makes people believe they're doing a lot for their bodies.

"Doing something is better than doing nothing," he said. "But pedometers are not going to make you fit."

Jaimie Tighe, a certified personal trainer at the College of Southern Idaho, agrees, but she said pedometers are a good motivational tool.

"Use pedometers to get a base line," she said, "and then set a goal. Any extra steps are going to increase the calories you burn."

Back surgery: How to evaluate pain and gain

By Paul Wenske
Knight Ridder News Service

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — If your back is aching your wallet is probably hurting, too.

Back surgeries cost consumers and insurers twice what they did 10 years ago, and experts say newer procedures, including trendy spinal-fusion techniques, may be overused and offer questionable benefits to some patients.

scientist at the health-care agency. "There are always new techniques and devices — the sort of things we demand from health care."

Still, Elbhauser said, "there have been questions about the appropriateness of these procedures."

Gary Claxton, vice president of the Henry J. Kaiser Family Foundation, which monitors health-care spending, said the rising costs and the growth in the number of back surgeries is a good example of why health-care expenditures are more than double inflation.

"We learn to do more things and do more of them," Claxton said.

But a major concern is that a growing shift to spinal-fusion procedures that use expensive mechanical devices to help fuse diseased vertebrae together has not resulted in significantly better outcomes, said Doug Burton, a senior spine research professor and surgeon at the University of Kansas Medical Center.

"The success rate is still in the 70 percent range," Burton said, offering many sufferers no greater guarantee for relief than exercise, yoga and cheaper chiropractic care. "It's an uncertain outcome," added Burton, who limits the number of fusions that he performs.

Some higher costs obviously can be attributed to inflation and fewer people who are willing to live with aching backs. But experts say costlier procedures and a flurry of new surgical hardware also are boosting bills.

"A lot of it is due to improved technology," said Anne Elbhauser, a senior research

Exercise for seniors

South Central District Health is hosting a six-week series of "Fit and Fall Proof" exercise classes for seniors in Eden, Fairfield, Hagerman, Jerome, Kimberly, Twin Falls and Wendell.

Most classes are free. They are under way or will begin within the next few months.

Hagerman classes will begin this week from 9 to 10 a.m. Tuesday and Thursday at the Hagerman Valley Senior Center.

The following exercise programs have started, but seniors can still attend:

- 11 to 11:45 a.m. Tuesday and Friday at the Camas Senior/Community Center in Fairfield.
- 10:30 to 11:30 a.m. Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday at the Ageless Senior Citizens Center in Kimberly.
- 10 to 11 a.m. Tuesday and Thursday at the Living Waters Presbyterian Church in Wendell.

Classes in Jerome will begin within the next month; a nominal fee will be charged. Classes will begin in Eden and Twin Falls in January.

The "Fit and Fall Proof" low-impact classes help individuals increase their strength and balance while enjoying social interaction with other participants.

Fetal surgery shows promise — but at what risk?

By Daniel Costello
Los Angeles Times

Andrea Merkow had three months pregnant when she got devastating news. Doctors told her that two of her triplets were sharing one heart and wouldn't survive. If they died, the third fetus would likely die, too.

So Merkow didn't hesitate when doctors at University of California, San Francisco, proposed an experimental surgery to try to save the life of one of her babies. They would insert a small needle into her womb and use a laser to separate the two endangered fetuses from the healthy one. If the procedure worked, they said, it was possible they could save the healthy baby.

"It blows my mind we were able to do this. It was a godsend," says the 31-year-old Bend, Ore., medical clerk, who now has a healthy 3-year-old son, Thomas.

Just a few years ago, fetal surgery were rare and only a handful of top research hospitals, such as UC San Francisco and Children's Hospital Boston, performed them. That is quickly changing. Six fetal centers have opened across the country in the last four years and as many as 10 other hospitals are considering similar programs.

Doctors expect 400 to 500 procedures this year

Because there is no national registry for fetal surgeries, no one can say how many procedures have been performed or their medical outcomes. In interviews with more than a dozen fetal surgeons, they estimated that 400 to 500 procedures will be performed this year at 15 hospitals in the United States.

As more centers open, doctors predict a few thousand women a year could eventually be candidates for maternal fetal surgery.

according to several experts.

Meanwhile, doctors are expanding the type of fetal conditions they are willing to treat. Until recently, doctors typically have intervened only when a fetus' life is at stake because of the risk to both the woman and the fetus. Today, however, more hospitals are performing fetal surgeries in cases where the fetus is not endangered. One new intervention, for example, involves using a laser to cut away relatively common obstructions around a fetus' growing limb, a potentially difficult but clearly non-fatal condition. Doctors also are considering surgeries to repair cleft palates and other cosmetic procedures.

As more hospitals enter the field, a debate is growing among doctors, researchers and medical ethicists. Critics point to a paucity of research about the safety and effectiveness of such procedures; until more studies are done, some are calling for stricter limits. Among their chief concerns: Smaller hospitals with fewer resources and less-experienced physicians are performing the procedures.

Critics say that may increase the risks associated with such surgeries. Several doctors said they are aware of three cases worldwide in which both the woman and her fetus died during surgery. The majority of women who undergo fetal procedures have premature labor, increasing the risk of death for the unborn child. The woman's uterus can rupture, which can require a hysterectomy, or she can have such severe scarring from surgery that she may have trouble conceiving again. And up to 5 percent of children who are born premature following fetal surgery develop cerebral palsy, doctors said.

In 2000, a woman died while undergoing a procedure to reverse a complication involving her twin fetuses. The incident in Florida was the first known maternal death during fetal surgery in the United States. The surgeon who performed the surgery believes it was the woman died from an amniotic fluid embolism after fluid leaked into her body and sent her into shock; both fetuses also died. Lisa Patterson, a spokeswoman for St. Joseph's Women's Hospital in Tampa, said the hospital settled a lawsuit with the family and declined further comment about the incident. She said the hospital believes its fetal program is safe and that complications are rare.

Dr. Edmund Yang, director of Vanderbilt University's Fetal Diagnosis and Therapy Center in Nashville, said he is confident that many fetal surgeries offered today will eventually be proved safe and effective. But Yang said the Florida case, as well as reports of medical complications during fetal surgeries elsewhere in recent years, have caused some physicians to rethink which surgeries are appropriate and which are not. This fall, Yang and a group of two dozen surgeons will meet in Dallas to discuss creating national standards for fetal procedures.

MELANOMA

Question: I've had a mole on the bottom of my foot since I was a child. I just noticed that it's bigger than I remember, and looks like it has different colors. Should I be worried about it becoming cancer or losing my foot? My neighbor, who is a nurse, is telling me to have it checked. What should I do?

Answer: Listen to your neighbor and have it checked by a podiatrist or dermatologist. Malignant melanomas arising on the feet are rare, but do occur. If you've had a mole that was fairly stable for years, but has recently had changes in shape, size, color, or sensitivity, it should be evaluated. Melanomas are one of the most dangerous of skin cancers, and need to be diagnosed early and treated aggressively. Please call your foot specialist if you have additional questions or need help.

Cancer and coping with treatment

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — For Melissa Dobbs of Washington, the worst part of having breast cancer is losing control over how she feels and when she feels it.

Her chemotherapy regimen makes her weak and sick, particularly on the third day after treatment.

Dobbs' antidote to the accompanying anxiety and uncertainty: saddling up her thoroughbred mare, Izzie.

"When I'm riding, I don't think about anything else," says the former Fulbright Scholar, who works as a media analyst for the Saudi Embassy. "Not the state of the world, not the state of my health, whether my house is clean or my checkbook balances."

For Melissa Dobbs of Washington, the worst part of having breast cancer is losing control over how she feels and when she feels it. Her antidote: saddling up her thoroughbred mare, Izzie.

At least five days a week, Dobbs makes it to Izzie's stable in Silver Spring, Md.

When she's too sick to ride, she still visits.

"When you own a horse, it's like a child. You can't stay home because you feel tired or sick. You have to get up, go out. And the truth is, you always feel better when you do."

Competing in dressage and jumping, Dobbs says, also gives her something besides illness to occupy her mind. "There's a sense of accomplishment that comes with each day," she says. "It gives me a goal. This is sanctuary."

Dobbs just completed her eighth and last chemotherapy session. She plans to have a mastectomy in November.

Just soap and water

By Sandra G. Boodman
The Washington Post

The Question — Walk into any store selling soap and you'll be overwhelmed by the array of antibacterial products and cleansers that don't require water, body washes and soaps in colorful bottles beckoning consumers seeking extra protection from germs. But do these antibacterial products offer better coverage than plain old soap and water? And do they carry potential public health risks?

In late October an advisory committee of the food and drug Administration (FDA), which regulates antibacterial and antiseptic cleansers and non-prescription drugs, found they are no more effective at preventing infections than ordinary soap and water, based on a review of studies.

The 12-member group heard testimony about the theoretical risks posed by triclosan, an ingredient in many non-antibiotic-based cleansers, which FDA officials say may accumulate in groundwater. Some scientists say they fear that overuse of triclosan and another germ-killer could speed the development of bacteria that are resistant to antibiotics.

Such concerns, the advisory panel said, do not apply to alcohol-based hand sanitizers because they evaporate. Alcohol-based cleansers, which have been installed in many hospitals and day care centers, have proved useful in places where there is no easy access to water, the committee said.

The National Soap and Detergent Association, an industry group that represents manufacturers of antibacterial products, said in a statement that "more than 10 years of research" has proven these products are safe and effective in reducing disease-causing bacteria. Any link with increased bacterial resistance is speculative, said spokesman Brian Sansom.

The Future — The advisory panel did not recommend that the FDA take specific action, but endorsed further study of the potential risks and benefits of home antiseptics. The group also recommended that the FDA require manufacturers to provide data demonstrating the effectiveness of their products.

Journaling helps people 'let go' of thoughts, emotions

By Czarna M. Reid
Knight Ridder News Service

COLUMBIA, S.C. — Keeping a journal can be good for your health. Writing helps people reduce stress, concentrate better and handle emotionally demanding situations. It also can reduce the negative impact of traumatic experiences.

To reap the health rewards, writers should really "let go" and explore their thoughts and emotions.

Research suggests that when people write about emotional upheavals in their lives, improvements in physical and psychological health can result," said James W. Pennebaker, chair of the department of Psychology at the University of Texas at Austin, who has discovered the link between expressive writing and health.

Writing reduces stress by helping people to acknowledge an experience, Pennebaker said. It also enables them to put together the pieces of an event and understand what happened.

By enabling clearer thinking, expressive writing helps individuals get past trauma. It also helps them improve their social relationships as they get better at talking, laughing and being more at ease with others, Pennebaker said.

Through writing, people are able to observe their patterns of behavior and how they handle various situations, said George Holmes, a psychologist at the University of South Carolina School of Medicine.

"If you have to write something, you have to sit down, reflect on the events, put them in some kind of order," he said. "And as you're doing that, there's a certain level of mastery of the situation or anxiety that occurs."

But although "spilling the guts" can be healthy in some situations, it might not be in other cases, according to psychologist Louise Sundararajan, a psychologist at Rochester Psychiatric Center in New York, who studied college students whose parents divorced.

Writing about neutral subjects can be beneficial, as long as the language used is appropriate to the content of what is being written, Sundararajan reported last month at a meeting of the American Psychological Association.

In some instances, when people are emotionally upset, it might be better to focus on things other than the trauma, Holmes said.

Creative expressions such as poetry also help people to capture moments and channel their feelings, said Holmes, a fledgling poet.

When journaling, people should experiment to see what kind of writing works best for them. Here are some suggestions from psychologist James W. Pennebaker:

- Find a time and place where you won't be disturbed. Ideally pick a time at the end of your workday or before you go to bed.
- Promise yourself that you will write for a minimum of 15 minutes a day for at least three or four consecutive days.
- Once you begin writing, write continuously. Don't worry about spelling or grammar. If you run out of things to write about, just repeat what you have already written.
- You can write longhand or you can type on a computer. If you are unable to write, you can try talking into a tape recorder.

Beware of what lurks beneath your sheets

By Michael Loforgia
Knight Ridder News Service

Warning: What you're about to read might keep you up at night.

Or at least keep you away from your bed for a while.

The reason is dust mites — those tiny bugs that live in linen and pillowcases and feed on your dead skin — and the problems they can cause when you press your face into them for months at a time.

Taxonomically, they're related to spiders, which always grosses people out," says Dr. Michael Bykowsky, a Columbia allergist.

The Mayo Clinic estimates the average bed contains between 100,000 to 10 million dust mites.

"Your bed is especially inviting to dust mites," the clinic's Web site cautions. "To them, it's a warm, cozy, all-you-can-eat buffet that's restocked every night with yummy food."

Bykowsky explains the critters' fondness for bed sheets this way: They like a warm, humid environment," he says. "When you're in your bed, it's both warm and humid there, so they thrive."

An allergy to dust mites, or to the feces or decaying body parts they leave behind, can make life miserable. Like allergy season, only worse.

"The biggest difference is, pollen is seasonal," Bykowsky living in them.

The solution is allergen-proof encasements — zipped cases made of vinyl or tightly woven fabric that act as barriers against dust mite allergens.

"Their pores are so small that the fecal particles can't get through," Bykowsky says. "Typically we tell people to put these on and leave them on, and you don't need to take them off and wash them regularly."

Bykowsky recommends encasing pillows, mattresses and box springs. He also encourages people to wash their linens weekly in hot water, "and hot is greater than 130 degrees Fahrenheit."

Doing so, Bykowsky says, will dramatically cut down on the effects of dust mite allergies, a problem many people don't even know they have.

How to control dust mites

- Encase mattresses, box springs and pillow cases. Impermeable fabric keeps dust mites out of your hair.
- Wash sheets and linens once a week, in water 130 degrees Fahrenheit to kill dust mites.
- Use hardwood or tile/floor instead of carpeting. Carpets make an ideal dust mite habitat.
- Dust and vacuum once a week, and reduce household clutter. Cutting down on dust means cutting down on dust mites.
- Use air conditioners or dehumidifiers to reduce humidity levels. Dust mites thrive in humid conditions, but shivel and die when it gets too dry.
- Send pets outside. Or, at least put them to bed far from your room. Dust mites hitch rides on animals, and feed on the dead skin pets shed.

LITTLE TRUSTS

QUESTION: What is the best way to make sure that the real estate I own in three states don't complicate estate settlement at my death?

Estate settlement (probate) for Idaho residents is fairly straightforward — thanks to our streamlined laws for settling decedent's estates. These laws are known as the Idaho Uniform Probate Code.

Despite Idaho's simplified probate laws, estate settlement for Idaho residents gets a little more complicated when their own title to interests in real property in other states. The laws of other states require title transfers to be done in probate proceedings in the states where the real property is located.

A simple solution to the inconvenience of probating real estate titles in these states is to set up a simple, revocable living trust to hold the property owners' lifetime. The trust holds title to the property and a successor trustee transfers title in accordance with trust provisions — without the necessity of probate!

And you can control your exposure just by going outside!

Dust mites, however, scurry over mattresses, bed sheets and pillows year-round, and they're generally more irritating than other allergens.

Studies have linked dust mite allergies with seasonal pollen allergies. Experts theorize that dust at home might cause chronic inflammation, making sufferers more susceptible when allergy season rolls around. And in a home, mites are often everywhere.

"If it's a fabric or material, dust mites can live in it," Bykowsky says.

So what can you do about it? A new mattress isn't necessarily the answer, Bykowsky says, as studies have found mattresses come with dust mites already

Monday, Nov. 7, 2005 THE ACES ON BRIDGE Bobby Wolff

"There is no past lover on that who took lovers can inflict on one another. The avoidance of this pain is the beginning of wisdom..." - Cyril Connolly

After a few unfortunate incidents early in their careers when they have ducked an ace and later lost it, most bridge players take their aces as soon as they can, making sure that those tricks will not get away again. Reasonable as that may be, ducking plays can work wonders in a deal such as this.

The natural approach in four spades is to capture the diamond king, draw trumps, and play on hearts. Unluckily, for you, when East takes the third heart and leads the club jack through you, your fate is sealed.

A wiser approach is to win the first diamond and cross to hand with a trump to lead a heart to the king, then cross to hand with another round of trumps and lead a second heart up. This way, you succeed if West has either three hearts or the doubleton queen since you can duck the trick and leave West on play.

Alas, that line of play also does not work today, but there is a winning line. Your best plan is to make the counterintuitive move of ducking the first diamond - even though you have a singleton in hand. This is an avoidance play designed to keep East off play while you set up the hearts. You will win the next diamond, discharging a heart from hand, then draw trump and ruff out the hearts. You make 11 tricks without needing the club king inside.

ANSWER: Lead the heart four. Against two-suited auctions, it is often a good idea to lead trumps, hoping to prevent declarer from ruffing his second suit - which looks entirely plausible from your hand, doesn't it not?

Chiefs forgo tying field goal, stun Raiders with last-second score

The Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Dick Vermeil was going to be the biggest fool or the shrewdest gambler in the NFL.

With 9 seconds left, Kansas City trailed by three and had the ball on the Oakland 1 and Vermeil faced one of the toughest decisions of his long coaching career.

Have placekicker Lawrence Tynes — who's on a 13-for-13 streak — kick a virtually automatic field goal and force overtime? Or roll the dice and go for the win?

Vermeil went for the TD. Behind center Casey Wiegmann and 10-time Pro Bowl right guard Will Shields, Larry Johnson dove over the pile into the end zone for a 27-23 victory that brought a roar from the sellout crowd and left the emotional head coach in tears.

“Wow! I was scared. I just figured I'm too old to wait,” said Vermeil, who recently turned 69. “If we had not made it, then you guys (reporters) would have had a lot of fun with that. It was not an impulsive thing, it was the right thing for us to do.”

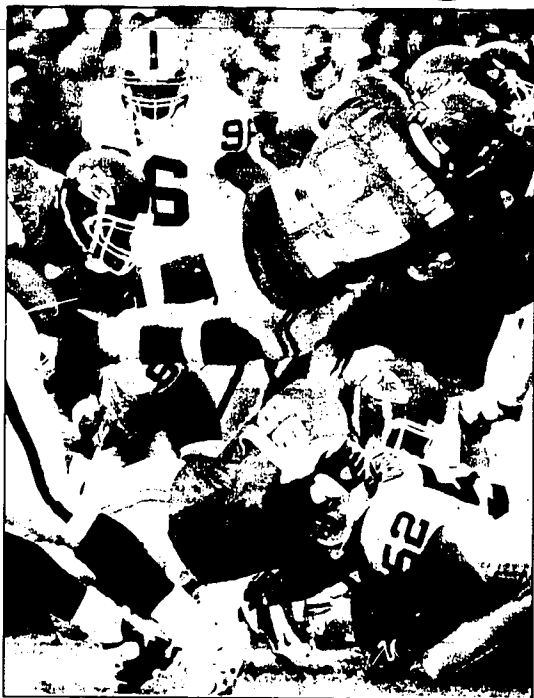

The sixth straight victory for the Chiefs (5-3) over the Raiders (3-5) kept them one game behind Denver in the AFC West and dealt Oakland a painful loss.

“This is about as bitter a defeat as you could have,” said Oakland quarterback Kerry Collins, whose two fourth-quarter touchdown passes put the Raiders on top.

“It's tough. You fight your way back in a rough game, and find a way to get ahead, and then it doesn't work out.”

Johnson and Trent Green made the sensational finish possible when Green hit the wide receiver running back over the middle.

He sped 36 yards before

Kansas City talkback Larry Johnson (27) dives into the end zone against the Oakland Raiders as time expires Sunday at Arrowhead Stadium. The Chiefs won 27-23.

Nnamdi Asomugha and Stuart Schweigert ran him down at the 1.

“Down in the red zone, he put the ball in my hands,” said Johnson, who has publicly complained that Vermeil does not give him enough carries. “I'm glad they gave me the opportunity.”

Randy Moss, who hadn't caught a pass all day, beat DeWayne Washington in the corner of the end zone for a 7-yard reception with 1:45 left that gave the Raiders the lead.

Then Green, playing through the pain of his father's funeral just four days earlier, marched the Chiefs 72 yards down the field.

Before Vermeil, he had checked with his coaches and played Washington in the corner of the end zone for a 7-yard reception with 1:45 left that gave the Raiders the lead.

“He was asking questions of everybody to see what everybody's attitude was,” said Green. “No matter how that play ended up, that's where you have to send a message on a football team and I think that was good on his part to have the confidence in us.”

Alexander runs through Cardinals defense

The Associated Press

TEMPE, Ariz. — The Arizona Cardinals always seem to bring out the best in Shaun Alexander.

The powerhouse back gained 173 yards in 23 carries, including a touchdown run of 88 and 14 yards, and the Seattle Seahawks won their fourth in a row by beating the Cardinals 33-19.

The 58-yard run, on the first play of the second half, tied the franchise record Alexander set against Oakland on Nov. 11, 2001. In the last three games against Arizona, Alexander gained 467 yards and scored nine touchdowns.

Neil Rackers kicked field goals of 23, 31, 50 and 44 for the Cardinals (2-6) and 18 for the Seahawks (10-3).

Seattle's defense pulled out of reach with a 12-play, 93-yard drive that used up 8:50 of the fourth quarter. Alexander's 14-yard run capped the drive to give Seattle its 33-19 lead.

Arizona Pro Bowl defensive end Bertrand Berry left the field with an apparent shoulder injury with 3:44 to play.

The teams exchanged field goals on their first possessions, then the Seahawks took the lead for good.

Trufant intercepted Warner's pass to give Seattle the ball at Cardinals 48. Alexander had runs of 19 and 10 yards to set up Hasselbeck's 4-yard touchdown pass to Joe Jurevics and Seattle led 10-3.

After Rackers' 31-yard field goal cut it to 10-6, the Seahawks scored late in the half. Hassel-beck threw a 46-yard sideline pass to Jereme Urban to the Cardinals 13. Hasselbeck ran 1 yard for the score with 43 seconds left in the half.

On the first play in the second half, Alexander broke loose on the 88-yard touchdown run. After reaching the secondary, the Seahawk cut back to elude safety Adrian Wilson, and outran everyone the rest of the way.

Hernon stepped in front of intended receiver Fritz Fitzgerald to pick off Warner's ball at the Arizona 10.

The defense held, and Josh Brown's 28-yard field goal put Seattle up 27-3.

Warner's 63-yard pass to tight end Eric Edwards set up Rackers' fourth field goal, a 44-yarder that made it 27-19.

Staal enjoying breakout season for rejuvenated Canes

The Associated Press

RALEIGH, N.C. — The changes in Eric Staal were noticeable right from the start of training camp.

Sure, he still had the baby-faced good looks that made him a fan favorite during his rookie year with the Carolina Hurricanes. He also continued to impress his teammates with his stellar work ethic and humble attitude, traits sometimes not found in a player selected No. 2 overall in the draft.

“He's always been that way,” Carolina center Kevyn Adams said. “There were differences, some more subtle than others.”

Carolina Hurricanes forward Eric Staal celebrates a goal with his teammates recently at the RBC Center in Raleigh, N.C.

First, Staal arrived about 20 pounds heavier, which gave some much-needed muscle to his wiry, 6-foot-4 frame. And perhaps because of the extra weight, or maybe just the added experience of a season in the American Hockey League during the lockout, he was better on the ice. Not that he ever lacked skill. After all, Staal finished with 98 points — 39 goals and 59 assists — in 66 games during his final year of junior hockey. But there was no denying he was more at ease when the Hurricanes began preparing for this season.

Bryant blasts Tour field

The Associated Press

ATLANTA — Bart Bryant wondered if he belonged with the elite players at the Tour Championship. He wound up leaving them in the dust Sunday, closing with a 3-under-67 in a record performance that capped off a remarkable year.

Bryant birdied his first two holes to open a six-shot lead and led by at least four shots the rest of the way around East Lake, winning by six shots over Tiger Woods to capture the $1.7 million prize — more money than he won in his first 18 years as a pro.

Bryant, 32, got up-and-down from behind the 10th green for par to finish at 17-under 263 and break by four shots the 72-hole record at the Tour Championship since five years ago at East Lake by Phil Mickelson. His victory margin matched the largest by Tom Lehman at Southern Hills in 1996.

He opened with a course-record 62 and never showed any sign that he would buckle, not even after back-to-back bogey balls in the final round. He played a simple game of fair-ways and greens, and made conservative birdie puts from outside 25 feet early on the back nine to put Woods away.

Woods had three birdies in a four-hole stretch to give himself a chance, but the best he could do was a 69 to finish at 11-under 269. Woods earned $75,000 and finished his six-year, two-major year with $10.6 million.

Scott Verplank shot 69 and finished at 271.

Bretel J. Groves, trying to become the first back-to-back winner of the Tour Championship, never did find his swing and topped four of the first five holes on the back nine, sending him to a 74.

Sluoc wins Southern Farm Bureau Classic

MADISON, Miss. — Heath Sluoc shot a 6-under 66 for a two-stroke victory at the Southern Farm Bureau Classic.

With his last-year, former Mississippi club pro Jack Sluoc — as his caddy, the younger Sluoc finished at 21-under 267 after four rounds at the 72-hole tournament at Annandale Golf Club.

Nexel race tightens up

The Associated Press

FORT WORTH, Texas — Sam Edwards kept on chasing Carl Edwards in the Chase for the end of the Decks, but his persistence was rewarded.

Edwards won't be denied, snugging back on a late pit stop that dropped him to sixth place and passing Boris Racing teammate Mark Martin for the lead two laps from the end of the Decks.

It was his second straight NASCAR Nextel Cup victory, thrusting the surprising Edwards into the battle for the series championship with two races remaining.

Tony Stewart had a solid, if unspectacular, day. The 2002 champion finished sixth and saw his lead in the Chase for the championship drop from 41 points to just 38 over Jimmie Johnson, who managed to pass Stewart two laps from the end and finish fifth.

Edwards won his first full season in Cup racing, jumped from a tie for fourth, 107 points behind, to sixth possession of third, 77 behind Stewart.

“Four wins, man. I can't believe it,” said Edwards, who stuck a perfect landing on his now-traditional backflip from the windows of his No. 99 Ford.

“We're out to win this championship and we'll do it by having fun.”

“That's why, if we love it, we're still going to have fun.”

Who is that guy?

“From Day 1, he's had the confidence about himself,” Adams said.

“He's just looked good, skating-wise looked very strong out there. I think we all expected big things out of him.”

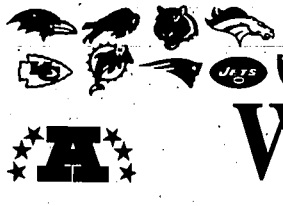

So far, Staal hasn't disappointed.

With two goals Thursday night in a victory over Toronto, he already has matched his total of 11 from his first season in 2003-04, and he led the league in scoring with 25 points heading into this weekend.

All but three of those points came in October, helping him earn the first player of the month award.

Oh, and the best part? He should only get better. After all, Staal turned 21 about a week ago.

“It's a lot to ask of a 21-year-old kid, to lead the National Hockey League in scoring, but he's doing it.” Carolina coach Peter Laviolette said. “It's a credit. Please see STAAL, Page D4

Washington defeats Eagles

LANDOVER, Md. (AP)—With or without Terrell Owens, the Philadelphia Eagles are losing and in danger of slipping out of the playoff race.

The Eagles fell to last place in the NFC East on Sunday night because their anemic running game and an offense that produced only one touchdown.

The Washington Redskins rebounding from the worst loss of coach Joe Gibbs' career, rode a more balanced attack and touchdown runs by Mike Sellers and Clinton Portis to a 17-10 victory.

The Eagles didn't really miss Owens — unless he could have transformed into running back, as he has been after the Redskins had reached the Falcons B-3 line.

Westbrook gained only 24 yards in 17 carries, and the Redskins' offense was stymied by Philadelphia's defense.

The Redskins' offense was stymied by Philadelphia's defense, which forced three turnovers and a fumble.

Ronnie Brown rushed for yards in Miami, and Ricky Williams added a touchdown and a fumble.

The Dolphins had a ball for less than 24 minutes, and they were shut out in the second half.

The Dolphins' offense was stymied by the Patriots' defense, which forced three turnovers and a fumble.

East Rutherford, N.J. — LaDainian Tomlinson scored a career-high four touchdowns — three rushing, one receiving — and San Diego needed every one of them to hold off pesky Brooks Bollinger and New York.

Tomlinson scored the same number of touchdowns passes (three) as jets quarterback.

Bollinger changed all that with two touchdown passes to make it game.

Curtis Martin had 21 carries for 72 yards and became the 16th player in NFL history to score 100 touchdowns when he reached the mark with a early scoring run in the second quarter.

Smith, coming off an 11-catch, 101-yard performance, finished with five receptions for 106 yards.

Smiths completed 25 of 41 passes for 259 yards and two touchdowns.

Steeles 20, Packers 10. Green Bay Wis. — Troy Polamalu returned Brett Favre's fumble 79 yards for a touchdown and Tyone Carter's interception set up the offense's only touchdown in Pittsburgh win over Green Bay.

The Steelers' offense was stymied by the Packers' defense, which forced three turnovers and a fumble.

Bengals 21, Ravens 9. Baltimore — Carson Palmer threw two touchdowns passes. Rudi Tomlinson scored 100 touchdowns when he reached the mark with a early scoring run in the second quarter.

Tomlinson scored the same number of touchdowns passes (three) as jets quarterback.

Bollinger changed all that with two touchdown passes to make it game.

Titans 27, Lions 14. Tennessee — Reuben Droughns, arrested earlier in the week on a drunken driving charge, rushed for 116 yards and caught a crucial third-down pass for 51 yards, powering Cleveland over Tennessee.

The Browns (3-5) held off a late rally by the Titans to snap a three-game losing streak.

Warriors keep Brown's Knicks winless

NEW YORK (AP) — Jason Richardson scored 24 points to lead the Golden State Warriors over New York 83-81 Sunday, keeping Larry Brown and the Knicks winless.

Golden State guard Baron Davis returned to the starting lineup after missing Friday's loss to Utah with a strained hamstring. He had 16 points and nine assists. Tyronn Lue added 17 points and 10 rebounds for the Warriors (2-1). Stephen Marbury led New York (0-3) with 15 points and six assists. Channing Frye added 12 points and Eddy Curry and Tracy McGrady scored 7 and 7, with 5.46 left in the game. Richardson hit a 3-pointer as the shot clock expired to give the Warriors the lead for good. Davis added a layup to give Golden State a 76-74 lead. He and Richardson combined to hit five of eight free throws down the stretch to seal the victory.

Kings 118, Suns 117
PHOENIX — Shafer Abdur-Rahim scored Sacramento's final six points and sealed a victory with a blocked shot in the final seconds as the Kings beat the Phoenix Suns 118-117 on Sunday night.

Abdur-Rahim broke a 114-114 tie when he made an floater in the lane with 30 seconds left. Leandro Barbosa answered with a 3-pointer to put the Suns up 117-116. Abdur-Rahim then hit two free throws with 13.3 seconds left for the final margin.

He also blocked a layup by Boris Diaw — Phoenix's last good attempt to pull out the win.

Mauresmo wins
Advanta Championships
VILLANOVA, Pa. — With the match slipping away, Amelie Mauresmo kept her composure and became more aggressive.

Mauresmo rallied to win her third straight Advanta Championships, defeating Elena Dementieva 5-7, 2-6, 7-5 on Sunday.

Mauresmo, ranked No. 4 in the world, won her third title this year and 18th overall. She came off consecutive opening-round losses at Moscow and Zurich.

"It's a great effort to win this three times in a row," Mauresmo said. "It doesn't happen a lot. I'm proud of what I've done, especially after two bad losses."

She got points from losing the match, Mauresmo took control when Dementieva's serve broke down. Dementieva double faulted twice in the 10th game, including the deciding point that allowed Mauresmo to even the third set at 5-all.

Mauresmo used a strong forehand to hold serve in the final game and better than Dementieva by forcing errant shots from Dementieva.

Alabama improved to 9-0 with a 17-0 win at Mississippi State, and stayed put in the Top 25. Only two points separate Miami (1,452) and Alabama (1,452).

USC and Texas have been at the top of the rankings since the preseason — making 2005 similar to 2004 when USC and Texas were Nos. 1 and 2, respectively, all season.

USC extended its record stay at No. 1 to 29 straight polls. The Trojans have won 31 straight games, received 57 first-place votes and the Longhorns got the remaining eight.

"The Hurricanes have won seven straight games since losing their season opener, 10-7, at Florida State."

Tim Griffin of the San Antonio Express-News had Miami ahead of Alabama on his ballot after watching the Hurricanes manhandle Virginia Tech.

"I got a chance to watch most of the second half, and I think you can see and played Virginia Tech, and me believe they deserve to remain as one of the top three teams in the country," he said. "They are playing a lot better than Alabama right now."

Michael Pointer of The Indianapolis Star had Alabama No. 3 and Miami fourth.

He said he had even considered putting Penn State ahead of Alabama.

"You have to give (Alabama) credit for winning the games," he said. "You can't give up every year, they might not be as impressive at times, but they are unbeaten."

After Miami and Alabama, LSU and Texas are tied for the Crimson Tide on Saturday in Tusculosa.

Penn State is No. 6 followed by Notre Dame and Virginia Tech, which dropped five spots to No. 8.

No. 9 Georgia and Ohio State fell out the top 10.

In the USA 10-day coaches' poll, USC and Texas tied for second but Alabama is No. 3, 13 points ahead of No. 4 Miami.

Kenyan wins closest NYC Marathon ever

Third of a second decides men's 26.2-mile race

Kenyan runner Paul Tergat breaks the tape as runnerup and defending champion Henrik Ramaala of South Africa stumbles during the men's race Sunday during the New York City Marathon.

NEW YORK (AP) — Paul Tergat surged one last time, breaking the tape a heartbeat before defending champion Henrik Ramaala fell across the finish line.

After more than two hours of running Sunday, the New York City Marathon came down to a final sprint and a third of a second — the closest finish in race history.

Tergat and Ramaala were side by side all morning, trailing the lead for 26.2 grueling miles through New York's five boroughs and across fog-shrouded bridges and leaf-strewn roads.

Tergat, a Kenyan who holds the world marathon record, and South Africa's Ramaala jockeyed for the lead in Central Park. Tergat surged, then Ramaala, then Tergat again.

Tergat's official time was 2 hours, 9 minutes, 30 seconds, but the exact clocking was 2:09:29.50. Ramaala's time was 2:09:30.22.

It was reminiscent of the 2000 Sydney Olympics, where Tergat and Ethiopia's Haile Gebrselassie sprinted to the finish in the 10,000 meters. Gebrselassie managed one last dash in the final 30 meters, leaning to edge Tergat by nine-hundredths of a second.

"This time, Tergat crossed the line first on a warm, sticky day. He was one of 37,516 competitors to start the race, a record for any marathon.

"The weather was incredible, very hot, but I was trying to keep cool. The least thing that I was expecting is that we were going to have to sprint to finish," Tergat said. "It was really, really painful; we work until the last minute. It reminds me of the Olympics again, but I was not expecting that in a marathon, that sprint."

Ramaala was still whether he tried to die across the finish line, or simply collapsed from exhaustion.

"I don't remember," he said. "You know, coming in second is not nice."

The last hundred meters, who wants to go the last hundred meters with Paul? I gave it everything," Ramaala said. "Paul didn't want to lose; I didn't want to lose."

the best finish by an American. But the U.S. victory drought at the New York race grew to 23 years.

Women's winner Jelena Prokopenko had a slightly easier time than Tergat.

Prokopenko, who dropped back by 18 seconds with about 5 miles left, rallied to catch the leaders and then passed Susan Chepkemel on their first trip through the park. Chepkemel, who was stumbling and spitting up, managed to hold on for second place for the third time in New York.

Prokopenko (pronounced Pro-kop-GHO-ka) never had won a major marathon before, though she was fifth in her New York debut last year. Her winning time was 2:24:41.

The top American woman was Marie Daverton, a native of Ireland who attended Providence and now lives in Guilford, Conn.

She finished 16th in 2:33:59. Len Rhines was 18th in 2:37:07.

The victory earned Tergat $125,000. Prokopenko won a marathon-record $160,000 in the race.

Staal

Living up to his reputation as a player who excels without bravado, Staal tries to deflect most of the praise to his teammates and to the organization. He is the first one to point out how much help he has received from linemates Cory Stillman and Erik Cole, and realizes he wouldn't be in this position without the opportunity given him by Laviolette.

That might be true, but the Hurricanes probably wouldn't be near the top of the Eastern Conference without Staal. At 9-2-4 after Thursday's game, they were off to their best start.

"I'm happy with the way I'm playing, and happy with the guys I'm playing with right now," he said. "We seem to be clicking, and we seem to be playing well as a team. All that has helped out."

Another reason for this breakout season was his well-timed season with Carolina's AHL affiliate in Lowell, Mass.

He set franchise records with 77 points, 51 assists, a rating of plus-37 and seven short-handed goals while leading the Lock Monsters to the playoffs.

In 11 postseason games, he had 10 points, including one three-assist effort that tied another Lowell mark.

"I played a lot of minutes against all kinds of good players," Staal said.

"It's kind of carried on over to this year."

This season, he has tallied points in 11 of the first 12 games heading into the weekend, and he has been particularly impressive in his past three outings.

First, Staal stung Philadelphia with his first career hat trick, then added four assists at Pittsburgh on his birthday last Saturday.

He and the Hurricanes returned home Thursday night to beat Toronto, and he again provided much of the offense with two goals and an assist.

The new emphasis on offense sure has helped him, too.

As players around the league are discovering, the NHL is serious about eliminating the obstruction and interference that helped bogged down scoring for years.

Bryant

Sluicum and Loren Roberts were tied at 20-under entering the 17th hole. After knocking his second shot 9 feet from the pin, Sluicum birdied the par-4, 413-yard hole.

Meanwhile, Roberts had a bogey after hitting his drive into the water to fall two strokes back.

Sluicum closed his round with a par on No. 18. After he made his final 2-foot putt, he thrust a fist and his putter into the air, let out a scream and hugged his father.

Sluicum's only other victory came last year at the Chrysler Classic of Tucson. The win at Annandale was worth $540,000 and helped him jump 17 spots to 50th on the money list with $1,606,185 in earnings.

Roberts (68) and Carl Petersson (67) were two strokes back at 269. Joey Snyder III, a rookie who led after three rounds, shot 70 and finished at 270.

Annika wins record fifth straight Mizuno Classic

OTSU, Japan — Annika Sorenstam became the first player in LPGA Tour history to win a tournament five straight times, shooting an 8-under 64 for a three-stroke victory in the Mizuno Classic.

Sorenstam, 95 in her last 15 rounds in the event, broke a tie with Laura Davies for the LPGA Tour record for consecutive victories in an event. Davies won the Standard Register Ping from 1994-97.

The PGA Tour record for consecutive victories in an event is four, a mark shared by Gene Sarazen, Walter Hagen and Tiger Woods. Sorenstam pulled away from playing partners Jennifer Rosales and Young Kim with birdies on Nos. 14 and 15 and birdied the final two holes — both par 5s — for the second straight day.
