Supreme Court hears abortion case

Legal question revolves around parental notification for abortion-seekers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court on Wednesday wrestled with a New Hampshire law that requires a parent to be cold before a daughter ends herpegnancy, with no hint the justices were ready for a dramatic extreat on abortion rights under their new chief.

The case does not challenge the 1973 fee w. Wader chilenge the the 1974 fee w. Wader chilenge that declared abortion a fundamental constitutional right, and the justices seemed to be seeking a compromise that would avoid breaking new ground.

Several said the law was flawed, because it requires that a parent be informed 48 hours before a minor child has an abortion but makes no exception for a medical emergency, that threatens the youth's health. At the same time, the court appeared unhappy with locked the law from being enforced at all.

GM management a relic in modern times

GM overtook Ford because "the old master (Henry Ford) had failed to master change," Siona wrote. Ford suck too long with the Model T. conceived as cheap the following following distribution for various prod-ucts among separate divisions while centralizing policy mar-ters (personnel, finance) at the top. Hence, his focus on what now seems bureaucratic mumbo jumbo. What occurred at GM be-came a model for many big U.S. companies. Unfortunately at GM, it also fostered overcon-fidence and inertia. GMS market power made it less sen-

The other half is that GM does not have the vehicles that command good prices. To move in volume, they require steep discounts. This is a man-agement failing that can't be blamed on unions or retures; and it's now compounded by the impact of high gasoline prices on SUV-sake Whitin GM, there are pockets of vitali-ty, GM is the market leader in China (indeed, in 2005 its total foreign sakes will surpass U.S. Callilac division redesigned its, lines and achieved big sales gains. For all his concern with or-ganizational controls, Sloan shrewdly foresaw that too much success could be fatal. It might dull "the urge for the strongest of all ecc-torial controls of the strongest of all ecc-nomic incentives." Companies might fail 'to-rec-ognize advancing technology or altered tonsumer needs. Avoiding these traps, he said, was GM's challenge. There is now talk that GM could go bankrupt. Although that Isn't inevitable, even the talk measures how poorly GM met the challenge.

Terrorist roots spread during Clinton era

How soon we forget about 99/11 when we are able to sit in our comfortable little protected world of falsh and lose touch with reality of what is taking place in the "real" world. I had friends who died on one of those planes that hit the World Trade Center, and I will not be satisfied until those kind of 'people are disposed of so they cant do it again. With the attitude that is expressed in the letter of Noz. 23, we could easily be a target in the near future if we don't support our troops. By the way, our troops support our present administration; just take time to talk with them. I am grateful to have served my country with 20-plus years of milltary service and would of it all over again.

There is one difference.
Congressional Hepublicans, by and large, have maintained greater golesion and disci-pline than did the Democrats under Clinton. But the price has been subservience to White House whims and wish-es. This has been the most compliant congressional lead-ership in modern times, one-ership in modern times, one-that until very recently was reminiscing abbut high school football now that the season is done.

"You always remember your first time." Bruins head coach Brock Berryhill told 1270AM KITI radio in an interview after Twitt Falls' loss to Skyline back October, What did he just say?

So, now, I'd like to share some first times. Some are good, some are bad, and only a few near the end were newsworthy.

I remember the first time!

I realized that the system for determining playoff berths in Idaho was far superior to the claystem for perp football in Alabama. Back when I was in Idaho was far superior to the old system for prep football in Alabama. Back when I was in high school, schools played 10 regular-season games, of which two were designated "area" games. Now, every high school within 50 milles and in a similar class size would play us one within 50 milles and in a similar class size would play us one within 50 milles and in a similar class size would play us one per considered an area game. See the considered an area game. The considered into conferences, hence the area system.

What was really fun—and humillating—was that winning just one of those area games, meant, a playoff, berth. Two area wins meant a home-field, advantage. In the first round.

So, either a 1-9 team can make state fone area win, of

So, either a 1-9 team could make state (one area win, of course) or a 8-2 team could miss the physoffs because they lost both area games.

TWIN FALLS — What's old is new in Scenic West Athletic Conference men's basketball.

The players names and faces seem to be in a constant state of flux in the world of junior college men's hoops. This year in the SWAC though, fans are just as likely to wonder who the older guy in the gray blazer is as they are to ponder who No. 12 is. The SWAC coaching carousel will be on full display this Thursday and Saturday at the College of Southern Idaho Gymnasium, as three first-year coaches lead their teams into their respective conference openers.

Though first-year-head coach Barret. Peerry's linaugural preseason at CSI has had it's ups — a 7-2 record— and it's downs — a pair of painfully lackluster performances in the Golden Eagles two losses — Peery is upbeat about his team's progression through the early stages of the season.

Tests: Second woman died from CJD

Form not related to mad cow disease

TWIN FALLS — Final test re-sults- on brain tissue shave confirmed another lablo woman died from the classic form of Creuzdeld-Jakob dis-ease and not the writant form related to mad covidisease ac-cording to the dialo to the confirment of Health and Wel-lan.

Since January, the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare has received nine reports of people—seven women and two men—diagnosed with Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease—or.

CID—a fatal brain-wasting dis-blondstream. Prions cause fold-ing of normal protein in the both; leading to brain damage. Symptoms include dementia and other neurological signs. Its victims usually die within four or five months after onset of the disease, according to the Cen-ters for Disease Control and Prevention.

ters for Disease Control and Precention.

The cases include four women from Twin Falls County, a woman from Minidoka Coun-ty, a woman from Benevah County in northern Idaho, a woman from Bear Lake County in the southern corner of Idaho on the Utah bbrder, a man from Caribou County in southeast-ern Idaho.

Of the nine people in Idaho, who have died, free had autop-sies and their brain tissue was sent to the National Prion Dis-ease Pathology Surveillance Center at Cleveland's Case Western Reserve University.
Of those five, three women
— two women from Twin Falls County and the woman from Benevah County — tested positive for a prion disease, and now final results on two of them showed they died of clas-sic CID and not the variant form that is caused by cating meat from a cow with bovine spongiform encephalopathy, commonly known as mad cow disease. Health officials are still wailing for the final results on the third woman, said Jom Shanahan, spokesman for the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare on Wednesday.

Two people, including the Extraore County man and a Twin Falls woman, tested negative for a prion disease.

Fails waman, tested negative fails waman, tested negative fails were not performed on the other four suspected CID victims. However, a CID: metrologist is reviewing their medical records. Shanalan said, cases is high y unusual. Normally, there is one case of CID per million people at year. Between 1984 and 2003, Idaho averaged 1,2 cases a year. Shanahan said, He said there was one year during that 'period when Idaho had, three cases.

Because of their ages — all of the victims except one were over the age of 60 — health officials suspect they died of Classic. CID, and not the variant. However, the only way to confirm CID is by testing brain tissue, according to the National Prion. Discase Pathology Surveillance Center.

Center. Shanahan said there have been no additional reports of CID diagnoses in Idaho this

Judge rules on Idaho's Voluntary Contribution Act

The Associated Press

BOISE — A federal judge has uled that a 2003 state law ban-ruled that a 2003 state law ban-ing payroll deductions for state workers union dues is un-constitutional — and offered an easy fix.

U.S. District Judge B. Lynn Winmill upheld the right of the state to ban political payroll de-ductions for its own employees when the state incurs the cost of making those deductions. But the judge sald if the union agrees to cover those costs the automatic deductions can slay in place.

The decision was a victory for the Idaho unions that sued to overturn the Voluntary Contribution Act. The laws passed two-busing doses for political activities on the Idaho and busing doses for political activities out of separate funds; and banned payroll deductions for political activities, among other things.

Opponents said the ban on deductions was admed at suppressing—union—support—for-candidates the bill's authors didn't want to see elected.

They were trying to cripple the political effectiveness of all the public employee unions, because they tend to support bedder the political effectiveness of all the public employee unions, because they tend to support bedder a Boise autorney who represented the Idaho AFI-LCIO, one of the parties that sued. They're not going to pass a law that's going to cripple the ability of a corporation to give money to a Republican candidate." Supporters of the law, which was -signed—by—Gov—Dirk-

Kempthorne, deny that allega-tion. They said they wanted to protect workers who might un-writingly support candidates they opposed through the auto-matic deduction of the auto-matic deduction of the auto-matic deduction of the au-tomatic deduction of the cost, said Sen, Brad Listle, R-Emmett, said Wednesday. "I know that, according to the court, you'd have First Amend-ment issues there, but I would like to see politics be a partici-pation sport, and not be a default position."

We thought. "OK, it will be de-livered on Friday."

We arrived home from work.

On Friday, no water delivery. As it was before 5 p.m. and we did not have enough water to get through the weekend, my hus-band called the local Calligan office and got a recording with a tumber. He managed to reach Greg Coleman, who delivered water that same evening.

We wish to thank Mr. Coleman for taking time out of his evening to assist in this matter. We wish to complement Calligan for employing such a caring, pleasant individual.

So we turned back toward he lower cliff, and there they were. Matt spotted a banch climbing up and through the tought cliff, and there they were. Matt spotted a banch climbing up and through the toughest terrain around. That's just a chukar hunter's delight, and off we went. The subcommittee consists of commissioners Gary Power of Ririe and Wayne Wright of Twin Falls.

Wed like to have another shot at this thing, and clean it up and do a better job. Wheeler said Monday during the telephone conference meeting.

Commissioners have grappled for years over whether to institute some kind of a bonus points system, and how it should work.

F&G recently surveyed hunters about their preferences for a bonus point system, but the results were vague.

Most hunters, agreed the people who are unsuccessful in lotteries should have a better

Stocks drop on GDP growth

NEW YORK (AP) — Strong growth in the nations gross domestic product spooked investors and sent stocks mostly lower Wednesday as the data renewed fears that the Federal Reserve would continue raising interest rates. Despite the drop, the market ended November with impressive gains.

Wall Street endured a third day of flat-to-lower trading despite a recent string, of government reports that have painted an uplifting picture of the economy. The Commerce Department said the GDP rose at 4.3 percent annual rate in the Luly-September quarter, and the control of the property of the present of the property of the present of the property of the present of the p cent growth and a 3.3 percent advance in the prior quarter. While the Fed has signaled it might stop rate likes should the economy weaken, the strong economic data is likely to prompt more rate increases, giving the markets pause after reaching 4.5-years highs last week. But analysts said there is still room for stocks to advance. We've had a great four- to six-week run, and now the economic data has been far better than expected, said lack Caffery, equity strategist for 1.1 Morgan Private Bank. So at this point, seeing the market consolidate here makes perfect solidate here maxes periect sense. The Doy Jones Industrial average fell 82.29, or 0.76 percent, to 10.095.87. Broader stock indicators were mixed. The Standard & Poor's 500 index lost 800, or 0.64 percent, to 1,249.48, and the Nasdaq composite index rose 0.11, nearly flat, to 2,232.82.

Men have a low threshold for distraction. They are delicate. They are made nervous by hav-ing to do more than one thing at a

— Barbara Cawthorne Crafton

Declarer plays a low club from dummy at trick one and your king holds the trick. How do you hope to beat three no trump?

Your only realistic hope is that Your only realistic hope is that partner began with acc-fifth in clubs, which looks plausible from declarer's play so far. If declarer had begun with A-x. he might have tried dummy's jack at trick one.)

So you are going to return the club nine, highest from a remaining doubleton, expecting partner to duck. Then all you need is to regain the lead and you will have a total of five tricks to take.

Can you wan artistic also gard.

total of five tricks to take.

Can you see anything else you should be considering? Well, if partner has the club ace, that is surely his only high card. You know declarer has five diamond tricks, one club and two majorsuit aces. He must also hold the spade jack. If he takes the spade finesse, he will make his contract, but if he takes the heart finesse, he will go down.

but if he takes the heart finesse, he will go down.
What a cunning declarer might do is play the spade queen from dummy very early in the play. If you cover, his contract is made, while if you duck, he will rise with the ace and take the heart finesse, This gives him an extra chance.
So, you need to be ready for him. When you return a club, dummy's jack will win, and declarer may play the spade queen. Follow with a nonchalant five, and South will probably rise with the ace and take a heart finesse.

ANSWER: Bid a simple two spades. Your cuebid set up a near game-force, so your two-spade call showing a new suit is 100 percent forcing. Partner will either raise, bid clubs, or try something else, and you will know whether to play game in no-trump, spades, or hearts, or try for more.

Holiday treats for almost any gamer

BY MATT SLASLE The Associated Press

Video game fans are always seeking new and improved wave to beat their opponents, making them an easy target for gift

In the spirit of the holidays, we looked at some of this season's must-have games and eâdeets

But first, the basics. What game system you choose largely depends on whether you want to play on the go or sit in front of the televi-

This was the year that portable games really took off. as evidenced by the popularity of the $130 Nintendo DS by Nintendo Co. and the $299 PlayStation Portable from Sony Corp.

The PSP is a sleek gadget that plays movies and music as well as sharp-looking games. The DS, meanwhile, packs dual screens, touch sensitivity and a microphone for some truly interactive gaming.

If you want to game without looking like the kiddies, consider the Game Boy Micro.

At $99, it only plays aging Game Boy Advance games, but the Micro's modern, diminutive design fits in a boardroom as easily as a classroom (or a shirt pocket).

On the console side, the machine du jour is Microsoft Corp.'s new Xbox 360. At $399.99 for the fully loaded version, it's a worthy successor to the old Xbox and a must-have for anyone wondering what the next-generation of video game consoles can do.

Older game systems — the original Xbox, Nintendo's Game-Cube and Sony's venerable PlayStation 2 - remain relative bargains, all of them costing $150 or less. In fact, most new titles are still being made for these aging systems, so don't worry about obsolescence anytime soon. At the same time, personal computers have become the system of choice for vast online multiplayer worlds that can take years to

So you've plunked down the cash for a console — be prepared to spend from $30 to $50 on average for the actual games.

There are hundreds of games to choose from, more than I can fit. But here's a sampling of a few that are sure to please gamers of every persuasion.

• "Call of Duty 2" (Rated T, Xbox 360 and PC, $49.99-$59.99)—It's not going to lift holiday spirits, but war buffs will be absolutely transfixed with "Call of Duty 2." It vividly captures the horror and heroism of World War II A history lesson of sorts, this game immerses players in actual re-enactments spanning North Africa and the frigid Russian front. Wes Malvini takes on Beckett's classic

YAN UNCOUNTED TIMES NO

Wes Malvini and C.R. Call play the itinerant heroes of Samuel Beckett's 'Walting for Godot.'

BY STEVE CRUMP Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Two tramps, two bowler hats, one dead tree. In the 53 years since Samuel Beckett set this strange brew on a bare stage, theater has never quite been the same.

Almost every resident of the Western world knows something about "Waiting for Godot," the greatest manifestation of what became known as the Theater of the Absurd. In the Irish playwright's world, nothing makes sense because there is no sense to be made.

"To find a form that accommodates the mess, that is the task of the artist now," Beckett _sald famously.

the Magic Valley."
Malvini, 21, has produced two independent films and is working on a third. He has also particlpated in several stage productions at the Lamphouse.

"Imagine this place without it," he said. "All we would have is censored theater, mainstream films and little to no live music from indic performers."

In addition to directing, Malvini will act in the production along with C.R. Call.

"(The) synopsis is one of the most simple you will ever hear, he said. "Iwo men waiting by a tree for Godot. Who is Godo! They don't know. Why are they waiting for them? They don't know that either. What unfolds, though, is an extremely important commentary on our own existence."

The audience never learns who Godol is, or the nature of tramps' business with him. In both acts, the cruel Pozzo and his slave Lucky turn up, followed by a boy who gives Vladimir and Estragon the message that Godol will not come today "but surely tomorrow." Beckett intended the uneventful and repetitious plot to symbolize the tedium and meaninglessness of human life. A common interpretation of the mysterious Godol is that he represents God, though Beckett always denied that.

'NEW YORK DOLL'

Movie mixes Mormons, fame and rock 'n' roll

BY KENNETH TURAN Los Angeles Times

"New York Doll" is a documentary with the charm of the unexpected.

It's a rock 'n' roll fairy tale involving fame and obscurity. feuds and friendship, glam rock and The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, If that sounds like an unlikely combination, the reality is twice as improbable.

Front and center in this genial tale is 55-year-old Arthur Kane, introduced wryly complaining about the Los Angeles bus system that takes him from bis home to his job servicing copy machines at an LDS Family History Center in Los Angéles. "I've been demoted," he says at one point, "from rock star to schlen on the bus."

Thirty years earlier, this man was Killer Kane, bassist in the influential cross-dressing glam rock band the New York Dolls. characterized by British singer Morrissey as "one of the most raucous, notorious bands in rock 'n' roll history.'

The combination of alcoholism (his own) and heroin addiction (two of his handmates), feuds and had decisions led to the breakup of the Dolls and Kane's decades-long estrangement from rock.

In the interim, he'd converted to Mormonism after answering an ad in TV Guide, a development someone says is "like Donny Osmond becoming a New York Doll.

That's when director Greg Whiteley, a fellow Mormon, met Kane in L.A.

His plan was to do a smallscale documentary on this quirky, engaging individual, whose onstage immobility, one tock critic noted, made him "the only living statue in tock 'n' roll." That's when fate stepped in.

For when Dolls fan Morrissey was named curator of London's 2004 Meltdown Festival, he asked the surviving Dolls (Kane. Sylvain Sylvain and frontman David Johansen) to put aside their past differences and reunite.

To each other's amazement. they all agreed.

While Kane's Family History Center colleagues, knowing how much of a dream this had been for him, pitched in so he could get his bass out of hock, director Whiteley managed to find finan-cial backing and persuade filmmaker friends to accompany Kane to the pre-concert rehearsals in New York and the concert in London, the first music the man had played in many long years.

While many projects never get off the ground, this was one that was meant to be.

"New York Doll" was also fortunate in its interview subjects. Aside from the thoughtful, articulate Morrissey, the film talks to celebrated Dollophiles including the Pretenders' Chrissie Hynde, the Clash's Mick Jones. Iggy Pop and Bob Geldof. And then there is Kane himself, who has a disarming quality all his

Though it is small in scale and lasts only 78 minutes, "New York Doll," like any documentary, goes places we expect it to and places we do not. As journeys go, this is one to treasure.

Some say a holy war is waging over Disney's much-anticipated holiday blockbuster, "The Chronicles of Namia; The Lion, the Witch and the Wardrobe.

Conservative Christlans claim the story as their sacred ground. After all, they say, its author is the legendary Christian apologist C.S. Lewis.

"I'm fine with pagans plcking.up on our story," says Barbara Nicolosi, executive director of Act One, a nonprofit that trains Christians for careers in mainstream film and television.

"It's funny to hear them say, 'How can they dare co-opt this?" I think, 'We didn't co-opt you. You coopled us because you thought you could make money off it."

On the other hand, since the book's debut in 1950, generations of children have loved the magical, snowy world of Narnia, and its batlle between good and evil.

Now adults, these Namians believe the upcoming movie should empower children, fire their imaginations and encourage them to read, via the seven-volume fantasy series.

"Sky High"

What could be tougher than navigating the Darwinian social scene your freshman year in high school and simultaneously trying to live up to your overachieving parents' reps as stellar alumni?

There's what could be tougher; living up to your parents' reps if hey happen to be superheroes and you enter an ellie high school for kids of such demigods to ellie it floats in the stratosphere on anti-gravitational thingamabobs), and your own inherited special powers, due to arrive with puberty, more or less, fall to manifest themselves.

That would be tougher, Such a tales! "Sky High," a slight but sure-footed, live-action comic fantasy from Disney. Director Mike Mitchell defive by bends two genres — the high school romance and the special-effects! aden superhero comic book adaptation — and manages to spoof yet salute both with a refreshing lack of pretension, Yes, he pilliages the great 2004 computer-animated lark "The Incredibles," by Disney's erstwhile partner, Pixar, but in forgivable, unassuning fashion, massuning fashion,

"Sky High" uses plenty of "offects," but many were filmed as live-action stunts and not added later as computer-generated animation (though some

The result feels surprisingly low-tech and human. The sets look just a trifle cheesy (a cut above the original "Star Trek" TV series), and the colors are as bright as a bag of assorted jelly beans.

As a kid flick, of course, "Sky High" carries a message. And it is one no one can argue with: that despite peer pressure, bullying, self-esteem issues and all the other delights of high school, kids can use the time served there to discover their own strengths and start following their bliss.

Will Stronghold (Michael Angarano), son of Captain Stronghold (former Disney kid Star Kurt Russell in blustering, eye-crinkling form) and Josle Jestream (Kelly Preston), knows his parents expect him to follow in their world-saving path. Unfortunately, Will, who occasionally narrates the story, arrives at Sky High via rocket-powered school bus still minus his special powers, whatever they may turn out to be. His best friend, Layla (Danielle Panabak-ri, stays at his side while Coach

A boy has trouble with his superhero parents, Kurt Russell, Jeff, and Kelly Preston, in 'Sky High.' Boomer (Bruce Campbell of the Evil Dead' filmis), his voice booming to seismic proportion, separates kids on the superhero track from those destined to be mere sidekicks.

(Layla, by the way, sets aside her own special powers — she can make plants grow superfast — to be with Will. Layla, be true to yourself first!)

Will, Layla and their buddles, Ethan (Dee Jay Daniels), Zach (Nicholas Braun) and Magenta (Kelly Vitz), land in "hero support" class, taught by Mr. Boy (funny Dave Foley), still sensitive about his own stunted

The school's angry young man, Warren Peace (Steven Strait), who shoots flames out of his hands, has a grudge against Will's parents and takes it out on their son, until jet-powered Principal Powers (Lynda Carter

- "Wonder Woman" in a designer suit) breaks it up. Other bullies go after him, too.

Will's luck seems to change when his own powers kick in and the most pupular girl in school (Mary Ellzabeth Winstead) smiles upon him. It takes Will a while to recognize the evil plot afoot.

He, Layla and their real friends, with their "minor" powers (Ethan melts, Zach glows, Magenta morphs into a rodent), must step up.

The younger actors all avoid ham-acting, and their more seasoned colleagues have fun with the witty material — especially Kevin McDonald as cone-headed Mr. Medulla, teacher of "mad science" and briefly Cloris Leachman as a school nurse with X-ray vision. She'll know if you're fakin' it. "Sky High" isn't.

"March of the Penguins"

"I go for penguins," Lyle Lovett famously sang. "Oh Lord, I go for penguins."

And really, who doesn't? In "March of the Penguins," French documentarian Luc Jacquet has set his sights on perhaps the most charismatic, lovable and stylish species on the planet, Following a clan of emperor penguins as they make a perilous journey of hundreds of miles across Antarctica la order to breed and raise their young, Jacquet has made an absorbing. visitally spectacular film, which, in the tradition of documentaries such as the recent "Winged Migration," takes the audience so close to the subjects that we can count nearly every feather on their beguiling heads.

If March of the Penguins' too often succumbs to grautious, sentimentalized speculation to tweak the audience's emotions, the tendency is understandable;
it's difficult to imagine animals more amenable to anithropomorphism than a bunch of fourtion-tall birds who, when they hunch over together on the ice,
resemble a convention of relited
resemble a convention of relited

resemble a convention of retired Borsht Belt comedians. Still, "March of the Penguins" is at its best when it dispenses with cute commentary and simply relates the facts.

As explained by narrator Morgan Freeman, every March, the penguins set off for their breeding ground to mate, lay and hatch their eggs, and nurture their young.

It's an unimaginably tough nine-month endeavor involving several long journeys made almost entirely on foot (when they're not sliding on their ample bellies), against subfreezing cold temperatures and biting winds and, as the months pass, on the briks of starvation. As shamelessly manipulative as it is informative. "March of the Penguins" follows its clan all the way through, documenting not only the miracle of their mating ritudas and chick exaring, but the loss of life along the way.

The film's breathtaking photography, as well as its New Agey score and Freeman's warm, empathle narration, make "March of the Penguins" a classic nature film, one whose appeal is exponentially heightened by the inherent charm of its leading players.

magnificent animals prove to be the perfect subjects, all the more so for the dramatically icebound backdrop nature has provided them.

But it's just that natural world that is Jacquet's downfall when he needlessly tries to inject it with even more dramatic ten-

At one point he films a leopad seal hunting for female penguins, and the animal is purturyed as such a "laws" like beast that it might make you rethink he whole clubbing issue. Most problematic, however, is the script, which can't resist such pronouncements as "this is a story of survival, but mostly of love" and "the loss is unbearable."

At one point, Freeman authoritatively describes the Antarctic winter as doing "everything in its power" to destroy the penguins' eggs. (Aren't seasons pretty much neutral on the whole penguineeg issues"). Throughout "March of the Penguins," Lequet and co-writers Michel Fessler and Jordan Roberts ascribe human emotions to their subjects, suggesting that is admittedly an extraordinary example of Darwinian work motivations as time, Jean-ousy, ambivalence and grief. After all, the chorus of Lowert's song was "Penguins are so sensitive."

Maybe, maybe not, But "Mark of the Penguirs' would be just as stunning and emotionally involving without such poneic license; in fact, it might well be more effective if viewer a were allowed simply to observe how the penguins' mysterious, often poetic, habits rhyme with their own, I doesn't take a screenwriter, for example, to point out the uncanny fact that, when two parent penguins perform a neckcurring pas de deux above their tiny chick, they resemble nothings o much as a perfect heart.

Sound bites: RECENT CD RELEASES

Despite some 'Drifting,' Enva

returns with some pretty good fare in her new CD 'Amarantine'

Enva "Amarantine"

(Warner Bros. Records)

Enya fans have it rough, and not just because the New Age icon has once again kept them waiting half a decade. The problem is, what is there to talk about between releases? It's not as if she's going to spring a hin-hop collaboration on an unsuspecting world. Enya found a formula early on - a pretty irresistible one, with its masses of Anglican harmony and cavernous echo synthesizing churchly grandeur for even the irreligious — and she's wisely stuck by it. So on each new recording, the trick is how effectively the Irish musician and her longtime collaborators Nicky and Roma Ryan can massage that signature sound. On "Amarantine," the answer remains: Pretty well. It hardly matters that she's singing in a made-up language on "Less Than a Pearl," when her multi-tracked vocals swell so gloriously over a melody this evocative. You always hope a 5-year gestation will eliminate chaff like the self-descriptive "Drifting," and the album loses steam in a hurry near the end. But any of a half-dozen songs - the fragile ballad "If I Could Be Where You Are" among them - could be the successor to Enya's huge 2001 hit, "Only Time." It can be said, with respect: It's hard to imagine music more reassuring than this.

Bruce Springsteen "Born to Run (30th Anniversary Edition)"

(Sony Legacy)

Everybody knows Springsteen's 1975 breakthrough remains a potent example of superbly executed, ageless pop music - cinematic, hard-driving and thoroughly satisfying. This 30th anniversary CD/DVD package has perfect pitch not only for the mildly tweaked remaster of the album's eight songs, but for the accompanying DVD of a storied two-hourplus show filmed in 1975 at London's Hammersmith Odeon.

Here, in a night that made him a superstar in the UK, a scruffy Springsteen, wearing a rasta hat, runs through six "Born to Run" songs in addi-tion to material from his first two albums.

The band is brilliant, Bruce is on fire and the crowd largely unseen. The second DVD. "Wheels for Wings," is an illuminating making-of doc, fea-turing studio and live footage from the era, plus new inter-views with the Boss, manager Jon Landau, wife Patti Scialfa. and E Street Band members. Fantastic stuff.

Kate Bush "Aerial"

(Columbia)

Sometimes you laud people for what they've done and not for what they're doing now, Fortunately for Bush, the sensual. spellbinding British chanteuse behind the '85 hit "Running Up That Hill (A Deal With God)," that isn't the case.

After 12 years, the reclusive singer-songwriter has resurfaced with an ornate, vividly imaginative two-CD set that unfolds in two distinct halves, the first of which is "A Sea of Honey." The seven-song disc opens with the enthralling "King of the Mountain," a meditation on the celebrity of Elvis. It also offers a rare glimpse into Bush's own world. from the folky, string-sketched song for her son, "Bertie," and the domesticity of "Mrs. Bartolozzi" to "A Coral Room," a moving culogy to her mother.

And on the nine-part conceptual disc two, "A Sky of Honey, her high-pitched voice bends over lush instrumentation as she traces the arc of day through light and bird song — "Sunset," "Noc-

True, it may not be as rhythmically complex or offbeat as her '80s gems, but "Aerial" is a dazzling work, nonetheless.

The Doc Watson Family "Tradition"

Beloved blind picker Doc Watson's vast folk repertoire did not come out of nowhere. This enchanting re-release of a 1977 record, which itself was culled from tapes made by folklorist Ralph Rinzler in the mid-'60s, presents the good doctor, his astonishing fiddler father-in-law, Gaither Carlton, some elderly female cousins and other relations reviving songs and sounds passed down through generations, some for many centuries. You can virtually hear the transi-tions from English ballads and Celtic airs to Appalachian break-downs and Southern blues in the extended clan's authentic mountain voices and exuberant string jams, as well as the roots of some of Doc's later, signature songs. Truly a treasure trove.

FOR THE LOVE OF ANGST Punk-pop band My Chemical Romance soldiers on CORNER

The Boston Globe

A provocative drawing of blood-spattered lovers adorns the cover of "Three Cheers for Sweet Revenge," the hit album by My Chemical Romance. The songs are likewise dark, its subjects wounded and deathobsessed. The band rages through angst-filled, punk-pop blasts that bear such titles as "The Jeiset Life Is Gonna Kill You" and "It's Not a Fashion Statement, It's a [Expletive]

The band members are not the most cheerful crew, but they've grabbed listeners viscerally as few other groups have recently. My Chemical Romance, which toured with Green Day this past spring, has become a bona fide MTV favorite — and paid its dues on the Vans Warped and Taste of Chaos tours to become an arena headliner.

"It's been an amazing two years," says singer Gerard Way, whose cadaverous appearance and anguished delivery have made him the crown prince of emo. The fact that he can even toss around a word like "amazing" Is relatively new for him.
"The name 'My Chemical Romance' is about being in your 20s and feeling dead," Way says. "That's the way I felt for a while."

His spirits improved after seeing the reception to the record and after getting professional help to kick a serious drug and alcohol addiction. "I used to be broke all the time." he recalls. "I wouldn't eat because I'd spend my money on a bottle of vodka and clearettes.

These days, he says, "the glass is half-full, not half-empty" as he and the New Jersey-bred band continue their tour. But the brighter outlook doesn't change the tone of "Sweet Revenge," which was released last year (it has spun off three singles) and made the 28-year-old Way a symbol of allenated youth.

"As soon as people discovered
My Chemical Romance, there was an instant attraction to them," says Amy Doyle, MTV's senior vice president of music programming. "They give an emotional performance and they speak to the desperation that many young people feel."
MTV has become a huge supporter and last fall jumped on the band's first video for "I'm Not Okay (I Promise)," in which singer/songwriter Way played the role of an outcast.

"There weren't a lot of exciting rock bands out there then - and

'The music is about loss and pain, but also about light at the end of the tunnel,' says My Chemical Romance lead singer Gerald Way, front.

"The name 'My is about being in > "The music is about loss and pain, but also about light at the end of the tunnel," he says.

-His grandmother's name was changed to Helena on the album - and that song, "Helena," grew to be another hit. Its line "We'll meet again when both our cars collide" refers to the hearse that carried their grandmother. "My grandmother's death was out of the blue," he says. "They performed lopen heartl surgery on her and they messed up and put the wrong valve in."

Her death left a void in his life.

"I think I was 8 when she bought me a gultar," he says. "And she'd get me art supplies and she taught me how to sing. She was a very smart and independent woman. You could have conversations with her about all kinds of books and movies.

More tragedy followed when Way's best friend lost his mother a month later. Suddenly, Way felt that these things were happening for a reason.
I had a feeling that it was going to be an amazing two years after that," he says, sounding like a believer in karma.

Suffice it to say, he was right.

Mexican cuisine comes home at Garibaldi's

BY DAME COOPER Times-News writer

You won't find a shortage of Garibaldi's Mexican restaurants throughout the Magic Valley. And none of them is adorned with an orange-and-magenta

Instead, Garibaldi's Mexican Restaurant and Cantina provides local diners many of the staples one would expect from popular south-of-the-border culsine: large portions, abun-dant menu selections, quick service and reasonable prices.

Garibaldi's has become one of southern idaho's bigger restaurant franchises since Jose Perez opened the first in Twin Falls 11 years ago.

There are now also familyowned Garibaldi's in Jerome, Buhl and Burley.

A night at Garibaldi's doesn't require any fancy duds, since the setting is casual and very welcoming to families with young children. One prerequisite might be an empty stomach. Like many Mexican restaurants, Garibaldi's caters to the hungry diner with complimentary chips, salsa, refillable soft drinks and with most entrees including beans and rice

With those offerings, it's good to remember your mother's table advice - don't overeat The best flavors are enjoyed with a little moderation. (Although Garibaldi's salsa, heavy with cilantro, does pack a zesty tures a full-service bar in the cantina, but the dining area is subtle enough to suit quiet conversations or festive family get-togethers. The lengthy menu is filled with the traditional Mexican fare (tacos, burritos, chimichangas), but the enchiladas are a signature dish with a basic selection of ground beef, cheese, chicken or plcadillo (shredded beef). The fajitas (choice of chicken, steak, or both) are chock full of peppers and onions. If you're seeking more exotic tastes Garibaldi's serves up a list of seafood selections that go with the standard dishes. Again, portion size is anything but meager. My wife ordered the taquitos rancheros platter and was planning leftover lunches right from the start. The service is reasonably fast

Hard rockers System of a Down faced some obstacles on the road to becoming the biggest metal band in the world. The four members werent: The four members werent: exactly matinee idols, even by the forgiving standards of the extreme-rock genre, and they didn't have a natural affinity for radio-friendly melodies. They sounded like a gasoline-powered leaf-blower forced through a wall of Marshall amplifiers.

And they're still mad, "We're not from Glendale (Calif.)!" snarls singer-keyboardist Serj Tankan, 38, when asked what a common misconception about the group might be. (The city close to Los Angeles is home to many of Armenian descent).

"I grew up in Hollywood, and all I seen in front of my face was hookers on the corner and crack dealers over there," snaps a Thed-up Daron Malakian, 30, singer-guitarist and resident visionary, questioned about the repellent view of the female gender expressed in his lytics.

Despite the bedside manner, millions of metal fans world-wide embrace each pulvertzing System of a Down emission. In its eight-year history, the locally based group has shifted more than 13 million records past the cash register, including the 1998 self-titled debut and the 2001

But those hits were nothing compared to "Mezmerize," which came out six months ago, went directly to No. 1 in a dozen countries and is the biggest hard-rock album of the past few years

Last week, System issued its fifth studio album, "Hypnotize," part two of what's billed as an interlocking set.

"It would have been too much to put out a doubte album in one shot," said Malakian, who actually does live in Glendale. "I don't think we would ever put out that much music at one time." It doesn't do the songs any justice. It's like meeting 50 peoples in the said of the songs in the said with songs, If you have 50 songs, you'll only remember three of four.

Aficionados, of course, remember all of them.

"They are one of the most original bands out there today" insists Jose Mangin, format manger and on-air personality on Octane and Hard Attack, Sirlus Satellite Radio's two loudest rock stations. They have something you can't put your finger on. It's intriguing, unique music that reflects the political upheaval of where they're from.

"What you hear today in hard rock is this watered-down stuft that sounds like everything else. But a band like System really stands out because it's so energetic and spicy and spiky. On my honeymon, we listened to Toxicity over and over again. System leads the way."

Book chronicles 100-year history of Twin Falls Canal Company

BY MUT CHRISTENSEN Times News writer

TWIN FALLS — A man is murdered in cold blood. Pioneers of industry build a city out of dust. Lawyers fight vicious courtroom

No, not plot lines from the latest mystery novel.

They're stories from "A History of the Iwin Falls Canal Company: 1905-2005, a book written by I. Howard Moon and Russell M. Themayte. The authors chronicle 100 years of canal company history, from construction of Milner Dam to the past decade of water wars. And along the way, readers get a Magic Valley history lesson.

The book is organized in two parts. The first section, written by Moon, is an edited version of a report he wrote in 1985 in preparation for the rebuilding of Milner Dam. Moon's report comprehensively recounts the early years of the Canal Company.

years of the canal Company.

An excellent chapter on Ira Burton Perrine and the early land investors details the groundwork laid for the company—and later, Magic Valley.

Moon sticks to the facts, allowing the reader to form independent conclusions. But this stylebecomes tedious as Part I progresses into specifies about materials used to construct the acraals, water flow numbers and repair details. Without analysis on Moon's part, some chapters are not palatable for casual readers.

However, Moon quotes extensively from the journals and telegrams of the early investors and builders, and this adds an almost ovgeuristic quality to some passages. This from an April 1904 letter from Walter Filer, an early operator of the company, to his right-hand man, Mark Murfaugh: "The water has risen here two feet ... We have had one or two breaks in these levees, but nothing serious."

Part I wraps up in 1911, with the canal company mired in lawsuits over water rights.

It's those legal battles, and the company's transition from a rural-based water provider to a modern company with increasing political and economic difficulties that Tremayne writes about in Part II.

Tremayne, a College of Southern Idaho history professor, picks up where Moon left off and continues the history up to the present. He puts Moon's details in context. And of course, the second half of the book focuses heavily on the recent drought.

Tremayne ends with an epilogue in which he looks to the company's future. "Almost certainly," he writes,

"the twenty-first century will be dominated by ongoing water wars."

Tremayne said it is difficult to predict the future of the company, but one thing is for sure: "The glory days of the canal company are gone," he sald in an interview. "Their autonomy is going

Festival of Lights Parade hits the road Friday

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — More than two dozen entries are lined up for the 13th annual downtown Twin Falls Festival of Lights Parade, which rolls at 6:30 p.m. Friday.

The procession starts near Krengel's True Value Hardware and travels northwest up Main Avenue to the parking lot of Magic Valley High School,

The event typically attracts several thousand people to the downtown area on the first Iriday night in December. This Friday evening's weather forecast is for partly cloudy skies and temperatures near freezing.

Most downtown retallers will be open during and after the parade.

The Festival of Lights Parade was the brainchild of former downtown businesswoman Maria Larson and then-Business Improvement District director Jeanne Wilson, who patterned it after a similar holiday parade in Pocatello, which was run by Larson's sister-in-law.

In conjunction with the parade, the Magic Valley Arts Council will host a gallery opening reception Friday featuring the work of local artists.

INTO BRYCE CANYON Unusual rock pillars, starry nights enchant visitors

BY BOR DOWNSEG Knight Ridder Newspapers

BRYCE CANYON, Utah —
Bryce Canyon is a very beautiful spot, even though it's not really a canyon

Bryce Canyon National Park in southern Utah is home to thousands of hoodoes, the name given to the eye-popping redorange spires or pillars of rock that are the park's most defining feature.

The 35;835-acre park also boasts some of the starriest skies in the United States.

This gawkers' park has a spectacular badlands landscape and is bewitching, enchanting and friendly, not intimidating. It is a land of details.

You can admire the park's haunting rock formations from an 18-mile scenic drive on Rim Road, which stretches from state Route 12 to Rainbow Point—with dozens of overlooks offering vistas covering 100 miles and more from the edge of the Paunsaugunt Plateau over the Paria River.

Bryce, Sunrise, Sunset and Inspiration points surround Bryce Amphitheater, the park's biggest attraction, a horseshoeshaped, pastel-colored bowt that is a geologic wonderland that covers six square miles. It is one of 12 separate amphitheaters in the park and the scenic heart of the park and the scenic heart of

To me, Bryce Point offered the most impressive views of the fantastically shaped hoodoos that have been created by eroding water from the surrounding plateau and by the park's 200 freeze-thaw cycles per year. The powerful blend of rock

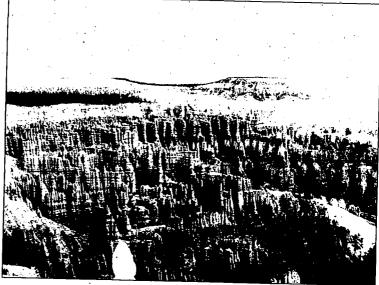

The powerful blend of rock and color shifts with available light. What you see in the morning is different from what you will see in late afternoon or at twilight.

There are warm yellows, browns, oranges, pinks, reds, greens, whites and purples that spill from the bizarrely shaped spires, monoliths, fins, mazes, fluted walls, sculptured pinnacle and deep ravines.

It is a rugged and wild landscape of colorful Claron limestone, sandstone and mudstone that are dominated by iron oxides.

Early settler Ebenezer Bryce said of the oddly shaped terrain: "It's a helluva place to lose a cow."

The Paiute Indians believed the canyon's rocks were animal-

The best long-distance vistas come from Farview, Rainbow and Yovimpa points.

You can hike into the hoodoos on 50 miles of hiking trails in the park and one should hike below the rim if you have time. It's worth it.

Short options include the 1.8mile Queen's Garden Trail from Sunrise Point and the Navaho Loop from Sunrise Point. You lose/gain 320 feet on the Queen's Garden Trail. You will pass Thor's Hammer and Queen Victoria, two rocky features.

On the 1.3-mile Navaho Loop, you loser gain 521 feet in a series of tight switchbacks that will take you to Wall Street, a narrow spot with its skyscraper cliffs. It's a moderately strenuous hike it's pretty cool to get an up-close look at the rocky spires.

Under-the-Rim Trail, a 23-mile trek, offers longer options for backpackers. The 9-mile Riggs Spring Trail begins and ends at Yovimpa Point.

The easy Rim Trail runs 11 miles atop the rim between Fairyland Point and Bryce Point. As recently as three years ago, Bryce Canyon was the national park with the darkest skies in the stars at time with the naked eye, three times what would normally be seen in the rural and dark Midwest.

People near cities in the Midwest and East are able to see even fewer stars because of the urban lights that blot out sky

But Bryce Canyon's dark skies are being threatened by highway billboards on Interstate 15 about 60 miles to the northwest and by the growing city of St. George, Utah, to the southwest, he said.

Fighting light poliution is easy. said Poe, who proudly calls himself a dark ranger, not a nark ranger. Reflect the lights downward, not upward, and the darkness of the heavens will be protected, he said.

The dark skies make starwatching programs very popular at Bryce Canyon. The Milky Way galaxy spills across the sky and the stars like you've rarely seen before really do fill the skies. Bryce Canyon's night skies. weather permitting, are indeed very special. You can even hike down into the hoodoos at night without flashlights - if your visit happens to fall during a full moon. Most of the park lies at elevations of 8,000 to 9,100 feet. That means snow comes early and stays late. But it gets more than 1 million visitors a year.

The park offers a visitor's center, lodge with three suites, one studio, 70 motel rooms and 40 cabins topen April through October), two campgrounds. restaurant and general store. Admission is $20 per car.

Permits are required for backpacking. No fires permitted below the rim. You must carry all Vour water
