Water, water everywhere

Residents sandbag homes as spring runoff hits Camas Prairie

By Jamey Colter Times-News contributor

FAIRFIELD — Usually a serene setting for those wanting to get away from it all, the Camas Prairie's rising runoff waters are forcing people to get away — or get wet. "It's flooding everywhere," said Fairfield Mayor David Hanks. "The big problem is, the lower water channels haven't opened up enough to let the runoff through." According to Hanks, his company — High-Country Fusion, located to the west of Fairfield — was 80 percent under water by Thursday afternoon. Hanks and others have been busy sandbagging homes and hoping for drier times. But those three homes weren't the only places that required sandbags. Hanks claimed that more than 1,000 sandbags had been used in the county's fight against the flood. Hanks said the county has been going along and cutting through roads, but even that doesn't seem to be helping. "The ground is so soft we can't bring the equipment in yet," Hanks said. In the city, Hanks noted, 80 percent of homes have a foot of water in their yards — a problem that Hanks claimed has been the real challenge. Please see FLOOD, Page A2

State, Idaho Power near recharge deal

Company agrees to use of some water for aquifer

By Michelle Dunlop Times-News writer

BOISE — Just when you think two sides of an issue can't be further apart from one another, they find a way to come together.

Late Friday, that's just what happened between Idaho Power officials and lawmakers over aquifer recharge. Although the deal is far from finished, the company agreed that the state has a right to use a certain amount of Snake River "trust" water to replenish the declining aquifer.

"We're close to having something worked out," said Sen. Dean Cameron, R-Rupert.

Cameron has been pushing for a compromise since the Senate rejected retiring House Speaker Bruce Newcomb's attempt to place a priority on water used for recharge over water used for hydropower generation.

Idaho Power, the state, and water users have gone round before over the Snake River. Water users sued the power company alleging it wasn't utilizing its water rights to full potential for power generation at the Swan Falls dam. The Idaho Supreme Court disagreed, siding with the power company.

In turn, Idaho Power was forced to sue 7,500 water users to establish its rights on the river. Company and state officials struck the 1984 Swan Falls agreement guaranteeing Idaho Power minimum flows at the dam. Excess waters were put in trust with the state for beneficial upstream uses.

Idaho Power officials have said that aquifer recharge was not a designated beneficial use when the agreement was signed and fought Newcomb's efforts to subordinate power generation to recharge.

However, two of the rights the company recognized were specifically set up for recharge purposes. One right allows 1,200 cubic feet per second of water to be used for recharge above Millner Dam. The second, for 800 cfs, permits recharge between Millner and Swan Falls.

Working with the governor's office, Cameron and Newcomb convinced Idaho Power officials to abandon claim to those two recharge rights, allowing the state to recharge the aquifer up to the 2,000 cfs during wet water years. A spokesman for Idaho Power could not be reached for comment at press time.

The company submitted an offer in support of recharge that acknowledges those rights. Idaho Power further agreed to donate technical expertise as well as up to $200,000 to the Idaho Water Resources Board. The board will be looking at recharge and management issues pertaining to the Eastern Snake River Plain Aquifer this year per a legislative request.

TWIN FALLS FILLS CANALS

MEAGAN THOMPSON/The Times-News

Board members of the Twin Falls Canal Company watch Friday morning as water is released into the High Line Canal at the ceremonial opening of the canals south of Hansen.

Opening of canals begins the irrigation season

By Bob Kirkpatrick Times-News writer

HANSEN — "Open gate No. 1," came the cry from Jay Barlogh, water master at Twin Falls Canal Company. At precisely 10:05 a.m. Friday, water rushing through the Main Line Canal system south of Hansen signaled the beginning of the irrigation season.

"This is the first time I've been to the opening," said John Peterson, farmer from Castleford. "It is an amazing sight. I am glad to see all the water." Peterson lives near the end

Irrigation facts

- The irrigation canals have been in operation for more than a century. Normal irrigation season starts in March and ends in October. There are 202,000 acres that receive water through the canal system.

- Traditional water supply per customer is three-quarters of an inch or 6.75 gallons of water per minute per acre. Under drought restriction, the water flow is reduced to five-eighths of an inch or 5.62 gallons of water per minute per acre.

of the 36-mile High Line Canal that brings water from Salmon Falls canyon to his farm in Castleford. It depends on an abundant water supply to irrigate the hay and corn he produces, and to water his beef cattle. Peterson is not alone, as over 4,000 water users along the canal system would be left high and dry if they were forced to depend on Mother Nature to fulfill their needs.

With the recent precipitation and heavy winter snowpack, the outlook for a good water supply remains optimistic, said Vince Alberdi, general manager of Twin Falls Canal Company.

"We are looking at potentially the best supply we've had in the last seven years," Alberdi said. "As long as the snowpack comes in slow, we won't have to dip into storage rights."

Legislature still has too many unresolved issues on plate to adjourn

By Michelle Dunlop Times-News writer

BOISE — "When will the session end?" At 9 a.m. Friday, that was the question everyone at the Legislature seemed to be asking. Senators and representatives loitered in the third floor rotunda swapping speculation, secrets and stories. Rep. Leon Smith, R-Twin Falls, sat quietly at his desk on the House floor waiting for the 89th day of the 2006 Legislature to begin.

"I'm ready to go home," he said. By shortly before 11 a.m., everyone did get to go home — for the weekend, at least, and without a clear answer to that initial query. Too many issues remain unresolved for legislators to adjourn, even at this late date.

"You never predict when we'll get out of the Legislature — it's too unpredictable," said Rep.

Frances Field, R-Grand View, an 11-term retiring lawmaker.

When the Senate convened, Majority Leader Bart Davis, R-Idaho Falls, took back his previous prediction that lawmakers would get to call it quits on Friday, making the 2006 session tied for third-longest in state history.

The House ended the day in much more dramatic fashion with the Democrats walking off the floor after a debate over amending the state's informed consent for abortion law went awry.

When both the Senate and House reconvene on Monday, the session will claim the third-longest title outright. Even as the day began, the fate of at least four major issues was unknown, with last-minute resolutions being cooked up in whispered conversations in hallways, behind closed doors, and anywhere lawmakers can

Tornadoes sweep through Tennessee, killing 10 people

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A line of severe thunderstorms and tornadoes marched across the nation's midsection Friday, peeling away roofs, overturning cars and killing at least 10 people in Tennessee, officials said.
The strongest tornadoes were northeast of Nashville, spokesman for the Tennessee Emergency Management Agency said.

Flood

'We're just trying to keep these homes protected,' said Hanks.
In addition to home and street damage, the flooding in Fairfield also has the potential to do major damage to the already fragile city sewer system. According to Hanks, city officials have said they work hours a day to stop flooding of the delicate system. Hanks said the lagoons were fine, but the pump station is the real problem.

and destroyed more than 1,000 homes and buildings.
Tornadoes were also reported in the Nashville suburbs of Goodlettsville, Hendersonville and Ashland City and in Holiday, about 100 miles south of Nashville. The storm's tentacles, knocked down power lines and damaged homes and other buildings.
Spotty radio communications made it difficult for emergency responders to get a full picture of the damage. Phone lines to authorities and most businesses were out of service.
Steven Davis, who lives about a block away from the hard-hit subdivision, said he was at home when he heard the storm was coming. He ran to a neighbor's home that had a crawl space to take shelter.

When the tornado came through the roof, he said, it felt like a hammer. Davis said he snapped his fingers.

BOISE — "This session's still on, but the candy's all gone."
That's the mantra being repeated on the third floor of the Idaho Statehouse, where lawmakers adjourned Friday until next week because they still have a pair of issues to resolve: Property taxes and an undisclosed plan to recharge the underground lake beneath the eastern Idaho desert.

opposing sides could meet.
Hanks said he left on the 2006 Legislature's agenda?
Property taxes: On Thursday, the Senate rejected House Bill 675 — an omnibus approach to property taxes.
When presenting his bill to a Senate committee earlier this week, Rep. Ken Roberts, R-McCall, said he came to the Legislature this year to provide property tax relief and plans to do so. Among the possible actions the House could take: enacting the homeowners' exemption solely; freezing property taxes this year; and asking voters whether they want to increase sales tax to decrease property taxes.

longer, will have to do so without satisfying their sweet tooth at this cost.
'You heard of the last sucker?' said Borton, describing how he jockeyed with a lawmaker over the final piece of candy that remained in his basket earlier this week. "That's the last sucker."
On Friday, the Legislature ended its 80th day making it the third-longest session in state history. The longest stretched 118 days, in 2003.
Lawmakers are trying to reach early compromises to offer homeowners property tax relief, and to transfer water to recharge the Eastern Snake Plain Aquifer in eastern Idaho. Earlier attempts to pass such bills were defeated this session.
Lisa Kauffman, the administrative services manager for the Senate, said the House and Senate members have been fine-tuning language over which legislative meetings are open to the press and public.

quainted — "FAC is known for being frugal," Kauffman said — and had expected the sweet stuff on her sturdy third-floor desk to last through the bitter end.
Everything, even the last of four tubs of red licorice, has vanished into lawmakers' — and reporters' — bellies.
Last week, members of the Idaho Mint Commission noticed that Kauffman's basket was empty, so they brought in some of their own personal mint candies, made with the sweet smelling grass that can be seen more and more in the fields of southwestern Idaho around Caldwell and Nampa.
There were just 12 greenish mints left in Kauffman's basket when she was asked to bring mint growers — and legislators, if they heed it, of course.
When it's gone, they need to go home, she said.
Not so fast. Things get going again Monday at 10 a.m. in the Senate and the House.

Canal

Alberdi said the faster the snow melts, the quicker it flows through the canal system, which could mean less water over the summer months.
There are more than 200,000 acres in the canal system that benefit from the water taken from the Snake River at the Milner Dam, Alberdi said. The traditional supply delivers three-quarters of an inch of water, or 6.75 gallons per minute per acre. During drought years, the canal said the available water flow is reduced to five-fifths of an inch of water, or 5.62 gallons per minute per acre.

The irrigation season can start as early as March 15, but Alberdi said it all depends on the weather and the demand for use. This season opened a

The irrigation system is based on demand, Alberdi said. "We can't divert water down the system if the users aren't requesting it."

White House faces questions

Intelligence declassification gets scrutinized

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House faced a barrage of questions Friday over the timing of President Bush's decision to declassify intelligence that was then leaked to the press by Vice President Dick Cheney's chief of staff.

In a tense briefing, White House spokesman Scott McClellan was asked repeatedly to explain his statement from three years ago that portions of a prewar intelligence document on Iraq were declassified on July 18, 2003.

Ten days earlier, Cheney's top aide had leaked snippets of intelligence from the document to New York Times reporter Judith Miller in order to rebut allegations by Bush administration critic Joseph Wilson, the aided has told prosecutors according to documents revealed this week.

L. Lewis Libby, Cheney's former chief of staff, said he had passed the information to Miller after being told to do so by Cheney, who advised Libby that Bush had authorized it, stated a court filing by Special Counsel Patrick Fitzgerald.

McClellan told reporters on July 18, 2003, that the material being released on Iraq "was officially declassified today." On Friday, McClellan interpreted his own words to mean that when the material was "officially released."

Asked when it was declassified, McClellan refused to answer, saying that the matter was part of Fitzgerald's ongoing CIA leak probe that has resulted in Libby's indictment.

Libby faces charges of perjury, obstruction and lying to the FBI in the Valerie Plame affair. He is accused of making false statements about how he learned of her CIA employment and what he told reporters about her.

The declassification issue marks the second time in the CIA leak probe that the White House's previous public statements have been called into question.

After checking with Libby and presidential advisor Karl Rove, McClellan said in 2003 that neither aide was involved in the leak of the CIA identity of Wilson's wife. Rove remains under investigation in the leak probe.

Administration critics said the president's actions were a misuse of the declassification process.

Bush's "selective declassification of highly sensitive intelligence for political purposes is wrong," said House

Democratic Leader Nancy Pelosi.

Pelosi said a presidential executive order requires a uniform system for classifying, declassifying and safeguarding national security information and asked, "Why didn't President Bush follow this protocol before authorizing the selective leak of highly sensitive intelligence?"

Rep. Rush Holt, D-N.J., called for a House Intelligence Committee investigation and for the president to explain in person to Congress.

Last year, a commission appointed by Bush to look into the failure to find weapons of mass destruction in Iraq cautioned against leaks for political purposes.

"Policymakers who leak intelligence to the press in order to gain political advantage ... may do so without fully appreciating the potential harm that can result to sources and methods," the commission said.

Bush, GOP hit new lows in public opinion poll

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush has hit new lows in public opinion for his handling of Iraq and the war on terror and for his overall job performance. Polling also shows the Republican Party surrendering its advantage on national security.

The AP-IPSSOS survey is loaded with grim election-year news for a party struggling to stay in power. Nearly 70 percent of Americans believe the nation is headed in the wrong direction — the largest percentage during the Bush presidency and up 13 points from a year ago.

"These numbers are scary. We've lost every advantage we've ever had," GOP pollster Tony Fabrizio said. "The good news is Democrats don't have much of a plan. The bad news is they may not need one."

Democratic leaders predicted they will seize control of one or both chambers of Congress in November. Republicans said they feared the worst unless the political landscape quickly changes.

There is more at stake than the careers of GOP lawmakers. A Democratic-led Congress could bury the last vestiges of Bush's legislative agenda and subject the administration to high-profile investigations of the Iraq war, the CIA leak case, warrantless eavesdropping and other matters.

In the past two congressional elections, Republicans gained seats on the strength of Bush's popularity and a perception among voters that the GOP was stronger on national security than Democrats.

Mother found not guilty by reason of insanity

MCKINNEY, Texas (AP) — A mother charged with murder for cutting off her baby daughter's arms in what her lawyers portrayed as a religious frenzy was found not guilty by reason of insanity Friday by a judge.

Dena Schlosser, 31, will be sent to a state mental hospital and held until she is no longer deemed a threat to herself or others.

"My own expectation is that she will remain at the hospital for many, many years," defense attorney David L. Hayes said.

Police arrested Schlosser in 2004 after she told a 911 operator she had severed her baby's arms. Officers found the 10-month-old baby, Margaret, near death in her crib and Schlosser covered in blood, holding a knife and listening to a hymn.

In issuing the verdict, Judge Chris Oldner said Schlosser had met the legal standard for insanity, but did not elaborate. Both defense and the prosecution had agreed to let the judge decide the case after Schlosser's previous trial ended in a deadlocked jury in February.

Last week it was disclosed that Schlosser had a brain tumor that defense attorneys said could have caused hallucinations. Schlosser glanced toward her former stepfather but said nothing as she was led away.

"We have a just verdict in just case, but yes it is bitter-sweet," her lawyer said. "The fact is it is her best chance to get better."

The case hinged on whether or not Schlosser was unable to grasp the wrongfulness of the crime — the Texas standard for insanity.

The judge relied on evidence he had heard during the first trial. Among other things, psychiatrists said Schlosser suffered severe mood swings and religious hallucinations. One doctor said Schlosser told him she wanted to cut off her baby's arms and her own limbs and head and give them to God.

But prosecutor Curtis Howard said the fact Schlosser told her husband that she had "killed the baby" proved she knew what she was doing. "This is a case that could have gone both ways; we knew that," Howard said after the verdict.

Schlosser's brain tumor did not become an issue until last week. A witness in her first trial alluded to a possible brain lesion, but miscommunication between doctors delayed confirmation by a neurologist until weeks after the mistrial.

Bob Nicholas, Schlosser's former stepfather and the only relative in attendance Friday, said the verdict was the best possible outcome.

'Da Vinci' author exonerated

Judge says writer did not breach copyright laws

LONDON (AP) — "The Da Vinci Code" author Dan Brown and his publishing house were cleared of copyright infringement in a British court Friday, with the judge finding the lawsuit based on a contrived and "selective number of facts and ideas."

Authors Michael Baigent and Richard Leigh had sued Random House, claiming Brown's best-selling novel "appropriated the architecture" of their 1982 nonfiction book, "The Holy Blood and the Holy Grail."

"It would be quite wrong if fictional writers were to have their writings pored over in the way DVC ('Da Vinci Code') has been pored over in this case by authors of pretend historical books to make an allegation of infringement of copyright," Judge Peter Smith said in his 71-page ruling.

Both books explore theories that Jesus married Mary Magdalene, the couple had a child and the bloodline survives — ideas dismissed by most historians and theologians. "The Da Vinci Code" has sold more than 40 million copies — including 12 million hardcovers in the United States — since its release in March 2003. It came out in paperback in the United States last week, and quickly sold more than 500,000 copies. An initial print run of 5 million has already been raised to 6 million.

"Those sales should go even higher with the planned May 19 release of a film version starring Tom Hanks. The decision was lauded by Brown, Random House and those who believed the case was a test for fiction authors wanting to use the research of others in their work.

"Cases like this hopefully will clarify what copyright is all about," said Allan Adler, vice president for legal and government affairs at the Association of American Publishers.

"Copyright doesn't protect ideas and copyright doesn't protect facts. That's why we have genres, fiction and non-fiction, and a number of people can write novels based on the same idea and still have freedom of expression."

Brown, who testified for a few days and then returned to his home in New Hampshire, said in a statement that a novelist must "be free to draw appropriately from historical works without fear that he'll be sued and forced to stand in a courtroom that calls into question his very integrity as a person."

"The case proved a distraction for Brown, who dislikes publicity and has been trying to complete a much-anticipated follow-up to "The Da Vinci Code," and a costly embarrassment for Baigent and Leigh. They spent two years on the lawsuit and nearly $3.5 million, between their own legal expenses, and Random House's fees. Though Smith ruled against allowing the authors to appeal, they can still appeal to higher courts.

No decision on an appeal has been made, Leigh said.

U.S. will cut Palestinian aid because of Hamas

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration said Friday it would suspend or shift up to $400 million in Palestinian aid over the next few years as part of an international effort to deny funds to the radical Islamic movement that has won control of the Palestinian government.

The European Union announced that it, too, was cutting off funds, denying the Hamas-led government in the impoverished Palestinian territories the bulk of the foreign aid writing that keeps services running.

Both the United States and the European Union regard Hamas, which has pledged violence against Israel, as a terrorist organization.

"The new Palestinian government must take responsibility for the consequences of its policies," Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice said. "The Clinton group's political victory in Palestinian parliamentary elections in January, leading to a line-by-line review of about $600 million to be paid over the next few years in U.S. assistance programs, from food to roads to training for government workers."

The result was the decision to end, at least for now, projects that could even indirectly benefit Hamas, such as road and waterworks construction.

Report: FDA knew about benzene in soft drinks

Knight Ridder News Service

WASHINGTON — A newly discovered Food and Drug Administration report shows the agency had data at least three years ago that some soft drinks had unsafe levels of cancer-causing benzene.

The Environmental Working Group, a private, nonprofit scientific research organization, found the data recently in a June 2003 FDA report chronicling the level of contaminants and nutrients in food and beverages.

Known as the Total Diet Study, the report shows that between 1995 and 2001, nearly 80 percent of the diet cola that the FDA sampled had benzene levels higher than the limit allowable in drinking water. Among 24 diet cola samples, 19 had levels that were on average four times higher.

The study did not identify brands. Regular cola and some fruit drinks also showed excessive levels, although the number of samples tested as well as the levels detected in those products was lower.

The old report is significant because the FDA began testing for benzene recently after receiving evidence of unsafe amounts in some soft drinks. Food safety regulators had assumed the problem, which first surfaced in the early 1990s, had long ago been corrected.

Police investigate 911 response

DETROIT (AP) — A 5-year-old boy called 911 to report that his mother had collapsed in their apartment, but an operator told him he should not be playing on the phone, and she died before help arrived.

The family of Sherill Turner, 46, does not know whether a swifter response could have saved her life, but relatives want to know why the operator apparently treated the call as if it were a prank.

Police said the 911 response was under investigation.

Turner's son, Robert, placed two calls to 911 after his mother collapsed Feb. 20 on the kitchen floor. During one of the calls, an operator said: "You shouldn't be playing on the phone."

Immigration overhaul hits giant roadblock

WASHINGTON (AP) — Landmark legislation offering eventual citizenship to millions of illegal immigrants suffered a potentially fatal blow Friday in the Senate, the latest in a series of election-year setbacks for President Bush and the Republicans who control Congress.

"Politics got ahead of policy on this," lamented Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., an evenhanded assessment that belied the partisan recriminations from all sides.

Failed as a bipartisan breakthrough through a 24-hour earlier, the bill fell victim to internal disputes in both parties as well as to bewildering political maneuvering. On the key vote, only 38 senators, all Democrats, lined up in support. That was 22 short of the 60 needed, and left the legislation in limbo as lawmakers left the Capitol for a two-week break.

Supporters of the measure expressed hope for its resurrection, particularly with large public demonstrations planned over the next several days. "We have an agreement. It's not going away," said Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., who earlier had estimated more than 50 senators favor the measure. Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, pledged to have legislation ready for debate in the Senate within two weeks of the lawmakers' return.

Majority Leader Bill Frist, his party plagued by divisions, stopped short of a commitment to bring another immigration bill to the floor by year's end. "I intend to," the Tennessee Republican said, but added it would depend on the schedule, already crowded with other legislation.

The gridlock over immigration legislation capped an exceptionally trying week for Republicans, who face unexpectedly stiff challenges from Democrats for control of the House and Senate in the midterm elections.

House GOP leaders abruptly put off plans Thursday to vote on a budget for the coming year when leaders contended they lacked a majority. The House-Senate leadership also gave up hopes of clearing a tax cut before the April 17 tax filing deadline.

An Associated Press-Ipsos poll showed Bush's public support at new lows for his handling of Iraq and the war on terror as well as overall job performance.

And former House Majority Leader Tom DeLay, under indictment in Texas and linked to disgraced lobbyist Jack Abramoff, announced plans to resign and then blasted his own party's performance. "We don't have an agreed agenda — breaking up our leadership has taken its toll," he told one group of reporters.

The immigration bill would have provided for stronger border security, regulated the future entry of foreign workers and created a complex new set of regulations for the estimated 11 million illegal immigrants in the country. Officials said an estimated nine million of them, those who could show they had been in the United States for more than two years, would eventually become eligible for citizenship under the proposal.

Court throws out convictions

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Spain's Supreme Court on Friday threw out the convictions of three men found guilty last year of being part of an al-Qaida network after prosecutors agreed there was not sufficient evidence to jail them, a court official said.

The men — Driss Chebli, Sadik Merizak and Abdelaziz Benaich — had received sentences of between six and eight years. Chebli for calling for jihad with an al-Qaida-linked terror group, and the others for belonging to a terror organization. They were among 18 people convicted in a high-profile trial last year linked to the Sept. 11, 2001, attacks.

Prosecutors this week acknowledged there was not sufficient evidence to jail the three and the Supreme Court agreed, said the court official, who spoke on condition of anonymity because his name is on ground rules prohibiting him from being identified. The court was hearing appeals by all 18.

Suicide bombers strike Shiite mosque; 79 die

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Suicide bombers, one dressed as a woman, blasted worshippers as they left a Shiite mosque after Friday prayers, killing at least 79 people and wounding more than 160 in the deadliest attack in Iraq this year.

The horrific explosions at the Buratha mosque are likely to stoke the already raw tensions between Shiite and Sunni Muslims. The U.S. ambassador warned in an interview published Friday that sectarian civil war in Iraq could inflame the entire Middle East.

Rescuers raced to aid from the mosque, ferrying bodies from the walled compound on blood-soaked wooden pushcarts and loading them on the beds of pickup trucks. City officials urged Iraqis to donate blood for the wounded.

Inside the mosque, pools of blood stained the chipped and crumbling floor next to a red prayer rug. A firefighter wearing a yellow helmet and yellow gloves knelt down to inspect the scene.

Police said there were two suicide bombings at the mosque, and an Associated Press photographer saw evidence of two blasts — one at the outer wall surrounding the compound and another at the entrance to the mosque building. The blast in the entrance likely killed some worshippers inside.

But Jalal Eddin al-Sagheer, the preacher at the mosque and one of the country's leading politicians, said there were three bombings. One assailant came through the women's security checkpoint and blew up first, he said.

The preacher, who was not injured, said another raced into the mosque's courtyard while a third tried to enter his office before they both detonated their explosives.

Al-Sagheer accused Sunni politicians and clerics of waging "a campaign of distortions and lies against the Buratha mosque, claiming that it has Sunni prisoners and mass graves of Sunnis." "Shiites are the ones who are targeted as part of this dirty sectarian war waged against them as the world watches silently," he told Al-Arabiya television.

Marriage renewal program helps couples in trouble

DEAR ABBY: I am married to a man I'll call "Chad." We have had a few rough years since our child came along. We went to counseling as long as Chad's parents paid for it, and even tried talking to the pastor of our church. Not a whole lot has changed.

What I'm looking for is a feeling of still belonging. I'm not talking about wanting to be with these people 24/7, just maybe seeing them once every two or three weeks. We live very close to each other.

I know you recommend counseling for married people in trouble, but what do you suggest for those of us who can't afford it?

— GEORGE'S WIFE IN NEW JERSEY

— TRYING TO MAKE IT

DEAR TRYING: A program that has been mentioned before in my column, and has enjoyed much success, is Retrovaille, which started in Canada in 1977 and is now offered in many countries. It is Catholic in origin and orientation, but is open to all married couples, regardless of their backgrounds.

DEAR ABBY: My husband, "George," died seven months ago, after a four-month battle with esophageal cancer. He was the oldest of six siblings. We all got along well. My three children and I are grateful to both of our families for all the help they give us throughout George's illness.

DEAR WIFE: Please accept my sympathy for your loss. You didn't mention how often you saw your in-laws before your husband's death, or what demands there are on their time. However, families are made up of individuals, and it would be interesting to know which of your husband's siblings expressed that it is "so hard to see you" when they all feel the same way, or if one person was speaking for all of them.

Retrovaille consists of a weekend, followed by a series of 12 presentations over the following three months. It is not a spiritual retreat, a sensitivity group or a seminar. During the Retrovaille program, which is run by three married couples and a priest, the "team" consists — all of whom have experienced disillusionment, pain, anger and conflict in their own marriages — share their personal struggles, reconciliation and

My problem is George's brothers, sisters and their families. They have dropped us from their lives. I know they are grieving for their brother. My children and I are grieving for him, too. They say it's "too hard to see us," because there are too many memories.

While it may not be possible to remain close to all of your husband's brothers and sisters, it may be possible to stay close with some of them. At the same time, please consider joining your social circle. Volunteer work is an excellent way to do that if you have the time. It will also give you less time to dwell on your loss.

Dog caught after a 2-year hunt

STRATHAM, N.H. (AP) — Satellite tracking, helicopter surveillance and dart guns failed. In the end, it was a ham dinner and a remote-controlled net that brought a golden retriever named Sam in from the cold after two years on the run.

Raiding garbage cans and winning handouts from sympathetic neighbors, the dog survived two New England winters, deer hunting season and a blow from a car.

Peg and Dennis Sklarski got Sam in 2004, after he was rescued from a life inside a chain-link fence in Tennessee, where he was sporadically fed and otherwise ignored. They had him only three weeks when Sam got loose.

Over the months and years, neighbors repeatedly spotted Sam and called the Sklarskis, and Dennis said he spent many nights crusing the woods.

In January, experts arrived from Boston with infrared cameras and a remote-controlled net that had no hook. A friend provided his helicopter for searching. Sprawl, an investigator with New Hampshire Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, failed repeatedly to get the dog with a tranquilizer gun.

Finally, donations let the Society for Protection of Cruelty to Animals buy its own remote-controlled net, and a family that had been feeding Sam had the contraption set up on its woodshed lot. Other neighbors agreed to stop leaving him food.

After five weeks, police Officer Tona McCarthy, who had devoted hours of his own time to tracking the dog, spotted Sam in the area Wednesday and hid at the lot, watching for him on a video monitor. Soon, Sam appeared.

On the video, Sam's caution was obvious. He sniffed the air and the ground and looked from side to side. He crept toward the food dish.

Normally, Sam grabs his food bowl with his teeth and drags it away to eat. This time, though, he gobbled a few mouthfuls of ham first, giving McCarthy just enough time to release the net. The far end just caught the dog as he fled with the bowl.

Alcohol testing will accompany high school prom

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Hilton Head High School students will need more than fancy dresses and tuxedos to get into this year's prom. They'll also have to pass a blood-alcohol test.

School officials decided to test all students this year to determine if they have been drinking after several students arrived at last year's prom drunk, said Obie Schramm of the Beaufort County School District.

"Unfortunately, there's always a handful of students drinking, and that makes it hard for everyone. We don't want something terrible to happen," Schramm said.

School officials will administer the tests, principal Helen Ryan said.

Student Alex Clare, who is helping organize the prom, said he supports testing for alcohol.

"If I'm not drinking, then it doesn't bother me. I think some people are mad at it, but I can see why they did it," Clare said.

Beaufort County school officials said they will look at Hilton Head High's plan before deciding whether to do blood-alcohol tests at the district's other three high school proms.

Osterkamp clubs three homers in two games for Indians

BUHL — Seven errors and 19 hits conceded over two games isn't usually a recipe for success. But provided sufficient lumber, it's just enough to make things interesting.

Behind three home runs from senior James Osterkamp, the host Buhl Indians opened their annual Buhl Midseason Classic with a couple of good ones, rallying from back-to-back three-run deficits to drop South Fremont 6-5 and Bear Lake 7-6.

"I don't try to swing for the fence," said Osterkamp. "Just a nice and easy swing and it goes over for you. That's usually the way it goes. We came in here and played two good ball clubs in South Fremont and Bear Lake and got two wins. So right now, we're feeling pretty good about ourselves."

In the South Fremont game, the Indians found themselves in a three-run hole after just half an inning after the Cougars No. 5 hitter Lance Miranda drove a two-run shot over the left-field fence following shortstop Camron Hammond coming home off of an error at shortstop.

Eagles split with Bruins

The Times-News

SALT LAKE CITY — Beauty and the beast would be a good way to describe the College of Southern Idaho baseball team's scenic West Athletic Conference road split against the host Salt Lake Community College Bruins on Friday afternoon at Gate Field in Salt Lake City.

Beauty would be a 10-0, skinning drubbing of the Bruins in Game 1. The beast would be a 2-1 loss in nine innings of the doubleheader's second game. It's the Golden Eagles' Jekyll and Hyde personality that had skipper Boomer Walker shaking his head after Jordan Schartz's two-out wild pitch allowed Cole Anderson to score, ending Game 2 in the bottom of the ninth.

"We didn't get a hit after the third inning," Walker told 1270 AM KTFX. "We had our chance in the third when we had second and third, nobody out and didn't get any runs. It came back to haunt us. We didn't do a good job at making adjustments. It wasn't that last ball that lost us the game."

CSI managed only three hits against the Bruins' Game 2 pitching trio of Geoff Wolfgramm, Cody Hansen and Tyson Bailey. Shortstop Jordan Daley finished 2-for-5 with a RBI-double and a walk, while Boomer poked up CSI's other hit. Salt Lake's Anderson also ended the game on a double to left field that hit the fence in the bottom of the sixth inning, but was unable to advance to third after Latham issued an intentional walk to Hyder Olsen and left Matt Miller to load the bases.

Todd Privett threw 6.3 innings of two-hit ball, but didn't factor in the decision. Latham was saddled with the loss for the 29-9 (18-6 SWAC) Golden Eagles.

"Todd Privett threw a heck of a game and we had plenty of opportunities," Walker said. "Shoot, you give up one run through eight innings and you should win that game."

CSI had little trouble in the first game, jumping out to a 2-0 lead in the first and blowing the game open with an eight-run sixth inning. Third baseman Grant Kveder led the charge, finishing 4-for-4 and just a home run away from the cycle. Kveder tallied two RBIs, an aid Ken Fugstad, Mike Griffin and Daley. Fugstad went 3-for-4 with three doubles and three runs scored.

Game 1 starter Adam Urbner went the distance for CSI, running his season record to 0-3. It was a rare spot of run support for Urbner, who has seen his share of hard-luck losses.

in the inning with the second of his seven strikeouts on the game and put the 7-0 Indians on the board with an RBI-single in the bottom of the frame.

"First inning, I left a few pitches up and they capitalized on them," said Laing. "Later in the game, I started hitting spots a little better."

"Two batters later, Osterkamp took the first pitch he saw and tied the game up at the two-run homer to center.

"Everything just changed there," said Osterkamp. "I've been swinging all season and I saw the ball well. I wasn't expecting too many off-speeds, but I just jumped all over the first-pitch fastball."

Indians first baseman Tanner Leckenby provided the go-ahead run in the fourth with a single to score Osterkamp and the hosts tacked on two more runs in the sixth, including a lead-off homer from Osterkamp for his second of the day, which sailed just a few feet to the left of his first.

The Cougars managed eight hits in the game, but left seven runners on base, including three in sixth.

"We got down early in that first inning and I thought, 'Whoa, here we go,'" said Buhl head coach Mark Laing. "But we came right back. We made a few blunders, but it didn't hurt us. We got some key hits when we needed them."

After going down 4-1 in the top of the fifth, Buhl stormed back with three runs in the bottom of the inning, another three in the sixth, and held off a seventh-inning rally to squeak by Bear Lake 7-6.

"We found out we can win the close ones," said Indians coach Mark Laing. "That's good to know early in the season."

The Bears enjoyed four errors from the hosts and notched 11 hits on the day, but Buhl made their hits count, such as a two-run homer by Tyler Johnson in the bottom of the eighth to take a 5-4 lead. Buhl pitcher Austin Laing struck out three in the ninth to seal the win. The Bears were led by pitcher Tyler Johnson, who pitched a complete game and struck out seven. Buhl's offense was led by outfielder Grant Kveder, who had a home run, two doubles, a triple and three runs scored. Buhl also had a walk-off homer by Tanner Leckenby in the eighth to give them a 6-5 victory. Buhl's pitching was led by pitcher Austin Laing, who pitched six innings and struck out seven. Filer trumps Day 1 foes FILER — It wasn't the shut-lacking from two weeks ago, but a win is a win.

Kent Krugges' Filer Wildcats again met Wells, Nev., on the diamond and again took a win from the Leopards, this time 10-8 at the Buhl Midseason Classic held in Filer.

"I don't like to lose, but two weeks ago, they beat us 28-1," Wells head coach Steve Rodriguez said. "We battled and that's the thing I'm most pleased with."

Battle, indeed. During the first inning, both teams batted around with Filer taking a 6-5 lead.

Wells drove in the first five batters through mostly base hits, while Filer manufactured its runs by advancing on balks, hit batter tags, Leopards fielding errors and stolen bases (a dozen for the game).

"We've kind of been struggling at the plate lately, and today, there was kind of more of the same. I think we were starting to just build as a team, and be together," Filer leadoff man Taylor Clelland said. He went 1-for-4 with the out, a base hit, a walk and was hit by a pitch.

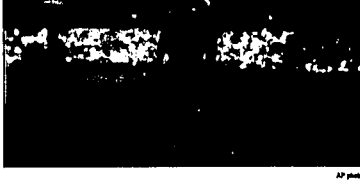

"The biggest problem is the first inning," Rodriguez said. "It seems like lately we're just keeping stubbing our toe in the first inning and can't recover."

The Wildcats continued to connect for runs, including a mean lead-runer triple in the second inning that bounced off the top of the outfield fence. A solo shot by shortstop Brandon Bartolo in the third would be the final run. Filer would score for the game. Denton and Bartolo were the most consistent in the box as both went 2-for-4.

However, while Filer kept taking a few runs every inning, the Wells, so to speak, went dry for the Leopards thanks to sophomore starter Tyson Johnson.

"There was definitely some nerves at the beginnings because I'm a sophomore playing up on varsity," Johnson said. "So I came out a little timid, and I could tell. But after that, I knew AUGUSTA, Ga. — There was a charge at the Masters, and it wasn't made by Tiger Woods.

Chad Campbell surged into the lead at Augusta National with a 5-under 67, while Woods failed to gain any ground in his bid to win a fifth green jacket as the tournament reached its midway point Friday.

Woods started the warm, blustery day five strokes behind Vijay Singh, still head to the weekend five strokes behind Campbell.

"I'm in good shape," Woods insisted.

South Fremont 5, Kimberly 0

The South Fremont Cougars rebounded from their tournament opening loss to Buhl with a 5-0 shutout win over Kimberly.

"We struggled at the plate," said Bulldogs head coach Darin Gonzalez, whose team managed only two hits. "But we played with our pitching. They did a good job, kept them to six hits, but we were very unproductive at the plate. But we'll hopefully get back at it tomorrow."

Flour 17, Bear Lake 16

The Bulldogs pulled ahead of Filer by 33 points to win in the overall team prints at the Angle Wyatt Memorial Track Invitational in Filer on Friday.

The Wildcats took first in three of the relays (medley, 4x200 meters, 4x400 meters) while Kimberly ran away with the 4x100-meter relay.

For the girls, the Tigers reign supreme with the 4x100-meter relay followed at 103 and won two of the relays, the 4x400 and medley.

Florida Marlins shortstop Hanley Ramirez (2) throws to first base after tagging out New York Mets outfielder Cliff Floyd (30) in the fifth inning Friday at New York's Shea Stadium.

Mets mash Marlins

NEW YORK (AP) — Steve Trachsel pitched three-hit ball through six innings and drove in a run with the 10,000th double in Mets history.

David Wright and Jose Reyes homered for the Mets. Wright drove in three runs and Reyes had three hits. Carlos Beltran drove in a run and scored another.

Trachsel (1-0) worked his way out of a first-inning jam, then helped his own cause with the milestone double in the fourth. It came in the 7,000th game in franchise history.

The right-hander struck out six, walked one and gave up only a solo homer to Mike Jocos.

Tot Nixon homered and drove in four runs for the Red Sox, who led 11-0 before the Orioles finally got a runner past first base in the seventh inning.

Devil Rays 9, Blue Jays 8

TORONTO — Jimmy Gomes hit a tiebreaking two-run homer in the seventh inning and Tampa Bay rallied from a six-run deficit to beat Toronto.

Bush (1-0), who was acquired in the trade that sent Lyle Overbay to the Toronto Blue Jays in December, struck out seven to earn the win in his first start for Milwaukee.

Turnbow walked Orlando Hudson to lead off the ninth but got Chad Tracy to ground into a double play. He then retired Luis Gonzalez, who homered in the second inning, for the final out.

The Brewers have won their first four games of the season for the first time since 1987, when they won their first 13.

Astros 6, Nationals 1

HOUSTON — Lance Berkman and Preston Wilson hit two-run homers in the same inning for the second consecutive game to lead the Astros over the Washington Nationals.

Brandon Backe (1-0), who missed his scheduled start Wednesday against Florida because of a sore back, held the Nationals to three hits in six strong innings. Craig Biggio added an RBI double and scored on Berkman's sacrifice fly in the third off starter Tony Armas Jr. (0-1).

American League

Indians 11, Twins 6

CLEVELAND — Casey Blake hit a two-out grand slam. Travis Hafner homered twice and Paul Byrd pitched long enough to win a start he had waited 15 years for, helping the Cleveland Indians roll to an 11-6 home-opening win over Minnesota on Friday.

Back of sold out Jacobs Field for the first time since their final-secwck collapse in 2005, the Indians began to erase some of the bitter memories of a 1-6 record along the stretch that cost them a playoff spot despite 33 wins.

Red Sox 14, Orioles 8

BALTIMORE — Daniel Cabrera walked six batters in the first inning, and Boston got 16 hits to back an efficient pitching performance by Matt Clement in a victory over Baltimore.

Brewers 3, D'backs 1

MILWAUKEE — Dave Bush

Tigers 5, Rangers 2

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — Chris Shelton pushed his major-league-leading home run total to five with a two-run drive and Detroit inherited the AL's only unbeaten team with a victory over Texas.

Tigers starter Mike Maroth (1-0) gave up one run and eight hits in 5 1/3 innings. Believers Jason Griggs, Josh Zimvaya and Fernando Rodney combined to allow one run and three hits over the final 3 1/2 innings. Rodney worked the ninth for his second save.

The Tigers have won their first four games and are off to their best start since 2004. They lead the majors with 16 homers.

Michigan Young homered for the Rangers, who have dropped four of five to begin the season.

Royals 11, White Sox 7

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Doug Mientkiewicz, Angel Berroa and John Buck had two RBIs apiece, and Kansas City made up a six-run deficit to beat Chicago.

The first five White Sox batters scored against Jeremy Affeldt. But Jon Garland (0-1), who is coming off an 18-win season and was 11-4 lifetime against the Royals, gave up 10 hits and nine runs in 5 1/3 innings.

The loss snapped an 11-game road winning streak for White Sox, who are off to a 1-3 start in defense of their World Series title.

world. He laid up on the par-5 13th, which paid off when he swung the ball to center and made the putt. At 14, he smothered the flag with a 9-iron, rolling in a 6-footer to take his score even lower.

Campbell bounced back from his first bogey at 17 with another birdie — his sixth of the round — to finish things off at 18. He again went with the 9-iron from 145 yards, putting the ball within 15 feet and sinking a putt that caught the left lip and spun in.

So much has been made of driving and iron play and you're still got to putt," Campbell said. "The biggest part of this course is putting."

There were three major surprises on the first day — Mediate, Crenshaw and Arron Oberholser.

Mediate, who slumped badly the last two years because of back problems, began with a 68 and doggedly held on Friday with a 73.

Dodgers 5, Phillies 3

PHILADELPHIA — Dodgers starter Brett Tomko tossed six effective innings and Danys Baez worked the ninth for his second save in two chances.

Tomko (1-0) allowed three runs and eight hits. Hong-Chih Kuo pitched two perfect innings, striking out four, and Baez struck out two in the ninth.

Jimmy Tollins had three hits a day after his 30-game hitting streak ended, but Philadelphia lost its fourth straight game.

The Phillies are off to their worst start since opening 0-4 in 1987. They hadn't started with four losses at home since 1977 when they finished 101-61 and won the second of three consecutive NL East titles.

"It's special to be leading after two rounds," said Campbell, who had a 6-under 130 total. "Obviously my goal is to be leading after four rounds. I'm off to a good start, and hopefully I will have a good weekend."

Moore normally makes his move here in the second round, but he had to settle for staying put on this day with a 71.

"It was real tough out there," he said. "The wind was windy, swiftly. It just played very difficult."

Fred Couples got in contention with a 70, joining him tied with Singh and Mediate at 141. Then came Mickelson,

Army coach dead at 28

WEST POINT, N.Y. (AP) — A month ago, 28-year-old Army coach Maggie Dixon left the Christy Aronson court on the shoulders of jubilant cadets after leading the women's basketball team to its first NCAA tournament berth.

Dixon was mourned in a chapel across the U.S. Military Academy's campus, a day after she died following an "arrhythmic episode to her heart," she was pronounced dead Thursday night at Westchester Medical Center in Valhalla, N.Y., academy spokeswoman Lt. Col. Kent Casselhaus said. An autopsy was scheduled for Friday.

About 500 people filled the Catholic Chapel, including her family and players who remembered her as equal parts coach, big sister and best friend. On the cover of the memorial service program was a picture of a beaming Dixon, her left index finger pointing up as she was carried off the court following the historic win.

"Those who spoke universally recalled Dixon's exuberance, humor and the way she cheerfully referred when things weren't going well.

"Adversity, ladies. How are you going to react?" guard Adrienne Payne said in recalling one of Dixon's challenges to her team.

Cadets, who made up about three-quarters of the crowd, were excited from classes to attend. It was something to share with few tears and some laughter mixed in. In front of the arena was a basketball, the Patriot League trophy they won last month and a photo of the team.

Dixon was hospitalized Wednesday in critical condition after suffering an "arrhythmic episode to her heart" at the school, her older brother, Pittsburgh men's basketball coach Jamie Dixon said Thursday.

"Maggie touched so many people beyond basketball," Jamie Dixon said in a subsequent statement released Friday by Pittsburgh. "Our family has received an outpouring of sympathy from across the country and we are deeply appreciative. As her older brother I know she looked up to me. But I always looked up to her, too, and it's obvious that a lot of other people did as well."

Dixon had said his sister collapsed and was taken to the intensive care unit of Westchester Medical Center.

"She ... went to the house of a friend for afternoon tea where she said she wasn't feeling good and she collapsed," said Dixon, who read a prepared statement from the hospital on Thursday.

"I had lunch with her at breakfast with his sister earlier Wednesday and that she had apparently been feeling well."

Dixon's time at Army was short but significant. She arrived at the storied military academy on the banks of the Hudson River in October, just 11 days before the start of the season and inherited a team that had gone 74-70 over the previous five seasons. The team struggled at the beginning, before winning nine of its last 11 games.

Just six months after Dixon took over, the 68-60 winner Holy Cross in the Patriot League final put Army into the NCAA tournament for the first time. "The rookie coach's accomplishment earned extra acclaim because Jamie Dixon had taken Pitt to the men's tournament at the same time. The Dixons are believed to be the first brother and sister to coach in the NCAA tournament in the same year.

"I believe she was having dreams of grandeur that we'd dunk on Tennessee," forward Ashley Magnani said.

And, despite a 102-54 first-round loss to the Volunteers, things were looking up for the Black Knights.

"I just loved the energy that Coach brought to practice every day and the way she never gave up on us, always believed in us," guard Kara Enright said. "She would tell us to 'Use what you've learned here at the academy and apply it to basketball.'"

Members of her team, were with Dixon's family members at her bedside Thursday.

West Point Superintendent Lt. Gen. William Lennox Jr. said the entire community was heartbroken by her death.

"From the time Maggie arrived here, her enthusiastic 'no limits' approach earned her the respect and love of everyone," he said.

Idaho Stampede to join NBDL

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Stampede is among four Continental Basketball Association teams that have been awarded positions in the NBA Development League. NBA Commissioner David Stern said Thursday.

The Stampede, owned by a group of 10 Idaho investors, joined the CBA in 1997 and has advanced to the league playoff five times, including the CBA championship game in 2003, 2004. The Stampede finished the past season 26-25.

The Idaho team will be affiliated with the NBA's Utah Jazz for the 2006-07 season.

"Fans will benefit from the affiliation with the Utah Jazz and with Jazz owner Larry Miller having several business interests in Boise, it is going to help bring these two cities closer together," said Bill Lett, managing investor for the Stampede.

Miller owns several car dealerships in Idaho and during the past NBA preseason, the Jazz hosted their training camp in the Boise arena.

In addition to the Boise franchise, the other CBA teams jumping to the NBA farm team system are the Dakota Wizards, the Colorado 14ers and the Sioux Falls Skyforce.

"These ownership groups possess the talent and experience to ensure a successful basketball product both on and off the floor," NBA D-League President Phil Evans said. "We are excited by the prospect that we can now tap into the keen insight they offer as we successfully move the D-League forward."

The four teams join the Bakertfield Jam of California, Albuquerque Thunderbirds of New Mexico, Arkansas RimRockets of Little Rock, Austin Toros of Texas, Fayetteville Patriots of North Carolina, Florida Flame of Fort Myers, Fort Worth Flyers of Texas, Reno-oke Dazzle of Virginia and the Tulsa 66ers of Oklahoma in the league.

House ends on odd note

BOISE — Twice this week, a U.S. congressional candidate has caused a ruckus on the House floor of the Idaho Legislature.

Idaho Power makes concession on recharge.

Newcomb, R-Burley, to adjourn for the day. "We don't have a minority party member on the floor," he said.

Wednesday, Sall brought the House to a standstill by essentially asking House members for a vote of no confidence on Newcomb, who is also retiring after this session.

"I've read the studies myself," she said. Newcomb advised Sall to stick to the legislation at hand. Yet, Sall persisted. And, one by one, the Democrats walked off the House floor.

Agents apprehend illegal aliens

By Cassidy Friedman Times-News writer

EDEN — At least a dozen illegal immigrants traveling in a Ford Expedition were tracked and followed Tuesday along Interstate 84 to a private driveway just off the Interstate in Eden.

Pulling into a residential neighborhood was their best bet once they realized they were being followed by a marked Border Patrol vehicle, noted Albrecht.

The seven-hour pursuit that began in 2004 E Road resulted in the apprehension of seven Mexicans that had apparently crossed illegally into the United States.

At noon on Tuesday, Border Patrol agents spotted the vehicle traveling west on I-84. The Explorer with Arizona plates was seen stranding east of Eden along I-84 earlier that morning.

After arresting them, Border Patrol agents interrogated them to determine whether they were legally permitted in the country.

With Mexicans, it's almost always voluntary return," said Albrecht.

Border Patrol agents found none of those detained were felons. However, one had a misdemeanor on one report and a prior deportation on his record.

Investigators still looking into deaths

BURLEY — Law enforcement officials are sitting on two suspicious deaths, awaiting autopsy reports on the two parts of investigations into both before making their findings public.

Martha Montoya, 36, of Burley died while in custody of the Mini-Cassia Criminal Justice Center last week. Her death is being investigated by an independent law enforcement department, according to Cassia County Sheriff Jim Higgins.

An autopsy was performed and officials are waiting for results of a pathologist's report. Kegan said the circumstances surrounding the death of Carranza are suspicious and the investigation has remained open pending receipt of the final reports.

Attorney disputes Blaine County judge's ruling

Sarah Johnson's lawyer argues he did not overcharge

The Associated Press

KETCHUM — An attorney who represented a central Idaho teen convicted last summer of killing her parents is disputing a ruling that he overcharged Blaine County by more than $42,000.

BREAKING NEWS

In related news, Blaine County officials will hold a press conference on Monday to announce the results of an investigation into the alleged assault of Sarah Johnson while she was in the Blaine County Jail.

$10,000 to $20,000 he will have to refund based on the fact he billed us for work performed by one of his associates.

According to state bar records, Pangburn was accused of multiple violations of the disciplinary rules involving multiple client matters.

Pangburn represented Sarah Johnson, who Wood sentenced last June to two life terms in prison, plus 15 years for using a rifle to kill her parents.

Blaine County Prosecuting Attorney Jim Thomas said Pangburn charged $365 per hour instead of the $100 per hour specified in the public defender contract.

Pangburn had 42 complaints in his file, according to the bar records. Of those, 29 were dismissed, one resulted in an admonishment, one in a public reprimand, and 11 were consolidated pending Pangburn's resignation.

Officials: Radio host's call to kill border crossers dangerous

PHOENIX (AP) — An Arizona talk show host who suggested killing border crossers may have intensified racial tensions in the state, two officials wrote in a letter sent Friday to Federal Communications Commission Chairman Kevin Martin.

Brian James, a fill-in talk show host with Phoenix AM radio station KFYI, suggested on the air last month that a solution to the immigration problem in Arizona would be to kill illegal immigrants as they cross the border.

"What we'll do is randomly pick one night every week where we will kill whoever crosses the border," James said in the March 8 broadcast. "Step over there and you die. You get to decide whether it's your lucky night or not. I think that would be more fun."

He said he would be "happy to sit there with my high-powered rifle and my night scope" and kill people as they cross the border. He also suggested that the National Guard shoot illegal immigrants and receive "$100 a head."

In a letter to Martin, Arizona Attorney General Greg Abbott, Governor Terry Goddard and U.S. Attorney Paul Charlton called the remarks irresponsible and dangerous.

"I do not have time during this hour to Mr. James disavow violence or indicate he was joking," the letter said. "This type of threatening and inciting speech is dangerous and totally irresponsible for anyone, particularly a licensed body using public airways. We are deeply concerned that, given the intensifying conflict over immigration in Arizona, this speech may lead to violence. Tempers are short on both sides, and the situation is highly volatile."

Goddard and Charlton urged Martin to consider sanctions against KFYI for what they say was an abuse of public airwaves.

A spokesman from the FCC said he was not yet aware of the letter.

James did not return calls for comment by late Friday.

James has been a talk show host in Tampa and Salt Lake City. He is a fill-in host at KFYI and has been on air three times, said Laurie Canillo, program manager at the radio station.

"Canillo did not say whether she was worried about the FCC possibly launching an investigation."

"It's never happened to me," she said Friday. "But in this case, we're on solid ground. I would not be surprised to tell KFYI's side of the story."

Canillo denied that James' comments were dangerous or irresponsible.

"The comments were made in a satirical manner and the listeners who heard the full broadcast understand that," she said. "We were having a serious discussion about the immigration issue and it was solution-driven."

Canillo said callers had made other suggestions to the immigration problem, including erecting a wall along the border, amnestying and stationing National Guard troops along the border.

She could not recall whether James had made other suggestions, but said James told listeners later in the March 8 show that he does not advocate shooting illegal immigrants.

"I did not receive a single listener complaint," Canillo said. "We want to know why this has become an issue a month later."

However, the Arizona Interfaith Network denounced James' comments at a news conference held Monday at a state Capitol. They said his statements could incite violence.

Canillo said the Interfaith Network is causing the danger.

"This group merely wants to drum up response for their immigration march on May 1," she said. "They say they want calm, but the release of this is doing the opposite — it's polarizing the community."

Immigrant rights activists are planning a massive march Monday afternoon on the streets of Phoenix.

Plan would charge government for schools

WASHINGTON (AP) — A recent finding by the U.S. Census Bureau that Utah remains last in the nation in the amount of money it spends per school child is reviving interest in a plan to make the federal government turn over some of the vast public lands it holds to pay for schools.

Versions of the idea have been around for years, and they mostly have gone nowhere.

But in an election year in which school funding remains a big issue, lawmakers' interest is picking up again.

This week, Sen. Orrin Hatch introduced legislation first championed by fellow Utah Republican Rep. Rob Bishop.

And Bishop recently plugged it before what he said was a receptive audience at a the conservative Heritage Foundation think tank.

"I'm encouraged," Bishop said in an interview with The Associated Press. "I think there is some traction with the idea."

The bill would require the Interior Department and Forest Service to give 5 percent of public land to western states. States would hold the land in trust to be sold or leased with the proceeds going to public schools.

The idea is based on the argument that Utah and 12 other western states lose out on sales tax because of their vast acres of public land. The federal government owns on average just over half the land in those states, compared to about 4 percent in the rest of the country.

Western lawmakers argue that westerners put a larger share of their personal incomes toward state and local taxes as a result.

Utah schools currently benefit from a similar trust lands program, that since the 1980s has held more than 7 million acres of federal public land. Last year, sales of land and mineral rights from the trust earned more than $11 million for Utah schools.

Many lawmakers argue that although Utah's per-pupil spending is lowest in the nation — $5,000 compared to the high of $12,981 in New Jersey — the state's tax burden is the eighth highest in the nation. The problem is projected to continue — the number of school children is expected to grow by about 150,000 students over the next 10 years.

Dairy Challenge draws talent to Idaho

By Cathy Roemer For The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — The next generation of dairy farmers descended on the Magic Valley last week to test their knowledge of farm management.

The fifth-annual North American Intercollegiate Dairy Challenge attracted more than 100 students from universities across the nation and as far north as Canada.

The two-day event was hosted by the University of Idaho and Washington State University, along with local industry sponsors.

Reagon Hartzel, a former dairyman who now teaches at Management Systems, served as the local NAIDC coordinator.

"The idea of the program is to bring it all together for students majoring in dairy and animal science," he said.

This year, 27 teams of four spent the first day of competition in an on-site inspection of one of three local dairies: White Clover Dairy, owned by the Roth family of Jerome; Swager Dairy, owned by Dean and Corbett Swager of Buhl; and Desert Rose Farms, owned by Hank Halliger of Filer.

Early on the first day, student teams were given copies of the farms' data. They had about an hour to review and determine to gather additional information.

Altogether, students had approximately two hours to view a dairy, six hours to view the data and four hours to prepare a 20-minute PowerPoint presentation for judges the following day.

- Dairy data
- Data gathered from the dairy consisted of farm goals, financial statistics, standard operating procedures, cost details or estimates, ration formulations for all feeding groups, Penn State Shaker analysis of feed banks, feed inventories, housing dimensions and characteristics, manure or nutrient management, milking procedures and equipment specifications, reproductive data.
- "The comments were made in a satirical manner and the listeners who heard the full herd summaries with a history of production characteristics for the last two to three years."

During each two-hour farm visit, each team decided how to best allocate its members and time to cover all areas and farm. Students were not allowed to ask the dairymen or farm employees any questions during the walk-through, but later gathered as a group with the farm manager for 25 minutes of questioning. Later in the day, at least two members of each team were allowed 12 minutes with the farm manager

By Jaml Whitred
Times-News writer

HEROME — Some exceptional students were awarded last month for their hard work and dedication to helping children receive coats in the valley.

Sheri Mitchell and Wayne Borhn, both of the Jerome Optimist Club, stood beside Jerome High School Principal Patricia O'Dell and thanked the school's Family Cancer and Community Leaders of America students for their work mending coats for the Wendell, Eden, Jerome and Twin Falls Optimist Clubs' annual Coats for Kids program over the past year.

"We do this collectively so that no kid goes without a coat," said Mitchell, chairman of the project. "We couldn't do it without you guys."

Borhn also expressed his appreciation.

"Because of you guys, we are able to give many, many kids coats."

Each student was presented with a certificate which

Salmon fishermen hoping for disaster relief in wake of closure

By Jeff Barnard
Associated Press writer

HARBOR, Ore. — A faded photo of hundreds of salmon spilling over the deck of Bill Woods' fishing boat is hung on the cabin bulkhead of his wood-hulled troller Melissa, a memory of the good old days nearly 30 years ago when a fisherman could make a good living chasing salmon anywhere he liked on the ocean.

Salmon fisherman Bill Woods, right, talks about the coming tough times he and the owners of other salmon boats in the Port of Brookings face under the restricted salmon season, Friday in Harbor, Ore.

This year Woods and some of the skippers of 30 salmon boats at the Port of Brookings are hoping that instead of fish they can hook some federal disaster relief to get them through the toughest salmon closure they have faced in decades.

On Thursday, the Pacific Fishery Management Council voted to practically shut down commercial salmon fishing on 700 miles of the West Coast of Oregon and California to protect dwindling stocks of chinook out of Northern California's troubled Klamath River.

The seasons still must be approved by the secretary of Commerce. But the outlook is grim for years ahead, given the onrushing and bitter battles between fish and loggers, and the sharing scarce water between farms and fish on the Klamath.

"The feds should be mailing us checks," said Ralph Dalrymple, an Alsea Bay area commercial fisherman for 26 of his 43 years. The fish they can catch on the restricted seasons "won't even pay for insurance and fuel bills. That won't pay for $200 worth of federally mandated safety equipment."

"This is the first time we are looking at no viable option to make money," said Gary Smith, skipper of the Milgrant.

"I don't think I'll be alive to go salmon fish again," said Woods. "52, I'll be 62 by the time anyone improves. I'm trying to reach over and pull a salmon and pitch right off the boat."

Governors of Oregon and California and congressmen from their states are pushing for federal disaster assistance for fishermen, as well as money to improve salmon returns to the Klamath River.

But with a tight federal budget, the prospects are uncertain. A House bill is expected after the April recess. However, NOAA Fisheries denied a disaster declaration for last year's salmon fishing cutbacks over the Klamath.

Klamath chinook are not endangered, but the third straight season of poor returns to spawn in the Klamath prompted the council to close 400 miles of coastline around the river's mouth — from Fort Bragg, Calif., to Florence, Ore. — to all commercial salmon fishing this year.

From Florence north to the Columbia River there are staggered openings with limits of 75-fish per week. Similar restrictions apply from Fort Bragg south to Point Sur near Monterey.

Recreational fisheries were also cut back, but not so severely.

Dave Blitts, a Eureka, Calif., salmon fisherman and secretary of the Pacific Coast Federation of Fishermen's Associations, estimated the commercial salmon catch will be down 90 percent from a normal year.

"I'll go out there and did everything just right. I could land 675 fish by the end of August," said Blitts. "If they are 12 pounds and we get 4 bucks a pound ... $25,000 to $35,000 is about the maximum I can earn. That's gross. And it's three bucks a gallon. It will be double for some people and not double for others."

Dams on the Klamath have cut off 300 miles of spawning habitat since 1917. Fisheries managers allowed too much fishing in the 1980s. And bitter political and court battles continue over sharing scarce water between farms and fish since a drought in 2001 forced cutbacks on irrigation of 180,000 acres in the upper basin. After irrigators refused in 2002, some 70,000 adult chinook died in the river from diseases linked to low and warm water.

Utah canyon reopens after avalanche

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The long road through Little Cottonwood Canyon reopened Friday after an avalanche closed it and stranded hundreds of skiers and workers at the Alta and Snowbird ski areas.

The road was closed Thursday when an avalanche pushed a sport utility vehicle off the road, said Salt Lake County Sheriff's Sgt. Todd Griffiths. The vehicle was carrying a St. Louis family of seven and two resort workers. There were no injuries, he said. The slide was about 6 feet high and 100 yards wide and swept the SUV about 100 feet, Griffiths said.

The avalanche was about three miles up the canyon, about 20 miles southeast of Salt Lake City. Several other avalanches hit the road later, according to Alta officials and the Utah Avalanche Center.

"There were no warnings," said Michael Thomas of St.

Louis. "I was driving down the road and the next thing we know the car is tumbling."

The SUV was carrying Thomas, his wife, five children ages 3 to 10 and two teenage Alta ski resort workers who had hitched a ride. All were wearing seat belts.

Thomas said the doors of the SUV couldn't be opened, so the two Alta employees kicked out one of the windows and helped the family climb out.

Dublin judge delays verdict on extradition

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — A Dublin judge postponed his verdict Friday on whether an American fugitive who featured on the U.S. Marshals Service's list of "15 Most Wanted" should be extradited back to his native Washington state.

Frederick Russell, 27, was arrested in Dublin in October 2005 — four years to the day after he absconded on bail to avoid awaiting trial for allegedly killing three people in a 2001 accident on a highway on the Idaho-Washington border. He had been working in a Dublin lingerie shop under the alias "David Carroll" when somebody noticed he was being featured on the Marshals Service's Web site.

High Court Justice Michael Peart declined to explain why he could not deliver his verdict as expected Friday, but said he would do so May 9. Russell, who was in court, did not speak during the brief hearing. Guards escorted him back to Cloverhill Prison west of Dublin.

Russell's lawyers last month argued he would be exposed to inhumane and degrading treatment, including rape and isolated confinement, in a U.S. prison. They also argued that Russell would face a much stiffer prison sentence in the United States than in Ireland, which does not have a "vehicular homicide" charge.

Woman sues over alleged search

BOISE (AP) — A woman is suing Garden City because officers sent her to her home to check on her well-being allegedly without a search warrant.

Boise resident Sherie Campbell filed the lawsuit in U.S. District Court in West Valley against Garden City police officers Alec Sarrazzola and Craig Wallace, Police Chief James Bensley and the city.

Campbell said she was working for the Idaho Counties Risk Management Program, through the employment agency, Adecco, when she decided to take some comp time on Aug. 3 last year.

Though Campbell reportedly gave notice to ICRMP that she would be taking comp time someone at the company called the Garden City police when she didn't show up, requesting they check on her welfare. The Garden City Police Department and the Boise Police Department have a mutual aid agreement. Though Campbell lived in Boise, not Garden City, the Garden City police allegedly went to her home to check on her, without contacting the Boise police first.

Police officers entered and searched Campbell's home even though they did not have consent or a warrant, and no conditions or circumstances would allow a warrantless search, Campbell contends in her lawsuit.

Later that day, according to the lawsuit, Campbell contacted the police and told them how upset she was by the search. The matter became a point of contention between Campbell and ICRMP and Adecco, she says, resulting in the termination of her employment.

Mainline churches still drawing faithful

No one disagrees that the heyday of influence and burgeoning membership rolls is past for most mainline Protestant churches. That's a statistical given.

But too often these churches are written off as flickering embers that once were blazing fires. It's a harsh judgment that misses a bigger issue.

TOM SCHAEFFER

In case you're not sure which churches comprise mainline Protestantism, the lineup generally includes the United Methodist Church, the Presbyterian Church (USA), the Episcopal Church, the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America, the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ), the American Baptist Church and the United Church of Christ.

Some religious observers refer to them as old-line or side-line Protestant churches. The inference is that they're, at best, one step away from some ecclesiastical nursing home or, at worst, on life-support with no more than a few years or decades before they flatline.

Recently, two people spoke out in defense of this liberal brand of Christianity.

One is Marilynne Robinson, an award-winning novelist and essayist, who won the Pulitzer Prize for fiction last year for her novel "Gilead."

In the spring issue of the American Scholar magazine, Robinson criticizes those who promote a narrow view of personal piety and piety as a standard for a broader — and more biblically based — definition: "What has personal holiness to do with politics and economics? ... It is a Christian liberal Protestant point of view," she writes.

She reminds religious liberals, among whom she counts herself, that Protestant reformer John Calvin said all people should be loved, he set no limits.

"There is no doctrine here, no series of certainties, no drawing of lines," Robinson says. "On the contrary, what he describes is a posture of grace, generosity, liberality."

In the Robinson talks about personal piety, she always links it to helping those in need. In other words, faith without deeds. When there's Gary Cox, pastor of University Congregational Church in Wichita, Kan. He recently published a series of essays titled "Think Again: A Response to Fundamentalism's Claim on Christianity" ($17.95, University Congregational Press).

In his book of sermons, Cox — and contends that there's room for different interpretations about each. He rejects the "pat answers" of fundamentalists and the belief that "another person is lost forever beyond the grace of God because of the way that person practices religion."

Instead, he believes liberal Christianity offers another entry to faith, "open-minded and radically inclusive," that is separate from fundamentalism.

He discovered that Anglican theologian W.H. Vanstone was correct when he claimed the church is like a swimming pool, with all the noise coming from the shallow end. He dived out into the deep end of the pool and have found comfort and nurture there ever since."

Two liberal Christians, who should make all us think about faith beyond our comfort zone. • For Marilynne Robinson, faith is not only a personal experience, but also an outward-directed responsibility that compels believers to take action.

• For Gary Cox, faith is about not only endorsing traditional teachings, but also countering ... Please see MAINLINE, Page C2

Local LDS leaders (left to right) Grant Maughan, Brent Nielson and Randy Hansen discuss the plans for a new 30,000-square-foot LDS temple while standing at what will eventually be the back of the new temple. The temple will be built at the site of the now closed Candle Ridge Golf Course located at Eastland and Candleridge Drives in Twin Falls.

Groundbreaking Construction of Twin Falls LDS temple begins next week

By Loretta Burkhardt
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — If you're a member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, next Saturday will be a monumental day.

Local Mormons will break ground on their Twin Falls temple April 15. When completed, it will be the fourth LDS temple in Idaho.

"It's so exciting," said the newly appointed Twin Falls Stake Center President Randy Hansen, who will help preside over the mid-morning ceremony. Because of traffic concerns, the event is by invitation only and organizers aren't yet releasing the exact time of the groundbreaking.

Anyone, however, can attend a gala celebration scheduled for the old Anderson Lumber building April 15 from 6-8:30 p.m. It's located at 960 Eastland Drive.

"From an LDS perspective, (the temple is) a dream come true," Hansen said.

The planned 30,000-square-foot, two-story structure will be built on the grounds of the now-closed Candle Ridge Golf Course, located in a residential neighborhood at the corner of Eastland Drive and Candleridge Drive. It's about a mile from the Snake River Canyon.

When the 18- to 24-month construction project is complete, the temple complex will occupy 9.1 acres on a 36-acre parcel of ground.

"(The temple) will be a pillar for Twin Falls — a high atop Twin Falls proper," said Hansen, who on Tuesday shared an enhanced architectural rendering of the proposed construction that highlights the angel Moroni atop a 153-foot spire.

In vivid color, the in-depth design includes a single-story stake center, lush gardens, shade trees, walking paths and more.

"It's really going to happen," said Brent Nielson, a Twin Falls attorney who serves in the Quorum of the Seventy in the Mormon church hierarchy. "Temples are sacred places where we honor God. And we're excited."

The nearest LDS temple to the Magic Valley is in Boise, a two-hour drive from Twin Falls.

"This is huge," said Grant Maughan, director of the multi-stake public affairs council. "There are no words adequate enough to express how we really feel — to express the joy and exhilaration of having a temple so near."

"Temples are an essential part of the Mormon religion, and only the finest of materials is being used to build this structure," he said.

But not until the temple is dedicated, Maughan says, will it become "The house of the Lord."

"To have such a 'sacred place' in such close proximity where a Mormon can worship on a regular basis, 'defies definition,' he said.

Within its walls, members will receive instruction about the purpose of life and their relationship to God. According to a news release from the LDS church, inside a temple Mormons can take part in religious ceremonies that reach beyond mortality, both for themselves and in behalf of their ancestors.

And though the temple will serve 42,000 Mormons from the 14 LDS stake centers in the Magic and Wood River valleys, having a temple in the area also promises a positive, far-reaching effects on Twin Falls as a whole, Hansen says.

Temples are proven attractions that bring church members and visitors to an area — from surrounding states and even from other countries, according to Hansen.

"Out-of-area visitors to the temple will spend time here, and that will go a long way in helping the economy of Twin Falls," he added.

At least 1,000 spectators are expected to attend the groundbreaking. But with invitations sent to public officials, educators, church authorities, stake presidents, church counselors, bishops and local clergy representing the Magic Valley Interfaith Council, that number could reach as high as 1,500, Hansen says.

A traffic-control plan is in place for Saturday's event, but a huge turnout could result in gridlock in northeastern Twin Falls.

It was "the desire" of the 14 stake presidents in south-central Idaho to invite all Mormons to attend the special ceremony, but the logistics of thousands of church members showing up for the groundbreaking made opening the event to the public impossible. So the proceedings will be filmed.

Then, at the end of the day "when the last amen is said," the contractors will be standing by to begin the job of laying the groundwork for a much-anticipated structure, according to Maughan.

Controversial pastor Fred Phelps discovers solace in contempt

Knight Ridder News Service

WICHITA, Kan. — It is a quiet family Sunday. Boys toss a football in the yard. Children scramble on play ground equipment. Their moms and dads, aunts and uncles clean up after a birthday party.

The family's patriarch reposes comfortably behind a large mahogany desk in a long rectangular workroom next to the sanctuary of his church.

Pastor Fred Phelps, 76 and somewhat wilder after a fire-and-brimstone sermon that blistered the walls and all but rolled up the thin red carpets, is talking about quiet times when all of us think about life and death, heaven and hell, our place in the universe.

In such moments, Phelps says, he finds great solace in knowing he is almost universally despised.

"If I had nobody mad at me," he says softly in his Mississippi drawl, "what right would I have to claim that I was preaching the gospel?"

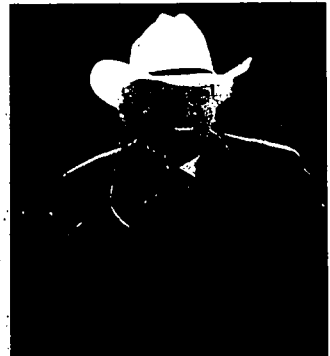

America has heard him and recoiled. At least 27 states are considering laws to ban or restrict picketing at soldiers' funerals. Such picketing is Phelps' latest effort to spread his message that God has turned against America for harboring homosexuality.

In 2004, Phelps tried to get a monument erected in a Twin Falls city park to Jesse Dirksling, who was killed in 1999 in Arkansas by two homosexual men.

In response, the city of Twin Falls passed an ordinance in May 2004 limiting donated park amenities, such as benches, fountains and trees, to those that give fresh thinking of what they mean.

 The two should give us pause to consider, whether we be liberal or conservative or somewhere in between:
 Am I faithful to the message I'm entrusted with, or is faith a fluff that decorates but has little purpose?
 Does faith make a difference in how I interact with others — from those closest to me to strangers in the street — or is it a private experience with little public significance?
 Do I try to understand the other person's faith — even if I profoundly disagree with it — or am I so consumed by the rightness of mine that pride and arrogance control my behavior?
 In the end, we can write off whom we disagree, or we can listen with respect.

Yearbook: Catholic, Mormon and Pentecostal churches grow fastest

NEW YORK (AP) — The Assemblies of God, the Mormon Church and the Roman Catholic Church were the fastest-growing major denominations in the United States last year, according to the just-released 2006 Yearbook of American and Canadian Churches.
 The Assemblies of God, a Pentecostal church, grew 1.81 percent to just under 2.8 million members. The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints increased 1.74 percent to nearly 6 million people, and the Catholic Church, by far the largest denomination in the United States, grew .83 percent to 67.8 million parishioners.
 Only three mainline Protestant churches remain among the 10 biggest denominations in the country: The United Methodist Church, the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America and the Presbyterian Church U.S.A., stayed in the top 10 despite experiencing declines in membership last year.
 The Methodists ranked third, with about 8.2 million members. The Evangelical Lutheran Church ranked seventh, with nearly 4.9 million people, and the Presbyterians ranked ninth with just under 3.2 million congregants.
 The Southern Baptist Convention remains the largest U.S. Protestant group, with 16.3 million members. It is the second-largest denomination in the United States, behind the Catholic Church.
 The yearbook has been published for 89 years by the National Council of Churches, which represents 35 mainline Protestant, Episcopalian and Orthodox Christian groups.

Congregations compete for most Mormon twins on world record book

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Some congregations of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints are battling for a "Mormon world record" for the most twins in one flock.

A keeper of Mormon records said he's heard from at least a dozen people who are disputing a claim by a congregation — or ward — in Orm that it has a record nine sets of twins between the ages of 2 and 17.

The Canyon View 10th Ward claimed to be the new record holder for most twins in one congregation in a story reported in the Deseret Morning News on March 20.

Within hours of the story's publication, people contacted the newspaper to challenge the claim. From a ward with 10 sets of twins to wards with 12 or 13 sets and some triplets, people from six different wards said their congregation deserved the record.

Paul Skousen, who tracks the records and publishes them in The Skousen Book of Mormon World Records, said the new record now appears to belong to the Overlake 1st Ward in Tooele, which has 13 sets of twins, all 18 or younger.

"I think it's so much fun," Skousen said. "With all the dreary headlines going on, it's something focusing on family and what's more important than family?"

Skousen's project began in the late 1980s, when he worked at a publication called the Latter Day Sentinel. There, he frequently received news suggestions regarding amazing feats by church members. But he was unable to do stories on every tip, so he began filling them away for something bigger.

“People enjoy associating with others of like mind, and they like to hear the success stories of other members of the church.”

— Paul Skousen

Over 16 years, Skousen researched records for a Mormon record book, published in 2004. Entries include a Mormon who is the oldest man to row the Atlantic Ocean and the first Mormon to win the Miss Universe pageant.

"There's a lot of enthusiasm," Skousen said. "People enjoy associating with others of like mind, and they like to hear the success stories of other members of the church. It's not just about being pious and reverent on Sunday; people really do lead rich, full and interesting lives."

Skousen said he included some old records in the book to lure readers into bettering them. The record for most twins in one ward listed in the first edition of his book was about 50 years old.

WHEN ALPHABETS TAKE WING

Man uses letters, illustrations to spread faith

By Coren Hart
Times-News correspondent

RUPERT — Carl Clark spoke humbly. He stood beside an easel covered with a giant newspaper tablet, holding a piece of black chalk in his hand. And he illustrated the word "faith" in a most unusual way.

Clark has been doing these chalk talks for several years. Sometimes he works in a classroom at a public school. For a while, he was employed as a teacher's aide at the Idaho Youth Ranch. For a five-year period, he worked helping special education students.

Before that, Clark spent 20 years in the Navy, and after his discharge, worked in a California shipyard.

"I see a lot of my former bosses in this audience," Clark told the Rupert Methodist Church's Lenten luncheon recently. "But now I only have to please one boss. He's the one I work for all the time now."

He drew a large "F" on the paper, but almost immediately began to transform it into a parrot. Parrots can talk. The 'F' turns around into a parrot — just because. The 'I' gets interesting, because the 'I' has life.

"I want to do better," Clark said. "I want to be a better person."

The "F" morphs swiftly into a bird, and the "H" is suddenly a puppy with a few curved lines.

"I just kind of doodle," he said. "I'm not an artist. But I found out a long time ago that this is a good way to get people's attention."

Lois Johnson of Rupert said she especially loved the way Clark tied in the message from

Dr. Seuss's book, "Green Eggs and Ham."

"The character had to just keep trying, and at the end he could say, 'Hey, I like green eggs and ham,'" Johnson said.

Doris and Howard Bruns have known Clark for years, and Doris had heard the same presentation before.

"He put a lot of thought in that," she said. "He used to come to the house and give Howard massage treatments, and he would tell the most interesting stories. At church he had a group of children who needed a little extra, and he would just hold them spellbound."

The boys at the youth ranch wanted to color pictures, but the coloring books were too young for them. So Clark made giant pictures for them to fill in — pictures they could relate to. Later, he found another challenge.

"When I worked in special-ed, there was a boy with cerebral palsy. He wouldn't do his therapy," Clark said. "What's the user? he'd say. 'I'm not going to get good.' I made him a deal. If he'd do a half hour of therapy, I'd rub his shoulders and neck for him for 15 minutes."

Clark seemed certified to do massage therapy at the time. The teacher in charge talked it over with the school board, and it sent Clark to massage therapy school in Santa Rosa, Calif., so he could get a certificate. He parked his motorhome in his son's driveway until time for the fall semester, certificate in hand.

Clark didn't always have a servant's heart. His first wife died of cancer of the spine, after three years in extended care.

Carl Clark sketches rapidly without seeming to hurry, turning alphabet letters into illustrations as he speaks on a subject dear to his heart.

"I was one angry man," he said. "I was mad at sex for leaving me. I was mad as hell at God. I thought he couldn't be much of a God if he let her suffer and die that way."

But while his wife was in extended care, she joined the study group conducted by Rupert Methodist Church. Because he wanted to be with her, he attended too. After her death, he kept going to church.

"I don't know when I began to believe again," Clark said. "It just sort of gradually came back to me."

It took a couple of years, but he made it.

"God sent Jesus to save us from our sins, and I've got God out there saying, 'When are you going to do it?'"

For more information, call Clark at 878-2577.

Phelps

a name and date of birth and death. The purpose was to prevent memorials with negative messages.

Phelps also approached Minidoka County commissioners after American Legion Post 10 had asked to buy a 2- by 3-foot section of lawn for a Ten Commandments monument. He asked to buy land for a 6-foot granite monument in order to condemn Matthew Shepard, a Laramie, Wyo., gay man who was beaten and left to die in a Wyoming field in 1998. The 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled in 2002 that a city which displays a Ten Commandments monument must also display monuments espousing more unpopular beliefs. As a result, Minidoka commissioners refused to consider both the American Legion proposal and the Phelps request.

Phelps also approached the Boise Parks and Recreation Department, which has a similar memorial program as Twin Falls. Because there was a Ten Commandments monument in Julia Davis Park (it has since been relocated at a Boise church) Phelps demanded he be allowed to put his anti-gay monument in a city park. The city said no.

"He has been called the vilest of the vile, inhuman, even insane. He considers this evidence of his righteousness, proof that he is preaching the truth of God."

"Blessed are ye when men shall hate you, and when they shall separate you from their company, and shall reproach you and cast out your name,"

Phelps says, quoting from the Gospel of Luke. "Rejoice in that day and leap for joy."

The funeral picketing has focused national attention on his church, Westboro Baptist, and the complex of Ten Commandments monuments where Phelps and some of his children and grand-children live in modest wood houses surrounded by chain-link and wood fencing.

The fencing creates a spacious yard with a swimming pool, running track, tennis and basketball courts, and the playground.

Above the compound, an American flag flies upside down, the signal for distress. Above that a Canadian flag flies upside down, Phelps' response to a Canadian law prohibiting picketing at funerals there.

Phelps, who has changed from his preacher's outfit — gray sweater and black tie — and put on a University of Kansas windbreaker, says he and his family have picketed more than 25,000 times since 1991. That's when they started a crusade against homosexual activity in nearby Gage Park after Phelps said the city failed to heed letters he wrote for two years.

In fact, if the city had cleaned up the park as he'd asked, Phelps says, the family probably wouldn't picket anything today.

Instead, people showed up at the park to protest Phelps' picketing, and Phelps declared war.

Since then, the family has picketed the funerals of Matthew Shepard, a gay man who was beaten to death in Wyoming; gay men who died of AIDS; miners who died in the late 20th century; and the late Supt. Minnie Quisenberry; Frank Slintra; Barry Goldwater; Mr. Rogers; and Corretta Scott King.

"They spend a quarter of a million dollars on airfare each year," Phelps says. It is paid by the family, which includes 10 attorneys among 13 children.

"We do not ask for anything from anyone," says one of Phelps' daughters, Shirley Phelps-Roper, a lawyer for the family firm, Phelps-Chartered. "And we will not take anything from anyone. We pay our own way."

Along the wall next to Phelps is a table with a computer, fax machine and printer. They are the toots Phelps and his family use to send out their messages, to find out from the Pentagon which soldiers have died and where and when they will be buried, and to track the growing number of state laws aimed at the gay community.

It's also how they receive daily feedback from the world beyond the church's walls.

"We get thousands of e-mails every day, most of it just raising Cain," Phelps says. "Nasty stuff."

From his chair behind the desk, Phelps smiles at all the hate.

"I knew it was coming," he says. "I counted the costs, and I'm daily paying the installments. And it's a bargain."

Phelps wasn't always hated. He remembers when he used to be popular. Medals he received from the American Legion for character, honor and courage as a high school senior hung on the wall of his workroom.

"If it occurs to them, they'll probably want me to give them back," he says.

Report: Filer phone co-op doing well

FILER — Filer Mutual Telephone is an solid footing, according to an examination of 2005 financial statements released last month. The results of the examination were released by Bob Valentine, a certified public accountant, at the company's annual meeting on March 21. He said:

- A 2004 line of credit totaling $800,000 was paid off last year.
- The cost of plant operations were reduced by 81 percent to $251,000 last year.

- Working capital increased 95 percent to $1.8 million.
- Net operating revenues increased 11.6 percent to $4.8 million in 2005.

- The cost of plant operations, partly due to a reduction in overtime payroll, decreased by about $141,000.
- Total operating expenses increased 4 percent to $4.2 million. A portion of this was generated by about 600 hours of employee training and travel, Valentine said.

Filer Mutual is a nonprofit co-op owned by customers living in a service area around Filer, extending north to the canyon and south to Jackpot, Nev.

In other business, Filer residents Terry Kulk and Clark Kaufman were elected to serve three year terms on the company's board of directors.

Partnership offers leadership training

JEROME — The Idaho Rural Partnership will be conducting one-day leadership training sessions for business and community leaders throughout rural Idaho beginning April 10. The sessions will also provide community leaders with knowledge of resources and training available in Idaho. The training dates for the Magic Valley area are April 27 in Burley and April 29 in Jerome. Scholarships will be made available to local high school juniors and seniors to reach out to future leaders.

The cost of the one-day program is $15. For an information call at 208-334-3131.

Burger King chairman announces resignation

MIAMI — Burger King's chairman and chief executive resigned Friday after starting a turnaround at the No. 2 hamburger restaurant chain, but his departure raised questions about the company's impending initial public offering and its continued revolving door.

Greg Brenneman, 44, is a veteran of fixing troubled companies, such as Condumc and Airlines Inc. in the 1990s. He joined Burger King in August 2004 amid nearly two years of slumping sales, but the chain says it's now had eight consecutive quarters of sales growth at stores open at least a year.

John Chidsey, 43, was promoted from president and chief financial officer to chief executive, effective immediately.

Upbeat economy spurs employers to hire

By Jeanine Aversa
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Call it spring fever. Companies feeling upbeat about the economy yearned to add to their employment rolls — and they did. Employers added 211,000 jobs to their payrolls in March. That helped push the unemployment rate down to 4.7 percent, matching its lowest point in 4.5 years.

The employment picture, released by the Labor Department on Friday, suggested that a strengthening economic expansion is putting companies in the hiring mood and brightening prospects for job seekers.

Hiring gains were fairly widespread. Construction, retailers, financial activities, education, health care and government were among the sectors posting payroll gains. That helped to blunt job losses in manufacturing and in the transportation industries.

"I think the job market is on the roll," said Bill Cheney, chief economist at John Hancock Financial Services. "Businesses are doing pretty well these days. Profits are growing nicely. I think businesses are at a point where they feel more comfortable adding people."

The unemployment rate, which dropped from February's 4.8 percent, ended up matching January's jobless rate.

For blacks, though, the unemployment rate didn't budge; it held steady at 9.5 percent in March. The unemployment rate for Hispanics dipped to 5.4 percent last month and the jobless rate for whites edged down to 4 percent.

Overall employment was stronger in March than economists were expecting. They had forecast a gain of 190,000 jobs and believed the civilian jobless rate would hold steady. The economy added 154,000 jobs in January and another 225,000 in February, according to revised figures released Friday. While job gains for each of

Magic Valley unemployment lower than U.S. average

March unemployment rates in the Magic Valley were below the national average, for the most part. Only Blaine County, at 5 percent unemployment, topped the national average of 4.7 percent, according to figures released Friday by Idaho Commerce and Labor. The state's rate was 3.3 percent.

Minidoka's rate, however, dropped from 5.2 percent in February. Twin Falls County's rate rose from 2.9 percent in February to 3.4 percent for March. But last year at this time, the county's unemployment rate was 4.1 percent.

Employment in every sector of Twin Falls County's economy has either improved or remained steady since in the last year, said Greg Rogers, regional economist with the Twin Falls office of Idaho Commerce and Labor. A "remarkable" situation, he said.

these months turned out to be slightly less than previously reported, payroll growth for the January-to-March quarter as a whole was brisk. Job growth over the first three months of this year averaged 197,000.

Employees' average hourly earnings, meanwhile, were $16.49 in March, a modest 0.2 percent increase from February — less than economists were expecting.

With the economy growing n nicely and the job market blooming, the Federal Reserve and other economists are keeping a close eye on wage growth.

Wage improvement is good for workers, but a rapid, sustained acceleration would trigger inflation concerns.

Fed Chairman Ben Bernanke and his colleagues boosted interest rates on March 28 to a five-year high and hinted that additional increases were possible to keep inflation at bay. Economists predict rates will go up again on May 10.

Wages trailed inflation for most workers last year. For the 12 months ending in March, wages advanced 3.4 percent. That suggests workers' paychecks are now keeping even with inflation," said Lynn Restrepo, regional economist with the Boise office of Idaho Commerce and Labor. A "remarkable" situation, he said.

BANK OF WAL-MART

Bank customer B. Lee Pietro, left, talks with branch manager Steven Keck about opening an account as Scott Kuhn helps customer Jill Steinhagen open a checking account the National Bank of Commerce branch in the Alpharetta, Ga., Wal-Mart, on Jan. 16. Wal-Mart is looking for government permission to move into the banking industry.

Wal-Mart prepares for reaction to bank plans

By Marcus Kappel
Associated Press writer

BENTONVILLE, Ark. — Wal-Mart Stores Inc., ever looking for ways to expand its already huge empire, is asking the government for permission to move into an entirely different industry: running its own in-house bank.

The world's largest retailer will ask the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. Monday for permission to open a bank that can process millions of checks and credit card payments each month. The company says it's not interested in running a consumer bank as well, but some of its opponents still fear such a step could hurt local banks, much like the mom-and-pop stores were during Wal-Mart's rapid expansion.

This is Wal-Mart's fourth bid at running a bank — and its request unleashed an unprecedented flood of comments to the FDIC. In response, the FDIC scheduled its first public hearings ever on a bank application.

There's a landmark battle in both U.S. business and financial services history, said Jerry Comizio, a financial services lawyer for Thacher Proffitt & Wood LLP in Washington D.C. and a former senior attorney with the Securities and Exchange Commission and Deputy General Counsel of the U.S. Department of the Treasury's Office of Thrift Supervision.

Wal-Mart says consumers and retail banks have nothing to fear. It pledges to stay out of branch banking and says it will not provide consumer lending. About 300 institutions operate branches in 1,150 Wal-Mart stores and the company says it doesn't want to compete with them.

For opponents, those assurances ring hollow.

"There is reason to believe that these (Wal-Mart) plans could be expansive. Wal-Mart has attempted on several occasions to enter the full-service banking business," said Art Johnson, head of government relations for the American Bankers Association, in testimony prepared for Monday's hearing. "The ABA

“ The ABA believes that banking is too important to the nation to try such a risky experiment.”

— Art Johnson, head of government relations for the American Bankers Association believes that banking is too important to the nation to try such a risky experiment."

Wal-Mart says it can save money if allowed to operate an in-house bank to handle the 140 million credit, debit card and electronic check payments it handles each year. At present, it pays outside companies to handle those transactions.

In the past five years, Wal-Mart has tried without success to buy financial institutions in California and Oklahoma and partner with a bank in Canada. The California legislature, Congress and regulators blocked those deals over worries about big retailers getting into banking without full bank supervision.

This time, Wal-Mart is applying for a state charter to open a special type of bank called an industrial loan corporation in Utah, where other companies including rival Target Corp. already have one. Target uses its Utah Industrial Bank to issue credit cards for corporate customers and says it has no plans to expand that business.

The charter needs approval from the FDIC, which would supervise and insure its deposits. ILCs are not regulated by the Federal Reserve, which has oversight over traditional banks.

While the Federal Reserve supervises the entire range of a bank's business, including its holding company, state and federal oversight over ILCs does not extend to the commercial companies that run them. Opponents say this means that an ILC's owner can take more business risks than a regular bank and potentially endanger deposits insured by the FDIC.

The first FDIC hearing will be held Monday and Tuesday in Arlington, Va., and a second one on April 25 in Overland Park, Kan.

Concerns are twofold. One is the mixing of banking and commerce — parts of the economy that have traditionally been separate. The other is concern that a Wal-Mart bank could swallow local banks with its national presence and deep pockets, outcompeting even large institutions such as Bank of America, Chase and Wachovia that have also grown at the expense of local ownership.

Community bankers from across the country plan to tell the FDIC they fear an ILC charter would open the door for Wal-Mart to expand into retail banking and drive them out of town.

Small businesses in the community would be forced to seek banking services from their biggest competitor, Wal-Mart," wrote Charles Shover, president of the Kansas Bankers Association, in a letter to the FDIC ahead of his testimony.

From the ABA to unions, critics also argue that a Wal-Mart bank would unfairly concentrate power over retail and consumer and small business lending in one company that is already the largest business in many small towns and rural communities.

Federal Reserve officials have weighed in to urge Congress to close the legal loophole that allows nonfinancial companies like Wal-Mart to open industrial loan corporations.

"The issue here is primarily the law and national policy on the mixing of banking and commerce. Depending on your point of view, Wal-Mart is using a valid legal means or the last remaining loophole in banking law for a nonfinancial institution to obtain a banking charter," said Comizio, formerly with the SEC.

Despite higher prices, U.S. gas use rises

By Kevin G. Hall
Knight Ridder News Service

WASHINGTON — Gasoline prices have reached $3 a gallon in some parts of the nation, and crude oil is hovering close to last summer's record high.

With peak summer-driving season and hurricane season approaching, experts fear that today's high prices might look like a bargain later this year.

"The culprits are geopolitics, changes in the very timeliness produce gasoline, lagging oil production in the Gulf of Mexico — and most of all — us, American consumers."

Despite higher prices for crude oil and gasoline, U.S. demand for fuel continues to grow.

It was up by more than a full percentage point in March and is expected to climb still more when the peak-driving season begins in May.

That will keep gas prices between $2.50 and $3 a gallon — if there are no major disruptions in supply, experts said.

If anything goes wrong with the weather or geopolitics, watch out. "We may see a dip at the day today when we paid $3 a gallon," said Phil Flynn, a vice president and energy expert at Aaron Trading Corp. in Chicago.

Gasoline prices have been rising again after dropping from last summer's record of $3.05 on average for a gallon, reported earlier. The American Automobile Association said Friday that that price now stood at $2.60, 27 cents higher than a month ago and 35 cents higher than in April 2005.

Crude oil prices flirted with $69 a barrel this week on the New York Mercantile Exchange, approaching the all-time high of $70.85 last Aug. 30 immediately after Hurricane Katrina.

What moved prices this week was a report by the Energy Information Administration and the statistical arm of the Energy Department, that showed a larger-than-expected drawdown of U.S. gasoline stocks.

That sparked energy traders because it suggested that refiners can't keep pace with the demand for gas or companies that fear shortages are hoarding.

But an unusual confluence of events is driving the large difference between last year's price and this year's.

"Chief among them is new environmental concerns over a common additive known as methyl tertiary butyl ether, MTBE helps refiners comply with the Clean Air Act requirements by making smog-burn more cleanly and emit fewer toxic byproducts.

Some states — most notably California, New York and Connecticut — have banned MTBE, however, because it contaminates groundwater, and on May 5 the federal government no longer will require refined gasoline to contain at least 2 percent by weight of additives such as MTBE.

Stocks slide as inflation fears persist

NEW YORK (AP) - Solid employment data renewed Wall Street's inflation worries and sent stocks sliding Friday, with a bond selloff overshadowing a fresh drop in oil prices. The major indexes ended the week little changed. Although investors were encouraged by a modestly better-than-expected job growth for March - signaling a healthy but not overheating economy - an uptick in hourly earnings again stoked concerns about tight labor market lifting wages and driving inflation. That's what you see, says Michael Gregory, a senior economist at BMO Nesbitt Burns.

"The fact that we've had that decent growth, as long as it isn't associated with inflation risk, is generally good for equity markets," Gregory said. "But we see that wage pressures remain elevated. From that perspective, (the report is) neutral."

Fears that the Federal Reserve's plan to raise interest rates to mitigate inflation pressures triggered a second day of steep losses for the bond market, which contributed to stocks' decline. The Dow Jones industrial average sank 96.46, or 0.86 percent, to 11,120.04.

Breadcrumb stock indicators also fell after reaching five-year highs in the prior session. The Standard & Poor's 500 index lost 13.54, or 1.03 percent, to 1,295.50, and the Nasdaq composite index fell 22.15, or 0.94 percent, to 2,339.02.

Bonds slumped alongside stocks, with the yield on the benchmark 10-year Treasury note jumping to 4.96 percent from 4.89 percent late Thursday. Scott Merritt, U.S. equity strategist for PIMCO Asset Management, notes that the 10-year Treasury yield crossing 5 percent would be a negative factor for the market.

"Really what you're seeing is a reaction of the equity market to bond yields," Merritt said. "Higher interest rates mean future earnings are worth less, which means stocks are worth less."

The dollar was mixed against most major currencies, and gold prices retreated after topping $600 per ounce Friday for the first time since 1981.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

Bobby Wolff

"Constant togetherness is fine — but only for Siamese twins."

— Victoria Billings

Today's deal comes from a monthly par contest in the United Kingdom, prepared and overseen by the Sharples twins, Bob and Jim, who represented England in the 1950s.

On par deals, points are gained by bidding to the right contract, then the opening lead is directed, and further points are available for the play.

Here, four spades was the prescribed contract, and West was directed to lead the diamond queen. The defense took the first two tricks, then got credit for leading a third diamond, ruffed low in dummy.

Dummy's king of trumps came next, and the fall of East's 10 should have hoisted danger signals. What should declarer do now? If the spades break 4-1, there could well be problems in reaching the South hand to draw trumps.

Say that you play ace, king and another club, which you ruff in hand. West overruffs and leads a heart, locking you firmly in dummy once again.

You optimistically cash a second top heart and lead a third, ruffing in hand. But again West overruffs, setting the contract.

The solution is simple, once you see it. Cash two top clubs, then two top hearts (the Dentist's Crump), stripping the South hand of all cards outside the trump suit. Now exit dummy with a club or a heart and ruff low.

What can West do? If he overruffs, it is with a natural trump trick, and any return can be taken in hand by declarer, who will then draw trumps.

NORTH: ♠ K 4, ♥ A K Q 10 8, ♦ K 6, ♣ A K 7 3. EAST: ♠ 10, ♥ J 7 4 3, ♦ A 5 2, ♣ Q 10 9 8 2.

SOUTH: ♠ A Q 7 5 3 2, ♥ 6 2, ♦ 5 4, ♣ 8 4.

Vulnerable: Both

Dealer: North

The bidding:

South West North East: 2♣ Pass, 2♥ Pass, 2♦ Pass, 3♠ All pass.

Opening lead: Diamond queen

BID WITH THE ACES

South holds: ♠ 10, ♥ J 7 4 3, ♦ 5 4, ♣ 8 4.

South West North East: 1♥ Pass, 1♦ Pass, 1♣ Pass, 2♠ All pass.

ANSWER: Support your partner with a call of three diamonds. You can always get to no-trump on the next round, but in the meantime your excellent diamond support cannot be kept hidden.
