Idaho Power will lower rates

By Michelle Dunlop
 Times-News writer

BOISE — Forget the governor's $50 energy rebate.
 Perhaps legislators had some sort of premonition of this year's electricity rates when they rejected the rebate idea this session. At least, that's what it will feel like when the average resident sees a decrease of about $10 in his or her monthly Idaho Power bill this June.
 "We've never had any decrease like this," said Ilic Gale, vice president of Idaho Power's regulatory affairs.
 On Wednesday, power company officials filed their annual power cost adjustment with the Idaho Public Utilities Commission. The company is asking for the largest percentage decrease to consumer rates in Idaho Power's history, Gale said.

 The power company's rate is evaluated in two components. The base, or general, rate encompasses everything from personnel to chairs for Idaho Power's conference rooms.
 The power cost adjustment portion comprises fuel, power purchases and power sales.
 In October, the company filed its general rates case, which called for a 3.2 percent increase. Given that all interested parties in the case have agreed, the PUC could concur with the $18.1 million increase later this month.
 That increase, however, would be offset by Wednesday's proposed power cost adjustment decrease, Gale said.

Each April, company officials estimate their power costs for the next year.
 The following year, they ask the PUC to approve a rate increase or decrease based on how accurate the previous year's estimate was.
 Last year, Idaho Power officials guessed the drought would drag on, meaning lower production at the company's hydroelectric dams.
 But, Mother Nature surprised everyone with an abundant water year, resulting in a $123.5 million surplus to be used to lower customer rates this year.
 "In good water years, we can create more power through the dams," Gale said.
 The PUC does still need to evaluate the request, but the process will likely be shorter given the company is asking for a drop rather than a spike in rates, said Gene Fadness, spokesman for the utilities commission.

 Additionally, customers could see a rate decrease in June 2007, Idaho Power also said its excess sulfur dioxide emission credits to other companies with less advanced emissions controls.
 The company will hold those revenues of $42.1 million in a rainy day account for a year.
 Those funds could help make up for a bad water year or flow back to customers in a rate reduction in a good water year.

Battle over mercury in vaccines will move arenas

By Myron Levin
 Los Angeles Times

As lawmakers in about 20 states press for bans on mercury in children's vaccines, they are meeting stiff resistance from influential health and medical organizations, including groups that get substantial funding from drug makers and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.
 Seven states have adopted the anti-mercury bills — California being one of the first.
 California's law, passed in 2004 and to take effect July 1, will prohibit shots with more than a trace of thimerosal for pregnant women and children younger than 3. In recent weeks, similar bills have been defeated in at least five states.
 The push for legislation comes long after the uproar over continuing use of thimerosal, a mercury-based antibacterial agent, appeared to subside in 1999, when manufacturers began phasing it out of routine pediatric vaccines.

Bracing FOR A FLOOD

Lincoln County crews reinforce river channel

By Karma M. Fitzgerald
 Times-News writer

SHOSHONE — Construction crews will spend today shoring up a section of the Big Wood River channel in hopes of preventing a breach.
 Lincoln County Commissioner Jerry Nance announced Monday the commissioners have authorized work to begin on a section of the river about 15 miles north of Shoshone on property owned by the Gordon Sorenson family. In an afternoon briefing, Nance told Lincoln County officials that the 2,500-by-30 foot section of the channel would be vulnerable if excess water put pressure on the river wall.

 "There is no eminent threat at this time," Nance said. "We're taking precautionary measures."
 The flow of water into Magic Reservoir slowed a bit Wednesday, giving local disaster agencies and canal company officials a few hours respite to prepare for potential flooding. Nance, who also sits on the board of the Big Wood Canal Company, said the company is considering putting some boards over the spillway gates to give construction crews more time to build up the weak section of the river channel. Nance said the work should take three days and cost between $60,000 and $100,000. Nance said Lincoln County will foot the bill initially, but is expecting financial support from federal, state and other local governments.

 State and privately owned gravel pits were filled with water Wednesday as water rushed through the normally dry river channel, cutting off one road. The Sorenson family has lived here since 1922, when Gordon Sorenson's parents settled in this peaceful stretch of ranch land just south of Shoshone Ice Caves.

 These days Sorenson and his family are keeping a close eye on the river, hoping the water will come in a slow and steady rise rather than a big rush. Sorenson, now 72, remembers the flood waters that covered the ranch in 1952.
 Water marks nearly 5 feet high are still visible on at least one building, Sorenson said he and his son Tracy, Please see FLOODING, Page A2

Migrants aim to get families across tight U.S. border

Los Angeles Times

PHOENIX — When Alejandro Severino crossed illegally into the United States in 1999, there was no going back.
 As security tightened on the U.S. side of the border — new barriers were built and Border Patrol agents added — a return to central Mexico to visit his wife and child included the risk he might not get back to his job in Phoenix.
 It made easier the difficult decision to have his family join him.
 Because it is harder to cross the border, studies show that illegal immigrants who intend to be in the U.S. for limited stretches may be bringing their families with them — to settle permanently.
 Today, Severino and his wife own an avocado-colored four-bedroom ranch house in a suburb where their 9-year-old son Diego attends elementary school. Their story is typical.
 "A hundred people come from Mexico to the U.S., but only 20 go from the U.S. to Mexico," Severino said. "If you return, the border is more dangerous now than ever. How will you get back?"
 Surveys show that in 1992, 20 percent of illegal Mexican immigrants returned home after six months, but only 7 percent did in 2000.
 "The net effect of the militarization of the border since 1993 has been to transform a circular movement of male workers to a settled population of families," said Douglas Massey of Princeton University sociologist. "Once they're here, they hunker down to stay longer."
 Massey and other analysts argue

Coming up
 The move to legalize illegal Mexican immigrants brings up mixed emotions among Hispanics and Gobs in the Magic Valley who are waiting to legally bring their families to the United States.

 who also lives on the ranch, have developed some tentative plans on where to move livestock and equipment, if necessary.

"We've got to where we can get it out if we have to," he said. "I don't look for it to get that bad, but maybe it will."

He said the biggest worry is just not knowing what the water will do if it comes through the big pictures depicting what happened the last time the river flooded, 54 years has changed the landscape considerably.

"There was a coulee running just past that machine shed," he said. "And this pasture was full of ditches. Everything's been destroyed or filled."

In addition, tons of gravel has been mined out of pits just north of the main section of the ranch. There's simply no way to tell where the water would go first.

Tracy Sorenson and his wife Connie care for 600 head of Holstein heifers here, raising them for a local dairy. Back in 1982, the river rose, but not high enough to cause any damage. They only lost a few calves.

"It'll build up a short section of the river channel that runs past his house and wait to see what happens."

"It's making everybody nervous," he said. "It will just depend on how it comes off."

From their backyard, the family can look north to the mountains and see there is still a lot of snowpack remaining. Connie Sorenson said she's preparing herself for a long spring.

"I'm one thing to survive the Camas County runoff, but the Wood River runoff is still to come," she said. "It's gonna be a 10-week watch."

Throughout the past few days county, state and federal government agencies officials have filtered through the ranch checking structures and gauging the potential for damage.

Scott Stacey of the Idaho Transportation Department said the department has three bridges in the flood line, but all looked good on Wednesday.

"I think we'll be alright," he said. "We just want to help wherever we can."

The Big and Little rivers both run through Gooding and converge just west of the city to form the Malad River. Gooding County officials spent Wednesday in meetings developing contingency plans.

"We're just in a readiness stage like we have been," said Lori Carps, the disaster coordinator for Gooding County.

At the Magic Reservoir, dam officials said the water was up to the base of the spillway late Wednesday and expected it to enter the channel overnight or Thursday morning, depending on inflows.

The river level was at 168.587 acre-feet Wednesday afternoon, up from 159.288 Tuesday.

 migrants returning to their home country for any period of time to dip their feet in the United States.

"Every time we try to solve this problem, we end up shooting ourselves in the foot," said Dr. McClaren, an economist who studies immigration issues at Arizona State University.

Advocates of greater border security acknowledge that it may cause immigrants to stay in the U.S. But they point to census data showing that for 30 years — well before the border was tightened — increasing numbers of people born in Mexico were settling in the United States.

Other factors, they contend, have been more important in pushing the number of illegal immigrants to its current level of well over 11 million.

"Maybe we would have had 10 million" if security didn't cause some crossers to stay in the U.S., said Steve Camarota of the Center for Immigration Studies in Washington, which advocates tougher border enforcement. "But the run-up in illegal immigrants has more to do with a lack in border enforcement and a sense that America isn't serious about its laws."

Often on illegal immigrants is notoriously unreliable, since most undocumented migrants don't want to advertise their presence. But studies show that illegals are staying longer, and suggest the increased difficulty in crossing the border is a factor.

"The probability of Mexicans but many still make the journey. In Mexico, entire villages have emptied as women and children join fathers in the United States. Wayne Cornelius, director of the Center for Comparative Immigration Studies at the University of California, San Diego, surveyed villages in Jalisco in 1995 and again last year. In the first survey, one village and 36 houses abandoned by families moving north; last year the number had grown to 138.

Every illegal crossing comes with its own degree of difficulty. A year after Alejandro Severino entered the United States in 1993, his wife, Aurelia, and 3-year-old child lost their home due to a financial dispute. He told them to come north.

They tried to cross into Arizona with false papers, but U.S. customs inspectors greeted Aurelia for hours and sent her back to the Mexican border town of Agua Prieta.

An American friend returned to Mexico and crossed into Arizona, pretending Severino's name was his own. Aurelia made it across weeks later with a new batch of fake documents. The journey's cost was over $2,000.

"They've settled into life in Phoenix, where Alejandro works as a cook."

But the Severinos live in anxiety that they could be discovered and deported. They did not want their last name public. But she asked, what happens through Alejandro's maternal line, an Ecuadorer who did not give his last name because he feared being deported, dashed across the San Diego border in 1999. He told his three children not to join him — even though they could make far more money in Phoenix than in their mountain town.

"It's too difficult getting in here now," he said.

 But the controversy flared anew when doctors containing thimerosal were added to the childhood immunization schedule in 2004 and the CDC refused to recommend continued use of the shot in infants and pregnant women.

Angered by the CDC's refusal — and fearing a backlash into more thimerosal use — particularly at risk because anti-mercury advocates began pushing for outright thimerosal bans.

"The legislation faces opposition in the Senate from the American Academy of Pediatrics and the Immunization Action Coalition — a stance that anti-mercury advocates say defies logic."

"We're trying to get (mercury) out of the environment," said Marilyn Rasmussen, a Washington state senator and sponsor of a thimerosal bill that was signed into law last month.

"Why would we be injecting it into babies? We've got to be smarter than that."

Mercury can damage the nervous system, and infants and toddlers are thought to be particularly at risk because of their low body weight and rapidly developing brains.

"That concern is behind wide-ranging initiatives to cut mercury pollution from industrial plants and warn pregnant women to limit intake of some types of fish."

The American Academy of Pediatrics and its allies, including some state health departments, say there is no proof that the small amount of mercury in vaccines is harmful.

They argue that legal restrictions could undermine confidence in vaccines — causing people to skip their shots — and lead to shortages.

The academy, an organization of 60,000 pediatricians, has generally taken a zero tolerance stance on mercury, even joining a federal lawsuit seeking stricter controls on power plant emissions.

His father, a doctor, published the controversial paper in July 2001 in the journal Pediatrics, states in part:

"Mercury in all of its forms is Among the donors were vaccine giant Merck & Co. GlaxoSmithKline and Sanofi Pasteur Inc., according to tax filings and academy officials.

The group also got about $150 million from the CDC for several health programs.

Jury hears 9/11 cockpit tape

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — Jurors in the Zacarias Moussoui trial listened Wednesday to a recording of terrified shouts and cries in the cockpit as desertine passengers twice charged panicked hijackers during the final half hour of doomed United Flight 93 on Sept. 11, 2001.

"Is that 10 I mean, shall we pull it down?" one hijacker asked in Arabic 123 seconds before the 757 jetliner slammed into a Pennsylvania field with 33 passengers, seven crew members and four hijackers. "Yes, put it in it, and pull it down," another voice replied in Arabic.

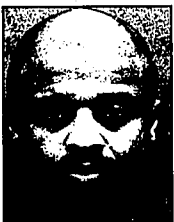

In the remaining two minutes, more voices were heard that earlier, including some that say in English: "Go, Go."

"Move, Move." "Push, push, push, push, push." Then in Arabic: "Give it to me. Give it to me. Give it to me."

Finally in Arabic: "Allah is the greatest. Allah is the greatest. Allah is the greatest."

Then only the roar of static. The government rested its case for executing Sept. 11 conspirator Moussoui shortly after 17 jurors and alternates and 150 audience members became the first people other than investigators and victims' relatives to hear the only audible cockpit recording recovered from the four jetliners hijacked by al-Qaida in the nation's most deadly terrorist attack.

On Thursday, court-appointed defense lawyers will begin arguing that the 37-year-old Frenchman, who was in jail in Minnesota on 9/11, played a small role and had such mental problems that he deserves life in prison instead of execution.

The jurors couldn't take their eyes off the video screens — even during long silent periods — as prosecutors used a multi-media presentation to try to put them inside the Flight 93 cockpit.

Slumped in his chair and impassive, Moussoui, too, watched intently.

A transcript, which translated Arabic into English and converted many nearly inaudible sounds into text, scrolled up the side of the screen. Synchronized with the text and drawn from the recovered flight data recorder, dials showed the plane's speed, altitude and wing attitude compared with the horizon. Other indicators showed the autopilot, the steering ing yoke position and the plane's trajectory.

Despite the detail and because the cockpit ceiling microphone can pick up sounds from the passenger cabin, particularly if the cockpit door is open, there were multiple interpretations of the final seconds.

The 30-minute tape begins with a hijacker saying in English: "Please sit down. Keep remaining seated. We have a bomb on board. So sit." There follows several minutes of commands such as: "Don't move." "Shut up." "Down, down, down, sit down."

Nearly six minutes in, a voice in English talks the passengers. "We are going back to the airport, and we have our demands. So please remain quiet. The San Francisco-bound plane then turns over western Pennsylvania back toward the East Coast.

During a period of quiet, apparently unbeknownst to the hijackers, passengers with cell phones learn that jets have crashed into the World Trade Center. But the hijackers detect something is up. One says in English: "The guys will go in, lift up the (unintelligible) and they put the ax in it. So, everyone will be scared."

The transcript gives no further clues about the "unintelligible" object. But the Sept. 11 Commission says the hijackers may have killed or silenced a flight attendant by this point.

Four minutes later, the hijackers notice a fight in the cabin. One says in Arabic: "Let's go, guys. Allah is greatest." After grunts and shouting, another says in Arabic: "They want to get in here. Hold, hold from the inside." The hijacker pilot begins waggling the wings up and down, apparently to knock the passengers off balance.

Another minute of shouts in English: "Hold the door." "Stop him." "Sit down." Much is unintelligible.

Then 30 seconds past 9:59 a.m., an enormous crash: metal against metal, glass breaking, plastic cracking. The Sept. 11 Commission theorized passengers used a drink cart to ram the cockpit door. More unintelligible shouting follows.

Seven seconds after 10 a.m., in Arabic: "Is that it? Shall we finish it off?" Another hijacker, also in Arabic: "When they all come, we finish it off."

Six seconds later in English: "I'm injured." Ten seconds later in English: "In the cockpit, if we don't, we'll die." Followed quickly by a second loud crash of metal, glass and plastic runned together hard.

The hijacker pilot is pushing the steering yoke forward and back, perhaps to throw the attacking passengers to the floor. The tail sags, sounding the stall alarm. Then the nose comes back down, silencing it.

Then just 123 seconds before the crash, one hijacker asks again in Arabic, "Is that it?" A cacophony of new voices joins the shouting over the next two minutes. The plane rolls belly up and noses over, then crashes.

Retired general joins call for Rumsfeld to resign

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The retired commander of key forces in Iraq called Wednesday for Donald Rumsfeld to step down, joining several other former top military commanders who have harshly criticized the secretary of defense's authoritarian style for making the military's job more difficult.

"I think we need a fresh start" at the top of the Pentagon, retired Army Maj. Gen. John Batiste, who commanded the 1st Infantry Division in Iraq in 2004-05, said in an interview. "We need leadership up there that respects the military as they expect the military to respect them. And that leadership needs to understand teamwork."

Batiste noted that many of his peers feel the same way. "I speak volumes that guys like me are speaking out from retirement about the leadership climate in the Department of Defense," he said in another interview earlier Wednesday on CNN. Batiste's comments resonate especially within the Army because it is widely known there that he was offered a promotion to three-star rank to return to Iraq and be the No. 2 U.S. military officer there, but declined because he no longer wished to serve under Rumsfeld. Also, before going to Iraq, he worked at the highest level of the Pentagon, serving as the senior military assistant to Paul Wolfowitz.

then the deputy secretary of defense.

Batiste said that he believes the administration's handling of the Iraq war has violated fundamental military principles, such as unity of command and unity of effort. In other interviews, Batiste has said that he thinks that the violation of another military principle of ensuring there is an adequate number of forces helped create the Abu Ghraib abuse scandal by putting too much responsibility on incompetent officers and undertrained troops.

His comments follow similar recent high-profile attacks on Rumsfeld by three other retired flag officers, amid indications that many of their peers feel the same way.

States hand in teacher numbers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unless federal pressure, most states are close to getting teachers who are rated highly qualified in front of every math, history, language and other core class by the end of the school year. Or so they say.

Thirty-three states claim 90 percent to 99 percent of their main classes have teachers who are highly qualified. That means, based on the No Child Left Behind law, that those teachers have a bachelor's degree, a state license and proven competency in every subject they teach.

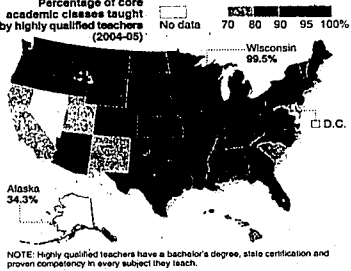

Most of the other states put their numbers at 80 percent to 89 percent — and a few are way behind, according to a review of new state data by The Associated Press.

The accuracy of those accounts is now under review by the Education Department, which is checking not just total numbers but also the figures within poor and struggling schools.

President Bush and Congress have promised parents that 100 percent of core classes will have highly qualified teachers by the end of the school year.

Higher standards set for teachers

States are required to have a highly qualified teacher in every core class by the end of this school year. All states report their own numbers, but the Education Department is reviewing them for accuracy.

NOTE: Highly qualified teachers have a bachelor's degree, state certification and proven competency in every subject they teach.

SOURCE: Dept. of Education

That pledge is a big part of Bush's education law, the pride of his domestic agenda. Within a few years, if any expected to reach full compliance on time, the department plans to allow an extra year to states that have shown a good-faith effort. States could lose millions of dollars in aid if federal officials don't see enough progress.

"What we're trying to measure is whether states are on track," said Rep. DeSlo, who oversees teacher quality for the department's elementary and secondary education office. "They don't necessarily have to be at 100 percent, but they have to be pretty close, and they have to be pretty close in all of the areas we're measuring." Among the things states must prove they have: "Set a fair definition of 'highly qualified.' Although the federal law sets the parameters, states have huge leeway when it comes to qualifying their veteran teachers."

Provided parents with a clear picture of how many classes are taught by qualified teachers. This is supposed to happen in state, district and school report cards.

Given complete and accurate data about their teacher corps to the Education Department, including the disparities between poor and wealthier schools.

New Orleans is wasting a big green opportunity, environmentalists say

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — In the rush to rebuild after this hurricane-smashed city is dumping its debris into the swamps by the truckload — and throwing away an opportunity to turn America's costliest natural disaster into the nation's greatest recycling effort, environmentalists say.

Every day, trucks rumble down the streets on their way to the Old Gentilly Landfill, a municipal dump in the swampest part of the city, to unload the debris that homeowners and contractors have piled up on the curbs throughout New Orleans.

With large-scale home demolitions now beginning, there are no comprehensive, city-wide plans to salvage and recycle building materials — things such as cypress and cedar boards, bricks, cinderblocks and roof tiles.

"We don't have the time," said John Rogers, the Louisiana Department of Environmental Quality's recycling specialist. He cited the sheer volume of debris created by Katrina — 30 years' worth of the stuff, officials say.

But environmentalists say that in the seven months since Katrina hit, there has been plenty of time for city, state and Federal Emergency Management Agency officials to draw up contracts to recycle debris, buy recycling equipment and put people to work sorting through the rubble.

"In getting woken up every morning with demolition crews hauling off cedar beams, good stuff," complained Oliver

Asher Griffith top, and Jeremy Maxwell-Parish salvage what they can from a home damaged by Hurricane Katrina in the Lower Ninth Ward of New Orleans last month. Wood and other materials they salvage will be re-sold at the Green Project, a nonprofit recycling center.

Hoek, a Tulane University environmental law professor. "Once again, we're a day late, a dollar short."

Katrina generated about 25 million cubic yards of "green debris" — the limbs, trunks, leaves, dead bushes — or enough to fill the Louisiana Superdome nearly twice.

Some of that is being incinerated, and some is being used as cover at landfills.

But other eco-friendly ideas have been shot down, or gone nowhere.

Among them: a proposal to put debris at the Old Gentilly Landfill into a plasma furnace capable of generating energy-producing gas.

Some things are, in fact, being recycled. So far, flooded vehicles like cars, vans and trucks and hundreds of thousands of refrigerators, washing machines and other appliances have ended up at the state.

As for the rest of the debris, some builders, restoration experts, artists and grass-roots organizations have seen value in it, but they are taking only a tiny bite out of the mountain of waste.

Stefano Velacka, a French Quarter jeweler fond of using recycled material, is making earrings, brooches and necklaces out of a copper roof that Katrina blew into the street.

"I'm set for 100 years," Velacka said of all the trash in the city. The damage Katrina did is "ugly," he said, "and I'm trying to bring the ugly back to beauty."

In the Lower Ninth Ward, crews and volunteers with relief groups like Mercy Corps and AmeriCorps are "deconstructing" homes: salvaging bathroom fixtures and cypress wood. The material can be used to repair historic homes or give new places an old-world feel.

"It's good lumber," said Mercy Corps carpenter Preston Brownings. "If it's kept dry, it will last forever."

Jury decides fate of man who drowned three kids

BLOOMINGTON, Ill. (AP) — A man convicted of killing his three former girlfriends' three children by letting them drown as their car rolled into a lake was sentenced to life in prison.

Maurice LaGrone Jr. was convicted Tuesday after prosecutors argued that he and the children's mother planned the deaths at Clinton Lake on Sept. 2, 2003, with the children inside.

Defense attorneys had argued that LaGrone, 30, made bad decisions, such as parking too close to the water on a boat ramp, but did not intentionally drown the children.

Prosecutors had sought the death penalty. The jury on Wednesday, however, determined that he shouldn't be eligible for execution.

LaGrone was found guilty of three counts of first-degree murder in the deaths of 6-year-old Christopher Hamm, 3-year-old Austin Brown and 23-month-old Kyeigh Hamm.

The children's mother, Amanda Hammit, 30, faces identical charges at a later trial.

FEMA official: Homes need to be raised three feet

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — New federal advisories on flooding and levee protection indicate many of the city's flood-damaged homes will likely have to be raised one to three feet to qualify for flood insurance, a FEMA official said Wednesday.

The government recommendations, issued more than seven months after Hurricane Katrina hit, have been eagerly awaited by New Orleans residents and public officials. The advisories, which are based on President Bush's new pledge to seek an additional $2.5 billion to raise levees, are considered crucial for residents now deciding whether or how to rebuild their homes and businesses.

They also will be key factors in planning the area's reconstruction.

"This will enable people to get on with their lives," Donald Powell, the federal coordinator for Gulf Coast hurricane recovery, told reporters as he announced Wednesday that the advisories were ready.

David Maurstad, an official with the Federal Emergency Management Agency, said that the advisories essentially say that homes substantially damaged by the storms likely will have to be raised up to three feet before they can be rebuilt and qualify for flood insurance.

"Flood walls that go up now, saying three feet is not that dramatic an increase. Homes that already exceed current flood elevations won't need to be raised, even if destroyed last year, because the new guidelines are based on the assumption that levees now being repaired and improved will not fail."

Bush statement on WMD based on false information

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House faced new questions Wednesday about President Bush's contention three years ago that weapons of mass destruction had been found in Iraq.

Bush knew what he was saying was false. But ABC News did during a report on "Good Morning America," and McClellan demanded an apology and an on-air retraction.

ABC News said later in a clarification on its Web site that Charles Gibson had erred. McClellan said he had received an apology.

Bush is nothing more than relishing an old issue that was resolved long ago," McClellan said. "I cannot count how many times the president has said the intelligence was solid in general.

"The intelligence community makes the assessment," he said. "The White House is not the intelligence-gathering agency."

CIA spokeswoman Jennifer Dyck declined to speak specifically about the classified field report but said in general that producing a finished intelligence report takes time, coordination, debate and vetting.

"This is not a fast process, especially when dealing with complex issues," she said. "It is not typically something that happens in a matter of hours."

The trailers — along with aluminum tubes acquired by Iraq for what was believed to be a nuclear weapons program — were primary pieces of evidence offered by the Bush administration before the war to support its contention that Iraq was making weapons of mass destruction.

Intelligence officials and the White House have repeatedly denied claims that intelligence was exaggerated or manipulated in the months before the U.S.-led invasion of Iraq in March 2003.

"We have found the weapons of mass destruction," Iraq said in an interview with a Polish TV station. "We found biological laboratories."

Bush spokesman Scott McClellan said Wednesday that Bush was relying on information from the Central Intelligence Agency and the Defense Intelligence Agency when he said the trailers seized after the 2003 invasion were mobile biological laboratories.

That information was later discredited by the Iraq Survey Group in its 2005 report.

The CIA and DIA publicly issued an assessment one day after the Pentagon team's report arrived in Washington that said U.S. officials were confident that the trailers were used to produce biological weapons.

McClellan said it was unclear whether officials at the White House were aware of the contradictory field report when Bush repeated the claim in the television interview.

"It and when the White House became aware of this particular issue, I'm looking into that matter," McClellan said. "The White House has asked the CIA and the DIA to go and look into that issue."

"The Post did not say that

Speaker will convene Iraqi parliament

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Shiite politicians cast doubt Wednesday on a plan to convene parliament next week, saying they still have not decided whether to replace the Shiite candidate for prime minister to break a deadlock over forming a new government.

Four more American soldiers were killed in Iraq, the U.S. military said as the U.S. death toll for the month surpassed the total for all of March.

More than 40 Iraqis also died, including at least 22 in a car bombing near a Shiite mosque northeast of Baghdad.

Parliament Speaker Adnan Pachachi, a Sunni Arab, said at a nationally televised press conference that he would call parliament into session Monday to push forward efforts to form a new government, which have been stalled for weeks over who will serve as prime minister.

"It is my duty to the Iraqi people in order to preserve the credibility of the democratic process," Pachachi said.

Iraq voters chose the 275-member assembly Dec. 15, but the legislature met briefly only once last month because the country's ethnically and religiously based parties have not agreed on a new government of national unity.

Tuks stalled after Sunnis and Kurds refused to accept the Shiite nominee, Prime Minister Ibrahim al-Jaafari, to head the new government, which must be approved by parliament.

The Shiite alliance of seven parties has the biggest bloc of members in the assembly, but needs support from other factions to install a government.

Shiite officials have been discussing what to do for weeks but cannot decide.

Pachachi said Shiite politicians told him they hoped to have the break the deadlock in time for Monday's session.

"There are indications that cause us to be optimistic that an agreement will be reached on all the sticking points regarding forming a national unity government," the former foreign minister said.

But key Shiite leaders said a session was unlikely until they decided who gets top posts, including prime minister.

"Things don't look good right now," said Ridha Jawad Taqi, a leading figure in the biggest Shiite party. "We cannot go to parliament if there's no agreement" on key posts, including the presidency.

Shiites get to nominate the prime minister because they are the largest bloc, but the presidency, parliament speaker and some Cabinet posts are to go to different religious and ethnic groups.

U.S. military investigates stolen files in Afghanistan

BAGRAM, Afghanistan (AP) — The U.S. military said Wednesday it was investigating the sale of computer files with seemingly sensitive military data stolen from inside its headquarters in Afghanistan.

The flash-memory drives were taken by some of the hundreds of Afghans working as janitors, office staff and interpreters at the Bagram base, according to a shopkeeper outside the base who was selling them.

He spoke on condition of anonymity because of fears he would be arrested.

Four of the drives, which connect to a computer's USB port and also are called pen, thumb or key drives, reviewed by the Associated Press on Wednesday contained personal letters and biographies of soldiers, lists of troops who completed nuclear, chemical and biological warfare training, and the Social Security numbers of four U.S. generals and dozens of other officers.

News of the security breach was first reported by the Los Angeles Times on Monday.

The paper said its reporter reviewed files containing classified military assessments of enemy targets, names of corrupt Afghan officials and descriptions of American defenses.

The shopkeeper showed a plastic bag containing about 15 flash drives and said they were on sale for between $20 and $50, depending on their memory capacity. He said he was not interested in the data stored on them.

U.S. military spokesman Lt. Mike Cody said the matter was being investigated and that the military takes "operational security seriously."

"We will not comment in detail on these reports, but the circumstances are being reviewed," he said. "More information will be provided as it becomes available."

Military investigators Wednesday were scouring the market in search of the drives.

Sextuplets were a scam

By Matt Sedensky
Associated Press writer

GIRAIN VALLEY, Mo. — The library books on multiple births crowded the couple's coffee table. The husband-turned-nurse awaited the arrival of six newborns.

But in the end, authorities say Sarah and Kris Everson never had the sextuplets as claimed. All they had was what appears to be a big lie.

The couple's dramatic story had holes in it from the start — from their mysterious withholding of information for more than a month to the unanimous response of area hospitals that they hadn't helped deliver the newborns.

On Tuesday, authorities said the mystery had been solved — the entire tale was deemed a hoax aimed at tapping the generosity of others to pay the couple's mounting bills.

"I have never dealt with anything like this," Police Chief Aaron Ambrose said. "The level of fraud like this involving people, I have not."

Gary Bradley, the city administrator, said charges against the Eversons were forthcoming. Prosecutors had not yet determined whether the couple profited from the scam or whether they would qualify for charges beyond the municipal level.

The Eversons — Sarah, 45, and Kris, 33 — claimed to have given birth to four boys and two girls on March 8. The babies were apparently in intensive care.

The tale exploded in the local spotlight Monday when The Examiner in Independence ran on its front page a photograph of the couple holding six one-piece baby outfits and announcing the births.

Those who heard the Eversons' scam story of tight finances set up a Web site to solicit contributions — including a van, washer and dryer, cash and gift certificates. A real estate agent was even working to find the family new housing.

Rice: Council will consider 'strong steps' against Iran

WASHINGTON (AP) — Denouncing Iran's successful enrichment of uranium as unacceptable to the international community, Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice said Wednesday the U.N. Security Council must consider "strong steps" to induce Tehran to change course.

Rice, who telephoned Mohammed ElBaradei, the head of the International Atomic Energy Agency, to ask him to reinforce demands that Iran comply with its nonproliferation requirements when he holds talks in Tehran on Friday.

While Rice took a strong line, she did not call for an emergency meeting of the Council, saying it should consider action after receiving an IAEA report by April 26. She did not elaborate on what measures the United States would support, but economic and political sanctions are under consideration.

The European Union is considering travel restrictions on Iranian officials, but White House and State Department spokesmen said what the Security Council might be asked to do was under discussion.

"It's time for action and that's what the secretary was expressing," Scott McClellan, the White House spokesman, said. "The president wanted to make sure that she made that very clear to all they were listening."

In this photo provided by the Everson family, shown is Sarah Everson, apparently pregnant with sextuplets, date unknown. The couple's dramatic account of newborn sextuplets turned out Tuesday to be nothing more than an elaborate scam.

Hours before admitting it was a scam, Sarah Everson showed an Associated Press reporter pictures of her in maternity clothes, her baring a huge pregnant-looking midsection, even sonogram images she claimed were of her infants. She showed off a tiny nursery, a closet full of baby clothes and the tiny diapers premature newborns must wear.

She said the entire story of her children's births was being kept secret by a court order enacted because a member of her husband's family was trying to kill the Eversons and their new sextuplets.

"I'm so afraid they're not going to make it," she sobbed. "Nobody understands how hard this is. I know that they're here. I know what I had to go through to get them here."

Sarah Everson said a detective began questioning her Tuesday evening. Bradley and Ambrose said the Eversons were interviewed at the police station for about an hour, during which they revealed the story was a scam. They were released pending charges.

the sextuplets over concerns of accuracy. Reached by phone late Tuesday, Sarah Everson offered no explanation. "I'm not talking to anybody right now," she said. "I've seen nobody get it."

The Web site soliciting gifts was taken down Tuesday night. Examiner Editor Dale Brendel said he was considering a front-page column to readers addressing the issue. He said the incident would force a review of his reporters' verification practices.

"I think that we fell victim to the hoax. There were people out in the community who were doing fund-raisers already, and we feel bad for them and for us that we were the victims of that," Brendel said. "In retrospect, there were things we could have done better from a newspaper standpoint, in terms of our investigations and trying to flesh out some of the red flags there were about the story."

Travelers may have caused mumps epidemic

ATLANTA (AP) — Two infected airline passengers may have helped spread Iowa's mumps epidemic to six other Midwestern states, health officials said Wednesday, the latest example of how quickly disease can spread through air travel.

The mumps epidemic is the nation's first in 20 years. Health officials say 515 suspected cases have been reported in Iowa, and the disease also has been seen in six neighboring states, according to the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

As of Monday, Nebraska has 43 reported cases; Kansas, 33; Illinois, four; Missouri, four; Wisconsin, four; and Minnesota, one.

4-H teenagers will try to 'Get Your Goat' for seventh time

RUPERT — The Minidoka County 4-H Teen Association is trying to 'Get Your Goat' — for a good cause.

For the seventh annual 'Get Your Goat' fundraiser Friday, April 14 teen association members will travel around Boise, Oregon with their goats, hoping business or individuals will donate at least $10 to send the goat somewhere else. The idea for this fundraiser came from the teen association in Phillips County, Mont.; a group that participated in the state exchange with Minidoka County 4-H Teens a few years ago.

In the past, the fundraiser has raised more than $1,000. This year the money will help area 4-H teens fund expenses for their exchange this summer to Guadalupe County, Texas.

Last summer the Minidoka County 4-H Teens hosted Minnesota. Minidoka County 4-H Teens hosted their counterparts from Minnesota, showing them interesting sites in the Mini-Cassia and Twin Falls area. In addition to Minnesota, the Minidoka County 4-H Teens have participated in exchanges with Indiana, Kansas and Montana.

To deliver a goat or to donate money for the exchange, call the Minidoka County 4-H office at 436-7104.

AARP OFFICERS

BASKETS FOR KIDS

N. Talamantes and Jason Rogers help fill Easter baskets for the annual Easter egg hunt for physically and mentally challenged children. The event is sponsored by the Cassia Sheriff's Benevolent Association and will be held at 10 a.m. Saturday, April 15 at Freedom Park, next to the airport in Burley.

T.F. graduate completes Army Aviation Flight School

1st Lt. Jared Jacobson, son of Bill and Maurine Jacobson of Twin Falls, has graduated from the U.S. Army Aviation Flight School at Fort Rucker, Ala.

Jacobson will be stationed at Hunter Army Air Field, Savannah, Ga., as a blackhawk helicopter pilot. His wife, Brianna, daughter Savannah, and son Liam will be with him.

Jacobson is a graduate of Twin Falls High School and the College of Southern Idaho.

COMMUNITY EVENTS

Horticulture program offers free workshops

TWIN FALLS — The College of Southern Idaho Horticulture Program is offering two free workshops to students and the public this week.

• A 'Garden and Yard Care Shortcuts' brown-bag program will be held from noon to about 1:30 Friday at the CSI Greenhouse. Program professor Dawn Klesig will explain techniques on working smarter, not harder, in your yard.

• Klesig and his students will lead the second annual Fruit Tree Pruning workshop from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday in the old Perrine orchard adjacent to Centennial Park in the Snake River canyon. Participants are urged to bring all kinds of trimming and cutting tools ranging from shears to loppers and saws. About 12:30 p.m., refreshments will be provided and all green seedlings will be given to all participants to commemorate Arbor Day in Twin Falls County.

For more information, contact Dawn Klesig at 732-6431 or at ddklesig@csi.edu.

Migrant Council holds egg hunt on Saturday

TWIN FALLS — The Idaho Migrant Council will hold its annual Easter Egg Hunt from 1 to 3 p.m. Saturday at El Milagro Housing, 1122 Washington St. S. Free hamburgers, hot dogs and drinks will be served.

Buhl Library schedules Day of Children parade

BUHL — The Buhl Library will hold its seventh annual Día de los Niños - Day of the Children parade Saturday in Buhl.

The 'Hats Off to Children' theme should encourage children to participate, dress up, decorate or make hats, ride bikes or pull wagons. No motorized vehicles are permitted. Bike riders are encouraged to wear helmets while riding.

The parade will assemble at 9:30 a.m. in the old Merc parking lot, diagonally across from James Hardware. Mayor Chuck Sheridan and the Buhl City Council will be awarding ribbons to all participants from 9:30 to 9:40 a.m.

The parade will start at 9:40 a.m. Police Chief Iton Romero will lead the procession.

The route begins at the corner of Main and 11th streets, travels down Main to Sixth, turns left on Sixth and goes to Eastman Park.

Children are encouraged to join the egg hunt in the park immediately after the parade.

The egg hunt and parade ribbons are coordinated and funded by the Buhl Kiwanis and Buhl Chamber of Commerce. Additional support comes from the city of Buhl, Buhl Police and Fire departments and Buhl Citizens on Patrol. For more information, call the Buhl Public Library at 543-6500.

Literary center accepts applications for workshop

TWIN FALLS — The Log Cabin Literary Center, a Boise-based center for literature arts and an incubator for beginning writers, is now accepting applications for this summer's youth writing workshop.

The camp will be held from 1 to 4 p.m. the week of June 5 in Rooms 106-107 of the Shields building at the College of Southern Idaho.

Tuition is $145, and scholarships are available.

The Log Cabin Summer Camp is a workshop in imaginative writing for students going into fourth through ninth grades who love to write. Led by professional writers, this program was chosen by the National Endowment for the Arts as one of 10 model summer arts programs in the nation.

Students will explore writing poetry and prose, and selected writings will be placed in a statewide anthology.

To register or for more information, visit logcabinlit.org or call (208) 331-8000.

Applications sought for Tech Camp at CSI

TWIN FALLS — The College of Southern Idaho's Community Education Center is now accepting applications for this summer's Tech Camp, set for 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. June 19 to 23 on the CSI campus.

CSI Tech Camp is an opportunity for students age 11 through 17 to learn about technology and gain useful skills to use at school, at home and later in their careers. The camp will provide an opportunity to use state-of-the-art equipment and software.

Participants will receive a CD packed with lots of useful software and demos.

During the week students will get to learn in a hands-on environment a wide variety of advanced computer skills, including Web design and development, digital imaging, computer animation, digital video, digital audio, 3-D animation, video conferencing, desktop publishing, hardware and more.

Cost is $350 per student. A limited number of need-based scholarships are available.

For more information or to request a registration form, visit the CSI Tech Camp Web site at www.csi.edu/techcamp or call the Community Education Center at 732-6289.

Summer Music Fest accepts applications

TWIN FALLS — The Community Education Center at the College of Southern Idaho will take applications for this summer's Music Fest through June 1.

Music Fest is an opportunity for students who have completed seventh through 12th grades to grow musically and socially in a day camp setting from June 26 to 30 on the CSI campus.

Participants will be able to learn from renowned music instructors from CSI, Boise State University, BYU-Idaho and more.

The $115 registration fee covers the program costs and instructional materials for the week, and $25 covers all lunches. Local housing is available for $5 per night with special arrangements by the camp director. Financial aid and family discounts are available. Scholarships are awarded through school auditions.

Applications for scholarship auditions are due by April 30.

Pick up a registration form at the CSI Community Education Center on the second floor of the Taylor Administration Building or call the Community Education Center at 732-6288 for more information.

Parke View care center schedules two events

BURLEY — Parke View Care and Rehabilitation Center has two special events scheduled for this weekend at the center, 2303 Parke Ave.

Volunteers are having a bake sale from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Friday in the lobby. Anyone who wishes is invited to contribute baked foods, come and buy or be a volunteer. For more information, call Joyce Heinze between 9 a.m. and 3 p.m. at 677-3073.

The Activities Department is having an Easter Egg Hunt for residents and their families at 3 p.m. Saturday. For more information, call the activities department at 677-3073.

Domestic abuse support group meets weekly

BURLEY — A SODAS (Survivors of Domestic Abuse) support group is meeting weekly.

The support group is sponsored by the Mini-Cassia Domestic Violence Task Force as a resource for women who have been victims of domestic abuse. Part of the healing process is learning that they are not alone, that they are not at fault and that each person has value. Group meetings emphasize the value of each woman and provide support in the healing process.

Anyone who is or has been a

T.F. student will be honored at banquet

BOISE — Later this month, 10 of the best and brightest among Boise State's Class of 2006 will gather to be honored by the BSU Alumni Association at the university's annual Distinguished Alumni and Top Ten Scholars awards banquet. The event will be at 6 p.m. April 18 in the Student Union. Boise State's 2006 Distinguished and Alumni award winners also will be honored.

The banquet is open to the public. Tickets are available for $25 per person by calling Renee White at (208) 426-1831.

Top Ten Scholars are chosen from among the top 10 percent of Boise State's graduating class for 2005-06. They are selected based on academic performance, recommendation from college deans and extracurricular and research activities. Each student also honors a Boise State professor who was particularly influential to his or her success. This year's award winners, in alphabetical order, and their honored professors are:

Deborah Allen, Twin Falls, is a social science major with a minor in gender studies. The recipient of a McNair Scholars Program scholarship, Allen conducted two research projects on issues affecting blind individuals under the auspices of the program, one of which she presented at the national McNair Scholars Conference last fall. An activist for the rights of blind citizens, she led a committee of people from various government agencies and volunteer organizations to successfully revise Idaho's laws pertaining to people with disabilities who are assisted by animals and need public access. In addition, she has mentored students and served as a guide-dog trainer. Allen hopes to continue to influence the policies of nonprofit human rights organizations. She is a member of the American Council of the Blind, Guide Dog Users Inc. and the Idaho Women's Network. Her honored faculty member is Dr. Virginia Hustung, associate professor of sociology.

Applaud legislators for using some restraint

Legislators will return home this week without a ticker-tape parade and with no gold stickers on their laps. That's too bad, if it were up to us, they'd get a pat on the head from a giant and a baked cookie. Some critics might describe the Legislature's work in 2006 as a waste of time. They'll point to the biggest issues at play, property taxes being one, and say lawmakers struck out.

They didn't ignore aquifer recharge. House Speaker Bruce Newcomb, R-Burley, and Sen. Dean Cameron, R-Tuppers, helped secure state trust water that can be used for recharge. The attorney general's office found water rights dedicated years ago to recharge, and the state fought hard to get them for recharge use.

Our view: High grades go to legislators based on what they didn't do in the 2006 session. What do you think? We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

They didn't ignore aquifer recharge. House Speaker Bruce Newcomb, R-Burley, and Sen. Dean Cameron, R-Tuppers, helped secure state trust water that can be used for recharge. The attorney general's office found water rights dedicated years ago to recharge, and the state fought hard to get them for recharge use.

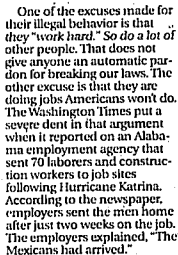

They didn't overspend on highway bonding. Kemphorne's Connecting Idaho plan had to be curbed back on loan projects and total cost. Legislators responded with a $200 million project list to fix the most deficient highways, without borrowing too much on bonds against the future.

They didn't fire all their ammunition. They didn't overhaul property taxes. Legislators were feeling the heat to switch local schools' 3-mill local property tax levy (which assesses' $3 for every $1,000 of taxable value) over to the state sales tax. It was too risky, and legislators held off. They did provide a boost in the homeowners' exemption. As legislative leadership changes in 2007, a new debate will emerge on property tax services and its impact property taxes.

They didn't reform community colleges. In spite of the pressure from Gov. Dirk Kempthorne, the State Board of Education and state legislators, the campaign to create a statewide community college system died on Monday. Like property taxes, the issue isn't going away. But the current plan to create state tax support for some schools, property tax districts for others, was half-baked. Legislators can fully study the issue for the next year. They didn't erode senior water rights. House Bill 800 aimed to change the priority use of state trust water for aquifer recharge. But the bill posed a serious threat to legal precedents on water rights as they pertain to a senior water doctrine. That was the real flaw in the power's legal opposition and the Senate defeated it. And yet...

Flauing the law and its loopholes

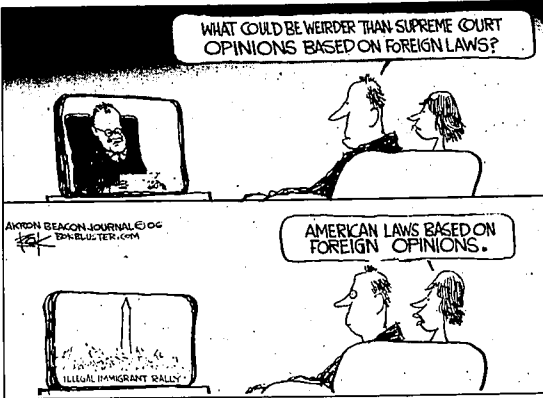

If the Department of Homeland Security were doing its job, it would have joined the Immigration and Naturalization Service, checking identification and employment records for at least some of the millions demonstrating for citizenship in recent days. I thought I'd be afraid to show myself and preferred the shadows for fear of getting caught. No more. They are in our country and in our faces, daring us to catch them. They have nothing to fear because timid politicians won't enforce immigration laws.

One of the excuses made for their illegal behavior is that they "work hard." So do a lot of other people. That does not give anyone an automatic pass for breaking our laws. The other excuse is that they are doing jobs Americans won't do. The Washington Times put a severe dent in that argument when it reported on an Alabama employment agency that sent 70 laborers and construction workers to job sites following Hurricane Katrina. According to the newspaper, employers sent the men home after just two weeks on the job. The employers explained, "The Mexicans had arrived."

Linda Swope, who operates Complete Employment Services, Inc. in Mobile, Ala., described the workers to reporters as very poor American citizens. Alabama residents and predominantly black. Contractors, she said, had "urgently requested" them to help clear debris and clear slow-water areas. But she said the workers were told to leave when the foreign workers showed up. The reason the Mexicans would work for less money, Swope said, "I assure you it is not true that Americans don't want to work."

Democrats, after losing several past elections, may have calculated they must import voters in order to win future ones. Their strategy seems to be to denigrate Republicans for opposing illegal entry into this country. The Democratic message is: when you become legal residents or citizens and can vote, be sure to vote for the party that allowed you to stay and not the party that wanted you to leave. The strategist who came up with that one may live to regret it. The backlash against Democrats who encourage law-breaking may be more severe than any political damage won from the illegal aliens. Expect the usual media polls to show the country divided, but trending toward a "compassionate" policy that would let them stay. As always, poll results will depend on how the questions are asked and the sound bites the networks use from people trained to get their talking points across.

When Congress reconvenes in a little more than a week, the Senate is likely to pass a bill that would grant amnesty without calling it that. The House will then have to stand firm in its majority opposition to any amnesty. The voters should decide this issue, which should be a part of every election campaign. Every member and every candidate running for Congress (and any other office that is even remotely related to our borders and national security) should be asked his or her position on the infiltration by immigration now occurring in our country. Many members of Congress will try to appear tough on illegal immigration to appease angry voters, which is why the public should carefully watch what they do and pay less attention to what they say. This debate is about the character and future of the nation and whether it will continue as it was handed down to us, or change irrevocably in ways that will not promote the general welfare of future generations. No politician should be allowed to trade this country's future for enough votes to stay in office. Any politician who would do that doesn't deserve to hold office.

Why have American citizens been forced to defend themselves against lawbreakers in this debate? Why are those of us born here, or who obeyed the laws in the process of becoming citizens, made to feel like the unwelcome wagon? Since when do those who abide by the law have to accept and indulge those who do not? If you break into my house, do you then have the right to raid the refrigerator and sleep in the guest room? Millions around the world would love the chance to come to America. Are they being sent the message that it is easier to get here illegally than legally?

The House will then have to stand firm in its majority opposition to any amnesty. The voters should decide this issue, which should be a part of every election campaign. Follow the uranium; no the real stuff

Talk about a fearful symmetry: Iran is shipping up real uranium while America was whipped up by fake uranium. Obsessed with going to war against a Middle East country that had no nuclear weapon, the Bush administration lost focus on and leverage over a Middle East country hanging toward a nuclear weapon. That's after the Bush crew lost focus on and leverage over an Asian country that says it has no uranium. To paraphrase Raymond Chandler, if brains were elastic, these guys wouldn't have enough to make suspenders for a parade. While Dick Cheney was getting hooped as he threw out the first pitch for the National Football League, he was bragging that his scientists had concocted enriched uranium. They will now churn out nuclear fuel as fast as they can, and I would argue a bomb? Nah, said the Iranian president, furthest thing from their minds. Speaking before a mural of fluttering white doves, President Mubarak humbly bragged that his scientists had concocted enriched uranium. They will now churn out nuclear fuel as fast as they can, and I would argue a bomb? Nah, said the Iranian president, furthest thing from their minds.

Ahmadinejad and his chorus line of clerics. Hersh quotes a source close to the Pentagon saying that Bush believes "that saving Iran is going to be his legacy," which makes sense, in a way-the camel way, since saving Iraq is not going to be his legacy. The Bush hawks, who have already proven themselves cultural cretins in Iraq, seem to still be a long way from that. Hersh's foreign policy adviser promised. A former defense official told Hersh that the plan was based on an administration belief that "a sustained bombing campaign in Iran will humiliate the religious leadership and lead the public to rise up and overthrow the government." The official's question: "What are they smoking?" Just as Rummy dismissed questions back in August 2002 about a possible invasion of Iraq as a media "trick," even as plans were well under way—the defense chief shrugged off the New Yorker story as "Henry Penny, the sky is falling."

Noting that the president is "on a diplomatic track," He Who Should Be Fired said that while it was obviously concerned about Iran as a country that supports terrorists and wants WMD, "it is just simply not useful to get into fanatical ..."

Yes, the reality-based commentaries of journalists should stay out of fantasyland, which is already overcrowded with hallucinatory Bushies. We defended his authorization of a leak to rebut Joseph Wilson's contention that the administration had hyped up a story about Niger selling uranium to Saddam. "I wanted people to see the truth," the president said. Of course, sometimes in order to help people see the truth, you've got to tell them a big fat lie. As David Sanger and David Barak wrote in The New York Times on Sunday, Scooter's leak about Saddam's efforts to obtain uranium had already been debunked by the time he leaked it. Colin Powell had told The Times that intelligence agencies were "no longer carrying it as a credible item" by early 2003, when the secretary of state was preparing to make the case against Iraq at the U.N. Only Scooter and Dick Cheney were willing to use a faulty bit of intelligence to deflower their war aim. With Watergate, reporters followed the money. With Monica, Ken Starr followed the stain. With WMD, the banana-bread-wants the building—It does not need it. Please join me and vote no on the proposed Pioneer Event Center.

CSI dog was dognone terrorist
On April 8, we took advantage of the College of Southern Idaho's Vet Tech Dog Wash. I want to commend the students for a job well done. They were friendly and took good care of our cowardly dog. We would highly recommend them and wish they held this moie often. I want to also commend CSI for providing many great services for the community in addition to the academics. Other clubs provide the ski swap and the wood working sale. These are all great for the people of the area as well as supporting the students at CSI.

U.S. must ramp up protection of borders
As an American citizen, I am extremely concerned by the huge invasion of illegal aliens. The time has come for some strong action. We must purge our nation of illegal aliens while we still have a nation. I think they can be persuaded to return to their home country if it is made clear that, as illegal aliens, they are criminals and have no rights in the United States and if they will return to their home country and then, and only then, may apply and follow the path of legal immigration, thereby being future American citizens and welcomed into the United States with open arms. Our security and sovereignty is at risk here, and I would urge Americans to call or write to their senators and congressmen and demand they do their jobs. As long as our shores and borders are not secure, we are vulnerable to more terrorist attacks. Come on, folks. Call or write your senators and congressmen. WILLIAM COFFEY, Richfield

Event center the wrong project in wrong place
Regarding the proposed Pioneer Event Center, I have a few comments to make. First, I harshly by my former position at the Pentagon. It is extremely unfair to expect the property owners and taxpayers to foot the bill for this structure. It should be pointed out that even though people are renting their homes, the person who owns the home will probably raise your rent to compensate for the tax hike. On Dec. 21, 2004, Mr. Tim Zearth stated in The Times-News and I quote, "The Twin Falls Fairgrounds is self-supporting. It currently does not receive any tax dollars for operation or improvements." If that's the case, they can find a different way to finance the building. It makes more sense to me to obtain the money by having fundraisers by civic organizations, 4-H clubs, FFA and other events. First, it's wrong place for an event center for many reasons. To name a few, no motels, no restaurants, congested traffic, off the beaten path, strain on existing sewer system and much more. The College of Southern Idaho Expo Center is taking care of most of the larger events, and it can't even ramping close to capacity. Don't be misled by the sugar coating the fair board is putting on the information being withheld. The banana-bread-wants the building—It does not need it. Please join me and vote no on the proposed Pioneer Event Center. I am an ELDER SR. Twin Falls

The real threat to security may be the nation's rising debt

The interview with Rep. Jim Cooper of Tennessee was scheduled for April 7, the final day that Congress would be in session before taking another vacation, this one a two-week break. It was expected to be a busy day in the House, with final floor debate on the budget resolution that would set the nation's fiscal policy for the coming year.

But the House Republican leaders pulled the bill, having failed to negotiate agreement on their side of the aisle between conservatives pressing for spending cuts and moderates trying to protect health and education programs.

So Cooper, a conservative Democrat, had plenty of time to talk about one of the most secretive documents in Washington — the official Financial Report of the United States Government.

Cooper, a member of the Budget Committee, had referred to the document several times during that panel's truncated debate on the budget resolution. Like many of the others in the room — including the legislators — I had no idea what he was talking about. So I went to inquire.

Turns out, there was an excuse for the widespread ignorance. The report had been completed early last December but was issued on Dec. 15. The Treasury Department, which compiled it, did not even put out a press release announcing its existence. Cooper said the total press run was 1,000 copies, and they have now become such rarities that he suggested I could probably take the one he procured for me and put it up for auction on eBay.

You might think that the subject matter is as sensitive as the National Intelligence Estimate that President Bush declassified in order to discredit Joe Wilson. And it is. The cover letter in the report from Treasury Secretary John Snow contains the bad news. Whereas the budget deficit for fiscal 2005 was officially given as $319 billion, "the government's accrual-based net operating cost ... was $760 billion in 2005."

That $760 billion is the real difference between the money the government received and the obligations it added in the last year — in other words, the unfunded costs being passed on to our children and grand-children.

For years, the federal budget has been stated in cash terms, not the accrual accounting method that Cooper said has been in use for five centuries and now mandated for all private corporations etc. The difference, as he explained it, is this:

If you go to Target and buy an item for cash, it's felt in your wallet immediately. If you buy the same item on a credit card, unless you are using accrual accounting, it is disguised until the bill arrives.

The U.S. government has been running up bills — not to the promises of pensions and health care benefits for military veterans and millions of other retirees — without putting the obligations on the books. That is what is really scary about the Financial Report. It contains page after page of graphs showing the probable future course of income and expenditures for Social Security and Medicare, in each chart, the dotted line for spending climbs far faster than the solid line for revenues. Beginning a decade from now, the shortfall explodes in what Cooper calls a "perfect storm" of fiscal ruin.

Cooper is not alone in this worry. David Walker, the head of the Government Accountability Office, the official bookkeeper for Congress, said at a briefing last week that the $760 billion accrual deficit "amounts to $156,000 of debt for every man, woman and child in America. For a family, it's like having a $750,000 mortgage — and no house."

Walker, who has been traveling the country trying to spread the alarm, said flatly that if the tax cuts now in effect are made permanent, as President Bush is requesting, and spending continues to rise at the current rate, "the system blows up. More than half our debt is now financed by foreign countries, and they will exact a price."

Digging out of this mess "will take 20 years," Walker said, but the first step is simply to reassert the budget controls — spending caps and a "pay-as-you-go" rule that requires offsets for any new tax cuts or spending increases.

The Republicans who let those lapse in 2002 refused once again this year to put them back in the budget resolution. But Cooper and several Republicans on the House committee did succeed in adding a requirement to the pending bill that future budget resolutions at least show the accrual deficit numbers — a small gesture toward fiscal responsibility.

The message is clear: Congress today is balking at even minimal actions needed to get a grip on the budget. The long-term problem is far tougher, and will require more leadership and courage than can be found today.

Kramer a proven leader for county government

Terry Kramer will be an excellent county commissioner for Twin Falls County.

We have known Terry for many years. We have socialized, worked on community projects and worked in business with him.

Terry has the ability to see a need and act on that need. He doesn't just talk — he acts. He works hard, he follows through, and he gets things done. When our quick response unit needed a heavy duty vehicle to respond to desert calls, Terry acted. He found the grant, did the necessary research, was instrumental in writing the grant and submitted it in a timely manner. We now have a desert vehicle. Terry also has the ability to work with people. He can hear all sides of an issue and use that information to help people find a common ground from which they can begin working to resolve that issue.

Terry is always true to his convictions and principles, but he is also a mediator with great insight into others' feelings.

Terry is a very successful businessman. He understands finance and time management. He has proven himself to be a leader. He effectively operates his farm and, at the same time, has served on the American Falls Water District Board of Directors, the Twin Falls County Planning and Zoning Commission and numerous other committees to help others in the county.

He is running for Twin Falls County commissioner because he cares about conditions and changes in our country and would like to be actively engaged in the decisions that are being made. We sincerely and enthusiastically endorse Terry Kramer for Twin Falls County commissioner.

Southern Idaho HEALTHGUIDE 2006

Be a part of the Valley's only Medical Directory!

Look for the Guide's improved layout, including:

- A comprehensive address and phone-number listing of all the doctors and dentists in our community in a separate section at the back of the Guide;
- Vital, at-your-fingertips information including the new CPR guidelines and rural emergency First Aid tips;
- And a blank Medical History pullout-page for our readers to complete and keep in their homes.

New residents will turn to the Southern Idaho Health Resource Guide 2006 to find doctors and dentists, and longtime residents will keep the Guide next to their telephone book for reference and for emergency use.

The Guide will be included in the full circulation of The Times-News (over 25,000+ copies) on May 7th and will appear in rack locations of The Wood River Journal in the Sun Valley area. And, for our growing online readership, the Guide will appear at www.magicvalley.com for 6 months.

Bill applies trespassing law to illegals

PHOENIX (AP) — Two days after the immigration march in Phoenix, the Arizona Legislature on Wednesday approved legislation to make illegal immigrants subject to the state's criminal trespassing law.

The Senate approved the bill on a 17-12 vote and the House followed with a 33-27 vote, with both Republican-led chambers voting nearly along party lines.

Supporters of the bill contend it would provide "a second line of defense" behind the Border Patrol by enabling state and local law enforcement officers to arrest illegal immigrants who are often released.

"This is a tool that law enforcement will use in a case-by-case basis. I do not envision large roundups," said Sen. Chuck Gray, R-Mesa.

However, another supporter, Republican Rep. Russell Pearce, said enactment of the measure might encourage many illegal immigrants to leave or avoid Arizona, currently the busiest entry point along the U.S.-Mexico border. "Many of those folks would self-deport," Pearce said.

The bill (SB1157) was sent to Democratic Gov. Janet Napolitano. She declined Wednesday to say what she'll do with it, but her office later released letters from 12 law enforcement groups and officials, including sheriffs in those border counties, urging her to veto the bill.

The bill "represents an enormous untold obligation for state, county and local law enforcement," said Santa Cruz County Sheriff Tony Estrada wrote.

Napolitano, who is running for re-election this year, voted a given year that would have given local and state law enforcement the ability to enforce federal immigration laws.

Sen. Tom Gault, a Lake Havasu Republican who voted for the bill, virtually challenged Napolitano to veto it. "I think she'll pay if she does," he said.

The latest legislative action came one day after House Sen-ate conferees softened possible criminal penalties illegal immigrants could face. The bill also gives law enforcement officers the option of transferring arrested immigrants to federal authorities for deportation instead.

Under the revised version, a first offense would be a misdemeanor punishable by up to six months in jail. The earlier bill made illegal immigrants subject to a felony punishable by up to a year of incarceration. Subsequent offenses would still be a felony, but a lower class of felony than previously proposed.

On Monday, an estimated 100,000 people marched to the State Capitol in an event organizers said was intended to urge Congress to enact comprehensive immigration reform, including a legal pathway toward citizenship for illegal immigrants. Many participants also carried signs critical of a U.S. House-passed immigration bill that would make illegal immigration a felony, though U.S. House and Senate leaders said Tuesday they planned to downgrade the federal version to a misdemeanor.

An effort to prosecute illegal immigrants on trespassing charges failed last year in New Hampshire when a judge ruled that police violated the U.S. Constitution by trying to enforce federal laws.

Romney signs health insurance bill

BOSTON (AP) — Gov. Mitt Romney signed legislation Wednesday that would make Massachusetts the first state to require everyone to have health insurance, just as drivers must have automobile coverage.

The law would make Massachusetts the only state with universal health coverage, employing a combination of subsidies and penalties to make insurance more affordable and easier to buy it, too.

However, Romney vetoed a section imposing an annual $295-per-worker fee on businesses that do not provide their employees with coverage.

The law has thrust the state to the forefront of the national debate over how to extend coverage to the uninsured without creating a single government-controlled system. Massachusetts has an estimated 550,000 uninsured.

The program is a potential political coup for Romney as he weighs a possible run for the Republican presidential nomination in 2008.

"The reason this is so landmark is that we have found a way, collectively, to get all of our citizens' insurance without some new government-mandated takeover of a huge new tax program," he said.

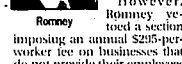

The governor said the program would be financed largely with the millions of dollars that the state now spends on uncompensated medical care for poor people who show up at hospitals and clinics without health insurance.

By July 2007, everyone in Massachusetts will have to have health insurance.

Under the plan, the state will offer free or heavily subsidized coverage to poor and lower-income people.

Those who can afford insurance but still refuse to get it will face escalating tax penalties. For example, they will lose the ability to claim a personal exemption on their state tax returns. That would cost an individual about $189 and a couple filing jointly about $378.

Sen. Edith Roberts, D-Mass., who attended the signing ceremony in Boston's historic Faneuil Hall, praised Romney for giving the state "just what the doctor ordered."

Kimberly boys, Valley girls dominate track meet

By Nathaniel Garrabrant
Times-News writer

GOODING — With clearing skies ushering in the midway point of the area track season, the Farmers National Bank/Zions Bank Invitational track meet in Gooding Wednesday promised a clear view of upcoming small-school district battles.

The emergent picture? Red on the boys' side and blue on the girls. Behind dominant performances in the sprints and strong showings in the relays, the Kimberly boys and Valley girls cruised through the nine-team event, posting respective first-place team totals of 149 and 134 points.

"It was pretty good," said Kimberly's Tyson Anderson after dominating the 100 meters with a time of 10.9 seconds. "We have a lot of underclassmen stepping up this year, a lot of people stepping up in the relays. Those fifth and sixth places have been getting us some points, so that's how we've been winning these meets."

Anderson also took the 200 meters, clocking 22.8 seconds, and ran the opening leg of the Bulldogs' first-place 4x100-meter relay team.

Jerome pole vaulter Ryan Merritt placed second in the event Wednesday at Farmers National Bank/Zions Bank Track Invitational in Gooding.

Ali: Sold

Muhammad Ali is for sale. Actually, he's already been sold. A New York company bought his name the other day, proving that even the Greatest has a price tag. "What's in a name?" The entertainment company CKX must think there's plenty, because it gave Ali $50 million for the right to use his name and image on the open market.

"That's a lot of money — more than Ali made his entire career in the ring. But think of the possibilities."

My first thought was that I'd finally be able to buy that T-shirt I have always wanted with that slogan. I mean, I didn't own it and I ain't got no quarrel with those Vietnam" in big letters on the back.

Dated, yes, but still somewhat relevant in today's world. Soon, there will be the Ali doll slapping a miniature gorilla on the market to commemorate the Thrilla in Manila.

Push his chest and he'll even talk. "It'll be a chilla, and a Killla, and a drink when I get the gorilla in Manila."

George Foreman has the small appliance market cornered, so it's hard to figure out what Ali's image could sell in the kitchen.

But no family room would be complete without the Ali bobblehead showing the former heavyweight champion climbing the stairs and lighting the Olympic torch in 1956 in Atlanta.

Flip on a switch and Ali even trembles while he does it.

Yes, it's business. And, for $50 million, CKX will need to generate product that sells. It's also sad. Because it makes you wonder why everything — icons included — is eventually put up for sale.

Can't we remember Ali for what he did in a glorious career that was like no other sports had ever seen before? Isn't his name Muhammad Ali Center in Louisville enough to show future generations how Ali managed to transcend his sport?

Do we need a new generation remembering Ali for selling something rather than for what he did in the ring and in his life? Will we go down as Joe DiMaggio did, known to most at the end of his life as Mr. Coffee rather than one of the greatest outfielders of all time?

Robert Eck, Sillerman says no. And he has something to say about it because he's the chairman of the company that put up for sale. He wants to buy 80 percent of Ali's name.

He's also the same guy who owns the rights to Elvis, perhaps the most commercialized American icon ever. But Sillerman said Ali won't be marketed like the King, whose likeness adorns everything from dinner plates to belt buckles.

"I hope a little while after a long time before you see Muhammad Ali's picture on a coffee mug," Sillerman said.

Right now, I'm tempted to give Sillerman the benefit of the doubt, and not just because he could have financed the Ali purchase with money found under the seat cushions of his favorite car chair.

This is a guy who Forbes rated No. 375 with a bullet on the charts of richest Americans last year, with a net worth of $375 million. He'll buy Ali's name to lose money on the deal, but it's not like he needs to start churning out all keychains tomorrow to make a quick buck.

Sillerman looks even better when you imagine what would have happened if Ali had sold out to Don King. "I hope a little while after a long time before you see Muhammad Ali's picture on a coffee mug," Sillerman said. "I also hope people are respectful that this is a decision that Muhammad Ali made."

Els among Hilton Head favorites

By Pete Iacobelli
Associated Press writer

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. — The Big Easy sees a shift at the Masters.

"After Phil Mickelson's second Masters victory this week, Ernie Els says it may have eclipsed Tiger Woods as the golfer to beat at Augusta National.

"I think Phil has got the game there now," Els said Wednesday. "He's the only one of golf's 'Big Five' — Mickelson, Woods, Vijay Singh and Retief Goosen — competing at the Verizon Heritage, which starts Thursday. Els has witnessed Mickelson's Masters rise, Mickelson's breakthrough major career two years ago at Augusta National when his 18-foot birdie putt on the final hole sealed a one-stroke victory over Els.

"Then last week, Els was named Tiger, Mickelson for the first 36 holes as he steadily played himself into contention. Els was impressed with Mickelson's control of the tee, the trajectory of his irons and his continued wizardry around the greens.

"Plus, Mickelson is no longer burdened with the question of when he'll win Augusta."

"He just goes out and goes about his business," Els said. "So I think Phil, almost more than Tiger, has got more Masters in him, maybe."

Mickelson will have to double his Masters' output to catch up with Woods' four green jackets. And both have work to do to tie Ernie Els hits his third shot from the sand on the second hole during final-round play of the Masters golf tournament at the Augusta National Golf Club in Augusta, Ga. on Sunday, April 9.

Jack Nicklaus' record six Masters titles.

Chris DiMarco doesn't see a shift at the top at Augusta. He lost in a playoff to Woods there last year and says the course features are ready made for Tiger.

"Phil is a great player. I have a lot of respect for his game, it's awesome," DiMarco said. "But that course sets up great for Tiger. If (Woods) putted at all like he normally puts ... it would've been closer."

Els is trying to close in on his elite form. He's recovering well from last season's injury, which he did not compete from July to of weeks, the last month," Els said. "But I just, for some reason, haven't sustained it or haven't gone forward on to the next title stage."

Harbour Town is as good a place as any for Els to take that step.

Els has had five top 10 finishes in seven appearances. Those have included a couple of disheartening defeats.

Els squandered a five-stroke lead in the final round here in 2000 as Stewart Cink won the first of his two Verizon Heritage crowns. Three years ago, Els was again in front on Sunday when he drove out of bounds on the 16th hole for a double bogey, then closed with two more bogeys to tie for 10th.

Still, Els feels he'll eventually earn the turtan jacket that goes the Verizon Heritage champion.

"I love this place," he said. "You've got play good, dry, aggressive golf here."

Part of the appeal, Els says is it isn't anything like the week before. Els rents a house on the resort island, bikes with his family and relaxes at the beach.

It's an approach Jim Perry can understand, to get to decompress after Augusta.

"If I wanted to decompress, I think I'd go on vacation rather than come back to work. But it's definitely a little bit more relaxing week."

Els hopes to unpack a Masters' championship ahead of his own, no matter who's got the hot hand at Augusta National.

family members are typically given entrance to the track on a "license" that recognizes them as a team member, meaning their sections can be policed by NASCAR and the sanctioning body reserves the right to revoke their pass at any time.

Lowe's Motor Speedway president Humby Wheeler said wives and girlfriends had a stormy history during NASCAR's early days and many have been thrown out of tracks because of their behavior.

"That kind of stuff was common back in the old days, everybody was fighting back then, especially the women," Wheeler said. "But there wasn't the TV coverage we have today, so it wasn't that big of a deal."

"When altercations and things like that happen, we recommend that you stay in your own area," Pemberton said. "You can go have a conversa-

NASCAR to reimprand Biffle's girlfriend

By Jenna Fryer
Associated Press writer

CONCORD, N.C. — Greg Biffle's girlfriend faces a reimprand from NASCAR about her pit-road confrontation with Kurt Busch's fiancée after the two drivers wrecked at Texas Motor Speedway.

Busch hit the back of Biffle's car early in Sunday's race, causing an accident that ended Biffle's day. Biffle, the defending race winner, had led 49 of the first 145 laps before the crash and wound up 42nd.

Moments after the wreck, TV cameras caught girlfriend Nicole Lunders slamming a water bottle on Biffle's pit box. She then marched down pit road and climbed halfway up Busch's box and had a heated exchange with Eva Bryan. The brief confrontation created a buzz in NASCAR, and the sanctioning body wants to cool down the emotions.

"There will be some conversations that will be had with the people that participated, and we'll make sure that this doesn't carry on and into the garage or anywhere else," Robin Pemberton, vice president of competition, said Wednesday.

"You've got to remember, most everybody in the garage area is friends, and those two girls in particular have a close relationship. Tempers flare, and we'll look at that and we'll make sure it doesn't carry on any further than that." Biffle and Busch spent three seasons as Cup teammates at Roush Racing and had a friendly relationship that often put their girlfriends in the same social settings. Both drivers were testing at Richmond International Raceway on Wednesday and not immediately available for comment.

NASCAR does not have a standard rule against team members entering other pit boxes, but generally frowns upon it if the reason for approaching the area stems from something that happened in race.

"When altercations and things like that happen, we recommend that you stay in your own area," Pemberton said. "You can go have a conversa-

Frank struck out a Wood River batter for the final out in Tuesday's conference game. Frank hit the inside corner for the called strikes on the first two pitches, while getting the Wolverine batter to swing and miss on strike three.

"I'd loves those big time situations," said Minico coach Ben Frank. "He did well. He's been key all season. The only thing I was concerned about was that he hadn't thrown in a week.

Frank came on in relief of Matt Tracy with two outs in the seventh after the Wolverines led the bases.

"It was more pitch count (than anything)," coach Frank said of his decision to remove Tracy. "He threw a gem. When he pitched himself into a jam, he got out of it."

Tracy helped his cause at the plate going 3-for-5 with four homers and was 2-for-3 with an RBI. Minico (10-4) will return to action Friday with a game at Century, beginning at 11 a.m.

Rexburg — The Minico Spartans took sixth in Tuesday's Madison Invitational. Frank hit the inside corner for the called strikes on the first two pitches, while getting the Wolverine batter to swing and miss on strike three.

"I felt really good," said Burnham. "It was just a nice run, speed, energy. I got myself pumped and was ready to go."

Also marking his third straight field-out win was Buhl's Paden Maybee, who took the shot put with a 44-00/8-75 inch heave.

"It wasn't my greatest throw," said Maybee. "It was one of the best ones I've had this year, but I still pulled it off. There really isn't much competition this year since (Filer's) Brad Silvester left last year. It put me to shame every time, but this year it's a little different."

The host Senators took third with 103 points, winning four events including the medley relay.

"We knew that we were going to have a really tough race," said Gooding medley anchor Tyler Dean. "We lost all of our fast sprinters. We're just trying to work with what we've got, keep them up with the front guys so that by the time it gets to me I can have a good start. It's a really tough race."

On the girls' side Valley sophomore Zandra Nelson won the 400- and 800-meter sprints and led off the Vikings' winning 4x400-meter relay team.

"I'm just hoping to get better time for state," said Nelson after finishing the 100 meters in a time of 1:27.3 seconds. "I think we've got a pretty strong team for our having such a small school. We won our first meet and we got really close to Jerome last week. I think we have a lot of work to do and we're really well as a team."

Also contributing wins for Valley were Lindsey Wood in the high jump and Lisa Romer in the 1,600- and 3,200-meter runs.

Joined by senior Elizabeth Phillips, the three combined to break the 4x400 meter relay by 11.5 seconds over second-place Gooding, which finished fourth in the team standings behind Jerome and third-place Kimberly.

Only Buhl's April Jaynes was able to break the Vikings' monopoly on the 100-meter relay, edging Romer by 1/3 seconds in the 800 meters.

deep," said Kimberly coach Marvin Mumm. "We have some underclassmen that are getting points for us in all the events, all the way through."

In all, the Bulldogs enjoyed placing 21 individuals or teams in the top six in 193 events ahead of second-place Jerome.

Tigers pole vaulter Drew Burnham had one of his team's best performances of the day with a smooth looking 13-foot vault to take his third meet in a row.

"I felt really good," said Burnham. "It was just a nice run, speed, energy. I got myself pumped and was ready to go."

Also marking his third straight field-out win was Buhl's Paden Maybee, who took the shot put with a 44-00/8-75 inch heave.

"It wasn't my greatest throw," said Maybee. "It was one of the best ones I've had this year, but I still pulled it off. There really isn't much competition this year since (Filer's) Brad Silvester left last year. It put me to shame every time, but this year it's a little different."

The host Senators took third with 103 points, winning four events including the medley relay.

"We knew that we were going to have a really tough race," said Gooding medley anchor Tyler Dean. "We lost all of our fast sprinters. We're just trying to work with what we've got, keep them up with the front guys so that by the time it gets to me I can have a good start. It's a really tough race."

On the girls' side Valley sophomore Zandra Nelson won the 400- and 800-meter sprints and led off the Vikings' winning 4x400-meter relay team.

"I'm just hoping to get better time for state," said Nelson after finishing the 100 meters in a time of 1:27.3 seconds. "I think we've got a pretty strong team for our having such a small school. We won our first meet and we got really close to Jerome last week. I think we have a lot of work to do and we're really well as a team."

Also contributing wins for Valley were Lindsey Wood in the high jump and Lisa Romer in the 1,600- and 3,200-meter runs.

Joined by senior Elizabeth Phillips, the three combined to break the 4x400 meter relay by 11.5 seconds over second-place Gooding, which finished fourth in the team standings behind Jerome and third-place Kimberly.

Only Buhl's April Jaynes was able to break the Vikings' monopoly on the 100-meter relay, edging Romer by 1/3 seconds in the 800 meters.

QB Matt Leinart

Her right elbow, however, was wrapped in ice. "What do I have to do now?" she said. "A hip is much better."

Panel suspends five accused of race-fixing NEWARK, N.J. - The New Jersey Racing Commission on Wednesday suspended five people for as much as 10.5 years from its horse racing-fixing scheme at the Meadowlands Racetrack.

Leinart, however, is also represented by Creative Artists Agency. Last week, the agency hired Tom Conroy, who represents such quarterbacks as Peyton and Eli Manning, Drew Brees and Alex Smith, the No. 1 pick last year by San Francisco.

Leinart has not yet selected an agent under league union rules require a player to wait five days after leaving one agent before hiring a new one. Steinberg said he hopes to lure back Leinart during the waiting period.

Steinberg represents Pittsburgh quarterback Ben Roethlisberger and has had success as a consultant at the firm. He is also working with Troy Aikman, Steve Young and Warren Moon.

Leinart's Southern California

teammate, running back Reggie Bush, is expected to be taken by Houston with the first selection in the April 29 draft. Both Tennessee, which picks third, and the New York Jets, who are fourth, are considering a trade to get Leinart.

Red Sox sign Crisp to $15.5-million extension

BOSTON - Coco Crisp agreed Wednesday to a $15.5 million, three-year contract extension with the Boston Red Sox.

Crisp, on the disabled list with a broken finger, already was signed for this at $2.75 million.

The extension will guarantee Crisp $15.5 million, including a $5 million signing bonus and salaries of $3.5 million in 2007, $4.75 million in 2008 and $5.75 million in 2009.

The deal contains a buyout option team option for 2010 with a $500,000 buyout and contains salary escalator provisions.

Before the extension, Crisp's contract was set to expire at the end of the year, but he would have been eligible for arbitration through 2009, which would have kept him in Boston until then.

Mariners' Lawton finishes suspension

CLEVELAND - Seattle Mariners outfielder Matt Lawton was activated Wednesday after serving his 10-day suspension for testing positive for steroids.

Lawton was not in the lineup for the game against the Indians

, but he was relieved to be eligible to play again. "I'm glad to get back in there," he said, sitting at his locker. "It's been a little bit tough not being able to play in the games. But it wasn't as bad as I felt like it was the week by pretty fast."

During his suspension, Lawton, who signed a one-year free agent deal with Seattle in December, worked on batting practice and was in Seattle's clubhouse. However, he had to leave when the game began.

Lawton was suspended on Nov. 2, 2005, for violating the league's substance abuse policy.

Because he tested positive under baseball's former program, Lawton had to miss the first 10 days of this season. Under the new, tougher rules, a positive test would have meant a 50-game suspension.

Lawton said he's ready to play with Mariners manager Mike Hargrove gives him the nod.

"I'm still in pretty good shape from spring training," he said. "I had a lot of at-bats so getting back in the game, it's a classy way. You don't need a rub it in," Judkins said after the game.

Mountain West sends BYU coach Judkins

PROVO, Utah - Brigham Young women's basketball coach Jeff Judkins was reprimanded by the Mountain West Conference for comments he made after the Cougars lost to Utah in the conference tournament championship game.

Judkins was angry after Utah's 84-60 victory on March 11 and questioned why the Cougars could play up to 23 regular-season games.

"When you're up 25 points, you pull your starters out with 15-16 left in the game. It's a classy way. You don't need a rub it in," Judkins said after the game.

BYU won the Mountain West regular season title and finished 26-6, losing to Oklahoma in the second round of the NCAA tournament.

Barrera to defend super featherweight crown

LOS ANGELES - Rocky Juarez is getting his shot at a championship. He realizes just how imposing a challenge he faces.

This spring, he battled 367 with eight doubles and eight RBIs in 49 at-bats.

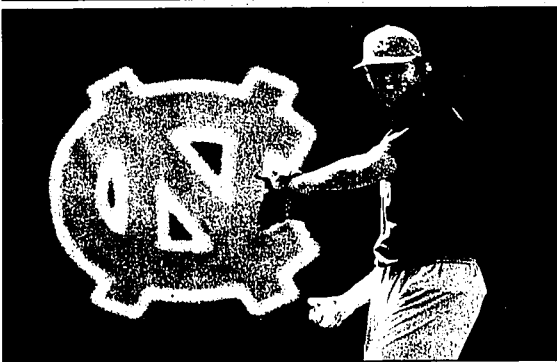

Kuznetsov advances at Family Circle Cup

CHARLESTON, S.C. - Svetlana Kuznetsov surged past Ashley Shyuangyi 6-0, 6-1 in her opening match at the Family Circle Cup on Wednesday, happy that her injured hip is better but now troubled by an aching elbow.

The court-seeded Russian won in Miami two weeks ago and pulled out of Amelia Island last week with a strained hip.

After beating Shyuangyi in 51 minutes, Kuznetsov said her right hip has improved. Compiled from wire reports

Pitching powers Tar Heels

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Sometimes, in the roll of the dice that is recruiting, a college baseball coach must rely on plain luck. Landing quality pitchers is particularly difficult.

"If they're good enough to provide immediate help, chances are they also have an opportunity to sign a professional contract right out of high school. And bringing in a project based mostly on potential isn't easy, either."

"You never know what pieces you're going to have," North Carolina coach Mike Fox said. "You're dealing with the draft, and you just don't know how kids are going to do there that gets here. There's just so many variables out there that you can't control."

Fox's incoming class from three years ago featured pitchers Andrew Miller, Daniel Bard and Robert Woodard, all highly sought following stellar prep careers. Miller and Bard were selected in the draft soon after graduation, and each passed on life in the minors for a college scholarship.

"Now juniors, these three form perhaps the top starting rotation in the nation."

"It gives them stability more than anything," said Sean Ryan, co-founder of CollegeBaseballScout.com, a Web site devoted to the sport. "I think the Tar Heels feel they can go out and win against anybody in the country with any of these three guys on the mound."

At this point, Miller is the unquestioned No. 1, a tall, lean left-hander unbeaten in eight starts this season. He's 7-0 with a 1.53 ERA, with 64 strikeouts and only 14 walks in 53 innings.

The other two haven't been quite that good. Combined, Bard and Woodard are 6-3 under a 4.48 ERA in 17 appearances, but both are projected to be taken in the first round along with Miller of June's draft.

Miller might be the first overall choice.

"It does kind of put pressure on me, but I don't let it bother me. I don't let it affect the way I pitch," Miller said. "At the end of the day, I'm just trying to put it in the back of my mind and go out there and do what I've always done."

Rice probably was the most recent team to have a rotation this good, and the Ovals used the arms of Jeff Niemann, Wade Townsend and Phillip Humber to win the national championship in 2003.

The next year, after Texas A&M eliminated Rice in the regional round, the trio was taken in the first eight picks of the draft, the first time three pitchers from the same school were chosen so highly.

Now, it comes North Carolina's own threesome.

"You can't relax in this league," Bard said. "Coming up this weekend, we've got Virginia Tech, a team that — if we play up to our capabilities — we should sweep them. That's what you have to do to win the league, which is what we want to do."

Then comes the regional, the super regional and maybe the College World Series. Looming all the while is the draft.

"You try to keep it on the back of your mind and do what you can to keep the team first," Bard said. "I think we've all done that. But it always brings kind of that big elephant in the room that nobody talks about."

It might be even tougher for Miller to avoid thinking about the riches that came with being a high first-round pick are just around the corner.

"I don't want to jinx myself, but from what I hear, it's a good probability," he said. "It's kind of comforting, but I know I have to stay injury free and can't fall off the face of the earth. I have to keep pitching well."

Petersen comfortable with Broncos

BOISE (AP) — Wearing a gray sweat shirt, blue track pants unzipped at the ankles and tennis shoes, Chris Petersen looks like a guy comfortable in his own backyard.

Instead, Petersen is standing on the blue turf at Bronco Stadium, with 280-pound linemen trotting past him as they head on and off the field during a recent scrimmage at spring practice.

"Down here," he shouts. "Going this way."

The 41-year-old Petersen has been head football coach at Boise State for three months now, taking over after Dan Hawkins left to take the head job at Colorado.

"It's kind of what I expected," said Petersen. "I've been around for a long time. And around a lot of head coaches. I've seen a lot of things."

Petersen was the Broncos' offensive coordinator and quarterbacks coach under Dan Hawkins the last five years when BSU averaged more than 40 points a game and claimed four Western Athletic Conference titles.

Before coming to Boise State, he was the wide receivers coach at Oregon for six years. There were other coaching stints in the interim, all of which followed a stint as a coach at UC Davis where as a quarterback, Petersen twice led the nation in quarterback pass efficiency, going 19-3 as a star.

He's had success nearly everywhere he's landed, a pattern he's testing now coaching everyone for the first time.

"It was a really easy transition for me," said Petersen. "I've been at a lot of places." Jared Zabransky of Boise State change. "And I think the rest of the guys relate to him. He's really personable and he's a guy who really cares about you and wants to help you out."

Players on defense have noticed the smooth transition as well.

"It's been good," said linebacker Col Brooks, who will be starting. "We've been able to adjust easy because it's the same package and stuff like that. There are certain things that we had to learn, but we're adjusting to that, but so far the first group is real solid."

"I think we're on the right track for next season," said Leggedu Nanace, a wide receiver. "I think that getting out there, getting coached by all the new coaches, has been a good thing for us and kind of propelled us past the rebuilding stages with the coaches."

The Broncos conclude spring practice with the Blue-Orange Game, which starts at 6 p.m. Friday at Bronco Stadium.

As a junior last season, Zabransky had what many considered a solid season, despite some well-publicized struggles.

Zabransky had four interceptions in the final 3 as Boise State's 48-13 season-opening loss against Georgia on national television. He returned and played well through the WAC season, but also made a noticeable gaffe in the closing moments of the SFC Computers Bowl. Having rallied the Broncos from a 27-0 deficit, Zabransky was intercepted in the end zone with 37 seconds left as the Broncos lost to Boston College 27-21.

Overall, Zabransky's performance didn't meet the expectations that came after his stellar sophomore year.

"I think last year he thought he had to win the game and he's going to be this unbelievable quarterback," said Petersen. "But that's not how you become the unbelievable quarterback. It's one play at a time doing the simple things."

Conching could be the same way.

"I think anything takes awhile," said Petersen about his new job. "But I like this team and I think we've got a lot of experience. We've got a lot of guys that know how to win and have been through a lot of battles. So that makes it easier on all of us. I think we have enough talent to do some good things."

As a junior last season, Zabransky had what many considered a solid season, despite some well-publicized struggles.

Zabransky had four interceptions in the final 3 as Boise State's 48-13 season-opening loss against Georgia on national television. He returned and played well through the WAC season, but also made a noticeable gaffe in the closing moments of the SFC Computers Bowl. Having rallied the Broncos from a 27-0 deficit, Zabransky was intercepted in the end zone with 37 seconds left as the Broncos lost to Boston College 27-21.

Overall, Zabransky's performance didn't meet the expectations that came after his stellar sophomore year.

"I think last year he thought he had to win the game and he's going to be this unbelievable quarterback," said Petersen. "But that's not how you become the unbelievable quarterback. It's one play at a time doing the simple things."

Conching could be the same way.

"I think anything takes awhile," said Petersen about his new job. "But I like this team and I think we've got a lot of experience. We've got a lot of guys that know how to win and have been through a lot of battles. So that makes it easier on all of us. I think we have enough talent to do some good things."

The Broncos conclude spring practice with the Blue-Orange Game, which starts at 6 p.m. Friday at Bronco Stadium.

Brown's bad year

First season in N.Y. coming to merciful end

NEW YORK (AP) — Larry Brown had an inkling way back in November that these Knicks were headed for trouble.

"Too many young players. Too few who 'play the right way' — Brown's No. 1 basketball priority. And one named Stephen Marbury."

"I kind of had a pretty good sense of where we were in Charleston," where the Knicks held their preseason training camp in South Carolina. Brown said recently.

Still, he basked in the roar of the Madison Square Garden crowd at the Knicks' home opener, a Brooklyn native returned to lead his hometown team back into the playoffs. And while Brown knew something then that the fans apparently didn't, he never could've predicted how bad things would get.

It didn't take long to get started, either: Minutes after the ovation, the Knicks left behind Washington by 10 points in the first quarter, and were booted off the floor by the home fans.

That sound became familiar on the court. Off it, things got uglier still.

A sexual harassment lawsuit brought against team president Brian Thomas by a former employee. A biting feud between Brown and Marbury laid bare in the New York tabloids and brought to a flimsy resolution.

Then the coach admitted some of his players are no longer listening to his message.

And of course, all the losing.

A 2-12 December was followed by a 1-11 February Rookie Channing Frye, perhaps the biggest bright spot, was lost for the season with a knee injury.

Even after three straight wins last week gave the Knicks 22 victories, this will go down as one of the worst seasons ever for both the franchise and the Hall of Fame coach. Brown will finish only slightly better than his 21-61 season in San Antonio in 1994-95.

And the families are being hurt, and unfortunately this situation is being abused by people with separate agendas. It is grossly unfair, and cool heads must prevail.

The group has asked to meet with Duke District Attorney Mike Nifong press on with his investigation of allegations that a stripper was gang-raped at a party party March 13. Earlier this week, lawyers for the players said that DNA tests failed to connect any members of the 47-man team to the alleged attack.

The players' parents — initially silent — have also started to speak out.

Brian Loftus, who has two sons on the team, wondered Wednesday why Nifong was continuing to press ahead with the case.

"I don't understand it," said Loftus of Syosset, N.Y.

Nifong has refused requests for an interview. He is running for another term in May and took part in a candidate forum Wednesday evening, in which he reiterated that he believes a medical exam of the alleged victim indicates a crime occurred.

"The fact is, I didn't pick the time," Nifong said at the forum. "But I'm going to do the case right."

The family of Devon Sherwood, a freshman guard and the team's only black member, said the DNA results should have marked the end of the investigation of the highly ranked team. The Blue Devils played for last year's national title and were considered a favorite this season before, Duke canceled the season.

New York Knicks head coach Larry Brown reacts after a call by the official during the second half of NBA basketball action against the Los Angeles Clippers at New York's Madison Square Garden earlier this season.

"I was looking back on my career, I don't know how long I've been doing this," he said. "I was trying to figure out what's been different about this year and things I said. I think one of the obvious things is find myself repeating myself over and over again... When we look at the films the same things keep popping up — the effort, not sharing the ball, and the same mistakes over and over again."

And it's not that the Knicks lack talent. Marbury, Steve Francis and Jalen Rose are among the pre-eminent names that the NBA's biggest spenders have sent onto the floor — only to compete with second-year Charlotte and rebuilding Portland for the league's worst record.

Boston coach Doc Rivers said one of his players looked at New York's roster and said, "They might be the best worst team ever."

Then Rivers' team went out and led by as many as 38 points in a 123-96 victory.

That came during a nine-game New York losing streak — one more loss would have given the Knicks two double-digit skids in a season for the first time — which ended with Brown questioning everything from the effort of his players to his own future with the team.

During that stretch, New York trailed by 27 points at Orlando, 24 at Philadelphia, and 31 at Washington.

That final one left Francis near tears and Brown wondering why a message that worked so well in seven previous NBA stops was going unheard. Brown admitted that some players were probably tuning him out, and said some would have to go before next season — unless the Knicks decided to replace him instead.

Lacrosse boosters hire lawyer

DUHAM, N.C. (AP) — A small group of boosters and others close to the Duke University lacrosse team have hired President Clinton's former lawyer as part of an aggressive public relations effort to argue that the players did not rape a woman at an off-campus party.

Bob Bennett, a former federal prosecutor and Washington attorney who represented Clinton in the Paula Jones sexual harassment case, is serving as a spokesman for a group calling itself the Committee for Fairness at Duke Families.

He is not expected to represent any players, but he has joined the chorus of those who fear for the reputation of the team and the university.

"It is unfortunate that members of the Duke community, players and families are being judged before all the facts are in," Bennett said in a statement. "A lot of innocent young people

Low-income people band together to build own homes

By Cassidy Friedman Times-News writer

FILER — Greg Plaza was ready to live on his own.

When he looked into finding a first-time buyer's loan, the answers he got were intimidating.

His job at Quality Truss Lumber Supply brought him into contact with Mercy Housing, a major customer the past couple of years.

He learned that Mercy Housing was helping people with low incomes buy and build homes for themselves, that families were building neighborhoods from the ground up.

Today, he is building a new neighborhood in Filer with eight other households. One of the homes on the block will be his, but not until the group has finished building them all.

"They make a deal when they start: Nobody moves in until everybody can move in," said Julie Galbraith, self-help ownership coordinator of Mersey Housing, a Catholic charity that helps provide affordable housing for people with low incomes.

"We found that children who kept returning to the hospital with health problems came from unsafe housing," said Sister Rosemary Hoessen, director of La Pasada, a ministry that helps Latinos in need.

Each household must work 35 hours a week.

"We give them grants and sweat equity," Galbraith said.

No one makes a down payment, and no one pays closing costs.

Besides making buying a home affordable, the program fosters the growth of communities in which neighbors know each other and have learned to work together.

"These people are going to look after each other and their kids for the rest of their lives," she said.

Winter was rough on the crew, frustrating their progress and pushing back the expected finishing date to August. Despite the setback, the sense of community is already strong in this unfinished neighborhood.

Becky Jones, 25, goes to church with a couple participating in the program. She spent part of her Saturday helping them build their home. "I offered to help because it's been a hard year for them," she said.

Filer's mayor and fire chief came by to lend their support. Chief Buddy Compher had come previously to work on the homes. He said the program has received a lot of support.

"Friends, dads, uncles, aunts and people they don't even know stop by to help."

"People need to have a couple more block parties," he said. "This is breaking a barrier that needs to be broken."

Next month, Mersey Housing will start eight homes in Jerome.

Hailey airport cop charged with kidnapping

The Associated Press

KEFCHUM — An airport security officer accused of luring a 10-year-old boy into his pickup truck has been charged with second-degree kidnapping, KTVB-TV reported.

Robert Joe Harrison Jr. appeared Wednesday before 5th District Magistrate Judge Ted Israel, who set bail at $500,000. Harrison was held at the Blaine County Jail.

Ketchum police said they were called to the Ernest Hemingway

Elementary School at about 4 p.m. Tuesday. They said a boy told them a man in a red truck stopped while the boy was walking home, waved him over to the vehicle and asked if he wanted a ride home.

The boy said he first refused the ride, but after several requests, got into the truck and gave the driver directions to his home.

The driver passed the boy's street and told him they were going to his apartment first, he boy told police. He said he declined an invitation from the man to come inside and watch a movie.

The child was later released and walked home, said Kim M. Rogers, a Ketchum police spokeswoman.

The boy was not injured, she said.

Detectives said the child led them back to the apartment complex, where they found a red truck, but when they questioned Harrison, Harrison denied having any contact with the boy.

Harrison was arrested and his vehicle was seized. Police said they found several dates of birth and Social Security numbers connected to Harrison, and could not determine which information was correct.

Harrison has worked for the Transportation Security Administration, part of the Homeland Security Department, at the Friedman Memorial Airport in Hailey since November 2005. He has been suspended without pay. The TSA has also revoked his government ID and credentials, Rogers said.

When asked if the city intends to annex much of the "growth triangle," Rothweiler said connectivity to the city is a prerequisite to the city.

Jerome growth committee continues discussions

City changes rule on sewer and water hookups

By Cathy Roemer Times News correspondent

JEROME — The Jerome Growth Impact committee canceled their regularly scheduled April meetings but will resume zoning change discussions in July or August.

The group has been meeting since the first of April, studying and gathering information to make recommendations on how to rezone agricultural land in Jerome's growth triangle. The area consists of hundreds of acres of farm land dotted with some residential development. It is fast becoming a housing developer's dream now that the city of Jerome has decided to route sewer and water lines cross country rather than along Interstate 84 as originally planned.

The committee has worked diligently to come up with a plan that would best allow subdivisions and agriculture to coexist.

At a prior meeting, the group outlined three options: the area remain zoned A-1 (agriculture only); blanket zone to A-2 (residential and agriculture); or a residential zone overlay from the sewer line outward, where development is most likely to occur first.

Committee members' preferences on zoning have been mixed, but further discussion came to a standstill after Art Brown, Jerome County Planning and Zoning administrator, read a letter from Jerome city officials saying housing will have to include sewer and water hook-ups in order to be approved.

One option to be considered would have the area rezoned to A-2 (agriculture and residential). It is fast becoming a housing developer's dream now that the city of Jerome has decided to route sewer and water lines cross country rather than along Inter-low on its priority list.

Kevin Moss, a greenhouse business owner within the growth impact area, said the city's announcement "muddies the water" as to the committee making any zoning recommendations now.

Property owner Breck Glassinger said, "It's looking more and more like we need to leave it alone."

"If we change the zoning, we won't be able to control anything," he said.

In a phone interview, City Administrator Travis Rothweiler said the sewer/water package rule is one of four conditions in a contract to be signed by developers to ensure city ordinances can be enforced when residents hook on to sewer and water lines.

Other contract conditions include a consent to annex clause which will be attached to the title of each parcel, he said. In addition, users will agree to city sewer/water regulations and subdivisions using city services must meet city standards such as curbs, gutters, etc.

When asked if the city intends to annex much of the "growth triangle," Rothweiler said connectivity to the city is a prerequisite to the city.

There has to be continuity — it can't be a parcel here and there, he said.

City annexation is a complicated process, he added.

Schools struggle to meet deadline

Federal money is at stake over qualifications of teachers

By Joshua Palmer Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — It's something school administrators in the Magic Valley already knew: Some schools will not meet the federal deadline for highly qualified teachers.

Although President Bush and Congress have promised parents that 100 percent of core classes will have highly qualified teachers by the end of the school year, it has proven to be a more difficult task than federal and state lawmakers anticipated.

By May 15, states will know where they stand and whether they will lose federal aid, which is the government's only real enforcement tool.

Marilyn Howard, Idaho state superintendent of public instruction, said one of the difficulties is that the federal government still has not specifically identified "highly qualified."

"It can be difficult for schools as everyone gets started down the pathway of what the federal government saw it would be. However, by the end of all of a sudden it comes to a certain point where they say we need to do something different," she said.

Thirty-three states, including Idaho, say 90 percent to 99 percent of their main classes have teachers who are highly qualified, according to the No Child Left Behind law. Those teachers have a bachelor's degree, a state license and professional competency in every subject they teach. But most of the other states put their numbers a tier below — 70 percent to 89 percent — and a few are even further behind, according to a review of new state data by The Associated Press.

The accuracy of those accounts is now under review by the Education Department, which is checking not just total numbers but also the figures within poor and struggling schools.

"I know there is a shortage in many positions," said Jim Cobble, superintendent of the Clark County District. "I think it's because many federal regulations are designed for specific situations, but they are not practical when applied to the entire nation."

With few states, if any, expected to reach full compliance on time, the department plans to allow an extra year to states that have shown a good-faith effort. Others could lose millions of dollars in aid if federal officials don't see enough progress.

"Except for one area, we will meet those standards," said Mel Wiseman, superintendent of the Shoshone School District. "I have a teacher who we think can serve well in that position, so we will work towards a good-faith agreement where the teacher can meet the education requirements to be considered highly qualified."

He said the most significant challenge to Idaho is its lower-than-average pay scale for teachers.

"My personal opinion is that were going to have to look at a raise in pay to compete with other states like Wyoming and Nevada that pay significantly more," Wiseman said. "For example, just recently there was a cutback for teachers in Pocatello, and Clark County (Nevada) was there looking for teachers."

There is one impressive factor in isolated, rural areas having an extra year to qualify.

Rains trigger mudslides in Northern California

"Hopefully, this will be the end of the wet period," Anderson said. "In all probabilities, it will be the end of the long-standing wet weather pattern."

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Heavy rains triggered mudslides across Northern California on Wednesday, forcing evacuations, closing off electricity, closing roads and leaving an elderly Mill Valley man missing and believed buried in his backyard.

Walter Guthrie, 73, was clearing debris around 3 a.m. when a huge wall of mud slid down the hill behind his house, Mill Valley Fire Department Battalion Chief Greg Moore said.

About 40 rescue workers were digging with hands and buckets in the slide that was about 50 feet wide and 12- to 14-foot deep, but they stopped because the situation had become too dangerous, Moore said.

Rescue teams then began using a crane to remove the debris and planned to tear down the house to locate the missing man if necessary, Moore said.

"There's a lot of debris to remove," Moore said. "We've switched to recovery mode." "Three other homes were evacuated because of the mudslide: in Mill Valley, a hilly community about 10 miles north of San Francisco, Moore said.

Mudslides caused by heavy rains were reported all along the coast of the San Francisco Bay area, with Sonoma, Marin and Santa Cruz counties hit hardest by the latest storm that dumped up to 8 inches of rain over 24 hours.

In Brisbane, about 10 miles south of San Francisco, three homes were reported all along a mudslide struck a house. The storm was expected to bring light showers as it moved south along the coast over the next couple of days, including Southern California on Friday, said Steve Anderson, a meteorologist with the National Weather Service in Monterey. One more storm was expected to arrive Sunday.

Former UI official pleads guilty to misuse of funds

MOSCOW — Daniel Schoenberg, a former director of auxiliary services at the University of Idaho, has pleaded guilty to one felony count of misusing public money.

If plea agreement is accepted, 2nd District Judge John Stegner at a sentencing hearing June 12, Schoenberg will receive a withheld judgment and serve 15 days in the Latah County Jail and two years of probation.

The withheld judgment would allow Schoenberg's conviction to be wiped from the record if he successfully completes probation. Schoenberg, 48, has paid $970 restitution to the university.

"I made a mistake that I sincerely regret," Schoenberg told the court as he entered his plea Tuesday. The university originally identified about $73,000 in "questionable" expenditures, but Thompson said an investigation revealed most were legitimate.

Idaho in brief

Schoenberg told Stegner he used some materials purchased for the university — such as lumber, hings, and speakers — for remodeling his own home.

He resigned from the university in November and now works as a property manager in Moscow.

As director of auxiliary services, Schoenberg was responsible for the campus bookstore, university residences, the university golf course, dining services, conferences, events and information services.

Shelley then sentenced in DUI traffic fatality

IDAHOFALLS — Cody Case, a Shelley teenager who admitted he was high on meth when he ran a stop sign last fall and killed a man, has been sentenced to serve three-and-a-half to 10 years in jail. A state investigator had recommended a sentence of six months in jail plus probation and drug treatment for Case, 19.

But 7th District Judge Gregory Anderson sentenced Case to serve up to 10 years for aggravated driving under the influence and possession of a controlled substance.

Case struck a minivan driven by Wayne Bracey, 72, on Oct. 25, according to the Bonnevill County Sheriff's Office. Deputies reported they found methamphetamine in Case's truck, and toxicology reports showed he was under the influence of drugs.

Anderson also ordered Case to pay $7,000 in restitution and his driving privileges suspended for five years after his release.

Case has been in the Bonneville County Jail for nearly five months and will get credit for the time he has served. He was briefly released on bond, but tested positive for meth before his trial and was returned to custody.

Dan Clark, the deputy Bonnevill County prosecutor who handled the case, had recommended a four-year sentence.

For second straight year, spring salmon staying away

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — For the second straight year, the spring chinook salmon that normally leap by the thousands up the fish ladders of Bonneville Dam toward spawning grounds are virtually absent.

Fishery experts say the run has been erratic before, thus they aren't hanging out the crepe just yet. But it's off to such a weak start that a Columbia River Indian tribe had to haul some of last year's salmon out of the freezer last weekend for its traditional "First Foods" ceremony that marks the return of the fish.

As of Tuesday, only 125 adult chinook had been counted at the dam. The ten-year average at this point in the year is about 19,000.

The tribal share of this spring run has been calculated at 6,188 fish. As of last weekend's ceremony at Collo Village near The Dalles, tribal fishermen had caught only about 20.

The 140 miles of river below the dam will close to salmon, steelhead and shad fishing effective Friday.

1,500 Mini-Cassia students skip class

By Marie Michol For The Times-News.

More than 1,500 Mini-Cassia students missed classes on Monday, and school administrators suspect the absences were connected with the national day of action for Hispanics.

Twenty-six percent, or 1,069 students, in the Mililoka County School District were absent Monday. Superintendent Scott Rogers said. Normally, the district has a daily attendance rate of 94 percent.

In the Cassia Joint School District, 10 percent, or 549 students, were absent. Superintendent Michael Chesley said.

Utah well positioned to retain lower gas prices

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The average price for motorists in Utah and the Mountain West pay for gasoline is the lowest in the nation and consumers can largely attribute that savings to geography, industry experts said Wednesday.

In Utah, the average price for a gallon of gasoline was $2.34 on Wednesday, making it the lowest in the country, according to AAA, formerly the American Automobile Association.

Mountain West states Wyoming, Idaho and Montana followed Utah in having the nation's lowest gas prices. All four states have two things in common: close access to fuel from Wyoming and Canada pipelines, reduces transportation costs and high elevations that make it possible to use lower-grade gas.

Regular gas is typically sold at 12 cents in most of the country, but in Utah it's typically sold at 85 cents.

The octane rating of gasoline says how much before it ignites. If gas ignites from compression instead of from a spark plug, it creates a knocking noise and can damage an engine. The lower a gasoline's octane rating is, the less compression it can handle. But in Utah, where Salt Lake City's elevation is more than 4,000 feet above sea level, lower octane gas can be used.

"Regular is regular. Basically, the octane requirement goes down as the altitude goes up. Your 85 octane is equivalent to 87 octane at sea level as far as performance is concerned," said Michael Burdette, senior analyst at the National Energy Information Center, the statistical arm of the U.S. Department of Energy.

"Typically, the higher the octane level, the more expensive it is for petroleum companies to manufacture the gasoline. So, because the refinery you're using a little more of those octane-rich blends than you're using to make an 85, I don't know what the price at the pump would be, but it would cost a little bit more in the refinery," said Tim Logan, legislative and regulatory affairs manager for the National Petrochemical & Refiners Association.

The price of gas is expected to rise as much as 15 cents per gallon nationwide in the coming weeks, according to a U.S. Energy Department report released Tuesday.

But AAA of Utah spokeswoman Rolayne Fairclough said that prices in Utah likely won't increase as much as they will in the rest of the country.

"The intermountain West is just a different market from the rest of the country. We're isolated. We have our own supply and refineries. We don't have the imports coming from the coast," she said.

That isolation proves beneficial to consumers, said John Hill, executive director of the Utah Petroleum Distributors and Retailers Association.

ITD gives go-ahead to Hub City Sign project

By Blair Koch Times-News correspondent

WENDLELL — Now that the Wendell Gem Team has written confirmation that the Hub City Sign can be put back up after it is removed for structural improvements, the project is now moving along.

The sign itself is in good condition; however, its supports are deteriorating and pose a risk to traffic. The city was worried that the sign itself would have to come down permanently.

However, the city recently received a letter from Bruce Christensen, District 4 Traffic Engineer with the Idaho Transportation Department indicating their approval for returning the sign above Idaho Street.

"Based on the sign's historic value, its current use is conditionally permitted," said the letter.

The approval comes with stipulations, including that the city accept full liability for any mishap in taking down and returning the sign.

Once returned, the ITD said that the sign must not interfere with the traffic lights at the intersection of Main and Idaho streets. The sign also must meet all structural safety codes.

"This is good news for us," said Karen Isaacson, Gem Team chairwoman, during last week's Wendell City Council meeting.

Now that the team knows the sign can be put back up, the group will be moving forward with plans for taking it down, building a new support and hanging apparatus and then re-erecting it, indicating Wendell as the "Hub City of the Magic Valley."

The sign flashed into service on December 9, 1946, with much fanfare.

Since then, the sign's colored lights have welcomed visitors.

"Everyone I have talked to wants to save the sign," said Louie Ray, Gem Team member and project chairman. "But it is going to cost us a lot of money. Now that we know we have the OK of the ITD, we will be getting a budget together of when we will take it down and when we will put it back up. We have a lot of fundraising to do."

Costs are estimated at more than $20,000.

"We may be able to save some money by doing some of the work ourselves," he said. "We will be having fundraising events like raffles and anything we can do to get the money we need."

Blair Koch covers the Wendell City Council. She can be reached by calling 318-2607 or by e-mail at blair_206@starmail.com.

Fiduciary threatens to empty polygamist towns

HILDALE, Utah (AP) — A court-appointed fiduciary has demanded two property holders in the twin polygamist communities of Hildale, Utah, and Colorado City, Ariz., pay property taxes or be evicted.

Bruce Wisan told town councils in both communities that he had planned to wait until a property survey was completed before pressuring residents, but because of the tepid response he has received, he has decided to act now.

"We come to the conclusion that waiting is not the best course of action," Wisan said. "I've started to proceed in a direction that will accelerate the decision-making in regard to property taxes."

He said he has delivered a notice to Lyle Jeffs, a younger brother of fugitive Warren Jeffs, the head of the fundamentalist Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

The notice tells Lyle Jeffs to pay property taxes or face eviction, a process that could start in about 10 days.

The other notice went to a family that quickly moved into a home vacated in Colorado City.

Garcia credits antique book-sellers with helping in that investigation. Sanders on Wednesday posted a list of the stolen goods on the bookseller's association Web site.

Sanders and Garcia noted that the theft marks the third time in the past year that rare Mormon books have been stolen in Salt Lake City.

Last year, a small safe containing two early copies of the Book of Mormon were taken from the Beehive House, a home of former church president Brigham Young and a popular tourist destination in downtown Salt Lake City. Garcia said he didn't believe any of the items had been recovered.

Rare books stolen from pioneer museum

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A dozen rare books, including two first-edition copies of the Book of Mormon, have been stolen from the museum operated by the Daughters of the Utah Pioneers, police said Wednesday.

The theft occurred overnight after someone broke into the Capitol Hill museum through a window. Inside, it appeared someone had used a power saw to shatter a glass case where the books were stored, said Utah Department of Public Safety Lt. Tony Garcia. A UHPU officer was patrolling the grounds noticed cut screens and the broken museum window about 1 a.m. Wednesday, Garcia said.

Among the materials taken were 11 copies of the Book of Mormon, the central text of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, Garcia said. Two of the books were second editions published in 1830, the same year the church was founded by Joseph Smith. Several second and third edition books were also returned.

The earliest surviving early copy of the Doctrine and Covenants, another Mormon religious text. Also taken was a Theban wood printing block.

Agents at the museum told police the value of the materials tops $100,000, Garcia said.

Salt Lake City rare book dealer Sanders, however, says he believes their worth could be considerably more because several of the manuscripts bear inscriptions from early church leaders.

Among those is an 1851 Italian translation of the Book of Mormon by Lorenzo Snow, both of the latter were signed by students of the church, said Sanders, who was given a list of the stolen manuscripts by police.

It might be this copy alone could be worth $25,000 to $50,000," said Sanders, who estimates the total value of the missing works at more than $300,000.

Telephone messages left at the UHPU museum by The Associated Press on Wednesday were not immediately returned.

According to the organization's Web site, the International Society of the Utah Pioneers was founded in 1901 to preserve the state's heritage and history. The Pioneer Memorial Museum, which sits adjacent to the Utah State Capitol, houses pioneer memorabilia including artwork, rare books, quilts, furniture, clothing and other artifacts.

The museum is a treasure trove of priceless Mormon and pioneer artifacts, Sanders said.

Security at the museum has not been very tight, said Sanders, who served for six years as a security expert for the Antiquarian Booksellers' Association of America.

"In the past, some of the books stolen Wednesday were among 100 items stolen from the museum in 1993, said Garcia, who was the investigator on that case. All have eventually recovered.

Property tax crusaders still not happy

Group says it will keep pursuing ballot measure

By John Miller
Associated Press writer

House as ill-conceived, and House leaders stressed the Senate of stopping short of serious relief.
"Stopping short is a gentile way of saying they're pathetic," said Chennault, producer of the 1974 TV show "Shazam" who's lived in a Sandpoint log home since 1994. "They have so little sympathy for the people who are suffering."
It's bringing a publicity stunt to bring attention to his cause. April 23, he plans a rally with horses in Boise on the Idaho Statehouse steps, the culmination of a horseback ride dubbed "Property Tax Express" that's been traveling from Boise to the capital since early this month.
Chennault won't say how much participants will ride. "I don't have to tell you that!" he said, adding he doesn't want to undermine his effort. As of last week, his group had collected 12,000 signatures. He's not sure how many they have now.

"We've got to track down all of those citizens," said Chennault, whose own tax bill has risen to $4,000, from $1,000 12 years ago.

On Tuesday, lawmakers in the House abandoned decorum over repeated rejections of legislation by senators.

Frustration became so intense that representatives resorted to outright sabotage: Rep. Jim Clark, R-Hayden Lake, wrote in changes to a final property tax bill in a bid to doom the package. It would have simultaneously capped school maintenance budget growth at 3 percent and asked voters in November if they favored funding schools with property taxes or sales taxes.

Clark eliminated the reference to schools, making it tricky also to cite or counter. "So I could kill it," Clark told The Associated Press, on his changes.
Senators hated it, calling the new language was "irresponsible."

Support for property tax measures in the upper chamber slipped with every new vote. A proposed constitutional amendment to shift property taxes for schools to an increased sales tax fell on an 18-17 vote. A similar House measure failed 20-15. Then a last-ditch House vote to replace $165 million in property taxes by using a budget surplus and a rainy-day fund died 20-15.

Clark's poisoned plan was voted down 30-5.
"Last week we had 15 Senate votes for property tax relief. Now we have 10. The longer we stay, we lose votes," lamented Rep. Bob Nomini, R-Coeur d'Alene.

The Senate has killed them all," Rep. Mike Moyle said.
Senators countered that the House desperately thurs legislation will-nilly across the Capitol Rotary, without first thinking it through.

"One of the unfortunate things about the last day of the Legislature, we don't get enough time to study the consequences, pro and con, of significant changes to our tax code," said Sen. Brad Little, R-Emmett.

Lawmakers, especially in northern Idaho where groups like Chennault's are fomenting unrest, say they'll try to explain to constituents about the dilution of property tax reform — and their commitment to take up the issue again in 2007.

"It's not over and done with," said Sen. John Goeldje, R-Coeur d'Alene.

Embattled doctor might have returned to Egypt

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — A rehiring officer commended by the Idaho Board of Medicine has found violations that could lead to an Idaho doctor having his medical license revoked.

Dr. Nancy Kerr, executive director of the Idaho Board of Medicine, said the board will meet May 12 to consider final action.
"Dr. ColCannon, an attorney in Boise who has represented Kerr, did not immediately return a phone call from The Associated Press on Wednesday. He closed his Coeur d'Alene practice last fall. His medical license was reinstated in 2003 after being denied earlier that year. His license expires in June, but Kerr said formal revocation would warn others in the future.

In documents released Tuesday, hearings officer Kenneth Mallea found that 21 violations involving patients of Kerr could lead to Kerr's license being revoked.

"The evidence and testimony in this case demonstrate repeated violations by respondent of the applicable community standard of care," repeated

Ex-BYU professor pleads guilty in voyeurism case

PROVO, Utah (AP) — A former Brigham Young University instructor, under threat of federal prosecution, has pleaded guilty to second-degree felony sexual exploitation of a minor.

Robert Jackson, 33, who resigned his job at the university after an investigation of information systems after she filed a report, said his client could have faced a minimum 10-year sentence if convicted on federal charges.
Second-degree sexual felonies carry a maximum sentence of one to 15 years in prison.
He was arrested in February on allegations of filming a 14-year-old girl dressing. The girl did not know she was being filmed. Jackson's adult daughter found a video file on Jackson's BYU laptop, according to the probable cause statement.

Jackson's attorney, John Allan, said his client could have faced a minimum 10-year sentence if convicted on federal charges.
Kerr said she would like to take the offer from the Utah County attorney or take his chances with a federal indictment, she said.

BLM proposes birth control for wild horses

HILLINGS, Mont. (AP) — The U.S. Bureau of Land Management is proposing using birth control over the next five years to limit the population growth of wild horses at the Pryor Mountain Wild Horse Range along the Montana-Wyoming border.

The agency said it has concerns about deteriorating conditions at the range and wants to limit population growth while it makes improvements.
"BLM officials also want to use a bait-trapping program this summer to capture about 200 to 24 horses. Linda Coates-Markle, a BLM wild horse and burro specialist, said those methods are more humane and less intrusive than traditional roundup traps that coil horses from the land.
"We have to limit grazing impacts, and that tempers what we get out of the trough and the range has a chance to show an improving trend," she said.
The carrying capacity of the range is just over 140 animals.

assuming good range conditions, Coates-Markle said. The current range is estimated near 160 horses — not counting the goals BLM expects this year — and range conditions cannot be considered good, she said.
"The agency has used an immunocoontrautive on older and younger female horses in the herd since 2001 to manage the health of the herd and the land," Coates-Markle said. Natural mortality — including attacks by mountain lions — took a heavy toll on younger members of the herd two years ago, and BLM does not plan to administer birth control to younger horses as part of their five-year proposal, she said.
"The plan calls for giving birth control to mares 11 and older each year through 2010, beginning this summer. The program costs about $300 per mare for either 11-year-olds or 12- to 15-year-olds if the number of surviving foals falls below a certain level, the agency said. The vaccine used is 99 percent effective at best, Coates-Markle said, and so far prevented 80 percent of foal-born unwanted mares from having foals in any particular year.

Dave Paull, a regional director for the Society of the United States, said he believes birth control can be a very effective tool to slow population growth. He said he shares concern about the impact of the land and said there's been talk in some corners for years about possibly opening wild horse ranges.

"We're saying long-term, we would rather have a safe, healthy herd than an overpopulated, stressed herd," he said.
Paull said he was not familiar with the bait-trapping proposal and could not immediately comment on it.
BLM is taking public comments on its plans through May 5.

Utah school discovers it booked wrong Jon Stewart

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — An embarrassed charter school has discovered it booked the wrong Jon Stewart for its annual gala. The DeVinci Academy, though it had made a deal with comedian Jon Stewart, star of "The Daily Show" and host of this year's Academy Awards, to appear next week, it sent out 500 invitations to businesses and planned for 800 people.
But last week, it learned that it had booked Jon A. Stewart, a former motivational speaker, businessman and part-time professional wrestler from Chicago.

School leaders said earlier in the year they had sent out invitations to a number of celebrities, speakers and authors for the school's annual benefit dinner.
A Stewart had responded, and through months of discussion there was no indication that they had not booked the Stewart they wanted, officials said.

But last week the Standard-Examiner in Ogden called Jon Stewart's publicist in Beverly Hills, and found that the only Jon Stewart available to appear would be the night of the gala was on "The Daily Show."

DVincei leaders were informed of that fact Friday. "It's been a whirlwind," but the community has really rallied around with support," said Debbie Leggo, president of the school's board of directors. "I'm not about celebrities and about kids and helping them get a good education.

After the school canceled Jon A. Stewart this week, performing groups from Weber State University and the Terrace Playhouse offered to do replacement acts at the event, and DVincei welcomed them with open arms.
The school is offering refunds to those who had purchased tickets expecting to see the comedian. Some already have received refunds.
Leggo said she hopes people still will attend the event, but notices will be sent to patrons about the change.

BUHL BUSINESSSES!

Founders Day & Blessing of the Waters

Saturday, April 15 • 11 a.m. - 1 p.m.

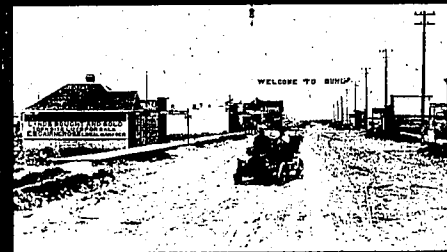

On April 7, 1906 the Twin Falls Land and Water Company held a lot drawing and sale for Buhl Townsite lots at the brand new Hotel Buhl. This is the day that Buhl began. In commemoration of that event 100 years ago, the Buhl Centennial Commission will hold the Buhl Founders Day and Blessing of the Waters Celebration on Saturday April 15, 2006, at the intersection of Main and Broadway on the Senior Citizen parking lot (the site of the original 1906 Hotel Buhl.) The event will run from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. and will commemorate the pioneers who settled Buhl in 1906. Food will be available so participants can grab something to eat while old time music plays in the background. To add to the festivities, spectators are encouraged to wear western clothing to the event. Speakers will include Dr. Jim Gentry, Dan Shewmaker, Jim Barker and Mayor Chuck Sheridan. Dr. Gentry of CSI, author of "In the Middle and on the Edge: The Twin Falls Region of Idaho," will speak about the significance of F.H. Buhl. From the Twin Falls Canal Company, Dan Shewmaker, chairman of the board, will recount the part played by the Twin Falls Land and Water Company in the early days, and Jim Barker, local Buhl historian, will tell the story of the lot drawing and sale of the Buhl Townsite which took place on April 17, 1906.

The Buhl Volunteer Fire Department will bring their tanker truck to the event along with the old historical Buhl fireman hose-cart which will be on display. The tanker truck will provide the water for the "blessing of the water," part of the celebration with Buhl Mayor Chuck Sheridan, pastor of the Church of the Nazarene, giving the blessing. The Buhl Centennial Museum across from Smiths Dairy will be opened for viewing following the talks and the blessing.

Commissioner calls for expulsion of students who protested

Tuesday's protest by students from Caldwell and Valley High schools, and Valley Middle School, followed similar rallies Sunday in Boise and by Nampa students on Monday. The Idaho Press Tribune reported that about 90 percent of the Caldwell marchers were Hispanic, they left classes at about 10 a.m.

"We are not terrorists," the students chanted. Vasquez, a vocal critic of immigration policy who is seeking the Republican nomination in the 1st Congressional District race, left a luncheon Tuesday to watch the Caldwell marchers.

Some of them recognized him and started chanting "Vote no for Vasquez," Vasquez said they should be punished for not being in their classes.

"I understand the exuberance of youth," Vasquez told the newspaper. "But I think it's deplorable that they're out here waving the Mexican flag and demanding rights for people who came into our country illegally. If every one of these kids isn't expelled, it's a tacit approval of their activity."

Vallivue allowed students back into class. Caldwell declared the students truant and the middle school said those involved had to make up the time they missed. Marches took place across the country on Monday after weeks of mounting pressure from immigrant rights supporters for federal overhaul of America's immigration policies. The protesters have been urging federal lawmakers to help an estimated 11 million illegal immigrants settle legally in the United States. A bill passed by the U.S. House would crack down on illegal immigrants and strengthen the nation's border with Mexico. A broader overhaul of immigration law stalled in the Senate last week.

In Caldwell, police said there were no arrests, property damage reports or injuries during the march.

Darrell Flores is a sophomore at Caldwell High School who helped organize the event.

"We want to live tomorrow like the rest of Americans live today," Flores said. Last year, Vasquez championed a federal lawsuit brought by Canyon County against several local business owners. The county contended had hired illegal aliens. A federal judge threw out the suit.

At the demonstration, Vasquez spoke with some of the students who approached him.

"Walking out of school shows you have no regard for rules and regulations," Vasquez said.

Some of the students told Vasquez he was betraying Hispanics.

"My people are Americans," Vasquez said, adding he thought the students were confused about ethnicity and nationality.

Vasquez joined five other people in a counterdemonstration at Sunday's rally in downtown Boise, but denied reports he had to be escorted away.

"There was no confrontation," he said. "I did engage a few of those folks in conversation, but it certainly would not be characterized as being escorted away after an argument."

BPA extends fish center contract

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The contract for the agency that counts salmon and other fish in the Columbia River has been extended while a federal appeals court considers arguments over whether it should remain open.

The Bonneville Power Administration said Wednesday it has extended the existing contract for the Fish Passage Center in Portland through Nov. 30.

The U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco ruled last month that funding for the center should be continued until a lawsuit filed by environmentalists and Indian tribes challenging its closure can be resolved.

The court likely will hear arguments in the case in mid-September. BPA officials said.

Bonneville had decided to split the fish counting duties between two other agencies after a legislative move by Sen. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, that effectively eliminated the center's $1.3 million budget.

The budget cut drew criticism because it came after U.S. District Judge James Leiken cleared data from the Fish Passage Center in his decision to declare inadequate a Bush administration plan for protecting salmon listed under the Endangered Species Act.

Teacher charged in sex abuse case released on bond

GRANGEVILLE (AP) — A Grangeville teacher charged with three counts of sexually abusing children has been released on bond.

Idaho County Prosecuting Attorney Kirk MacGregor said Steven W. Weeks, 52, had been held on two counts of sexual abuse of a minor under 16 and one count of sexual battery of a child under 18. The victims were young boys, MacGregor said.

Judge Michael Griffin set bond of $15,000 and Weeks was released Tuesday after more than a week in the Lewis County jail. He was held there because one of the alleged victims is related to an Idaho County Sheriff's employee, said Capt. Scott Mealer of the sheriff's office.

Weeks was scheduled to appear in court Friday. Weeks, a fifth-grade teacher at Clearwater Valley Elementary, has been on administrative leave since he was arrested March 31 at his home. He had worked for Joint School District 241 for 29 years.

Wal-Mart sues T-shirt maker

ATLANTA — Wal-Mart has filed a federal lawsuit over a warped version of its logo appearing on T-shirts and on a Web site with the word "Wal-ocast" in blue over an iron Eagle clutching a yellow smiley face.

Charles Smith, a 48-year-old computer repairman from Conyers, Ga., began selling T-shirts reading "Wal-ocast" last year, and he displays the more elaborate logo on his Web site.

When Wal-Mart Stores Inc. found out, it requested a cease-and-desist order, calling the phrase and logo tasteless. Smith responded with a federal lawsuit in March, asking the judge to decide if he can continue.

Pilots picket outside Delta headquarters

ATLANTA — More than 300 Delta Air Lines Inc. pilots marched near the company's headquarters Wednesday and placed a giant inflatable rat on a street corner to symbolize what they see as corporate greed in management's effort to void their contract and impose pay cuts. The demonstration came even as there appeared to be progress in talks that were continuing between union and company negotiators at a hotel in New York.

Who'll help farmers?

Will Rousseau, owner of the Rousseau Farming Company, kneels down on a field as agricultural workers plant watermelon in Tolleason, Ariz., April 6, west of Phoenix. Cutting off the flow of willing workers to the fruits and vegetables that need picking would spell the end for many farmers, said Rousseau, who hires up to 700 seasonal workers to harvest his crops.

Immigration debate worries U.S. agriculture

By Juliana Barbassa
Associated Press writer

FRESNO, Calif. — Fourth-generation vegetable farmer Will Rousseau keeps one eye on his crops and another on Capitol Hill, where Congress is debating immigration bills that could mean bounty or bust for farms dependent on migrant labor.

Illegal immigrants make up about 53 percent of the nation's roughly 1.8 million farmworkers, and cutting off the flow of willing workers — legal or not — to the fresh fruits and vegetables that need picking would spell the end for many farmers, Rousseau said.

"We know local folks won't take those jobs, at any price," said Rousseau, who hires up to 700 seasonal workers to harvest his crops in Phoenix.

The bills include a House-approved version calling for military enforcement of the border that would make it a felony to be in the country illegally, Rousseau and other farmers believe that would be disastrous for the industry.

On the opposite end of the spectrum, a bill approved by the Senate Judiciary Committee would allow some illegal immigrants to apply for citizenship while expanding an existing but burdensome guest worker program.

Cutting farmers' access to cross-border workers without giving them an alternative could cost the industry up to $9 billion in annual production, according to the American Farm Bureau Federation, which has long lobbied for a streamlined temporary worker program.

The average wage for skilled and unskilled farm workers is about $10 an hour, said Austin Perez, a labor specialist with the federation, if that were raised to $14, up to a third of the nation's fruit and vegetable farms might be forced out of business, he said. And that still might not be enough to recruit large numbers of native-born workers, Perez added.

While a border crackdown is a vision of doom for many farmers, the numbers show consumers wandering supermarket aisles might hardly feel the difference. That's because very little of the price of produce actually goes back to the farmer. When you take home a $1 head of lettuce, only 19 cents go to the farmer; and six cents of that go to the worker who picked it, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

The real difference would be whether the food is grown in America or abroad. The shift has begun already, as American farmers face steeper labor, fuel and other costs.

For instance, the town of Gilroy, south of San Jose, still calls itself the "Garlic Capital of the World," and anoints an annual Garlic Queen. But China, where production costs are much lower, now

Facing criticism, Dell stands by its strategy

Analysts doubt business model is still working

By Crayton Harrison
Knight Ridder News Service

AUSTIN, Texas — The biggest computer seller in the world isn't budging. Much.

After it missed Wall Street expectations in three out of the last five earnings reports, some analysts questioned whether Dell's business model was still working. Dell executives say they're not abandoning the basic concepts that brought the company to the top.

They are, however, making some small tweaks as they respond to computer buyers' changing tastes.

Dell is known for efficiency, for keeping its internal costs low, giving customers low prices while keeping a tidy profit. Now it's trying to adopt a glitzy image, developing a reputation for style and quality.

The company faces the difficult prospect of finding its formula without ruining it. But Dell believes they have to take some risks to stay on top.

"You become No. 1, you're the biggest in the marketplace, people like your products and you're like, 'Good, I don't need to change anything,'" said Neeraj Srivastava, marketing manager for Dell's business laptops.

In an interview at the company's Austin campus near its headquarters in Round Rock, Texas,

"That's complacency," he continued. "We've seen car manufacturers fall into that trap."

The new laptop computers Dell plans to announce today demonstrate the ways the company will avoid that fate, Srivastava said.

The computers still fit Dell's mold. The company will sell them directly to customers through catalogs, the Internet and the phone, without using middlemen. This allows Dell to better track shifts in demand and changes in the market, adjusting its prices and configurations for maximum profit. That's how it became No. 1.

But these laptops look different. In the Latitude line of business customers, the plastic

"You become No. 1, ... and you're like, 'Good, I don't need to change anything.'"

— Neeraj Srivastava, marketing manager for Dell's business laptops shells of older models have been replaced with a magnesium alloy, making them more durable. It also demonstrates their toughness. Srivastava opened a new Latitude D620, took it on its end and stood on top of it to show that it would not bend.

The colors and design look more stylish, with bolder lines and contrast. And Dell is moving to widescreen monitors across, the Latitude line. That's an uncharacteristically bold move for the PC giant, analysts said.

"A few years back you couldn't point to single Dell laptop and suggest that it was something anybody wanted to carry," said Rob Endler, president of market research firm the Endeavor Group. "We've seen these products become much more attractive over time."

That's part of the plan. Dell is dominant in the United States. It held about 33 percent of the market in the fourth quarter, according to figures released by market research firm International Data Corp. in January. It had a wide lead over the second-biggest U.S. PC seller, Hewlett-Packard Co.

But Dell's market share was about the same the year before. And its growth in U.S. shipments was just slightly ahead of that of the overall market, according to IDC's figures.

In the rest of the world, Dell's sales were clearly outpacing those of competitors, especially in high-growth areas such as Asia and Europe.

So while Dell is sticking to its well-tuned strategy in hot markets, it has to find ways to grow in some of the most saturated areas, such as the U.S. PC market.

China is on U.S. buying spree

But Bush may seek more trade concessions during Hu visit

By Martin Gutsinger
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The Chinese are engaged in a multibillion-dollar buying spree of all things American, from soybeans to hocking jellies, and the huge U.S. trade deficit with China dropped unexpectedly in February.

But the Bush administration said Wednesday that more trade concessions will be needed when President Hu Jintao visits Washington next week to discuss growing unrest in this country over a U.S. trade deficit with China that hit $202 billion last year.

That deficit, the highest ever for the U.S. with a single country, has led to demands in Congress for punitive tariffs against all Chinese products if Beijing does not do more to halt what critics see as the country's unfair trading practices.

The complaints include accusations that China uses not done enough to deal with rampant piracy of copyright products. This practice robs American computer software companies and music and movie businesses of billions of dollars in annual sales.

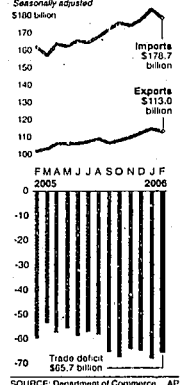

American manufacturers also are upset because they believe China is unfairly depressing the value of its currency against the dollar by as much as 40 percent. Thus, Chinese goods bought by American consumers are significantly cheaper in the United States while American products are more expensive in China.

The trade deficit with China represented more than one-fourth of last year's record $723.6 billion U.S. deficit with

Chairman tells investors Sears is strong despite sagging sales

By Dave Carpenter
Associated Press writer

HOFFMAN ESTATES, Ill. — Sears Holdings Corp. Chairman Edward Lampert assured shareholders Wednesday that the company is very strong financially despite sagging sales and is working hard to improve its Kmart and Sears, Roebuck & Co. stores.

Just more than a year after the combination of the two slumping retailers, Lampert was upbeat about the stores' prospects at the company's annual meeting but did not provide a blueprint for what he envisioned for the long-lagging brands.

"In terms of vision, flexibility and adaptability is what it's all about," he said during two hours of fielding questions from the approximately 100 shareholders who attended the meeting at company headquarters.

He also dismissed speculation that he scooped up Sears for its real estate value and planned from the start to ultimately sell the property to pocket a big profit.

"It's always an option, but it's never been the reason for the merger or something we intended to do," he told reporters in a rare, half-hour news conference after the meeting.

Many industry observers have speculated Lampert ultimately would like to turn Sears Holdings into an investment giant along the lines of Berkshire Hathaway Inc., a company he admires, and take it far beyond retail. But the billionaire chairman, who runs Sears from the Greenwich, Conn., home of his ESJ Investments hedge fund, again did little to tip his hand beyond indicating that finding the store is the top short-term priority.

"We are a very financially strong company, and we're constantly evaluating our options," he said.

"If an environment was rich for making acquisitions, we might do that. If I found that things were doing in the stores weren't working so well, we might accelerate the roll-out of retooled stores, he added.

Tumult was much smaller and the shareholders more supportive than the sometimes-raucous crowd that turned out in Hoffman Estates in March 2005, many upset by the acquisition of more than 200-year-old Sears by a discount retailer not long out of bankruptcy.

While some criticized or expressed concern Wednesday about weak sales, the crowd was dominated by professional investors from financial institutions who trust Lampert's impressive track record as an investor and in resuscitating Kmart.

Stocks rise on solid earnings news, declining trade deficit

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Stocks ended a quiet session with a moderate gain Wednesday on strong earnings news and a decline in the trade deficit.

Wall Street rebounded from Tuesday's losses after Circuit City Stores Inc. reported its earnings jumped 65 percent. The electronic retailer's news, coming off an upbeat earnings report from Alcoa Inc. early in the week, rekindled investor nervous about rising commodity prices and their impact on corporate profits.

In economic news, America's trade deficit improved in February, but the imbalance with China dropped to the lowest level in nearly a year. But the overall deficit was still the third highest on record. The deficit for the first two months of this year is running 13.5 percent above the pace in early 2005, a year when the U.S. deficit hit an all-time high of $723.3 billion.

The Commerce Department reported Wednesday that the deficit fell to $65.7 billion, a 4.2 percent decline from January's record imbalance of $68.7 billion.

We have a minor stabilization of the market after a couple of slightly softer days," said Stuart Schweitzer, global markets strategist at JPMorgan Asset & Wealth Management. "No big surprise."

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 40.34, or 0.36 percent to 12,919.92.

Broader stock indicators also closed higher. The Standard & Poor's 500 index rose 1.55, or 0.12 percent, to 1,288.12, and the Nasdaq composite index rose 2.33, or 0.19 percent, to 2,314.61.

The market seems to be moving in a pattern similar to recent earnings seasons, in which investors were optimistic with high expectations for earnings before companies begin to announce, then enters a pullback or a lull as earnings season begins, said Richard E. Gripps, chief market strategist for Sifel Nicolaus, a broker based in St. Louis.

Investors were also watching even overseas, nervousness about Iran's nuclear capabilities contributed to Wall Street's decline on Tuesday, when the Dow fell more than 51 points.

The market's further signs the housing market is slowing, which some investors view as a sign that Federal Reserve rate hikes are cooling down the economy. The Mortgage Bankers Association's weekly home purchase index decreased by 4.7 percent and the refinancing index dropped by 6.6 percent.

Bio-fall, with the yield on the 10-year Treasury note at 4.98 percent down from 4.93 percent late Tuesday. The U.S. dollar was mixed against other major currencies. Gold prices were higher.

Financial abuse of elderly grows, as does concern as baby boomers age

By Elleen Powell Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — As the U.S. population ages, the elderly are becoming a prime target for financial abuse, sometimes the thief is a stranger who befriends a lonely senior. Other times it's a caregiver or family member who takes advantage of his or her declining mind-

The National Center on Elder Abuse, a Washington, D.C., clearinghouse for elder rights advocates, estimates there may be as many as 1 million victims a year. But it acknowledges that no one knows for sure because there is no comprehensive data on national and because many seniors suffer in silence.

Linda Engle, an expert on elder abuse, believes the majority of cases go unreported. "Some of the elderly never know they've been scammed," she said. "Those who do are often too embarrassed to talk about it. Or they're afraid if they let on that their families, which will see them as no longer capable of taking care of themselves and they'll take away their independence.

Richard Anderson, president of The Eldercare Group, a consulting firm based in Fort Washington, Pa., that trains bankers on regulatory issues, believes that financial institutions need to become more aware of "red flags" of abuse so they can help protect their elderly customers. And she believes "holby boomers," who begin turning 60 this year, need to become more aware of the problem.

"Those baby boomers still formation enough to have parents have truly elderly parents who will be vulnerable," Engle said. "And they themselves are growing older, so the problem will only increase."

She says that seniors who loved ones have been victimized say the thieves prey on seniors' insecurities.

Anderson, 57, of Newport News, Va., said his 90-year-old father, John Hatchin, got caught up in a telephone scam last year.

His father, a retired army colonel who lives in a continuing care facility, got a phone call from someone who told him he had won $250,000, but that the money was hung up in a U.S. Canadian customs office. If her father would send them $7,000 — in money orders — the prize would be freed and sent to him.

His mother, Edna, who said that this was a scam, but it didn't, Anderson said.

Anderson, who operates a Visiting Angels in-home care service, says he accidentally found out about the scam when she ran across the bank withdrawal slips while looking for something else.

"I'm sure I was hoping you wouldn't find it. I'm so embarrassed. It was so stupid," she said.

She believes that like many seniors, her father is "terrified he's going to run out of money" so when some offers to send $250,000 in exchange for $7,000, "it doesn't seem like he's doing get something or nothing."

Sherry Dukins, 54, of New York still gets angry when she talks about what fraudsters did to her mother, Edna, who died in her late 90s in January.

Dukins said that her mother had worked all her life and had been "fiercely independent about her finances long after her husband died in 1969. About 10 years ago, a woman approached her mother on the street as she headed to a senior center.

The woman tapped her on the back and presented an envelope full of $100 bills and asked, "Did you drop this?" Dukins said. She had to, but immediately became engaged in a conversation with this seemingly honest person.

After her mother told the woman she had family in Israel, that she worried about her, the woman offered to introduce her to a "financier" who could help her earn 100 percent on her savings — all she had to do was withdraw to send money to her relatives.

Over the course of several months, her mother turned over $150,000 to the woman.

"I stopped when my mother said, 'I have liquidated all my money, when am I getting this back,'" Dukins said. "She never saw her money again and I was the thief's chief executive care service franchise in Havertown, Pa., said that families need to be aware of how many different people play roles in a senior's life, including caregivers, cleaners, home health aides, repairmen and a host of others.

Meliss recommends that families "remove the temptations" by making sure there's not a lot of cash in the senior's home, that checkbooks and credit cards are locked up and that there aren't a lot of documents lying around with the senior's Social Security number on them.

He also cautions that seniors sometimes are forgetful and shift something's amiss when it's not.

"Frankly, lots of times things go missing, then show up later," he said.

Bob Blancato, coordinator of the Justice Coalition in Washington, D.C., said elder financial abuse is often perpetrated by family members, and that this form is particularly difficult to detect and pursue.

"There's the stigma to admitting it's happening in your own family, and the difficulty of potentially turning in a relative" for the crime, he said.

Another door will open for Taurus

IF APRIL 13 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY, be valiant and fearless in the year ahead. Nothing can hold you back once you have set your sights on a heartfelt goal. All summer and throughout the fall, you can knock down and work hard to achieve your greatest hopes and ambitions. Look for a lucky break in October — or at least a way to make your life a little easier. Your tenacity may be tested in early November and it is wise to listen to the voice of experience and be respectful of the law during that period of time.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): The full moon in your opposite sign may signal an awareness of a shift in a key relationship. If you harness joint energies you can create a powerful team to achieve major undertakings.

TAUROS (April 20-May 20): As one-door closes, another one opens. A relationship might become more influential over the next few days. You may become enmeshed in someone else's grand passion and deep desires.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A important mouth gathers no foot. Big ambitions may be banded about, but when push comes to shove it's the guy who does the actual work that gets the glory. Don't brag without reason.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Tie up loose ends. Today's full moon isn't likely to bring the swiftest road to howl, but it might mark the beginning of new level of enthusiasm where your career or business is concerned.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): With today's full moon, all the pieces of a puzzle can seem to come together. If you are preparing to launch a major project, you will find plenty of willing friends rooting for your team.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): The highest branch isn't always the safest root. Barnyard wisdom may help you escape trouble. Don't rake up the muck when talking things over with partners and you'll be fine.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Today's full moon lights up your sector of the zodiac. An important personal matter may reach a peak or you may arrive at a conclusion about a key relationship. Someone close may choose a new direction.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Once a foundation is laid, you can build. Take stock of all the tiny details and get ready to launch important plans and major initiatives. Gather information from a variety of sources.

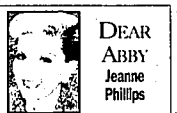

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Strategies can fall short of expectations. Be clear about long-term objectives and be aware of who your friends are. Discuss your ambitions openly with a loyal, trusted companion.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Tongue-lashings limit learning. Gather confidential information and talk things over frankly rather than letting someone get under your skin. This full moon emphasizes achieving recognition.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): During this full moon you might feel a partner is temporarily neglecting your relationship. Don't worry, things bounce back quickly as a major undertaking is launched.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Grab your security blanket and hold it tight. Keep an eye on your bank balance while this full moon lights up the red and black columns. A lack of black ink might make you more ambitious.

Couple find themselves going in opposite directions

DEAR ABBY Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: "Andrew" and I have been dating for about five years. We met just out of high school, when we were both young and still finding ourselves, but have noticed that over the years, as we have grown and established our identities, we have become complete opposites.

First, our religious beliefs: Andrew and I were both raised Catholic. He has not practiced in years. When we met, I was going through a stage where I wasn't really rejecting my religion either. But as I continued through college, I realized I needed religion back in my life and began going to church. I am now active in the church, and my religious and spiritual beliefs are important to me. Andrew, on the other hand, has no desire to be a believer and says he has become an atheist.

Then there's our families: Andrew's family is very free-spirited. Not only are they outspoken and outspoken, they curse and talk about everything and anything. In contrast, my family is very reserved, well-mannered and genteel. We even pray before meals. Needless to say, our families do not mesh well and have had little contact.

I like chocolate; Andrew likes vanilla. I like merry-go-rounds; he likes roller coasters. I like a winter; he likes summer. I'm a worrier; he's carefree. I'm early; — especially my soon-to-be 13-year-old son.

Mind you, my husband is not abusive — but lately, every time my son forgets to do something, he threatens that he's going to kill him, yells that he's no longer my son's father until he straightens up, and on one occasion, he slammed my son into a wall.

I'm scared to death. I don't want my kids hurt (I have a 9-year-old son and a 6-year-old daughter as well, and I love my husband dearly, but I can't take this much longer. He has never acted this way before. So what could be the problem?

TRYING TO UNDERSTAND IN MICHIGAN

DEAR TRYING TO UNDERSTAND: Your husband may be an expert on drugs; but stressed out at work or mental-ly ill. I don't blame you for being seriously concerned, because whatever the cause, he is losing control. You say that he's abusive, and yet the incidents you have described concerning your 13-year-old are examples of verbal and physical abuse.

The best advice I can offer you is to get your husband to a doctor for a thorough examination — and a referral to a psychiatrist for evaluation. Because his change in behavior is recent, he could be in trouble.

POLAR OPPOSITES, CHADDS FORD, PA. DEAR POLAR OPPOSITES: Not with the negative mindset you have displayed in your letter. Not once did you indicate that you are willing to fight for a future with this man. Unless you can figure out what you still have in common, I see little hope for a future with Andrew. The last thing either of you needs is to march down the aisle to the strains of "Let's Call the Whole Thing Off."

DEAR ABBY: I am at my wit's end with my husband and I don't know what to do. It seems like lately he is finding fault with my kids over stupid stuff he's late. You name it — we're opposites. It may have made for an exciting relationship when we were younger, but now that we're talking marriage and children, I don't see how this will work. Our core values are too different. I really do care for Andrew, and we have fun together, but is there any hope for the future?

Water gives brine shrimp their pep

Brine shrimp go into suspended animation when their saltwater ponds dry up. Known as "Sea Monkeys" in toy stores, they reanimate when you add water.

How long can brine shrimp last in a suspended state? Well, oil drillers near Great Salt Lake in Utah dug up some desiccated ones that were determined to be about 100 years old. When placed in saltwater, the little sea simians started partying as if it were still 1799 B.C.

Laid-off worker goes big in job hunt

ERIE, Pa. — A laid-off city worker has taken an unconventional approach to finding a job — posting an ad on a billboard.

Mary Witt, 48, has been looking for full-time work since December, when she was laid off from her City Hall secretarial job. She sought help from employment agencies, scanned internet sites, and newspapers, looking for full-time work, all to no avail.

Her husband, Tim, came up with the billboard idea. He said, "The money, to be honest, was an issue. But I just thought it would get her out there."

They paid $600 for a 10-foot-tall, 22-foot-wide billboard. It includes a photograph of a smiling Mary and the words: "Mary W. Administrative Assistant Looking for Employment. It will be up for a month."

"It's hard out there. That's what turns out to be left behind some rather compelling evidence — the video machine and videotape that recorded his face each time he stood in front of the cameras at the Southside Laundry.

Police said they came away with several close-ups of the suspect, Robert Lynn White, 52, who then was arrested on suspicion of grand larceny.

Even if the portraits were a little fuzzy, police said they would have been able to easily identify the suspect. The suspect was wearing cowboy chaps and a trench coat.

Police are still working to recover the missing cameras.

Diet of sweets sends elephant to sickbed

COLMBO, Sri Lanka — Sri Lanka's most celebrated elephant, "Raja," has fallen ill after eating scoops of cookies, chocolates and other rich food offered to him as part of Buddhist new year celebrations.

Thousands of worshippers have visited Raja at Colombo's 150-year-old Ganguaramaya Temple in recent days ahead of the celebrations starting Thursday.

Many have offered Raja homemade cookies deep fried in coconut oil, chocolate rice cooked in thick milk and fermented slices of sweet pineapple, said monks who care for him.

Monks, a veterinarian and the chief of zoology at Colombo University on Tuesday attended to Raja, 45, who reigned and thrashed about in discomfort in his snail's enclosure.

Elephant's mostly eat vegetation, and their digestive system can not easily cope with rich or processed foods, veterinarians said.

The monks hung a handwritten notice by Raja's enclosure that read: "Do not feed the elephant."

The final count Saturday wasn't far off Leighted's guess of around 6,000, which he collected since 1970. On Saturday alone, he received another 80 caps that weren't included in the final count.

Migrant Council's mission would remain the same

By Pat Marcantonio
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Nearing its 35th anniversary, the Idaho Migrant Council is considering changing its name, but not its mission.

That stated mission is to enhance the lives of Idaho's Latinos, migrant and seasonal farm workers and other low-income people.

"Our mission will remain the same," IMC executive director Danny Ozuna told the Hispanic Business and Professionals Network on Monday. He also discussed when the nonprofit corporation has been and where it is going.

The board is thinking about a new name to reflect the diverse IMC programs, which range from housing to job training, Head Start to health care, scholarships to mental health care, Ozuna said.

"We do a lot more than people realize," he said.

The IMC name also has come to carry some negative connotations from past advocacy efforts on behalf of Hispanics. Those efforts had a stigma associated with them at the time, Ozuna said. At one time, IMC was even considered "rebel-frustrated."

"We're still wanting to be involved in advocacy," Ozuna said, but there are many ways of getting things accomplished, he added.

The IMC will continue to be involved in Cárcel de Mayo and farmer worker appreciation events, but Ozuna is also encouraging staff to get involved in local service clubs and chambers.

"My vision for this corporation: We want to be involved in the community," he said.

Diversity

Although four months on the job, Ozuna previously worked 11 years for the IMC in its job training programs and ultimately, as assistant director. He left and went to work for the Idaho Industrial Commission in Nampa, assisting many Hispanics and advising them about their rights when they got injured. It was 13 years before he returned to the IMC, this time as executive in the Caldwell-based corporation.

"What I've realized is that the corporation has changed. It's got a lot bigger," he said.

The corporation, which has a budget and assets of $12.8 million, has five field offices, including one in Twin Falls and Burley. Its economic contributions to the state economy total $64 million, according to the Migrant Council.

There are 60 full-time employees in administration, and 500 employees who work in the 14 migrant and seasonal Head Start centers, three of which are in Twin Falls, Burley and Mountain Home.

Among Migrant Council programs are emergency assistance, job training and placement, adult and youth education and other employment-related services.

The council also runs seven housing complexes, including two in Twin Falls and one in Heyburn, serving a total of 254 families. Its new family health clinic in Idaho Falls for migrant and seasonal farm workers, and Latino and low-income families is expected to aid 3,000 people during the current service year, while its mental health services which feature family-focused and substance abuse counseling, has helped more than 1,180 clients, according to IMC.

The Idaho Migrant Council also offers domestic violence outreach sites in Nampa and Caldwell.

The number of IMC programs may not be surprising, considering its estimates 25,000 to 30,000 migrant laborers work in Idaho each year, with about half remain in the state year-round.

Because most of its budget is funded by federal dollars, the IMC requires people who participate in its programs to have proper documentation of residency, Ozuna said.

Success story

Ozuna knows the people who are served by IMC.

His father was a farm-labor contractor. He was born in Texas and his family, which included 13 children traveled to the fields of Idaho and Oklahoma, then back to Texas. He was fortunate because when his father decided to stop following the crops, it was in time for him to start school in Caldwell, he said.

He was the first in his family to graduate high school and on to college. He also served as a Caldwell city councilman.

His experience is typical of families who work for agriculture.

Children of migrant families often had a difficult time finishing their education because of the travel, Ozuna said. They also would be packed in the family car and taken to farm fields while parents worked, which made for dangerous situations. That's why the migrant and seasonal Head Start programs run by IMC are valuable, he added.

Impacting lives is not unusual for Migrant Council, the new executive said.

He's seen the lives of employees and people who go through the programs change through their experiences. One of those people is the IMC's chief financial officer, who went through the IMC job training program and on to college.

"It's a success story," he said.

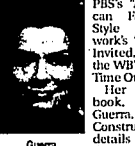

AB Quintanilla III y Los Kumbia Kings have a new live album, featuring their hits and some new material.

Actress, author will appear at CSI as part of Latino outreach program

TWIN FALLS — Author, movie and television actress and comedienne Jackie Guerra will appear at the CSI month at the College of Southern Idaho.

Guerra's presentation will be at 7 p.m. April 20 in the new theater of the Fine Arts building. It is sponsored by the College of Southern Idaho's Access and Leadership Project, an outreach program that helps Latinos get higher education.

Guerra has appeared in several films, including "Selena," "Eat Your Heart Out" and "Picking up the Pieces" with Woody Allen, Kiefer Sutherland, Sharon Stone and David Schwimmer. She has also appeared regularly in television specials and series such as

Guerra

PBS's "American Family," Style Network's "You're Invited," and the WB's "First Time Out."

Her new book, "Jackie Guerra, Under Construction," details her approach for making the most of your circumstances. On her Web site, www.jackieguerra.com, she describes taking her life from that of a "stubbornly ambitious Mexican-American Valley Girl to a stand-up comic, TV and movie actress, jewelry de-

Kumbia Kings break through Latin barriers

Before Frankie J. would take the reigns as an R & B sensation, he would spend most of his time contributing to the danceable, upbeat cumbia styles of AB Quintanilla III y Los Kumbia Kings.

While almost a decade of music charting hits and a list of award-winning recognitions, Quintanilla has watched as his genre has evolved — breaking all barriers in Latin music.

"Over the years, this group, which I created back in 1997, has matured," he said, "I have worked with some intelligent individuals and watched as they've separated themselves from the group, later going on to pursue solo careers. However, as co-founder and producer of the group, it is my duty to continue with this music legacy."

No longer under the vocal directions of DJ Kame or Frankie J. (formerly known as Cisco Bautista), Los Kumbia Kings has moved on — performing in front of sold-out crowds in and outside of the U.S. By doing so, it has become a highly demanded name in Latin music.

Monterrey, Mexico, was an exception, and that was proved back on April 29, 2005, when the city's auditorio nacional (National Auditorium) opened the doors to welcome more than 15,000 music fans for the album, "Kumbia Kings: Live."

LATIN RITMO Estaban Gonzalez

is brought to us, adapted and interpreted in the Kumbia Kings' distinctive style.

What's next?

Recently spreading rumors claim that AB Quintanilla has made the decision of parting himself from Los Kumbia Kings.

"Yes, we have actually been receiving phone calls from various sources stating that Quintanilla has parted from the group. However, no actual confirmation has been made by either the record label or Quintanilla himself," said Vella Bravo with EMI Latin Televisa in San Antonio, Texas. "As far as EMI Latin Televisa is concerned, these are simply rumors and Quintanilla continues with the Kumbia Kings."

Stepping down or not? It may not be a surprising act to anyone if Quintanilla does decide to separate himself from the group. In past interviews, the co-founder of Los Kumbia Kings has made comments about leaving stage appearances to focus more on production work.

"After the tragic passing of my sister, Selena, I could find myself getting back on stage and performing without her," said Quintanilla. "After three years of imprinting myself in the production room, I was introduced to a constellation of star individuals that shared such unique talent and passion for music. I'm grateful that similar to the response my sister Selena received from her music fans, I have managed to receive that same love and passion while leading the Kumbia Kings."

Kumbia Kings: Live

Before group vocalists, Pao Wese, Abel Talamantes, Nando and Pungu, would take their respective position on stage, a screen image of the late Selena Quintanilla Perez would appear. Seconds later, a series of pyrotechnics and a lighted spectacular filled the arena as an enthused AB Quintanilla, Selena's brother, greeted the fans danced and sang along to the Selena y Los Dinós hit, "Baila Esta Cumbia."

"Bailanidos. Como esta mi gente de Monterrey!" Quintanilla

In addition to the historical live-recording performance, "Kumbia Kings: Live" includes the studio recorded "Pachuco." Composed by great Mexican composer Octavio Paz, "Pachuco" is defined as the only known link among two cultures: Mexican and American. The word "pachuco" comes from the Nahuatl native language, "pachoncau" (a piece of government). And who better than Los Kumbia Kings to revive "Pachuco," a song that in the 1990s was a Mafalda Veinad hit, but now Esteban Gonzalez, a Burley native, worked as a writer for and was co-founder of Tejano Y Caperos News in Corpus Christi, Texas, which covered the music scene. He has written about and interviewed Gloria Esteban, Los Tigres del Norte, AB Quintanilla III y Los Kumbia Kings to name a few.

EASY #44

Fill in the grid so that every row, every column, and every 3x3 box contains the digits 1 through 9. That's all there is to it. There's no math involved. The grid has numbers, but nothing has to add up to anything else. You solve the puzzle with reasoning and logic. Find the answers for today's puzzle on page C-20.

VIDEO GAME REVIEW

A battle scene from the vast fantasy world presented in 'The Elder Scrolls IV: Oblivion' for Xbox 360 and personal computers.

Huge fantasy world of 'Oblivion' captivates

BY MATT SIAGLE
The Associated Press

"The Elder Scrolls IV: Oblivion" is almost too much of a good thing.

The vast fantasy world presented in this new video game for Xbox 360 and personal computers will take even the most stalwart adventurers weeks, if not months, to fully explore.

Even then, you may not want to leave.

This 12-rated game ($49.99 for PC, $59.99 for Xbox 360) by Bethesda Softworks LLC was three years in the making, and it shows: there's a handcrafted feel to just about every aspect of this title.

"Oblivion" functions and succeeds on two main levels.

There's the standard dungeon crawl found in most role-playing games where you kill monsters and collect loot, like gold and improved armor, as your powers grow.

It's very well done here, with an array of creatures and foes to fight using the usual swords and sorcery techniques.

What really differentiates "Oblivion" from its peers is the living, breathing world it immerses you in.

We're not talking about some lonely dungeon or even a popular city, but an entire province where heroes, villains and those somewhere in-between go about their daily routine — even if you're off casually riding around on a horse somewhere.

In a day where most fantasy games feature persistent online multiplayer worlds filled with repetitive grind, I found "Oblivion" to be a refreshing, and challenging, solitary experience.

Players can do pretty much whatever they want. Just be prepared for the consequences.

As with most role-playing games, the bulk of your time is spent undertaking quests like retrieving a key or escorting fellow warriors into a battle.

You're just as welcome to start attacking your allies. They won't hesitate to fight back, though.

"Oblivion" clearly falls into the same fantasy category as "The Lord of the Rings," yet manages to stay fresh with its own captivating story about the power vacuum created after the death of ruler Uriel Septim VII (excellently voiced by Stark Trek's Patrick Stewart).

This struggle extends into a sinister parallel universe of sorts called "Oblivion."

Closing the many Oblivion Gates — portals of red searing light that provide the conduit for a madman's zoo of hellbent creatures to flow into the land of Tamriel — is an increasingly harrowing job.

Visually, there's no better game to showcase the Xbox 360's potent power.

"Oblivion" is a no-brainer for fantasy fans, but even those new to the genre might want to give it a try. It's an engrossing example of video-game escapism at its finest.

HEARTS of chrome

Classic car enthusiasts will crowd Expo Center this weekend

BY STEVE CRUMP
Times-News writer.

TWIN FALLS — Whenever the cost of restoring a 40-year-old muscle car begins to pinch, Chris and Orlan Stearns remind themselves that the original sticker price was only about $1,800.

"So we could spend quite a bit and still be ahead of the game when you compare it to buying a new car," said Chris, who's the president of the Magic Valley Early Iron car club, which will hold its 30th annual show this weekend at the College of Southern Idaho Expo Center.

The 1966 Chevrolet Chevelle was Orlan's grandmother's car — passed down in turn by his parents — so it's an heirloom as well as a showpiece.

"It's got a big-block engine and a five-speed transmission and we put a new coat of (red) paint on it," Chris said. "But the (black) interior is original."

About 100 vintage cars will be on display this weekend. Magic Valley Early Iron has been staging the show every spring since 1977 and donating proceeds to various organizations on the CSI campus.

"We'll get about 4,000 people over the two days," Chris said. "That's less than usual because it's also Easter weekend, but if the weather's bad, we might get a whole lot more."

Everything from rat-roads — those are hot-rodd built in the original style of the 1950s, stripped of non-essential parts and finished in primer-like paint — to dragsters will be on display, along with a group of vintage Chevrolet Camaros and some gems like a restored 1935 Ford and a refurbished 1963 Corvette.

As will Chris' Chevelle.

"We drive it," she said. "We don't drive it every day, but it doesn't sit in the garage."

The Chevelle debuted in 1964

About 4,000 people are expected to gawk at about 100 vintage cars at the Magic Valley Early Iron car show this weekend.

If you go ...

• What: The 30th annual Magic Valley Early Iron car show will be held this weekend.

• Where: Eldon Evans Expo Center, College of Southern Idaho, Twin Falls

as a slimmed-down version of the Chevy Impala. By the time they disappeared 10 years later, Chevilles ranged from economical family cars (at least in the era of 30-cent-a-gallon gasoline)

• When: Saturday, 10 a.m.-10 p.m., and Sunday, 10 a.m.-5 p.m.

• How much: Tickets, which are $6 for adults, $3 for kids ages 6-12, and $4 for senior citizens, are available at the door.

to powerful coupes and convertibles. The Chevelle was originally planned as a replacement for the Chevy II, but the latter ended up replacing the Corvair instead.

The Chevy Malibu began life as an unmarket submodel of the Chevelle, and a utility version of the Chevelle station wagon — the famous El Camino — was also part of the lineup.

The Chevelle SS represented Chevrolet's entry into the mid-size muscle car sweepstakes. It came equipped with a 396 V8, and eventually the most powerful rated engine in muscle-car history, the LS6 454 in 1970. The 1972 SS was the last of the great Chevilles, but not nearly as muscular as its predecessors.

As a family car, the Chevelle osted five and came equipped with power steering, power brakes, automatic transmission, air conditioning, stereo radio, vinyl top, full wheel covers and whitewall tires.

Along with the Pontiac GTO, the Chevelle remains one of the most popular cars of the '60s.

"We're careful with it when we take it out, but so far we've been lucky," Chris said. "Just a couple of rock chips."

'THE WILD'

Larry the Anaconda, Nigel the Koala, Bridget the Giraffe and Samson the Lion discover what a jungle the city can be in "The Wild."

Seen Madagascar? Then you've seen this

 The Orlando Sentinel

So you sit down to "The Wild" with your 3- to 8-year-old. It's entirely age appropriate. It's from Disney. It's a cartoon. You're both where you're supposed to be.

But here's how to tell if he or she is a movie critic in the making.

"Mommy, didn't the animals escape a New York zoo in 'Madagascar'? Weren't there funny penguins in 'Madagascar'? And a big pussycat of a lion? And a silly giraffe?"
 "Didn't the animals do a big dance number in 'Madagascar'? And 'Ice Age: The Meltdown'?"

Yes, dear, they did. But you still want to be a firefighter when you grow up, right? Something useful? No movie critic, you!

And you know, animated movies take years to make. "The Wild" was pretty much done on the day last spring when the Disney folks went to a theater, paid DreamWorks their $9, sat down and used that word that Daddy always uses when he bangs his finger with the hammer. That's when they realized "Madagascar" was almost, but not quite, the same movie as "The Wild."

Not that this is a great crime. The idea of pampered zoo animals breaking out of New York

OK, Stiller's funnier. As is "Madagascar."

But "The Wild," about a somewhat cowardly lion (Sutherland) whose son makes a break for it to escape his shadow, and who has a group of friends help him track the kid, has a few distinct twists.

The animation is 3-D. The animals look like plush toys. If you happen to like that.

And it has Eddie Izzard as an annoyed-at-the-whole-cuddly-thing koala.

"As a famous koala once said, 'We will fight them with peaches.'"

There's Jim Belushi as a squirrel in love with a giraffe and Patrick Warburton as a befuddled wildebeest. It has hilarious New York alligators in the sewers and German-accented dung beetles. It has great-looking boats and jungles. And the message—Don't lie to your kids.

"They'll find you out—is better.

So what if the story, once they get to Africa, is no better than "Madagascar"? It's hard to let wild predators do wild things when those wild things involve killing the other furry friends. Except for the bit they stole from "The Lion King."

It's difficult to find genuine threats to the lion. Here, it's a deranged wildebeest who wants to change his place in the food chain, voiced by William Shatner, who is far funnier in next month's animated "Over the Hedge."

Which is the object lesson here for kids, who are going to want to see this. Not every animated film, be it from DreamWorks or Fox or Disney, is created equal.

And if the one you're lining up for is a little unoriginal or otherwise lacking, don't fret. There's always another one just a few weeks away.

man baseball team. With Jon Heder. Directed by Dennis Dugan ("National Security").

• "Failure to Launch" *½ Matthew McConaughey and Sarah Jessica Parker are the mismatched leads in this ostensible romantic comedy about a 35-year-old hunk who still lives with his parents and the consultant who is hired to seduce him into moving out. Totally formulaic, totally not funny. 1 hour, 37 minutes PG-13 (language, sex, adult themes).

• "Firewall"  Harrison Ford stars as a bank exec whose family is being held hostage in this predictable suspense. Things start off promisingly, but soon descend into old-fashioned Hollywood villainy, unnecessary (and nonsensical) red herrings and stuff that doesn't make sense. 1 hour, 45 minutes PG-13 (adult themes, kids in jeopardy, violence, profanity, innuendo).

• "The Hills Have Eyes" * Alexandre Aja's stomach-churning remake of Wes Craven's 1977 original about the cannibal who lives in the family who experience a vehicular accident in the desert. If your idea of a good time is to watch road trippers become road kill, this one's for you. 1 hour, 39 minutes R (extreme violence, dismemberment, blood-eating).

• "Hoodwinked" ½ It may be a poor cousin to the "Shrek" franchise, but this made-on-the-cheap computer-animated feature still has more than its share of snarky gags than Disney's recent CG hit, "Chicken Little." 1 hour, 23 minutes PG (some mild action and thematic elements).

• "Ice Age 2: The Meltdown"  The rare sequel superior to the original. This one has our pal the woolly mammoth (voice of Ray Romano), worried that his kind is extinct, meet up with a female mammoth (Queen Latifah) who thinks she's a possum, headed toward higher ground because global warming is causing floods. 1 hour, 30 minutes PG (discreet sexual innuendo).

• "Inside Man"  Spike Lee transforms a generic corporate-and-bosses scenario into a sharp heist movie by the sheer force of his love for New York City. Denzel Washington stars as a NYPD hostage negotiator called in when a bank is robbed. Clive Owen is the mastermind bad guy, and Jodie Foster is a mystery. Fast-paced, good fun. 1 hour, 39 minutes R (profanity, violence, adult themes)

About the rating system

The ratings in these Knights are by Knight Ridder News Service review. 4 stars: Excellent; 3 stars: Good; 2 stars: Fair; 1 star: Poor • "Larry the Cable Guy: Health Inspector" No rating. The big-screen comedy investigates an outbreak of food poisoning at a four-star restaurant with his new, uptight partner and colleagues a waitress. Directed by Trent Cooper. With Iris Bahr, Megyn Price, Joe Pantoliano, Joanna Cassidy, Tom Wilcox and Tony Danza. PG-13 for crude and sexual content, and for language.

• "Lucky Number Slevin" No rating. Misfortune and mistaken identity land a young man (Josh Hartnett) in an under-the-world battle between two New York crime bosses (Ben Kingsley and Morgan Freeman). With Stanley Tucci, Bruce Willis and Lucy Liu. Directed by Paul McGuigan ("Wicker Park"). R for strong violence, sexuality and language.

• "Neil Young: Heart of Gold"  In Jonathan Demme's intimate concert film, the 60-year-old folk-rocker strums his guitar and the audience's heartstrings. 1 hour, 43 minutes (cautionary drug references).

• "The New World" ½ The establishment of the Jamestown settlement in 1607 leads to a clash between European and Native American culture and love. Airs between John Smith (Colin Farrell) and Pocahontas (Q'orianka Kilcher). Terrence Malick's breath-takingly beautiful film is a meditation on America's founding myth. 2 hours, 15 minutes PG-13 (violence, eroticism).

• "Scary Movie 4" No rating. Comedy director David Zucker ("Airplane"), the "Naked Gun" franchise, "Scary Movie 3" and "Ruthless People" takes aim at some famous fright films. With Anna Farris, Regina Hall and Craig Bierko. PG-13

• "The Shaggy Dog" No rating. The new version of Disney's ever-hairy tale of man mingling with best to his betterment mines the original 1959 Tommy Kirk-Fred McMurray film as well as the 1976 Dean Jones sequel "The Shaggy D.A.," with producer-star Tim Allen playing a deputy district attorney who turns into a canine after being bitten by a 300-year-old Tibetan bearded colic. Naturally, he rediscovers his humanity, becoming a better husband and father as a pooch than he ever was as a man. The film is strictly for the very young who will find giggles in the anthropomorphic mash-ups and won't be too distracted by the predictably mawkish sitcom plot. Directed by Brian Robbins. With Kristin Davis, Zena Grey, Spencer Breslin, Robert Downey Jr., Phillip Baker Hall, Danny Glover and Jane Curtin. (1:37) PG for some mild rude humor.

• "She's the Man"  Shakespear's Twelfth Night set in a prep school where Viola (Amanda Bynes) impersonates her brother to win a spot on the soccer squad. Call this gender-comedy Gender "Beneath Like Beckham." 1 hour, 45 minutes PG-13 (sexual innuendo).

• "16 Blocks"  Ricco Willis as a burned-out cop whose circuitry is rewired by petty (John Mos Def), the small-time felon in his custody. 1 hour, 45 minutes PG-13 (violence, profanity)

• "Slither" ½ Like "Tremors," only ickier, this tongue-in-cheek horror flick about giant alien slugs that invade a Newherville, Tenn. skewers the genre while delivering seat-quirming scares. With Nathan Fillion, Elieabeth Banks and Michael Rooker. 1 hour, 34 minutes R (gore, poop, violence, profanity, sex).

• "Stay Alive" No rating. Some folks discover the video game they play is too realistic — each gets murdered in precisely the manner in which his or her character dies. With Jon Foster, Samarie Armstrong, Frankie Muniz, Sophia Bush and Adam Goldberg. Directed by William Brent Bell. PG-13 for horror violence, disturbing images, language, brief sexual and drug content.

• "Take the Lead" No rating Antonio Banderas plays a professional dance teacher in the New York public schools who, with his students, blends classical methods and hip-hop instincts to create new forms. With Alfre Woodard, Rob Brown and Yaya DeCosta. PG-13 for thematic material, language and some violence.

• "V for Vendetta"  Dark, Orwellian fun about a masked terrorist avenger and his charming young co-conspirator, scheming to topple a fascist regime in near-future Britain. Based on the comic book series, produced by the Wachowskis Brothers and starring Hugo Weaving and Natalie Portman. 2 hours, 12 minutes R (violence, profanity).

• "The Wild" No rating. Disney's "Madagascar"-like animated comedy about a bunch of wild critters in large in the big city. With Kiefer Sutherland, Eddie Izzard, Jim Belushi, William Shattner and Janeane Garofalo. PG-13.

• "The World's Fastest Indian"  Anthony Hopkins stars in his tight and lively true-life tale of a New Zealand eccentric who, in the 1960s, set a land-speed record on his patched-together old Indian. Motorbikes. 2 hours, 7 minutes PG-13 (adult themes, profanity) happily married to travel agent Jane (Leon) and pleased to be the father of 6-year-old Billy.

Back at the office, Dick gets the call he's been waiting for. He's being promoted to vice president of communications, a job that includes rubbing shoulders with Chief Financial Officer Frank Bascombe (Richard Jenkins) and the company's legendary chief executive, Jack McCallister. Jack is nicely played by Alec Baldwin, who had a similar role in "Elizabethown" and is becoming the actor of choice to portray blustery tycoons with questionable values. Though Jane quits her job on the strength of Dick's promotion, his situation is a set-up. He's being made the company full guy, tapped to announce CEO's quarterly projections as the company goes up in smoke. Then Dick is out of a job and finds that his pension is gone as well.

Much of "Dick & Jane" is concerned with how the family copes as Dick finds it close to impossible to get a new job. The movie takes jobs at Wal-Mart (thinly disguised as Kostmar) and offers some clever moments like the family showing up in a neighbor's sprinklers. All this is pleasant enough, but never anything more, a series of moments that should be heading toward something but never are. The same goes for Dick and Jane's initial, desperate forays into armed robbery. But this material is better than what comes next, a rehearsed revenge plot that is equal parts uninteresting and hard to follow.

It is never completely lost with "Fun With Dick & Jane," Carrey and Leon are gifted performers and work well off each other. Still, the film's over-the-top nature can't disguise the fact that the picture offers little delivery for all its buildup. Everyone involved with this production must have known there was a good movie somewhere, but no one's been quite able to find it.

"Wolf Creek" No rating

Occasionally — very occasionally, as in once or maybe twice in history — a slasher movie will assert itself with such singularity that it somehow transcends its genre limitations. Halloween, let's see, well, there was the original "Texas Chainsaw Massacre" and Sam Raimi's "Evil Dead II," and that's about it. Some would throw the original "Halloween" on the list, but I'm not one of them. In any event, not only does "Wolf Creek" not belong on the list, it doesn't even belong in any story in which "the list" is mentioned. If you've seen any installment of "Halloween," "Scream," "Friday the 13th" or "Scary Movie," you've seen "Wolf Creek." The one tiny wrinkle here is that it's Aussie, not American, so everybody says "mate" before they die. It is worth getting off the couch for Himm, only if you're really jaded.

The setting is the outback, though as is common, the real geographical dichotomy in the film is between the urban — hip, sophisticated, licentious, unrepentant — and the rural, symbolized by brutality, perversity, cunning and monstrosity. As writer-director Greg McLean sets it up, three twenty-something vagabonds — Liz (Cassandra Magrath), Krisy (Kestie Morris) and Ben (Nathaniel Phillips) — leave the sybaritic car in a beat-up jalopy after a pointless tequila and Smirnoff ice binge and head inland, their goal being the Wolf Creek Crater, a giant, circular scar in the earth's crust where a million tons of meteorite came to call a home eons and so ago. Is there any connection between the otherworldly desolation of the place, its conly with something from Out There. Its sense of cosmic vibration and the terrible goings-on? No. The curse they run into way out in nowhere is the one you can run into on any city street: a nut with a gun and a knife.

The nut is played by John Jarratt, who comes on as Mr. Friendly in a bush hat when he rescues them after a hike because their car is dead; he regales them with tales of hunting the outback, which slightly horrifies them. Of course, he's every townie's darkest cliché of a rural sociopath, a serial killer with an unquenchably violent thirst for domination. When they wake up the next morning, it's already too late: They're trussed up for the day's fun.

And that's it: The bad guy with the silencers (he'd have a Deep South accent and a chaw in his gums if the movie were American in origin) torments them and let's them have it one at a time. There's a little escape drama affiliated with each, and possibly it's no surprise that the two women do a lot better than the guy. His plan: walk across a million square miles of desert barefoot. Oh, that's brilliant.

—Washington Post

"An Unfinished Life" PG-13

A bear runs through "An Unfinished Life," both literally and figuratively, a bear that symbolizes the ways this potentially inviolate film goes astray. And despite the presence of high-wattage talent like Robert Redford, Jennifer Lopez and Morgan Freeman, astray is where it definitely goes. To be fair, "An Unfinished Life" is directed by Lasse Hallström, is not as damaged as might be imagined given the months it spent on the Miramax shelf in the wake of that company's reorganization. It's an acceptable film, but the story of family ties and forgiveness simply cannot manage the emotional connections it is desperate for.

That, of course, is not the bear's fault. But if you've seen the documentary "Grizzly Man," the first thing you notice about this film's bear (played by the Doug Seus-trained Bart II, the successor to the legendary Bart) is how phenomenally sleek he is, groomed and blow-dried enough for a Ralph Lauren ad.

"The same can be said for "An Unfinished Life's" earnest narrative about troubled relationships, slicked-up and polished to within an inch of its life and not any more real than the bear. "This is the kind of film that which someone asks, 'Do you want to know the ugly little truth?' It takes an effort not to scream, 'No, no, a thousand times over.'"

The other problem with the bear is that he is not just a random beast roaming rural Wyoming factually (in the Columbia), he is on the prowl for awkwardly metaphorical purposes. And if the bear's presence is too pat and obvious, so is the screenplay by the husband-and-wife team of Mark Spragg and Virginia Korus Spragg.

That script has an interesting history. It started out with discussions between the Spraggs. He, a novelist and screenwriter, turned the idea into a novel. She, a former therapist, did the first draft of the script.

The leanly written novel was widely praised for its unassuming mental nature when it was published last year, but that quality is nowhere to be found in the film. Which is not surprising given that director Hallström, whose previous films include "The Shipping News," "Chocolat" and "The Cider House Rules," is a known wallower in emotion.

High-fliers played by Jim Carrey and Tea Leoni rap on corporate ladder-climbing with Fun with Dick and Jane.

"Fun with Dick and Jane" PG-13

"Fun With Dick & Jane" plays like the setup for a movie that never materializes. It has all the elements for a successful comedy, but once the premise is presented, the film doesn't know how to deliver on its promise. That doesn't mean there is no fun in "Fun." With gifted professionals like Jim Carrey and Tea Leoni in the starring roles, a script co-written by Iudd Apatow ("The 40 Year-Old Virgin") and direction by Dean Parisot ("Galaxy Quest"), it would have to have amusing moments, and it does. But although a lot of attention has clearly gone into making those small moments funny, no one has thought to give "Dick & Jane" any big ones. Instead of building on them, the film's incidents simply follow one another before culminating in a resolution that is both over-complicated and underdeveloped.

The time is certainly appropriate for a remake of the 1977 Jane Fonda-George Segal vehicle about well-off people resorting to a life of crime when they can't make those pesky ends meet. And the new "Dick & Jane" goes a lot of mileage out of being set in our current age of corporate excess. Disgraced executives at places like Enron and "You are given prominent "special thanks" in the closing credits, and much of what happens to high-flying corporation Globodyne seems patterned on the Enron imbroglio.

Before we get to Globodyne, we meet the Harpers. Dick ("Carrey) is a well-off executive, a bit jealous of a neighbor's special-order Mercedes but otherwise

KARMA FITZGERALD/The Times-Tribune

The prime rib is the star of shows at Rowdy's.

Rowdy's serves up family-friendly meals

BY KARMA M. FITZGERALD
Times-Tribune writer

About Rowdy's

GOODING— Dining with kids can be rather harrowing experience.

Temper tantrums and food fights aside, finding a place that makes a child feel welcome can be difficult. But Rowdy's front door proudly proclaims "kids welcome" and we certainly found that to be true in two different visits to the restaurant.

The first time around, the kids and I checked in for an early dinner. My two youngest children ordered up chicken strips from the children's menu, while my oldest chose a sandwich. The first good sign: The waiter took time to cut the steaks in half for the kids' drinks. This makes it so much easier for them to drink and eliminates the possibility of early spills.

There were also coloring books and crayons available, and I'm the kind of mom who appreciates any opportunity for distraction.

I ordered the lemon chicken. I'm not sure how they prepared the meat, but the spices were rather bitter. The vegetable side was a rather bland mix of frozen peas and carrots. The meal also included a roll, salad bar and a heaping helping of Tater Totz. The tots were good, but unnecessary with the other sides.

I have to recognize our waiter, 'Trini Sinder, who also doubles as the bartender. He was the only employee on the floor on a busy afternoon, but very patient and as attentive as possible.

On our second visit, my husband and I took the kids for a Saturday evening meal. The younger two ordered off the children's menu again and my oldest had a California Wrap. The kids reported their meals were good, although my daughter said the wrap was a bit spicy for her taste.

My husband had a steak sandwich for $7.95. He was amazed at the quality for the price. The portion size was hearty and the meat tender and cooked to his liking.

I found the same was true with the prime rib. Like my beef very rare, and Rowdy's staff did not disappoint.

Again, the wait staff shined. Our waitress, Jennifer Merritt, was clearly familiar with feeding

Willie Nelson
"You Don't Know Me: The Songs of Cindy Walker"
 (Lost Highway)

Although the standard "You Don't Know Me" might be songwriter Walker's best-known composition, fellow Texans like Nelson think of her more as the behind-the-scenes genius of Western swing. If some of the fiddle-and-pedal steel work on this album sounds virtuosically familiar, that's because Willie dragged Bob Willis' old cohorts Johnny Gimble and Buddy Jimmons into the sessions. While that Texas Playboys precision-jump sound dominates most of the disc, there's room left over for some of Nelson's most bizarre vocal phrasings yet, as well as a truly magisterial cowboy epic, "Dusty Skies" (No, it's not the brokeback song — Walker was not that kind of a gal, from what we know from her songwriting, anyway. Although that "Cherokee Maiden" was a mighty hot little number).

Sound bites: RECENT CD RELEASES

Pink
"I'm Not Dead"

(Arista)

So many shades of Pink to absorb on her new album "I'm Not Dead." There's protest singer Pink. Bluesy Pink. Balladeer Pink. Rocker Pink. And, of course, smarter-than-the-average-pop-star pop star Pink.

As she has in the past, Pink shows off that incarnation remarkably well on the lead-off single, "Stupid Girls," where she lampoons celebrantes such as Paris Hilton and Lindsay Lohan for short-circuiting young girls' ambitions to be studious and taken seriously.

Then she follows it up with the protest folk of "Dear Mr. President," where, with the Indigo Girls' help, she earnestly asks President Bush, "How can you say no child is left behind? We're not dumb and we're not blind/They're all sitting in your cells while you pave the road to hell."

Equally impressive is the mournful "I Got Money Now," where she declares, "You don't have to like me anymore, I got money now," though she doesn't believe it. Though she does a bit of recycling — "Who Knew" is essentially her take on Kelly Clarkson's "Since U Been Gone" and, musically, "Leave Me Alone (I'm Lonely)" owes a lot to The Killers' "Mr. Brightside" — Pink continues to stretch the boundaries of what people can expect from her and from their pop stars. "I'm Not Dead" shows that "stupid girls" don't have to dominate the pop charts.

Pink

small children and took extra time to give the kids a good experience. She made sure my oldest child still got the candied fruit treat that came with the kids' meals even though she hadn't ordered off the children's menu. Without asking, Merril also brought me the extra pile of napkins every mother needs without me asking.

Rowdy's is owned by Walter and Stacey Park, who opened the place in 1998, but it's leased and operated by Kevin Casch. Casch said business has been good since another Gooding restaurant closed, leaving Rowdy's the only place in town for steaks and other grill fare. The problem is that he has a very small kitchen and little storage, so he runs out of menu items often and early.

The first time we went to Rowdy's on a Thursday at 5 p.m., it was already out of baked potatoes. On a Saturday night at 7, it was out of chicken strips, and I ordered the next-to-the-last piece of prime rib. Casch recommends reservations for those who want to guarantee a seat and dinner.

In general, the food was fine. Although I didn't enjoy my chicken meal, the kids liked their selections and my second meal more than made up for the first experience.

More importantly, I found the atmosphere welcoming. Casch said he goes out of his way to create comfort for families during the day, but the place becomes more of a pub setting after 10 p.m.

He often brings in live entertainment.

Music

BLACK EYED PEAS

The group enjoys a rare spot in hip-hop

Los Angeles Times

SAN DIEGO — The man they call Will.I.Am has one of the busiest hard drives in hip-hop these days, and he carries it with him in a case marked "Will's Travel Kit." Last weekend, the leader of the Black Eyed Peas slid behind the keyboard of a computer in the mobile music-studio bus, follows him on tour, loaded up the drive and clicked through a directory of his dizzying workload.

There were chunks of the new songs he's producing for Nas, Justin Timberlake, Snoop Dogg, Macy Gray and Diddy, as well as a theme song he's producing for the Wolfgang Petersen film "Poseidon" and recent remixes he's done for the Rolling Stones, Michael Spivey of R.E.M. and Busta Rhymes.

But the hard drive is more than music projects. Will clicked on a video file: "This is the add-as campaign I did for World Cup," he said, bringing up an image of kids playing soccer on a dusty field with their kicks keyed to a pulsing, Latin-flavored soundtrack. "And this one is a short film I did with Sneakers; they're doing films because 'Tivo is Killing commercials.' The videogames of the advertising world are important to it because the Black Eyed Peas are corporate America's leading hip-hop partner and proud of it."

The Peas are now on the Honda City Tour, a 35-city tour kicked off last week in Fresno, Calif., and ending in Colorado in May, and they have done commercials for Verizon, Apple iTunes and Best Buy. They rewrite one of their songs to accommodate a major NBA advertising campaign. They are also characters in a video game called "The Urbz: Sims in the City," which they have performed at the Super Bowl and, on Sunday afternoon in San Diego, Will and the other three members of the group met with executives of the

Coming to Nampa

The Black Eyed Peas and The Pussycat Dolls will play the Idaho Center in Nampa at 7:30 p.m. on May 19. Tickets, which are $35, can be reserved by phoning (208) 442-3232 or online at idtickets.com. The Idaho Center is located at 16200 N. East End Drive on Nampa's can-id.

Iard Rock Hotel to go over plans to create a Black Eyed Peas suite. As Fergie, the group's female singer, examined a swatch of faux chintilla fur, Will told a surprised Iard Rock official that the planned multimedia experience for the room wasn't ambitious enough. "Is there any way to hook the room up to my hard drive so I can pick what people see and hear when they stay in the suite? I mean, it's our suite."

The group's members—Will, Fergie, Taboo and Apl.de.Ap—grew up in Los Angeles. Will said growing up in the city's urban grid primed them to view the world through brand names.

"In Beverly Hills do you have billboards on every damn corner? Do you have posters on every wall, stuff sitting in the suburbs? Well, you do where I grew up," he says. "In the urban areas, everything is signs for liquor stores and motels and ads for sneakers and cars and Schlitz malt liquor. They're selling you stuff your whole life. So hip-hop made it part of its culture."

The Peas have a rare spot in hip-hop. Separate in themes and vibe from the gangsta scene that long dominated rap, the group found it hard in the 1990s to capture a mass audience. While they were waiting for "positive" hip-hop to make its mark in America, they toured the rest of the world, which most rappers ignore or find unexciting.

"The world caught on; before the United States caught on, and the beauty of being able to travel the world was that we turned around that whole concept that you have to be big here first," Taboo said. "In Vietnam, we can go and get big audiences, and we've been going there for so long. A lot of other hip-hop groups don't even go. And that helps with the advertising, too. We have a global audience...we travel, and our name travels."

The Peas also love to come home. Wednesday night they played the second show of a sold-out, two-night stand at the Gibson Amphitheatre in Los Angeles. It was their first time as a headliner at the venue, and it was clear they were excited about coming back to play to a hometown crowd. In February, the band comes home on a career trajectory that has made it one of the stars of the moment in music. The Peas had the fifth-best-selling album of last year in the United States, and their appeal to young music consumers is clear in the fact that their song "My Humps" is the first master ring-tone to break the threshold of 2 million tones sold.

Will and Apl were known as Will Adams and Aali Pineda when they began rapping together in eighth grade in 1999. "Five years later, they were signed to Eazy-E's Ruthless Records and performed in a trio called Atban Kinn, but the label cooled on the group because its themes seemed out of touch with the rap on the radio and on the charts. By the middle of the decade, Jaime Gomez, a.k.a. Taboo, became the third member, and the "group had the more soulful sound of Black Eyed Peas."

The Peas received critical acclaim for their Interscope albums in 1998 and 2000, but their major commercial success came with the addition of their fourth member, Stacy "Fergie" Ferguason, who had been in a teen-pop group called Wild Orchid. Fergie was also a performer on the Disney Channel show "Kids Incorporated." Fergie has become so popular that she is preparing a solo album, and Will has stepped in as a producer.

BURLEY — The Magic Philharmonic will wrap up its season Friday night with its annual spring concert.

Guest artist for the concert will be The Imperial Glee Club. The club was established more than 90 years ago as a four-part male chorus. It now performs with more than 30 voices.

This Logan, Utah-based group schedules two major concerts each year, tours senior citizen centers, and performs at church services and at organizations' special events in Utah and Idaho. On May 5, it will sing at the 90-year celebration at Eccles Theater.

Guest conductor for the spring concert in Burley will be Alan Hale. Hale has been active in music circles in Mini-Cassia for many years.

He was choral director at Minico High School for 17 years before teaching computer science at Burley Junior High School for eight years. Before coming to Rupert, he taught in Pocatello and American Falls. He has been the music director for many Broadway musicals at Minico High School and was president of the Idaho Music Educators. He was named musician of the year by the Burley Music Club and also music educator of the year by the IMEA, both in 1977.

Andrew Alburgor and Jim Remke play the title roles in Company of Fools' production of 'A Year with Frog and Toad,' which opens Wednesday in Halley.

'Frog and Toad': A ribbeting play

BY KAREN BOSSICK
Wood River Journal

HALLEY — It's not just for toddlers.

"The Broadway musical based on 'Frog and Toad' is designed to captivate both children and adults with its sophisticated humor and catchy song and dance numbers.

"I'm a substitute teacher and I've found that many of the teachers read the book when they were young," said Andrew Alburgor, who plays the part of Toad in the Company of Fools production that opens Wednesday. "And they're excited, maybe even more excited, as the kids to see it brought to life."

"The plays for those who have a kid, work with a kid, ever were a kid," Director John Glenn said. "It's appropriate for everyone."

Company of Fools will stage "A Year With Frog and Toad" through May 7 at The Liberty Theater.

And it will offer discounted ticket rates — $10 for those 18 and under and $18 for adults — to encourage entire families to come.

The titular amphibians hop from page to stage as they emerge from hibernation in the spring to engage in a series of adventures from planting a garden to going sledding.

Along the way, the two best friends learn important lessons about friendship and about the value of being different. They learn about the challenges and rewards of friendship and that having a best friend is about as good as it gets. And they learn that a friend who's different makes it even more special. After all, if each one of us was exactly alike, one of us would be unnecessary.

"Frog and Toad are kind of like the Odd Couple, kind of like Oscar and Felix," Glenn said. "Frog is always wanting Toad to go on an adventure and Toad, quite frankly, is a worrywart."

who would prefer sitting with a quiet cup of tea."

"For instance, in one scene Frog convinces Toad to go sledding with him. Halfway down the hill, Frog bites a bump and Toad continues down the hill by himself, never realizing that Frog is no longer with him.

As he does, the moles pull out their binoculars and report on Toad's wild ride.

Conversely, Toad teaches Frog the meaning of patience when Frog plants a garden and does everything he can think — singing, reciting a poem, playing a tuba, even dancing — in hopes plants will emerge from the ground.

"When are they gonna grow?" Frog asks impatiently.

"Soon," replies Toad.

"When are they gonna get big?" Frog asks impatiently.

"Soon," assures Toad. "I like that no matter what happens they're friends until the end," Alburger said. "I go along on Frog's adventures and I don't like it. But it all works out in the end."

"Frog and Toad" was conceived by Arnold Lobel, a Schenectady, N.Y., native who developed his penchant for drawing animals as a sickly child who missed a lot of school.

"His book 'Frog and Toad' — one of nearly 100 books that he wrote and illustrated — won the Caldecott Award in 1971. His character Adrienne Lobel had the idea to adapt her father's book for the stage and she asked her brother Willie Reale to come up with music that mirrored the Dixieland jazz and ragtime that she remembered her father listening to as he wrote "Frog and Toad" for her.

"Bamboo comes from bamboo shoot, rutabaga comes from rutabaga root."

"The resulting Broadway musical earned 2004 Tony nominations for best musical, best book and best original score.

"John told me it would be a month-long smile from the time we started our two-week rehearsal until the time the curtain closed," said Tony Allison, who plays a plethora of characters. Alburger and Jim Renke, who play Toad and Frog, will not wear webbed feet or sport a warty complexion. Rather, they'll be attired in suits of green and brown that provide the essence of the character similar to the "Frog and Toad" book illustrations. Allison, Glenn and Rachel Abrams will son through a plethora of costume changes as they play a host of characters, including the moles.

"Their birdies arrive adorning in blue, carrying tiny antique suitcases covered with world travel stickers. The squirrels can be instantly identified by their brown hunting caps with big floppy ears.

R.L. Rowsey will provide the music, with the help of Wood River High School Jazz Band musicians Samantha Engel, Simone Kastner, Dustin Bradley and Brian Tvan.

And Leslie Harrington has choreographed movements to the Charleston, soft-shoe and headwinds that fit the characters, from feather ruffling for the bluebirds to the painfully slow movements of the snail who brings the mail. "It's not Swan Lake but it's kid-friendly," she said.

Children's Easter egg hunts scheduled for Friday and Saturday in the Magic Valley.

Friday

Twin Falls

• The College of Southern Idaho will sponsor an Easter egg hunt at 4 p.m. in the center of the campus. Campus organizations are donating funding and staffing for kids' activity booths, such as face painting, egg decorating and various crafts. Activities surrounding the event will be held for an hour or two after the Easter egg hunt. Visitors are encouraged to arrive early enough to make sure their children can get to the area appropriate for their age groups. There will be separate scrambles for kids 0-3, 4-6, 7-9 and 10-12. The event is free and open to the public.

Saturday

Twin Falls

• The Twin Falls Department of Parks and Recreation and the Twin Falls Optimist Clubs will sponsor an Easter egg hunt at 10 a.m. in City Park. There will be more than 300 dozen colored Easter eggs hidden throughout the park, and competition for four different age groups: 2 and under, 3-4, 5-7 and 10-10. For each age division there will be three golden egg hidden, each of which can be redeemed for two $1 coins. For more information, call 736-2265.

• Bridgeview Estates will sponsor an Easter egg hunt at 10 a.m. For more information, call Carmie Murphy at 736-3933. Bridgeview Estates is located at 1028 Bridgeview Blvd.

• The Twin Falls Care Center will sponsor its annual Easter egg hunt at 2 p.m. for kids up to age 12. It's located at 674 Eastland Dr.

Eden

• Anderson Camp will sponsor an Easter egg hunt at 11 a.m., just off Exit 182 on Interstate 84. There will be two different age groups, 1-5 and 6-10.
