Water rule void, judge says Decision could force groundwater users to shut down

By Michelle Danlop
Times-News writer

GOODING — Magic Valley groundwater users will spend the weekend wondering whether their irrigation and domestic pumps will be shut off, following a judge's ruling, yesterday.

District Court Judge Barry Wood deemed a tenet of Idaho's water law dead last Friday afternoon. His order irrigates thousands of acres of irrigated farmland in the region as well as dairies and domestic water users. Few had enough time to sift through the 127-page opinion and come away with a complete understanding Friday evening.

The court case ultimately pitted senior surface water users against junior groundwater pumpers. Local irrigation companies have alleged water shortages due to over appropriation of the Eastern Snake River Plain Aquifer. Until last May, the region suffered through several years of drought, putting even more pressure on the depleted aquifer to provide water for all uses.

"In times of scarcity, administration of water under Idaho's version of the prior appropriation doctrine is not a user-friendly business," Wood wrote. "To the contrary, it is harsh — there are winners and there are losers."

In January 2005, seven Magic Valley irrigation districts and canal companies petitioned Karl Dreher, director of the Idaho Department of Water Resources, to apply Idaho's first in time, first in right rule — or prior appropriation doctrine — and curtail groundwater pumping. Dreher ordered groundwater users to provide mitigation, but the amount and timeliness disappointed surface water users. Dismayed by Dreher's response, several surface water parties took the state to court in August 2005.

On Friday, Wood deemed "unconstitutional and void" Idaho's rules of conjunctive management, the principal of managing the state's surface and ground water together, and gave weight to the surface water users' call for curtailments.

The conjunctive management rules do not contain "reasonable and objective standards, omit significant concepts of the law, try to rewrite others; and fail to establish a time frame for administration commensurate with the needs for irrigation; the result is a diminishment of vested rights. The diminishment results in an unconstitutional taking," Wood wrote.

Tom Arkooch, an attorney for surface water users, noted that Wood's ruling protects

NEW GOVERNOR Risch ponders mercury issues

By Michelle Danlop

BOISE — The ball is back in Idaho's court in terms of setting rules for mercury emissions from coal-fired power plants.

And, the direction of that plan will fall in the lap of newly inaugurated Gov. Jim Risch, following the federal government's finalization of its regulations this week.

"I am very aware of this issue," Risch said. "I am receiving input from a variety of sources regarding mercury and the environment."

TWIN FALLS — While Gov. Jim Risch gave his inaugural address, the College of Southern Idaho rejoiced.

Risch said there were three areas of concern that he wanted to address as the next governor of Idaho, and one of them was the expansion of nursing programs in the state schools.

"I will, very shortly, appoint a task force of stakeholders to advise and assist in this effort," Risch said. "I will also work with our educational

Study shows rise in futile cancer treatments

By Marilyn Marchione
Associated Press writer

ATLANTA — Doctors are reporting a disturbing rise in the number of cancer patients getting chemo and other aggressive but futile treatment in the last days of their lives.

Critics of the practice say doctors should be concentrating instead on helping these patients die with dignity and in comfort, perhaps in a hospice.

Nearly 12 percent of cancer patients who died in 1999 received chemotherapy in the last two weeks of life, a large review of Medicare records revealed. That is up from nearly 10 percent in 1993, and the percentage is probably even higher today, researchers said.

"Patients don't like to give up," and neither do physicians, said Dr. Roy Herbst, a cancer specialist at the University of Texas' M.D. Anderson Cancer Center in Houston who had no role in the study.

Overly aggressive treatment gives false hope and puts people through grueling and costly ordeals when there is no chance of a cure, cancer specialists said.

"There is a time to stop," said Dr. Craig Earle of the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute and Harvard Medical School.

"It's sometimes easier to just keep giving chemotherapy than to have a frank discussion about hospice and palliative care."

Earle led the federally funded study and presented the findings Friday at a meeting in Atlanta of the American Society of Clinical Oncology.

He examined Medicare records on the care of 215,488 people who died of cancer in the 1990s.

Admissions to hospital intensive care units in the last month of life climbed from nearly 8 percent in 1993 to 11 percent in 1999. Emergency room visits rose from about 24 percent to more than 28 percent.

The number of cancer patients entering hospice in the last three days of life also rose, from roughly 12 percent to 15 percent.

Military probe clears U.S. troops of misconduct at Ishaqi, despite acknowledging up to 13 deaths

By Haerza Hendawi and Kim Camel
Associated Press writers

BAGHDAD — A military investigation into allegations that American troops intentionally killed civilians in Ishaqi, a village north of Baghdad, has cleared them of misconduct, the U.S. said Friday — even though it acknowledged the deaths of up to 13 Iraqis in the March raid.

Meanwhile, a lawyer representing families of some of the two dozen unarmed Iraqi civilians allegedly killed by U.S. Marines in the western town of Haditha on Nov. 19 said three or four Marines carried out the shootings while 20 more waited outside the homes. He also said victims' relatives turned down a request by U.S. investigators to exhume the victims' bodies for forensic tests.

The investigation of the March 15 attack in Ishaqi concluded that the U.S. troops followed normal procedures in raising the level of force as they came under attack upon approaching a building where they believed an al-Qaida terrorist was hiding, said Maj. Gen. William Caldwell, a U.S. military spokesman.

Caldwell also acknowledged there were "possibly up to nine collateral deaths" in addition to the four Iraqi deaths that the military announced at the

Mercury

The state of Idaho has until November to declare if it will participate in a federal mercury program opening the door for in-state coal-fired power plants or opt out, closing the door for more Magic Valley residents will be watching Risch's decision closely given that Sempra Generation intended to build a 600-megawatt plant in Jerome County. The company now plans to call for rights to its project, leaving the potential for a coal-fired facility in Magic Valley still looming in the future.

The governor understands the significance of his action to the Magic Valley region, said spokesman Brad Hoaglan. And, the governor will take action.

"I will study the issues closely and will roll out a state action plan later this summer or early this fall," Risch said.

In March 2005, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency released its Clean Air Mercury Rule, a regulation intended to cut mercury emissions in half within 15 years with an ultimate goal of a 70 percent drop nationwide. Environmentalists faulted the Bush administration proposal because dirty power plants would still be allowed to purchase emission credits from cleaner facilities, thus not forcing the heaviest emitting plants to clean up.

With no coal-fired power plants in the state, Idaho held a unique position of owning no emission credits. In order to build such a plant in the state, Idaho would have to join the federal cap and trade program, allowing the company interested in building in the state to purchase mercury credits from a facility in another state.

Under the direction of then Gov. Dirk Kempthorne, the staff of the Department of Environmental Quality drafted a rule to place Idaho in the federal cap and trade program. Within a few weeks, the department received comments from over 600 people, most from Magic Valley, and most opposed to entering t-

Mercury

What has changed since the original rule was released, however, is who is sitting in the governor's chair. And, the fact that the 2006 Idaho Legislature enacted a two-year moratorium on new building or permitting of coal-fired power plants in the state. The Legislature also instructed an interim committee to update the state's energy plan. However, it's unclear whether Risch will have until later this summer or fall to make his decision. In May, several citizens groups, including the Idaho Conservation League, the Idaho Rural Council and numerous Magic Valley-based anti-Sempra organizations, asked DEQ's board to opt out of the federal program.

"Opting into the federal mercury cap and trade program would be a lose-lose situation for Idaho," said ICL's Courtney Washburn, in a press statement. "The only Idaho would gain is additional mercury, which threatens the health of Idaho families."

Nursing

institutions as we prepare the new budget and execute existing budgets to meet this need." The announcement comes as welcome surprise to the College of Southern Idaho (CSI), which began pushing to increase the capacity of its health-care profession program more than a year ago.

During the 2003-04 school year, CSI reported 61 nursing school graduates, and by 2005 it reported almost 90. The increase is a direct result of the college's effort to expand the program.

But officials say that more needs to be done. "We have decided to expand our program by 30 students each year," said Dr. Claudene Buettner, chief academic officer at CSI. "We've received more than 275 applications for registered nursing positions, which is about four applications for each open seat."

She said one challenge CSI faces is the availability of clinical sites, or medical practices, where students can complete lab courses. But the greatest hurdle the college must overcome is the lack of qualified instructors for the nursing program. Currently, CSI has two open positions for masters-certified instructors.

"I'll be very happy if Risch supports this," Buettner said. "The challenge will be funding four to six full-time new positions that we predicted we will need."

CSI is operating satellite campuses throughout Idaho, and the college has been working to expand these programs, as well as additional programs in other parts of the state. On Friday afternoon, Jerry Beck, president of the College of Southern Idaho, said he was excited to hear Risch's support for the same nursing programs that CSI has been trying to launch. CSI immediately began planning for the future.

"I am just on my way to talk to some people at CSI over the phone," Beck said after the inauguration speech. "I would like to get moving because we have a long waiting list for these programs."

When asked when he would begin preparations, Beck said, "In about 15 minutes."

time of the raid. The results of the investigation were released after questions were raised about the original U.S. report as television stations aired AP Television News footage of a row of dead children in the aftermath of the raid.

The probe was part of U.S. investigations in possible misconduct by American troops in at least three separate areas of Iraq. Besides Haditha and Ishaqi, seven Marines and a Navy corpsman could face murder, kidnapping and conspiracy charges in an April shooting death of an Iraqi man west of Baghdad.

The military said Friday it will cooperate with the Iraqi government in its own investigation of Haditha and other incidents of alleged wrongdoing by U.S. troops. "We're going to give them whatever assistance they need as a part of this investigation," said Army Brig. Gen. Donald Campbell, the chief of staff for U.S. forces in Iraq.

Campbell's pledge came a day after Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki upbraided the U.S. military over Haditha, which he called "a horrible crime," and accused U.S. troops of habitually attacking unarmed civilians.

On Friday, White House press secretary Tony Snow said al-Maliki had told U.S. Ambassador Zalmay Khalilzad that he had been misquoted. But Snow was unable to explain what al-Maliki told Khalilzad or how he had been misquoted.

Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld defended the training and conduct of U.S. troops and said incidents such as the alleged massacre of Iraqi civilians at Haditha shouldn't happen.

Sellers of fake immigration documents about call for tamperproof IDs: SO WHAT

By Peter Paganas
Associated Press writer

LOS ANGELES — Luis Hernandez just laughs as he sells fake driver's licenses and Social Security cards to illegal immigrants near a park known for shady deals.

The joke, to him and others in his line of work, is the government's promise to put people like him out of business with a tamperproof national ID card.

"One way or another, we'll always find a way," said Hernandez, 35, a sidewalk operator who is part of a complex counterfeiting network around MacArthur Park where authentic-looking IDs are available for as little as $150.

Some of those coming to MacArthur Park are teenagers who want a fake ID so they can go to bars and drink. Others are convicts whose criminal records make working under their real names difficult. But most are illegal immigrants who need work documents.

As Congress struggles to reform laws that affect the estimated 11 million illegal immigrants, one central question is how to crack down on fake documents and punish the employers who accept them.

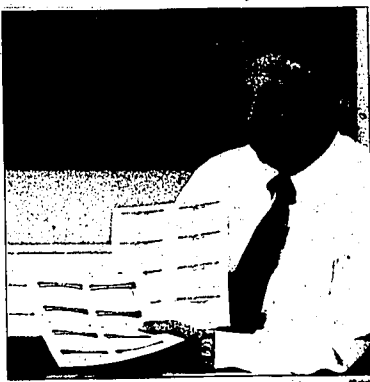

President Bush has suggested foreign workers carry a single ID that includes a fingerprint. The House and Senate, meanwhile, have passed bills that would force employers to verify job seekers' Social Security numbers with a phone call and immigration status through an electronic database.

Many employers, eager for cheap labor, have a "don't ask, don't tell" attitude toward their employees' immigration status and do not check their papers.

In one indication of the size of the problem, federal authorities in April arrested nearly 1,200 illegal immigrants and a few managers working at IFCO Systems plants from Southern California to New York. More than half of the 5,800 employees at the pallet and crate manufacturing company in 2005 had immigration or mismatched Social Security numbers, authorities said.

Immigration officials said the fake document business has become increasingly difficult to stop.

In the past, authorities could often break up a network by raiding a central "document mill" where Social Security cards, passports and licenses might be drying on a large printing press, said Kevin Kevin Jeffery, deputy special agent in charge with U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement, show confiscated fake identification documents at his Los Angeles office May 23.

Jeffery, deputy agent in charge of U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement in Los Angeles.

Now documents are made with illegal software on laptop computers. That mobility makes them harder to bust. "With a computer and a printer, you are in business," Jeffery said.

Authorities can also be stymied by complex delivery networks.

Thousands of veterans possibly exposed to virus during prostate exams

By Dinesh Ramdas
Associated Press writer

MILWAUKEE — More than 22,000 veterans who underwent prostate biopsies at veterans' hospitals across the country are being warned that improperly sterilized equipment may have exposed them to deadly viruses.

Officials said Friday it was unlikely someone could get infected by the equipment, and no patient is known to have been sickened.

Still, the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs decided to offer free blood tests as a precaution after officials in Maine questioned whether the cleaning procedure was thorough enough, said VA spokesman Jim Benson.

The prostate biopsy procedure includes a probe that, if improperly cleaned, could retain traces of body fluids containing the viruses that cause hepatitis or AIDS.

Since April, the VA has alerted patients of potential inadequacies with the biopsy cleaning procedure at 21 medical centers in 18 states, plus Puerto Rico.

So far, about 7,000 vets contacted the VA after receiving the letter and about 2,000 have been tested, Benson said.

"It's too soon to have any information on their test results because each of the potential diseases we might be worried about require not only initial tests but confirmatory tests as well," Benson said. "Right now our first priority is getting information out to every veteran."

Dennis Mack, an infectious diseases expert at the University of Wisconsin-Madison, said the prostate examination technique involves inserting a stainless steel scope about the diameter of a pencil into the rectum. Then doctors use a hollow needle to draw a sample from the prostate gland.

The standard sterilizing procedure called for the equipment to be flushed with a disinfecting solution, but officials grew concerned that blood and fecal residue might remain unless the tube were physically scrubbed as well.

It's possible but unlikely that someone could get infected that way, said Michael Erdmann, chief of staff of the Milwaukee VA Medical Center.

AROUND THE NATION

Coroner: Identity mistake was avoidable

INDIANAPOLIS — The coroner who misidentified a college student killed in a van crash said Friday the "entire disaster" could have been avoided if a deputy coroner had not urged a relative to avoid looking at the body.

The office initially identified the victim as Whitney Cerak, and Cerak's family took the victim's body home to Gaylord, Mich., and buried her.

They learned a month later that they had buried the wrong girl — their daughter was alive but severely injured, and the parents of the crash victim they had buried had been keeping a bedside vigil over Cerak not realizing who she was.

Grant County Coroner Ron Mowery said the "entire disaster" could have been avoided if Cerak's sister — moments after she was told Cerak was dead — had not been advised not to look at what was actually the body of Taylor University classmate Laura VanVyn.

"It was out of concern for how she would handle the shock of that," Mowery said. "We reflect now that perhaps that would have negated this entire disaster."

Police: Man used slain student's ATM card

GREENVILLE, S.C. — Police investigating the slaying of a Clemson University student who was strangled with her bikini top released surveillance photos Friday of a man trying to use her bank card a few hours after the killing.

Prosecutor Bob Atrial said the man, who had covered most of his face with bananas, tried unsuccessfully to use Tiffany Marie Souers' card six times at two cash machines. The man was driving an older sport utility vehicle.

"Hopefully someone will recognize an individual who has that type of headress or bandanna, who drives a vehicle of this type, who is exhibiting the behavior profile," Atrial said.

Souers, a 20-year-old civil engineering junior from Ludue, Mo., was wearing only a bra when she was found May 26 on her bedroom floor in her apartment a few miles from campus. The bikini top was around her neck.

Atrial said the crime was sexually motivated, but he said tests so far have not indicated she was sexually assaulted. He said more tests were being done.

Ice Cube returns to rap with new album
SANTA MONICA, Calif. — Before he was an actor, before he made TV shows and movies with his own production company, before he had a record label, Ice Cube was a rapper.

Cube was just a kid in 1988 when he and NWA helped launch the gangsta rap genre with "Straight Outta Compton," a raw collection of catchy rhymes about inner-city injustices that appealed to audiences of all kinds.

Now he's returning to his rap roots with his first solo album in six years, "Laugh Now, Cry Later," out June 6.

In it, Cube unleashes a 20-track blend of bass-thumping beats and social commentary, with a dash of silliness thrown in for good measure.

"I didn't want to make a record that was like a history book," the 36-year-old says, sitting inside his Cube Vision office, the walls dotted with posters that include Muhammad Ali and the movie "Scarface." "I wanted to make a record that does what all good hip-hop do. It makes you feel good. It kinda pumps you up but it also shows you a part of life that you might not have been paying attention to or might not even know exists."

Police seek suspects after family slain

INDIANAPOLIS — Police hunted on Friday for the killers who barged into a home and shot seven family members to death in the worst mass murder in Indianapolis in at least 25 years.

The bodies of three boys, ages 5 to 11, were found on a bed, and four adult relatives were discovered elsewhere in the house after the Thursday night robbery and massacre that rocked the working-class neighborhood.

Police said the attackers — a witness reported seeing three or four men run out the back of the house — were armed with assault rifles.

One of the suspects is a 26-year-old man who grew up in the area and had returned last fall after getting out of prison on drug and weapons charges, police said.

"He'd gone there to rob the home and decided while he was there to execute everybody at the same time, unfortunately," Sgt. Matthew Mount said.

Wen Ho Lee settles privacy lawsuit

WASHINGTON — Wen Ho Lee, the former nuclear weapons scientist once suspected of being a spy, settled his privacy lawsuit Friday and will receive $1.6 million from the government and five news organizations in a case that turned into a fight over reporters' confidential sources.

Lee will receive $895,000 from the government for legal fees and associated taxes in the 6½-year-old lawsuit in which he accused the Energy and Justice departments of violating his privacy rights by leaking information that he was under investigation as a spy for China.

The Associated Press and four other news organizations have agreed to pay Lee $750,000 as part of the settlement, which ends contempt of court proceedings against five reporters who refused to disclose the sources of their stories about the espionage investigation.

Lee said of the settlement: "We are hopeful that the agreement reached today will send the strong message that government officials and journalists must and should act responsibly in discharging their duties and be sensitive to the privacy interests afforded to every citizen of this country."

The payment by AP, The New York Times, the Los Angeles Times, The Washington Post and ABC is the only one of its kind in recent memory, and perhaps ever, legal and media experts said.

pedestrian views could boomerang and shatter your well-laid plans.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): ignore rabble-rousing rebels without causes. Trying something new may break up the monotony, but may also cause agitation or controversy. Maintain a low profile.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Don't be shocked by a sudden reversal of plans. The only thing you can depend upon is change. Delay a new project and don't take a new friend under your wing.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Stay off the soapbox. Someone might take issue with your latest cause celebre. Avoid impulsive spending or signing agreements, as the terms under negotiation could shift suddenly.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): "Mary, Mary, quite contrary" gave everyone a headache. Try not to add to minor disturbances by being stubborn or inflexible. Don't make choices that might impact your finances.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Maintain your dignity. This might not be the best day to let your hair down in public as wagging tongues may spread the news.

Steady as she goes. Surprises might land on your doorstep or knock on your door. Don't let a sudden whim or an intruding outside influence disrupt the plans and rhythm of your day.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You may encounter a detour when exploring uncharted locations. An unexpected change of plans could waste your time — as well as your money. You could meet up with a perfect stranger but it is best to leave it that way.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A little excitement goes a long way. A thirst for the exotic can put you at odds with a favorite playmate. You could meet up with a perfect stranger but it is best to leave it that way.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Avoid becoming a target. Someone might think you are an "Easy Rider." You might give the impression you are rebelling against the establishment when you merely wanted to be objective.

IF JUNE 3 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: As this birthday rolls round you may find that the road to success is best found by being able to stand on your own two feet. Learn to remain independent of others, as they may not be as dependable as usual. Life is full of surprises — especially during August, October and February. Be prepared to adapt to changing conditions during these months, but don't launch anything of importance such as a new business or job. In September look for a cloud with a silver lining or an offer that will help you recover your equilibrium. Next May you can put plans into motion that will solve many problems in your life.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Passing fads give little satisfaction. A fascinating new acquaintance might act like your best friend for a few days, but don't count on transitory new contacts turning into lifelong associations.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Be a happy "couch" potato: Experiment with new views, but don't treat them as gospel. You might reverse someone's unpopular cause as gospel.

the next time you see this Romeo and he hits on you — because that's what he's doing — tell him you consider it if he were eligible, but he's already taken, and then go back to the group.

DEAR ABBY: My infant son has a medical condition that requires occasional visits to a local hospital.

On each of the last two visits, I have run into an acquaintance in the hospital hallway — once someone from work, and another time, someone from church.

After stopping and exchanging greetings, both of them would always lead me where I was at the hospital.

I think that question is inappropriate. Medical matters are personal. I was very uncomfortable because I don't want to share my son's condition with others.

They were both asking out of concern, but in my opinion, the question just should not be asked. Do you agree?
— STRICTLY PERSONAL, HOLY CESTER, N.Y.

DEAR STRICTLY PERSONAL: The question may seem intrusive in a situation like yours, but is also natural and spontaneous. Because your son's condition is a private matter, I suggest that when you are asked that, you "deflect it" by responding, "What are you doing here?" And then change the subject.

kind man about two months ago.
From then on, we saw each other twice a week at group get-togethers.
He would always lead me away from the others, talking to me and flirting with me. He's very forward. He is always touching me, putting his arms around me — and he asked me for my phone number the second time I saw him.
We have still been hanging out, but I found out he has a girlfriend! He doesn't know that I know. When I pull back from his touching me, he asks me why. Is it possible that he doesn't have a girlfriend? Or is he just one of those guys who will flirt with anyone — including me?

— IN A QUANDARY IN GEORGIA
DEAR IN A QUANDARY: I agree with you. Once you are a parent and living under the same roof, his insistence that he be addressed as "Mr." will be emotionally distancing for your children.
It will also make them feel like second class citizens if his own children call him "Dad" while yours are compelled to call him "Mister." Your boyfriend appears to have some significant self-esteem issues. I strongly recommend that you be dealt with before you marry him.

I recently suggested that my kids start calling him "Earl" instead of "Mr. Earl," as they have called him since they met him.
But Earl said that even after we are married, they should continue to call him "Mr." because it is a matter of respect. I say that no stepfathers do that, and if you are all sharing a home together, it's too formal. Your thoughts, please?

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 43-year-old divorced mother with three kids, ages 17, 13 and 9. I have been dating a wonderful man I'll call Earl for more than a year. Everything is great: we plan to be married. My kids love him, he is great with them, and he has two teenagers of his own.

Periodic Table are apparently smelly things: Bromide comes from bromos, Greek for "stench," and arsenic comes from asme, Greek for "odor."

Speaking of smelly minerals, did you ever wonder what "brimstone" is? Nowadays, we call it "sulfur."

Last time we counted, there were 6641 book publishers with at least ten books in print. Of these, 1,804 publishers had more than two hundred books. Now, all we need are more readers.

At least 15 U.S. presidents have belonged to that secret society, the Masons.

This day in history: On June 3, 1800, a new president set his housekeeping in the nation's new capital, the District of Columbia. John Adams, however, didn't get to enjoy the luxuries of the White House — it wouldn't be finished for another five months. Instead, the second president moved into the Georgetown's Union Tavern.

DOYLESTOWN, Pa. — A Memorial Day special! A time warp!

Whatever they thought, motorists lined up for a brief fueling frenzy at a pump selling premium gasoline for 32.9 cents a gallon.

As drivers called friends and relatives, up to a dozen cars showed up. Doylestown Township Police Chief Stephen White said a woman called 911 saying she had noticed the error when she saw the pump, though she herself pumped "plus" grade correctly priced at $3.19 a gallon.

White said the woman said she was "incensed" at the behavior of other customers scrambling for the pennies-per-gallon premium, considering the opportunism theft and fed back for the station owner.

Once the mistake was discovered, a Lukoil employee put up signs temporarily halting sales of the premium, until the price was adjusted.

The intelligence of Doylestown said the station owner did not respond to an interview request.

EASTON, Pa. — A woman asked a judge to toss her $173.50 fine for throwing lettuce out of her car, but he ordered her to fork over the green.

Dawn Higgins, who was cited Oct. 18 while parked outside a Wal-Mart near Easton, appeared in Northampton County Common Pleas Court on Thursday.

Higgins has said she took her daughters and a friend to the store, and they stopped at a McDonald's along the way. She said she pulled into a parking space to finish her meal but decided not to eat the half-donut or so leaves atop her salad.

After failing to appear before a district judge on Dec. 22, Higgins discovered that she had been convicted in absentia and owed the state $173.50. She appealed, arguing that lettuce is biodegradable.

President Judge Robert A. Fressburg on Thursday found Higgins guilty after listening to her attorney pepper a police officer with questions about lettuce.

Higgins is mulling an appeal to state Superior Court as a matter of principle," said her lawyer, Timothy Frendragsht.

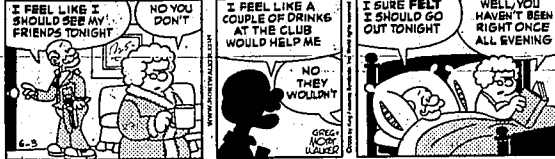

"Probably the most expensive McDonald's salad ever sold," he said.

Water picture recovers with full reservoirs

CHEERS to a full system of reservoirs along the Upper Snake River region.

This year's abundance of snow has pushed a healthy dose of runoff into the glacial reservoirs that store water for Idaho irrigators. The outlook is so good, all the way from Jackson Lake, Wyo., to Milner Dam near Burley, that the Twin Falls Canal Co. hasn't even tapped into the American Falls dam yet. That reservoir was at 1.61 million acre-feet as of this week — about 96 percent of capacity.

The good supply for early June could translate into more water in the late summer months. This year would be the first in six years that all the reservoirs should be filled or close to it.

CHEERS to John Sandy, the newly appointed chief of staff to new Gov. Jim Risch.

Sandy, the former senator from the previous legislative district that included Twin Falls and Gooding counties, was named as Risch's top official inside the new administration. Risch and Sandy were close colleagues in the Senate before they both left in 2002. Sandy went on to serve two years as chairman of the Idaho Republican party.

The Risch administration will last only seven months, but Risch appears to have a vigorous agenda for that period of time. To have Sandy a Twin Falls native and longtime Hagerman resident, in the top circle bodies well for the Magic Valley and its interests with the new chief executive.

JEERS to Larry LaRocco, the Democratic candidate for Idaho lieutenant governor, for some desperate criticism of Risch.

LaRocco held a press conference on Friday, the day of Risch's inauguration on the Statehouse steps, to harp on Risch for an inauguration that was "over the top."

"Many Idahoans have told me they expected this routine transition to be handled in a humble and modest way without fanfare and pomp," LaRocco said. "Instead we will hear cannons roar with great flourish."

Folding chairs and a microphone are "over the top?" That's all Friday's events really included. ("The Associated Press described it as 'low-key.'" If anything, Risch has probably kept the transition a fairly subdued affair.

In fact, Risch helped pay for the other half of Friday's events, which was the public tour of the new governor's mansion. Rather than have the state pay for the shuttle vans bringing some 1,000 members of the public to the former Simplot house, Risch picked up the tab.

Maybe LaRocco should give it a rest, at least until Risch pulls his first mistake.

CHEERS to Henry Paulson, the Bush administration's new Treasury Secretary.

Bush tabbed the chairman and chief executive of Goldman Sachs to become chief economic spokesman for the White House replacing John Snow.

While paulson as a solid defender of tax cuts and free trade by Wall Street and "politicians" of both parties, Paulson is a unique pick for Treasury Secretary for his strong environmental views (he's an avid bird watcher and fisherman), and his aggressive stands against global warming.

In the latest issue of Vanity Fair magazine, Paulson is featured as a global warming guru alongside other features of Robert F. Kennedy Jr., George Clooney and (gasp!) Al Gore. A bold pick for this administration, even if the treasury card has little to do with environmental views. Or maybe it's just another decision where Bush was out of the loop.

Some things never change — on television

Three new phenomena in the media illustrate the oldest wisdom in show business — there's nothing new under the sun. Oh wait, that's from the Bible. But of course, the Bible, one of the oldest books in existence, is a never-ending source of artistic and commercial inspiration.

JAMES P. PINKERTON

All of which reminds us that, if something worked in the past to enlighten or entertain, it will likely work again. And, if it didn't work in the past, it won't work in the future. Changes, but not human nature; it's human feelings that drive showbiz.

Let's consider three examples of fame-old-same-old in the media: First, "American Idol." Now in its fifth season, still gaining audience, "Idol" succeeds because it's based on sudden, individual success. For as long as there have been contests, people have wanted to get up and perform. Not much about "Idol" is different from Major Bowes' "Original Amateur Hour," which aired on radio from 1934 to 1946 or other newbie-introducing variety TV shows, such as Ed Sullivan's.

A few things have changed, of course: Fans can vote for favorites via 800 numbers and the Internet. But such participation is an ornament; the main vein of public emotion springs from participating, vicariously, in the off-told story of a talented unknown struggling to make it — a star is born.

Second, the shuffling of anchors at ABC "World News Tonight." After the death of Peter Jennings last year, ABC got the bright idea of trying something new: It debuted a pair of youngish anchors, Bob Woodruff and Elizabeth Vargas. Actually the idea of a youthful pairing wasn't entirely new; it had been tried a couple of times in the past, as when CBS' Dan Rather was briefly hitched with Connie Chung. But the key word in the previous sentence was "briefly." The Rather-Chung duality was a fizzle, lasting only two years, even as Rather enjoyed a total of 24 years at the top.

Like Walter Cronkite before him, or Bob Schieffer after him, Ruff proves that what evening-news audiences like best is an older male in the anchor chair. Now it's ABC News' turn to learn this lesson: After just a few months — and the bad luck of Woodruff's injury in Iraq — ABC has reshuffled the 40-something Vargas to other million-dollar duties. Women dominate much of TV — think Oprah — but not the anchor chair.

In an interview with Newsweek, Vargas' replacement, Charles Gibson, 63, mused over ABC's failed experiment in breaking the traditional mold. Youthful anchor dualism was an "interesting new paradigm," Gibson allowed, but it seems as though people prefer a single "old codger," as he described himself. Indeed, the un-botoxed Gibson reminds us of our father — or maybe that our father should have been.

Does this pro-codger tendency in the nightly news cast a shadow on the prospects of Katie Couric, the soon-to-debut anchor of the "CBS Evening News"? You bet it does.

The weight of precedent presses down on all human experience, but such weight needn't be a tyranny. Instead, it's like gravity — a reminder that there are limits. And those limits aren't bad, because they can guide us toward better behavior.

Consider, third, the latest trend among celebrities: doing good works. Angelina Jolie and Brad Pitt raised their share of hell earlier in their lives, but now they adopt poor children, give away millions — they might even get married.

And, of course, there's the saintly Bono, who is merely the latest in a long line of call-to-conscienceurs who leveraged their fame to do good. Even wild-child Lindsay Lohan reportedly wants to go to Africa to Make a Difference, and maybe save her soul.

Will it work for Lohan and others of her ilk? Probably. After all, if it worked in the past, it will almost certainly work in the future. That's a proven rule of showbiz — and a time-tested rule of life, too.

Congress finally finds backbone — in the freezer

About Kathleen Parker
Kathleen Parker is recovering from an accident and is not filing columns this week. As a substitute, we are using columns by Jonah Goldberg.

It may be the only person in Washington who finds the constitutional Goddard-gathering over the FBI's raid of a congressman's office... well, endearing. Quaint even.

JONAH GOLDBERG

Rep. William J. Jefferson appears to be the one in a million who finds a buffalo nickel or a four-leaf clover a corrupt Louisiana politician.

Gasp away, but it's true. New Orleans Democrat Jeff was caught on video allegedly taking a $100,000 bribe from an FBI informant (and allegedly demanding further bribes), and a subsequent search revealed $90,000 in his freezer. That's a lot of crowbars.

The wily Jefferson reportedly tried to hide incriminating documents in a blue bag while the FBI was searching his house. This may have tipped off the feds that they couldn't expect Jefferson to stoop to the high-minded decorum they've come to expect of other Louisiana Democrats, from Huey Long to Edwin Edwards. It also shows that Jefferson may have strayed from the Democratic mainstream. After all, Sandy Berger taught us that proper procedure for concealing documents is to shove them into your pants.

Jefferson's behavior is a high-ranking Democrat's caught stashing $90K next to his Mrs. Paul's frozen fish sticks, the Republicans could change the subject from GOP corruption to Democratic corruption. Instead, they opted to go by the current No. 1 and change the subject to GOP arrogance and stupidity. The congressional GOP — which won Congress by promising the laws of the land would apply to Congress — decided to seize Jefferson's cream pie and throw it in the White House's face.

Ironically, this scenario is only possible because the same party controls the House and the White House. If House Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi were in charge, she might make the same case in good faith that this was a constitutional outrage. But nobody would take it seriously on account of how self-serving it would sound. This would surely get the founders smiling. They were not great fans of political parties. But they did hope that the House and Senate would be jealous guardians of the people's rights as a coequal branch of government. I don't believe anything that precious is at stake here. But it is so touching to see politicians acting as if they do.

Washington is lurching into the doing right thing; referring to the Constitution and the founders' intent to figure out what to do. That's a nice change of pace.

Even more refreshing, Congress is suddenly acting like a real co-equal branch of government. In recent years, it has mostly been a subservient to the White House, one who finds solace in a shopaholic's credit card spree. The Jefferson episode represents a real turning point. The doormat syndrome is over. Congress is going to stand up for itself. Isn't that heartwarming?

Sure, some might quibble that the House might have asserted itself over some prior case of wiretapping, or if protecting alleged shakedown artists is what it takes for Congress to restore its self-esteem, who are we to judge?

What makes this episode so Capraesque is the monumental political stupidity of congressional Republicans. Constitutional arguments aside, this kerfuffle represents an astounding example of political self-immolation nominally on principle. If say nominally because I suspect House Speaker J. Dennis Hastert is more miffed about CIA chief Porter Goss getting sacked than he is about Jefferson getting sanctioned.

The House GOP is a ruckus cloud of corruption thanks to the Jack Abramoff and Randy "Duke" Cunningham cases. This cloud could cost the Republicans their majority come November. But if a high-ranking Democrat is caught stashing $90K next to his Mrs. Paul's frozen fish sticks, the Republicans could change the subject from GOP corruption to Democratic corruption. Instead, they opted to go by the current No. 1 and change the subject to GOP arrogance and stupidity. The congressional GOP — which won Congress by promising the laws of the land would apply to Congress — decided to seize Jefferson's cream pie and throw it in the White House's face.

Ironically, this scenario is only possible because the same party controls the House and the White House. If House Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi were in charge, she might make the same case in good faith that this was a constitutional outrage. But nobody would take it seriously on account of how self-serving it would sound. This would surely get the founders smiling. They were not great fans of political parties. But they did hope that the House and Senate would be jealous guardians of the people's rights as a coequal branch of government. I don't believe anything that precious is at stake here. ## LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Chemicals have ties to illnesses

On March 3, Times-News published Kerry Curtis Peterson's letter saying that herbicide and pesticide exposures caused her asthma, sleep problems, headaches, ADHD, chronic fatigue, arthritis, depression and other illnesses. Hers is not an isolated case, because virtually unknown illnesses are becoming ever more common.

Peterson also said that her body eventually rejected all food, medications and her "symptoms include thyroid problems, anaphylaxis, learning and memory difficulties, rashes, behavioral changes, mood swings, headaches, migraines, arrhythmia, chest pain, chronic infections, seizures, fevers, dizziness, cloudy thinking, fatigue, blisters, neurological problems, severe joint and muscle aches, to name just a few."

But we have any of such recurring symptoms, or illnesses, you may find valuable information from Peterson's long letter in the Times-News archives. It also lists names of businesses that have greatly helped in her personal recovery.

My own health experiences, research and subsequent discussions with her make me believe that what she stated is brutally true. As a writer and inspirational speaker, I have visited with hundreds of people on a one-on-one basis, and some of their experiences further confirm that our own ignorance about toxins are causing health problems.

I myself, like everyone else in Magic Valley, continue to be exposed to harmful substances, and often from unexpected sources. This is partly so because of lack of knowledge, criminal behavior, lacking or lax laws or enforcement.

Peterson's health problems were initially caused by exactly such circumstances and could have been prevented. Therefore we all must be aware of how we poison ourselves, because at least 30 percent of Americans now have MCS (multiple chemical sensitivity). Such begins with even low-level exposure, and later can lead to some of the many new-age illnesses mentioned above. Other Western states have been much more proactive in reducing environmental toxins, and Idaho must do the same.

Social security funds are gone

The politicians in Washington, D.C., have stolen the Social Security Trust Fund. Every penny is gone.

Every single year, Social Security collects more tax money from American workers than it pays out in benefits. This year, the Social Security system will collect $187 billion more than it will pay out. This money is supposed to be saved in the Social Security Trust Fund. That is what the politicians promised as they would do with that money.

The Social Security Trust Fund was created to build up like this year after year. However, the politicians are spending this money on other things. Today the Social Security Trust Fund is supposed to have a huge $3.7 trillion surplus in 2014 — that is only seven years from now — and that is when Social Security will "officially" start to go broke.

Where will America get that that money in seven years? The Social Security Trust Fund should have enough money in it by now to guarantee the financial soundness of Social Security for generations to come. Instead, the politicians have spent all the money. Today, after Congress' nearly 20 years raid, there is not a single red dollar left in the Social Security Trust Fund. There is nothing but IOUs! If we did this kind of bookkeeping with our tax return, we would be tossed in jail.

We must fight for the "Lock Box" bill and stop the pork-barrel spending binge. Demand Washington to call Congress into protest. Phone or write Washington today and say this: Stop stealing our Social Security Trust Fund!

U.N.: $100 million needed to help quake survivors

By Chris Brannett
Associated Press writer

BANTUL, Indonesia — The United Nations said Friday $100 million was urgently needed to help Indonesia earthquake survivors as the injured and bereaved marked the Islamic day of prayer amid the rubble of their homes.

"We should not cry or stay in mourning," one preacher told worshippers outside a damaged mosque in the center of destroyed Bawuran village. "We should thank God that we are still alive."

Adding to the concerns, nearby Mount Merapi volcano shot out large plumes of ash and sent lava down its slopes 35 times Friday.

The magnitude-6.3 earthquake that struck before dawn nearly a week ago killed more than 6,200 people and injured 30,000 more across a large part of Java Island. Officials estimate it destroyed 135,000 houses.

The massive relief effort came as Indonesia is still trying to rebuild from the 2004 tsunami, which killed 131,000 people in Indonesia's western Aceh province. Indonesia, an archipelago of 17,000 islands with a population of 220 million, is also fighting a spiraling human bird flu case load.

Local and international aid workers have yet to reach some remote areas in the quake zone, and delivery of food, medicine and tents to the estimated 650,000 people made homeless by last week's disaster has been sporadic in other parts.

Most of the survivors are living in makeshift shelters without toilets or running water.

"An estimated $100 million will be needed in the next six months to address the most immediate needs, the U.N. Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs said. Nearly half of that money should go toward housing."

"The earthquake's large-scale destruction of water and sanitation facilities combined with large numbers of displaced survivors creates the potential for high disease and death rates," said Michael Kocher, International Rescue Committee regional director for Indonesia.

Enough trucks loaded with humanitarian relief clogged recently repaired roads in some areas, villagers a few miles from aid distribution centers said they had received little or no help.

In Telan, a village in hardest-hit Bantul district, three families were crowded under one tarp.

"We are poor people. If we don't work hard, how can we survive?" asked one resident, Solman, as he and his wife sold broken bricks, tiles and wooden posts from the remains of their house so they could start to rebuild.

Friday, the Islamic day of prayer, provided some respite from their suffering.

Around 100 people, several of them injured in the quake, prayed together on a road close to the devastated village of Telan. Afterward, they ate rice and fried bean curd together, while an aid worker from the capital, Jakarta, urged them to be patient.

"The event has helped me," said Ngatimin, who lost his only son in the disaster. "I am sure the village can be put back together again."

The situation appeared better Friday in Bantul's main hospital, which has treated thousands of patients since the quake. Volunteers cleaned up piles of garbage and U.S. Marines and Singaporean medical teams joined scores of Indonesian doctors.

The World Health Organization denied reports that the most severely injured patients were dying at a rate of more than 400 per day in overcrowded hospitals.

"Reports of new deaths are absolutely incorrect," said Harsaran Pandey, WHO spokeswoman for Indonesia. "There are around 1,000 doctors and 1,000 nurses working for the quake ... We've been speaking to all medical humanitarian groups and no one has that figure."

"Hospitals there are certainly overwhelmed, but as far as WHO is concerned, nothing like that is happening."

Bantul Hospital's emergency coordinator, Dr. Hidayat, who like many Indonesians uses only one name, said the figure was undoubtedly wrong. He said only 33 people had died in his hospital, the busiest in the region, since the quake struck.

"Maybe 400 since the beginning of the quake, but not a day," he said.

More than 20 nations have either sent aid workers or emergency supplies.

"The obvious concern for the humanitarian community is to care for those who have gone through and lived through this disaster, in particular the injured and the homeless," said Charlie Higgins, head of U.N. relief operations.

Meanwhile, about 300 survivors suffered severe stomach pains and dizziness after eating donated food, police said Friday. Five villages in the Klaten district were affected after residents ate rice donated by a young man who has not been found, said Lt. Col. Lilik Purwanto, the local police chief.

Some remained hospitalized Friday, but their condition was not believed to be serious.

Associated Press reporter En-lal Yeoh contributed to this report from Bawuran.

Al-Zarqawi lashes out at Shiites in tape posted on Internet, urges Sunnis to fight

By Lee Nash
Associated Press writer

CAIRO, Egypt — The leader of al-Qaida in Iraq railed against Shiites in a four-hour-long audiotape harassment posted on the Internet on Friday, saying militias are raping women and killing Sunnis and the community must fight back.

The tape by Abu Musab al-Zarqawi appeared aimed at sabotaging the Iraqi government's efforts to name a unity government — but was also intended to enflame rising Shiite-Sunni tensions across the Arab world.

"There's a civil war going on in Iraq, but it will not become outside Iraq. This tape is trying to do just that," said Dawood al-Shirani, a Saudi political commentator.

The No. 2 man in al-Qaida, Ayman al-Zawahiri, chastised al-Zarqawi last September for attacking Shiites, recalled Bruce Hoffman, a RAND Corporation expert.

"Obviously, he (al-Zarqawi) is thumbing his nose at the al-Qaida central leadership," Hoffman said. "That's significant."

A written statement said the audiotape was made two months ago. The CIA said Friday that technical analysis of the tape confirmed it was al-Zarqawi's voice.

Al-Zarqawi's Sunni insurgent followers have carried out some of the deadliest suicide bombings in Iraq's conflict and have frequently targeted Shiite civilians and mosques in an attempt to spark civil war. In his statement, the Jordanian-born militant often vilifies Shiites as infidels.

But the tape posted Friday was an unprecedented screed that chronicled what al-Zarqawi said was a Shiite campaign throughout history to destroy Islam and help foreign invaders of Muslim lands.

"Sunnis, wake up, pay attention and prepare to confront the poisons of the Shiite snakes," al-Zarqawi said. "Forget about those advocating the end of sectarianism and calling for national unity."

He pointed to two Shiite militias with links to parties in the Shiite-dominated Iraqi government, accused by Sunnis in Iraq of running death squads in a recent wave of sectarian violence.

"They kill men and arrest women, put them in prison and rape them and steal everything from the houses of the Sunnis," he said.

Iraqi Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki said al-Zarqawi expressed "a futile brutality, deprived mentally and morally."

"I believe the Iraqi people won't listen to such miserable words," he told a news conference in Baghdad.

"Reconciliation is the hope for all Iraqis, and all Iraqis welcome it."

Ireland passes new law on under-age sex as Supreme Court orders offender's arrest

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Ireland passed an emergency bill Friday on under-age sex, and the Supreme Court ordered a man at the center of the controversy to be imprisoned for having sex with a 12-year-old girl.

Both developments came after public outrage over the Supreme Court's decision last week to declare unconstitutional a 1935 law governing statutory rape of minors.

The Supreme Court threw out the law on the grounds it didn't permit men accused of having sex with girls aged under 15 to claim they thought the girl was older.

A lower court, on Tuesday granted freedom to a 41-year-old man who had been convicted of having sex with a 12-year-old. Three other men convicted of having sex with under-age girls filed similar suits Thursday and Friday seeking to have their convictions quashed, and more than a dozen others were expected to do so in coming days.

But the government, facing a public outcry over the man's release, appealed the verdict to the Supreme Court, and the five-judge panel Friday night ordered the man — whose identity has been kept confidential and was described only as "Mr. A" — to be reimprisoned. Within three hours, police announced his arrest.

Two hours later, President Mary McAleese signed into law a new sexual offenses bill that replaced the 1935 law with a new legal formula for protecting teenage girls from older men. But it also acknowledged the reality that some girls in modern Ireland dress and look older than they are.

The new law creates a criminal offense for those convicted of "engaging or attempting to engage in a sexual act with a child who is under 15 years of age." But it will allow accused men to testify they thought their sexual partner was older — and Justice Minister Michael McDowell warned that this would lead to lawyers' rough cross-examination of the young girls.

The age of consent for both boys and girls was set at 17 for all offenses, simplifying earlier laws that specified different ages for different crimes and sexes.

But the new law provided one controversial exception — to the age of consent — that it would not be a crime for a girl under age 17 to have sex. The government defended this on the grounds they didn't want teenage mothers to be treated as criminals.

SOUTH EDGES NORTH

Anderson takes T.F. Muni Ladies title

The North's Tyler Jackson, of Wood River, center, is tackled by two South defenders during their 11-man North-South Shrine football game Friday night in Twin Falls.

By Brad Guire
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — There were hugs, moms taking pictures, plaques and lots of well wishes for the future, but it was still a football game in every sense. "Everybody loves to play," South quarterback Spencer Stoker said. "Most of us, it's our last time strapping on the pads."

From hotly-contested penalties to slobberknocker-caliber hits, the South prevailed once again, defeating the North 19-12 at the 25th Annual Shrine North-South 11-Man All-Star Game.

The contest was close right until the end, as the North threatened to steal one from the South, down only 13-12 in the final three minutes. The South turned the ball over on downs at the North 42-yard line, with Minico grad

Dale Sayles running all over the South defenders, carrying four times during the drive for 34 yards. Zac Davis rushed to the 35 on the fourth play of the drive, and a South penalty moved the ball forward for 15 more. From there, Sayles had a 20-yard TD carry to bring the North within two points of taking the lead. However, Sayles was tackled by Buhl's Mike Sermon on the conversion.

But the South would not be denied its 11th victory of the series, as they started on their own 20 from a North kickoff.

Declo quarterback Spencer Stoker and Twin Falls back Brody Miller blazed a trail through the air and on the field, finally reaching the North 10, where Stoker rushed for a TD with only 1:17 on the clock. The nearly two-minute drive secured the win. Now finished with his high school career, Miller will weigh a few options, including offers from Eastern Oregon for football and track scholarships or a track scholarship from Idaho State University. "I'm still deciding," he said. "Next week."

In the first half, the South struck first and secured an early lead with Miller running down the field for the 72-yard drive. Miller rushed for 46 yards, with the touchdown run coming from the North 6-yard line with 8:26 remaining. Jared Denton's PAT was good, putting the South up 7-0.

The North would not answer back until the second quarter when quarterback Brett Boesiger rushed from the 1. They made their way down the field mostly on rushing from Zac Davis, Tyler Jackson and Boesiger.

"It's sad that it's all over, I guess ... that you won't be out here doing this again," Davis said.

What people will remember most about this game are the long bombs from Tanner Simmons and Spencer Stoker to receivers like Taylor Kerbs or Davis to Bryce Haiso, and the power running of Ryan Hondo. "No, they made the great catches," Stoker said of the 20th anniversary.

BURLEY — The Twin Falls Cowboys A squad completed its season-opening sweep over the host Burley Bobcats with a 15-9 victory that ended as midnight neared. Dieter Lisch picked up the win for the 2-0 Cowboys, as Twin Falls charged back from a 9-4 deficit with 11 runs in the top of the seventh.

The Cowboys are back in action Monday at Wood River.

Blake first U.S. man in third round since 2003

By Howard Feudick
Associated Press writer

PARIS — It was there in the scrambling, side-to-side defense along the baseline, forcing his foe to hit an extra shot. It was there in the delirious shouts of a slight-of-hand at the right moment. And, too, in the well-timed returns.

James Blake — an American! — looked absolutely, positively at home on the red clay of the French Open, moving into the third round by beating Nicolas Almagro of Spain 6-5, 6-2, 6-4, 6-4 Friday in a match suspended the night before.

That's right: The same James Blake who never before went beyond the second round in three trips to Paris. Who lost his opening match at three of his previous four clay-court events. Who is, after all, the only U.S. man left in the tournament and first to reach the round of 32 at Roland Garros since Andre Agassi in 2003.

Blake did it by doing all the little things right against Almagro, whose 19 wins on clay in 2006 are tied for second on tour.

So what's it like to be the last American standing?

"It's an interesting role, because Andy (Roddick) has played that role for so long, for the last few years. We've had Andy kind of holding down the fort, as well," Blake said. "But as long as we've got one, that's a good sign."

The other U.S. man who reached the second round — Agassi, didn't come. Roddick quit his opener with an ankle injury, and four others lost in Round 1 — was Kevin Kim, and he had the misfortune of facing defending champion Rafael Nadal.

Kim hung tough for a hand-picked Frenchman, Nadal, to construct a 6-2, 6-1, 6-4 victory, his 55th in a row on clay, extending his Open era record.

"It felt like you're in the Sahara and you just see the hills and there's no ending," Kim said. "You know he's going to go all day. I mean, he's going to stay out there five, 10 hours if he has to ... It's a little bit demoralizing."

Friday at Roland Garros wasn't exactly a day in the desert. Still, the temperature in the 70s, the shining sun and a pleasant breeze provided quite a contrast from the chilly, rain-soaked Wimbledon. It was the first of the tournament's first five days.

Thanks to bad weather, 10-singles matches were postponed or suspended Thursday, including the first set of the first set. That backlog was cleared as one top player after another took the court Friday — and won — from Venus Williams to Martina Hingis, from Amelie Mauresmo to Maria Sharapova and Kim Clijsters, from Roger Federer to David Nalbandian.

"It was nice, for a change, to play in good weather. I think it helped my game," said Federer, whose bid for a fourth consecutive Grand-Slam title moved forward with a 6-1, 6-2, 6-7 (4), 7-5 victory over 2004 Athens Games gold medalist Nicolas Pietrangeli.

Federer now faces No. 20 Tommy Haas, who beat Federer at those Olympics and advanced Friday when No. 13 Nicolas Pietrangeli quit with a left wrist injury.

The No. 3-seeded Nalbandian dropped the first two sets, but Dmitry Tursunov — a Russian who's lived in the United States since he was 12 — and was penalized the first point of the third set for chucking his racket. But Nalbandian came through 2-6, 5-7, 6-4, 6-2, 6-4.

Hingis won the first nine points against Zuzana Ondrasikova and made only one unforced error in the first set en route to winning 6-1, 6-3, then said: "I almost felt sorry."

Her match was one of those delayed Thursday, so she's only in the third round. Williams is a step further after a 7-5, 6-3 victory over Karolina Spreang, who upset her at Wimbledon in 2004 with the help of an extra point mistakenly awarded by the chair umpire. Williams and Sherry Perry are the last two American women in the tournament.

"It's a little bit lonely," Williams said. Blake is seeded eighth, based on a ranking earned mainly on hard courts, including reaching the U.S. Open quarterfinals in September — an inspiring run after 1 1/2 years of hardships, including the death of his father, broken vertebrae in his neck and a bout of shingles.

"Playing on clay presents a whole new set of on-court challenges, particularly for Americans who, as Blake noted Friday, 'didn't grow up on the stuff.'"

"I definitely feel so much more comfortable on this surface now. I'm not going into the clay court part of the year with just kind of dread on my mind," he said after erasing a 4-1 deficit in the third set by winning the next three consecutive games. "I feel like I'm getting that much better each time I step on the court."

He'll be on center court Saturday in the day's final, featured match, facing No. 25 Gael Monfils, a 18-year-old Frenchman who, Blake said, "moves better than anyone. I think he might be the fastest guy out there. The way he moves is incredible."

Just like the future: Wide open

By Eric Larsen
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The touchdown was practically metaphorical.

Raft River's Paden Baker hauled in a high-arching pass from Murtaugh's Chase Hunsaker, finding himself running on that rarest of football ground — open field. Behind him, 15 high school graduates played catch-up in what were likely the last sets of pads they'd ever wear. In front, open field, and to some extent, a look into the future for an individual among a group of young men with plenty of room to run.

Baker's burst on the first play from scrimmage during the second quarter of Friday's District IV North-South Shrine Eight-man Football Game at Twin Falls High's Brain Stadium resulted in a 65-yard touchdown pass and a 20-6 lead for the South. Baker's third touchdown of the game looked to be the knockout blow for the quick-striking South squad, but the North got off the canvas and chipped away an 18-0 rally to take a 24-20 win in the final incarnation of the series.

The North made that rally partially on the charming legs of Camas County's Josh Shroyer, who toted the ball 19 times for 104 yards and two touchdowns. His second score — a four-yard burst in the third quarter — brought the North within striking distance, down 20-12. From there, quarterback Tyler Cook of Carey connected with Panthers teammate Todd Green for a 15-yard touchdown pass to pull within two points. Cook found the endzone again on a two-yard quarterback keeper to put the North up 24-20.

Raft River's Paden Baker breaks out of a Chris Aldrich arm-tackle during Friday's North-South Shrine Football Game at Twin Falls High School. Baker got the best of this run, but Aldrich and his North teammates won 24-20.

With the South looking for one last gasp big play, Shroyer was there on defense to intercept a Hunsaker pass and put the win in hand for the North.

"It's awesome. We went out there, had fun," Shroyer said. "Last game we're ever going to play in high school — I mean, that's the last event we're ever going to do in high school and we made the best out of it and won."

It was a fairly low-scoring affair for an eight-man game, but not without its fireworks. Baker was named the South squad's offensive player of the game. Along with the 65-yard touchdown pass, he rushed 14 times for 100 yards — including a 25-yard touchdown — and took an interception off Cook back for a 30-yard scoring strike. "Nothing better than this," Baker said. "One last time to strap it on, fly around and hit somebody. Nothing more you can ask for. Coulda got a few more breaks, but it happens. It was a good game we played, and if a few more breaks went our way, we would have won it."

"Winning was in the forefront of every player's mind, but even Baker, who is very accustomed to winning at the high school level, was able to appreciate the bigger picture of the event.

"One last hurrah is all a high school kid can ask for," he said. "To even be considered for an all-star game like this is kind of a privilege. It's for a good cause. I mean, the Shrine helps a lot of people. It's a good cause, so I'm down for it."

Castleford receiver Drew Tverdy was named the North squad's offensive player of the game after hauling in six passes for 84 yards, while Carey's Green took North defensive player of the game honors with a two-sack performance. Oakley's Steven Terry was named South defensive player of the game for his disruptive presence in the North backfield.

The North quarterback, Cook, completed 10-of-16 passes for 144 yards and one touchdown.

Shroyer, who will attend Boise State University in the fall and pursue a degree in athletic training, was appreciative. Please see B-MAN, Page B2

Heat finally pass Pistons

MIAMI (AP) — A year ago, the Miami Heat simply weren't good enough. Shaquille O'Neal knew it. Dwyane Wade knew it.

So Pat Riley fixed it. And now, the Heat are headed to the NBA Finals for the first time.

O'Neal had 28 points and 16 rebounds and Wade — who spent part of his day in a hospital battling dehydration and flu-like symptoms — added 14 points as the Heat ended the Detroit Pistons' two-year reign as Eastern Conference champions with an 85-78 win Friday.

Jason Williams, one of Riley's prized offseason additions, came up huge with Wade lagging in Game 6, scoring 21 points on 10-for-12 shooting.

The Heat now await either Dallas or Phoenix in the Finals, which start Thursday. The party started early. Wade walked off with 1:45 left, right index finger raised before he slapped Riley's hand. And after the final second ticked off, white streamers fell from the ceiling as the Heat players waved championship caps and T-shirts. Soon, though, O'Neal issued an expected warning.

"We're not done," he said. Richard Hamilton had 33 points for Detroit, which finishes the regular season with an NBA-best 64-18 record and came in confident after ending Miami's season here a year ago in Game 7 — in part because Wade and O'Neal were battling injury.

Wade clearly wasn't at his best Friday.

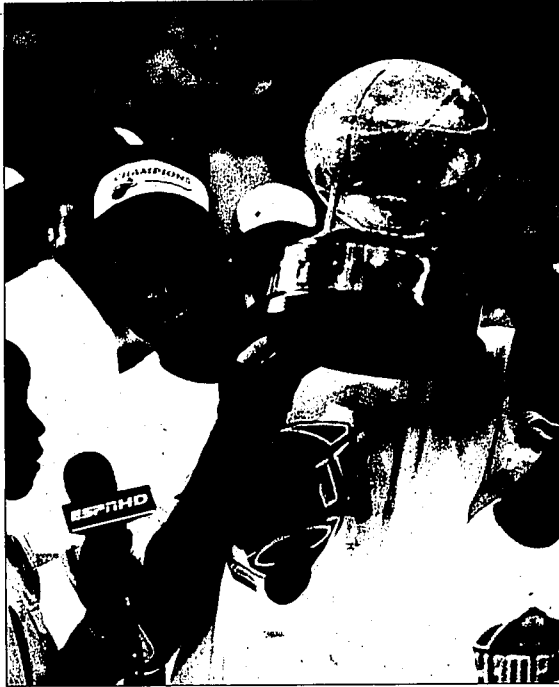

O'Neal was. Hence, the difference. He made 12 of 14 shots, making sure this chance wouldn't slip away.

"Miami played great," Hamilton said. "They deserved it."

Wade was 1-for-6 with four points in the first half. Didn't matter. O'Neal and Williams made them earn the early scoring lead, helping stake Miami to an 47-36 lead at intermission.

O'Neal was 9-for-11 from the field for 19 points in the opening two quarters, his best performance in the playoffs. And Williams — who was 13-for-30 from the floor in the first five games — was 5-for-5 in the half, the last of those a pullup jumper in the first that gave Miami a 38-27 lead.

Detroit got within 40-33 on a pair of free throws by Hamilton with 2:52 left, but O'Neal scored six straight mid-air points in a span of 2:05 and sparked a half-closing 8-3 run by the Heat.

Miami Heat guard Dwyane Wade raises the NBA basketball Eastern Conference trophy after the Heat defeated the Detroit Pistons 85-78 in Game 6 of the conference finals in Miami on Friday.

And really, the outcome was never in doubt. The Pistons were within 10 midway through the third quarter, when Wade — who missed the first 2½ minutes of the second half and remained in the locker room — finally started to roll.

He had 10 points in the quarter, hitting his last four shots — including a jumper with 1 second left for a 72-53 lead, as the sellout crowd began going delirious, the realization that the franchise's 18-year-itch was about to be scratched.

"I just wanted to help my teammates," Wade said. "And God gave me the strength."

Hamilton and the Pistons made one more run, his jumper with 6:24 left getting Detroit within 80-67. He made a steal 17 seconds later, but O'Neal blocked his layup — then followed with a dunk on the other end, as Wade pumped up his fist and Riley clapped knowingly.

Minutes later, the championship was theirs. Riley and owner Micky Arison stood arm-in-arm as they awaited the presentation of the Eastern Conference championship trophy from NBA vice president Stu Jackson. Alonzo Mourning — the face of this franchise for so long — stood behind them, nodding and holding a finger aloft.

Then Riley lifted the silver trophy, as a sea of players' hands reached in for a touch. Riley is taking his third team to the Finals, after the "Showtime" Lakers of the 1980s and the 1990s. He carried a steal 17 seconds later, but came here a decade ago, envisioning a parade down Biscayne Boulevard.

He's never been closer. And O'Neal, in turn, is now about to wear his third jersey in the Finals. He got Orlando there, then took the Lakers there four times — winning three titles, the lone defeat coming in 2004 to the Pistons, who also ended his first season in Miami.

Detroit only shot 33 percent in the game, with Chauncey Billups going 3-for-14 and Rasheed Wallace going 4-for-12. The Pistons were out-rebounded 48-39 and, perhaps most telling, let the Heat shoot 56 percent from the floor — after insisting that defense would be their top priority. "We didn't play how we play," Pistons coach Flip Saunders said.

Pettersson makes up ground at Memorial

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) — Carl Pettersson would have to consider this a good day. He made five birdies in the five holes that make up the golf course, and had only one milkshake in the six hours he spent inside the locker room during a rainy Friday at the Memorial.

The best part of it was that he finished his lead and was atop the leaderboard.

Pettersson made up ground quickly after a six-hour rain delay by playing bogey-free in his round of 5-under-67, making him the leader in the clubhouse by two shots with more than two-thirds of the field unable to finish the second round.

The outcry over the furious bankers were quickly forgotten when a steady rain that began at dawn saturated Muirfield Village and led to the long rain delay. Stuck in the clubhouse half the day, all anyone wanted to do was get back on the course.

Pettersson returned to the course and struck a 7-iron to 10 feet on the sixth hole for birdie, and continued moving up the leaderboard until he was at 13-under-136. Sean O'Hair birdied three of his first six holes and also was at 8 under when play was suspended. Steve Flesch (72) and Zach Johnson (68) each dropped a shot over the final two holes to finish at 6-under-138.

Sorenstam shares Shoprite

LPGA lead GALLOWAY TOWNSHIP, N.J. — Trying to snap out of an uncharacteristic victory drought, defending champion Annika Sorenstam shot a 7-under-64 for a share of the first-round lead in the Shoprite LPGA Classic.

Without in her last six starts, Sorenstam sank a 7-foot putt for eagle on the ninth hole and gained momentum from there, making four back-nine birdies to move into a tie with Michele Reedman. Sorenstam also won the 1998 and 2002 titles.

Simpson leads Allianz Championship WEST DES MOINES, Iowa — Scott Simpson shot a 7-under-64, one stroke off the tournament record, to take a one-stroke lead over Doug Tewell, Jim Thorpe, Bruce Lietzke and Mark McNulty after the first round of the Allianz Championship.

Seventeen players were within three shots of the lead, including defending champion Tom Jenkins and Loren Roberts, a three-time winner this year.

Karlsson leads at Wales Open

NEWPORT, Wales — Sweden's Robert Karlsson followed his opening 61 with a 63 in the Wales Open to break the PGA European Tour record for 36 holes.

Karlsson's 149 under 124 total on the par-69 Roman Road Course at Celtic Manor left him four strokes ahead of Englishmen Philip Archer, Simon Dyson and Paul Broadhurst.

Boston Red Sox batter Kevin Youkilis watches his two-run home run in the sixth inning of Friday's baseball game against the Detroit Tigers in Detroit. The home run gave the Red Sox a 3-2 win.

Youkilis blast lifts Red Sox

DETROIT (AP) — Kevin Youkilis' two-run homer with two outs in the ninth inning gave Boston a 3-2 victory over Detroit on Friday night.

It was the second loss in four days for closer Todd Jones.

With Detroit leading 2-1, Jones (0-3) retired the first two batters in the ninth, but Mike Lowell singled and Youkilis drove an 0-1 pitch into the bullpen in left for his sixth homer.

On Tuesday, Jones allowed five runs in the 11th inning of a 11-6 loss to the New York Yankees.

Angels 10, Indians 3

CLEVELAND — Rookie Jered Weaver took a two-hit shutout into the seventh inning and won his second start in the majors.

He allowed two runs and four hits in 6 1-3 innings, walked two and struck out eight.

The Indians managed to get just one runner to second base before the seventh when Casey Blake singled and scored on Ben Broussard's double.

Yankees 6, Orioles 5

BALTIMORE — Derek Jeter singled in the tiebreaking run in the ninth inning, and New York got homers from Andy Phillips and Jason Giambi.

Returning from a two-day absence because of a hand injury, Jeter went 3-for-4 with a walk and two RBIs.

Blue Jays 13,

Devil Rays 4

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Reed Johnson homered twice, including a three-run shot to cap Toronto's nine-run ninth inning.

Jackson, who came in with just one home run this season, had his second career multi-homer game.

Rangers 4, White Sox 3

GARY MATTHEWS JR. doubled home the go-ahead run off Bobby Jenks in the ninth inning, and Texas handed Chicago its fourth straight loss. The winning rally started when Chicago's Brandon McCarthy (2-3) walked Ian Kinsler with one out. Jenks, the White Sox's closer, came on and gave up a double to Matthews on the first pitch to lead the Rangers to their sixth win in eight games.

National League

Marlins 4, Rockies 2

DENVER — Dontrelle Willis' ended his longest career winless skid at eight starts, tossing seven strong innings in Florida's win over Colorado.

Willis (2-6) surrendered two runs on seven hits in winning for the first time since April 14 against Washington. He had lost six straight decisions since then despite allowing just six earned runs his previous three starts.

Reds 14, Astros 3

HOUSTON — Edwin Encarnacion and Austin Kearns each had four RBIs and the Cincinnati Reds scored nine runs over the first three innings in a 14-3 victory over the Houston Astros on Friday night.

Brandon Phillips homered and Ken Griffey Jr. had two hits and scored two runs as the Reds' beat the Astros in Houston for just the third time in the last 17 meetings.

Nationals 10, Brewers 4

MILWAUKEE — Jose Vidro had three hits and two RBIs and Brian Schneider had a three-run double that broke the game open, leading Washington over Milwaukee.

Ramon Ortiz (4-4) won his fourth straight game after losing his first four decisions of the season. He gave up two earned runs and six hits in 6 2-3 innings for Washington, which improved its road record to 13-19.

It was the sixth consecutive loss for the Brewers (26-29), dropping them three games below .500 for the first time this season.

Whited thirsty for success

By Linda Brittain
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — Last year Jason Whited's dream of becoming the 2005 Pony Stock champion was literally broken in the final minutes of the last race of the season. With only four laps left in the main event, the crank shaft in Whited's car let go — and gone too was Whited's last chance of capturing the season title. Whited had to exit the track and was left to ponder what might have been from the pits.

But every spring brings seems to bring renewed life to the spirit of competition, and Whited was far from buying his hopes at another shot for the title.

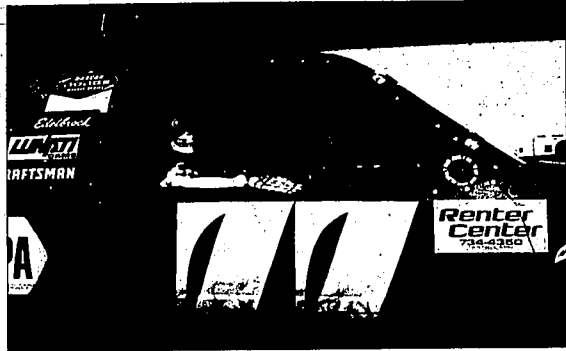

The No. 77 car was repaired, given a new paint scheme and Whited was ready to take on an equally-determined group of Pony Stock drivers for the 2006 season.

"Yeah, knowing how close we were (last year), it definitely made me want to come back and try it again," Whited said. "I know the competition is never far enough away, however, and he has to look no farther than to the driver parked alongside him in the pits during a recent practice session at the Magic Valley Speedway to spot one of his toughest rivals."

"That guy right there," Whited said, pointing directly at the No. 10 car of Lou Andersen. Andersen was able to knock down the 2005 title as Whited's mechanical problems put him out of contention for the season.

Andersen currently leads Whited by 10 points in the division standings, but is a long way from getting his acceptance speech for the award's banquet in October.

"He's good," Andersen said of the 25-year-old Whited. "I think he's one of the best drivers out there. Those guys work really hard at it every week trying to make their car better and Jason goes out to win every time out. I really think it's a credit to their ability as a team to know that they have a very good chance of winning on any night."

Magic Valley SPEEDWAY

Whited's crew, also known as the Skull Brothers Racing team, consists of Eldon Amero, Ted Whited, Jeremy Baxter and Rick Fowble. By far the quietest member of the crew however, is Whited's co-pilot, Thirsty, a plastic skeleton that is rigged up in the passenger side of the car.

Thirsty's presence can be always noticed as Whited circles the one-third mile track, especially by the younger race fans.

"That's mostly what it is," Whited said of the majority of the Thirsty groups. "I get a lot of kids coming up to me after the races wanting to see him. It's my step dad's (Amero's) deal."

With the help of the Skull Brothers, Whited and Thirsty have made one trip to the winner's circle and dug up two third places finishes so far this year.

Currently Whited is third in the point standings, ten points behind Andersen and eight points back of Josh Pliz. But the season is still young and Whited continues to work hard at getting first to the checkered flag each week. It takes time, money and patience. As with any other driver throughout the season, some nights things will go your way, other nights they won't.

This is where Whited's wife of three years, Jami, steps up. A racing fan even before they were married, Jami Whited realizes — as most racing wives do eventually — that what happens at the Magic Valley Speedway doesn't necessarily stay at the Magic Valley Speedway.

"We lots of times end up rehashing what happened that night at home," Jami Whited said. "If it was a good night then I usually can't get him off the phone. But if something went wrong it will just eat him up inside but I try and not let him get too upset. It depends on how eventful the night was if it carries over to the next day," she adds.

Jason Whited knows that while Thirsty may be a good listener, he's not much at giving advice.

"Some days I think I'm not going to do this forever. Other days I think I might sell the car the next day," Jason Whited said. "But she (Jami) usually calms me down."

Rudd ready to shoulder the load

DOVER, Del. (AP) — Rather than firing up the lawn mower this weekend at his North Carolina farm, Ricky Rudd will circle the track one more time in something a bit more powerful.

Rudd is ending his self-imposed sabbatical — don't call it retirement — as a relief driver for injured NASCAR champion Tony Stewart at Dover International Speedway. Stewart will start Sunday's race, then probably come out at the first caution to rest his broken shoulder blade.

Surprisingly, a big part of the plan was calling Rudd, who has not raced this season and seemed content with taking the year off after 31 seasons and a record 789 consecutive races.

When Stewart was knocked out of Sunday's event at Lowe's Motor Speedway, making racing this week an arduous task, crew chief Greg Zipadrelli called Rudd on the short list of possible replacements.

"Rudd believes he's ready to do it from the load for the defending champ."

"It was a real, real tough call," Rudd said, smiling. "Do I cut grass for six hours a day this weekend or do I go out to power and drive a race car? It wasn't a real hard decision about what I wanted to do."

There are no timeouts for drivers in NASCAR. It's either start the race or lose valuable points that would cripple a driver's championship hopes. Stewart has to start to keep his title hopes alive, though he can be replaced in the car anytime after the first lap.

Rudd started the 10th fastest lap of 152.931 mph on Friday, but the No. 20 Chevrolet will automatically start at the back of the field.

"I'm just kind of up here to help him come away without a big fall in the points situation," Rudd said.

NASCAR THIS WEEK

NEXT CUP NEIGHBORHOOD EXCELLENCE 400

Site: Dover, Del.
Schedule: Friday, qualifying (Speed Channel, 5:30 p.m.); Sunday, race (FX, 1:30 p.m.).

Track: Dover Downs International Speedway (oval, 1 mile, 24 degrees banking in turns).

Race distance: 400 miles, 400 laps.

Last race: There's finally a new Coca-Cola 600 winner — somebody other than Jimmie Johnson celebrated in Lowe's Motor Speedway's Victory Lane for the first time in six races. Kasey Kahne took the lead with 29 laps to go, then pulled out to such a huge lead that Johnson never had a chance to catch him.

Last year Greg Biffle recorded his series-leading fourth win of the season at Dover International Raceway. In a race slowed seven times for 33 of its 400 laps, Biffle won in part because he avoided traffic problems that resulted in hard crashes. Among those taken from the field were four-time Dover winners Jeff Gordon and Ricky Rudd, and Ken Schrader and Dave Blaney.

Next race: Pocono 500, June 11, Long Pond, Pa.

BUSCH STONEBRIDGE RACING.COM 200

Site: Dover, Del.
Schedule: Friday, qualifying, 10:15 a.m.; race (Speed Channel, 8 p.m.).

Track: Dover Downs International Speedway (oval, 1 mile, 24 degrees banking in turns).

Race distance: 200 miles, 200 laps.

Last race: Ron Hornaday Jr. won the Cup of Mansfield 250 for his series-record 28th consecutive victory, while former baseball star Mike Greenwell finished 26th in his NASCAR debut.

Last year: Kyle Busch got a huge break and won for the second week in a row after an error on pit road took dominant Ron Hornaday out of contention at Dover International Speedway. Hornaday led all but 13 of the first 112 laps and 134 of 200 overall. But he was forced to pit a second time after a caution because of a missing lugnut with 50 laps to go.

Next race: Fort Worth 400, June 9, Texas.

MVS looking for fair weather tonight

By Linda Brittain
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — After last Saturday night's racing events at the Magic Valley Speedway were canceled due to rainy conditions throughout the day, the speedway drivers are looking forward to getting out on track tonight as the weather forecast looks good for an awesome night of racing action.

The Pepsi Premier drivers had an extra week to get things back in order after what was a rough night for several drivers during the double-main event races last time out.

Mike Greco, driver of the No. 70 car, experienced an especially unforgiving evening during the May 20 event as he hopes that his bad necking hic behind him as he and his crew have been working overtime to get the car back together for tonight's competition.

Greco broke an axle on his car during the second main event race late last month, which put him on the sideline for the rest of the night. However, Greco is expected to make a complete recovery in time for tonight's festivities on the track.

"His car is fixed thanks to his hard-working pit crew, Greco's wife Misty Greco reported. "They were over here every night last week getting the car done for Saturday. Somehow — we are not sure how — all five studs on his wheel broke, and when the wheel flew off, it pulled the axle out of the drive plate. The only thing we can do about it is to change the heat-race damaged the wheel or something in the rear end. We are trying a brand-new set-up on the car this weekend, so hopefully we made the right adjustments," she said.

Rob Vest, who won the first main event under a yellow-flag condition on the track, has been the only driver so far this season to drive to a main event win in a modified-type car, and only after changes in the weight rules were adopted by the track to try and bring the modifieds around.

"It was just pure luck," Vest said of his win under a caution. "My car was a lot better but it's still not anything like it was last year. But it was nice to see a modified win."

Bobby Latham, winner of the second main event race, has raced with amazing consistency so far this season in a car that posts some of the fastest lap times in practice. Latham currently sits on top in the point standings after two

The InterMountain Pro Race Trucks are set for their second appearance of the season tonight with Alan Larson of Kimberly leading the overall points standings by a single point over Dan Koyle of Filer. Larson will be a busy man tonight as he will also take on driving duties in the No. 50 McKean Motorsports car for the Premier series events this planned to make the 2,800-mile flight to Dover, Del., on Thursday evening for practice and qualifying for the Cup race at the Monster Mile. He then planned to return to Ensendeda to be ready to take the green flag in the Baja 500 on Saturday morning.

"My main commitment is to the truck," Larson said. "But this will be a cool deal. I just hope they give me enough time to get into the other car."

Koyle was first to the checkered flag in the April 22 race at MVS, followed by Kenny Vanderham of Jerome and Larson. Stevie Fisher is the most recent winner in the series, having captured his first win of the season two weeks ago at Meridian.

Race No. 5 for the NAPA Pony Stocks will begin with 2005 MVS Champion Lou Andersen holding a two-point lead over Jason Whited who currently sits third in the standings.

Pitz ran off with a win last time out for the division and will be one of the top contenders to corral a second win tonight. Dustin Wilson, Brent Felting and John Ute have put in some impressive performances lately and also will be striving for a victory this evening.

The Magic Valley Pipe Thunder Stocks will roll out for a 25-lap main event with Jim Howard as the defending race winner after cruising to a victory in the May 20 race. Desi Ahrens will have the target on his back tonight however, as he has quietly taken over the lead in the point standings after a fourth-place finish after the completion of the last race.

Finally, all is not lost from last Saturday night's rain-out. The Speedway has announced that the flagpole race previously scheduled for last weekend will take place tonight — starring the Thunder Stock drivers.

Gates open at 4 p.m. with green flag racing beginning promptly at 7:05.

Robby Gordon in for grueling week of racing

NEW YORK (AP) — Robby Gordon has dirt in his veins. The longtime racer, who has won events in NASCAR and Indy cars and come within two laps and a empty gas tank of winning the Indianapolis 500, still can't get his roots in off-road racing out of his system.

That's going to make this week a truly grueling one for the 37-year-old Gordon.

Just eight hours after finishing 16th last Sunday night in the 600-mile Nextel Cup race at Lowe's Motor Speedway, Gordon began his 11,200-mile odyssey, flying to Ensendeda, Mexico, to spend three days practicing for the Baja 500 off-road race, in which he was the defending champion in the "Trophy Truck" division.

Gordon, the only current owner-driver in Cup, then planned to make the 2,800-mile flight to Dover, Del., on Thursday evening for practice and qualifying for the Cup race at the Monster Mile. He then planned to return to Ensendeda to be ready to take the green flag in the Baja 500 on Saturday morning.

Conflicted jury delays Openshaw case

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS—After five hours and forty-five minutes of debate, the jury in charge of the fate of Richard D. Openshaw could not reach a consensus.

Upon hearing from a unanimous jury that extra time that evening would not yield a verdict, 5th District Judge John Butler sent jurors home for the weekend with instructions to avoid discussing the trial and reading or watching local news.

"I am not prepared to declare this a hung jury," Butler said.

Jurors will return to Jerome on 9 a.m. Monday, when they will again attempt to decide whether Openshaw, 43, is guilty of involuntary manslaughter in the death of Kevin Gaver, 24.

Gaver died shortly after Openshaw allegedly hit him in the face with an uppercut in a fight near midnight on Nov. 24, 2004, outside Mr. Bill's bar at the corner of Main and Alder streets in Jerome.

If convicted, the maximum sentence Openshaw could receive would be 10 years in prison.

The final decision will come down to whether jurors believe the version of the night's events given by the prosecution's star witness, Jerome police officer George Silver III, or the defense's seven witnesses, including Mr. Bill's bartender Natalie Brown.

As he approached the intersection, Silver said in earlier testimony he saw Gaver standing at the corner, paying no attention to Openshaw. The latter quickly covered what Silver estimated to be 80 feet and hit Gaver, who fell into the street and did not move.

Jerome County Prosecuting Attorney Jon Nicholson III said Silver's testimony, backed up by fellow police officer Ken Rushing, obviously proved the defense's claim that Openshaw was attacked by Gaver and acting in self-defense to be false.

The state would assert to you that Gaver standing on the corner does not create self-defense," Nicholson said. "Gaver yelling and screaming does not create self-defense."

The defense relied on a strategy of questioning Silver's memory. Twin Falls attorney Greg Fuller suggested the constant crimes Silver comes across in his job may have caused him to confuse the particulars of this specific one, especially a year and a half later.

"Could he mix up the facts of the case? Could he forget?" asked Fuller. "In no way do the defendant and I believe he is lying. We believe he's mistaken."

As evidence, Fuller pointed to four discrepancies between the testimonies of Silver and the others. While Silver said he was headed north on Alder Street when he saw the incident, the defense placed him heading west on Main Street. The direction was significant, Fuller argued, because Silver's view of the incident may have been obscured by buildings. The southwest corner of the intersection is the parking lot of the Judicial Annex Building. The other three corners have structures up to the sidewalk.

A similar discrepancy occurred with which street the body came to rest on. Defense witnesses also disagreed about who else had been fighting along with Gaver and Openshaw, Silver said he also saw Chris Quintana and Bill Trujillo in a fight, while at least two defense witnesses replaced Bill with Chris Trujillo, his son.

Finally, Fuller and defense witnesses said Openshaw had been attacked by Gaver and that the deadly hit had in fact been delivered when the two were on the ground.

Nicholson rebutted the "inconsistencies" in his closing argument, saying the "most interesting" Silver didn't see Chris Trujillo, the prosecutor said, because Chris' father ordered him back into the bar just as Silver pulled up to protect the body with his patrol car. As for Openshaw and Gaver ending up on the ground during the fight, Nicholson said, "This simply did not happen," he said. "Don't be led down the possible or imaginary-doubt path when there is no doubt."

Big find

Cassia County Sheriff Jim Higgins, center and two of his investigators, Jay Howard and Loyd Egbert, check some of the guns recovered last week in a three-week burglary investigation that resulted in the arrest of six people.

Police recover arsenal of stolen weapons

By Renee Wells
For the Times-News

BURLEY—What started out to be an attempt to help a stranded motorist has turned into a major burglary investigation, resulting in the arrest of six people.

Cassia Sheriff Jim Higgins said excellent investigative work by his detectives broke at least three burglaries and brought about the recovery of an arsenal of stolen weapons.

The events began May 18, when members of the Mini-Cassia Drug Task Force stopped at 800 East Hwy. 81 to assist what appeared to be a stalled car.

Two individuals were standing in the barrow pit near the car. As the officer pulled behind the vehicle, the driver took off, nearly hitting one of the people standing nearby, according to a sheriff's department press release.

The officers detained the two men and called for backup. While waiting, the officers searched the barrow pit and found the identification documents belonging to Cassia County deputy prosecutor Blaine Cannon and Minidoka County deputy prosecutor Nicky Cannon.

The officers were unable to contact the Cannons. Fearing for their safety, two Cassia County deputies responded to the Cannon home, reaching it just as the couple was arriving.

Police checked inside the home and found it had been broken into and a number of things were missing.

Back at the scene of the car breakdown, one of the two suspects, Brent Matherly, 33, of Burley, told officers he had broken into the Pomerelle Ski Lodge because he was cold. He and the other suspect, Michael Angel Ortega, 27, Burley, were transported to the Mini-Cassia Criminal Justice Center, where additional stolen items were recovered from the suspects.

Matherly was charged with first degree burglary and Ortega was charged with possession of stolen property, the release said.

The next day, May 19, Cassia County Undersheriff Cary Bristol located a vehicle which matched the description of the one that left the scene the night before.

Bristol stopped the car on West 16th Street. The driver, Mark Tubbs, 23, of Burley, exited the vehicle to speak with officers.

At that time, the passenger, later identified as Jeremiah Schmidt, 19, of Burley, slid into the driver's seat and fled.

While Tubbs was taken into custody, additional assistance was sought, and an Idaho State Policeman pursued the suspect vehicle west on Hwy. 30.

The pursuit reached speeds of 100 miles per hour and ensued for several minutes until the vehicle

Cassia County land use plan draws criticism

By Marie Mischel
For the Times-News

BURLEY—A plan intended to include everyone pleased no one who spoke at Thursday's Cassia County Planning and Zoning Commission meeting.

At issue was the proposed update of the county's comprehensive plan, a guideline for growth for the next 20 years.

The plan is intended "to protect the rights and liberties of all citizens," but at Thursday's meeting those who spoke proved how difficult achieving that goal will be.

Of the 30 people who attended the meeting, seven signed up to speak. Those seven represented diverse, and sometimes competing, interests.

Brent Stoker, a local rancher, pointed out the commissioners' difficulty. "It is impossible for you to balance the interests," he said.

"A property right is either a property right or it's not. A property right is absolute."

But two other residents wondered whose property rights the plan should protect.

Janice Pilling, a resident of the Water Canyon subdivision near Declo, said she assumed the development's bylaws and multi-use zoning would protect her from a large dairy that was built nearby.

She and her neighbors unsuccessfully protested the dairy's construction because of the resulting odors, aesthetics and other issues.

"A lot of us have ended up with unhappy, bitter feelings," she said. "It stepped on our toes and wrecked our quality of life. We feel that some of the laws that were in the plan to protect us didn't protect us at all. We would like some sort of better definition of this for multi-use areas."

Certain agricultural pursuits such as row crops would be compatible, she said, "but smelly dairies and pig farms don't go with the multi-use area."

Stoker said property owners in such areas should be required to sign waivers indicating their understanding that agricultural uses have priority.

Another side of the issue came from Kent Warr, who complained about a new

Magic Valley Regional wins surprise award

By Sandy Miller
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — It's doubtful patients on ventilators in the beds of Magic Valley Regional Medical Center's intensive care unit will get pneumonia, a common risk with ventilator patients. And if a patient has something wrong with them that no one person can quite figure out, a rapid response team will come to their side to brainstorm the medical mystery.

Meanwhile, patients suffering from heart failure will get the latest treatments to better help them live with their disease.

And each member of the medical staff working with a patient is on the same page when it comes to treating that patient.

"It's a team approach," said Sharon Fischer, the hospital's director of quality resources.

Many different organizations keep track of the quality of care at hospitals, including the Center for Medicare and Medicaid Services, the Institute for Health Care Improvement, Qualls and the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Healthcare Organizations.

Information from CMS recently won the 165-bed Magic Valley Regional a surprise award from the Solient 100 Top Hospitals Performance Leaders, a study that recognizes hospitals and their leadership teams that made the greatest progress between from 2000 through 2004.

"It looks at the consistent continuity of care from physicians and hospital providers," Fischer said.

"The study also looks at a hospital's effort to stay informed on the latest research and medical treatments."

"It looks at how well we've responded to new things in health care," said Rhonda Bright, the hospital's performance improvement coordinator.

So what kinds of things has Magic Valley Regional been doing to improve health care for its patients?

For one thing, the hospital has taken measures to prevent ventilator-associated pneumonia, such as keeping ventilator patients' heads propped up 30 degrees.

"If they come in and need a ventilator, we have a standard protocol to keep them from getting pneumonia," Fischer said.

Ventilator patients are also given medication to prevent acid build-up and an organ failure.

Measures such as these also help cut down on health care costs because patients can leave ICU sooner for less expensive regular rooms.

"If you can prevent ventilator-associated pneumonia, you're going to avoid ICU," Fischer said.

The hospital also keeps up on and utilizes the latest treatments for patients with congestive heart failure. There's certain medications that have been shown to be better in the treatment of congestive heart failure and physicians refer to that list when treating their patients. However, that doesn't mean everyone gets the same medication or treatment. What's good for one patient might not be good for another.

"The thing you have to understand in health care is every patient is different," Fischer said.

James Leland Brockie

DALLAS, Texas — James Leland Brockie passed away on March 24, 2006, in Dallas, Texas, after a lengthy illness. He was born Feb. 8, 1924, in Rupert to Helen Abigail Ellsworth and Robert Brockie. He was raised on a ranch and maintained his love of the outdoors throughout his life as an avid hunter and fisherman. He was a member of numerous hunting organizations and was awarded hunting trophies throughout the world. He was a graduate of the University of Idaho, where he was a member of the Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity. He was a Navy pilot in the World War II and continued flying in his career as a Braniff captain until his retirement. After his retirement, he spent many years participating in the Dallas real estate and investment market. He traveled extensively to exotic destinations throughout the world, where he often took advantage of opportunities to explore new cultures and terrains as he indulged his passion for hunting. He lived most of his adult life in Dallas, Texas, where he was a member of the Irving Masonic Lodge 1218.

He is survived by three children and two sons-in-law, Dr. Robert E. Brockie of Dallas, Patricia and Chuck Neve of Austin, Texas, and Jean and Ken Lancaster of Denver, Colo. He is survived by four grandsons, Charles Brockie Neave, Patrick Gibbreath Neave, Aidan John Brockie and Ian Thomas Brockie. He also survived by his sister, Catherine Allott of Tucson, Ariz., along with numerous nieces and nephews and was preceded in death by brothers, Robert Brockie Jr., Donald Peter Brockie and John Brockie.

A memorial service was held at Sparkman/Hilcrest Funeral Home in Dallas, Texas, on Friday, April 7, 2006. A graveside service will be held in Rupert at the MAR Cemetery on Saturday, June 3, 2006, at 11 a.m. A list of flowers, the family requests that memorial gifts be made to the Alzheimer's Foundation, 322 Eighth Ave., Sixth Floor, New York, NY 10001, or Cal Farley's Boys Ranch, P.O. Clarissa L. Lewis

TWIN FALLS — Clarissa L. Lewis, 92, of Twin Falls, passed peacefully from this life on Tuesday, May 30, 2006. Born on Feb. 12, 1914, in Hartsville, Mo., Clarissa was the first child of eight to George and Cammie Reddick. When Clarissa was 2 years old, the family moved to Idaho. Clarissa was joined by three brothers: Farris, Dexter and Ellis; and four sisters, Zella, Velma, Clyde and Verba.

On Jan. 1, 1934, Clarissa married Chauncey DeWitt and they farmed in the Jerome area for several years. They were blessed with two daughters, Mina and Janet. In 1951, her husband died, and Clarissa and the girls moved to Twin Falls.

She worked for Reliance Credit and C.C. Anderson's before becoming the office manager at Twin Falls County Hospital, a job she enjoyed until retirement in 1973. She married Alton Lewis on Feb. 11, 1967, and they were married 25 years before Alton's death in 1994.

Clarissa had many talents, skills and interests that she shared with her friends and family. One of her favorite things to do was care for her yard, her amazing flowers and her huge garden.

She was a great cook and could always squeeze another hungry mouth in around her table.

She enjoyed camping, quilting, embroidery, canning, rock-hunting, picnics and family reunions and any excuse at all to get the family together. Her favorite moments were those spent with family and friends. She always had time — for any and all of her family. She loved them, and they loved her right back.

Clarissa is survived by her daughter and son-in-law, Mina and Arnold McKeen; her daughter, Janet Morris; her brother, Ellis Reddick; her sisters, Velma McMillan, Clyde (Orin) Parkin and Verba (Bill) Jewell; her sister-in-law, Vera Reddick; nine grandchildren and 12 great-grandchildren and a number of nieces and nephews.

In addition to her husbands, she was also preceded in death by her parents; two brothers, Dexter and Farris; her sister, Zella and her son-in-law, David Morris.

Mom, Sis, Grandma, Aunt Clarisy, we will miss you and we love you very much.

What a gift from God you were to each of us. We are so grateful to our Lord that you finally got your wish. You got to go home!

A celebration of Clarissa's life will be held at 11 a.m. Monday, June 5, 2006, at the Twin Falls First Christian Church, 601 Shoshone St. N. in Twin Falls. A graveside service will be held at 2:30 p.m. at the Jerome Cemetery.

Family and friends are invited to a visitation Sunday, June 4, at Reynolds Funeral Chapel, 2466 Addison Ave. E. in Twin Falls, from 3 until 8 p.m. with the family to receive guests from 6 to 8 p.m.

Donald Andrew Terpstra

JOLIET, Mont. — A memorial service and celebration of life of Donald Andrew Terpstra will be held at the Joliet Baptist Church in Joliet, Mont., on June 24, 2006, at 10 a.m., with the Rev. Bob Reed officiating. Cremation has taken place and the remains interred at the Joliet Cemetery along with those of his second wife.

Donald Andrew Terpstra died at Cedar Wood Villa in Red Lodge, Mont., on Jan. 22, 2006. He was 94.

He was born to Andrew Garret and Sarah (Howell) Terpstra in Clover Hill, Iowa, on April 29, 1911. The fourth of five children.

He was preceded in death by his parents; siblings; two wives (Viola Frances Helfner with whom he had five children and Helen May Wildman with whom he had one child); and three sons (Donald Dean, Thomas Jason and Willard Andrew Terpstra). He is survived by two daughters, Marilyn Joan Barakasa of Roselle, Ill., and Roberta Diane Yoneda and husband Gerald of Kinross, Wyo.; one son, Ronald and wife Eileen of Pleasanton, Calif.; two daughters-in-law, Dorothy and Cecile Terpstra of Milwaukee, Wis., and Joliet, Mont. respectively; 12 grandchildren and 19 great-grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Mr. Terpstra spent his working life at various vocations living mostly in Iowa, California and Twin Falls, Idaho. He moved to Joliet, Mont., in 1997 to be near family after the death of his second wife. Donald was a member of the Masonic order, joining the Lodge in San Francisco, Calif., in 1947.

He was a member of the Scottish Rites of Pocatello and El Korah Shriners of Boise, Idaho. Donald enjoyed working with tools, gardening, cooking and his first love — baking.

By Thomas H. Mough II

Raymond Davis Jr., who won the Nobel Prize in physics in 2002 for capturing solar neutrinos in a tank deep underground in a South Dakota mine, providing the final, conclusive evidence that the sun is powered by nuclear fusion, died Wednesday at his home in Blue Point, N.Y.

He was 91 and had been suffering from Alzheimer's disease for at least four years.

His achievement in capturing the wispy, extraordinarily elusive solar neutrinos was, according to the Swedish Royal Academy of Sciences, "considerably more difficult" than sifting through the entire Sahara Desert to find a few key grains of sand.

When Davis received word of his prize, he said that he was "embarrassed" to be singled out because the work he had required the efforts of a large number of physicists, chemists and others, like virtually any other major physics project undertaken today.

Colleagues, however, noted that Davis provided the key inspiration for the project and was the driving force in keeping it alive and thriving for 30 years.

The first hints that the sun was nuclear-powered came in the 1920s when experiments showed that a helium atom, which contains two protons and two neutrons, has less mass than four hydrogen atoms — essentially four protons.

British astrophysicist concluded that the fusion of four hydrogen atoms into a helium atom in the interior of the sun could release substantial amounts of energy, plus two neutrinos — small particles that travel at nearly the speed of light, have little or no mass and no charge and that interact only extremely rarely with other matter.

Researchers calculated that only one in a trillion neutrinos that reached Earth would strike an atomic nucleus, the rest simply passing through unnoticed. The vast majority of researchers thought detecting them would be impossible.

Davis was virtually the only one who thought otherwise. Davis' first attempt at detecting the elusive particles involved placing a large tank of perchloroethylene, commonly used as dry-cleaning fluid — 2,300 feet underground in the Barberton Limestone Mine in Ohio in 1961. Burying

"I was advised to go to the library, do some reading, and choose a project of my own, whatever appealed to me. Thus began a long career of doing just what I wanted to do and getting paid for it."

— Raymond Davis Jr., Nobel Prize winner

the detector deep beneath the Earth's surface was supposed to shield it from cosmic rays and other sources of radiation, but some cosmic rays leaked through at this depth, overwhelming any potential signal from neutrinos.

Later that decade, Davis installed a 100,000-gallon tank of perchloroethylene 4,800 feet below the ground in the Homestake Gold Mine in Lead, S.D. There, too, his initial results were unimpressive and other researchers scoffed at his efforts, arguing that he could not even detect the small number of neutrinos expected.

To prove them wrong, Davis synthesized 100 atoms of radioactive argon, added them to the perchloroethylene, then successfully re-extracted them. Eventually, their observation techniques were refined and the detector began observing neutrinos. Over the 30 years of experimentation, about 2,000 neutrino events were observed, demonstrating conclusively the occurrence of nuclear fusion in the sun.

But the number of neutrinos was only about one-third of the total expected by scientists, creating what came to be known as the "solar neutrino problem." Ultimately, other researchers concluded that about two-thirds of the solar neutrinos changed into a different type of neutrino during their passage to Earth — a type that could not interact with chlorine.

Those neutrinos ultimately were observed, but no one would have looked for them with the same ferocity and respect that he does the most senior scientist. And for that, he is loved by his colleagues.

Once ensconced in Long Island, Davis built his own boat, a 21-foot sloop called the Halsey and was an active member of the great South Bay Cruising Club.

Davis is survived by his wife Anna; three sons, Andrew of River Forest, Ill., Roger of Center Moriches, N.Y., and Alan of Seattle; two daughters, Martha Kumlner of Honeoye Falls, N.Y. and Nancy Klem of Webster Grove, Mo.; and 11 grandchildren.

Medical ethicist Ronald Cranford dies at 65

By Joe Barber
Times-News

Dr. Ronald Cranford, a neurologist and medical ethicist whose positions in the highly right-to-die cases drew both praise and vilification, has died. He was 65.

Cranford died Wednesday after battling kidney cancer.

A longtime professor at the University of Minnesota and a neurologist at the Hennepin County Medical Center in Minneapolis, Cranford had been involved in right-to-die cases since the early 1970s, but he was best known perhaps as an expert witness in the highly charged case of Terri Schiavo.

After he was diagnosed with cancer, Cranford underwent surgery but refused chemotherapy. He spent much of the rest of his days leavering, teaching and trying to inform the public on end-of-life issues.

"Schiavo was king of the culmination of my career," he said in a profile in the journal Medical Ethics Advisor. "There are enormous changes in the area of medical utility and hundreds of families out there who can't accept the reality of medical futility. There's nothing wrong with that, because the idea of futility runs against the grain with patients and family. So it's a good thing to work on."

Loss of moorage frosts Glacier Bay locals

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — Humpback whales frolicking in crystal blue waters against a majestic setting of snow-capped peaks and glaciers. It's a treasure the National Park Service wants to preserve by limiting how many and how often ships can visit Glacier Bay National Park and Preserve.

Most efforts focus on cruise ships, which last year brought more than 340,000 visitors to Glacier Bay. But new attention has turned to local boats, much to the dismay of the tiny nearby town of Gustavus.

The park's sheltered Bartlett Cove, also the site of park headquarters, is the preferred moorage of many residents whose own dilapidated city dock faces the storm-tossed waters of Ice Passage.

They have been able to slip in and out under an exemption of the park's vessel permit system, but they fear a proposal to regulate their movement could squeeze them out of the cove's sheltered waters.

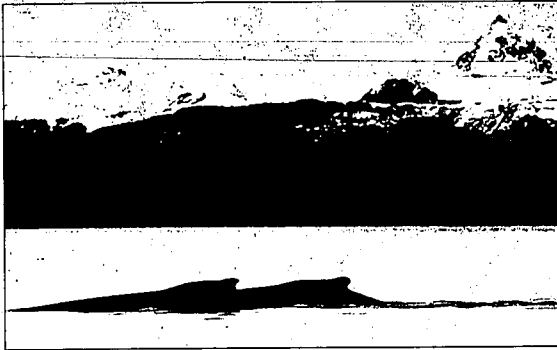

And their complaints paled against thousands of public comments from around the country in the park's ongoing environmental review, said park Superintendent Tomie Lee.

"I was accused, and I heard this loud and clear, of running a private yacht club here for locals," Lee said.

The boats that launch from this town of fewer than 500 people hardly qualify as yachts. They range from simple skiffs to a couple of 70-foot charter boats that tie up regularly at Bartlett Cove.

The town's median household income is just under $35,000, according to the state, and residents are largely park employees, boat and charter boat operators, and fishermen.

A few are descendants of the first white settlers who arrived

The National Park Service wants to preserve the habitat for humpback whales by limiting the number of ships that can visit Glacier Bay.

In the mid-1910s — before there was a park — to carve out lives raising rutabagas and cows and prospecting for gold. Real estate manager Toshiya Parker, a fourth-generation descendant of Gustavus pioneer Abraham Lincoln Parker, is leading opposition to the park's proposed restrictions. He said he has gathered more than 100 signatures on a petition calling on the Park Service to preserve private vessel rights in Bartlett Cove.

"It's kind of been up to Gustavus to protect itself from having its rights and resources taken away," he said.

Lee said the number of private boats is small but growing, and that's a concern, especially in the lower bay where vessels enter the park.

"The lower bay is one of the most biologically sensitive areas of the park, where all the critters coming in and out of the bay have to pass through,"

she said. While large ships may disrupt whales with engine noise, and collisions with the ships have proved fatal to whales in the past, small boats don't pose the same danger. But they can be disruptive to whales feeding or tending their young, Lee said.

Gustavus resident John Nixon said he considers himself a conservationist and he loves watching the whales. But he's hard pressed to believe that his small Nordic tug poses much of a danger.

He's more worried about the problems he might face coming back from work as an itinerant electrical contractor only to be shut out of the cove because he was delayed by weather or because the daily permit allotment was spent.

"I'd be stuck," he said. "Basically they are going to impound my boat because I can't get a permit."

Still, when the park met with frustrated residents at a recent community meeting, a possible compromise was broached — a transit permit system for private boats that would limit how many could pass through the sensitive area at any one time.

It doesn't solve all the concerns from Gustavus but Nixon said it would work for him. It is an hour's wait at most for a boat to make that passage.

Lee acknowledged the friction between the park and the community over many issues. But she said the park must err on the side of caution.

"The longer we allow some things to occur, the more people begin to see that as an entitlement rather than a privilege. And then it becomes harder and harder and harder to change how things are being managed or not being managed," she said.

Investigation details wife's efforts to help drowning man

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — An investigation into the April 21 drowning death of a prominent Spokane, Wash., real estate agent shows Gary Fox's blood alcohol level was 0.074 percent, just below the legal intoxication threshold of 0.08, when he apparently slipped from his boat into 43-degree Lake Coeur d'Alene.

The investigation, conducted by Kootenai County sheriff's Sgt. Ken Lallatin, also shows Fox's wife attempted to call for help but didn't immediately get a response.

Gary Fox, 57, apparently fell into the lake as he and his wife Denise were nearing the dock area at Carlin Bay Resort.

Denise Fox said she tried to throw her husband a rope twice before he slipped under the surface.

She said she also tried the CB radio on their boat, but got no response.

"Then, she dialed the 411 directory assistance number on her cellular telephone to get the number for the resort, but the operator couldn't find it."

One minute later, she dialed the Bonner County Sheriff's Department.

The investigation didn't say if she reached the department. Two minutes after that, she called the 411 number for the resort number, this time successfully getting it from the operator, according to the report.

Rafting accident leaves 3 dead in Grand Teton National Park

MOOSE, Wyo. (AP) — A raft that was part of a scenic float trip on the Snake River overturned Friday in Grand Teton National Park. Three people drowned and at least eight others were rescued, park officials said.

Park spokeswoman Joan Anzelm said all three victims were adults, two women and a man. She declined to release the victims' names or hometowns, and didn't know whether they were related or were traveling as part of a group.

The float trip was guided by the Grand Teton Lodge Co., a park concessionaire, which reported the accident just after 11 a.m. When rescuers arrived, one of the victims was found submerged in a log jam and was unresponsive when recovered; attempts to revive the other two victims at the scene were unsuccessful.

Plan

daily. "When you talk property rights, you need to look at both sides," he said.

Other aspects of the plan were attacked as "grossly inadequate" by Don Pickett.

The existing wording, which states fish and wildlife resources will be protected, could be used by environmentalists as a tool against the county, Pickett said.

For example, because "wildlife competes for forage with my livestock" on public land for which he has grazing rights, the plan could jeopardize his sheep pasturing, he said. "We need to keep access on federal land as much as we can."

"In addition, I think there is a real interest in minimizing agriculture" in the new plan, he said, because the plan doesn't echo the state goal of maximizing agriculture.

But Colleen Carson pointed out the previous plan might have worked in the past but didn't bring prosperity. "The heavy dependency on agriculture contributed to the economic decline," she said, pointing out how the closure of Simplot and other agricultural-related plants led to significant job loss. "If you enter to mining and farming, it's to the detriment of others in the county."

Mining concerns were addressed by Carl Austin. "The plan is negative in respect to mineral industries," not only one but general, he said, and the force drives away people who might be interested in coming to the county for this type of business. Zoning commission members asked numerous questions of those who spoke. Their common refrain was "What would you like to see in the plan?"

After all who had requested to speak had done so, the board voted to continue the public hearing to June 29.

When zoning commissioners have closed the public hearing on the matter, they will discuss the matter and complete their recommendations, which will be forwarded to county commissioners.

The plan and the recommendations will then be discussed at a public hearing in front of the county commissioners.

Written comments to the Planning and Zoning Commission on the plan will be accepted until 5 p.m. June 22.

This earlier deadline will give commissioners a chance to review the material before the meeting the next week.

The June 29 meeting will begin at 8 p.m. in the district courtroom on the second floor of the Cassia County Courthouse, 1459 Overland Ave., Burley.

Public testimony will be taken at the meeting.

A copy of the proposed comprehensive plan and the comprehensive plan map is available in the Cassia County Administrative Office, Courthouse Room #4, 1459 Overland Ave.

The plan also is posted at www.cassiacounty.org, under the heading "public notices."

Officials hope to restore permits for sea lion research

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Representatives of the Aleutians East Borough want people to know they have not been hot-branding Stellar sea lions.

But they say their noninvasive research into the decline of the animals at the tip of the Alaska Peninsula has been suspended while other research techniques are investigated.

A federal judge in Washington, D.C., last week suspended Stellar sea lion research permits granted by the National Marine Fisheries Service. Judge Ellen Segal Huvelle said the federal government did not provide sufficient evidence that research techniques might harm the animals.

The agency approved permits for research activities that included hot branding and tissue sampling of thousands of sea lions each year, according to the lawsuit.

Jonathan Lovorn, an attorney for the Humane Society of the United States, said the society's goal was to have federal officials better evaluate research techniques before authorization.

The judge said the Fisheries Service failed to comply with the National Environmental Protection Act by not preparing an environmental impact statement.

The federal agency had issued permits that allowed researchers to attach tracking devices to more than 700 Stellar sea lions, brand more than 2,900 and allowed for the incidental deaths of up to 60 of the animals a year.

The permits do not authorize the intentional killing of any Stellar sea lions for scientific study.

Aleutians East Borough officials say their researchers have not harmed any animals. The borough was granted permits in 2005 to determine the nature and extent of the animals' decline in their region.

Its permits allow counting of sea lions from the air and collecting seal samples to help with diet analysis.

"The borough is made up of fishing communities that are deeply concerned about the well-being of Stellar sea lions," said borough Administrator Bob Juettner. "In that vein, research we have been conducting is wholly respectful and noninvasive."

Stellar sea lions have been listed as an endangered species since 1997. Fishermen must travel and fish under restrictions provided for sea lions. The restrictions prevent Aleutians East Borough commercial fishermen from trawler within three miles of rookeries unless weather endangers their lives.

Restrictions on sea lion critical habitat sometimes mean no trawling within 20 miles of rookeries.

Borough officials want to show that the sea lions have been undercounted in their region and have not declined because of local commercial fishing.

Fisheries Service scientists contend their research techniques do not harm the overall Stellar sea lion population and are necessary to understanding the animals' unexplained decline and how to help them recover.

Borough officials say they expect the agency to meet with the judge and plaintiffs to request that some permit holders be allowed to proceed with noninvasive research because there is no threat to the animals.

left the highway at 1300 West, crashing through a fence and driving into a field. The driver drove over a length of irrigation pipe and through two steel fences, ending in a ditch adjacent to the field, according to police.

The driver tried to flee on foot but was apprehended by Cassia deputies and the ISP officer.

He was charged with felony eluding, felony driving while suspended and felony injury to property.

The vehicle was searched and stolen property was found in the Cannon burglary. Schmidt was wearing a ring stolen from the Cannon residence. Additional charges of grand theft by possession and accessory to burglary were added.

A passenger in the car, Cheyanna Parton, 21, of Rupert, was also taken into custody and charged with being an accessory to burglary.

As officers continued their investigation, they found Tubbs was also an accessory to the burglary and was in possession of stolen property.

As officers continued to investigate, it was found that a burglary committed at Motion Motors Storage on March 16, where numerous weapons were taken, was likely connected to the same suspects.

Sheriff's investigators were told by an informant that two men, with the first names of Mark and Brent, were attempting to sell firearms.

Detective Dan Renz began investigating the incident and recovered numerous weapons during the past week.

Matherly and Tubbs had additional charges of Grand Theft by possession added to their charges, and another suspect, Dominick Caldarella, 29, of Twin Falls, was charged with first degree burglary.

Two other suspects are being sought in connection with the weapons burglary.

"These guns belong to a former police officer from California and constitute quite an arsenal," Higgins said.

Although weapons located about a dozen guns, there are still a number of guns that have not been located. Those include an AK-47 assault rifle, an SKS assault rifle, a stainless steel .45 caliber handgun, and a Para Ordinance P14, .45 caliber handgun.

"If anyone has any information about these guns, we are asking that they contact the Cassia County Sheriff's office at 878-2251, or Crimestoppers at 878-2900," Higgins said.

"They can remain anonymous and could receive a reward if their information leads to the recovery of the guns and the arrest of individuals involved."

Higgins praised his officers and the cooperating agencies that busted these cases.

"This is a great example of having just one little bit of information which leads to a number of crimes being solved," Higgins said.

Give credit to the Idaho Cassia Drug Task Force, Idaho State Police, our patrol deputies, and our investigators for a job well done."

IDAHO

Risch calls for property tax shift, drug czar

By John Miller
Associated Press writer

BOISE — In the inauguration speech for what could be Idaho's shortest gubernatorial term, Gov. Jim Risch called for shifting Idaho's school maintenance costs from property taxes to the sales tax, even as some lawmakers called the idea a recycled version of failed efforts in the 2006 session.

At the low-key event, Risch said he would consider a special legislative session after July, but only if lawmakers can come up with a tax-relief plan that's sure to pass.

The 63-year-old governor also plans to use his seven months in office to fight methamphetamine abuse by naming a drug czar. And he said he wants to bolster Idaho nursing programs to avert a shortage.

Risch, who was lieutenant governor until he was sworn in as Idaho's 31st governor a week earlier, has taken over for Dirk Kempthorne, who resigned to become President Bush's interior secretary. Risch is running for re-election as lieutenant governor in November against former U.S. Rep. Larry LaRocco, D-Idaho.

Risch was honored by a 19-blasts from two World War II-era howitzers. After the ceremony, he and his wife, Vicki Risch, invited approximately 1,000 holders of free tickets to tour the hilltop mansion donated in December 2004 by billionaire potato magnate J.R. Simplot, showing off the vacant house that's meant to be the home of Idaho's governor after its $3 million renovation.

"The property tax system was adopted long ago when property values were reasonable and stable. Today they are neither," Risch told several hundred people, including former governors Phil Batt, Cecil Andrus and John Evans. Substantial property tax relief won't happen unless the education maintenance and operations costs come from sales tax revenue or the state's general fund, he said.

Though Senate President Pro Tem Bob Geddes, R-Soda Springs, is among those pushing for a special session, House Speaker Bruce Newcomb, a Republican rancher from Burley, said getting lawmakers together will be tough.

"In my lifetime, I've probably (castrated) 10,000 calves," Newcomb said following the speech by Risch, a lawyer and rancher. "It's probably easier than property tax relief."

In the 2006 Legislature, lawmakers boosted a homeowners' tax exemption to $75,000 from $50,000, the most significant of three tax-relief bills to pass the House and Senate. A bid to shift school maintenance costs to the sales tax was supported by the House but died in the Senate after opponents said it would rely on a less-stable source for money and that increasing Idaho's 5 percent sales tax would hurt low- and middle-income residents.

Rep. Dennis Lake, R-Blackfoot, said he was optimistic a special session could occur. Idaho could have a budget surplus of $150 million by July 1, enough to cover more than half of the $250 million in property tax revenue that goes to schools, he said, adding he believes constituents are compelling to senators, asking for more relief.

Sen. Hal Bunderson, R-Meridian and an accountant who opposed shifting school funding, said he fears any plan that emerges would be an ill-conceived "emotional response" that doesn't consider long-term consequences. Minority Democrats who fought the shift were also dubious.

"Senators weren't ready to raise taxes on the middle class just to get the maintenance and operation shift done," said Sen. Elliot Werk, D-Boise.

In his 12-minute speech, Risch said it has been estimated that by 2020, Idaho will have only 40 percent of the population that it has today. Despite that, 800 people who applied for Idaho's existing nursing programs that now educate 1,200 people a year were turned away, he said.

"Our existing colleges and universities need to adapt to meet this demand," Risch said, calling for a special nursing task force. "I will also work with our educational institutions as we prepare the new budget."

Risch said some 52 percent of Idaho prison inmates in surveys blame their incarceration on methamphetamine abuse, and state Department of Health and Welfare officials have said four-fifths of child placements result from meth-using parents.

"Within the next 60 days, I will create by executive order the office of drug czar," Risch said, to coordinate agency efforts to curb use and sale of the illegal stimulant.

Sen. Denton Darrington, R-Deerlodge, and State Police Director Dan Chantreanau both said they favor Risch's idea.

BEHIND THE FIDDLESCENE

Rylee Loucks, 4 of Marsing, Idaho, peeks over the shoulder of her brother, Les, and new sister Kimberly, 5 weeks, while waiting behind the scenes at The Idaho Open Fiddle Contest at the Nampa Civic Center in Nampa, Idaho, on Friday.

Idaho prisoner alleges abuse at private prison

BOISE (AP) — Three employees of a private Texas prison that houses some Idaho inmates have been disciplined after Idaho Corrections officials paid a visit and investigated a report that Idaho prisoners had been abused.

One inmate alleged in a letter to his sister that he had been held in isolation, handcuffed, beaten and sprayed with a pepper spray.

State Corrections Department officials who had already planned to visit the Texas facility looked into abuse reports while they were there, said Melinda Keckler, a state Corrections spokeswoman.

"(Department) employees interviewed offenders and staff and observed the physical operations of the facility, and as a result of that, some corrective action was taken on some employees in Texas," she told The Idaho Statesman.

Keckler told The Associated Press on Friday that three prison employees received "corrective action." She refused to provide more details, saying it was a personnel matter.

About 120 Idaho prisoners are held at the Newton County Correctional Center in Newton, Texas. Officials at the center declined to comment to the AP on Friday.

The facility is one of 53 that the Boca Raton, Fla.-based Geo Group operates in the country. Officials at Geo Group did not return a call from The AP on Friday.

Idaho prisons have run out of room for prisoners and the state has been paying other states or private entities to hold them.

Idaho prisoner Eddie Daniel recently wrote about his experience in a letter to his sister, Josie Daniel, that told of four days of isolation, followed by beatings.

"So these people came in... and they started beating us up," Daniel wrote. "And when I say beating us I mean beating us, kicking us in the face... They went cell to cell."

He also said that food, showers and recreation time were withheld, and that more beatings followed the first one.

"Even though we're in Texas, Idaho is still responsible for us," he wrote his sister. "You need to call IDOC (the Corrections Department) and let them know what's going on. Now every day they come to our cells threatening to beat us again."

Eddie Daniel, who is serving a six-year sentence for drug trafficking, wrote that the beatings were stopped by the warden.

Mine waste experiment showing results

OSBURN (AP) — The Idaho Department of Environmental Quality is four years into a 5-year, $175,000 experiment to determine the best method for covering waste rock piles around hundreds of mine sites in northern Idaho that often contain dangerous levels of lead and contaminants.

Officials say topsoil is usually the best covering, but can be expensive and is sometimes not available. But officials say the waste piles need to be covered for health reasons.

"What you're trying to do is prevent (waste piles) from blowing, and eroding and running off in storms," Nick Zilka of the environmental quality department told The Associated Press on Friday. "The other thing is the piles become attractive areas to play for children and you don't want them to come in contact with contaminated waste."

Ten piles of waste rock on a hillside were covered with mixes of soil and other materials, including log yard waste and composted human sewage. Organic enzymes, bacteria and fungi have also been used.

"We're not trying to pick a winner, we're trying to develop a toolbox," Steve McGeehan, a soil scientist and analytical chemist from the University of Idaho, told The Spokesman-Review.

Each of the plots were then planted with the same mix of grass and legume seeds. Now, four years into the experiment, the plots form a hillside striped with shades of green, visible from Interstate 90.

McGeehan said the log yard waste is inexpensive but takes longer to break down and become suitable for growing grass, though now that plot is thick and lush.

"The real important thing is to test them apples to apples," McGeehan said. "Some materials can be sprayed from the air when access is limited."

McGeehan said waste rock, if left alone, will eventually break down, but that could take centuries, and then invasive weeds would likely show up first.

He said that by capping the sites and putting plants on them, erosion is reduced. The experiment is also helping officials come up with methods to control erosion along highways and at building projects.

Microsoft, Adobe in ongoing spat

SEATTLE — Microsoft Corp. said it has canceled plans to include an automatic way to save documents in the popular PDF format in the next version of its Office software, amid an ongoing dispute with Adobe Systems Inc.

Instead, users who purchase Office 2007, due to consumers in January, will have to download separate, free software, to save documents created in Office products such as Word and Excel as PDFs.

Bidding for Euronet may not be over

PARIS — As officials of the New York Stock Exchange and Euronext celebrated their proposed — and revolutionary — $9.35 billion union Friday, rival bidder Deutsche Boerse AG said it has no intention of abandoning its pursuit of Euronet and its four European stock exchanges.

Even as NYSE Group Inc. CEO John Thain and Euronet Chairman Jan-Michel Hesses held a news conference to explain their deal, Deutsche Boerse issued a statement reiterating that its bid, which Euronet executives advised shareholders against, was a good offer.

The NYSE agreed Thursday to buy Euronet, which operates in Paris, Amsterdam, Brussels and Lisbon exchanges, for $9.96 billion in cash and stock. Deutsche Boerse has not released terms of its bid, but analysts have estimated it to be worth around $11 billion. It is believed the bid would require the combined company to carry more debt than the NYSE offer would.

Wal-Mart trumpets its expansion at meeting

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. — Wal-Mart Stores Inc. used its annual meeting Friday to tout changes to its stores, trumpet its expansion in the U.S. and abroad and emphasize that the world's largest retailer is undergoing changes to sustain its rapid growth rate.

The company's critics urged Wal-Mart to offer higher pay, better health insurance and make other changes for its 1.3 million U.S. workers.

Wal-Mart chief executive officer Lee Scott didn't directly address the union-finance groups. Instead, Scott and other executives discussed Wal-Mart in terms of building success, rather than fighting wrongs.

The executives drew an enthusiastic response from the 15,000 shareholders and workers packed into Bud Walton Arena at the University of Arkansas campus.

Gas-stressed motorists shift from four wheels to two

By Cynthia H. Chao
Los Angeles Times

Praktan Kokila and record high gasoline prices arrived in California about the same time this spring.

That's why the Redlands resident was navigating through hundreds of motorcycles in the San Bernardino showroom of Chaparral Motorsports. Fed up with spending $60 a week to fill his Infiniti G35 with premium gasoline, Kokila was ready to move from four wheels to two.

Kokila was following friend Mike Devi, who put away his BMW 330i — now reserved for weekends — in favor of a black Yamaha sport bike. After four hours of shopping, Kokila rolled out with a blue version of the same cycle, which gets 40 mpg and holds $15 worth of premium fuel at current prices.

"I've wanted one for a while," Kokila, 27, said of the $9,200 motorcycle. "And with the high gas prices, now's a good time." Steep pump prices are driving motorists to transportation that slips or eschews gasoline, and retailers of motorcycles, scooters and bicycles report that sales are revving up. Although buyers, including Kokila and Devi, aren't ready to dump their cars, many are complaining about fuel bills as they make their purchases, retailers say.

When fuel prices spiked in the third quarter of last year, motorcycle sales jumped 16 percent compared with the same period in 2004, said Motorcycle Industry Council spokesman Mike Mount. Third-quarter sales of scooters soared 65 percent.

"We can't say for sure that fuel prices were driving that," Mount said. "But it would appear that with the amount of activity and media attention on fuel prices, that it has had some effect."

In the first three months of 2006, motorcycle sales rose 8.6 percent and scooter sales inched up about 2 percent from the year-earlier period. Those numbers show a "strong start to the year," he said, because sales are highest during spring and summer.

At Chaparral Motorsports, whose showroom has row after row of shiny and colorful Hondas, Suzukis, Kawasakis and other makes, sales manager Jon Gerwin said cycles were zooming out the door at a 30 percent faster pace than at this time last year. Motorcycles that get good mileage are the most popular, he said, and many customers say that they're afraid gas will hit $4 a gallon.

Chaparral salesman Eddy Raich said scooters are popular among young people, especially college students, who leave their cars parked when traveling short distances.

For the maker of Vespa, the iconic retro-chic scooter from Italy, it has been pedal to the metal since last fall, said Paolo Timoni of Piaggio Group Americas, the New York-based subsidiary.

"Since September 2005, when gas prices first hit $3 a gallon, we have seen acceleration in the market," Timoni said.

Last year, the company sold 10,000 scooters in the U.S. It expects to exceed that by 25 percent to 30 percent this year, he said.

Even the Segway, the battery-powered "human transporter" that was dismissed when it debuted in 2001, has received a boost.

Klee Kleber of Bedford, N.H.-based Segway Inc. said sales through mid-May had doubled from the same period last year. He declined to give sales figures.

"I think a lot of it has to do with gas prices," Kleber said, adding that other factors, such as environmental issues, also influence sales.

Tim Blumenthal of Bikes Belong Coalition, a national group of bicycle suppliers and retailers, said members were seeing customers who are frustrated over pump prices and looking for alternative transportation, especially for short trips. The coalition plans to launch a marketing campaign in June to encourage people to ride bicycles for trips shorter than two miles.

At Beverly Hills Bike Shop, manager Eric Romney said there had been a "huge increase" in people wanting to buy bicycles to commute to work.

"Once a day, we have someone coming in wanting a bike to ride to work," he said.

Fred Clements of the National Bicycle Dealers Association said gas prices were just one "piece of the puzzle" when it came to sales. But Clements also said his members had reported that more people were bringing in their bicycles for repair.

Magic Valley jobless rate virtually unchanged

By Bob Kirkpatrick
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Jobless rates across Magic Valley remained virtually unchanged in May, according to data released Friday.

Economists in Idaho view this as a positive sign for the state's economy. "What we're seeing is a strong, stable situation for 2006," said Bob Fick, communication manager for Idaho Commerce and Labor.

"Unemployment is unbelievably low."

But you don't get a sense of how low it is, Fick said, until you compare this year's figures to those in 2005.

"There were 25,300 additional workers employed in the state in May this year than there were in 2005," Fick said. "Of those new employees, 4,300 or 17 percent ... were added to the Magic Valley region."

Fick said Idaho hasn't experienced an unemployment rate this low in generations.

"The state is in a pretty healthy economic situation right now," Fick said. "It's a whole new dynamic."

A couple of major contributing factors leading to a strong Magic Valley economy, Fick said, are an influx of light industrial businesses that have relocated to the area, and a residential housing boom.

"The construction industry has typically provided seasonal employment, with plenty of ups and downs during the winter months," Fick said. "But so far in 2006, home building is going whole-hog."

Fick said housing permits in May slowed down, but he said there is so much work in the pipeline that Magic Valley "won't see a downturn in the construction industry for quite awhile."

Mini-Cassia is bracing for a blow, however.

Kraft Foods Inc. in mid-May announced it will close its manufacturing facility in Rupert early next year. The 54,000-square-foot plant, which makes cream and string cheeses, will close its doors Jan. 5, sending more than 140 workers to the unemployment line.

Statewide outlook

Idaho's growing labor force in May pushed up the seasonally adjusted unemployment rate to 3.5 percent statewide, but that remains 1.1 percentage points below the national rate. Idaho Commerce and Labor reports statewide employment remained above 700,000 for the 16th consecutive month at 733,100 — meaning that more than 1,600 more people were working in May than a year ago. The number of people looking for work in May increased 700, but Idaho's unemployment rate still remains near the lowest level the state has experienced since 1979.

Nationwide situation

The U.S. Department of Labor's Bureau of Labor Statistics reports non-farm employment in America edged up in May. The unemployment rate also increased slightly to 4.6 percent nationwide.

Employment continued to trend up in some service-oriented industries and in mining, while retail trade and manufacturing lost jobs. The national unemployment rate in May 2005 was 5.1 percent.

State forecast

Idaho Commerce and Labor is forecasting increased employment opportunities in agriculture, construction, retail trade and leisure and hospitality industries statewide throughout 2006. Numerous jobs are expected to become available as the state's recreation and tourism season shifts from winter to summer activities.

Micron proposes increase in stock bid for Lexar

By Mary Wong Associated Press writer
SANTA JOSE, Calif. — In an 11th hour move before a potentially contentious stockholder vote, Micron Technology Inc. said Friday it is prepared to sweeten its bid to acquire flash memory products maker Lexar Media Inc.

Under the new proposal, each share of Lexar would be traded for 5925 shares of Micron, up 5.3 percent from the previous exchange ratio of 5625. The revised ratio is subject to the approval of both company boards, the companies said.

Although the value of the acquisition would not be as high as the revised bid would put the deal's value at about $826.5 million, based on Thursday's closing share prices and number of outstanding shares. The original stock-for-stock deal was valued at $688 million when it was announced in March.

The sale has been opposed by some shareholders, including billionaire investor Carl Icahn, who owns about 6 percent of Lexar. Dissenting shareholders did not believe Micron was offering enough money and sought, but failed, to get a court order blocking Friday's vote.

Lexar, an Idaho-based Micron, the No. 4 maker of computer memory chips, said in March it planned to buy Lexar in order to expand into selling flash memory products directly to consumers. Micron said it wanted to lessen its dependence on dynamic random access memory, where price and demand fluctuations have led to unstable revenue and profit.

Flash memory is commonly used in digital cameras, music players, keychain storage devices and a variety of other electronics. Unlike DRAM, flash chips retain data even after the power supply has been turned off.
The new deal is "subject to Micron's determination that there is sufficient Lexar stockholder support for the merger at the revised exchange ratio," the companies said Friday.
" Micron believes this merger is in the best interest of both companies," Micron spokesman Dan Francisco said. He refused to discuss whether the Delta CEO says airline to seek termination of pilots' pension 'fairly soon'

By Aida White Associated Press writer
PARIS — Delta Air Lines Inc. will file a request to terminate its pilots' defined benefit pension plan "fairly soon," Chief Executive Gerald Grinstein said in an interview Friday in which he also touted employee pay cuts, his future and whether a merger is a good idea.
Grinstein, in Paris for a meeting with other executives, told the Associated Press that the Atlanta-based airline is in talks with the United States' pension insurer about the pilots' pension.
" It'll be probably fairly soon," he said in the third-largest airline in the U.S. is keeping the pilots' union informed about the discussions with the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corp. " We've got a judicial schedule to conform to," he said. " All of those are pieces in motion, but I'll be fairly soon."

It was the first time a Delta executive has said for sure that the airline plans to terminate the pilots' pension. In the past, the company has said only that it would likely seek termination.
A union spokesman, Kelly Collins, had no immediate comment when reached by telephone Friday.
Grinstein also said that Delta has no plans to ask its pilots for a third pay cut, and he dismissed the idea, at least for now, that the bankrupt company could merge with another carrier.
Grinstein said the $280-million, 8-year concessions agreement that pilots and the bankruptcy court approved Wednesday gives the airline the cost cuts it needs.
" I don't expect to go back to the pilots," Grinstein said. " We have all our people at the market rate. We are going to have to be more efficient both in the way we operate the airline but also in what can be recouped in revenue management, handling the network and utilization of our equipment."

Grinstein's chief financial officer, Edward Bastian, had been noncommittal when asked in March by AP whether the company might seek a third pay cut from pilots.
The concessions package approved this week, which included an initial 14 percent pay cut and assurances the pilots union won't fight any company effort to terminate the pilots' pension, was the first of the pilots' agreement in two years. In 2004, the pilots gave up $1 billion in annual concessions in a five-year deal.
Delta has said previously it expects to emerge from Chapter 11 in the first half of next year. On Friday, Grinstein said Delta's goal is to emerge as an independent standalone company. Mergers aren't an option, at least not now, he said.

" Mergers in our industry are very difficult. You'd be hard pressed to name a lot of them that have worked in the long term sense," Grinstein said.
He added, " Merging work forces particularly when they have different unions and getting the seniority straight in an industry that is so affected by attitude, when your primary quality is a derivative of attitude, it can give you a pause, and in this market place you don't need a pause."
Separately, Delta has said it supports making it easier for a foreign investor to invest in U.S. airline within statutory limits.
Asked about his role at the airline, Grinstein said he'll " stay until at least we know we're coming out of bankruptcy. He wasn't more specific.
He said Delta fought long and hard to avoid filing for bankruptcy protection last September, saying it was a very difficult " extremely costly" process that had drained time and energy when the airline needed to turn itself around.

" Obviously I didn't want to file Chapter 11," he said. " It's taken more time than I'd like to have spent doing it ... It's a diversion. You'd like to be doing or thinking about different things and you have to spend a significant part of your energy on that."
If there was a silver lining to bankruptcy, it was putting in place a team of people that were capable of running the airline, he said.
Grinstein was upbeat about the airline's prospects, saying Delta had managed to wrestle revenue cuts while the soaring cost of oil and still post a profit in 2005.
" I think that we've made remarkable progress," he said. " In the light of fuel at the levels that it's at, the company was still profitable in April. When the final numbers are out I think you'll see a remarkable change in where Delta is in relation to the rest of the industry," he said.

In approving the pilot concessions deal Wednesday, a U.S. Bankruptcy Court judge rejected claims by the government's pension insurer that it should receive the compensation the pilots were promised if their pension is terminated.
If getting the pilot deal was a success, seeing a bankruptcy court deny Delta subsidiary Comair's request to reject its contract with its 970 flight attendants was one of Delta's failures, Grinstein said. Comair wanted to impose pay cuts the regional carrier says it needs to stay in business.
" There have been some failures too," the Delta CEO said. " We have to recognize that. We have to go back into negotiations on that. I hope we can work that out."

Gold, silver prices rise after job data came in weaker than expected

NEW YORK (Dow Jones/AP) — Gold prices climbed Friday after U.S. jobs data came in weaker than anticipated.

Weak economic data pushed gold higher, as the yellow metal is regarded as a hedge against rising inflation; if the U.S. economy is seen as losing strength, the Federal Reserve will be less likely to keep raising interest rates to curb inflation.

August gold on the New York Mercantile Exchange rose $7.50 to settle at $641 an ounce, after rising as high as $644.

Silver settled 18 cents higher at $12.085 an ounce.

The Labor Department reported Friday that job growth narrowed in May, with employers boosting payrolls by just 75,000—the smallest since October. Previous estimates showed a 138,000-job increase in April and a 200,000-gain in March. Market analysts had expected a growth of 170,000 for May.

By Brown, a senior director, specialist at Prudential, a division of Infinity Brokerage, said a weak tone nevertheless remains prevalent in gold and silver, and if it gets fails to hold at current levels, it is likely to head down to a range of $606 to $613 an ounce.

Brown said silver is poised to test $17.20 to $17.44 an ounce. While the market struggles to find its footing day-to-day, Tom O'Brien, an analyst for the Gold Report, said the correction in precious metals could be over soon.

He had a nice shake-out today to $624 (on overnight trade) ... now it is building a floor, said O'Brien who added that August gold could get back to the $661-an-ounce level "in a month."

While the summer months could be a slow trading period for the precious metals, O'Brien contends that over the next month, August gold is likely to be as high as $668 an ounce. Meanwhile, the most-active July copper contract rose 11.55 cents to settle at $3.5865 per pound.

Oil prices rallied more than $2 a barrel after buying triggered by domestic and international supply worries. July crude oil rose $2.36 to a high of $27.70 a barrel, the highest intraday level for a front-month contract since August. The contract more than recovered losses sustained Wednesday and Thursday.

Stocks end mixed as slowdown concerns build

NEW YORK (AP) — Wall Street struggled to the finish Friday, closing out the week barely changed after a steep dip in monthly job growth.

Investors, confused about the economy's health. The major indexes were narrowly mixed for the week.

The Labor Department said employers added 75,000 jobs in May versus a 126,000 gain for April. But while the sharply less-than-forecast increase was a sign of tapering economic growth — which could prompt the Federal Reserve to stop lifting interest rates — the mild figure raised questions about whether the economy was moderating too quickly.

Gregory Miller, chief economist for SunTrust Bank, said the job report bolstered beliefs that the economy would continue cooling off, but added that high energy costs remained a threat to prices elsewhere. He noted the Fed's challenge of striking a balance of lending rates so businesses can continue funding expansion.

"I think we're at a point now where going too far is a feasible risk," Miller said of the Fed's program of rate hikes, which increases the cost of borrowing money. "We're running the risk of a potential credit crunch. We haven't seen that yet, but with these conditions, it's virtually unavoidable."

However, a mild uptick in the week's bond market inflation picture after the department on Thursday scaled back first-quarter growth in employers' labor costs. Average hourly earnings rose 0.1 percent, compared with estimates of 0.3 percent.

Some stocks found support from the New York Stock Exchange's planned acquisition of stock exchange operator European NV, but surging oil prices and more losses for the U.S. dollar weighed on the market.

The Dow Jones industrial average dropped 12.41, or 0.11 percent, to 2,477.87. The Dow rose 166 points on Wednesday and Thursday. Broader stock indicators flourished. The Standard & Poor's 500 index edged up 2.51, or 0.2 percent, to 1,282.22; the Nasdaq composite index fell 0.45, or 0.02 percent, to 2,219.41, but remained positive for the year.

Bonds surged on optimism about a possible end to the Fed's program of rate hikes, which increases the cost of borrowing money. "We're running the risk of a potential credit crunch. We plunged against the Japanese yen but was flat versus European currencies.

Gold prices bounced back to more than $640 an ounce.

Overseas stock markets showed signs of stabilizing after recent declines. Japan's Nikkei stock average gained 1.04 percent. Britain's FTSE 100 rose 0.25 percent. Germany's DAX index rose 0.36 percent and France's CAC-40 was higher by 0.25 percent.

The major indexes ended yet another erratic week little changed. Investors were hoping this week that minutes from the last Fed meeting and data on labor costs and wages would clarify the outlook for interest rates. But mixed signals on inflation left the market right back where it began.

For the week, the Dow lost 0.27 percent, while the S&P 500 rose 0.63 percent and the Nasdaq gained 0.41 percent.

More skittish trading is anticipated next week, which brings only a handful of economic reports that bear little importance for the inflation picture. Until the Fed's June 28-29 policy meeting, investors will likely struggle to make sense of data that's expected to be fickle as the economy transitions to slowing growth.

The clear slowdown in housing and indications of less consumer strength from Wal-Mart, those are showing that there are some risks here and that we're probably going to see more volatility in this data-dependent market until we can get past the summer," said Jeff Keenan, chief investment strategist for PNC Financial Services Group.

Wall Street had little reaction to an expected drop in April factory orders, which had been expected to demand is easing along with economic growth. Orders retreated 1.8 percent after climbing 4.2 percent the previous month.

Crude futures rebounded from two days of losses amid persistent worries about political tension in Nigeria and Iran, two of the world's biggest oil suppliers. A barrel of light crude soared $1.99 to $27.33 on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

The NYSE late Thursday said it agreed to acquire Eurocom NV for $9.36 billion in a historic move that creates the first transatlantic securities exchange.

Investors shunned a larger bid from Deutsche Börse AG, which said it will continue pursuing a deal. NYSE Group Inc. rose $2.06 to $64.51.

Pulte Homes Inc. slashed its projected full-year earnings, citing a steep drop in orders for April and May due to greater inventory and rising mortgage rates. Pulte tumbled $1.70 to $31.33, and pulled down rivals Centex Corp. by $1.45 to $47.59 and Lennar Corp. by 48 cents to $41.08.

Despite the major indexes' retreat, advancing issues still outnumbered decliners by about 2 to 1 on the NYSE, where final consolidated volume of 2.42 billion shares fell behind the 2.57 billion shares that changed hands Thursday.

The Russell 2000 index of smaller companies gained 0.96, or 0.13 percent, to 737.46.

The Dow Jones industrials ended the week down 30.74, or 0.27 percent, finishing at 11,247.37. The S&P 500 index gained 18.06, or 0.63 percent, to close at 1,282.22.

The Nasdaq rose 0.44, or 0.41 percent, to end at 2,219.41.

The Russell 2000 index closed the week up 7.91, or 1.08 percent, at 737.46.

The Dow Jones Wilshire 5000 Composite index — a free-float weighted index that measures 5,000 U.S. based companies — ended the week at 13,035.70, up 102.55 points from last week

Supervalu completes its acquisition of Albertsons Inc. stores

The Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — Supervalu Inc. completed the acquisition of more than 1,100 Albertsons Inc. stores Friday, making it the nation's third-largest supermarket chain by revenue.

Shareholders from both companies approved the purchase on Thursday. The deal gained approval from 98 percent of voting Albertsons shareholders and 92.6 percent of Supervalu shareholders.

Supervalu led a consortium that included drugstore chain CVS Corp., private equity firm Corbus Capital Management and investors for $9.7 billion in cash and stock, plus assumed debt, bringing the total transaction to about $17.4 billion.

Supervalu has been a strong presence in grocery sales and distribution in the Midwest and East. With the new stores, it moves into the Western U.S. and trails only Kroger and Safeway in size.

However, Wal-Mart Inc. sells more groceries than any of them.

With closure of the deal, Supervalu has 500 stores, up from 1,381 before. It has also 800 in-store pharmacies. The newly acquired store brands include Aceme Markets, Bristol Farms, Jewel, Shaw's Supermarkets, Star Markets and Albertsons banner stores.

Supervalu's supervisory chairman and chief executive officer, said the deal creates a company with leading positions in several major markets and a supply chain to fuel both its own retail operations and independent customers.

"Today, we are a stronger retailer than we've ever been before," he said in a prepared statement.

CVS said it acquired 700 standalone Sav-On and Osero drugstores and a distribution center in La Habra, Calif., in the deal.

CVS CEO Tom Ryan said in a prepared statement: "This acquisition strengthens our position in key Midwest markets and provides an immediate leadership position in the fast-growing Southern California markets."

Area churches to mark Jesus Day

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Several congregations in the Magic Valley will get together on Saturday, June 10, to celebrate Jesus Day. A march for Jesus is scheduled for 2 p.m. from Harrison Elementary School to City Park. Free games and activities are planned from 3-8 p.m. at the park and live Christian music from 3-9. A barbecue, also free, is set from 5-7 p.m., with a drawing every 10 minutes. Grand prize is a new laptop computer.

Participants should park their vehicles at City Park and ride free shuttle buses that will run from 1-1:45 p.m.

There will also be various community outreach programs from 10 a.m.-noon, giving out free information.

The event is non-denominational and everyone is welcome. For more information, call Bridgett Slater at 731-1507. For more information about community service projects, call 539-9285.

Courage, integrity and a new razor

I don't want you to think I'm paranoid or anything, but my razor is out to get me.

Really. I'm serious about this. It bit me the other day when I was shaving. And no, I didn't cut myself. I may be paranoid, but I'm not — you know — whacko. It bit me. I know the difference. I tend to cut myself when I'm not paying attention or trying to shave too quickly. I make a false move and I nick myself. I've done that a thousand times, and I know it when I do it.

VALUESPEAK
Joseph Walker

But this was different. I was concentrating on my shaving. I was in sort of a shaving "zone" — totally focused. I wasn't trying to move too quickly, and I didn't make any sudden moves. But all of a sudden I could feel this nick, and I was bleeding, and the only explanation is that my razor just reached up and bit me.

I'm not making this up. I looked at it, and it's a sleek, double-edged lips seemed to be turned up slightly at the ends in a deviously sharp, slightly bloody smile. I spent the rest of the day dabbling at the little slits by the corner of my mouth, trying to explain to everyone who would listen that I hadn't really cut myself shaving; I had been bitten by my razor.

And then I went home to my Little Bathroom of Horrors.

The only thing I can figure is that somehow Gillette sold me a direct lineal descendant of Sweeney Todd's razor. You remember Sweeney — "the demon barber of Fleet Street" of song and Broadway musical? According to the legend, people would come in to get a shave from the guy and end up in a meat pie.

That's what I'm talking about. This razor is a bad seed. It got me again when I shaved today. And now that it has tasted blood, there's no telling what it will do.

I don't mind telling you; I'm afraid. I'm very afraid. Of course, it could be that the thing I'm really afraid of here is that everyone will know what a klutz I am, so I've invented this "razor bite" story as a way of explaining all these scars on my face. I don't mean "invented" to imply that I'm lying — I may have convinced myself that

In scene from "The Omens," Liv Schreiber carries his son, played by Samuël Davy-Fitzpatrick, into a church preparing to make the ultimate sacrifice. The movie opens Tuesday — 06/06/2006.

Next Tuesday has the superstitious wary

The Sacramento Bee

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — As 06/06/06 nears, the devil's in the e-mails — and the billboards, the talk shows and even the election booths.

For many, those triple sixes conjure up the infamous Number of the Beast — 666 — cited in Revelations 13:18.

The blogosphere is aquiver with satanic speculation. A recent Google search of "06/06/06" and "mark of the beast" popped up 660 hits, including an ad for a self-linking 666 stamp ("wear mark on your right hand or forehead") and dozens of put-downs by grouchy bloggers.

Some take the concatenation of numerals seriously. Also on Google is an article from the Sunday Times of London stating that expectant mothers fear their babies will be born that day.

This worries professor Allison Couderd — but not because she's afraid of the Number of the Beast. Couderd, a religious studies professor at the University of California at Davis, is concerned about the pervasiveness of superstitious belief — a belief she sees as childish.

"It's terrifying that people would be afraid of a date," she said. "Dates are completely arbitrary. That date is just pulled out of a hat. None of this is rational."

She explains what she calls "apocalyptic rupture thinking" as humanity's coping with the unknown. "People want the inside line, to foretell the future," she said. "We're vulnerable and we die, and religion preys on that vulnerability."

One person's Armageddon is someone else's marketing ploy. June 6's creepy numerals make it a natural as a release day for satanic-themed products.

The California rock band Slayer — which describes itself as epitomizing "satanic speed metal music" — has declared June 6 the "National Day of Slayer." Ann Coulter's new book slamming liberals, "Godless," will be launched on the date.

And a remake of "The Omens," the 1970s horror classic, will open on 06/06/06. The film tells the story of Damien, a 666-marked child who is the Antichrist. Marketers of "The Omens" have blanketed the nation with black billboards stating: "You have been warned. The signs are all around you."

The Rev. Rick Cole, pastor of the Capital Christian Center, dismisses that

Mothers-to-be fret over day

It's 2006. And June 6 is near. You got it: 6/6/06 — 666, the number that represents the mark of the beast, the Antichrist.

An expectant parents aware of the evil implications? Carrie McFarland of Dallas is.

"I'm going to be induced on the Fourth of Fifth," McFarland said. "If my doctor had offered to induce me on the Sixth, I wouldn't have done it."

Her reptilepation over her son Samuel's birthday isn't religious. "You'll get the question? You know what that means ...?" My first son was born on January 1, and everybody says, "Oh, you missed your tax deduction. Yeah, like I haven't thought of that already."

No doubt, the 6/6/06 babies — and their parents — are in for some ribbing.

Belzbe — what? That a family name?"

Study: Prayer may lower your blood pressure

Cox News Service

NEW YORK — Even when you don't pray for health, prayer may do a body good.

A study of more than 5,000 African-Americans shocked everybody at the American Society of Hypertension when it concluded that blood pressure was lower among those who devoted themselves to spirituality.

Praying and meditation didn't prevent blood pressure from increasing — in fact, those who were most involved in religious activities had hypertension — but they had lower readings than others with hypertension who didn't make spirituality an active part of their lives. No one was more confounded by this positive link than study author Dr. Sharon Wyatt, from the University of Mississippi Medical Center in Jackson, Miss.

"We don't recommend a prescription of religion," Wyatt said. "But it's an important part of life for these people."

The amazing part of these findings is that many of those with the lower readings were overweight and didn't always take their medications. This was totally counter to the initial assumption that Wyatt and her co-author had expected. That is, that those who engaged in religious activities would be more likely to have high blood pressure. Instead, they found that spirituality seemed to give a protective buffer to those whose health practices otherwise would seem to put them at very high risk. The factors most prominent there, she expects, are levels of cortisol, the stress hormone. Those levels seemed to be less in those going to religious services and regularly engaging in prayer and meditation.

Maybe, she theorized, it's because people of such faith think "God will take care of it," and that becomes a stress reducer.

Using spirituality in your life is different from having others pray for you — known as intercessory or remote prayer — which has been the topic of several clinical studies.

A British study in 2001 concluded, "Remote, retroactive intercessory prayer said for a group is associated with shorter stay in hospital and shorter duration of fever in patients with a bloodstream infection and should be considered for use in clinical practice."

But a larger study published last year found that, "Distant prayer and the bedside use of music, imagery and touch did not have a significant effect upon the primary clinical outcome observed in patients undergoing certain heart procedures."

German artist Albert Durer's 1498 woodcut "The Sea Monster and the Beast with the Lamb's Horns" depicts the events described in Revelation 13.

Revelation 13

"And I stood upon the sand of the sea, and saw a beast rise up out of the sea, having seven heads and 10 horns, and upon his horns 10 crowns, and upon his heads the name of blasphemy. And the beast which I saw was like unto a leopard, and his feet were as the feet of a bear, and his mouth as the mouth of a lion: and the dragon gave him his power, and his seat, and great authority. And I saw one of his heads as it were wounded to death; and his deadly wound was healed: and all the world wondered after the beast.

"And they worshipped the dragon which gave power unto the beast. And they worshipped the beast, saying, Who is like unto the beast? Who is able to make war with him? And there was given unto him a mouth speaking great things and blasphemies; and power was given unto him to continue 40 and two months.

"And he opened his mouth in blasphemy against God, to blaspheme his name, and his tabernacle, and them that dwell in heaven. And it was given unto him to make war with the saints, and to overcome them: and power was given him over all kindreds, and tongues, and nations.

"And all that dwell upon the earth shall worship him, whose names are not written in the book of life of the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world. If any man have an ear, let him hear.

"He that leadeeth into captivity shall go into captivity; he that killeth with the sword must be killed with the sword. Here is the patience and the faith of the saints.

"And I beheld another beast coming up out of the earth; and he had two horns like a lamb, and he spake as a dragon. And he exerciseth all the power of the first beast before him, and causeth the earth and them which dwell therein to worship the first beast, whose deadly wound was healed.

"And he doeth great wonders, so that he maketh fire come down from heaven on the earth in the sight of men, and deceiveth them that dwell on the earth by the means of those miracles which he had power to do in the sight of the beast; saying to them that dwell on the earth, that they should make an image to the beast, which had the wound by a sword, and did live.

"And he had power to give life unto the image of the beast, so that the image of the beast should both speak, and cause that as many as would not worship the image of the beast should be killed. And he causeth all, both small and great, rich and poor, free and bond, to receive a mark in their right hand, or in their foreheads; and that no man might buy or sell, save he that had the mark, or the name of the beast, or the number of his name.

"Here is wisdom. Let him that hath understanding count the number of the beast: for his number is Six hundred threescore and six."

Episcopalians debate slavery issues

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The Episcopal Church is poised to apologize for failing to oppose slavery, but making up for its 19th century inaction won't come without 21st century controversy.

At its national convention beginning June 13, the church is expected to approve a resolution expressing regret for supporting slavery and segregation. But the debate will likely get more heated when a second resolution comes up, calling for a study of possible reparations for black Episcopalians.

The church, already divided over the separate issue of gays' role in the church, is struggling over whether reparations would be a meaningful gesture 141 years after the Civil War ended.

"A lot of times you say, 'I'm not a racist. I didn't have slaves, no one in my family had slaves. I could not possibly be complicit in this,'" said Sharon Denton, a member of the church's National Concerns committee that deals with domestic ministry and mission issues.

"But if you start digging back in the history of things, you find out there were a lot of things that came to you that were built on slave-holding and the slave trade," said Denton, a member of a small, all-white parish in Celina in central Kansas.

The Rev. Harold Lewis, a black priest and rector at Calvary Episcopal in Pittsburgh, called the idea of reparations outrageous and impractical.

"The better thing to do is to talk about how we can work to eradicate racism and how we can fight to eliminate economic disparities regardless of racism," said Lewis, the denomination's former long-time staff officer for black ministries.

The Rev. Kwasi Thornell of Silver Spring, Md., is the chairman of a committee who is proposing a resolution that will require the Episcopal Church to apologize for its past role in slavery.

The church declined to embrace a resolution three years ago backing federal legislation to create a national reparations task force. This year's resolution is more focused on the church, calling for a study of how the denomination benefited economically from slavery and how that benefit could be shared with black Episcopalians, about 5 percent of the denomination's 2.2 million members.

But it doesn't get specifics, and both supporters and detractors say reparations could mean anything from cash payments to college scholarships.

Previous attempts to deal with the issue have proven difficult. In 1969, the church's General Convention or legislative body approved a $200,000 grant to the National Committee of Black Churchmen in response to calls for reparations from activist James Forman. But the move created a significant backlash among parishioners.

RELIGION LETTER

Most religions live in own little world

Most people say they are not superstitious. The definition for superstition is "unreasonable beliefs," and in our world, there are plenty of them.

Most all religions live in their own little world with whatever beliefs they have. Even Jesus said, "If my kingdom were of this world, then would my servants fight the devils; but they do not fight the devils."

If we are ever to live in a world without wars, man will have to become more civilized. The definition for civilized is still kind of fuzzy.

In bible days, most people let someone else do their thinking for them.

That could still be a problem today.

Lawmakers look at church influence

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — The government wants new legislation to end the powerful Church of Greece's say on construction of non-Orthodox places of worship.

However, Education and Religious Affairs Minister Marietta Giannakou rejected modification of the law against proselytizing, which carries a maximum sentence of five years' imprisonment.

The current building law asks local Orthodox bishops their opinion about non-Orthodox churches and Muslim mosques before construction permits are granted. Giannakou said bishops' opinions are usually negative, but her ministry has approved all building requests over the past two years except for one from followers of Greece's ancient gods of Olympus.

Athens has no officially approved Muslim mosque despite a large immigrant population.

is true. But deep down inside — someone below the layers of skin that I seem to be systematically scraping away with my razor — I know that I'm not being victimized by an inanimate object. I'm being victimized by me — or rather, by the same lack of hand-eye coordination that made me an all-field, multi-line Linebacker and still causes me to quaver at the mention of the word "Pong."

Accepting responsibility for your own actions can be tough — especially when doing so makes you look clumsy or inconsiderate or thoughtless or dumb. It can be particularly daunting for those in the public eye, who risk wide-spread criticism, satire and even legal action when they acknowledge personal responsibility for Stuff Gone Wrong. That's why I admire those who are able to step up and accept the blame for that poorly thrown pass, or that ill-advised executive decision, or that inappropriate public comment. To say "I'm responsible — right or wrong" demonstrates great courage, extraordinary integrity and an awful lot of self-confidence. Not to mention a complete absence of paranoia.

Detecting abusers

Virginia's Methodist clergy gets new training

HARRISONBURG, Va. (AP) - The case study was grim: Congregants ministering door-to-door had discovered "Katie," an 8-year-old girl covered in bruises and left alone.

The Rev. Rob Hoskins, a United Methodist pastor, had a decision to make. Should he notify child protection authorities? Was the girl a victim of neglect?

The seminary never covered lessons like these. But now it's part of the training for Methodist clergy in Virginia.

The denomination's Virginia Conference has made its pastors "mandated reporters" to help protect children. But some worry that clergy with little expertise in identifying child abuse will make baseless claims.

Virginia-Methodist leaders will spend the next several months holding three-hour training courses, like the one Hoskins and about 60 other pastors from western Virginia attended recently in a dim, Harrisonburg church.

The sessions offer pastors tips on everything from handling anger at abusers to using simple language to help kids open up, said Ann Davis, director of children's ministries for the Virginia Conference. Pastors also learn how to protect themselves - talking to kids in open spaces like parks rather than closed offices, for example.

The classes are being held one year after leaders of the Virginia Conference began requiring all clergy to report any inkling of child abuse, even if revealed in confidential settings.

The Methodists are one of several denominations that started taking a closer look at child welfare after abuse allegations rattled the U.S. Roman Catholic Church in the 1990s, said the Rev. Kibbe Ruth, of the California-based Kyros Community ministries coordinator Rev. Kendra Grimes Wagner of the United Methodist Family Services campus in Richmond, Va., works to ensure that Virginia clergy are as close to being experts on child abuse as possible.

Ministry. Ruth has spent two decades offering training on child abuse, sexual harassment and domestic violence through Kyros to pastors of Lutheran, Episcopal and other denominations nationwide.

"I wish I could tell you it's important because they're suddenly valuing children more," Ruth said. "But it's mainly driven by insurance."

Insurers can face enormous expenses in negligence lawsuits against churches. Some Catholic dioceses have been paying settlements in the tens of millions of dollars in recent years and insurance companies in many cases are responsible for covering part of that amount.

GuideOne and Church Mutual, the nation's two leading church insurers, now publish educational pamphlets on preventing abuse. Episcopal and Methodist leaders have developed their own training programs.

But not everyone supports this approach. Kimberly Hart, executive director of the National Child Abuse Defense and Resource Center, worries ministers will feel compelled to notify authorities simply to gain immunity from a lawsuit. Her Ohio-based center hosts an annual conference training defense lawyers on combating false child abuse claims.

"People will make the call, just to give them the cloak of protection," Hart said. "What we see is an overreaction to report everything and let somebody else ferret it out."

In Virginia, accusers can contact authorities anonymously and are required to have a reasonable suspicion, not any specific evidence.

But the Rev. Kendra Grimes-Swager works to ensure that Virginia clergy are as close to being experts on child abuse as possible. The United Methodist Family Services trainer offers straightforward advice - such as avoiding hugs and telling congregants up front that anything revealed in a counseling session could be reported.

Grimes-Swager must also quell the fears of clergy worried about being revealed as tipsters. The Harrisonburg group chattered anxiously as the Rev. Jim Harris told his own story of uncovering abuse - one that ended with the accused father ransacking his office.

"My family felt threatened; if he would tear apart my office, he would come to the parsonage," said Harris, a minister at a church in nearby Augusta County.

"I refuse to give birth on that date," said Bethany Morian of Weatherford. "I'll cross my legs and watch the clock."

"It's nothing scary. I just think it would be a bad thing to carry around your whole life," Morian said. She says her husband thinks it would be hilarious to have a 6/6/06 baby - so they could name it Damien after the bad seed from the "Omen" movies.

A remake of "The Omen," of course, comes out 6/6/06. Angela Duhose-Davidson of Fort Worth, Texas, an English teacher, is also expecting her first child, Gabriela.

"I'm a Christian, and that number has significant occult meaning behind it of a negative nature," Duhose-Davidson said. "I really do not want that date. I would induce on June 3 if my cervix allows it, but I'm most likely going to wait. My doctor is predicting it's going to be on the 5th."

Christian Burton of Fort Worth is awaiting his first child, a boy.

"I'm a God-fearing man, and I would prefer him not to have a 6/6/06 date," Burton said. But he will not opt for his wife to induce labor to prevent little Leo from being born on that date.

"I'll only be concerned if he has a 6/6/06 A.D. on his head," he said.

Recently the Fort Worth Star-Telegram asked expect-tant mothers and people who knew them to discuss the 6/6/06 date. There were many responses and a wide range of feelings, from trepidation to mild nervousness to amusement.

"My daughter is about to deliver my fourth grandson," says Marsha Elsler of Burleson, south of Fort Worth. Yep, could be on the 5th.

Is she concerned about the date?

"Not in the least," she says. "I have no superstitions. He's going to be a little devil, I'm sure. I think it's a really cool, easy-to-remember day."

Elsler says she can't wait for little Leo to arrive. "If he weighs 6 pounds and 6 ounces, that will be great, too."

June 6, 2006, will be the 21st 6/6/06 A.D. — and we're still here.

warnings: The spiritual leader of the 4,000 people who attend his Sacramento church, Cole believes that the Mark of the Beast will be real enough one day — but June 6, 2006, probably isn't that day.

The number 666 does have meaning, but the date on the calendar does not have meaning," he said. "I don't fear the date or the movie. I believe that there is good and evil, and a battle in every person's heart. But for Hollywood, it's just another huge opportunity to make money."

The ominous date won't even make a blip on the Internet's Rapture Index, which tracks the likelihood of the world ending on a particular day.

Todd Strandberg, webmaster of the index, keeps track of floods, famines, droughts, hurricanes, earthquakes and other perceived harbingers of the rapture - Christ's second coming.

He assigns a numerical weight to all these things — even deception and apostasy.

"The index is very helpful," Strandberg said in a phone interview from his base in Nebraska. "It's a way to standardize prophecy — you track trends. But I can't say that the date 06/06/06 will even be a factor on the index. On the 7th of June, we'll be laughing at this whole thing."

There is another issue. The number 666 may have been an ancient typo. Fact: A recently translated 1,500-year-old scroll, written in Greek, indicates that the Mark of the Beast is actually 616.

"That would mean that 06/01/06 was the day. How did Thursday go for you?"

Bishop blesses help for same-sex couples seeking unions

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) - The United Methodist bishop for Nebraska has approved a congregations' policy aimed at accommodating same-sex couples who want blessing ceremonies without breaking church rules that ban such ceremonies from Methodist congregations.

Bishop Ann Sherer approved a policy before it was adopted May 7 by First United Methodist Church of Omaha.

Under the policy, same-sex couples will be referred to non-Methodist clergy who will perform union ceremonies or to lay members who could conduct such ceremonies outside church. The couple will then be invited to a worship service at First United. The policy avoids United Methodist Church rules that forbid union services in its churches or conducted by its clergy.

Sherer said Methodist congregations elsewhere are doing the same. "I am grateful for their faithfulness to the laws of the church and I'm also grateful they want to reach out," she said.

The Rev. Chad Anglemeyer of First United said his congregation wants gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgender persons to have as full access as possible. First United is the only Nebraska congregation in the Reconciling Ministries Network, which advocates gay equality among Methodists.

REHABAUTHORITY

Physical Therapy • Back & Neck Specialists

MedX Technology

Bryan Wright,
Doctor of Physical Therapy

RehabAuthority Physical Therapy specializes in the treatment of spine pain, injury, disease and dysfunction. Our patients experience the highest level of medical care and spine expertise available. This includes immediate service, a scrupulously clean and attractive environment, convenient hours and efficient care provided by compassionate, well-trained, fun people.

RehabAuthority's clinical staff receives the highest levels of training in the McKenzie method of evaluation and treatment for spinal problems. This method has been proven to be one of the most effective evaluation and treatment systems for back and neck pain available today. RehabAuthority is also the exclusive provider for MedX technology in the Magic Valley. MedX technology isolates low back or neck movements with a unique system of stabilization. The technology is unique and well-researched and has not been available in Twin Falls until now. Chronic neck and back pain can stem from a variety of sources and problems. New research suggests that one source is significant weakness of the low back musculature. Most people with chronic back pain learn to compensate with abnormal postures and movements, which compounds the problem over time. MedX eliminates these abnormal postures and movements, isolating the neck or low back musculature; by isolating these muscles, we can accurately measure range of motion, strength and endurance in a precise way that nothing else can.

MedX rehabilitation is effective because it truly isolates and strengthens specific areas of the spine. By training specific movements and not allowing abnormal compensations the patient not only regains needed strength, but also learns to move their spine properly again. MedX exercise machines are precisely adjusted to each individual patient during the first therapy session. The back or neck muscles are gradually strengthened, leading to long-term success for the patient. The precision of MedX machines have undergone significant scientific study and have been compared against a variety of other methods of strength training.

Time and time again MedX has been demonstrated to be superior, because of its unique methods of muscle isolation and the ability to custom tailor the exercise range of motion, resistance and repetition to the individual needs of the patient. This leads to fewer symptom flare-ups and a much easier rehabilitation process. This program is available exclusively at RehabAuthority in Twin Falls and Boise.

ANSWER: Bid four spades. Your partner's second double simply shows a very good hand, rather than being for penalties. Indeed, partner typically has a strong three-suiter with short hearts. Facing that, you could take your chances on defense, but in practice either four spades or four hearts is likely to be close to making, so you must bid on.

WARNING
When purchasing a vehicle, make sure that the title is in the name of the seller. Under Idaho motor vehicle code a vehicle cannot be sold unless the title is in the name of the seller (except for Idaho licensed dealer). The seller shall provide the new purchaser a signed bill of sale showing the following: Full description of the vehicle, vehicle identification number, amount paid and name(s) and address of the new purchaser. The bill of sale must be signed, dated and show actual mileage at the time of sale. If you have any questions, please contact your local assessor's office.
