New adult video store stirs angst, if noticed at all

By Kate Poppo
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — It's hard to tell if Naughty But Nice is controversial.

On the one hand, the store has come to the attention of Renee Carraway, city planning and zoning director, who said the office is examining the city's code on adult entertainment.

On the other, some merchants near the store don't even know it exists.

One thing's for sure, Dee Roberts said. She has heard no complaints about the month-old adult video store she owns with her husband, Scott, on the second floor of The Paris on Main Avenue.

"(Our landlord) said to be discreet and tasteful," she said. "We try to cater to the public. There's a sign out front and I check for ID."

The Roberts see an average of 12 people a day at their store, which is open from 3 to 9 p.m. Monday through Saturday. Right now, the store consists of wall-to-wall videos and a handful of toys, but Dee said they plan to expand to other novelty items.

The idea for the store came from Scott, a Twin Falls native. "It's just always something he's wanted to do," Dee said.

The community seemed ready, she said, and the second-floor location seemed a better place for the store than locations they looked at on Blue Lakes Boulevard.

Dee Roberts, co-owner of Naughty But Nice adult video store, stands at the entrance of the downtown store Friday.

"It's not something that should be here."

— Kym Daigh, owner of a hairdressing business near Naughty But Nice

"There's a lot of people looking for this stuff," she said. "It's so expensive other places."

Emily McKnight, an employee at Cobble Creek Clothier located below the adult store, said she doesn't like the business.

"It's not something that should be here," she said.

And Kym Daigh, owner and hairdresser at Above Paris, said many of her clients are reluctant to walk under the Naughty But Nice sign to get to her second-floor establishment. "I don't feel comfortable letting kids walk down and use the communal bathroom," she said.

Archie Goodman, one of the building's owners, declined comment until he had a chance to speak with the Roberts again.

Outside the building, many storeowners don't even know what the business is.

Irene Snow of Snow's Antiques, Karen Henry, pharmacist at Sev-Mor Drug Store, and Donna Okama, manager at Rudy's — A Cook's Paradise, all said they hadn't noticed the store.

"None of our customers have pointed it out," Okama said. "It doesn't affect us in any way."

Ryan Horsley, chairman of the Twin Falls Planning and Zoning Commission and vice president of Historic Downtown Twin Falls Inc., said the downtown group is remaining neutral and letting the city handle it.

He compared the store with others in the area such as Poindexter's, which keeps a similar adult section hidden in the back, and The Enchantress. The difference is that Naughty But Nice advertises more, he said.

"I think that because of their advertising, they've brought more attention on themselves," he said. Dee Roberts said she thought Naughty But Nice fits well with the other upstairs businesses.

"All of the businesses pretty much complement each other," she said.

The Roberts aren't out to offend, Dee said, and are willing to compromise with residents. But they're not leaving. "We'll bend, but we won't break."

Target: Sears Tower

FBI: Would-be terrorists sought help from al-Qaida

By Curt Anderson
Associated Press writer

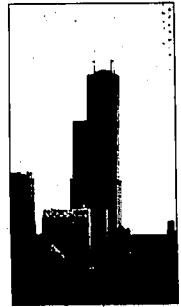

MIAMI — Seven men, living together in a small, windowless warehouse. It was one of many things that made neighbors wary.

"They would exercise late at night on a concrete lot strewn with trash and debris. They sometimes covered their faces and dressed in camouflage. And someone was always standing guard."

"If you walked by, they would chase you away," said neighbor Ishmael Ross, 24. "We were under the assumption that they were opening up a karate business," added 17-year-old Benjamin Williams.

Authorities said Friday the men were planning something much more sinister: trying to blow up the nation's tallest building, the Sears Tower, and other buildings with help from al-Qaida. They thought they had contacted someone from the terrorist network, but he was actually an informant from the federal government, officials said.

The seven men were arrested Thursday and charged with conspiracy to destroy the structures, to wage war against the U.S. government and to aid a foreign terrorist organization.

The Sears Tower in Chicago, the nation's tallest building, was the target of a bombing plot, according to the FBI, which arrested seven people Thursday.

U.S. Attorney General Alberto Gonzales stressed that there was no immediate threat in either Chicago or Miami because the group did not obtain explosives or other materials. "This group was more aspirational than operational," FBI Deputy Director John Pistole said.

Officials hope to drop 'internment' from monument

By Christopher Smith
Associated Press writer

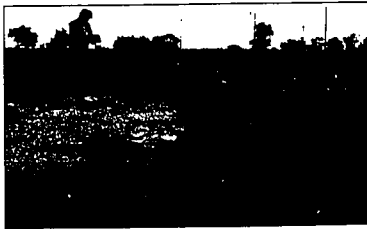

HUNT, Idaho — More than 60 years after Japanese-American citizens were forcibly removed from their homes and placed in prison camps during World War II, the National Park Service is asking Congress to drop the word "internment" from the name of a monument commemorating the camps.

The agency says it's a legal issue that doesn't accurately reflect the U.S. government's imprisonment of thousands of citizens simply because they were of Japanese descent.

The new management plan for the Minidoka Internment National Monument — the only WWII Japanese-American confinement site within the national park system that has the word "internment" in its title — also asks Congress to remove the word "monument," changing the name to "Minidoka National Historic Site."

The name change would mirror the other federally protected camp, Manzanar National Historic Site in California, said Monument Superintendent Neil King.

More of us have fewer friends, confidants, study says

By Steve Hartzog
Associated Press writer

RALEIGH, N.C. — It was easy for Nick and Kendra Sherrod to make friends when he was in the Navy. But when he got out, the couple was left without a close social network, something a study says a growing number of Americans are experiencing.

The study, published Friday in the American Sociological Review, found that Americans' social contacts are shrinking and "more focused on the very strong bonds of the nuclear family."

"The evidence shows that Americans have fewer confidants and those ties are also more family-based than they used to be."

— Lynn Smith-Lovin, one of the study's authors

"The evidence shows that Americans have fewer confidants and those ties are also more family-based than they used to be," said Lynn Smith-Lovin, a sociology professor at Duke University and one of the study's authors. Possible causes of the shrinking circle of close contacts include an increase in work hours and the influence of Internet communication, the authors said. The study is based on 1,467 face-to-face interviews conducted in 2004, compared with a similar number of interviews done in 1985.

Kendra Sherrod, 36, said she and her husband had lived in Asheville as civilians for a few months, and "I still felt like I didn't have any friends here."

Now, with her husband out of the Navy a little more than a year, she's starting a welcome club to help locals meet. The authors, which also included researchers from the University of Arizona, said a broader network of friends creates a "safety net," more civic engagement and local political action.

Prosecutors seeking death penalty in beheading case

Nampa man tortured wife, authorities say

NAMPA (AP) — Idaho prosecutors said Friday they will seek the death penalty for Alofa Time, the Nampa man accused of beheading his wife, then killing a Boise woman and her 4-year-old daughter in a botched suicide-by-car accident attempt.

The District Court judge in Canyon County granted a request from Time's lawyers to postpone his arraignment on a first-degree murder charge in the slaying of his wife, Theresa Time.

The lawyers requested more time to prepare a defense now that their client faces capital punishment. The Idaho Statesman reported.

The arraignment is scheduled for June 30.

A jury trial is tentatively set to begin Oct. 23.

At an initial appearance in court Thursday, Canyon County prosecutors said they have evidence Time, 50, tortured his wife prior to her death, but they declined to disclose details publicly.

The Canyon County Coroner's office is still trying to determine the precise cause of death of Theresa Time, 47.

Prosecutors say her headless body was found after Alofa Time, driving the severed head in his Dodge Ram pickup, deliberately drove into oncoming traffic, colliding with a sedan and killing Samantha Nina Murphy, 36, and her daughter, Jocelyne Grimes, 4. The impact of the crash caused the head to fly onto the roadway.

Besides the first-degree murder charge in his wife's death, Time is charged with two counts of second-degree murder in the deaths of Murphy and Grimes.

Under Idaho law, to seek the death penalty, prosecutors must show several aggravating factors to a jury, which could include evidence that the alleged beheading was particularly cruel and callous.

Alofa Time listens during a court hearing in Caldwell Friday. Among other charges, he's facing a count of first-degree murder in the death of his wife, Theresa Metiel Lee Time.

A portrait of Theresa Time is brought to her graveside service, Friday at Kollidrum Cemetery in Nampa. About 200 family and friends said goodbye to Time, 47, who was slain last July 15.

Lady Liberty statue vandalized, again

SANDPOINT — A replica of the Statue of Liberty at Lake Pearl in Orville has been vandalized for the second time in a little more than a year.

The metal sculpture of the statue was mounted on a cement pier on a lakeside beach in 2002 after a donor offered it as a gift to the city.

Last year, city workers found the statue in the lake with severe gouges in its face. It was repaired and later remounted.

This time, there was less damage. Still, the statue had been unbolted from its base and tossed into the water. It was discovered on Saturday.

"We're hoping anyone who has any information as to who is responsible for the vandalism of Lady Liberty quickly comes forward," said Parks and Recreation director Kim Woodruff. "I don't know what this act is trying to prove, but it's really not very cool at all. The statue is a symbol of our country, and it's also public property."

Property tax special session seems likely

COEUR D'ALENE — It appears more likely that lawmakers will meet this summer in a special session to address property tax relief. Gov. Jim Risch said.

While speaking in northern Idaho, Risch said "logic would dictate" that legislators would meet in August to hammer out proposals to lower property taxes.

Homeowners are upset about new property tax assessments that will require them to pay higher taxes.

The problem isn't limited to the northern counties, Risch said. People in the McCall area in Valley County, Fremont County on the Montana-Wyoming border, and Ada County also are feeling the pinch, the governor said.

As governor, Risch has the power to call lawmakers back to Boise. But he has said he will do so only if "there is a high degree of likelihood that a measure will pass that will achieve significant property tax relief."

Democrats to stress unity at convention

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Delegates at the Idaho Democratic Party's state convention say they need to make the party's values known to win votes in Idaho.

"The complaint everybody has about the Democratic Party is, 'We don't know what you stand for,'" Ada County delegate Gary Allen told about 20 delegates gathered to discuss the party's platform. "It's at the values level that we can really connect with the majority of Idahoans."

At their three-day convention, delegates are discussing the platform in open meetings and are scheduled to vote on a final platform Saturday. About 250 delegates are attending the event to choose a platform and confirm party officials.

Delegates said the platform should reflect core Democratic values that include accountability, openness, universal human rights, and equal access. State Rep. Shirley Ringo, D-

Moscow, said the party should state it is against a constitutional amendment banning gay marriages and civil unions.

David Fletcher, a delegate from Payette County, said the party should support keeping abortion legal.

Granville Burgoyne, an Ada County delegate, said the platform should include support for raising the minimum wage, balancing the federal budget, and opposition to selling federal lands.

He also said Idaho voters should have to declare a party affiliation to vote in primaries.

Richard Mabbutt of Nampa said the party should support a phased Iraq pullout and impeaching President Bush.

PINA MURDER TRIAL

Man testifies in shotgun slayingBy Cassidy Friedman
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Getting a yawning, stretching and increasingly annoyed witness to recall details Friday of a Nov. 29 slaying at his house seemed a bit like coaxing a Retriever to release his grip.

Jay Martindale, who testified that his latest story is true, could not recall details from his previous accounts, which he admitted were part-truths.

"I could not tell you what I told them," Martindale said. "I didn't tell them the whole truth until last week."

Martindale was one of two self-professed methamphetamine users to testify Friday in the first-degree murder trial of Juan Carlos Fuentes Pina.

Prosecutors are charging Pina, 32, with initiating a kidnapping that led to the death of Jesse Naranjo. Johnny A. Shores pleaded guilty to voluntary manslaughter after admitting he pulled the trigger.

The home police say the crime happened in a back alley owned by Martindale's mother. But Jay Martindale, who lives there with some friends, said he used it as a drug house.

Martindale gave his version of the crime.

Martindale stuck his head out of his bedroom after hearing Jake Degarmo, Carlos Pina and Jesse Naranjo speaking sternly to one another. He went back inside his room until he heard the voices sounding "blasted off."

When he looked out of his room again, the three had started fighting and Johnny A. Shores had come out of his room.

Naranjo grabbed a sawed-off shotgun held by Pina. Shores joined the struggle and the three began wrestling for the gun.

"I went back in my room because the gun was getting swung around," Martindale said. "I heard the gun go off (and) heard a big thud on the floor."

When Martindale asked Shores if he shot Naranjo, he offered no answer.

Martindale ran out the back door, where Naranjo had left the house. Unable to spot Naranjo from his back porch, he returned to the living room.

He fled the scene in a car with Shores, Shores' girlfriend and Jeremiah Schmidt.

Schmidt, who had been in the back alley and reported seeing Naranjo leave the home, testified earlier he "did not know he needed help."

"He looked scared," said Schmidt. "His face was bright red and his hand was on his stomach. Then he went out towards the alley."

The trial continues at 9 a.m. Tuesday.

Walker Center
closes adolescent treatment program

Times-News

GOODING — The Walker Center in Gooding will close its adolescent treatment unit because of inadequate state funding and the inability to draw enough clients.

For three years, the adolescent unit helped treat youth under 18 years old who struggled with chemical dependency. But the program has been unable to accept patients between 13 and 17 years of age, and Idaho does not provide adequate funding for treatment costs, according to a press release from The Walker Center. No center officials were available for comment Friday.

The center will continue to treat patients 18 years and older. According to a statement released by the center, it will try to save enough money to reopen the adolescent program in the future.

BUHL — Buhl's Legacy Corner, at the intersection of Main Street and Broadway Avenue, will not have its massive fish backdrop before Independence Day.

With just two weeks until the Fourth of July and more than $20,000 still needed for construction of the Buhl Centennial Trout Sculpture, the original deadline isn't going to be met.

"We were not able to get the money we needed in time to complete the project," said Centennial Committee member Nancy Tyrrell. "We had $21,000 for the wall and the Women Helping Other Women event raised another $1,700, but we are quite a ways to the amount we need."

All is not lost, however, and the Centennial Committee is now hoping to have the sculpture completed by September.

An original bid of $40,000 to construct the sculpture is now obsolete due to rising supply costs.

"With the cost of everything from tin to copper going up, we need to get another bid before we even know what the sculpture will really end up

Water leak to shut down Blue Lakes

TWIN FALLS — On June 19, a 20-inch water line developed a leak approximately 40-gallons per minute in size. The leak is located in the area of the Blue Lakes Blvd and Liberty intersecting. A significant amount of water has been flowing through the gutters and into area storm drains.

Due to the size of the water line and the location of the leak the City has had to delay repairs until specialized equipment became available. Repair of the line will begin on Tuesday.

Police chief organizing missing child response protocol

By Marie Mischel
For the Times-News

HEYBURN — Eight months ago, a report of a missing child sent the Heyburn Police Department scrambling.

"We didn't have the manpower we felt we needed," Police Chief George Warrell said, so they called the fire department to help with the search.

Someone thought of calling the child's school, and a teacher said the child might have gone to a friend's house, which is where he was found.

Despite the incident's happy ending, Warrell didn't close the book. Instead, he started a new chapter.

He formed a group of representatives from local and state agencies, and eight people from that group will travel to South Carolina for the Child Abduction Response Team training. A federal grant will pay tuition, travel and lodging for the eight, who represent the Heyburn Police Department, the Cassia and Minidoka sheriff departments, the city of Heyburn, the Minidoka County School District, CASA and the state probation and parole department.

When the local participants return, they will create a memorandum of understanding for their agencies to work together to locate a missing child, Warrell said.

He hopes to have the memorandum in place by the beginning of the school year.

Stop sign proposal halted in Burley, for now

By Marie Mischel
For the Times-News

BURLEY — The proposal to install 28 stop signs on Sixth and Seventh streets took a detour this week when three members of the City Council voted against the idea.

At its June 6 meeting, the council directed the city attorney to draw up a resolution for the stop signs after a committee of residents and three councilmen studied the idea and made the recommendation.

The original request for stop signs came from residents who live near an uncontrolled intersection where two teenagers were killed in a crash in February.

However, on Tuesday councilmen Don Dean, Dennis Dexter and Doug Manning voted against the proposal to install stop signs on Sixth Street at Miller, Oakley, Albion and Hansen avenues; on Seventh Street at Miller, Oakley, Albion, Hansen, Almo, Elba, Malta and Oriental avenues; and on Conant Avenue at Sixth and Seventh streets.

With Councilman Gordon Hansen absent, the motion to approve the stop sign installation failed, 3-2.

Manning said he opposed the stop signs because it would create four through streets in the area, unlike anywhere else in the city.

Richard Gee, a resident who brought petitions to the council asking for the stop sign and who sat on the committee, protested the council's action. "This isn't fair," he said. "I really thought that last time we were all in agreement."

Councilman Dennis Curtis and Mayor Jon Anderson reassured Gee that the matter wasn't dead.

Robert L. Stark

HEYBURN — Robert L. Stark, a 66-year-old resident of Heyburn, died Thursday, June 22, 2006, at his daughter's home in Clifton, Idaho, after a valiant battle with lung cancer. He was born Feb. 14, 1938, in Rupert, Idaho, the son of Carl and Marie Mai Stark. He received his education in Rupert and in 1956, received his diploma with the first class to graduate from Minico High School. He married the love of his life, Ardeth Gayle Buel on May 23, 1957, in Pocatello. Robert worked for Idaho Bank for 49 years as a branch foreman. While working, he and Ardeth lived in Pocatello, Blackfoot and Rupert, prior to moving to Heyburn in 1990, where he had since resided. He liked the outdoors and especially enjoyed fishing, playing golf, four-wheeling and working in his beautiful garden. He was also an avid worker of crossword puzzles. He was a Christian and his faith and was a member of the great-grandchildren, Justin, Brendon, Cassidy, Audrey and Katrina; and two sisters, Evelyn (Earl) Burns of Paul and Margaret (Robert) Cameron of Rupert. He was preceded in death by his parents, two sisters and four brothers. The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Monday, June 26, 2006, at the Rupert United Methodist Church, 605 H St., with Orthodox Presbyterian Church Elder, Alex Michael, providing the message of comfort. Music will be provided by the Paul Masonic Lodge, No. 77, A.E. & A.M. Burial will be in Riverside Cemetery in Heyburn. Friends and family may call from 6 until 8 p.m. Sunday at Rasmussen Funeral Home, 1350 E. 16th St., Burley and from 10 until 10:45 a.m. Monday at the church. The family suggests memorials be directed to Shriners Hospital for children in care of Rasmussen Funeral Home.

Inez Leoni Schmidt

BURLEY — Inez Fern Lutz Leoni Schmidt, loving mother, grandmother and friend to all, passed peacefully into the arms of her Lord on Friday, June 16, 2006, with her family and Pastor Poovey by her side. She was 79 years old. Inez was born on November 21, 1926, in Clover, Idaho, to Fred and Luella Lierman Lutz and was baptized and confirmed in the Clover Lutheran Church. She was the oldest of seven children and she loved getting together with them to sing and tell stories. Inez graduated from Filer High School with a class of 36 students. After graduation, she went to work at Fidelity National Bank in Filer. In 1948, she met Eugene Leoni at a cousin's wedding and a year later they were married. They had to postpone their wedding for about a month as everyone was snowed in by the blizzard of '49.

Inez and Gene farmed 12 miles from Rupert in what was known as "Lutz Valley" and on all accounts the perfect place to raise a family. They were blessed with five children, Mark, Carol, Fred, Tony and Annette. In 1960, they suffered one of the worst possible heartbreaks for parents. They lost their precious Tony to a brain disorder. Thankfully they were blessed with Annette a year later and Inez said the sound of a baby in the house helped fill the hole in their hearts. Tony was lost but never forgotten. In April of 1975, Inez lost her beloved Gene to a lingering illness. Inez moved to Rupert when she returned to the work force providing for her and Annette. In November of 1982, she met Harold Schmidt of Riverton, Wyoming, and they were married in November of 1983. Inez was blessed with three more sons and their families (Don and Linda, Alvin and Sheila, Paul and Melissa). Inez and Harold made their home in Riverton and traveled and worked until Harold was taken from her in August of 1992.

Inez continued to live in Riverton until her health made it necessary to relocate to Idaho.

Inez was a member of the Lutheran Women's Missionary League, Trinity Evangelical Syn. Committee, Trinity Choir, President Annette Mtns. Br. Lutheran Brotherhood, Sunday School Teacher, Church Secretary, quilting committee, Diverse Society, and served in many other callings for her church.

Inez is survived by her children, Carol Leoni of Sacramento, California, Mark Leoni of Boise, Fred (Timmy) Leoni of Heyburn and Annette Leoni of Vancouver, Washington, Don (Linda) Schmidt and Marvin (Sheila) Schmidt, all of Riverton, Wyoming, and Paul (Melissa) Schmidt of Sterling, Nebraska; two sisters, Waunda (Gerald) Sievers of Kimberly and Katy (Ray) Sievert of Federal Way, Washington; two brothers, John (Shirley) Lutz of Twin Falls and Charles (Doris) Lutz of Sandy, Oregon; six grandsons; five granddaughters; seven great-grandsons; and numerous nieces, nephews and cousins. She was preceded in death by her parents, her sister, Fern Lutz, her son, Tony Leoni; her husbands, Eugene Leoni and Harold Schmidt; and a brother, David Lutz.

June Lavon Nisson

TWIN FALLS — June Lavon Nisson, 74, of Twin Falls, passed away June 2, 2006, at her home after a bout with cancer. June was born July 25, 1931, in Delphos, Iowa, the daughter of June H. and Virgie L. Smith Skuser. She was their oldest child, and lived in Iowa for the first few years of her life. Then she moved with her parents, to Idaho and then Oregon, but they returned and settled in Idaho. She remained here in Twin Falls, except for brief periods when she would leave with her husband to follow the construction trade and then they would return. She remained in Twin Falls, after Carl passed away. June married William Carl Nisson on June 8, 1962, in Rigby, Idaho. She worked at the Parisian Laundry for a number of years, and later worked at Potato Warehouses sorting potatoes, and also worked at the Bean Warehouse. She worked for Idaho Frozen Foods, and later became International Trends and then Lamb Weston, which it was when she retired. She was loved very much and we will all miss her so very much.

Surviving June is her two daughters, Vivian (Max) Hennessey of Clarkston, WA, and Renee Johnson of Moses Lake, WA; step-children, William "Bill" (Mary) Nisson of Gil de Sae, Idaho, Terry (Judy) Nisson of Jordan, UT, Patricia (Vah) Colvin of Idaho Falls, ID; grandchildren and great-grandchildren: many nieces and nephews and a lot of friends. Her little dog, "Smookey," and special friends, Pat and Rod. Her parents, brother, Virgil "Bud" Skinner, beloved husband, Carl; nephew, Robert W.

Falls and Charles (Doris) Lutz of Sandy, Oregon; six grandsons; five granddaughters; seven great-grandsons; and numerous nieces, nephews and cousins. She was preceded in death by her parents, her sister, Fern Lutz, her son, Tony Leoni; her husbands, Eugene Leoni and Harold Schmidt; and a brother, David Lutz.

Funeral services will be held at 11 a.m. Friday, June 30, 2006, at Trinity Lutheran Church, 909 Eighth St. in Rupert, with Pastor David L. Poovey officiating. Burial will be in the Rupert Cemetery. Friends may call at the Payne Mortuary, 221 W. Main St. in Burley on Thursday, June 29, 2006, from 6 to 8 p.m. and at the church one hour prior to the funeral on Friday. A memorial service will be held at the Trinity Lutheran Church in Riverton, Wyoming at a later date.

The family would like to suggest memorials be made to the Trinity Lutheran Sunday School Building Fund or Riverton Trinity Lutheran School or to a charity of choice. The family would like to give special thanks to the Warren House staff and friends. You are wonderful! Thank you to Cassie and friends at Miridoka Home Health and Hospice, Dr. Leaucis, Dr. Mills, Payne Mortuary and especially Pastor Mowmy and Donnan. Mom, we will miss you dearly but we will carry on with the gifts you have left us. The gift of your unconditional love, your strength, your sense of humor, your faith, your love for strong family ties, your love of anything chocolate, and especially the gift of you! We love you, love your family.

Man who feuded with Anna Nichole Smith dies

DALLAS (AP) — E. Pierce Marshall, who feuded for years with former Playmate Anna Nicole Smith over his father's oil fortune, has died, his spokesman said Friday. He was 67. Marshall died unexpectedly Tuesday evening in the Dallas area from a brief and extremely aggressive infection, the family said in a written statement released through spokesman David Margules. He declined to provide additional details.

The family would politely request that their privacy be respected during this extremely difficult time as they grapple with this devastating loss," the statement said.

Smith married Texas oil tycoon, Howard Marshall II in 1994, when she was 26 and he was 89. He died the following year.

Leo: Take charge of your finances

HOROSCOPE
Ieraldine Saunders

Better safe than sorry. Those in close connection are looking for security and reliability, not flamboyant razzle-dazzle. Be conservative with your finances and ignore complicated schemes.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Whatever looks too good to be true probably is. Although it's fun to window shop, an impetuous purchase or romantic alliance might not prove satisfactory. Warning: Things might not be as advertised.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Less is more. You can never be too rich or too thin. It isn't necessary to rock the boat to make a dazzling impression. Tried-and-true tactics will make you the leader of the pack.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Be a glamorpus. Look for lasting treasures, not fleeting fads. Your special brand of enthusiasm might spark admiration from friends, but not all of those honeyed words are true.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Dive in head first. Your bravery and sense of adventure can make this a fun-filled weekend. Save your nannies and find smart ways to cut financial corners. Actions speak louder than words.

IF JUNE 24 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: For those born on this day, the road ahead seems clear and you can expect a happy, contented and productive year. Avoid making decisions, taking on new responsibilities or entering into contracts the last week of August. Launch your most important plans in December or early January to reap the best benefits and... experience the smoothest sailing. Because, as they say, opportunity only knocks once, be sure to take advantage of any favors or offers that come your way during that time period.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Don't buy a cow just to have a glass of milk. It is easy to be dazzled by a new amusement sense that come your way. Act wisely to break up bad habits and be sure to use common sense.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Fantasies can come true. But this weekend you will have the best results if you exercise discipline and keep your feet firmly attached to the ground. Put a padlock on your piggy bank.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): The absent-minded professor is present. Tie a string around your finger to remember the bread at the store and shelves contracts until next week. Dream big, but avoid detailed work.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Sensitive souls surround themselves with serenity. A place for everything and everything in its place" will give you the most pleasure. Take a rain check on a tempting fling.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Take charge of your finances. A little belt tightening may do you some good. Join forces with a trusted partner to turn things around. Pass up tempting adventures with fascinating strangers.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Don't be embarrassed by unrealistic expectations. It is sometimes a good thing to build castles in the air and treasure a few unrealizable dreams. Just don't put a down payment on your desires.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Follow the beaten path. Don't go gaga over enticing friends. A significant other may add a new twist to an old theme and provide plenty of excitement plus the benefit of a safety net.

The Last of the I Told You So Tribe

First wife remains No. 1 in hearts of man's family

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: My husband, "Craig," and I have agreed to let you settle an argument. We have been married for seven years. Craig was married to his previous wife, "Charlotte," for 12 years. Since their divorce, Charlotte is invited to — and attends — all of his family's functions and holiday gatherings, as is my husband, but I am not.

your feelings and go without you, but hey — that's the doll you married.

Craig has told his parents that Charlotte's presence makes him uncomfortable. He said she will "always be their daughter" and they can invite whomever they choose. I don't think Craig should attend these gatherings with his ex-wife, but he accuses me of being selfish because if he doesn't go, he will miss out on his family's events. He says if I don't want him there with her, then I should "crash" the events and show up uninvited and "unwelcomed." Who is right?

DEAR ABBY: I am a sophomore in high school. A short time ago, a freshman at my school was killed. He was walking home from a friend's house, and on his way he was hit by a drunk driver. (He was in a crosswalk.)

Abby, he was 6-foot-7 and on the football team. We called him the "gentle giant." It was a huge loss, and many people at school have been suffering this past week. His family is doing the best they can to cope with this.

Our school has sold 250 shirts made in his honor and is donating the money to his family. He is missed and was loved by so many people.

Everyone at school wants to help make sure that no one has to go through this kind of tragedy again. What other ways can my school get involved with helping to support not drinking and driving?

DEAR GRIEVING: Please accept my deepest sympathy for the loss of your classmate. His death should be a reminder to those he left behind just how fragile and precious life can be. An effective way to memorialize him would be to see that every student in the school who takes a driving course from now on signs a contract promising not only to not mix drinking and driving, but also not to get into a car that is being driven by a person who is "under the influence."

DEAR ABBY: I have a friend whose wife was in a nursing home for several years before her death. "George" was very loving and faithful, and visited "Marie" every day until the Lord took her three years ago.

George and I have been seeing each other for six months, and he is still wearing his wedding ring. When we talk he mentions Marie frequently.

I am embarrassed when we go out because George still wears his wedding ring. It makes me feel like I'm going out with a married man. Why do you think he still does it?

DEAR PUZZLED: Your friend may have worn the wedding ring for so long that taking it off would make him feel naked. He may wear it because, on some level, he still feels married to Marie. However, you have asked the wrong person. The only one who can give you a definitive answer to your question is George.

DEAR SNUBBED: It would be interesting to know more about how your husband's first marriage ended, because that may be what has influenced your in-laws' decision not to accept you into the family. However, as it stands, you are already experiencing enough problems without crashing his parents' gatherings, and I strongly advise against it. Your husband is selfish to ignore

Europe is celebrating Midsummer; beware of the evening dew, ladies

This day in history: June 24 marked a holiday called Midsummer in Europe and colonial America, more or less marking the summer solstice. Legend had it that if women skipped naked through the dew that night, they'd become pregnant in the coming year.

RANDOM KINDS OF FACTNESS

More people are committed to mental institutions during the summer months than any other time of the year. (Maybe it's because the kids are out of school?)

In the southwest, another term for "buttermilk" is "jocque," pronounced "hoo-koo-kah." English-speakers picked it up from the Mexicans, based on a milk product by the same name that resembles watery sour cream.

sport of jai alai, the ball is made from rubber and goat skin. It's so hard and fungus go fast. That if it were to hit a player during the game, it could be (and has been) lethal.

Some wine historians believe that wine dates back over 2 million years. It's surely the oldest alcoholic beverage. Unlike beer and other drinks, wine doesn't have to be actively fermented. It occurs naturally when fruit ferments, so was most likely discovered by accident.

On average, Americans eat more than 68 quarts — the equivalent of 2 pounds — of popcorn a year.

A woman who commits murder is three times more likely to kill an intimate or family member than a man who commits murder. Roughly 60 percent of women do so, and 20 percent of men.

On a related note, check that dog that bit you: the odds are 80 percent that it's a male.

Statistics from the Bureau of Justice show that juries acquit 27 percent of women in spousal murder trials. Roughly 10 percent of the men get the same treatment.

Hillary's coming, so open your wallet

CHEERS and JEERS to the arrival of Sen. Hillary Clinton in Idaho. The New York senator announced plans to do fund-raising in the Wood River Valley on July 9.

Cheers go out first, since the senator's arrival gives Idaho some well-deserved pub. First, Massachusetts Gov. Mitt Romney hits Idaho Falls to speak at last week's GOP convention, which is followed by the former first lady's plans to hit the post-Sun Valley Democratic base. To have two 2008 White House contenders in a span of one month is not a normality in the Gem State.

As for the other half of the two-for-one Clinton deal, it's unknown if the former president will tag along. But President Clinton did come to Idaho three times, twice more than the current president.

Unfortunately some jeers go into the Clinton visit since it's strictly for her senate re-election race. The Democratic barbecue will require a $500 minimum donation per plate. Clinton's drop-in also coincides with the start of the Allen & Co. convention in Sun Valley — a major annual pow-wow for media officials and Wall Street players. Is Clinton here to meet and greet Idahoans, or to mingle with Warren Buffet and Bill Gates when they visit Idaho?

For the former president, Romney also had his own private VIP fund-raiser in Idaho Falls, although his primary purpose was a convention speech to the party's faithful workers.

Either way, it's nice to see national politicians coming to Idaho to see all the abundant green.

CHEERS to the expansion of Jerome's library, now complete after a renovation and a flood.

Library patrons will see a new meeting room, new restrooms, new computers and, of course, new books with the $1 million expansion that was completed this month. The renovation was made possible by a $1 million donation given by the late Evelyn Crowder, a former Jerome librarian who donated a similar amount to Jerome High School for a new library. The project started in October and was done in February, but a broken pipe flooded the library covering, most of the floor and staining the carpets.

The books, however, were not damaged.

Library officials were quick to praise local business and patrons who donated material and labor.

JEERS to a Republican plan to close Idaho's open political primary.

GOP delegates attending last week's convention in Idaho Falls approved a proposal to push legislation next winter for closed political primaries. That change would require voters in primary elections to register as a Republican or Democrat before getting a ballot.

We know Idaho is a Republican "red state" but GOP delegates may be overstating their popularity.

Many voters won't be comfortable characterizing themselves as a Democrat or a Republican. The open primary allows voters to pick which field they're more comfortable with in that given year, without pledging their name to a certain party.

CHEERS to the Twin Falls County Fair Board, for stepping away from the push for a new fairground arena. Chairman Tim ZeBarth knows one purpose of the fair board is to show off horses, not beat a dead one. So it showed practical wisdom for ZeBarth to say the current board will not try again to push a fairground event center on the ballot. The proposal failed on the November 2004 and May 2006 ballots.

Fair board officials pushed hard, but fell short twice and if they push it again, it may diminish the idea even further with weary voters. If an event center is going to be built in Twin Falls, perhaps it will rely on more private business and corporate entities.

JEERS to more convicted murderer Mark Hackling and the heinous popularity of murder memorabilia.

Hacking, the Salt Lake City man who killed his wife Lori two summers ago in a highly-publicized kidnapping search, agreed to stop selling personal items to a murder auction site. Utah law prohibits inmates from gaining profit off sales related to their crimes. Hacking items included a signed hand tracing, a prison visitor's form and two canteen invoice forms, all offered by a seller known as Hillfortist on murder-auction.com.

Hacking is serving a sentence of six years to life for his wife's death. He claimed his wife disappeared while jogging, then admitted shooting her and dumping her body in the garbage.

The Web site claims it does not glorify murderers, but rather aims to "offer a rare opportunity to own various pieces of criminal history." This is why victim groups want the federal "Notoriety for Profit Law" on the books, to prevent killers from selling their wares through third parties on the Internet.

U.S. has one World Cup edge

Going into Thursday's World Cup match against Ghana, no American player had managed to put a ball into the back of the net, but the U.S. team did lead the world in one vital category: college degrees.

Most of the American players attended college. Eddie Pope went to the University of North Carolina, Kasey Keller attended the University of Portland and Marcus Hahnemann went to Seattle Pacific.

Many of the elite players from the rest of the world, on the other hand, were pulled from regular schools at early ages and sent to professional training academies. Among those sharp-elbowed, hypercompetitive Europeans, for example, Zinedine Zidane was playing for A.S. Cannes by age 16, Luis Figo was playing for Sporting Lisbon at 17, and Didier Drogba-Bokhan attended Tottenham Hotspur's academy and signed with Manchester United as a trainee at 16.

The difference in preparation is probably bad for America's World Cup prospects, but it's good for America's economic and political prospects. That's because the difference in soccer training is part of a bigger picture. American universities play a much broader social role than do universities elsewhere around the world. They not only serve as the training grounds for professional athletes, but also train the best in most other nations. They also contribute more to the cultures and economies around them.

The American university system was born with expansionist genes. As early as the 1700s, American settlers spread out across the frontier, they created not only new religious sects, but new colleges, too.

The Dartmouth College case of 1819 restricted government efforts to interfere in higher education. As the centuries rolled on, government did more to finance higher education, starting with the Morrill Land Grant College Act of 1862, but the basic autonomy of colleges and universities was preserved. They remained, and remain, spirited competitors in the marketplace of ideas, science, talent and donations.

The European system, by contrast, is state-dominated and uncompetitive. During the 19th century, governments in Spain, France and Germany abolished the universities' medieval privileges of independence. Governments took over funding and control, and imposed radical egalitarian agendas. Universities could not select students on merit, and faculty members became civil servants.

The upshot is that the competitive American universities not only became the best of the world — eight out of the top 10 universities are American — they also remained ambitious and dynamic. They are much more responsive to community needs.

Not only have they created ambitious sports programs to build character among students and a sense of solidarity across the country, they also offer a range of extracurricular activities and student counseling services unmatched anywhere else. While the arts and letters faculties sometimes politely cloistered, the rest of the university programs are integrated into society, performing an array of social functions.

They serve as business incubation centers (go to Palo Alto) and with their cultural and arts programs, they serve as retiree magnets (go to Charlottesville). With their football teams, they bind communities and break down social distinctions (people in Alabama are fiercely loyal to the Crimson Tide, even though most have not actually attended the university).

State-dominated European universities, by contrast, cast much smaller shadows. A Centre for European Reform report noted "a drab uniformity" across the systems. Talented professors leave. Funding lags. Anti-business snobbery limits entrepreneurial activity. Research suffers. In the first half of the 20th century, 73 percent of Nobel laureates were based in Europe.

Between 1995 and 2004, 19 percent were. The two systems offer a textbook lesson in how to and how not to use government.

In one system, the state supports local autonomy and private creativity. In the other, the state tries to equalize, but merely ends up centralizing and stultifying. This contrast might be worth shelling upon as we contemplate health care reform, K-12 education reform and anything else government might touch.

The dynamic American university system is now undergoing yet another revolution, globalization. More foreign students are coming to the United States, and more want to stay after they get their degrees.

This is bound to be great for American society. It will probably do almost nothing for our future World Cup prospects.

Amnesty for insurgents would be outrage

Special to the Los Angeles Times

BAGHDAD, Iraq — Today I read a newspaper article that filled me with rage and contempt. It was about the "reconciliation" that Iraqi Premier Nouri al-Maliki plans to offer the Sunni armed factions here. Al-Maliki is reportedly considering granting a limited amnesty to Iraqi insurgents who have killed "only" Americans but no Iraqis. To a soldier who has been deployed to this country twice already, and has been out on the street fighting insurgents, this is plainly an outrage.

LINCOLN M. LEASE

I take personal offense to al-Maliki's proposition to grant any kind of amnesty, limited or unlimited, to any insurgent who has been involved in terrorism against the United States. It seems to me as though al-Maliki has slapped all the families of wounded or dead soldiers in the face.

It is understood that the Iraqi government, currently with al-Maliki at the helm, wants to end the insurgency. We all want to end the insurgency, because everybody wants the war to stop. But what is this reconciliation? What is there to reconcile? What is up to al-Maliki? The Sunnis are upset because the primary base of power lies with the Shiites. OK. But whose fault is that?

The Sunnis have nobody but themselves to blame, because when it came election time, they didn't want to participate. So, naturally, the Shiites assumed power, because they were, for the most part, the only ones who supplied candidates. Now the Sunnis decide that because the violence didn't work, they're going to play nice. The Sunnis made their bed; now they have to lie in it.

Where is the justice for the American men and women who have been killed on the streets of Iraq? I ask you, Mr. al-Maliki, how can you even consider the possibility of granting any kind of reprieve for any insurgent? How can you view these terrorists as patriots defending their country? How can you justify the murders of U.S. soldiers on your streets? We came here to help rebuild Iraq, not to occupy it. If they are so patriotic, why do they not assist in the process of rebuilding? Furthermore, how will you decide what insurgents have killed "only" U.S. personnel? How will you be able to differentiate the murderers of "innocents" from those patriotic rebels who have killed "terrorists"?

If you justify any killing, you open the door to similar crimes because different factions will interpret your amnesty guidelines differently.

To U.S. officials, I say this: If you stand by and do not attempt to prevent this amnesty, then you will have sanctioned the memory of your own soldiers who have died for our flag. You will have insulted the families of the men and women who have perished in this war, and you will have affronted the men and women who have been permanently scarred, both physically and emotionally, by this conflict.

The answer for peace is not to pardon killers. We, who must set the paradigm for righteousness and freedom, cannot allow murderers to walk free.

Lincoln Lease, an Army special services man in Baghdad, has been deployed in Iraq twice for a total of 18 months.

Animal ID system will violate liberty

We are a state that values freedom, independence, agriculture and the rural lifestyle. What will our proclaimed values be when government agencies and private "data stores" have a list of every farm, ranch and backyard where even one animal is kept? When chickens and horses have electronic identification implanted at birth? When we must record every time we go for a trail ride or slaughter a homegrown steer for the freezer?

The only touted benefit of the National Animal Identification System, disease tracking, is very limited. Bacterial contamination doesn't come from the farmer; it starts where tracking ends—in the slaughterhouse. NAIS without testing more slaughterhouses for BSE is pointless.

Our country was founded on the rights of citizens to have property and privacy. If we are throwing away our liberty for only the illusion of food safety, then why bother to track horses and lambs? NAIS is not about safety; it is about control by government and big business. Tracking technology manufacturers and several "ag" conglomerates are the main supporters. Taxes and out-of-pocket fees will pay for this program. Non-compliance risks fines and animal confiscation. Additionally, what happens if the national database is hacked by thieves or terrorists?

Agriculture is life; those who own it, as before, should not own livestock; just be aware that by not acting, you are selling your future choices.

NAIS will become mandatory in 2008 unless we put a stop to it. Act before it's too late to go to www.stopna1.com for information. Tell your senators and the USDA you do not support animal identification. Tell them to test every cow for BSE at slaughter, and test imported animals and meat for disease instead of penalizing U.S. producers. Spread the word, and do your own research. This is our future.

Counties can prosper with Simpson's CIEDRA
The counties we represent couldn't be more different, although we are right next door to each other. Blaine County's Sun Valley ski resort and nearby national forests and wilderness areas make it the choice destination for tourists and second home owners, creating a vibrant economy which depends on public lands for recreation amenities.

Custer County is a rural area with only 4 percent of land owned privately, while the other 96 percent is state and federal lands. Traditionally, Custer County has depended on mining, logging and ranching for sustenance; and as those industries have become smaller, Custer County's economy has suffered. Yet, with all these differences, our two counties are supporting Congressman Mike Simpson's (R-Idaho) Central Idaho Economic Development and Recreation Act.

How have we come together on this one piece of legislation? Mike Simpson has spent an incredible amount of time and effort — six years to be exact — to make sure this bill is fair to both of our regions. It wasn't an easy process and neither county nor all of the other stakeholder groups were able to get everything we wanted from this legislation. For Blaine County, CIEDRA would designate more than 300,000 acres in the Boulder-White Cloud Mountains as wilderness which attracts people to Blaine County for hiking, fishing, hunting, and horse-back riding close to Sun Valley.

Custer County will receive economic development assistance to help diversify its economy and tax base through modest land transfers and an economic development grant.

To help Stanley serve visitors interested in motorized outdoor recreation opportunities, CIEDRA provides certainty to preserve various existing motorcycle trails and snowmobile rides in use today. Congressman Simpson has crafted a bill that works for numerous stakeholders, including all Idahoans and the American public. We hope to see CIEDRA become law this year.

Mormon president marks 96th birthday

By Jennifer Dobner
Associated Press writer

SALT LAKE CITY — Gordon Bitter Hinckley, president of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, celebrated his 96th birthday Friday with a groundbreaking ceremony for a Brigham Young University building that will bear his name.

"Shoulder to the wheel ... Oh and away we go," Hinckley said turning over a shovel of dirt with three of his children — Kathleen Walker, Clark Hinckley and Richard Hinckley — by his side.

Construction on the 80,000-square-foot Gordon B. Hinckley Alumni and Visitors Center at the church-owned school in Provo will be complete in fall 2007. It will house BYU's Alumni Association and public affairs and guest relations departments.

Hinckley said he was deeply honored by the gesture and joked that the building, which is being paid for with donations and not church funds, was singular in nature because it "has been built while the man whose name it bears is still alive."

He said the event was only marred by the fact that his wife Marjorie Pay Hinckley, who died in 2004, could not share it with him.

"But she has a chair on this campus which carries her name," Hinckley said. "Maybe we could move this chair into my building, and we'd be together again."

Known for his warmth and humor, Hinckley is in his 11th year as president of the 12.5 million-member Mormon church, which was founded in 1830 by Joseph Smith. The 15th church president, Hinckley will serve until his death.

During his tenure, Hinckley has shepherded a rapid period of growth for the church that has included increased worldwide membership, expanding church education and humanitarian relief efforts, and the construction of more than 70 temples in 21 countries.

Hinckley has made frequent jokes about his age since entering his 90s, often remarking, "I'm the last leaf on the tree and the wind is blowing." Hinckley suffers from a mild form of diabetes and in late January had surgery to remove a cancerous growth from his intestine. Hospitalized for six days, he spent 10 days recovering and then resumed his duties, including a trip to Santiago, Chile, for the rededication of a church temple.

In recent months, however, there has been increased speculation about Hinckley's health. On April 2, he announced that doctors said he was suffering "residual health problems" related to the surgery.

"I trust you will not regard this as an obituary," he told members during a live television broadcast of a semi-annual church conference. "Rather I look forward to the opportunity of speaking to you again in October. No additional health information has ever been provided; however, in a statement released Friday, church official stressed that Hinckley isn't slowing down. "President Hinckley maintains a regular work schedule and recently traveled to Iowa City to participate in a commemorative fireside honoring Mormon handcart pioneers."

Feds grant license to uranium enrichment plant

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission issued its first license for a major commercial nuclear facility in 30 years Friday, allowing an international consortium to build what would be the nation's first private fuel source for commercial nuclear plants.

Construction of the $1.5 billion National Enrichment Facility, under review for the past 2½ years, could begin in August, and the plant could be ready to sell enriched uranium by early 2009, said Jim Ferland, president of the consortium of nuclear companies, Louisiana Energy Services.

The southeastern New Mexico plant would be near the small community of Eunice, where support for the project is strong. Critics say it would pollute the environment, guzzle scarce water and leave the town with tons of radioactive waste and nowhere to put it.

Royal pain: Kimberly, Hillcrest split

By Brad Gahr
Times-News writer

KIMBERLY — Runs were not a rare commodity as the Kimberly Bulldogs split a doubleheader with the Hillcrest Royals in Kimberly on Friday. Both teams reached double figures in both games as Kimberly took Game 1 14-13 in a last-ditch, seventh-inning effort, but lost Game 2 15-12.

Tucker Lierman was the hero of the seventh as he nailed a clutch double to drive in Evan Jerke and Braden Osborne for the win. "I kinda started out pretty crappy," Lierman said. "Bubbling around ... just wasn't getting it done at the plate. So when I got the opportunity, I capitalized."

The Bulldogs had battled out of a 13-5 deficit by putting three runs apiece on the board in the fifth, sixth and seventh innings.

"We're a lot better than when we started," Kimberly head coach Gary Krumm said. "We shouldn't get in such a hole, but we were."

Game 2 saw the Bulldogs close to repeating that feat, but ultimately come up short in the end. The Royals took an early-game lead of 9-1 by the bottom of the fourth, but pitcher Tyler Harris must have felt generous, as he gave up one earned and five unearned runs. Aside from one hit batter and four singles, he walked anyone wearing a Kimberly jersey.

Harris walked Lierman, allowed singles by Bryce Benson and Nick Urie to load the bases and walked Ralph Murray for the first run. The second run came when he hit Nate Harmon. AJ Schroeder walked to score another and Joe Mason singled a run home. Evan Jerke singled, but Harmon was thrown out at the plate, putting a small hiccup in the scoring. Schroeder and Mason were the last two runs that inning, but it was enough to put Kimberly right back into the game at 4-1. For Hillcrest, it was a matter of endurance.

"We played six games in the last three days," Royals head coach Brandon Jackson said of his nine-player roster. But he made no excuses. "We need to work on the number of guys we walk, as evidenced today."

Unfortunately, the Royals pounded back six runs of their own. Eric Roismun, Harris and Josh Bonneson all singled to load the bases. Roismun went home as Hendrix was hit by a pitch. Bases stilled, Game 1 losing pitcher Richard Black belted one over the left-center fence for a grand slam. Another run was singled in that inning to give Hillcrest its final run tally. Kimberly picked up another three in the bottom of the fifth, but it wasn't enough.

Hutchison, Taylor ride well at state rodeo finals

Times-News

POCATELLO — Zach Hutchison of Raft River earned a score of 72 for his bull ride in Friday's morning performance at the Idaho High School Rodeo Finals. Joining him in having a solid showing was another District VI cowboy in Case Taylor, who followed his first-round score of 69 in saddle bronc with a 66 in the second round Friday.

Tonight's performance wrapped up the second round and set the stage for today's championship go-round, featuring the top 20 riders and ropers in each event. The championship go begins at 10:15 a.m.

Friday's morning go wasn't all roses for District V and VI participants. Jake Ruby and Rob Webb had a drop of 16.11 in team roping, a time off from their first-round clocking of 8.11. Cassie Vierstra and Kyle Woody also had a tough ride in team roping, while Webb and Taylor had times of 14.02 and 18.88, respectively, in calf roping.

The results of Friday's night performance were unavailable at press time.

Racing begins today at annual Idaho Regatta

RUPERT — Paint gleamed, motors shone and coals glowed Thursday afternoon at the Rupert Square as boats from the Idaho Regatta were put on display during the Show and Shine and scholarship fish fry.

"The annual event is a favorite with locals, many of whom return year after year. Don and Georgia Hess walked the few blocks from their Rupert home with their son to see the boats lining the square. The family used to watch the regatta races as well, but now limit themselves to the Show and Shine."

"They're just beautiful," Georgia Hess said. "The colors fascinate me." For Tina Martinez, the event is something new. "The kids came last year and had a blast getting signatures from the drivers, so we came again," she said.

Ira Cantrell, who travels full-time in his motor home, was in Utah when he saw an advertisement for the event and decided to visit.

"We were driving through this town anyway," he said. "I have a boat, but it's nothing like this. I have a cabin cruiser. It's amazing the things that can be done to them and they still float." About two dozen boats participated in the Show and Shine.

Winner of the Mayor's Choice award was K-50, the Coldfire, owned and driven by Wayne Herbert of Laguna Hills, Calif. His crew chief is Bubby Wilton, and the paint job was done by "Billy B." The People's Choice award went to P-21, the Gramps, owned by Tom Doldge of Anaheim, Calif. and driven by Dan Doldge. The Gramps' crew chief is Harry Bacz. As with the visitors to the Show and Shine, the Regatta is an annual event for most of the owners and drivers, one they look forward to.

"All the people really make us feel welcome, and I like the course," said Ted Kolby, owner of the Grand Nationals boat the Body Snatcher, the 2005 APBA national champion. "We always wait to see who comes out from behind the island."

"Barley has always been very friendly, very open to us," said Arlene Bohenna of Oakley, Calif., who was traveling with the Damien's team. "The town just opens its arms, and Rupert is just as good." For first-time entrants Steve and Cindy Olsen of Thubay, Wash., the Regatta is a chance to compete against other boats in their class.

"We hope to have more Crackerboxes to run with," Cindy Olsen said. "We just hope our boat (the Nutcracker) runs good." Steve Olsen said. "This will be a good test." But his wife set her goals slightly higher. "I want the mink coat," she said. "Everybody wants a pink mink coat."

A mink coat is awarded to the driver who either breaks or is closest to the course's American Power Boat Association's mile and a quarter record for that particular boat. The coat is donated by Moyle Mink Farms. Racing starts today with Happy Hour racing at 5 p.m.

The multi-class, head-to-head race is free to the public at the Burley golf course marina. Crackerbox boats will also race in a separate heat. Main racing starts at 11 a.m. Saturday and Sunday at the marina.

Parade and revelry: Heat celebrate title Spain's subs get shutout victory

The Associated Press

MIAMI — Shaquille O'Neal had the microphone, which meant the public address announcer had little chance of getting a word in edgewise.

This was Shaq's moment, the one he promised two years ago. He rapped. He led cheers. He chanted "one more year" to Alonzo Mourning, who'll contemplate retirement. And he wasn't done, either. "Whoa, whoa, whoa, whoa," O'Neal said when someone tried to interrupt him as the Miami Heat's championship rally started Friday afternoon. "We all know Coach Riley's a great motivator. Who wants to see Coach Riley dance? Who wants to see Coach Riley dance? Give me some, Riley!"

With that, Pat Riley danced. Miami's newly crowned NBA champions hoisted the trophy in South Florida on Friday in front of an estimated 250,000 fans, fulfilling an 11-year quest by Riley and the vow O'Neal made when, as his first formal act as a member of the Heat, he said, "I will bring a championship to Miami."

That championship is here, after the Heat beat the Dallas Mavericks in six games for the title. "That's something you can't experience until you win it all," finals MVP Dwyane Wade said after the parade. "Our fans have been like that. That experience right there was, just like Zo said, overwhelming. I wanted to go again."

Maybe he will — soon. While Friday was about celebrating 2006, questions are already being asked about 2007. Specifically, can the Heat repeat?

"Yes, because Dwyane Wade keeps getting better," said Lauren Webster, 19, a student from Coral Gables. "And he's always the best," chimed in twin sister Lindsay, who donned a new Wade jersey at the parade.

Barring unforeseen shake-ups, most of this team is coming back, so repeat talk is inevitable.

Wade and O'Neal are likely to be under contract here four more seasons; that's how long O'Neal has left on his deal, and Wade becomes eligible July 1 for a long-term extension that will pay him at least $75 million.

The other starters — Udonis Haslem, Antoine Walker and Jason Williams — all have multiyear deals still in place; Williams, however, will decide next week when to schedule surgery to relieve tendinitis in his knee.

"I don't want to," Williams said, "but I told the doctor today I'm going to let him know when I can do it."

James Posey, who hit some big shots in the Game 6 clincher and emerged as a huge spark in the playoff run, can choose to become a free agent, but may return. Gary Payton has repeatedly said he plans to re-sign, saying he spent 16 years chasing a title — and now wants to defend one.

Riley and Mourning aren't so certain.

Miami Heat player Dwyane Wade uses a water gun to wet down the crowd during a parade celebrating the team's NBA championship Friday in Miami.

Riley, 61, acknowledges the season drained him; when a rumor he was stepping aside popped up in April, he issued a terse statement vowing to return, but was largely non-committal when the subject came up Friday. "Don't ask me that," Riley said. "Next, Please, I love you — but I can't answer that right now."

KAISERSLAUTERN, Germany — Spain coach Luis Aragonés told his fringe players to make his life difficult, and some of them lived up to the challenge.

Lopez, Orioles shut down Nats

BALTIMORE (AP) — Rodrigo Lopez allowed one run in seven innings and Chris Benoit bounced back from his first blown save of the season to help Baltimore beat Washington 2-1 Friday.

Melvin Mora drove in a run and scored one for the Orioles.

Roy Liles a four-run lead by yielding two ninth-inning home runs in that game, but he pitched a perfect ninth in this one to earn his 19th save in 20 chances.

Lopez (5-9) gave up seven hits, struck out seven and walked none. Layton Hawkins worked the eighth, retiring Robert Flick with two on and two outs.

Royce Clayton went 3-for-3 with two doubles for the Nationals, who have lost nine of 11.

Baltimore Orioles' Chris Benoit reacts after Washington Nationals' Marlon Byrd popped out in the sixth inning of a baseball game Friday in Baltimore.

Eighth and Mariano Rivera worked the ninth for his 15th save in 17 chances, sealing New York's third straight victory.

Miguel Olivo hit a two-run homer for Florida, which opened the season with baseball's lowest payroll (about $15 million) to New York's major league high of approximately $199 million.

Mets 6, Blue Jays 1

TORONTO — Tom Glavine became baseball's first 11-game winner and New York set a club record with its ninth straight road win.

David Wright and Lastings Milledge homered for the Mets to support the pitching of Glavine (11-2), who allowed one run and eight hits in seven innings to win his ninth consecutive decision.

Duaner Sanchez, a key member of New York's bullpen, left after only two pitches with an apparent arm injury in the eighth inning.

Reds 3, Indians 0

CLEVELAND — Aaron Harang pitched his third career shutout and Ryan Freel hit a career-high five hits for the Reds.

Harang (8-5) allowed seven hits, walked two and struck out three. Cincinnati won for the 10th time in its last 12 road games.

Freel went 5-for-5 and is hitting .418 (33-for-79) in his last 22 games.

Cincinnati won for only the fourth time in its last 14 games overall and improved to 2-5 in interleague play.

Red Sox 10, Phillies 2

BOSTON — Josh Beckett retired the first 16 batters and Manny Ramirez drove in five runs with two homers and a double to lead Boston to its seventh straight win.

After rain delayed the start of the game by 43 minutes, Beckett (9-3) worked eight innings, allowing three hits — including Chase Utley's two-run homer in the seventh with eight strikeouts and no walks. Mike Timlin worked the ninth.

Twins 7, Cubs 2

MINNEAPOLIS — Johan Santana threw his second straight win for Minnesota move two games above .500 for the first time this year.

Justin Morneau homered and had three RBIs, and Michael Cuddyer and Luis Castillo each drove in two runs to support Santana (8-4), who struck out six and walked one while giving up five hits. Heasly outpitched Cubs rookie Carlos Marmol (1-2) and sent the Twins to their 12th win in 14 games.

Phil Nevin homered early and Chicago scored late on a throwing error by shortstop Jason Bartlett that followed three eighth-inning singles, but Santana struck out Aramis Ramirez with a 93 mph fastball near his neck with runners at the corners to end the threat.

Braves 4, Devil Rays 3

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Todd Pratt's RBI grounder in the 11th inning helped Braves end their longest losing streak in 18 years at 10 games.

The victory stopped Atlanta's longest losing streak since they lost the first 10 games of the 1988 season. The win came with a cost, though, as starting pitcher John Smoltz left with a strained right groin in the second inning.

White Sox 7, Astros 4

CHICAGO — Jose Contreras won his team-record 16th straight decision. Scott Podsednik hit his career grand slam and the White Sox won a World Series rematch by beating Houston for their eighth straight win.

Eight months after helping the White Sox sweep Houston for their first World Series championship since 1917, Podsednik and Contreras again found themselves in the middle of the action.

Brewers 7, Royals 2

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Dave Bush pitched effectively into the eighth inning and Geoff Jenkins drove in three runs to lead Milwaukee past the Royals.

Corey Koskie homered for Milwaukee and Bush (5-6) earned his second victory since May 12. He scattered nine hits, struck out eight and walked none in 7 1-3 innings.

Rangers 8, Rockies 6

DENVER — Mark Teixeira and Hank Block hit back-to-back home runs in the seventh inning and Texas rallied to beat Colorado.

It was the sixth time this season the Rangers have hit back-to-back homers. For Block, it was his 100th career home run.

Jeff Francoeur (5-7) cruised through the first 5 2-3 innings before unraveling. The Rangers strung together five hits and a walk to turn a three-run deficit into a 5-4 lead.

Teixeira started the rally with a double and was singled home by Block.

Tigers 10, Cardinals 6

DETROIT — Brandon Inge and Curtis Granderson homered to lift Detroit, which lost catcher Ivan Rodriguez to a wrist injury.

Albert Pujols went 4-for-4 with his 26th homer and a walk in his second game since coming off the disabled list for St. Louis. He had been sidelined since June 3 with a strained oblique muscle.

Royce Liles was hit with a foul tip. X-rays were negative and his status is day-to-day.

Yankees 6, Marlins 5

NEW YORK — Jorge Posada drove in three runs to help the Yankees cool off surprising Florida.

Making their first trip to Yankee Stadium since winning the 2003 World Series, the young Marlins lost for the second time in 12 games. Managed by ex-Yankee catcher and coach Joe Girardi, they are 20-8 since May 22 after starting the season 11-31.

Rhien-Ming Wang (8-3) allowed four runs and nine hits in seven innings. Kyle Farnsworth yielded Miguel Cabrera's RBI single in the

UNC, Oregon State prepare for showdown

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — North Carolina is known more for its basketball tradition, while Oregon State has made its mark on the football field.

Playing for a national title in baseball? That's something entirely new for both schools.

"I think it's neat that these two programs are here, and it speaks to where college baseball is going," Tar Heels coach Mike Fox said Friday, a day before his team was scheduled to take on the Beavers in the best-of-three championship round of the College World Series.

The matchup marks the eighth time in CWS history that neither team had won a national title in baseball, and the first since Cal State Fullerton beat Arkansas in 1979.

"There are a lot of great programs out there, and the ball has to bounce the right way a few times," Fox said. "There are a lot of programs that can get here, even if they aren't the top-ranked team in the country."

And now, it's down to the Tar Heels (53-13) and Beavers (48-15) — who both set school records for wins, but took much different roads to the championship series.

Oregon State was the only team of the eight in Omaha that played in last year's College World Series, but things didn't look so promising after an 11-1 rout by Miami last Saturday on the first day of the tournament.

"One thing we talked about after the Miami game was the confidence in who we are and how we played all year long," coach Pat Casey said. "I don't think there's a team that has played in the College World Series that somewhere along the line during the season didn't have a game where they lost to somebody when they shouldn't have or played poorly, and we certainly did that at a time we didn't want to."

The resilient Beavers bounced back quickly — helped by some impressive pitching performances, including Jonah Nickerson's two gutsy starts in four days. Oregon State won four straight to reach the championship round from the losers' bracket, and could become the first team since Southern California in 1998 to win the title after losing its first game.

"After that second practice we had five days ago, you put those practice pants away and you wonder if you're going to use them again," shortstop Darwin Barney said. "Today, when I was getting ready to come here and getting my stuff together, it was a surreal feeling. You just kind of sit back and you have to take it all in because this only happens once in a lifetime."

After a couple of shut-out innings on both sides, the Bulldogs threatened to rally again in the bottom of the seventh. Harris grew visibly tired as he gave up more hits with two men out as Schneider and Mason scored again.

"We did show some character. We didn't lie down," Krumm said. "I like the fact we tied be nice not to dig a hole to begin with."

Russell Phillips came in for the crucial third out to shut the Kimberly threat down and preserve the win.

The Bulldogs put together 26 hits on the day, with senior leader Joe Mason batting 4-for-5 in Game 2.

"A couple of errors hurt us early, but we picked it up," Mason said. "I always try to set the best example I can and hustle — do my best and have some impact on (younger players)."

"I'm proud of our effort today, I really am," Krumm said.

Bo Folkling led off with a single. Chance Elam entered as a pinch runner and advanced on Drew Bernhardt's sacrifice bunt. Romington Pullin connected for an RBI single to score Elam and knot the score. The winning run came when Marcus Schaal hit a grounder to short with one out and beat out a double play attempt, allowing Pullin to reach home.

Mitchell Dume pitched a complete game, striking out two and walking one. The Cowboys continue their stay in South Dakota with a 7:30 a.m. game today against Rapid City split squad.

Curtis owns lead at Booz Allen Classic

POTOMAC, Md. (AP) — Ben Curtis made a 5-foot birdie putt Friday on his final hole, giving him a one-stroke edge over Jose Coceres at the midway point of the Booz Allen Classic.

Curtis followed his first-round 62 with a 65 at the TPC at Avenel, putting him at 15-under-par and setting a tournament record for best score after 36 holes. The 2003 British Open champion saved par from greenside traps on back-to-back holes before his final birdie.

Coceres shot a second consecutive 64 as he seeks his first PGA Tour victory in five years. Jeff Gove was four shots off the lead, with John Huston and Brett Quigley another stroke behind as low scores continue to dominate on a course that looks really easy following last week's U.S. Open.

Coceres doesn't come close to crushing the ball off the green but he didn't miss a single fairway Friday and made all 16 of his putts from less than 10 feet.

the tournament expanded to 32 teams in 1998 to make it to the second round after losing its first game. China also did it this year and Turkey went all the way to the semifinals after losing its opener in 2002.

Shvachko scored his second goal of the tournament after going down on light contact as he ran between Tunisia goalkeeper Ali Boumjinj and defender Karim Hagul.

Tunisia needed to win to reach the second round, but had its hopes dented when its only fit striker, Ziad Jaziri, was sent off in the last minute of a scoreless first half with his second yellow card.

HANOVER, Germany — Absent from the World Cup since 1994, Switzerland reached the second round on its return, sending the 2002 semifinalist home.

Phillipe Senderos headed in Holan Yakin's freekick in the 23rd minute, and Alexander Frei added a disputed goal in the 77th to give the Group G

Ahn hasn't won since her LPGA Tour debut in 2003.

She moved to 8-under 136, just ahead of 20-year-old rookies Scott-Hwa Lee, another Korean who won the ShopRite Classic three weeks ago, and Bethany Chang a runner-up at the U.S. Women's Open last year.

Lang shot a 71 after an up-and-down day of five birdies and four bogeys.

Jamie Hullott, a 30-year-old Texan whose career-best finish was a tie for second at the Q Hammons Hotels Classic in 2003, moved into contention with a 67 to move to 6 under.

Defending champion Lorenza Ochoa, who has two victories and five second-place finishes this year, birdied the last two holes after a double-bogey and shot 69 to move to 5 under.

Johnnie Walker

GLENELGLES, Scotland — Colin Montgomerie shot his second straight 5-under 68 to take a two-shot lead after two rounds of the Johnnie Walker Championship.

Paul Casey, with a 71, was another with four players, second shot back in third. Montgomerie, who turned 43 Friday, was at 10-under 136 at the par-73 Century Course.

title to Switzerland.

France 2, Togo 0

COLOGNE, Germany — Teiring on the edge of another embarrassing first-round elimination, the 1998 champion beat Togo to advance to the final 16.

Patrick Vieira, leading the team in place of suspended star Zinedine Zidane, scored the first goal on his 30th birthday and set up the second for Thierry Henry in a six-minute span in the second half.

Four years ago, France went tamely out in the first round without scoring a goal, losing to Senegal and Denmark and tying 0-0 with Uruguay.

The French needed a victory over Togo to reach the second round, and, having wasted chance after chance, finally calmed the nerves of its fans with a performance long overdue.

ARMSTRONG DENIES LATEST IN SERIES OF DOPING ALLEGATIONS

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Lance Armstrong angrily denied the latest allegation that he used performance-enhancing drugs, dismissing the claims of a former teammate's wife that he admitted it a few days after his surgery in 1996. In a two-page denial released Friday, the seven-time Tour de France champion called the allegations reported in Le Monde, France's most prestigious newspaper, "stale, unfounded and untrue."

The newspaper reported Friday it received a copy of Betsy Andreu's sworn statements before an arbitration panel in January. She claimed Armstrong told a doctor he had used the blood-boosting hormone EPO and other drugs.

At the time, Armstrong was in the hospital recovering from surgery to remove testicular cancer that had spread to his brain.

Andreu's husband, Frankie Andreu, rode with Armstrong on his winning Tours in 1999 and 2000 before leaving Armstrong's team.

Armstrong won the Tour de France from 1999-2005 and retired last year.

Betsy Andreu's testimony came in a legal dispute over whether Armstrong was owed a $5 million bonus for winning in 2004. The company under contract to pay had withheld the cash under allegations Armstrong cheated.

The case was moved to binding arbitration. After six weeks of testimony, a three-member panel ruled against the company and awarded Armstrong $7.5 million.

"It's over. We won. They lost," Armstrong said. "I was yet again completely vindicated."

A telephone message for Betsy Andreu at their home in Michigan was not immediately returned.

NHL

AN AMERICAN accent for the NHL draft

VANCOUVER, British Columbia — Erik Johnson was 4 years old when he found an old hockey stick in his parents' garage and an empty baby carriage to shoot at.

Fourteen years later, the big defenseman from Bloomington, Minn., is widely expected to be the first pick when the St. Louis Blues open the NHL entry draft Saturday at GM Place.

"That's how it all started: I just started shooting in that cradle and that's how it developed," Johnson said Friday. "I was just an angry baby cradle. I was always pretty jealous of her."

A lot of promising players might be jealous of Johnson on Saturday. He could become just the fifth U.S.-born player drafted first overall, joining Brian Lawton (1983), Mike Modano (1988), Bryan Berard (1995) and Rick DiPietro (2000).

But Johnson is hardly the only American expected to go early. Twelve U.S. players are ranked as potential first-round picks — the record is eight last year. Two players this time — Phil Kessel and Peter Mueller — most likely will be among the top six.

"It's a testament to see how far American hockey has come the past couple of years to be one of the elite hockey nations," Johnson said.

He was noncommittal after the Americans were knocked out in the 2002 quarterfinals, too, though he said then he was open to staying on and eventually aging to a new four-year. On Friday, he spoke the past tense and showed little eagerness to stay.

"Four years ago I was completely burnt out after that whole thing. I was a zombie for about two weeks," he said. "Right now, I'm just an idiot."

There was no glory for the Americans this year. After the United States was eliminated in the first round with a 2-1 loss to Ghana on Thursday, Arena spoke with U.S. Soccer Federation president Sunil Gulati, and the pair said it was far too early to make any decisions on whether Arena should stick around — or even wants to remain — for four more years.

Track

INDIANAPOLIS — Marion Jones made a triumphant return to her sport's center stage Friday night by winning the 100 meters at the U.S. track and field championships — in the stadium where she won her first national title nine years ago.

Justin Gatlin, the world 100 and 200 champion and 2004 Olympic gold medalist in the 100, defended his U.S. 100 title easily in 9.93. Running into a stiff headwind in the event's third round of the day, Gatlin was well off the world record of 9.77 he shares with Jamaican Asafa Powell.

Jones, 30, won her 14th U.S. championship but first sprint title since 2002.

"I have a passion for the sport," she said. "I have a passion to compete, and nobody's going to take that away from me."

Twenty-year-old sophomore in the men's 100 at 10:07. Shawn Crawford, 2004 Olympic gold medalist in the 200, was third at 10.26.

Woodhall gets ticket to paradise

By Linda Brittan
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — Premier Series driver TJ Woodhall brought home the model car out to the Magic Valley Speedway for the first time this past Tuesday evening and judging from the smile that was constantly on his face, he likes what he has gotten into.

After Woodhall made several laps around the one-third mile track he climbed out of the car and admired it from the outside.

"It just looks cool sitting there," he said as his eyes fixated on the silver and black vehicle. The full-bodied car built by Thompson Motorsports may have looked hard to some as it paraded around the track without any numbering or sponsor decals, but Woodhall is still nonetheless fascinated by the new vehicle.

His friends and co-workers who came out to the track to watch him test drive the new race car obviously also impressed as the words "it sure is a nice car" flowed freely in the pits. However, fans can rest assured that the car will have all its lettering and numbering finished in time for Woodhall and the No. 99 to make their big debut tonight in the Pepsi Premier Series race at MVS.

In the meantime, Woodhall crawled back into the car to hit the track for a few more rounds of practice laps to try and get used to the way the new car handled out on the speedway.

Rob Dixon, one of the builders with Thompson Motorsports, was on hand that night and would loosely follow Woodhall back to the pits in order to get some feedback from the driver regarding his feel for the set-up. Dixon would then adjust the air pressure in the tires, turn the track bar a couple of times and send Woodhall back on the track once again.

"A lot of things that we do know what those changes will do to the car," Dixon said. "You just have to find the happy medium to find out what the driver likes. Then you start making adjustments sometimes they work sometimes they don't — race cars are finicky things."

Woodhall had been ascending in the point standings driving a modified late model to feel he needed to take things up a notch to remain competitive in the long run. Woodhall now stands fourth in the Premier Division point standings and because of the points with the driver and not the car, he will retain his position in the standings to continue the points battle.

What will be new for Woodhall however, is the completely different feel that the late-model type car has versus the modified that he has driven for over six years now.

"It (the late-model) is a lot easier to drive than the modified," he explained. "But it's also harder to know where you're at on the track they're harder to see around. I just don't really know how close I am to the wall out there."

Hopefully, Woodhall will have that figured out come race night.

"I'm just going to be trying to keep my line," he added. "These cars seem so much wider than the modifieds. They're not, but they just seem that way. But I think once I get a feel for the thing we'll be fine out there."

Woodhall is anticipating having a good race but hopefully staying out of trouble. No one wants to spend the week putting a race car back together. He does, however, like the rush that racing gives him and is always a tough competitor.

"When you get on the track in a race that's what starts the adrenaline running," he said. "Facing side-by-side with guys that are just a few inches away, that's fun stuff there."

Woodhall does admit that there may be a few butterflies this weekend as he realizes that he will have a lot of people in the stands watching his performance tonight.

"I'm anxious and I'm also a little nervous," he admits. "Because first time out when you have a new car people will be watching to see how things are going to go, how he's going to do... hopefully I meet the expectations."

But the general manager of Snake-Two-Three Davidson in Twin Falls, who coincidentally is an avid motorcycle rider, is bound to have things well in control. At least until that first dreaded scratch or worse happens. After all, this is racing.

And as those who came out to support Woodhall that night climbed on their Harley's to head home, the conversation turned to speculating about what drivers needed to stay away from the new car, least the unthinkable happens.

All I can say is I sure wouldn't want to be that person.

NEXTEL CUP

Dodge/Save Mart 350
Site: Sonoma, Calif.
Schedule: Sunday, race (FOX, 1 p.m.)
Track: Infineon Raceway
Intermediate road course, 1.99 miles, 10 turns.
Race distance: 218 miles, 110 laps.

Last race: Kasey Kahne won from the pole again, helped this time by a timely caution flag and a downpour that ended the 3M Performance 400 at Michigan International Speedway 71 laps early. Four of Kahne's five career wins have come from the pole. Last year: Tony Stewart recorded his first win in nearly a year by taking the Dodge/Save Mart 350.

BUSCH SERIES

AT&T 250
Site: West Allis, Wis.
Schedule: Saturday, qualifying (Speed Channel, 4 p.m.) race (FX 5:30 p.m.)
Track: The Milwaukee Mile (oval, 1 mile, 9 degrees banking in turns).
Race distance: 250 miles, 250 laps.

Last race: Rookie David Gilliland became 'the first non-NexTel Cup driver to win a Busch race this season, passing J.J. Yeley with 10 laps to go and holding on to take the Meijer 300 at Kentucky Speedway. Last year: Johnny Sauter led the final 80 laps to win from the pole position in the Milwaukee Mile. Sauter defeated Martin Truex Jr. by 27 seconds only his third win in 123 Busch starts.

MVS drivers hoping for points tonight

By Linda Brittan
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — Tonight the Pepsi Premier drivers will race to the Magic Valley Speedway after a weekend off to continue a points battle which has not seen much of a change in the top-two contestants, but has gone through several notable shifts in the third through fifth positions — especially in recent weeks.

Late-model drivers Bobby Latham and Steve Jones currently rank first and second in the feature division point standings respectively, while modified drivers Mike Buddenhagen, TJ Woodhall and Rob Vest round out the top five. Latham and Jones have shuffled back-and-forth for the lead position throughout the season. Meanwhile, Buddenhagen has made the most of each race and quietly moved up to third in the standings over the past several evenings by turning in consistent race finishes and avoiding trouble.

Woodhall, who also has been climbing the ranks of the points ladder recently, will have some new incentive around him beginning tonight as he will be introducing a brand new late-model car built by Thompson Motorsports to the Magic Valley Speedway this evening.

Woodhall recently had the opportunity to break in the new car with a few practice laps earlier this week (see story above). He explained why he is going with the new style.

"I felt I had to go with a late-model to really be competitive and I had a chance to sell the modified so I figured I might as well do it now," he said. Vest, 2005 MVS Premier Series champion, has likewise moved up in the point standings after having a less than stellar start to the season. Vest finished second to Norm Hatke last time out, having worked his way up through the field and holding off an equally persistent Brad Quate to take the runner-up position in the 50-lap main event race.

In the big picture, after seven of the sixteen required races have been completed in the division at Magic Valley Speedway, Latham currently ranks ninth in the Dodge capture his second main event win of the season.

A sly Louis Lopez has been moving his way up in the Grand Nationals point standings lately, climbing from fifth to third in just the past two races. Lopez, driver of the No. 55 car and 2005 series champion, had a sluggish start to the season but has come on lately with some solid racing and good finishes.

Jim Shirley became the first repeat winner in the Magic Valley Pipe Thunder Stocks division after passing one of his teammates, Jim Howard, at lap 13 while holding off another teammate, Craig Nuthak, for the win. Nuthak, however, still maintains the lead in the point standings with the runner-up finish in last Saturday's race. He has a chance to add to his lead with another good finish this evening. Rookie Mike Dawson, driver of the No. 24 car, is searching for his first win tonight as will Michelle Rouse, driver of the No. 77 car.

The Super-Sixes will return to the Magic Valley Speedway tonight for their second of three appearances this season. Pat Quinn, of Meridian, seems to have the MVS track figured out winning their first race at MVS April 29 along with two main event wins last year at the Twin Falls track.

The Super-Sixes series consists of open-wheeled six cylinder vehicles and have always put on an excellent show at the Magic Valley Speedway. Gates for tonight's races will open at 4:00 p.m. Green flag racing starts at 7:05.

Winless Jeff Gordon looking for jump-start at Sonoma

SONOMA, Calif. (AP) — Jeff Gordon would love to jump-start his winless season on one of the road courses he used to dominate.

Gordon's season has been like the picturesque Infineon Raceway circuit he will race on Sunday in the Dodge/Save Mart 350; up and down.

With no victories entering the 16th race of the season for just the fifth time in his career, Gordon is 11th in the standings. He is 11 points behind 10th-place Greg Biffle and 13 behind ninth-place rookie Kenny Hamlin.

Behind him, five drivers are within 176 points of Gordon, including Kyle Busch, only one point behind his Hendrick Motorsports teammate. The top 10 drivers in the standings — and any others within 400 points of the leader after the first 26 races — qualify for the 10-race Chase, now in its third year. Gordon missed it last year and does not want to do so again.

"This is an important weekend for us," Gordon said. "But, as competitive as Nextel Cup is these days, all of them are equally important. But we do need to get some momentum building. Things didn't get off to the best start for Gordon, who was fastest in practice on Friday but 11th in time trials after making a mistake and driving through the dirt on his qualifying lap."

"It wasn't what we were hoping for," Gordon said. "But we'll be fine in the race. We just wanted to get through qualifying without making any big mistakes and, unfortunately, I just got off in the dirt a little bit and that was it."

Kurt Busch won the pole with a lap of 83.055 mph, followed by Jamie McMurray at 82.948. Kevin Harvick at 82.889, Ryan Newman at 82.812 and road racing specialist Boris Said at 82.663.

Roundout of the top 10 were Kasey Kahne, last week's winner at Michigan; Greg Biffle; Mark Martin; Matt Kenseth; and Joe Nemechek.

Not long ago, it was almost automatic for Gordon to win one of the two Cup road courses. He leads all Cup drivers with eight victories on the tracks with both right and left hand turns. From August 1997 through June 2000 he won six straight — three each at Infineon and Watkins Glen International.

Gordon's record on the 1.99-mile, 10-turn Infineon course includes a series-leading four wins, eight top fives, nine top 10s and 393 laps led in 13 starts. He has led the most laps in the race at Sonoma six times, including 92 of 110 laps in 2004, his last win at the track.

But Tony Stewart is now the driver to beat on the road courses. Stewart, a five-time winner, is the defending champion and winner of two straight at Watkins Glen.

"A lot can happen at Sonoma," said Stewart, who qualified 12th. "You've got to be patient all day. You get a lot of cautions there and a lot of guys end up beating and banging on each other. I mean, the cars look like they've been to a race at Martinsville because it's a short road course."

"Do what you have to do to get through the first 70 laps, but those last 20 are the ones when you really have to go, and you need your car to be in one piece to make it happen."

Stewart got his first win of 2005 at this track. He already has one victory in 2006 and is sixth in the points despite crashing out of last Sunday's race at Michigan, finishing 41st.

Gordon has gone this deep into a season without a victory only twice before — his winless rookie season of 1993 and 2002, when he won the first of three races in his 24th start of the season. He finished fourth that year.

Use humor wisely when in workplace

Using humor in the workplace may sometimes help to advance a career, but overdoing it is anything but funny, says one comedian-turned-chief-executive.

Ron Shaw, president and CEO of Pilot Pen, draws on his former life as a comedian to help him in the office. Besides using a few jokes to open speeches, Shaw also uses humor to diffuse tense meeting situations to avoid nasty confrontations.

But Shaw recommends using humor sparingly. "There's nothing wrong with using humor at the right time, but some people go too far," he said. "Humor should be used to get someone's attention or to keep things lively."

Otherwise, too many bad jokes will fall flat and make most tellers seem annoying. Shaw suggests using humor only if it fits your personality. Don't try to be funny if you aren't.

"I'm one of the klutziest dancers that you've ever seen. So, can you imagine me trying to do some of that kind of stuff? I would look jerky and awkward. I wish more people would tell the same way about telling jokes," he said.

All is not lost for non-jokers. Shaw recommends corporate coaches to help fine-tune joke telling and other skills like television interviewing and dressing for success.

Legislature blocks electricity rate increase

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — Maryland legislators overrode Gov. Robert Ehrlich's veto and passed a bill Friday protecting Baltimore-area electricity customers from an immediate 72 percent rate increase.

Customers of Baltimore Gas and Electric Co. had demanded relief after learning that rates would soar on July 1 as part of the deregulation of Maryland's power market.

The bill enacted over the Republican governor's veto would limit the rate increase to 15 percent for the next 11 months. But rates would be allowed to rise to market levels in 2008.

In vetoing the measure on Thursday, Ehrlich complained that the plan did not let customers choose whether to participate in a payment plan that included a monthly fee, and he asked the Democratic-controlled legislature for a "more consumer-friendly" option.

Electricity rates are likely to be a major campaign issue as the governor seeks re-election. The veto has been criticized by Baltimore Mayor Martin O'Malley, who became the presumptive Democratic nominee Thursday when Montgomery County Executive Doug Duncan dropped out of the race.

Big-ticket good orders fall again

First back-to-back declines in two years

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Orders to U.S. factories for big-ticket manufactured goods fell in May, reflecting a second straight month of weakness in demand for commercial aircraft.

The Commerce Department reported Friday that orders for durable goods dropped by 0.3 percent last month after an even bigger 4.7 percent plunge in April. The weakness in both months was led by big declines in orders for commercial aircraft, an extremely volatile category that had been enjoying large gains at the beginning of the year.

It was the first time that total orders have registered back-to-back declines in two years and provided further evidence that the U.S. economy is slowing under the impact of rising interest rates, soaring gasoline prices and a cooling housing market.

The 0.3 percent decline, which was a weaker-than-expected showing, pushed orders down to a seasonally adjusted $208.7 billion in May.

Orders for transportation equipment fell by 2.6 percent, reflecting a 17.9 percent plunge in demand for commercial aircraft.

The weakness in demand for commercial planes and parts followed an even bigger 29.7 percent drop in this category in May. Analysts had expected a drop in this category given that Boeing Co. took orders for only 33 aircraft in May compared to 149 bookings in April.

Offsetting somewhat the weakness in commercial aircraft was a big 26.4 percent rise in orders for military aircraft, an increase that followed a 34 percent decline in April.

Orders for autos and auto parts rose 2.5 percent in May following a 2 percent drop in April. Analysts are expecting continued weakness in this area as U.S. automakers face falling demand for sport utility vehicles and light trucks as consumers opt for more fuel efficient cars in the face of soaring gasoline prices.

For May, General Motors Corp. reported its sales were down 12 percent while Ford Motor Co. reported a 2 percent drop in sales and DaimlerChrysler AG's Chrysler Group said sales had fallen 11 percent.

Excluding transportation, orders for durable goods items expected to last at least three years, would have risen by 0.7 percent following a 1 percent drop excluding transportation in April. Outside of transportation, orders for computers and electronic equipment fell by 1.1 percent while orders for primary metals such as steel rose by 3.5 percent.

Playing with Barbie

Mattel president Neil Friedman is charged with reversing the decline in Barbie sales. The numbers have fallen in 17 of the last 20 quarters, often by double-digit percentages. I think his real test will be 2007. There's a lot riding on 2007," said Jim Silver, editor of Toy Wishes magazine.

Mattel president aims to revamp doll's image

By Abigail Goldman
Los Angeles Times

Barbie's new dad is searching for the doll's missing wow.

Mattel Inc.'s Neil Friedman has the tall order of revitalizing El Segundo, Calif.-based Mattel's revenue, sales have been in almost continuous decline. The numbers have fallen in 17 of the last 20 quarters — often by double-digit percentages. In one of the remaining three quarters, sales were flat.

Within a month of becoming Barbie's caretaker, Friedman and his new hand-picked head of the girls division, Chuck Scotton, ordered everyone who worked on the doll out of the office.

The team of more than 50 people were assigned homework and told to report to a hotel in Anaheim, Calif., for a two-day meeting about what the long-suffering but top-selling fashion doll should be. They called it "brandstorming."

"It could be the toughest job in America," said Sean McGowan, a toy industry analyst with Harris Nesbitt in New York. "Then, on the other hand, it could be that it only has an upside. If you try it and it doesn't work, you say it was too late to revive. If it does work, you're a marketing genius, and if it's somewhere in the middle, then that's better than where you were."

Barbie could use a bit of genius. Although she remains the country's top fashion doll, her fortunes have been steadily sinking, partly at the hands of MGA Entertainment Inc.'s Bratz dolls. The risqué upstarts with the oversized heads have eaten away at Barbie's market share, particularly among older girls.

Friedman came to the job with a reputation for turnarounds. In his previous position, leading Mattel's Fisher-Price infant and preschool division, he took a respected but aging brand with fast-emerging competitors and doubled its $1 billion business with blockbusters such as Tickle Me Elmo.

Before that, he served as president of MGA's Universal merchandising and held various executive roles in small and large toy companies and as a toy buyer.

"There's no one in any executive suite in the industry that has anything close to his resume," McGowan said.

Friedman was ready to move quickly when he got his new post. In his first week, he brought in his No. 2 from Fisher-Price, Scotton, to run the girls division and elevated Tim Kilpin, who had headed up marketing strategies and design for the girls brands, to head boys toys.

And he had a message for those who worked for the brands. "Forget about what other people are doing and focus on continuing to be the leader," Friedman said. "We are the leader. Act like it."

At a crossroads: Autoworkers face tough decisions

By Sholan Freeman
The Washington Post

Baltimore autoworker Don Burks has made his decision. He plans to let this week's buyout deadline pass and not take a $35,000 lump sum from General Motors Corp. in exchange for retiring from his job after almost 38 years. Then again, nothing is definite.

"There is still time," said Burks, 57. "I have until (midnight Friday) like everyone else."

It's decision time for Burks and a 113,000 other GM plant workers who are weighing early retirement offers and buyout packages of $35,000 to $140,000. Analysts say the GM packages amount to one of the largest buyout offers in corporate history, and GM could lose about 30,000 workers. A GM spokeswoman said the automaker could have a final tally as early as next week. Combined with buyout offers from Ford Motor Co. and auto parts supplier

Don Burks came to General Motors in 1968, building pickups and muscle cars. Like Burks, workers around the country are faced with tough questions. Delphi Corp., which is under bankruptcy protection, the U.S. auto industry is being confronted with an exodus of close to 50,000 workers.

Like Burks, workers around the country are faced with tough questions. Early in the week, autoworker Al Benich was undecided about whether to take a $35,000 early retirement package to leave the GM powertrain plant in Warren, Mich. Benich has worked at the plant for 36 years. By the end of the week, Benich had made his decision: He would go.

Benich said as many as one-third of the 1,200 workers at the plant are taking the buyout. By leaving GM and reducing the company's crushing payroll burden, workers say, they are helping to preserve the auto giant's ability to pay its future pension bills. Taking the money now also gives them a "bird in the hand," in case GM's financial situation unravels over time.

"I know our union is going to fight hard to preserve as much as they can for folks,"

Seasonal slumps get longer in Hailey

The Associated Press

HAILLEY — Shopkeepers in the resort area of Sun Valley say the duration of the winter, spring and fall business seasons have been getting longer in recent years.

Area business leaders say the region is moving from a tourist economy to a second-home economy, and that soaring land values have greatly reduced the number of hotel rooms available for would-be tourists.

"I think for the last three or four years we have become more of a second-home economy," Jack Sibbach, director of sales for Sun Valley Resort, told The Associated Press on Friday. "The people who have the big homes that come to the area aren't here in the shoulder season."

A survey by the Sun Valley-Ketchum Chamber and Visitors Bureau found that 50 percent of homeowners in Ketchum don't live in their homes year-round.

"It does seem like our shoulder seasons keep getting longer," Carol Vaillet, executive director of the visitors bureau, told the Wood River Journal. "We're always trying to create events to bring the crowds during those times."

"But tourists have fewer choices on where to stay. Sibbach said, as the area has lost 400 hotel rooms in the last few years as motel owners and breakfast owners close their businesses to get cash for the land.

"You can't blame them if some developer came in and offered them a lot of money," Sibbach said. "Sun Valley is up, said Ron Gardner, public information specialist with Idaho Commerce and Labor. Lodging taxes were up more than 10 percent last fall and in March and April of this year.

But he said that might not be applicable to the Sun Valley region.

"There are some things that make that area unique," he said. "Their population declines at certain seasons of the year, which is certainly not indicative of what happens around the state."

Sibbach said the hotel rooms being lost in the resort area aren't being replaced because building height restrictions limit how many rooms can be put on expensive land, making it hard to make a profit.

"It makes it impossible for someone to come in and build a hotel and make it pencil out," he said.

With fewer tourists and second-home owners gone, that has some shopkeepers concerned.

"What's left are those of us who are rubbing their hands together," said Alex Mazzocchi, manager of Chapter One Bookstore in Ketchum. "My one pair of shorts a summer isn't going to keep Silver Creek Outfitters going."

Wal-Mart challenges health care law

Retail giant: Only federal government can dictate health spending by firms

BALTIMORE (AP) — Wal-Mart and other retailers challenged Maryland's new law requiring Wal-Mart to spend more on employee health care, arguing before a Baltimore judge Friday that the federal government may dictate health spending by private companies.

Maryland's law requiring large employers to spend at least 8 percent of payroll on health care or pay the difference in taxes is worded so that only Wal-Mart Stores Inc. would be affected. The Retail Industry Leaders Association, which includes Wal-Mart, argued that the law unfairly targets the world's largest retailer, barring court intervention, the law takes effect in January.

This law is highly discriminated against, said Eugene Scalia, lawyer for the retailers. Scalia is a former labor Department solicitor and son of U.S. Supreme Court Justice Antonin Scalia. "This was health care costs. He cited Massachusetts, where state lawmakers this year instituted expanded health coverage for the uninsured.

Scalia said Maryland's law was likely to do nothing but force Wal-Mart to spend more on health care.

Other states have considered bills similar to Maryland's, although no other state has adopted one.

In Maryland, where state budget writers were looking for ways to rein in a $4.6 billion annual Medicaid tab, the Wal-Mart law was seen as a way to encourage companies to keep employees off public rolls. It became law last winter when the Democratic legislature overrode a veto by the year before by Republican Gov. Robert Ehrlich.

Kuc, the state's lawyer, argued the law is legitimate because of the state's interest in reducing uninsured residents.

"We're all paying elevated rates for people who don't have health insurance," Kuc said.

The attorneys also debated whether the law in Maryland would affect residents of other states. Moitz said Wal-Mart would likely pass on its health care costs in Maryland to customers, even out-of-state customers.

"Doesn't that mean that a consumer in South Dakota will be paying more?" the judge asked. "In effect, the consumer in the other state is helping to fund Maryland's Medicaid," Kuc responded that Wal-Mart, based in Bentonville, Ark., could absorb the costs without raising prices.

An advocate who pushed for the Wal-Mart bill, Virginia S. Mott, said she and other Maryland Citizens' Health Initiative, watched the arguments and said the law should be upheld.

"Invalidating this law would prevent states from doing innovative things to expand health care," DeMarco said.

Wall Street slips lower on factory order drop

NEW YORK (AP) — Wall Street finished the week with a decline in big ticket factory goods did little to assuage investors' economic worries and left the market in a modest loss for the week.

Durable goods orders dropped 0.3 percent in May after a sharp 4.7 percent drop the month before, according to the Commerce Department, the first back-to-back declines in two years. Economists expected orders to rise 0.1 percent. Corporate spending remained strong, however, giving investors hope that the economic slowdown may not be severe.

Yet with the Federal Reserve's Open Market Committee meeting Wednesday and Thursday — and widely expected to hike interest rates yet again — Wall Street's chronic anxiety about economic growth overshadowed trading, and likely will continue to do so until the Fed's decision is announced Thursday afternoon.

"The business spending within the durable goods report was encouraging once you get past the headline number," said Jeff Klein, chief investment strategist for JNC Financial Services Group in Philadelphia.

"But even with that, there's a lot of investors, if they've got a bearish view of the trade, they're not going to do it until you get past the Fed meeting."

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 30.02, or 0.27 percent, to 10,989.03.

Broader stock indicators were just below the flatline. The Standard & Poor's 500 index lost 1.10, or 0.9 percent, to 1,241.50, while the Nasdaq composite index dropped 1.51, or 0.70 percent, to 2,121.47.

Bonds continued their sell-off from the previous session, with the yield on the benchmark 10-year Treasury note rising to a four-year high of 5.23 percent from 5.20 percent late Thursday.

The dollar was mixed against other major currencies, while gold prices rose. Oil prices edged higher as traders remained concerned about rising international demand for light refinery capacity and continued unrest in the Middle East. A barrel of light crude settled at $70.87, up 3 cents on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

With energy prices potentially stirring inflation, the Fed has become increasingly hawkish on raising rates to combat rising prices, which has led some on Wall Street to consider whether policy makers will raise the federal funds rate by 75 percent.

"The business spending report was encouraging once you get past the headline number," said Jeff Klein, chief investment strategist for JNC Financial Services Group in Philadelphia.

"But even with that, there's a lot of investors, if they've got a bearish view of the trade, they're not going to do it until you get past the Fed meeting."

Dude, better not use slang when interviewing

The Associated Press

So slang may have been cool in college, but words such as "dude," "like" and "totally" leave employers unimpressed, according to one expert.

When talking to professional panel.

Make eye contact and use proper grammar and pronunciation to avoid confusion when speaking to an employer.

"If there is no eye contact, the grammar is inappropriate, or diction isn't clear, there can be a negative impression in the workplace is reality."

Determine what errors you make by carefully listening to your speech. You may want to ask a friend to help. Once you figure out your most common mistakes, you can work toward eliminating these "verbal viruses."

Avoid weak words like "sort of" and "maybe," which can send mixed signals to employers. Instead, choose words that convey confidence, power and intelligence.

FDA approves new drug to combat HIV

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new drug to treat HIV won federal approval Friday. The Food and Drug Administration said the approval of Prezista for the treatment of the human immunodeficiency virus. The drug is the first approved HIV medication for its maker, Johnson & Johnson. It's also the first new HIV drug approved since June 22, 2005.

The drug, also known as darunavir, is a member of the protease inhibitor class of drugs. They work by blocking production of a protein the virus needs to make more copies of itself. Since 1995, FDA has approved 10 other protease inhibitors. The major side effects of this class of drugs are high cholesterol and blood-sugar levels, as well as lipodystrophy, or the redistribution of body fat. However, side effects typically are taken as part of a cocktail of drugs.

Prezista is meant for use in patients who don't respond to treatment with other antiretroviral drugs, the FDA said. The risks and benefits of Prezista for adults who haven't previously been treated for HIV and children are unclear, the FDA said.

The FDA approved Prezista to be taken with a low-dose of Norvir, a protease inhibitor made by Abbott Laboratories, in combination with other HIV drugs, the FDA said.

Auto

Benchmark said. "But the situation with GM — there's no certainty." GM made the offers as part of its restructuring. The company lost $10.6 billion last year, and it has been sliding for decades. Ford, which has similar problems, expects as many as 11,000 people to sign up for its buyout plan in the next few days. Another 8,500 workers have signed up to take the deals at Delphi, according to the United Auto Workers union.

Even before the buyouts, the UAW had to contend with shrinking membership. The union, which had 1.5 million members at its peak in the 1970s, had nearly 600,000 active members last year. This latest exodus could sap the union a year in dues payments.

The UAW is moving $60 million from its stock fund into its general fund, in part to offset those losses and to pay for organizing efforts and other projects meant to shore up the union. Those projects include mass e-mailing and advertising aimed at building public and political support for initiatives such as national health insurance.

The buyouts will also have a big impact on next year's negotiations between Detroit's Big Three auto companies and the union. A major bargaining roadblock was expected to be the so-called job bank, which UAW workers are paid even when a plant is temporarily shut down or permanently closed. Automakers have complained of being saddled with providing pay and benefits for unproductive workers. But the wave of buyouts will likely reduce the number of jobs banked, making the issue less contentious, according to David E. Cole of the Center for Automotive Research.

Auto company negotiators could focus on areas for cost savings, such as demanding that autoworkers pay more for health care.

A smaller, less costly U.S. workforce is central to both GM and Ford. Most important, the retirements will save GM and Ford lots of money. GM and Ford are spending about $300,000 per worker per year in wages and benefits. Cole says that once workers take early retirements, the cost for them will drop to $50,000 a year and fall even further to $20,000 when workers are fully retired.

The buyouts could help accelerate Detroit's 20-year push to close the productivity gap with Japanese automakers.

At GM, the average worker is 50 years old. Many came into plants during a time of booming sales for U.S. automakers and weak competition from foreign cars.

For workers with minimal education or skills, a high-paying unionized job was a ticket into the American middle class.

In Coopers & Lybrand's Michigan is hiring only plant workers with at least two years of community college education. Autoworkers are increasingly called on to take steps to improve their efficiency and save money.

"The day of hiring people who were high school dropouts is totally gone with the auto industry," Cole said.

Allegations against troops may indicate turning point

Quantity and seriousness of accusations inspire outcry

By Robert Tanner
Associated Press writer

The accounts are brutal: An Iraqi man dragged from his home, executed and made to look as if he was an insurgent. Three prisoners killed by their Army captors. A team of revenge-seeking Marines setting home to home, shooting down unarmed Iraqi men, women, children.

The recent flurry of accusations against U.S. servicemen has stunned military analysts and experts. Many see a critical new point in the war — though few agree whether it shows the toll of combat stress, commanders' resolved to stamp out war crimes, or, as some claim, an overzealous second-guessing of the troops.

But the number and gravity of the latest allegations have drawn the greatest outcry against U.S. military actions since the Abu Ghraib prison abuses.

All of a sudden there seem to be charges right and left," said Loren Thompson at the Lexington Institute, a defense think tank in Arlington, Va. "It clearly has happened in some cases. But it's hard to tell whether this is a pattern of wrongdoing on our part or just a pattern of closer supervision."

So far, none of the troops accused in the latest cases has even been tried:

On Friday, a Pennsylvania National Guard spokesman said two Guardsmen were being investigated in connection with the shooting death of an Iraqi earlier this year.

On Wednesday, seven Marines and one Navy corpsman were charged in the April shooting death of an Iraqi man in the town of Hamdania. Charging documents claim the man was taken from his home, forced into a hole, shot and left with a stab AK-47 near him to make it look as if he fought the troops.

On Monday and Wednesday, three soldiers and a non-commissioned officer were charged in the May deaths of three unarmed Iraqis in military custody in Salahuddin province. A Pentagon official told The Associated Press that the detainees were shot while trying to flee.

Those accusations come a few months after another disturbing charge — that in Haditha, a town in the Sunni holdout of Anbar province, members of a Marine unit killed up to two dozen unarmed Iraqis in and outside their homes after a roadside bomb killed one of the troops.

Neighbors told the AP that a small group of Marines went house to house over three hours, while others stood watch.

The death penalty is a possible punishment in at least some of these cases.

One view is that, if proven true, these incidents reflect the toll Iraq has taken on U.S. troops. Since 2003, they have dealt with constant heat and filth, blurred lines between civilian and enemy, and insurgents who rely on dirty tactics like suicide and roadside bombs, lack of uniforms and beheadings.

"This is one of the nastier kinds of fights you could be in," said Michael O'Hanlon, a defense analyst at the Brookings Institution. American troops "obviously lost a lot of their own compatriots, a lot of them have been there a number of times. Morale is still pretty strong, but I would think there's a psychological toll."

"Some say that's to be expected, but criminal behavior still must be prevented. War crimes are an indictment of leadership.

"It's symptomatic of a combat stress management system that has failed," said John Pike, director of GlobalSecurity.org, a Washington-based military think tank.

"Anybody who contemplates a decision to use force against civilians is contemplating putting boots on the ground has to understand that part of what they're assuming-out soldiers are going to massacre civilians. It just comes with the territory."

Still, Pike said that even if true, the number of abuse cases isn't shocking, given the number of troops and three-plus years of combat. "If this is done, the chain of command would appear to have done a pretty good job."

Others see a more emphatic message from military leaders to the troops and their field commanders.

"The system which tended to turn a blind eye is now looking harder," said Anthony Cordesman, a former Pentagon analyst. "Incidents which in the past might've been covered over or dodged are now leading to formal accusations."

Others closer to the accused are bitter over what they see as a shift from the leaders in Washington.

"There seems to be a rush to judgment," said Charles Gittins, an attorney who successfully defended former Marine Second Lt. Larlo Pantano, who was acquitted of murder after he shot two Iraqis and left a warning sign on their corpses. He argued self-defense.

"The war's being run from the Pentagon and the Pentagon's moving with the 24-hour news cycle. There's a tendency to charge first and let the facts play themselves out later," Gittins said. "Back the soldiers!"

Pantano warned against sweeping conclusions. "Nobody's running amok and being barbarian. That's so inaccurate," he said. "The real jeopardy is there's so much blowback every time you use force that troops are dying from hesitation."

And the latest accused soldiers have yet to be fully heard. In Charleston, S.C., the mother of 21-year-old Pfc. Corey R. Clagett — one of four charged with killing prisoners last month — said she spoke to her son by telephone. "He said, 'Mom, this is Corey. I didn't do those things the way they said,'" Melanie Dianiska said.

Almost by definition, war creates chaos. Last week, Australian troops shot a civilian and a bodyguard to an Iraqi trade minister when they thought they were threatened. Two newly trained Iraqi policemen have been accused of shooting American troops. Meanwhile, two American soldiers were captured, brutalized and slain.

Man with penile implant problem wins $400,000

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — A former handycranner has won more than $400,000 in a lawsuit over a penile implant that gave him a 10-year erection.

Charles "Chick" Lennon, 68, received the steel and plastic implant in 1996, about two years before Viagra went on the market. The Dura-II is designed to allow impotent men to position the penis upward for sex, then lower it.

But Lennon could not position his penis downward. He said he could no longer hug people, ride a bike, swim or have bathing trunks because of the pain and embarrassment. He has become a recluse and is uncomfortable being around his grandchildren, his lawyer said.

In 2004, a jury awarded him $750,000. A judge called that excessive and reduced it to $400,000. On Friday, the Rhode Island Supreme Court affirmed that award in a ruling that turned on a procedural matter.

"I don't know any man who for any amount of money would want to trade and take my client's life," said Jules D'Alessandro, Lennon's attorney. "It's not a whole person."

A lawyer representing Dura-II manufacturer Dacom Corp. and the company's insurer declined comment. Dacom maintained that nothing was wrong with the implant.

Lennon cannot get the implant removed because of health problems, including open-heart surgery, his lawyer said. Impotence drugs could not help Lennon even if he were able to have the device taken out, because tissue had to be removed for it to be implanted.

Officials grapple with whether to charge admission to World Trade Center museum

NEW YORK (AP) — After wrestling with the costs and design of the Sept. 11 memorial, planners face another dilemma — whether to charge admission to the museum honoring those who died at the World Trade Center.

The issue was a point of contention Friday, a day after the state Senate approved a bill barring any state money from going to the World Trade Center Memorial Foundation if admission is charged.

The Assembly has yet to vote, and there was no immediate comment from Gov. George Pataki. But Mayor Michael Bloomberg was quick to voice his position.

"I hope the governor vetoes the bill because it's probably true that without being able to charge, we can't build the memorial," Bloomberg said on his weekly radio show.

The mayor said that of the estimated $500 million cost of the memorial, half will come from public funds, "and the city can't be in a position down the road where people say, 'Oh, come on, you've got to pay for all the maintenance.'"

About $50 million a year would be needed to run the memorial site, Bloomberg said, including security costs and a fund for repairs.

Elsewhere in the country, there is no clear precedent on charging admission. In Oklahoma City, where the 1995 terrorist bombing of a federal building killed 168 people, general admission to the National Memorial & Museum is $8. But the Outdoor Symbolic Memorial, which is open 24 hours a day, is free of charge.

In Washington, admission is free to both the Vietnam

Veterans Memorial and the Holocaust Memorial Museum.

In New York, the issue of admission fees to the ground zero museum is far from resolved. Admission to the outdoor memorial will be free of charge, the foundation says.

On Friday, the three top foundation officials sent a letter to Assembly Speaker Sheldon Silver and Senate Majority Leader Joseph Bruno, saying they strongly oppose the bill.

"This bill threatens to undermine the long-term care and operations of the memorial and museum at ground zero," said the letter signed by John C. Whitehead, the foundation's chairman, as well as Thomas S. Johnson, chairman of its executive committee, and acting president Joseph C. Daniels.

Meet the Builder... Jerry Anderson

A conversation with Jerry Anderson (CEO of Bookside Builders) will let a person know two things. First, Jerry is not a native. He was born and raised in Cumming, Georgia, just north of Atlanta. Jerry relocated to Twin Falls in 2005, from Las Vegas, Nevada, with his wife, Michelle, a fourth generation Idahoan, and their two boys, Jake, 4, and Bodie, 2. Second, Jerry is an innovator who takes pride in doing things differently — very passionate about homebuilding. He has been involved in the building industry since the age of 15, when he began working for his older brother on large estate homes. He believes that any home should be built to stand for generations to come. Bookside Builders constructs top-quality spec and custom homes with the belief that even a 2,000-square-foot house can have the same amenities as a house triple its size.

Jerry would be the first to tell you he does not do this alone. Were it not for the community of dedicated craftsmen in the Magic Valley who partner with him, no Bookside Builder house would make it off the drafter's table. We would like to thank everyone who helped, putting in extra hours, to get this year's Parade homes ready to be shown. Please stop by 2242 Tendry or 1221 Cole St. and say hey to Jerry and Michelle.

Sailors' personal data found on Internet

WASHINGTON — Personal data, including the Social Security numbers of 28,000 sailors and members of their families, have been found on a civilian Web site, triggering a criminal investigation.

The Navy said Friday the information was in five documents and members of their names, birth dates and Social Security numbers. Navy spokesman Lt. Justin Cole would not identify the Web site or its owner, but said the information had been removed. He would not provide any details about how the information ended up on the site.

Cole said there was no indication so far that the information was used illegally, but individuals involved were being contacted and encouraged to monitor their bank accounts and credit cards.

Iraqis declare state of emergency in Baghdad

BAGHDAD, Iraq — Iraq's government clamped a state of emergency on Baghdad and ordered everyone off the streets Friday after U.S. and Iraqi forces battled insurgents armed with rocket-propelled grenades, hand grenades and rifles near the heavily fortified Green Zone.

The military also announced the deaths of five more U.S. troops in a particularly violent week for American forces that included the discovery of the mutilated bodies of two soldiers. Twelve U.S. servicemen have died or been found dead this week.

The fierce fighting in the heart of Baghdad came despite a crackdown launched 10 days ago that put tens of thousands of U.S.-backed Iraqi troops on the streets as the new prime minister sought to restore a modicum of safety for the capital's 6 million people.

Iraqi and U.S. military forces clashed with heavily armed attackers throughout the morning Friday in the alleys and doorways along Haifa Street and within a carport of the Green Zone, which houses the U.S. and British embassies and Iraqi government headquarters.

Four Iraqi soldiers and three policemen were wounded before the area was sealed and searched house-to-house for insurgent attackers, police Lt. Maltham Abdul Razzaq said. U.S. and Iraqi forces also engaged in firefights with insurgents in the dangerous Dora neighborhood in south Baghdad.

Transportation Secretary Norman Mineta resigns

WASHINGTON — Transportation Secretary Norman Mineta, who helped rebuild confidence in U.S. airports and flying after the Sept. 11 attacks, said Friday he's leaving the Bush administration.

"It is time for me to move on to other challenges," Mineta said in a letter to President Bush.

White House press secretary Tony Snow announced the July 7 resignation. Asked why Mineta, 74, decided to leave, Snow said: "Because he wanted to."

"He was not being pushed out," Snow said. "As a matter of fact, the president and the vice president and others were happy with him. He put in five and half years that's enough time."

Bush said Mineta — the only Democrat in his Cabinet — played a vital leadership role in strengthening the security of seaports and airports.

Al-Qaida acknowledges death of al-Zarqawi

CAIRO, Egypt — Al-Qaida's No. 2 leader paid tribute to the slain Abu Musab al-Zarqawi in a video Friday, extolling him as "the prince of martyrs" despite the rocky relationship that the terrorist leader had with the al-Qaida command.

The video, aired on the Al-Jazeera network, was the first acknowledgment by al-Qaida's central leadership of the death of al-Zarqawi, who was killed in a U.S. airstrike northeast of Baghdad on June 7.

Al-Zawahiri called Al-Zarqawi was "a soldier, a hero, an imam (Islamic cleric) and the prince of martyrs." He said that his death would not set back the insurgency in Iraq. In fact "the death of al-Zarqawi has defined the struggle between the crusaders and Islam in Iraq."

Slight mutation found in bird flu virus

JAKARTA, Indonesia — The World Health Organization has detailed the first evidence that a person likely caught the bird flu virus from a human, then passed a slightly mutated version to another person. But experts said Friday the genetic change does not increase the threat of a pandemic.

The investigation said the mutation of the H5N1 strain of the virus occurred in a 10-year-old Indonesian boy who was part of the largest cluster ever reported. The index case is believed to have been infected by poultry. She then likely passed it to the boy and five other blood relatives. The boy is then thought to have infected his father, whose samples showed the same mutation, according to the report obtained by the AP.

Only one infected family member survived. "It stopped. It was dead end at that point," said Tim Uyekl, an epidemiologist from the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

Uyekl, who was part of the investigating team, stressed that viruses are always slightly changing, and there was no reason for this mutation to raise alarm because the virus has not developed the ability to spread easily among people.

Scores of baby pelicans are starting along coast

CORDELIA, Calif. — Miles from the shoreline, 10 baby brown pelicans lounge by a pool in a roomy cage, large buckets of fish there for the taking. Just days ago, these birds could not feed themselves at all. Scores of starving baby pelicans — emaciated, cold and too weak to fly — are washing up on California beaches in disturbing numbers this spring.

The underfed California brown pelicans have stirred concerns over the endangered species, which in recent years has shown strong signs of recovery. Biologists say the recovery could actually be the source of the problem: There are more pelicans competing for food.

The International Bird Rescue Research Center in Cordelia, in the grassy hills about 50 miles northeast of San Francisco, has taken in almost two dozen pelicans this month, most of them near Santa Cruz and Monterey, all of them 2 to 4 months old.

The center's sister facility in San Pedro, south of Los Angeles, has cared for more than 50 Southern California birds since late May.

Fighting for the integrity of words

There are serious disadvantages to living with someone who writes for a living. For one thing, it isn't much of a living unless your name happens to be Dave Barry or Tom Clancy or J.K. Rowling or Garrison Keillor or Stephen King or — well, OK — it isn't much of a living for me. For another, there's that nagging understanding that if you ever say or do anything remotely interesting, clever, funny or dumb, it will probably end up on newspaper pages around the county. With your name spelled correctly.

JOSEPH WALKER

Like the time I wrote that our youngest son, Jon (note: no "n"), is at that awkward, in-between age: one minute he's watching cartoons, and the next minute he's online looking at pictures of Poppy Montgomery.

What? I didn't write that column yet?

Oops. The other thing is, sometimes stuff like this happens: the other night we went out for dinner and the waitress stopped by our table to ask if anyone wanted a complimentary drink.

"I'm good," Beth said. I looked at Beth. Evidently this is a look Beth has come to know and dread during the nearly 17 years she has been our youngest daughter. She rolled her eyes and started bracing herself for what she knew was coming.

"That's right, Beth," I said. "You're good. We're very proud of that. You are a good girl, and I'm sure the waitress is pleased to know that. But perhaps you should..."

"No, thank you," Beth said pointedly, smiling at the waitress and then glaring at me. "Well, I just think it's good to be good." I said, suddenly feeling the need to justify my appreciation for words and their meaning. "You should be proud of being good, and you shouldn't think it's good to be 'in my good' when you really mean 'No, thank you.'"

"But everybody says it today, Dad," Beth said, continuing her ongoing struggle to drag her father kicking and screaming into the 21st Century. "It's just the way people talk."

"Which is all the more reason to fight to protect the integrity of certain words," I said, warning to the effect, "I don't want just anyone saying 'I'm good.' This is not a phrase you should be allowed to use unless you are good. I don't want to go to some restaurant in Constantinople and overhear Osama bin Laden telling a waitress 'I'm good.' He's not good, for Pete's sake! He's Osama bin freaking Laden!"

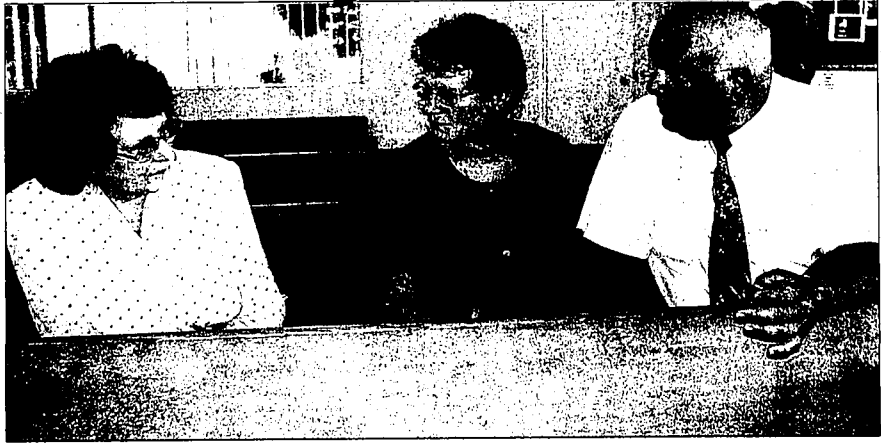

"Joe," my wife, Anita, said calmly, "people are beginning to stare."

"Besides, Dad," Beth added, "there's no such place as Constantinople anymore. It's Istanbul. And as much as you hate to travel, the only way you're going to overhear Osama bin Laden saying anything is if you bump into him getting a Slurpee at 7-11."

"Hey, as long as he doesn't say 'I'm good,'" I said. "I'm good."

Journalistic ethics (yes, I still have a few around here somewhere) require that I point out that I may have taken some artistic liberties within the last four paragraphs. In other words, I pretty much made them up. And I should probably give credit to They Might Be Giants for the phrase see WALKER, Page C3

Saturday's children

Evelyn Riley and Marlene Thietten chat with the Rev. Steve Kluchesky of the Seventh-day Adventist Church after a Saturday morning service.

Seventh-day Adventists find different ways to make their Sabbath special

By Julie Penge
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — On those Saturdays when Marlene Thietten is not wandering and meditating in the South Hills among the trees and wildlife, you'll find her in church.

For Thietten, it isn't so much the place where one worships that matters, but rather the day.

"I'm not always in church on the Sabbath," she said. "The main thing is that I give the day to God."

Still, it's good to get back to the brick building at the top of the grade that skirts Rock Creek Canyon on the west side of Twin Falls, she says.

"I'm always so glad to see everyone," she said. "It's sort of like coming home."

Thietten and some 150 others throughout the western Magic Valley attend church in the Seventh-day Adventist tradition in various places on Saturdays — instead of Sundays — because of the literal interpretation of the Bible.

Thietten refers to Genesis 1:27, which says, "By the seventh day God had finished the

"It's really easy to get into the do's and don'ts, but we don't push that so much. We do require our men and women not to work on the Sabbath, but there are some — like nurses or doctors or dairymen — who have to. But a waitress? We would work with the employer to have that day off."

— Seventh-day Adventist minister Steve Kluchesky work he had been doing; so on the seventh day he rested from all his work. And God blessed the seventh day and made it holy, because on it he rested from all the work of creating he had done."

"The Bible says on the seventh day He rested, which is Saturday," Thietten said.

Since other Christians worship on Sundays, selling the concept of Saturday worship is a challenge, says the Rev. Steve Kluchesky, pastor of the local Seventh-day Adventist church.

"It's not easy, not easy at all," he said. "But first of all, Jesus said if you love me, keep my commandments. If all your love the Lord with all your life and all your soul, then your life will truly be affected by that."

The congregation to which Thietten belongs consists of about 70 people who regularly attend Saturday services. From appearances, members are decidedly conservative, and Kluchesky doesn't disagree. But for some others in the Magic Valley who believe in Saturday worship, there are alternatives.

Another 35 or 40 people come together for communal worship, teaching and discussion on Saturdays at Judi Thietten's house. It's a more contemporary service; they forgo a sermon from a minister in deference to letting different members facilitate discussions, and they sing their hymns to the accompaniment of guitars and drums.

In Buhi, there is yet another

Adventism was founded during a period marked by millennialism by William Miller (1782-1849), a former U.S. army officer, who asserted that Christ would return to separate saints from sinners and inaugurate his 1,000-year kingdom on earth sometime in the year before March 21, 1844. After that date passed, Miller and his followers set a new date, Oct. 22, 1844.

The "Great Disappointment" was followed by a Mutual Conference of Adventists in 1845. Those who persisted concluded that Miller had misinterpreted the signs and that, though Christ had begun the "cleansing of the heavenly sanctuary," he would not appear until he had completed that task. These Millerites founded the Seventh-Day Adventists in 1863; other Adventist groups include the Evangelical Adventists and the Advent Christian Church. Seventh-Day Adventists observe Saturday as the Sabbath and avoid eating meat and using narcotics or stimulants.

group of about 35 that seems to bridge the philosophies of the other two groups, Kluchesky says.

After Marlene Thietten attends the traditional church service in Twin Falls, she'll join her fellow-worshippers for a vegetarian dinner. Meanwhile, the group that gathers at Judi Thietten's home might retire to a local park for a picnic at which they spend the rest of the day basking in the sun and talking with each other about God's blessings while the children play.

There are 14.4 million people worldwide — 2,500 of whom live in Idaho — subscribing to Seventh-day Adventist teachings. Kluchesky says their beliefs come from rather Puritan-like folks of the 1830s who adhered, exactly to strict rules, including when to celebrate the Sabbath.

They believed the Sabbath went exactly from sundown on Fridays to sundown on Saturdays. And the faithful were not to indulge in any kind of work, which included cooking.

Even now the Seventh-day Adventist Web site includes a timetable showing when the sun rises and sets every day of the year.

CHURCH VS. STATE

What did Thomas Jefferson really have in mind?

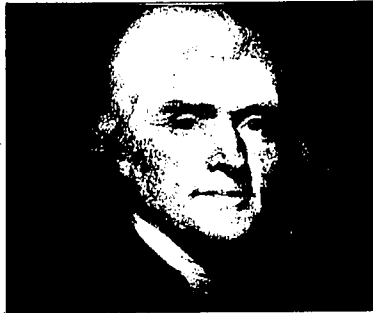

By Gregory Tomlin
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

When Miguel de Cervantes wrote "Don Quixote" in 1605, he employed a turn of phrase that has become a popular modern idiom: "The proof of the pudding is in the eating." The phrase has since evolved and been shortened, perhaps so much so that its original meaning has been obscured.

Cervantes was saying that one never knows if the pudding has been prepared correctly until it is tasted. Simply put, "Don't believe everything you read."

In the debate on separation of church and state, scholars from all sides have employed Thomas Jefferson in their arsenals, some citing his willingness to attend prayer services in federal buildings and others citing his contempt for organized religion and his opposition to the state's interference in his own religious thought life.

Just as Cervantes counseled, one should not judge the matter of Jefferson's opinions on religion or church-state separation before testing his thoughts, rather than the thoughts of men 200 years removed from his life and work.

Was Jefferson favorably disposed to Christianity? Did he believe that religious people should influence government? Was Jefferson a committed proponent of church-state separation, and why? What did this son of the Enlightenment really mean when he wrote to Baptists in 1802 of the need for a "wall of separation" between the church and the state?

"Jefferson was not a Christian ... With his own religious views outside the mainstream, he was keenly interested in protecting his right of dissent."

All are valid questions and may be answered by a look into the religious and philosophical viewpoints of the "silent member" of Congress, as Jefferson was known.

The opinions of the author of the Declaration of Independence — a document that mentioned God on multiple occasions — are most clearly manifest in his bill for establishing religious freedom in Virginia.

In the legislation (crafted in 1777 but not adopted until 1786), Jefferson wrote that coerced religious conformity only produces "habits of hypocrisy and meanness" leading to a corruption of true religion — an act of offense to "its Holy author." Magistrates the world over, he wrote, had promoted false religion throughout history by compulsory taxation in support of churches.

Jefferson's motive for writing the act was, to the public, very simple: He believed that all men had the inalienable right to express their religious opinions and should not be forced to support a religious establishment, a common vestige of Old Europe. But the freedom to follow his own religious opinions, formed early in his life, was at stake in equal measure.

As a precocious child in the Fredericksville parish, Jefferson sat under the tutelage of a Scottish churchman steeped in Calvinism, a man he later described as completely "uninspired" in his

Who wants to be a preacher?

Increasingly, it's a tough sell

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — As the daughter and granddaughter of Presbyterian preachers, Laura Ely Hudson knew plenty about the ministry growing up — mostly that she didn't want any part of it.

The low pay was one reason. And the long hours. Not to mention she was terrified of having to answer the most vexing spiritual questions at the toughest times in people's lives.

Experts say those and other concerns are discouraging young adults from pursuing careers in church ministry and have led to a 20-year decline among mainline denominations in the number of clergy under 35.

Churches, denominations and religious organizations are now trying to reverse that trend to ensure a new generation of pastors are ready to replace the many Baby Boomer ministers preparing to retire.

About 150 college and seminary students are gathering in Austin through Sunday to explore what it means to pastor a church — and what it doesn't.

They're participating in a conference sponsored by the Fund for Theological Education, an ecumenical group that tries to recruit and support young ministers.

In Hudson's mind, being a pastor used to mean boring, administrative tasks and tangled congregational relationships.

Until she attended last year's conference, she said, she never realized the ministry could let her blend a love of nature and environmental activism with a passion for songwriting.

Or that putting on a play could help a pastor open people's hearts to Jesus.

"It really encouraged me to think of ministry as not necessarily what you do but it's who you are," said Hudson, a 30-year-old Indiana native who just finished her first year at Austin Presbyterian Theological Seminary.

While the average age of students at American seminaries is going down, graduates are less likely to say they plan to become a church minister, according to the Association of Theological Schools, which accredits Protestant, Roman Catholic and Orthodox graduate schools of theology.

Just half of the men and 40 percent of the women who earned Master of Divinity degrees last year said their first choice after seminary was pastoring a church, a survey conducted by the association found. That's down from 60 percent and 56 percent respectively in 2000.

At the same time, research shows mainline denominations have had of the United Methodist Church are experiencing staggering drops in the number of ministers under 35.

A study released this year by the Lewis Center for Church Leadership at the Methodist-affiliated Wesley Theological Seminary found less than 5 percent of fully ordained Methodist pastors are under 35, down from 15 percent two decades ago.

About the same percentage of American Baptist and Episcopal ministers are in their 20s and early 30s, according to data gathered by the researchers.

Jefferson

educational methods. Jefferson showed his contempt for Calvinist theology — and its teaching that God predestines some to heaven and others to hell, whom he described it as a collection of "metaphysical insuities" and "demoralizing" and "atrocious" dogma.

Jefferson favored ethical systems of thought over religious dogma. He believed, as the Greek philosopher Epicurus wrote, that happiness was the goal of life. Happiness could come only through moral and noble living rather than through self-indulgence, the finer things of life such as art, literature, good wine and philosophical conversation, were permissible as long as they were consumed with restraint, self-discipline, and moral judgment.

Jefferson once advised, "Do not bite at the bait of pleasure till you know there is no hook behind it."

As he was attracted to Epicurean philosophy, he also was attracted to Stoicism and its emphasis on subduing emotion. Merging these two philosophies, Jefferson argued that one should never overindulge in any activity and never allow emotion to supersede rational judgment. From this philosophical base, he pursued a government based on moral and political reasoning.

Some religious ideas, however, did shape Jefferson's views on governing. He believed in the idea of a generally benevolent society. That theory of state he drew from the teachings of Jesus of Nazareth.

Though the president's fascination with the teachings of Jesus often earn him the title "Christian," Jefferson in no way assented to what churches believed were the church's "base" doctrines about the divinity of Christ. He called statements about Christ and his place in the Godhead a "relapse into polytheism" and "unintelligible" and "incomprehensible jargon."

Unitarianism, in Jefferson's eyes, was progress over the age of superstitious teachings of the so-called "Christian" priests. In fact, he hoped that the church would someday be reformed to bear witness to true "Christianity," Jesus, he believed, was no more than a man but the greatest of all philosophers.

In a letter to Thomas Short in 1819, Jefferson wrote that Jesus had come to liberate the Jews from their "depraved religion," characterized by social injustice. In writing as much, Jefferson disavowed the doctrine of sin in Christianity that recognized social injustice as an unfortunate and inescapable part of human life in "this age," but a problem that nonetheless would be rectified in "the age to come" by the risen Christ and reigning King.

So enamored with Jesus' teachings, and yet so convinced that the Nazarene was not divine, Jefferson carefully excised any references to miracles, claims of divinity and accounts of Christ's resurrection from the Gospels to construct his own pamphlet on the "pure morals of Jesus of Nazareth." He condensed the four Gospels to 17 concise chapters.

In short, Jefferson was not a Christian.

Author Edwin Gaustad writes in his biography of the president that, at his election, many Protestant pastors characterized the president as a deist, the religious son of George Washington, America's King David, Jefferson, after all, denied the most fundamental Christian doctrines. He would not even swear the Trinitarian oaths of the Anglican Church.

Rejected by the orthodox, Jefferson still valued Judo-

Christian ethics, the source of most Western political doctrine. He often read the works of John Locke, who wrote of the need for the influence of Christianity in the formation of government. Jefferson saw those who ruled with such principles in mind as valuable to government in expanding a generous and moral society.

In 1814, Jefferson wrote to a friend: "God has formed us moral agents ... that we may promote the happiness of those with whom he has placed us in society by acting benevolently towards all. And that was the sum total of what God required in the pursuit of righteousness, in Jefferson's wayward understanding of Christianity."

With his own religious views outside the mainstream, Jefferson was keenly interested in protecting his right of dissent. He found a ready ally in Baptists, who in spite of their ancient Trinitarian faith agreed that all men should have the right to believe as they wish, even if in error.

John Leland, a Baptist contemporary of Jefferson, wrote in 1791: "Government has no more to do with the religious opinions of men, than it has with the principles of mathematics. Let every man speak freely without fear, maintain the principles he believes, worship according to his own faith, either one God, three gods, no god, or twenty gods; and let government protect him in doing so."

Leland advocated the protection of government for religious worshippers. But would one such as Jefferson, who supposedly advocated separation of church and state, be so bold as to say such a thing?

Yes, he was so bold. In fact, this desire is at the heart of Jefferson's belief that a necessary prerequisite to a free church in a free state was a "wall of separation" between the two. When the two are separated, both are protected.

When the two are separated, both suffer.

Jefferson's phrase about the wall of separation in his 1802 letter to Baptists in Danbury Conn., has earned him much criticism and praise, interpreting the phrase requires a proper understanding of historical context and the language of this noble ideal of religious freedom.

When Jefferson wrote the letter, the state of Connecticut still had a Congregational establishment. As did Massachusetts, even though the First Amendment had been adopted at the federal level. As president, Jefferson wanted to extend disestablishment to that state level, believing that what was good for the federal government was good for the states.

Jefferson's federal government was the example. He resisted instituting federal religious holidays, such as a day of thanksgiving or fast days. On this reason, religious proclamations and worship on what ever day the people wished was a right he wrote that could never be safer than in the hands of the people "where the Constitution has deposited it."

But disestablishment did not mean that government and religious bodies could have no relationship. The government was to serve as a guardian, establishing no church, making no law with regard to religion, offering no support of it, and ensuring that churches would always be free to preach, teach and minister as they wished.

Whether Jefferson borrowed subtly or not from the Baptist Roger Williams may never be known, but the non-conformist tradition of Williams certainly flows through Jefferson's pen.

Williams, who lived a century prior to Jefferson, wrote in 1644 that there should be erected "a wall of separation between the garden of the church and the wilderness of the world."

Adventist

There are those who are still conscientious about following the rules of worship, and they'll make sure all the cooking is done on Fridays before sundown, Kluchesky says. But many have become more relaxed.

Judi Thietzen, for example, says it doesn't bother her to dash to the grocery store to purchase a few items. She would never save her weekly shopping for the Sabbath, however.

Kluchesky is fine that that. "It's really easy to get into the do's and don'ts, but we don't push that so much," she said. "We do require our men and women not to work on the Sabbath, but there are some, like nurses or doctors or dairymen — who have to. But a waitress? We would work with the employer to have that day off."

Chris Smith, who joined the Seventh-day Adventists six years ago, says he has finally found the place where he can truly understand God's commandments. He said he had been searching endlessly for a church with that would portray the true teachings of Jesus. "It was trying to find out who

God really was," Smith said. "One day I was extremely depressed and at my wife's end, and I prayed to the Lord. 'What is your intent if there is a truth in this world, would you please reveal it to me?'"

Just three days later he was given some literature by visiting church members, which Smith found so interesting that he looked up more information on the Internet. That was all it took; he started reading the Bible, related strongly to a literal interpretation and eventually he and his wife joined the church.

Smith says joining the community of Seventh-day Adventists changed his life, and holding Saturday as the Sabbath is simply part of it. "I had asked us to keep the Sabbath holy," he said. "The Sabbath, according to the Bible is Saturday, so that is what we do. It's a special day. It's a relaxing day, a time to give our minds a rest. I talk about how God is good to us."

Says Marlene Thietzen, "The Sabbath is God's gift to us."

HARD #76
Fill in the grid so that every row, every column, and every 3x3 box contains the digits 1 through 9. That's all there is to it. There's no math involved. The grid has numbers, but nothing has to add up to anything else. You solve the puzzle with reasoning and logic. Find the answers for todays puzzle on page C-19.

A Times-News route delivers the extra cash you need.

Laura's paper route helps her haul around a lot more than papers.

Need extra cash for a car payment? Consider starting your own business as a Times-News distributor. All over the area, our independent paper carriers are running their own businesses. They're up early and are usually done with their work day by 6:00 am.

Being a Times-News distributor is challenging and rewarding work. And it's surprisingly profitable. Experience the freedom of being your own boss. If you've been looking for a part-time business to pick up some extra cash, call 735-3346.

There's plenty of extra money to be made before sunrise. Times-News magicvalley.com

JUMBLE

Unscramble these four jumbles, one letter to each square, to form four ordinary words.

Ans: THE " (Answers Monday)

THAT SCRAMBLED WORD GAME

by Henri Arnolds and Mike Angilton

A word game advertisement featuring a cartoon of a man in a suit and a woman in a dress. The man is holding a sign that says "THE CONSERVATIVE CANDIDATE WAS ELECTED BECAUSE HE HAD". The woman is holding a sign that says "Has a better government". The man's speech bubble says "Fewer taxes, smaller government". The woman's speech bubble says "Has a better government".

Anyone who believes that reading bridge books does you no good should look at today's deal, from the semifinal match between Richard Schwartz and Russ Ekelblad (the eventual winners) in the U.S. Trials last summer.

At both tables the club lead against four spades was won by dummy's jack, and declarer played a trump to the eight, jack and queen. Back came a club, won in dummy. After a spade to the 10 king and ace, the only remaining issue was whether West should take his diamond ace, holding declarer to 10 tricks, or duck, hoping to set the game. At one table the defender ducked; at the other table he took the ace.

OK, you've had a chance to look at all four hands. Which defender missed his chance to set the game?

Surprisingly, it was East on his apparently irrelevant one-club which might have set the game by following with the spade 10 on the first round of the suit! Put yourself in declarer's position after the first trump goes to the 10, jack and queen. You win the club return in hand and lead a low trump to the three ... and which trump from dummy? If trumps are 4-1, you need to put in the six, so you have to weigh up that likelihood as opposed to East's having found this nice deceptive play from A-10-8 or from 10-8 doubleton. Even if you get the play right, East has taken a few years off your life — and earned your respect!
