State cap forces schools to lengthen bus rides

By Joshua Palmer
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — State lawmakers are showing little sympathy for school districts that are struggling to meet transportation costs.

The Twin Falls School

District was among four other school districts which were denied requests to appeal penalties for exceeding a state cap on school transportation costs. The Idaho Legislature has entrusted the Idaho State Board of Education with enforcing the cap — and hearing district appeals.

Twin Falls will now take $47,000 from its general fund to pay the difference between the district's actual transportation costs and the amount the state will reimburse.

"We kind of threw ourselves at the mercy of the board," said

Wiley Dobbs, Twin Falls School District superintendent. "But we suffered like everyone else with the high cost of gasoline."

School districts are reimbursed for transportation costs based on the number of students being transported. Districts must budget their transportation costs based on the previous year's expenditures. But the budgeting process does not account for sudden increases in fuel cost, fluctuations in the number of riders or other unforeseen conditions.

However, in 2003, Idaho

Legislators amended a state code that capped school transportation costs. Idaho reimbursed districts for 105 percent of transportation costs last school year, but it will lower the cap to 103 percent this year.

Wreck, fuel spill close Addison Avenue East

Emergency response crews from the state of Idaho, West End Fire and Rescue and Rock Creek Fire District contain a fuel spill Wednesday on Addison Avenue East. Some 4,000 to 5,000 gallons of fuel spilled when a car crashed into the tanker.

4,000 to 5,000 gallons of gas spilled

By Michelle Dando
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Just before 10:30 Tuesday evening, a dust storm distracted the Jackmans as they were watching television. Then came the noise.

"I've never heard anything like it," said Troy Jackman. It was the sound of a 2006 Buick Century hitting an 11,000-gallon fuel tanker. The crash's impact tipped the tractor-trailer onto its side, spilling an estimated 4,000 to 5,000 gallons of gasoline onto the ground. No one was seriously injured in the accident, which closed portions of Addison Avenue East Wednesday.

The wreck also displaced the Jackmans from their home for the evening. Regional Hazardous Materials crews worked through the night to contain the fuel spill and ensure it didn't catch fire. The gasoline spilled onto soils on the tree farm kitty-corner from Jackman's house and is not expected to seep into groundwater.

Sex, drugs and cadavers

New anti-crime laws hit the Idaho law books

By Rebecca Boone
Associated Press writer

BOISE — If you've got a dead body, report it. Don't even try to stock up on cold medicine. And playground bullies beware, because starting July 1, a host of new laws are hitting the books.

Idaho lawmakers passed more than 400 new laws during the 2006 legislative session, ranging from the mundane — routine budget appropriations — to the strange — a ban of inhaled alcohol devices and a law allowing motorcyclists to run red lights in certain situations.

Many of the laws focused on crime, with some increasing the penalties for sex offenders and others designed to make it harder for people to manufacture illicit drugs. One such law limits residents to buying 3 grams of the popular decongestant drug pseudoephedrine at a time. That's the equivalent of about 300 Sudafed brand pills. The law is designed to stop people from buying the quantities of the drug needed to make methamphetamine.

Another law penalizes those who fail to report dead bodies. The law closed a loophole discovered in 2004, after Rexburg authorities found the long-deceased remains of Lorraine Kaneko, 58, and her 33-year-old daughter Laura Kaneko in a trailer where Lorraine's husband, Kenichi David Kaneko, still lived.

Lawmakers also hoped to make school playgrounds safer by expanding the powers of school superintendents, principals and teachers to suspend students who bully others.

And starting in July, motorcyclists who run red lights will get a break — sort of. A new law allows the cyclists to go through red lights if they are undetected by the signal.

Two fires gut Valley View Apartments

By Pedro G. Salem
For the Times-News

HAILEY — Firefighters from across the valley fought flames Wednesday morning at Valley View Apartment Building hours after leaving the same scene the night before.

Crews from the Hailey, Bellevue, Wood River Fire & Rescue and Ketchum departments arrived at Valley View Building A, which has eight apartments, at 8:40 p.m. Tuesday to fight a second-floor fire.

The fire was seemingly extinguished and firefighters began leaving the scene by 10 p.m.

About 5:30 a.m. Wednesday, flames and smoke began pouring out of the building again and the same departments were called back.

This time, the fire was larger and crews cut holes in the building, deployed ladder trucks and poured thousands of gallons of water onto the flames.

The fire was under control by 7 a.m.

No information on injuries or cause for either fire was immediately available.

TWIN FALLS

— An overnight fire Wednesday at the Valley View apartment complex in Halley has displaced several families, creating an immediate need for housing and other services. Red Cross District Director Whitney Beem says the first challenge that their volunteers faced today was finding a place for the five families to stay since hotels are booked for the holiday weekend. And while volunteers found hotels for the victims for the next week, they are working to help victims solve the next crisis: finding a place to live after next week.

 Brockman as he signed dozens of documents to set the hospital, set up a $15 million community health trust and to lease the hospital building back to St. Luke's. "A lot of work went in to this agreement."

A lot of work, indeed. The county has looked into selling the hospital a number of times over the years.

Advisory committees were formed, studies were conducted and recommendations were made, but they never went anywhere.

Several years ago, a local board was created to oversee Mountain States Tumor Institute services in the Magic Valley and soon people began discussing the idea of creating a regional health-care network. Local physicians were especially supportive.

A local committee began working on a proposal that was presented to county commissioners while hospital officials touted the proposal at endless service-club meetings and town hall get-togethers.

But county commissioners wanted more before signing on the dotted line. So the proposal

Supreme Court upholds Texas redistricting plan

By David C. Savage
Los Angeles Times

"We now can expect an even more vicious battle between the political parties as they redraw district lines every two years for partisan gain."

— Mary G. Wilson, president of the League of Women Voters

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court gave politicians new legal license Wednesday to redraw election districts aggressively to benefit the party in power, as it upheld the mid-decade redistricting plan engineered by former House Majority Leader Tom DeLay and Texas Republicans.

By clever line-drawing, DeLay and the Texas legislature — with both houses newly under GOP control in 2003 — remade its delegation in Congress, helping turn a 17-15 Democratic majority into a 21-11 Republican majority in 2004.

The bold move signaled an escalation in partisan warfare. Before, the redrawing of the electoral districts was a once-a-decade battle that followed the release of new census numbers.

Legal experts and political strategists said Wednesday's ruling will encourage Republicans in other GOP-dominated states to redraw their districts to give themselves a bigger majority.

It is not clear that Democrats will be able to do the same. In the ruling Wednesday, the court stated that the Voting Rights Act generally forbids splitting up blocs of minority voters. That makes it harder to create more Democratic districts.

Mary G. Wilson, president of the League of Women

Voters, called the decision "extremely disappointing," saying it will encourage politicians to become serial mapmakers. "We now can expect an even more vicious battle between the political parties as they redraw district lines every two years for partisan gain," she said.

On Wednesday, a five-member Supreme Court majority said that DeLay's plan, even if it were drawn for a purely partisan purpose, did not violate the Constitution and its guarantee of equal protection under the law. But the court did find one district to be illegally drawn because it diluted Hispanic voting power. The overall ruling applies to other electoral districts as well, including those for state legislatures.

Electoral districts are usually drawn by politicians in state capitols, the justices noted, and it is hard to say when such a politically drawn plan becomes too partisan.

Justice Anthony M. Kennedy, speaking for the court, cited two other reasons for upholding the Texas plan. First, he said, the task of redistricting belongs to elected legislators. In 2001, a panel of federal judges redrew the Texas districts because the state legislature — then divided between a Republican Senate and a Democratic House — could not agree on a plan. So the plan pressed by DeLay in 2003 was the first to win the approval of the state's elected legislators.

There is nothing inherently suspect about a legislature's decision to replace mid-decade a court-ordered plan with one of its own," Kennedy said.

Second, he said, it is not clear that the GOP-friendly plan drawn by DeLay was less fair than the Democratic-friendly plan it replaced.

Prior to 2003, Democratic leaders had used their power in Austin to preserve a Democratic majority in the state's congressional delegation, even as most Texans voted for Republicans. Four years ago, 59 percent of Texans voted Republican and 41 percent Democratic in statewide tallies, yet more Democrats than Republicans won election to the House of Representatives. By this measure, DeLay's plan "can be seen as fairer" than the one it replaced, Kennedy said.

Cadet sentenced to 6 months in prison for sexual misconduct

By Matt Apuzzo
Associated Press writer

NEW LONDON, Conn. — A military jury sentenced a U.S. Coast Guard cadet to prison and kicked him out of the service Wednesday for entering a classroom for sexual favors.

Cadet Webster M. Smith, the first student court-martialed in the academy's 130-year history, received a six-month sentence in a military prison.

He was acquitted of rape but faced up to five years and seven months for extortion, sodomy, indecent assault and other charges. Defense attorneys for Smith, 23, asked the jury to spare him jail time, saying the stigma of his conviction will follow him forever. He will not graduate from the Coast Guard Academy and must register as a sex offender in Texas.

"I am ashamed to have been the first cadet to have been court-martialed, but I am proud of my decision to fight for my career and freedom," Smith told the jury.

Prosecutors had asked the jury to send Smith to prison for three years, saying he had disgraced the Coast Guard and betrayed the nation's trust.

"You get to tell your fellow Coast Guardsmen, with every one looking at our service and our academy, whether or not that's a big deal," said Cmdr. Ronald Bald, the prosecutor.

The case involved four female cadets, but the jury acquitted him of sexual misconduct charges, including rape, involving three of them. The primary charges on which he was convicted stemmed from a series of sexual encounters with a classmate in her dorm room.

The classmate said she was too afraid to protest because she feared Smith would reveal a secret that could have jeopardized her Coast Guard career.

Smith, who testified in his own defense, said the sex was consensual. Smith was not allowed to graduate with his class this spring and will be kicked out of the academy because of the convictions, attorneys said. A formal dismissal has not been made.

The weeklong trial included graphic testimony about Smith's relationships with several female cadets. On Wednesday, the Houston man's family and girlfriend portrayed his actions as the typical courting of a college student but said the court-martial changed his life and brought him closer to God. With no DNA or forensic evidence in the case, prosecutors relied on the testimony of Smith's on-again, off-again girlfriend to carry the rape case. She testified that she had drunk two bottles of wine at a party in Annapolis, Md., last summer and couldn't remember having sex with Smith.

Officials in northeastern Pa. order up to 200,000 to evacuate

By Mark Scollaro
Associated Press writer

WILKES-BARRE, Pa. — Up to 200,000 people in the Wilkes-Barre area were ordered to evacuate their homes Wednesday because of rising water on the Susquehanna River, swelled by a record-breaking deluge that has killed at least 12 people across the Northeast.

Thousands more were ordered to leave their homes in New Jersey, New York and Maryland. Rescue helicopters plucked residents from rooftops as rivers and streams surged over their banks, washed out roads and bridges, and cut off villages in some of the worst flooding in the region in decades, with more rain in the forecast for the rest of the week.

Wilkes-Barre, a city of 43,000 in northeastern Pennsylvania coal-mining country, was devastated by deadly flooding in 1972 from the remnants of Hurricane Agnes.

It is protected by levees, and officials said the Susquehanna was expected to crest in a few feet from the tops of the 41-foot floodwalls.

But Luzerne County Commissioner Todd Vonderheid said officials were worried about the effects of water pressing against the floodwalls for 48 hours. The floodwalls were completed just three years ago.

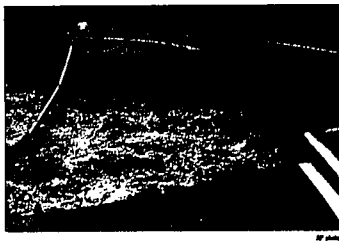

"It is honestly precautionary," Vonderheid said. "We have great faith the levees are going to hold."

An estimated 150,000 to 200,000 people in the county of about 351,000 were told to get out by nightfall. The evacuation order applied to more than half the residents of Wilkes-Barre, as well residents of several outlying towns, all of them flooded by Agnes more than three decades ago.

A dozen helicopters from the Pennsylvania National Guard, the state police and the Coast Guard were sent on search-and-rescue missions, plucking stranded residents from rooftops in Bloomsburg, Sayre and New Milford. Hundreds of National Guardsmen prepared to distribute ice, water and meals ready to eat.

Flooding closed many roads in the Philadelphia area, including the Pennsylvania Turnpike.

"We lost just about everything — the cars, the clothes, even the baby's crib," said James Adams, who evacuated his family's home near Binghamton, N.Y., after watching their shed float away and their cars get submerged. "I'm not sure what we are going to do."

The soaking weather was produced by a low-pressure system that has been stalled just offshore since the weekend and pumped moist tropical air northward along the East Coast. A record 4.05 inches of rain fell Tuesday at Binghamton. During the weekend, the same system drenched the Washington and Baltimore region with more than a foot of rain.

Although the bulk of the rain moved out of the area Wednesday, streams were still rising from the runoff, and forecasters said more showers and occasional thunderstorms were possible along the East Coast for the rest of the week.

Marine: Song about killing of Iraqi family was a joke

The Associated Press

RALEIGH, N.C. — A Marine corporal who sang in a home-made video about killing members of an Iraqi family said Wednesday that the song was a joke and was not intended to offend anyone.

Cpl. Joshua Bellie, 23, said the video was his way of "blowing off steam to a bunch of Marines and soldiers."

"It doesn't take a whole lot of common sense to realize it was a joke," he said. "In 'Hadi Girl,' a four-minute video circulated on the Internet, Bellie tells a cheering audience about a Marine who falls in love with an Iraqi woman and goes home with her. Family members shoot the woman and then confront him with automatic weapons, prompting him to retaliate.

Bellie's retaliation was filmed while he was stationed in Iraq and was posted anonymously on the YouTube Web site, but was later removed. Bellie learned of the posting after returning from his deployment in March. He is now assigned to Light/Attack Helicopter Squadron 167 at Marine Corps Air Station New River, adjacent to Camp Lejeune.

"I'm a very nonpolitical person. I know that sounds very strange coming from a Marine," Bellie told The Associated Press in a telephone interview. "I know about me and my little world. I write music and I sing music. I never intended to hurt anyone's feelings."

Marine Corps officials said Tuesday that Bellie has not violated military law. He could face administrative action, which can include informal counseling, they said. Bellie said in a statement Tuesday that he plans to release a professionally recorded version of the song within a few weeks.

The Council on American-Islamic Relations, which brought Bellie's video to the attention of the Pentagon, cautioned against a release, spokeswoman Ibrahim Hooper said Wednesday.

Democrats urged to court evangelicals

By David E. Ross
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Barack Obama chastised fellow Democrats on Wednesday for failing to "acknowledge the power of faith in the lives of the American people," and said the party must compete for the support of evangelicals and other churchgoing Americans.

Sen. Barack Obama, D-Ill., pauses prior to a meeting in Tel Aviv, Israel, in January. Obama chastised fellow Democrats on Wednesday for failing to "acknowledge the power of faith in the lives of the American people."

"Not every mention of God in public is a breach to the wall of separation. Context matters," the Illinois Democrat said in remarks to a conference of Call to Renewal, a faith-based movement to overcome poverty. "It is doubtful that children reciting the Pledge of Allegiance feel oppressed or brainwashed as a consequence of muttering the phrase 'under God,'" he said. "Having voluntary student prayer groups using school prayer to meet should not be a threat, any more than its use by the High School Republicans should threaten Democrats."

Obama said millions of Christians, Muslims and Jews have traveled similar religious paths, and that is why "we cannot abandon the field of religious discourse.... In other words, if we don't reach out to evangelical Christians and other religious Americans and tell them what we stand for, Jerry Falwell and Pat Robertson will continue to hold sway."

Obama coupled his advice with a warning. "Nothing is more transparent than inauthentic expressions of faith: the politician who shows up at a black church around election time and claps — off rhythm — to the gospel choir."

"Secularists are wrong when they ask believers to leave their religion at the door before entering the public square."

Honest Abe to get color on $5 bill

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Honest Abe is going to be more colorful after all.

The government said Wednesday it had reversed course and decided to redesign the $5 bill with a splash of color to keep counterfeiters at bay.

Originally, the Bureau of Engraving and Printing had planned to exempt the $5 bill and Abraham Lincoln, the 16th president, from the design makeovers introduced over the past three years for the $50, $20 and $10 bills.

But officials said they changed their minds in part so they could respond to a new scam in which counterfeiters are bleaching the ink off $5 notes and then printing counterfeit $100 bills on the bleached paper.

"We have to stay ahead of any threats we see evolving," the director of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, Larry Felix, said in an interview with The Associated Press.

"Currency is a trust medium. Once you lose trust, you can't gain it back," he said. Felix said the new colors for the $5 bill and other design changes had not been chosen, but probably will resemble the changes made for the other denominations.

Those included introducing pale colors into the background of the bills and adding various features in color, such as an American eagle in blue on the $20 bill and the Statue of Liberty's torch in red on the $10 note.

Felix said Lincoln's portrait will remain on the $5 bill, as will the Lincoln Memorial on the other side, but the presentations of both images may be updated slightly.

Under the timetable, the bureau will settle on a new design for the $5 bill by the fall of 2007 and hope to begin introducing the new notes in the first quarter of 2008.

The announcement of the design change is being made now to provide time for the nation's vending machine industry and transit companies to make the necessary changes in their equipment.

In the case of mass transit agencies, they often need to seek additional funds in their budgets to make the equipment changes that will be needed, requiring more lead-time. Felix said the bureau, which is responsible for printing all U.S. currency, seeks to make sure the changeover occurs with the least amount of disruption.

Insurgents offer to halt attacks

By Steven R. Harst and Qasim Abdul-Zahra
Associated Press writers

BAGHDAD, Iraq — Eleven Sunni insurgent groups have offered an immediate halt to all attacks — including those on American troops — if the United States agrees to withdraw foreign forces from Iraq in two years, insurgent and government officials told The Associated Press on Wednesday.

Withdrawal is the centerpiece of a set of demands from the groups, which operate north of Baghdad in the heavily Sunni Arab provinces of Salahuddin and Diyala. Although much of the fighting has been to the west, those provinces are increasingly violent and attacks there have crippled oil and commerce routes.

The groups who've made contact have largely shunned attacks on Iraqi civilians, focusing instead on the U.S.-led coalition forces. Their offer coincides with Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki's decision to reach out to the Sunni insurgency with a reconciliation plan that includes an amnesty for fighters.

The Islamic Army in Iraq, Muhammad Army and the Mujahedeen Shura Council — the umbrella group that covers eight militant groups including al-Qaida in Iraq — were not party to any offers to the government. Naseer al-Ani, a Sunni Arab politician and official with the largest Sunni political group, the Iraqi Islamic Party, said that al-Maliki should encourage the process by guaranteeing security for those making the offer and immediately reject their demands.

"The government should prove its goodwill and not establish red lines," al-Ani said. "If the initiative is implemented in a good way, 70 percent of the insurgent groups will respond positively."

Al-Maliki, in televised remarks Wednesday, did not issue an outright rejection of the timetable demand. But he said it was unrealistic, because he could not be certain when the Iraqi army and police would be strong enough to make a foreign presence unnecessary for Iraq's security.

In Washington, Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld said that President Bush's view has been and remains that a timetable is not something that is useful. It is a signal to the enemies that all you have to do is just wait and it's yours.

"The goal is not to trade something off for something else to make somebody happy, the goal is to succeed," he said.

Bush has said U.S. troops will remain in Iraq for years to guarantee the success of the new Iraqi government. However, American military officials have said substantial reductions of the current force of 127,000 U.S. troops could be made before the end of 2007.

Israeli escalates action over captured soldier, arrests top Hamas officials

By Steve Carlin
Associated Press writer

GAZA CITY, Gaza Strip — Israel sent tanks into northern Gaza and arrested the Palestinian deputy prime minister and dozens of other Hamas government officials early Thursday, escalating its response to the abduction of one of its soldiers.

The moves came after thousands of troops moved into southern Gaza Wednesday and Israeli warplanes roared over the summer home of Syria's president, who is blamed for harboring Hamas leaders.

Palestinian witnesses said Israeli tanks and bulldozers entered northern Gaza before daybreak Thursday, adding a second front to the Israeli action in Gaza. The Israeli military had no comment on the latest incursion.

Adding to the tension, a Palestinian militant group said it killed an 18-year-old Jewish settler kidnapped in the West Bank.

Palestinian security officials said they believed the body of Eilat Asheri had been found in the West Bank city of Ramallah.

No deaths or injuries were reported in the Israeli actions so far. But the warplanes knocked out Gaza's electric power plant, raising the specter of a humanitarian crisis.

The Hamas-led government warned of "epidemics and health disasters" because of damaged water pipes to central Gaza and the lack of power to pump water.

Increasing pressure on Hamas within the Palestinian territories, Israeli forces arrested more than 30 lawmakers, according to Palestinian security officials.

Among those detained were Palestinian Deputy Prime Minister Nasser

Shaer, Labor Minister Mohammed Barghouti and two other ministers in the West Bank.

The security officials said two others were arrested in the town of Jerin, and Israeli media reported a roundup of Hamas lawmakers in Jerusalem and other locations.

Although the Israeli action was sparked by the abduction of the soldier, Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Olmert's government also is alarmed by the firing of homemade rockets on Israeli communities around Gaza and support for Hamas in the Arab world, especially from Syria.

Israeli soldiers run to reload an Israeli mobile artillery piece at a position near Kibbutz Nahal Oz, just outside the northern Gaza Strip, Wednesday.

A Sarcophagus found inside tomb KV63 is unveiled for the media at Egypt's Valley of the Kings, outside Luxor, Egypt, on Wednesday.

Tomb, thought to be that of king's mum, contains flowers but no mummies

By Alfred de Montezogno
Associated Press writer

LUXOR, Egypt — Archaeologists hoped the first tomb discovered in the Valley of the Kings in 80 years would hold the mummy of King Tut's mother. They opened the last of eight sarcophagi Wednesday, revealing no mummies but, finding something almost as valuable: embalming materials and ancient woven flowers.

Hushed researchers craned their necks and heads inside the stiflingly hot underground stone chamber as Egyptian antiquities chief Zahi Hawass slowly cracked open the coffin's lid — for what scientists believe is the first time in more than 3,000 years.

But instead of a mummy, as archaeologists had expected, the coffin revealed a tangle of fabric and rusty-colored dehydrated flowers woven together in laurels that looked likely to crumble to dust if touched.

"I prayed to find a mummy, but when I saw this, I said it's better — it's really beautiful," said Nadia Lokma, chief curator of the Egyptian Museum in Cairo. The flowers were likely the remains of garlands, often entwined with gold strips, that ancient Egyptian royals wore around their shoulders in both life and death, she said.

"It's very rare — there's nothing like it in any museum. We've seen things like it in drawings, but we've never seen this before in real life — it's magnificent," Lokma said.

Dug deep into white rock, the tomb is known only by the acronym KV63 — the 63rd tomb found in the Valley, a desert region near the southern city of Luxor used as a burial ground for pharaohs, queens and nobles between 1500 and 1000 B.C. The burial chamber was discovered accidentally last year by U.S. archaeologists working on the neighboring tomb of Amenemset.

OPINION

Just don't call it amnesty

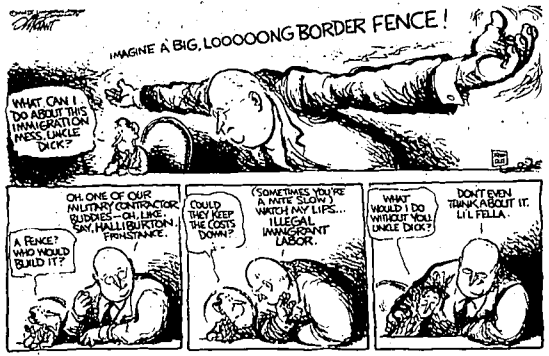

When the going gets tough, the tough do not hold more hearings. But since Republicans in the House want to spend the summer studying immigration, here are two questions for them:

If Republican voters and talk-show hosts weren't screaming "amnesty" at you, could you work out a compromise with the Senate?

Just how smart is it to keep dodging this issue?

By smart, of course, I don't mean what would be good in the long term for your party, much less your country. You can't afford such distractions. You must consider the big picture: your job.

You're afraid you'll lose in November unless you're as tough on immigration as Brian Bilbray, who has been sounding like Lou Dobbs. But he got only 49 percent of the vote in a Republican district, and he was blessed with a verbal gaffe by an opponent who seemed to be encouraging immigration to vote illegally. Don't count on this in your race. Pay more attention to a recent national poll of likely Republican voters conducted by the Iarrance Group for the Migration Institute. These Republicans liked the House's seal-the-border approach to immigration less than the comprehensive approach favored by the Senate and President Bush: Combine tough enforcement with a chance for the illegal immigrants already here to pay a fine, become legal and eventually earn citizenship.

EDITORIAL

The jury's still in with Open Court program

The Twin Falls School District spent hundreds of dollars getting into a controversial elementary reading program lauded by the federal government. When you spend that kind of dough on curriculum, you don't cut your losses after the first few bumps.

Sawtooth elementary schools Superintendent Wiley Dobbs and school board members implemented the program after seeing success in schools that used it, thanks in part to a Reading First grant from the state. That grant absorbed much of the cost for the program.

Some critics may say otherwise with the Open Court reading program that was fully implemented by the district this past school year. Some will question Open Court's validity, especially after K through 3 reading scores took a dip on a critical spring 2006 reading test.

But administrators, teachers and parents know it's too early to ditch it.

The Idaho Reading Indicator, a key gauge for state students in the early grades, showed a disturbing dip in early scores released by the state Department of Education. In the Twin Falls School District, the number of students reading at grade level in spring 2006 — as opposed to a year ago — dropped among kindergartners, first and third graders. The number of second graders at grade level stayed the same.

Doobs, however, says schools will need more time to see the full benefits of the program. He noted those district schools that have been in longer "have shown better signs of improvement," although no testing data has been released to verify that.

He's also waiting for additional data from the Idaho Standard Achievement Tests for second- and third-grades, as well as the Texas Primary Reading Inventory.

As for the complaint about a scripted format, Dobbs said time will make it more openly applicable for teachers.

"The teachers I've spoken to, as they become more comfortable, they're able to interject more of their personality," he said. "Some of their own strategies are used more to implement the program."

With more data and more time, the district should be able to have a more complete assessment of how Open Court is working.

If Open Court is all it's cracked up to be, or even if it's not, the district has an obligation to see how the full investment pans out.

Standard Achievement Tests for second- and third-grades, as well as the Texas Primary Reading Inventory.

As reliable and trusted as the IRI has been to Idaho schools, it's just one assessment, and more data will be necessary to see the full impact of Open Court.

The 2005-06 school year was the first in which Open Court was used by all Twin Falls elementary schools.

But Oregon Trail and Bickel elementary schools have been in for three years, while Harrison and Lincoln just finished their second year. Joining them this year were Perrine and Morningside and Standard Achievement Tests for second- and third-grades, as well as the Texas Primary Reading Inventory.

Fellowship hall a recovery option for addicts

On my retirement in San Jose, Calif., several years ago

America, that was considered a form of amnesty by nearly 60 percent of the respondents. But if he had to go back to his native country and apply, then only 22 percent called it amnesty.

To Mike Pence, that poll results is a "window of opportunity." Pence, the Indiana Republican who leads the House conservative caucus, is dead set against the Senate immigration bill, which he considers amnesty. But he thinks there's a deal to be made before the election by giving immigrants an incentive to go to their home countries to get a visa.

Pence wants to beef up border security immediately, and then once the measures are in place two years later, open up "Ellis Island centers" in Mexico and Central American countries that would quickly match foreign workers with U.S. companies.

If the worker passed background checks and an U.S. employer promised to hire him, he'd get a high-tech ID card and a guest-worker visa. During the first three years of the program, there'd be no cap on the number of visas.

Negotiating the details of this plan would be tricky, particularly giving immigrants the chance they deserve to eventually become more than just temporary workers. It would require an increase in the number of future slots available for permanent residents and citizens, and that increase would be a tough sell with some Republicans.

But if you're trying to please the voters who object mainly to the presence of illegal immigrants, Pence's plan would work. Besides inducing illegal immigrants here to come out of the shadows, the program would also discourage new immigrants from sneaking across the border.

Why bother if you could get a visa along with a job?

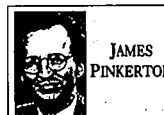

U.S. companies wouldn't have to break the law to hire immigrants, and they'd face new sanctions if they employed anyone without the right ID and visa. The result would be a more secure border, fewer illegal immigrants, more legal workers for companies and not as many Republicans complaining about amnesty.

You might still think it's safer to dodge the whole issue until after the election, but that's a risk too. Republicans rank the immigration right below terrorism and national security in their hierarchy of issues. They think the current system is a mess, and they blame Washington for it.

That means you. Maybe, after the hearings this summer, you can plead with voters in November for just a little more time to solve the problem — one more reprieve. But the voters may figure that's an even worse form of amnesty.

Has the Gray Lady turned Bush yellow?

JAMES PINKERTON

surveillance was "absolutely essential." And apparently the SWIFT-tapping program has scored some significant successes: the feds captured the mastermind of the 2002 bombing in Bali that killed more than 200 people, predominantly Australians, as well as a Brooklyn man who laundered huge cash transfers to al-Qaida agents in Pakistan.

And of course, the results in the last five years, since 9/11, speak for themselves: Something has been going right on the homeland security front. The recent arrests of seven men in Miami, accused of plotting, however vaguely, to blow up the Sears Tower in Chicago, is a reminder that homeland security authorities are vigilant.

Much of the political reaction to the Times story has been fierce: Rep. Peter King, R-N.Y., chairman of the House homeland security committee, called on the attorney general to "begin an investigation and prosecution of The New York Times — the reporters, the editors and the publisher." King added, "Were at war, and for The Times to receive information about secret operations and methods is treasonous." Similar criticism, using the F-word, churched across cable news, talk radio and the blogosphere.

Yet all of this might sound a bit familiar, because The Times' latest revelations come on the heels of similar Times revelations last December, concerning the government's effort to wiretap terrorists' phone calls.

Those earlier disclosures led Gabriel Schoenfeld, writing in the March issue of Commentary magazine, to assert that it was "perfectly clear" that The Times could and should be prosecuted under the Espionage Act of 1917.

After 6,700 words of close legal analysis, Schoenfeld asked whether "we as a nation can afford to permit the reporters and editors of the great newspaper to become the unselected authority that determines for all of us what is a legitimate secret and what is not." Schoenfeld's answer:

"Like the Constitution itself, the First Amendment's protections of freedom of the press are not a suicide pact." In other words, stop The Times. But now The Times has done it again.

So why hasn't the Bush administration done anything? One answer, of course, is that the wheels of justice grind slow — and unseen, at least for a while. But a better answer comes from Fox News' Bill O'Reilly, who argues that the Bush administration has been "intimidated" by the media and by allied critics in Congress.

That would explain The Boston Globe's story Monday, detailing how the Bushies, who once asserted that the phone taps were perfectly legal just the way they were, are now willing to accept closer congressional supervision. So secure a media-political victory for The Times.

And so the Gray Lady has every reason to think it will win this latest battle, too. The fate of the war on terror, of course, is another story — but that's not the busy, meddling George W. Bush to worry much about that.

Afghan and Iraqi leaders on shaky ground

The situation the United States and its allies now face in Afghanistan and Iraq is one almost without precedent. In two countries where we used our military might to rout the menacing dictatorial regimes running things, we now find ourselves sponsoring governments with notably shaky holds on popular support.

The leaders of those governments - Hamid Karzai in Afghanistan and Nouri al-Maliki in Iraq - came to power through the influence of American diplomacy and American guns. But, in a historic reversal of fortune, they now hold this country hostage to their decisions and their fate.

In Afghanistan and Iraq, we won military victories that appeared to be decisive enough to allow for the creation of new national governments. In both countries, we provided protection for the conduct of democratic elections and we celebrated their success.

While Karzai was clearly appointed for the job by the American embassy and Maliki was chosen only after the United States had blackballed the original nominee of the dominant Shiite coalition, both men were judged by President Bush to be authentic leaders, committed to building independent, united and peace-loving nations.

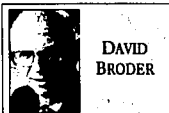

It remains to be seen if that confidence is justified. This week Pamela Constable, The Washington Post's correspondent in Kabul, reported in a Page 1 story that "many Afghans and some foreign supporters say they are losing faith in ... Karzai's government, which is beset by an escalating insurgency and endemic corruption and is unable to protect or administer large areas of the country."

Constable, who knows the country well, quoted a foreign military official in Kabul, speaking anonymously, who said, "The president (Karzai) had a window of opportunity to lead and make difficult decisions, but that window is closing fast. ... Karzai is the only alternative for this country. ... And if he goes down, we all go down with him."

I asked Sen. Richard Lugar, the Republican chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, about Constable's story and he said that he thought the situation in Afghanistan "is problematic" but not necessarily changing for the worse. He said Karzai is "able and energetic," but "his ability to project his authority" is limited by the meagerness of his forces and the presence of U.S. and NATO troops. Lugar noted that Karzai had recently come out publicly that the United States and its allies had been laggard in going after the Taliban and had accused Pakistan once again of harboring those terrorists - suggesting that the targets of his criticism perhaps were throwing the blame back on him.

But the disaffection Constable described is rooted in the corruption that has been documented in squandered aid programs, in the continued financing of the long-established drug trade and in the revival of the Taliban, which has launched an offensive that has claimed hundreds of lives.

DAVID BRODER

Meanwhile in Iraq, Maliki, having completed his Cabinet, this week announced his grand plan for national "reconciliation," only to stumble over the issue of "amnesty." Initial reports were that he intended to appeal to the Sunnis, who are the heart of the resistance, by offering pardons even to those who had taken up arms against the Americans -- if they would promise to abandon the fight. That was immediately condemned by U.S. politicians of all stripes - including those, such as Sen. Russ Feingold of Wisconsin, who favor an early withdrawal of American troops.

When Maliki formally unveiled his proposal, he seemed aware that he was on shaky ground. Amnesty would be offered only to those "who were not involved in crimes, war crimes and crimes against humanity," he said. "Killers and criminals," he said, would be "punished with justice."

That might satisfy the senators, but it raised fresh doubts about the appeal of such an "amnesty" if those who are targeting Americans and making up the rival militias contesting for control of the country.

Lugar said he is skeptical of anyone's timetable for reducing the U.S. military commitment to Iraq because "there is a palpable sense of danger" hanging over Baghdad. "It is going to be difficult to get the militias to cease and desist," he said, "as long as the Sunnis feel the insurgents are their ticket to a place at the table" - that is, real influence in the Shiite-dominated government. Changing that power balance "will take constitutional reform," Lugar said - and that will not be easy. A huge American investment of money and lives now rests on two men with a loose grip on power.

Teen addiction services need to reform

The Times-News published one release almost word-for-word. I would have thought that some expression on the part of the paper would have been appropriate. It didn't happen.

One can only believe the paper did not find any value in the fact that the state of Idaho had a program for adolescents virtually for free.

This writer had volunteered his efforts for well over 30 years and $1 million in personal donations. The real losers are the young who, in the crisis of their lives, had access to the return of sanity.

With the disease of alcoholism, this is not unusual - for thousands of years, denial has removed the real impact of the disease.

Young people today are in the greatest of peril because the adult community fears, almost above anything else, the return of prohibition.

How else can one explain the tolerance of death and destruction in the schools and colleges, almost without mention from the power structure, along with 14,000 deaths from drunk drivers?

The board of directors of the Walker Center believes the program can be re-established in the near future, but it will take more than their wishes to make it work.

I would hope to incorporate the re-opening with the establishment of a new national program called "Families Against Intoxication." The only control proposed by this organization would be based on the Columbia University findings that if the young do not abuse alcohol until they are 21, they are almost half-safe never to do so.

It could be hoped that the combined power of the Gates-Butler foundation could begin bringing an adolescent pilot together by world experts. All children are in great need and deserve the best.

T.R. had it right on immigration issue

Immigration is a huge issue in the United States. We must understand the problem facing us and develop a proactive policy to benefit the United States of America.

President Roosevelt had it right years before. We must take action now.

Theodore Roosevelt's ideas on immigrants and being an American in 1907: "In the first place, we should insist that if the immigrant who comes here in good faith becomes an American and assimilates himself to us, he shall be treated on an exact equality with everyone else, for it is an outrage to discriminate against any such man because of creed, or birthplace, or origin.

But this is predicated upon the person's becoming in every facet an American, and nothing but an American ... There can be no divided allegiance here. Any man who says he is an American, but something else also, isn't an American at all. We have room for but one flag, the American flag. ... We have room for but one language here, and that is the English language ... and we have room for but one sole loyalty and that is a loyalty to the American people."

Property tax appeals rise in Bonner County

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — Nearly 3,000 Bonner County property owners with as many as 5,000 parcels — a quarter of the parcels in the county — have appealed their property valuations.

"It's pretty staggering," Joe Young, a county commissioner, told the Bonner County Daily Bee.

"Some of those appealing their assessments have multiple properties."

Because of so many appeals, the Idaho Tax Commission extended the county's hearing deadline from July 10 to July 24.

"We're hopeful we can get through all of these appeals," Young said.

"We told the tax commission that unless the assessor's office pitches in to help out by calling applicants to take care of their assessments, we won't be able to get through these hearings by July 24."

Property taxes are a hot issue in the state, especially in northern Idaho where property values have been increasing rapidly.

Gov. Jim Risch has suggested calling a special session of the Legislature to deal with the property tax issue, which lawmakers couldn't agree on during the regular session earlier this year.

Officials said record numbers of appeals have been filed in Benewah and Shoshone counties.

Large numbers of appeals have also been filed in Kootenai County.

"It was nuts, really nuts," Kootenai County Assessor Mike McDowell told The Spokesman-Review.

Hundreds of people came to the office to file appeals by Monday's deadline.

"By 4 p.m. they were lined up all the way down to the basement," said McDowell. "That's three flights of stairs."

Assessed property value in Bonner County increased 69 percent from 2005 to 2006, and jumped 40 percent in Kootenai County during the same period.

According to the Idaho Tax Commission, other resort areas that saw hefty increases in assessments were Sun Valley, McCall, and Teton County.

Property owners who appeal assessments usually try to prove the assessment is too high by comparing it with recent property sales in the neighborhood.

The county assessor's office provides reasons for the assessment is accurate.

Boards of equalization, made up of county commissioners, hear each case and make a decision.

Schools get $33M from Idaho lottery

By Christopher Smith
Associated Press Writer

BOISE — School districts and public buildings reaped a record jackpot from Idaho Lottery sales Wednesday, with the state-sanctioned gambling program divvying up $33 million in profits for the year.

Sales of Idaho Lottery tickets were $131 million for the fiscal year that ends Friday — a new record at 16 percent higher than last year's $113 million total. Scratch tickets made up 61 percent of this year's sales followed by 34 percent generated through sales of the multi-state Powerball game tickets.

This was the third consecutive year of record-setting profits for the state lottery.

Since the games of chance began in July 1989, $333 million has been doled out to the K-12 public school system and the Idaho Permanent Building Fund.

This dividend represents a 27 percent increase in what we were able to return to the state last year," said Idaho Lottery Director Roger Simmons, during a check presentation at a Boise elementary school that was being repainted under a $9,000 contract paid for by last year's lottery dividend.

"The money we give back is for projects like this, projects that Idaho schools would not be able to do without this supplemental funding."

The annual dividend is split evenly between public schools and the state building fund.

The share of this year's $16.5 million dividend for education to each of the 114 school districts is based on average daily attendance. Districts then have authority to decide which individual schools have the greatest need for one-time spending projects.

"These are the dollars that come to schools when the unexpected happens — the boiler goes out or the roof leaks," said State Superintendent of Public Instruction Marilyn Howard.

Eighty percent of the $16.5 million given to the state building fund this year will go toward constructing facilities on Idaho's state-run college campuses. Last year's dividend paid for dozens of projects, such as renovating the Life Science complex at Idaho State University, improving the nursing education building at Boise State University, upgrading elevators at the University of Idaho library and expanding the industrial agricultural complex at Lewis-Clark State College.

"The need is there for new buildings and maintenance of our campuses," said Laird Stone, president of the Idaho

State Board of Education. "This money will be used wisely."

Lottery officials said the record sales and dividends were due to aggressive marketing of scratch ticket games and a 50 percent jump in Powerball ticket sales, thanks to 11 jackpots of at least $100 million this year.

"Idaho's robust economy also has helped a lot, obviously," said Idaho Lottery Commission Chairman Roger Jones.

Simmons said the commission's decision to switch vendors for online services for the first time in lottery history would create additional savings in operations next year.

The new contractor, IntraLot USA of Duluth, Ga., offered the state a significantly lower cost-per-ticket charge than the lottery's current vendor, Rhode Island-based GTECH.

Criminal probe of University of Idaho may pass deadline

BOISE (AP) — Latah County Prosecutor Bill Thompson faces a statute of limitations deadline Friday in his criminal investigation of University Place, the University of Idaho's attempt to expand into Boise.

He declined to say specifically how he would deal with the deadline, but said the investigation would continue.

"If we have to make use of the court system to protect our investigation, we will," Thompson told The Associated Press on Wednesday. "We'll certainly take whatever steps we need to so we can protect the investigation and get at the truth."

University Place was planned as a $136 million, three-building project by the University of Idaho to expand into Boise.

Only one building was finished.

The University of Idaho Foundation, UI's private, nonprofit fundraising arm, ran into problems in 2002 when Idaho's economy faltered and the university lent the foundation money for the project without the required permission from the state Board of Education.

Civil cases have been settled, but the criminal investigation continues.

An important date in that investigation is June 30, 2007, the end of the fiscal year and when financial dealings involving University Place would have appeared in the foundations and UI's accounting books.

Any criminal activity that occurred up to that date would fall under a five-year statute of limitations.

However, Thompson said University Place existed in accounts until at least January 2003.

Also, he said there are legal maneuvers that can be used to essentially stop the clock on the statute, if a judge agrees.

He declined to say whether he was planning to ask a judge to do that.

Meanwhile, he said he is looking into information given to him by Assistant U.S. Attorney Allan Garten of Portland, Ore., about University Place.

"There is an enormous amount of information generated," Thompson told The Idaho Statesman.

"We want to make sure that we aren't overlooking something."

He said no decision has been made about filing charges.

"The decision on filing charges is up in the air," he said. "I have no intention of trying to have this case in a courtroom in an adversarial situation, until our investigation is complete."

Hype Time

Preseason publications prognosticate college football season

By Mike Christensen
Times-News writer

For college football fans, the arrival of summer means one thing — it's time to whip yourself into a gridiron frenzy. The season may still be two months away, but that doesn't mean it's too early to drink your favorite team's Kool-Aid, to soak up the hype and bask in the positive spin gushing from every college football program in the country.

From squads that struggled in 2005, you'll hear lines like this: "Last year we just weren't a team. This year, we're playing so well together as a unit. We're working so much harder and our chemistry is so much better."

As for those who succeeded in '05, they'll spout out things such as, "Last year was great. But we're not satisfied. We know we can be even better and we're all working as hard as we can to make it happen."

Listening to the quotes that fill the months of the summer and the two-a-days of August, one would think every team in the county is vying for a national title.

For the two Division I-A teams in the Gem State, the upcoming campaign is filled with similarities and differences. Both Boise State University and the University of Idaho are breaking in new coaches this fall. First-year head coach Chris Peterson takes over for the departed Dan Hawkins in Boise, while Dennis Erickson's career comes full circle with his return to the Vandals, a team he built into a winner 1992-1995.

Both coaches are known for their offensive ingenuity, and both hope to field high-scoring squads in the Western Athletic Conference.

But, the comparisons end there. The Broncos went 9-4 in 2005 and return 15 starters. Many college football experts predict Boise State to have a solid chance at an unbeaten season and a spot in a lucrative Bowl Championship Series game in January.

Expectations aren't so lofty for the Vandals — except in the minds of their reinvigorated fans. Idaho is rebuilding made after a 2-9 season and most gridiron gurus see no more than four wins for the Vandals this season against a brutal schedule that includes road games at Michigan State, Washington State and Oregon State.

On Oct. 6, as Athlon Sports put it, "Days after Erickson was hired, the Vandal faithful bombarded the school's website with so many requests for season tickets that the site crashed. Idaho's success is in danger of crashing as well, simply because of a cruel non-conference schedule that may leave Erickson wondering why he returned to the school he led to prominence in the early 1980s."

What's truly in store for Boise State, Idaho and the rest of the college football world in 2006? No one

What they're saying about the Broncos

Athlon
National Rank: No. 27
WAC projection: First
AIW-WAC preseason first-team players: Andrew Browning, Sr., DL; Corey Hall, Sr., LB; Mary Tadmam, Jr. S; Quinton Jones, Sr., FR
Analysis: The season could turn on two players — quarterback Jared Zabransky and tailback Ian Johnson. Both need to step up, and both need to stay healthy. Zabransky, in particular, must cut down his turnovers and improve his accuracy to make the Broncos the offensive juggernaut they were from 2002 to 2004. If that happens, Boise State is primed for a run at the fifth BCS bowl.

The Gold Sheet
National Rank: N/A
WAC projection: First
AIW-WAC preseason first-team players: N/A
Analysis: Even with (Dan) Hawkins off to Colorado, we don't expect the party to end soon in Boise, which has won 53 games the past five years while (Chris) Peterson has patiently waited for his shot at the top spot. Indicators point to another big year, with a fifth-straight WAC crown likely and possible involvement in the expanded BCS equation.

National Rank: No. 19
WAC projection: First
AIW-WAC preseason first-team players: Ryan Clady, So., T; Andrew Browning, Sr., DL; Corey Hall, Sr., LB; Gerald Alexander, Sr., SS; Kyle Stringer, Sr., P
Analysis: The Broncos always have a tough D and this year return nine starters and should be one of the WAC's top D's... The big question is if (Chris) Peteren can step in and be as successful as (Dan) Hawkins was. This team is capable of running the table in the WAC, and going undefeated on the season as well.

Analysis: The Broncos are lined up for a run at the BCS's new fifth bowl slot. They're motivated by a disappointing 9-4 season, and the troops are intrigued by the coaching change. The schedule is favorable, with Oregon State the key non-conference home game... The most difficult road game is at Utah. If (Jared) Zabransky improves, this can be a 12-0 team.

What they're saying about the Vandals

Athlon
National Rank: No. 109
WAC projection: Seventh
AIW-WAC preseason first-team players: D.J. Dykes, Jr. S; Mike Barrow, Sr. P
Analysis: The key for Idaho this season will be to keep healthy, something it couldn't do a year ago in a 2-9 season. The only positive that came from last season was the experience many of the younger players received from being forced into action. Still, this is a team that has room to improve in every phase of the game and must do that, plus catch some breaks, to have a competitive season.

The Gold Sheet
National Rank: N/A
WAC projection: Sixth
AIW-WAC preseason first-team players: N/A
Analysis: Nothing against Nick Holt, but if you think Dennis Erickson isn't an upgrade at head coach, we've got some oceanfront property in Phoenix to sell. And even with Holt's defensive credentials, the Vandals still allowed nearly 40 ppg the last two years. For now, at least, Idaho's best chances are in shootouts, and Erickson's offensive pedigree at least suggests the Vandals have a better chance to compete in those sorts of donkeybrooks this fall.

Phil Steele
National Rank: No. 101
WAC projection: Sixth
AIW-WAC preseason first-team players: Mike Barrow, Sr., K
Analysis: Idaho had a banged-up offensive line and QB (Steven) Wichman was not able to show off his full talent under duress. This year, Wichman is back playing behind a stronger O-line with a good set of receivers and the top set of running backs in the league. They should have a potent offense. The Vandals also have seven starters back on defense and will be much stronger on that side of the ball. The WAC schedule is not easy nor is the overall schedule, but I think the Vandals should at least double last year's two-win total and move well up in the WAC standings.

Sporting News
National Rank: No. 110
WAC projection: Eighth
AIW-WAC preseason first-team players: D.J. Dykes, Jr., S; Mike Barrow, Sr., K
Analysis: Dennis Erickson's return to Idaho has energized the fan base, but it might not be much fun once the season begins. The schedule serves up September road games against Michigan State, Washington State and Oregon State. The conference schedule isn't much better, with trips to Louisiana Tech, Hawaii and Fresno State. That looks like trouble for a team that hasn't won more than three games in a season since 2000.

Raptors take Bargnani with No. 1 pick in draft

NEW YORK (AP) — Andrea Bargnani went first. Then came the trades.
The Toronto Raptors selected Bargnani with the No. 1 pick Wednesday night in an unpredictable NBA draft that saw four of the top seven picks switch teams by the middle of the first round.
LaMarcus Aldridge of Texas went second to the Chicago Bulls, starting a flurry of trades that would also include the fourth, sixth and seventh picks.
Aldridge's rights were later dealt to Portland for the rights to Tyrus Thomas, who had been chosen fourth, and forward Viktor Khryapa.

"Right before they said my name, they said, 'They are going to call your name in a minute, but don't worry about it, they are going to trade you,'" Aldridge said.
The Trail Blazers weren't done dealing. They acquired the rights to Randy Foye, taken seventh by the Boston Celtics, along with Raef LaFrentz, Dan Dickau and cash for $4 million.

A-Rod's walk-off homer sends Yankees past Braves

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Alex Rodriguez turned bases to cheers with a two-run homer in the 12th inning, rallying the New York Yankees to a 4-3 victory over the Atlanta Braves on Wednesday.

After Marcus Giles put Atlanta ahead with a solo shot in the top half, Rodriguez finally delivered the big hit those demanding Yankees fans have been clamoring for all month.

Jorge Sosa (2-10) walked Jason Giambi with one out. Rodriguez, mired in a 2-for-20 slump, then drove a 3-1 pitch far beyond the left-field fence for his 16th home run. The 2005 AL MVP clapped his hands and blew a kiss to the sky on his way to first, then tossed his helmet high in the air as he neared the plate for a warm greeting from teammates.

Ben Villone (1-1) escaped a bases-loaded jam in the top of the 12th to keep New York within one. Jason Giambi hit his 23rd homer for the Yankees, and Rodriguez finished with three RBIs.

The struggling Braves dropped two of three in the series to 5-21 in June.

What began as a tense pitchers' duel between Atlanta's John Smoltz and New York's Chien-Ming Wang turned into a battle of the bullpen — a weakness all season for the Braves.

Twins 6, Dodgers 3

MINNEAPOLIS — Johan Santana pitched seven shutout innings and Torii Hunter hit a grand slam to lead Minnesota past Los Angeles for its seventh straight victory.

Joe Mauer went 2-for-3 with a walk to improve his major league-best batting average to .392. The 23-year-old catcher, Minnesota's designated hitter on Wednesday, went 11-for-13 in the three-game series and had hits in eight consecutive at-bats before grounding out in the second inning. He is batting .484 (46-for-95) in June.

New York Yankees' Alex Rodriguez reacts after hitting a two-run, walk-off home run against the Atlanta Braves during the 12th inning Wednesday at Yankee Stadium in New York. The Yankees defeated the Braves 4-3.

Santana (9-4) allowed two hits and struck out nine to increase his big league-leading total to 124. The left-hander finished June 5-0 in six starts with a 1.05 ERA.

Orioles 7, Phillies 4, 1st game

Orioles 12, Phillies 5, 2nd game

BALTIMORE (AP) — Ramon Hernandez homered and drove in four runs to key a 20-hit outburst that helped Kris Benson earn his ninth win, and the Orioles breezed past Philadelphia.

In the first game, Erik Bedard (8-6) allowed five hits over seven shutout innings. Chris Ray struck out two in a perfect ninth for his 20th save in 21 chances.

Phillies rookie Cole Hamels (1-4) gave up seven runs and nine hits in five innings, losing his fourth straight start.

Hernandez also homered in the opener and totaled six RBIs for the day. His three-run shot in the second game highlighted a four-run fourth that put Baltimore up 9-3.

Ryan Howard hit two homers to take the major league lead with 27, and Chase Utley and David Dellucchi also connected in the second game for the fading Phillies, who have lost seven straight and 15 of 18.

Tigers 5, Astros 0

DETROIT — Justin Verlander pitched three-hit ball for eight innings and surging Detroit took advantage of several defensive miscues by Houston.

"The Tigers, who own the best record in baseball, have won six straight and 17 of their last 20 games. Houston has lost six of seven, its worst slump since dropping six in a row from May 5-10.

Red Sox 10, Mets 2

BOSTON — Pedro Martinez got a standing ovation in his return to Fenway Park and left early after his worst performance with the New York Mets.

He allowed eight runs in three innings.

The Red Sox extended their winning streak to 11 games, all against NL teams and their longest in 11 years, behind another brilliant outing by their newest pitching star. Josh Beckett yielded two runs and five hits with seven strikeouts and one walk in 7 2-3 innings, five days after retiring his first 16 batters in a 10-2 win over Philadelphia.

Devil Rays 3, Marlins 1

MIAMI — Casey Fossum pitched five strong innings to help Tampa Bay end the Marlins' eight-game home winning streak.

Fossum (8-3) allowed one run and three hits. He walked five and struck out two to beat Florida for the first time. Brian Meadows pitched the ninth for his third save.

Reds 7, Royals 2

CINCINNATI — Ken Griffey Jr. hit the last of Cincinnati's four homers, and Aaron Harang shut down a Kansas City offense that had been on a surge.

The Reds hit their first three homers off Scott Elarton (3-9) during a five-run third inning that set the tone and helped Cincinnati snap a four-game losing streak at home. The Reds are 18-20 at Great American Park.

White Sox 4, Pirates 3

PITTSBURGH — The Pirates set a team record with their 13th consecutive defeat, blowing a three-run lead in the seventh inning and losing to the

White Sox

Juan Uribe's bases-loaded triple keyed Chicago's four-run comeback. The Pirates put two runners on in the ninth against closer Bobby Jenks, but their best hitter, Jason Bay, struck out to end it.

Cardinals 5, Indians 4

ST. LOUIS — Jhonny Peralta's throwing error, one of two by the Cleveland Indians in the ninth inning, helped the Cardinals end an eight-game losing streak.

Catcher Kelly Shoppach, who had entered in a double switch in the eighth, dropped So Taguchi's pop fly just in front of home plate to start the inning for a two-base error and Aaron Miles' RBI double off Bob Wickman (1-3) with one out tied the score. Miles was on third on David Eckstein's routine two-out grounder, a throw in the dirt by Peralta that eluded first baseman Victor Martinez.

Blue Jays 6, Nationals 1

TORONTO — Ted Lilly pitched six shutout innings to win his third consecutive start and Frank Catalanotto drove in three runs to help the Blue Jays beat Washington.

CHICAGO — Derrek Lee homered for the first time in almost three months and Ronny Cedeno blooped a go-ahead double during a five-run eighth inning that rallied Chicago past Milwaukee to end a five-game losing streak.

Lee, who came off the disabled list Sunday after missing 59 games with a broken wrist, hit his first homer since April 8, a two-run shot off Dan Kolb (2-2) that tied the score and started the comeback.

Roddick keeps cool; Williams rolls

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — All the ingredients were in place for Andy Roddick to throw a tantrum Wednesday at Wimbledon.

Struggling against someone ranked 101st, gesturing and muttering after miscues, Roddick already had lost one set and was dangerously close to dropping a second when he thought a line call was missed.

He flung his racket toward the chair umpire and walked over. The crowd hushed in anticipation. And then — nothing. Roddick bit his tongue, resumed playing, worked his way out of trouble and beat Janko Tipsarevic of Serbia 6-7 (5), 6-4, 7-6 (6), 6-2 with the help of 20 aces to avoid yet another first-round upset at a major.

"I pump-faked the argument with the umpire," the No. 3-seeded Roddick said with a smile. "I just tried to calm down as much as possible. I reminded myself that talking to him probably wasn't going to change anything at that point."

That he found himself in such a tough, nearly three-hour match set him apart from most of the top women, who one by one breezed through their assignments.

Three-time champion Venus Williams, 2001 champion Lina Krasnenko and No. 1 Ana Ivanovic each worked less than an hour to win first-round matches, none losing more than two games. Five-time major winners Justine Henin-Hardenne and Martina Hingis were similarly dominant in reaching the third round.

Several were asked whether such lopsided matches hurt the push for equal prize money at Wimbledon, the only Grand Slam event that has a women's singles champion less than the men's. Even British Prime Minister Tony Blair weighed in on the topic Wednesday, telling the House of Commons he supports the idea of equal pay.

"We aren't involved in arguing the points of time spent on court, sets played," said Williams, who wrote a column on the subject for an English newspaper. "That's a moot topic. What it's really about is being treated equal as a human being."

On the court, Williams was as good as she gets for stretches against Bethanie Mattek of the United States, compiling a 25-3 edge in winners and erasing the only break point she faced with a 108 mph ace.

Mattek is ranked 103rd, is 13-

Andy Roddick celebrates a point during his 6-7 (5), 6-4, 7-6 (6), 6-2, win over Janko Tipsarevic of Serbia, during their Men's Singles, first-round match on the Number One Court at Wimbledon, Wednesday.

17 this year and was simply thralling to be on Centre Court, earning some extra cash for sponsor labels hastily sewed onto her unique ensemble of halter top, tube top, shorts and knee-high socks.

"It was kind of hard to do anything," Mattek said of trying to handle Williams' shots during a 6-1, 6-0 loss in 51 minutes, the same duration as Sharapova's 6-2, 6-0 victory over Anna Sinashnova. "I wish I could have stayed out there a little longer."

Tim Henman and local fans felt the same way about his appearance on Centre Court. The four-time Wimbledon semifinalist wasn't seeded for the first time in 10 years, and had the misfortune of facing Roger Federer.

"That lasted for all of 85 minutes, as three-time champion Federer overwhelmed Henman 6-4, 6-0, 6-2 for his record 43rd consecutive victory on grass. "It's the best player I've ever played against," Henman said. Federer has a perfectionist's streak, which he demonstrated while losing all of five points in the second set. Two came when he erred on forehands, and both times he slammed a ball in anger.

With up-and-comer Richard Gasquet in the first round, and Henman in the second, Federer faced his draw the toughest he's faced when seeded No. 1. So what did he do? He dropped 13 games.

"That I came through that convincing obviously gives me along the way. The rest of us, we'd love to play well all the time. It's probably not going to happen."

Roddick was hardly the only top man who had problems. No. 9 Nikolay Davydenko was knocked off by 127th-ranked qualifier Alejandro Falla, No. 17 Robby Ginepri lost to fellow American Mardy Fish, and No. 5 Ivan Ljubicic didn't pull out a 6-3, 6-4, 5-7, 3-6, 11-9 win until Feliciano Lopez double-faulted on the Reds' eighth match point.

Roddick won the 2003 U.S. Open, finished that season ranked No. 1 and was runner-up to Federer at Wimbledon the last two years. But Roddick came to the All England Club this time having exited two of the previous three Grand Slam tournaments in the opening round, and with a 24-11 record in 2005.

Puffing his cheeks on each groundstroke Wednesday, Roddick gave away points with unforced errors in the first-set tiebreaker to put himself in a hole. He got going in the second set, with one all-out drive for a volley winner that was so impressive Tipsarevic applauded. That came on a break point; Roddick saved all nine he faced.

"I'm glad I could rely on my serve today," he said. "That's probably the difference between a win and a loss."

knows for sure. But that doesn't mean there aren't plenty of folks willing to take a shot at forecasting the football future. So, today we offer predictions from four noteworthy publications.

All the talk and banter and predictions may not be worth much once the season kicks off. But for those already anxious for the football feast that will be spread before us from late August to early January, a late-June nibble can go a long way toward staving off the hunger.

Patrick Roy among elites into Hockey Hall of Fame

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. — In his rookie season with the Montreal Canadiens, Patrick Roy was given a stack of videotapes featuring goals using a stand-up style.

Roy was told to study them, but he continued to rely on his instincts, sprawling all over the ice to stop pucks and eliciting his reaction from Jacques Lemaire, his first coach in Montreal.

"But Roy kept doing it his way, creating a signature style and becoming arguably the greatest goalie in NHL history while playing for the Canadiens and then the Colorado Avalanche.

Wednesday, in what he called the "crowning achievement" of his career, Roy, 40, was elected unanimously to the Hockey Hall of Fame.

"When you start your career, you never think it would be possible one day," Roy said of his induction. "It's a dream come true for me."

In addition to Roy, Terrance "Dick" Duff was elected to the hall in the player category and NHL chairman of the board Harry Manes was elected in the builder category.

After winning two Stanley Cup championships with the Canadiens, Roy was traded to the Avalanche in December 1995. He led Colorado to its first Stanley Cup title that season and to another in 2001.

Roy is the NHL's all-time leader in victories with 551 in the regular season, and he is the only NHL player with three Conn Smythe Trophies as the most valuable player in the postseason.

"Patrick Roy is a true legend of the game," Avalanche president and former general manager Pierre Larocq said in a statement. "He is a unique inductee for the Hockey Hall of Fame as one who truly influenced and redefined the goaltending position."

Official in NHL: Bruins hire Dave Lewis as coach

BOSTON — Dave Lewis is headed from the Stanley Cups and stars of Detroit to the failures and fresh faces of Boston.

The Bruins hired him as their coach, an official within the NHL Wednesday, one day after Mike Sullivan was fired following a last-place finish in the Northeast Division in his second season.

The official spoke to The Associated Press on the condition of anonymity because the Bruins hadn't made an announcement. That is expected at a news conference Thursday afternoon to be attended by Peter Chiarelli, who is scheduled to officially take over as general manager on July 15 after completing his duties as Ottawa's assistant GM.

Lewis spent 15 seasons as an assistant coach for the Red Wings before succeeding Scotty Bowman as head coach after they won their third Stanley Cup in six years in 2001-02. He held the job for two seasons, but his contract

Myers and the Phillies are both sorry, and they should be Brett Myers is sorry. Really sorry. Really, really sorry. We know this because he had his agent send a statement saying he was.

It's sorry that he embarrassed himself and his family. Sorry that Philadelphia Phillies might get distracted from a season going nowhere.

So sorry that he's taking some time off to think about it all.

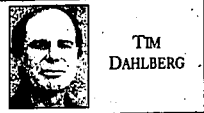

Interesting, because before that the only thing Myers was sorry about was that people were making such a big deal over his arrest for allegedly punching his wife.

"I'm sorry it had to go public," Myers said the other day.

"Yeah, it's better to keep those domestic violence things private. It can be so inconvenient otherwise."

Memo to Myers: Next time you feel like dragging your wife around by the hair and beating her on the face, as witnesses said you did, do it at home, not on a Boston street corner with people around.

Baseball fans are by and large a tolerant lot. They've watched the game ruined by steroid use and the greed of both players and owners, yet still come to the ballpark in record numbers.

TIM DAHLBERG

But they draw the line at guys accused of beating their wives. That's why Myers was booted Saturday in Boston when he pitched despite his arrest a day earlier, and why he likely would have even been booted at home if he had not taken a leave of absence.

The fans get it, but unfortunately the Phillies didn't. They were going to keep trotting their best pitcher out to the mound every five days even as the uproar built in Philadelphia over his arrest.

Now it turns out the Phillies are sorry, too.

Sorry that they're being taken to task for not speaking out sooner. Sorry that the club is being portrayed as indifferent to domestic violence.

We know this because Phillies president David Montgomery finally broke days of silence to say so. He issued a statement of his own saying how tough it was to balance everyone's rights without getting it all wrong.

Yeah, it's tough. But so is getting hit in the head by someone twice your size.

That's what witnesses said happened early Friday when a number of them called 911 to report that Myers was violent — dragging a woman by the hair and hitting her in the face.

"I watched him just haul off and smack her in the face," witness Sky Egidio told the Boston Globe. "This was violent. This was wrong."

Boston police found a sobbing Kim Myers sitting on a sidewalk, the left side of her face swollen. Myers told officers her husband — the Phillies' press guide says he was an amateur boxer up to the age of 13 — hit her twice in the face with his fist.

Myers didn't seem to think it was a big deal at first. Baseball players are used to having everything taken care of for them, and he probably thought someone would take care of this, too.

He went ahead with his regular start, and it wasn't until Tuesday that he issued a statement acknowledging that his conduct was "inappropriate."

At the same time, he said he was sorry for any embarrassment he caused anyone.

It was, no doubt, embarrassing for Kim Myers. It also had to be embarrassing to have to bail out your husband after he allegedly hit you, and even more embarrassing to walk around with a bruised and swollen face.

If it's any consolation, she's not alone. Advocates for battered women say one in every three or four women will be the victim of domestic violence at some time in their lives, and that those doing the battering tend to do it again and again.

"It doesn't end unless the person perpetrating the crime gets help and is held accountable," said Esta Solor, president and founder of the Family Violence Prevention Fund.

The Phillies certainly weren't going to do that.

This seems to be the norm lately for baseball teams. Darrin Young is now working out and getting ready to rejoin the Detroit Tigers after pleading no contest to a domestic violence charge.

He allegedly choked a 21-year-old woman in a suburban Detroit hotel two months ago.

Throw at a batter or charge the mound, and you'll get suspended. Slug your wife or choke a woman and, hey, we'll let the courts deal with it.

"We need to get the message out that we're not going to tolerate this kind of behavior," Solor said. "We don't want our kids to see it and we don't want our role models to participate in it."

Hopefully, Myers will take advantage of his self-imposed leave of absence to get some help and stop hiding behind words like "inappropriate behavior."

Hopefully, the Phillies — who placed Myers on the temporary inactive list Wednesday and optioned him to Class-A Clearwater to open a roster spot — will send a message to his teammates that there can be consequences outside the courtroom for such actions.

Meanwhile, Myers and the Phillies have plenty to be sorry about.

Sebastian Telfair, Theo Ratliff and a 2008 second-round pick.

The Blazers then shipped Foye's rights to Minnesota for Brandon Roy, the Washington guard taken sixth by the Timberwolves.

"When I see the guys go 1, 2, 3, it was just nerve-racking," Foye said. "But then like two picks before, my agent and Brandon's agent were making eye contact and I didn't know what was going on at the time."

And once I saw my agent's face light up, he was like, 'Yeah, Boston is going to take you.'

"And then, Portland is going to take you." And then when he said Minnesota, I was like OK, good. Bring it on."

There were 11 trades, likely the product of a draft that lacked star power. High school players are no longer eligible, meaning Greg Oden, who surely would have been the No. 1 pick, is headed to Ohio State instead of the NBA.

The Raptors didn't think they needed a draftee, confident that Bargnani, a 20-year-old forward from Italy, can live up to comparisons to Dirk Nowitzki.

"Everyone has strengths, weaknesses, etc.," general manager Bryan Colangelo said. "But at the end of the day, it came down that we felt that Andrea Bargnani was really the best pick for the future of this organization going forward. It's not about today. It's about today and tomorrow and we think that Andrea is a player that's not only going to help us in the short run, but we think he's going to grow into a terrific star in this league."

The 6-foot-10 Bargnani, the first European player taken first overall, has drawn the comparisons to the Dallas Mavericks' All-Star because of his outside shooting skills. Playing last season for Benetton Treviso in Italy's Lega A, Bargnani shot 37 percent from 3-point range.

He's the second straight foreign-born No. 1 pick after Milwaukee chose Andrew Bogut of Australia from the University of Utah last year. Bargnani is the first No. 1 pick not to play college or high school basketball in the United States since Houston took Yao Ming in 2002.

"I hope to help the team as soon as possible," Bargnani said. "I'm a young player. I know that I will find a lot of tough moments because it's a new league and I'm used to playing in Europe."

Aldridge then went in a pick that came from New York in a pre-season trade for Eddy Curry, and the fans at the Theater at Madison Square Garden didn't have to wait for it to express their anger toward Knicks coach and team president Isiah Thomas.

Chants of "Fire Isiah!" started 15 minutes before the draft, and "Fire Thomas" cries followed just before the pick.

The fans might get their wish next year — Madison Square Garden chairman James Dolan warned Thomas on Monday that he has one year to turn around the franchise or he'll be out of a job.

Dolan wasn't spared, either. "Sell the Knicks," chants also rang out before the draft started.

Gonzaga star Adam Morrison went to Charlotte at No. 3 with the Bobcats' first since pick Michael Jordan became a part of the team in charge of the basketball operations earlier this month. The mustache All-American led the nation in scoring as a junior with 28.1 points per game.

"It would be awesome if I could get some hands-on instruction from Mike," Morrison said. "Any time the greatest player of all-time is telling you what to do — if he told me how to run my shoes a certain way, I would probably listen."

The Trail Blazers then selected LSU's Tyrus Thomas, who already knew he wasn't going there. Even while waiting a Blazers rep, he spoke of playing for Chicago.

"They're young, they like to run and Coach (Scott) Skiles, I visited with him, and he's a great teacher and a motivator," Thomas said. "Just the organization as a whole, it has a bright future so I'm looking forward to doing some good things in Chicago."

The Atlanta Hawks also went for interior defense when they took Duke's Sheldon Williams at No. 5. The Blue Devils' career leader in blocked shots was the ACC defensive player of the year in each of his last two seasons.

The Houston Rockets took Rudy Gay at No. 9, the first of a record-tying four Connecticut players taken in the first round. The Golden State Warriors then grabbed center Patrick O'Bray, whose stock rose after he led Bradley to the third round of the NCAA tournament.

After Seattle took forward Jermaine O'Neal to the 10, Philadelphia grabbed guard J.J. Redick, recently charged with driving under the influence. As usual, the former Duke guard was greeted by a loud, mixed reaction. He drew boos when he took the court on the overhead TV screen, but eventually

Jazz take Arkansas guard Ronnie Brewer

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Ronnie Brewer impressed the Utah Jazz enough in an interview and game footage that the Jazz were happy to see him still available when they picked midway through the first round.

Utah took the 6-foot-7 guard from Arkansas with the 14th overall pick Wednesday, hoping Brewer's size and quickness compliment point guard Deron Williams — Utah's first-round pick a year ago.

"I think his athletic ability is a dimension that we needed," coach Jerry Sloan said. "We needed somebody who was athletic because the league has so many athletic guys that you have to match up against (defensively) and still have some semblance of order on the other end of the floor."

The Jazz liked Brewer's defensive ability and the fact that he can play either guard position, which would give Utah a young tandem Williams and Brewer.

"He's a guy that has the ability to get on top of the basket. I think his upside could be great if he works," Sloan said.

Brewer is the son of former Razorback and NBA player Ron Brewer. He had 216 steals in his three years at Arkansas, including 83 as a junior last season when he was an All-Southeast Conference selection.

Brewer had an interview with the Jazz on Saturday, but did not actually work out for the team. He said he got a late start on workouts because he took a while to decide to leave Arkansas with a season of eligibility remaining.

"I was a 46 percent shooter in college despite an unorthodox release caused by a broken arm when he was a kid."

"It might look funny, but it goes in," Brewer said from New York during a conference call.

Ronnie Brewer, a guard from Arkansas, poses after being chosen by the Utah Jazz as the 14th overall pick of the 2006 NBA Draft Wednesday at Madison Square Garden in New York.

Jazz fans who attended a draft open house at the Delta Center cheered when Kevin O'Connor, vice president for basketball operations, announced the pick and confetti dropped from the ceiling before NBA commissioner David Stern announced the selection on television.

Brewer wouldn't have been the first choice for many fans, who groaned when Orlando took Duke guard J.J. Redick with the 11th pick.

"I thought you wanted J.J. Redick," O'Connor joked to the fans. "I'm — We're happy with what we got."

Brewer's name was the most talked about in Utah before the draft and fans wanted the Duke star. Many cheered after the 10th pick when Seattle took center Mouhammed Saer, who worked out twice for the Jazz and was a possible pick for the Jazz, because they wanted to trade back over the 6-foot-11 center from Senegal.

They didn't get either, but still celebrated.

"When we sat down and started this whole thing, we actually didn't think he'd be there," O'Connor said. "We addressed the need we talked about at the draft."

The Jazz already have shooting guards in Gordon Girick, who missed the last 37 games last season with an Achilles' heel injury, and C.J. Miles, a second-round selection out of high school last year.

Miles is only 18 and played little as a rookie. Girick wasn't known for his defense or speed before he injured his ankle and was often in Sloan's doghouse for not listening.

Brewer could quickly get a chance to play.

Brewer is the first Razorback to be drafted since Joe Johnson went No. 10 in 2001. He is the 11th Razorback to be drafted in the first round. The first was his father, who was picked seventh in 1978.

Brewer's father helped lead Arkansas to the 1978 Final Four.

Utah had two picks in the second round and took guard De Brown, Williams' former teammate at Illinois, 46th overall and Paul Millsap — a power forward from Louisiana Tech — at 47. The last Louisiana Tech player drafted was Karl Malone, 13th overall in 1985.

Willanova, Memphis and Michigan State also had multiple first-round picks.

The Tigers' Shawne Williams went to Indiana at No. 17 and Memphis chose Wildcats guard Kyle Lowry at No. 24.

The Spartans' Shannon Brown (25th) by Cleveland and Maurice Ager (28th to Dallas) went later.

The draft ended with deputy commissioner and fan favorite Russ Granik announcing Iowa State's Will Blalock to Detroit with the last pick. The remaining fans chanted "One more year!" for Granik, who is leaving his position on July 1.

Amateur Golf HoChee leads way at IGA Juniors tournament

GOODING — Matthew HoChee, a 10-year-old from Twin Falls, carded the low round of the day at the IGA Juniors tournament at Gooding Country Club on Monday. HoChee fired a 43 in the nine-hole tournament.

Derek Thompson and Zayne Sloten of Twin Falls tie for second with 44s. A pair of Twin Falls golfers, Sydney Lee and Joni Sharp, shared top honors on the girls side with 52s.

After Seattle took forward Jermaine O'Neal to the 10, Philadelphia grabbed guard J.J. Redick, recently charged with driving under the influence. As usual, the former Duke guard was greeted by a loud, mixed reaction. He drew boos when he took the court on the overhead TV screen, but eventually cheered after his pick was announced.

The next pick was another popular one with the crowd: The Hornets went with UConn's Illiton Armstrong from Peekskill, N.Y. Marcus Williams and Josh Boone of the Huskies went with the 22nd and 23rd picks, both to New Jersey.

Philadelphia grabbed guard Thabo Sefolosha, who played last season in Italy, at No. 13, followed by Arkansas' Ronnie Brewer to Utah; Cedric Simmons of North Carolina State to the Hornets with the 15th pick, and the Bulls taking Memphis' Rodney Carney with their second first-round choice.

In another trade, the rights to Sefolosha and Carney were later swapped.

Sacramento's pick of Rutgers' guard Quincy Douby at No. 19 drew a roar, but the boys came right back when Isiah Thomas' face was shown on the screen as the Knicks prepared to pick at 20th. They didn't stop, either — drowning out the last name of New York's pick, South Carolina forward Renato Balkman, the MVP of the NIT who averaged 9.6 points last season.

Cooper has coached the Wood River Warriors lacrosse team. The team has several Wood River High School students participating, but is not fun by or managed by the Blaine County School District. Cooper is not an employee of the school district and so has not gone through their employee screening process. The team does use school district property, fields and the team had a page in Wood River

High School's 2006 yearbook. Cooper has been convicted in Blaine County three times for driving under the influence. A search for his name yielded no results on the National Sex Offender Registry. He was divorced in 2002 and has two children. Across the country, many law enforcement officials and lawmakers are expressing concerns about myspace.com, which they say can be used by Internet sex predators.

Recently the Web site made national headlines when a 16-year-old Michigan girl tried to fly to Israel to meet a 20-year-old male she met on myspace.com. The teen was intercepted in Amman, Jordan, by U.S. authorities who seized her passport and put her on a flight back to the United States.

One year in, county plan on schedule

By Kate Poppio
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — After one year the Twin Falls County comprehensive plan likely will be done by this fall.

The advisory committee spent more than two hours Wednesday reviewing the chapters of the 1995 plan concerning school facilities, transportation and parks and recreation. School topics included school and college expansion, enrollment, and cooperation with city and county government.

The parks discussion largely covered what recreational resources the county has and what it should plan for.

Drafts of changes are reviewed monthly at these meetings, and the plan's final draft is on track to be released in October, lead planner Jerome Mapp said.

"We figured it would take about 18 months," said Mapp, one of two Boise consultants hired to help create the plan. The other consultant is Dick Gardner, who manages the meetings.

A major part of Wednesday's meeting was devoted to making ways the city, county and school districts can interact, Mapp said.

"The state wants more of this communication, especially as schools expand."

"They wanted more discussion than just buying the land and filling it," said Mapp.

The final plan will be a blueprint for guiding county operations for the next 20 years. The plan, which is required by law, is intended to give the public, businesses and government agencies a clear understanding of the county's plans for future development. It is the foundation on which future ordinances and resolutions regarding land use are built.

Discussion so far has been friendly and productive, members say. No drastic or shocking changes were brought up at Wednesday's meeting, said Mike Wissenbach. It was the first time he attended one.

"Nobody brought anything up in there that people said, 'Oh no, we couldn't do that,'" said Wissenbach, a natural resource specialist with the National Park Service based in Hagerman.

Gardner said he expects some arguments when the committee tackles land use in October. But the plan is so general that he expects debates will be limited to agricultural versus urban development.

The committee's next meeting will cover community design, public services and natural resources.

Coming up:

The Comprehensive Plan Advisory Committee will meet next at 1:30 p.m. July 26 at the Twin Falls County Office Building at 246 Third Ave. E. Visit <http://www.twinfallscountynv.org/pp/complan.htm> for more information.

Federal agency wants less phosphorus in Snake River

A Clear Springs Foods Inc. employee works on a fish run at the company's facility near Buhl earlier this month.

Fish farmers wary of new requirements

By Michelle Dunlop
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — They thought they had struck a deal. For the past several years, members of the region's aquaculture industry have worked with the state to reduce the amount of pollution running into the Snake River. Some fish farmers and processors found out recently that the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency might want an even greater reduction. The two groups will meet tonight to discuss the details.

"We're not convinced that the EPA has done the right analysis," said Randy MacMillan, with Clear Springs Foods. "We need to understand how they got where they did."

Clear Springs is one of four fish processors being asked to decrease even further the amount of phosphorus it discharges into the Snake River.

EPA meets with aquaculture

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has two permits out for public comment on wastewater discharge from aquaculture facilities.

The purpose of the permits is to improve water quality along the mid-Snake River; roughly 100 aquaculture facilities will be impacted by the permit.

The public comment period lasts until Aug. 3.

The EPA will host an open house from 6 to 9 tonight in the conference room of the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare, 601 Pole Line Road, in Twin Falls. A short presentation will begin at 7 p.m.

For more information, visit the EPA's Web site: <http://yosemite.epa.gov/r10/WATER.NSF/NPDES+Permits/Draft+NP787>.

High levels of phosphorus promote aquatic plant growth that can be harmful to fish and can be a nuisance to boaters.

The Idaho Department of Environmental Quality coordinated with Clear Springs and roughly 80 fish farmers along the mid-Snake River to come up with an overall phosphorus reduction plan. The aquaculture industry agreed to cut levels by 40 percent to 570 pounds daily, said Carla Fromm, with Idaho's EPA office.

After the DEQ and the industry representatives reached an agreement, they submitted their plan to the EPA. A couple months ago, DEQ discovered changes in the states plan cutting the level of phosphorus discharge for the four fish processors, said Doug Howard, with the agency's Twin Falls office. The federal proposal is still out for public comment.

Under EPA's proposal, Clear Springs would be required to drop its current discharge by approximately 50 percent. That means making additional adjustments to the fish feed the company uses, MacMillan said. And, that means more expense to the fish processor. MacMillan said that he will go into tonight's meeting with an open mind, hoping for guidance from federal officials.

"We want to do what is right environmentally," he said.

PINA TRIAL

"Quiero que me perdone por todo lo que hice."
("I want you to forgive me for all I did.") — Juan Carlos Pina to Jesse Naranjo's family

Pina and Shores say sorry

By Cassidy Friedman
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — It may look like atonement and it may sound like atonement. The interpretation of Wednesday's events at the Twin Falls County Courthouse is ultimately up to the jury.

Johnny A. Shores, 18, pleaded guilty recently to voluntary manslaughter for pulling the trigger. Juan Carlos Pina, 32, is being tried for murder for initiating the kidnapping that led to Naranjo's Nov. 29 killing.

In the final days of Pina's trial, with Shores on the stand testifying against him, both men expressed remorse in different ways Wednesday.

Shores, 18, said on the witness stand that it was time to tell the truth. According to Naranjo's family, Pina, 32, approached them in the hallway and apologized. But did not specify what he was apologizing for.

Naranjo's mother, Bertha Naranjo, testified in court that Pina had said in Spanish, "I want you to forgive me for all I did."

Later, in the courthouse hallway, she said, "If he didn't do it, why would he be asking me for forgiveness? Is he laughing at us?"

RICHFIELD — Eloise Guenechea was the epitome of Basque traditions and character. A loyal, dignified and independent woman who was recognized by many as an honest, hardworking and caring sister, wife, mother and friend, died June 4 at age 93.

Family and holding true to her roots were above all else to Eloise. As a young girl, she grew up in Gooding, Park City, UT, and finally graduated in Shoshone.

"She was the centerpiece of our homes," said her daughter, Vickie Sorensen, referring to herself and four siblings. She met her husband,

"She was always wanting to go and better herself. No challenge was too great for her. She'd just go and do it."

— Vickie Sorensen, talking about her mother, Eloise Guenechea

Bernard Guenechea, a Basque immigrant who traveled from Spain by 16 while she was working at a boarding house. They married in Ketchum and later moved to Atlanta, where they bore two children, until he saved enough by working in mines to buy a ranch in Shoshone. There, three other children completed the family. Eloise worked hard alongside her husband, always supporting him in every way and loving and caring for her kids and everyone else's kids, Vickie said.

"They were always such a part of our lives," she added. "They were always there for us."

Education was also important to Eloise. She loved educating herself any way she could and especially enjoyed reading to her family.

Despite learning to read, write and speak not only

English, but Basque and Spanish fluently, Vickie said the only regret her mom had was not getting her college diploma.

"She was always wanting to go and better herself," Vickie said. "No challenge was too great for her. She'd just go and do it."

At 55, Eloise decided to buy the South Side Market in Shoshone, where she happily served customers with a smile and kind word.

"She didn't care who you were, everyone was the same," Vickie said. "She judged no one."

Helen Rendla Prilucik Hunnicutt

BUHL — Helen Rendla Prilucik, Hunnicutt passed away June 27, 2006, at Woodstone Assisted Living in Twin Falls, Idaho, at the age of 100.

Helen was born Nov. 29, 1905, to Ralph and Barbara Prilucik in Perry, Ohio. She moved to Idaho in 1912, where she met and married Joe P. Prilucik on Nov. 27, 1923. Joe passed away in December of 1969. On Jan. 5, 1971, Helen married William G. Hunnicutt. Helen was married. Bill was the pastor of the Church of Christ in Buhl. Bill died in April of 1987.

Helen remained passionate about, and all that it had to offer. She was a long-standing member of the Church of Christ of Buhl. For many years from July through September Helen could be found cooking for the threshing crews. Helen loved to dance and was known to have never met a stranger; her positive outlook gave her peace whether spending time in her garden or in the company of her many friends playing cards, or simply visiting. Last November, Helen was recognized for her 75th year of membership by the WFLA (Women's Fraternal Life Association).

She was in her 40s when she began golfing, which became one of her greatest joys. She and Joe were instrumental in promoting golf in the Buhl area; their early dedication and effort to the sport was influential in the development of what is now the Clear Lake Country Club. One of her earliest memories shared were of putting on greens made of sand, oil and ground chicken feathers. Before there was a golf pro, Helen shared her love of the game with others by spending numerous hours providing golf lessons to area enthusiasts at no charge.

Helen became the Idaho State Women's Golf Association Champion in 1942. Due to the war effort in 1943, no state championships were held; however, Helen returned as state champion in 1944 and 1945. In addition, she was a four time state runner-up.

Helen leaves behind her daughter, Ruby Hyde of Sagle, Idaho; three grandchildren, Mike Hyde of Hillsboro, Ore., Nicki Falay of Vancouver, Wash., and Kerri Coleman of Colton, Ore.; a stepdaughter, Sharon Pitt of Arkansas; three great-grandchildren, Denise Falay, Christopher Coleman and Joseph Coleman; five great-great-grandchildren, Kenny Falay, Nathalie Coleman, Lucy Coleman, Liam Coleman and Alexandra Coleman; and numerous nieces and nephews.

The family wishes to extend a heartfelt thank you to a special niece, LaNee Thompson, whose selfless love, compassion and care was so willingly shared with Helen. Helen is preceded in death by her parents, both husbands, and two sisters.

The funeral will be held at 2 p.m. Saturday, July 1, 2006, at Farmer Funeral Chapel in Buhl, with Pastor Jason Stockton officiating. Visitation for family and friends will be from 4 to 7 p.m. Friday, June 30, at the funeral home.

Judge who overturned conviction in My Lai massacre dies at age 96

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — Retired U.S. District Judge J. Robert Elliott, who overturned the conviction of Army Lt. William Calley in the 1968 My Lai massacre but was later overruled by an appeals court, died Wednesday. He was 96. Elliott was the nation's oldest federal district judge when he ended his 38-year career in 2000. He died Tuesday at his home, according to Striffler-Haney Mortuary in Columbus. Calley was convicted in a 1971 court-martial of killing 22 civilians as part of the massacre of hundreds of men, women and children in the Vietnamese village of My Lai. It was the only man convicted in the case, which became a focal point of Vietnam protest.

In overturning the conviction in 1974, Elliott said that the case was prejudiced by pretrial publicity. Calley was denied access to evidence, and President Nixon had "publicly aligned himself with the prosecution."

Calley initially had been sentenced to life. After a public outcry that he was being made a scapegoat, Nixon reduced the sentence.

Will 'Naughty But Nice' stay or will it go?

By Nate Poppo
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The city has stopped reviewing the ordinances governing adult entertainment now that an adult video store on Main Avenue is likely to leave.

However, the owners of Naughty But Nice say they never actually agreed to leave, just considered the idea and are looking into possible locations. Property owner Archie Goodman said Scot Roberts had agreed to move the store after Goodman requested it over the weekend.

"It's possible we might move," Roberts said. "I didn't tell (Goodman) we were moving. I did tell him we would look for another place."

Goodman stood by his take

"I didn't tell (Goodman) we were moving. I did tell him we would look for another place."

— Scot Roberts, owner of Naughty But Nice on the conversation and said Roberts said they will leave as soon as they find something.

Rhonda Caraway, Twin Falls Planning and Zoning director, wants to make sure, the Roberts know where they can look. She said her department sent police officers to the store to drop off copies of the state statutes and city codes governing adult entertainment. That should be the end of her involvement, she said.

"What we wanted to make sure is that they were aware of what the code was," she said. In the meantime, Roberts said, he painted over the store's street-level sign so he could shrink his logo and add those of other second-floor businesses to it.

"I did it because everyone else was kind of upset that we were the only ones up there," he said.

He said he has been speaking with the owners of the other second-floor businesses to fix any concerns they may have, and is looking for an attorney to consult about the whole situation. So far, he said, most of the owners don't seem to mind the video store.

Goodman previously said the Roberts misled him as to what the store would become. Scot Roberts apologized, saying he must not have been clear enough.

"I sure wasn't trying to mislead anybody," he said. "I sure don't want to say that he's not being honest, but I don't know how he misinterpreted me." Caraway did not make it clear the store violated any ordinances, she said. The investigation won't affect any similar stores in town as the department only investigates in response to complaints.

"If there are no complaints, then we're not aware of the issue. We do not make it a policy to go and search those out," she said. "We'll let the dust settle."

Pina

"I turned around and told her (another family member) 'Why is he asking me to forgive him when he's been claiming all the time that he is innocent.'"

Shores elaborated little on how he reached the moral epiphany he had following his arrest. If the prosecutor felt his witness had come through for the State by testifying truthfully, by Public Defender Marilyn Faul did not buy it.

"You didn't do the right thing before when Carlos was in jail and you were out sleeping with your girlfriend, and doing all the fun stuff you like to do," Paul said.

Shores, who was arrested on Dec. 13, 2005, had been telling the police that Pina had the gun at the time of the shooting. Most of the witnesses were lying at that point, according to their own sworn accounts.

"I wasn't ready to accept it," Shores said. "It's a hard thing to deal with."

Shores brought forth a new story about his and Pina's involvement in Naranjo's killing when he pleaded guilty to voluntary manslaughter with weapons enhancement on June 14. That charge carries a maximum penalty of a 30-year prison term.

"They said you know what's right," Shores said, without identifying who told him that.

"They said it would be better to tell the truth." He also told him voluntary manslaughter with weapons enhancement was a good deal. And he accepted it. He had struck no deal with the state or the court in exchange for his testimony against Pina, he said.

After the victim's family and Shores had testified, the state had called all of its witnesses. It was time for the defense to call theirs.

The defense's witnesses continue testifying today at 9 a.m.

comfortable in her own skin. As a young girl she was more of a tomboy who loved racing neighborhood boys, and she took pride in being able to fend for herself. With her unbending faith and caring ways, Eloise could comfort someone during troubling times with the simplest of gestures, such as a pat on the hand accompanied with a smile.

"No matter what crisis in our lives was happening, she would stop at any time to help anyone," Vickie said. "She'd say 'We'll get through it, there'll be another sunset, there'll be another morning. We'll make it ... We always felt so secure around her. Her strength and faith would get us through it.'"

Her strength of character and honest demeanor also earned Eloise much respect personally and professionally. Vickie said her mom's word was like a binding contract, a quality she shared with her husband.

"She taught us that hard work and honesty was important," Vickie said. "No matter what mental job you did or high-powered job you had, work the best you could and as hard as you can and you can hold your head high."

Eloise was a woman who stopped to look at and appreciate her surroundings, to marvel at a beautiful sky and take time to smell the flowers, especially her favorite — red roses.

Her own strong morals and way of life was influenced by her Basque heritage, she once wrote in a letter to her granddaughter.

In that letter she offered a piece of guidance to her family: "My dear family, believe in yourself and sustain the self-confidence required for success."

From cooking delicious full meals for strangers at a moment's notice and sending customers off with a friendly "thank you," Eloise worked hard and took pride in her accomplishments.

Her family always remained most important to her and she raised them with the good values of the Basque heritage of which she was so proud.

Your gentle ways are winning, Sagittarius

IF JUNE 23 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: This can be an exceptional year in both love and career. Many factors are working in your favor to aid in your successes. For the most part, you will be seen in the best possible light by everyone you come into contact with. Emotional swings could be a bit of a drain at times, but your exuberant positive feelings will more than make up for them. Despite the winning energy all around you, it would be a mistake to think that there are no bumps in the road. Avoid any kind of manipulation, and also keep your own guard up—especially in financial matters.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Seek out new adventures with friends—they'll probably look to you to plan logistics. Today through Saturday are excellent days to firm up a commitment to a loved one, or to meet a new flame.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Love takes a more serious direction, and the timing is right. If you are single, you could meet a soul mate now. If you are looking for a fling, it's better to stay home; the stars incline toward commitment.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Commitment or even a wedding could be on someone's agenda. Turn your copious energies to love, not war. If single, the next few days could mark the time of a fateful encounter.

HOROSCOPE

Jerakine Saunders

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Strong feelings can be a blessing or a curse. If single, today through Saturday could be very important. If taken, you could make a new commitment or even tie the knot through the weekend.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): It seems you just can't lose now. With your generous heart and superior mind, few obstacles can stand in your way. Today through Saturday are blessed for love.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): It's time to set aside worries and fears and enjoy the love that is all around you. Move forward in your relationship now. If you're solo, get out and about in the next few days to meet someone wonderful.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Congenial times abound with both friends and your beloved. If unattached, the next few days are especially good for meeting someone new—get out as much as possible.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Start preparing for a hot weekend now by clearing the decks of anything that needs doing. Love and romance will be at the forefront then. If you are tempted to make a commitment, the timing is perfect.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your gentle ways win over one and all. Don't let anyone else drag you down; use your bouncy enthusiasm to carry them along with you into optimism and hopefulness.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Let go of groundless and unproductive worries. (That's pretty much all of them, isn't it?) Let your mind range; just keep it positive and upbeat. Giving to others helps yourself.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): The world is turning toward love. Don't be afraid to jump in, as paralysis will serve no good purpose. Be open to good things happening; your pessimism is uncharacteristic and misleading.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): If you've been wondering whether to make a commitment, the next few days would be ideal to go forward. You exemplify sweetness and yet can take love to a very deep and profound level.

Mom caught in the middle of daughter's growing feud

DEBRA ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: My youngest daughter, "Liza," is going through a divorce that has turned ugly, with her soon-to-be ex, "Dick," choking and threatening to kill her.

The problem is, my oldest daughter, "Mimi," has remained in contact with Dick. She claims she doesn't want her children to suffer the loss of their uncle they really love. Mimi had promised Liza she would no longer speak to Dick, but when Liza went to her former home to pick up some personal items, she saw on the caller ID that Mimi had been calling there several times a week.

Liza is devastated and feels Mimi has betrayed her. When she called Mimi to discuss it, Mimi refused. Liza then announced that she would never speak to Mimi again.

I feel that Mimi did betray Liza, but I had hoped there would be further communication. Mimi is now avoiding me. There have been other sticky situations in the past when Mimi has deprived family members — including me — from seeing her children as a means of punishment.

I am at a loss. I feel supportive of Liza because I know she really needs me and is being subjected to problems of all kinds from all sides.

—HEARTBROKEN MOTHER IN OHIO

DEAR HEARTBROKEN: What a mess. You have my sympathy. However, Liza may have jumped to the wrong conclusion when she spotted Mimi's number on Dick's caller ID. Caller ID registers the number the call was made from and to whom that number is registered. It does not necessarily reveal the identity of the caller. Rather than Mimi calling, it might have been one or more of her children wanting to talk to "an uncle they really love."

One thing is clear. There is trouble between your daughters. Whether it's recent, or the ill feelings go all the way back to their childhood, you'd be better served to let the girls work it out between themselves than to allow yourself to be put in the middle. You can't be their referee forever. You're all adults now, and it's time they resolve their own conflicts without dragging you into it.

DEAR ABBY: I am 19 and have been in love with "Jordan" for three years. I know he loves me, too. My problem is I am not sure whether or not I should begin. He is older — 27 — and I almost feel like I haven't had a chance to become my own person. My dilemma is that I'm afraid if I leave him and venture out on my own, I might lose him forever. I don't want to make a mistake. I am also afraid that if I leave him and meet someone, and it doesn't work out — I'll be left all alone. Please tell me what to do. Every night I ask has a different opinion.

—CAN'T DECIDE IN GREENVILLE, TEXAS

DEAR CAN'T DECIDE, As risky as it may seem now, take a break from Jordan. You didn't mention whether you are still in school. If you are, tell Jordan that you need time to concentrate on your studies and get involved with campus life. It's the truth. If you are not, then consider taking some classes, even if you have to take them on-line. You can't be a dependent and help you develop independently.

Before making a lifetime commitment to anyone, it is imperative to have established some independence, both emotionally and financially. If your romance is so fragile that a little time apart will destroy it, then it wasn't strong enough to begin with.

Twinkie cookbook a delicious surprise

CHICAGO — The Twinkie isn't exactly haute cuisine. But a new cookbook set out to prove the cream-filled sponge cake is more versatile than most people think.

"Twinkie-Miso? Twinkie Pancakes? ... bet." "The Twinkies Cookbook" (Ten Speed Press, $12.95) even has a recipe for Twinkie Lasagna.

Hostess put out a call for recipes that would showcase creative and unusual dishes as part of a Twinkie 75th anniversary celebration last year.

Interstate Bakeries Corp., which produces Twinkies under the Hostess brand, tested more than 100 recipes and included about half of them in the cookbook, says Theresa Cogswell, a vice president at Interstate Bakeries.

One of Cogswell's favorite recipes is Patriotic Twinkie Pie. "I'm a person who likes things that send you (jokingly) to the moon," Cogswell said of the red-white-and-blue berry creation. "You can use it as your centerpiece for a Fourth of July picnic, then have it for dessert."

Brenda McDevitt of Worth, Ill., created her recipe for Twinkie Milkshakes after seeing her daughter, Sarah, dunk a Twinkie into a chocolate milkshake.

"I couldn't believe it when they called me," McDevitt told the (Tinley Park) Daily Southtown.

Georgia's eternal flame meets match in shoe

ALBANY, Ga. — The city's eternal flame has withstood high winds and torrential rains for more than 30 years, but an errant tennis shoe proved too much of an impediment.

Firefighters shot down the flame briefly Monday so that they could pull out the charred sneaker.

Deputy Fire Chief David Eddins. "Someone had tossed a tennis shoe in it. We had to shut it off to remove the shoe."

The flame, which sits atop a 6-foot black granite pedestal, has been burning in front of the County Courthouse since 1973, placed there by the American Legion to memorialize the men and women who have fought in the nation's wars.

By Tuesday, Albany's eternal flame was burning once again. "We're up and running and in good shape," said Eddins.

L.A. won't accept money from bikini contest

LOS ANGELES — The city's animal services department will not accept money from a planned bikini contest called "Hooters for Neuters" for spaying pets.

Animal Services Director-Ed Bokos reconsidered Tuesday after city officials said the event was degrading to women.

He said the department will bow out of the July 13 fundraiser at a Hollywood nightclub hosted by the Hooters restaurant chain.

"It certainly was not my intention to offend anyone," Bokos said in a statement.

Although the fundraiser was not sponsored by the city, a promotional flier was posted on the Animal Services Department Web site. The original flier showed a bikini-clad woman, but the latest version showed a dog wearing a T-shirt that says "Hooters for Neuters."

Nevada battles 130,000 acres of fires, waits for approaching rain

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Nevada continued to endure a plague of lightning-sparked wildfires on Wednesday, but an approaching rainstorm — complete with a flood watch — held the potential of dousing some of the flames.

In all, about 134,000 acres of the state has been charred since lightning began sparking dozens of fires over the weekend. Of 33 large fires burning in the U.S. and being tracked by the National Interagency Fire Center, 10 are in Nevada.

But three consecutive days of high temperatures, low humidity and dry lightning was forecast to give way to a wet West Coast system, with a possibility of heavy rain. A flash flood watch was posted for the Reno-Carson City area. "We've got a lot of cloud cover, the humidity has come up and the temperatures are a lot cooler," said Kathy Jo Pollock, a spokeswoman for the fire management team in Carson City. Any type of winds will still be a concern for us.

The Lineham fire, which began Monday just east of Carson City near the historic Pony Express trail, was estimated at 4,500 acres on Wednesday. About 200 homes were threatened Tuesday, but most residents who chose to leave were returning to their homes.

Some 300 miles to the east, range fires continued to consume vast tracts of grass and sagebrush.

The 62,500-acre Suzzie blaze burned toward a subdivision in northwestern Elko, but stopped 1 1/2 miles short at a green belt. No one was evacuated. Interstate 80, which was closed temporarily Monday and Tuesday, remained open near Elko, but fire officials warned that smoke was obscuring visibility.

East of the Suzzie fire, the Elburz fire blackened 9,600 acres before it was contained. But zero containment was reported for the Sneekie fire burning 6,000 acres southwest of Elko.

Fire officials declared the Sage fire in north-central Nevada fully contained Wednesday at 20,000 acres. But a new blaze, the North Antelope fire southeast of Midas, had scorched an estimated 5,000 acres. The 7,700-acre Sherwood fire was 70 percent contained southwest of Ely.

No injuries have been reported and no structures have burned in the Nevada fires.

Elsewhere, Zion National Park in Utah remained open to visitors Wednesday, despite the closure of nine of the park's hiking trails due to a wildfire. The Kolob fire had burned about 17,630 acres — most of it inside the park — since it started Saturday.

Grizzly bear sought after double escape from Canadian resort

GOLDEN, British Columbia (AP) — A freedom-loving grizzly bear named Boo smashed a heavy steel door and barreled through two electric fences to escape a second, time from a resort near this southcentral British Columbia town.

Boo was recaptured Friday, two weeks after breaking out of an artificial den at the Kicking Horse Mountain Resort, but escaped from tighter confinement within a day, resort spokesman Michael Dalzell said Tuesday. "It's unbelievable," Dalzell said. "We thought there was no way, it was absolutely impossible, but he found a way. It was basically like breaking out of Fort Knox."

He said the bear bashed a nearly 400-pound steel door off its four bolts, destroyed an electrical box while tearing through two electric fences and scrambled over a 12-foot fence anchored with two feet of steel below ground.

"I think he just kept charging it (the door) and charging it until it broke off its bolts," Dalzell said. "Everything was completely trashed. We are dealing with a pretty smart and determined bear."

The search team that caught Boo on Friday went back to work Sunday morning but saw no sign of the grizzly after logging more than 50 hours in a helicopter. Resort staff had planned to neuter Boo, but he got away first. Once he's located, authorities will decide whether to try to recapture him again, Dalzell said.

"Right now we are in the process of looking for him... we are not out to try to trap or tranquilize him," he said. "We are looking at all options. Obviously we need to just really look at our program and figure this one out."

It has lived inside a 22-acre enclosure since his mother was illegally shot by a hunter.

ANNUAL WATER QUALITY REPORT

Monitoring performed in 2005

Proudly Presented By CITY OF TWIN FALLS
WATER DEPARTMENT

PWS ID# ID5420058

Where Does My Water Come From?

Our water source is groundwater from 10 wells east of the Snake River Plain aquifer. Water supplied for 2005 came from the Blue Lakes Well Field, the South Wells and Storage system and the Southeast Wells and Storage system. The Blue Lakes Well Field consists of 10 wells with a total capacity of 1.2 million gallons per day. The South Wells and Storage system consists of 10 wells with a total capacity of 1.2 million gallons per day. The Southeast Wells and Storage system consists of 10 wells with a total capacity of 1.2 million gallons per day. All these storage basins are well delineated and lined below distribution into our system.

Source Water Assessment

Under the Safe Drinking Water Act (SDWA) amendments of 1996, all states are required by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (U.S. EPA) to assess every source of public drinking water for its relative sensitivity to contaminants regulated by the SDWA. These assessments are completed by the Idaho Department of Environmental Quality (IDEQ) and are based on a land use inventory of the designated assessment areas and the sensitivity factors associated with the wells and aquifer characteristics. The assessments provide our community data to guide our continuing efforts to develop protection strategies for our drinking water supply system. Pollution prevention activities are generally more time and cost effective to implement than treatment of a public water supply system once it has been contaminated. IDEQ encourages communities to balance resource protection with economic growth and development. The City of Twin Falls has developed and continues implementing a Wellhead Protection Plan and a Drinking Water Protection Plan. We are addressing the primary goal of the source water assessment process by pursuing drinking water protection. Source Water Assessment Reports for the South, Southeast and Blue Lakes wells are available by calling the City of Twin Falls Water Department at (208) 736-2275.

We are pleased to report that our drinking water is safe and meets federal and state requirements. If you have any questions about this report or concerning the City of Twin Falls water utility, please contact Mike Schroeder, Water Superintendent, at (208) 736-1540. We are committed to ensuring the quality of your water, and we want you to be informed about your water utility.

Community Participation

City council meetings are opportunities for public participation and input. City of Twin Falls Council Meetings are held the first and third Monday of each month at 5:00 p.m. in the City Hall Annex Building Council Chambers at 305 Third Avenue East, Twin Falls, Idaho. You are invited to participate.

Table Definitions

- AL (Action Level): The concentration of a contaminant which, if exceeded, contamination of the water supply system may occur.
- MCL (Maximum Contaminant Level): The highest level of a contaminant that is allowed in drinking water. MCLs are only as close to the MCLG as feasible taking the costs of treatment technology into account.
- MCLG (Maximum Contaminant Level Goal): The level of a contaminant in drinking water below which there is no known or expected risk to health. MCLGs allow for a margin of safety.
- MDDL (Maximum Daily Level): The highest level of a contaminant that is allowed in drinking water. There is convincing evidence that addition of a disinfectant is necessary for control of microbial contaminants.
- MDDG (Maximum Daily Goal): The level of a drinking water disinfectant below which there is no known or expected risk to health. MDDGs do not reflect the benefits of the use of disinfectants to control microbial contamination.
- NA: Not applicable
- ND: Not detected
- g/L (grams per liter): A measure of radioactivity.
- ppb (parts per billion): One part substance per billion parts water (or micrograms per liter).
- ppm (parts per million): One part substance per million parts water (or milligrams per liter).
- ppm (parts per million): One part substance per million parts water (or milligrams per liter).
- ppm (parts per million): One part substance per million parts water (or milligrams per liter).
- ppm (parts per million): One part substance per million parts water (or milligrams per liter).

Sampling Results

During the past year the City of Twin Falls municipal water system has taken hundreds of water samples in order to determine the presence of any radioactive, biological, inorganic, volatile organic or synthetic organic contaminants. In fact, the City of Twin Falls consistently runs more samples than required by state and federal law. We have learned through our monitoring and testing that some contaminants have been detected. Although the contaminants are under the Maximum Contaminant Level (MCL), we feel it is important that you know exactly what was detected and how much of the substance was present in the water. IDEQ has determined that your water is safe at these levels.

To understand the possible health effects described for many regulated constituents, a person would have to drink two liters of water every day at the MCL level for a lifetime to have a one-in-a-million chance of having the described health effect. All drinking water, including bottled drinking water, may be reasonably expected to contain at least small amounts of some contaminants.

¹These arsenic values were effective January 23, 2006; however, during 2005 the MCL was 10 ppb and there was no MCLG. Some people who drink water containing arsenic in excess of the MCL over many years could experience skin damage or problems with their circulatory system, and may have an increased risk of getting cancer.
²The MCL for benzophenone emitters is written as 4 nram/year. The U.S. EPA considers 10 pCi/L as the level of concern for beta emitters.
³The total positive samples for the year were 2, although not more than 1 per month.
⁴The 100 percent lead and copper levels can be computed by placing the results of all the lead or copper samples during a monitoring period in ascending order from the sample with lowest concentration to the sample with the highest concentration, then each sample result shall be assigned an ascending number starting with number 1 for the sample with the lowest contaminant level. The number assigned to the sample with the highest contaminant level will be equal to the total number of samples taken. The number of samples taken during the monitoring period shall be multiplied by 0.8. The 80th percentile contaminant level is the contaminant concentration of the numbered sample yielded by the calculation.

 Groundwater systems demonstrating that levels of a substance have been maintained below the maximum permissible levels may reduce the frequency of monitoring that substance.

Water Conservation

Water is a valuable natural resource—one that we are all learning does not come in unlimited supplies. The City of Twin Falls has recognized this by adopting a water conservation ordinance that requires our water customers to comply with restricted landscape irrigation and usage practices. This plan is in effect all year and remains the same from year to year. Remember that Twin Falls residents use substantially more water per person than most of the nation (311 gallons/day per person vs. 147 gallons/day per person). We can do more than we are to conserve water.

We urge you to follow these guidelines:

1. Vehicles will be washed only on your scheduled irrigation day.
 2. Landscape irrigation is restricted to the following schedule:
 - Even-numbered addresses on Tuesday, Thursday, Saturday
 - Odd-numbered addresses on Wednesday, Friday, Sunday
 - Properties with no street address (such as a median) on Monday, Wednesday, Friday
 3. Watering will only be allowed on appropriate irrigation days before 10:00 a.m. or after 5:00 p.m.
 4. Outdoor landscape watering with a drip irrigation system or hand-held container is allowed at any time.
- The city also encourages our citizens to continue to learn about conservation methods and use available information to decrease our use of this valuable natural resource. The following list of community resources can provide more information:
- www.tfd.org
 - Your City of Twin Falls water bill includes individual consumption history
 - City Water Conservation Committee: (208) 736-2228

Substances That Might Be in Drinking Water

To ensure that tap water is safe to drink, the U.S. EPA prescribes regulations limiting the amount of certain contaminants in water provided by public water systems. U.S. Food and Drug Administration regulations establish limits for contaminants in bottled water which must provide the same protection for public health. Drinking water, including bottled water, may reasonably be expected to contain at least small amounts of some contaminants. The presence of these contaminants does not necessarily indicate that the water poses a health risk.

The sources of drinking water (both tap water and bottled water) include rivers, lakes, streams, ponds, reservoirs, springs and wells. As water moves over the ground, it can acquire naturally occurring minerals, in some cases, radioactive materials, and substances leaching from the ground or from the presence of animals. In some cases, substances that may be present in source water include:

- Microbial Contaminants, such as viruses and bacteria, which may come from sewage treatment plants, septic systems, agricultural livestock operations, or wildlife;
- Inorganic Chemicals, such as salts and metals, which can be naturally occurring or may result from urban stormwater runoff, industrial or domestic wastewater discharges, oil and gas production, mining, or farming;
- Pesticides and Herbicides, which may come from a variety of sources such as agriculture, urban stormwater runoff, and residential use;
- Organic Chemical Contaminants, including synthetic and volatile organic chemicals, which are by-products of industrial processes and petroleum production, and which may also come from gas stations, urban stormwater runoff, and septic systems;
- Radionuclides, which can be naturally occurring or may be the result of oil and gas production and mining activities.

For more information about contaminants and potential health effects, call the U.S. EPA's Safe Drinking Water Hotline at (800) 426-4791.

New Arsenic Regulation

In January 2001, the U.S. EPA lowered the arsenic maximum contaminant level (MCL) from 50 to 10 ppb in response to new and compelling research linking high arsenic levels in drinking water with certain forms of cancer. The U.S. EPA is continuing to research the health effects of low levels of arsenic. Low levels of arsenic are naturally present in water—about 2 parts arsenic per billion parts of water (ppb). Thus, you normally have in small amounts of arsenic in the water you drink.

Some people who drink water containing arsenic in excess of the MCL over many years could experience skin damage or problems with their circulatory system, and may have an increased risk of getting cancer. All water utilities are required to implement the new MCL starting in 2006.

The U.S. EPA's arsenic standard balances the current understanding of arsenic's possible health effects against the costs of removing arsenic from the drinking water. While the City of Twin Falls drinking water meets the current U.S. EPA arsenic standard, it does contain low levels of arsenic. The City of Twin Falls is continuing to research methods to meet the impending new standards. For a more complete discussion visit the U.S. EPA's arsenic Web site at www.epa.gov/safewater/arsenic.html.

Our Commitment

Our goal is to provide you our annual water quality report. We hope this information helps inform you about the quality water and services we deliver to you every day. Our constant goal is to provide you with a safe and dependable supply of drinking water. To that end, we remain vigilant in meeting the challenges of source water protection, water conservation, and community education while continuing to serve the needs of all of our water users. We currently have a City of Twin Falls Wellhead Protection Plan, Drinking Water Protection Plan and Source Water Assessment Plans for our South, Southeast and Blue Lakes wells, and we have received the Twin Falls County Groundwater Quality Management Plan. These are available by calling the City of Twin Falls Water Department at (208) 736-2275.

Thank you for allowing us to continue providing your family with clean, quality water this year. To maintain a safe and dependable water supply that will benefit all of our customers, we need to make continual improvements to your water system. These improvements may affect your water bill. Your understanding in supporting

Important Health Information

Nitrate in drinking water at levels above 10 ppm is a health risk for infants of less than six months of age. High nitrate levels in drinking water can cause blue baby syndrome. Nitrate levels may rise quickly for short periods of time because of rainfall or agricultural activity. If you are caring for an infant you should ask advice from your health care provider.

Some people may be more vulnerable to contaminants in drinking water than the general population. Immunocompromised persons such as persons with cancer undergoing chemotherapy, persons who have undergone organ transplants, people with HIV/AIDS or other immune system disorders, some elderly, and infants may be particularly at risk from infections. Those people should consult their health care providers about drinking water from their health care providers.

The U.S. EPA/CDC (Centers for Disease Control and Prevention) guidelines on appropriate means to lessen the risk of infection by Cryptosporidium and other microbial contaminants are available from the Safe Drinking Water Hotline at (800) 426-4791.

Naturally Occurring Bacteria

The simple fact is, bacteria and other microorganisms inhabit our world. They can be found all around us: in our food; on our skin; in our bodies; and, in the air, soil and water. Some are harmful to us and some are not. Certain bacteria are common in the environment and are generally not harmful themselves. The presence of this bacterial form in drinking water is a concern because it indicates that the water may be contaminated with other organisms that can cause disease. Federal regulations now require that public water testing positive for coliform bacteria must be further analyzed for fecal coliform bacteria. Fecal coliforms are present only in human and animal waste. Because these bacteria can cause illness, it is unacceptable for fecal coliforms to be present in water at any concentration. Our tests indicate no fecal coliform is present in our water.

Toni's ice cream featured in TV ads

Deskins selected for Boise Co-op promotion

By Susan Bailey
The Wood River Journal

KETCHUM — Toni Deskins might get more than she bargained for with TV commercials telling her story for the Boise Co-op campaign.

"Some people had an increase of 300 percent in their businesses," said Jodi Peterson, director of advertising and marketing for the 40,000-member Boise Co-op. "They could barely keep up."

Deskins is the maker of Toni's Ice Cream, one of a number of local Idaho products carried at the Boise Co-op. The co-op, founded in 1973 for members only, was selected for an advertising campaign called "A Story on Every Aisle."

"The story of Toni is so fabulous. They are all stories of hope and courage and beating the odds."

— Jodi Peterson, director of advertising and marketing for the 40,000-member Boise Co-op.

Peterson created the campaign this year for five vendors. Although the Boise Co-op has shifted away from a membership operation with everyone working to stock shelves, it hasn't lost its grassroots feel. This week, the story of Toni and her Ketchum ice cream airs on Boise networks and three FM radio stations. Los Pastors Salsa, Toni's Ice Cream, Snake River Farms, Dream Chocolate and Wildflower Bakery owners were featured in 30-second spots that changed their business.

"The most vital part of stories can be told in 30 seconds," said Peterson. "It's just finding it that takes time."

Peterson said Ken Cavanaugh, founder of the Boise Co-op, likes to tell the story of an attractive blond

Cost cut for small business program

WASHINGTON — For the thousands of small businesses nationwide that rely on the Small Business Administration's 7(a), lending program to start and expand their ventures, some relief came through this week when an amendment to the Science, State, Justice and Commerce Appropriations bill successfully passed the House of Representatives to lower the cost of the program.

The measure, introduced by Congresswoman Nydia M. Velázquez, the ranking Democrat on the House Small Business Committee, was supported by 20 prominent small business groups, and passed with a vote of 214 to 207, including 17 Republicans, according to a news release from the congresswoman's office.

"At a time when small businesses are being hit with skyrocketing health-care and energy costs, this measure is a huge step forward in ensuring they are able to access the capital they need to remain as this nation's main job creators," Velázquez said in the news release.

The Bush administration eliminated funding for the program two years ago, forcing small businesses to shoulder the cost of the initiative.

Idaho invites entries Award invites entries

BOISE — Stool Rives LLP, a regional business law firm, is organizing the inaugural Idaho Innovation Awards program.

The program, presented by the Idaho Office of Science and Technology and sponsored by Hewlett-Packard, is designed to recognize innovations and the Idaho companies that created them. Entry forms can be downloaded from www.stool.com/innovation and may be submitted online before July 14.

The Idaho Innovation Awards program recognizes innovations in eight categories: Agriculture/Environment/Recreation, chemical/materials science, computer hardware/electrical devices, software, imaging/optical technology, mechanical devices, biosciences/medical devices and semiconductor manufacturing.

Two finalists and one winner will be selected from each category. The entries are judged by a selection committee composed of more than 40 leaders from private industry, government and higher education.

Finalists and winners will be recognized at an awards luncheon Sept. 26 at the Boise Centre on the Grove.

Piracy saga is right out of Hollywood

By Richard Verier
Los Angeles Times

HOLLYWOOD — After six months on the trail of an alleged Russian pirate, Joan Borsten was closing in.

She had stalked out the scruffy-looking young man who she thought was strangling her film distribution business. Now he was in her sights. Borsten peered out through the curtained windows of a minivan as a private eye she'd hired snapped photographs using a telephoto lens.

Click. The suspected pirate appears with a customer (actually a friend of Borsten's) who'd just bought 80 counterfeit DVDs of titles Borsten owns.

Click. The buyer and the seller shake hands.

Click. The target jumps into his BMW SUV and drives off.

Could it be that he was getting away? What happened next was the culmination of Borsten's tireless crusade to save her Malibu-based film distribution business from an alleged piracy ring with ties to Russia. With the help of a detective named Jake, an actress playing "Natalya" and Oleg Vidov, Borsten's real-life husband who was once known as the Robert Redford of Soviet-era cinema, this 38-year-old grandmother masterminded an amateur spying operation.

"I don't think he had any idea of who he was going up against," Vidov said of the man they believed was running the piracy ring. "She is a street fighter."

Major Hollywood studios aren't the only victims of movie piracy. Ask the owners of Southern California's many small production and distribution companies, and they'll tell you their survival depends on curbing counterfeiting. But saying it needs to be stopped is one thing — doing it is another.

That's what sets Borsten apart. The Santa Monica native is a short, spirited woman who is fluent in five languages and harbors a passion for Russian fairy tales.

She and her husband used their actor friends and their knowledge of the Russian emigre community to infiltrate a world that often confounds even Hollywood's anti-piracy agency, the Motion Picture Association of America.

Borsten owns the international distribution rights to a library of 1,200 Russian animated films with such titles as "Little Locomotive From Romashkovo," "Tale About Czar Sultan" and "Vasilisa the Beautiful." She makes a living, in part, selling DVDs of these titles to small specialty stores that serve Russian communities around the country.

But in December, she noticed a sudden drop in Los Angeles area orders to her company, Films by Jove. Worried, Borsten visited a bookstore in the area and posed as an American grandmother buying cartoons for her adopted Russian grandchild. She found half a dozen pirated versions of Films by Jove videos, including one of her favorites, "I'll Get You," a Russian Tom and Jerry-type series.

The videos appeared to be homemade. Each had the same make of case, photo color inserts, and poor picture and sound quality. And they sold for $10 each, about half the normal retail price.

"I was shocked. There was no way that we were going to sit back and lose the second-largest market in the U.S. to a pirate operation out of a Hollywood pick house," Borsten said, using the industry lingo for a piracy operation. "I had to get to the bottom of it."

It wasn't the first time Borsten and Vidov had taken action to protect their business. During the last decade, they've been involved in numerous legal battles to protect copyrights on their film library, which

Former SEC attorney says he was fired after trying to subpoena investment bank CEO

By Marcy Gordon
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — A former government attorney told Congress on Wednesday that he was fired last summer after he tried to subpoena a prominent Wall Street executive to testify in an insider-trading investigation of a major hedge fund.

Attorney Gary Aguirre, who led the Securities and Exchange Commission's investigation into Pequot Capital Management Inc., said he was told by his supervisors that it would be difficult to obtain the subpoenas because the executive had "very powerful political connections."

The SEC was investigating whether the hedge fund had received a tip from an individual about an upcoming merger.

By mid-June, growing evidence pointed to one person, the former CEO of a large investment bank, Aguirre said in written testimony to the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Under questioning by committee members, he identified the executive as John Mack, who is the chairman and chief executive of investment house Morgan Stanley Inc.

Morgan Stanley, one of the largest U.S. securities firms, said Aguirre had provided no evidence to support his allegation against Mack. "No one has provided any evidence that Mr. Mack has engaged in any wrongdoing and Mr. Aguirre provided none today," firm spokeswoman Joannette McCadden said from New York.

Mack is an influential Wall Street figure and a major fundraiser for President Bush's campaigns. At the time in question, he was chief executive of Credit Suisse First Boston.

The committee is looking into problems involving the growing hedge fund industry, which commands trillions of dollars in assets and is believed to account for as much as 20 percent of all U.S. stock trading.

In his written testimony, Aguirre said the person he called "the suspected tipper" likely knew in advance about a merger offer, likely spoke with Pequot's CEO just before he begin to trade, "and had other personal and financial motives for tipping the hedge fund's CEO."

The attorney's allegation "raises questions about the propriety of what the SEC has done," said Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., chairman of the judiciary panel.

Aguirre also said the SEC had told him he would risk violating the law by testifying on the matter because details of a pending investigation could be made public.

More broadly, he said, the SEC and the Justice Department are falling in their duty to protect investors in the growing hedge fund industry and haven't adequately prosecuted fraud and manipulation.

Change the light bulbs to cut bills

Simple things may lower your energy costs

By Steven Marston
The Washington Post

For homeowners burning up over high gas and electric bills, there are plenty of options — and not all of them require the skills of an accountant, energy futures trader and contractor.

The simplest way to cut energy costs is simply to cut energy consumption. Tips can be found at Web sites run by the Energy Department and utility companies as well as non-profit groups such as Greener Choices and the Alliance to Save Energy.

The biggest energy users in most households are the heating and air-conditioning systems. Greener Choices.org, a Web site founded and operated by Consumer Reports, estimates that heating and cooling typically use 45 percent of a household's energy.

Adjusting the thermostat or buying a programmable thermostat can help cut costs. During winter, turning down the heat from 72 degrees to 68 degrees for eight hours a day saves one's home (or when everyone's asleep) can cut fuel costs by 10 percent, according to Peppo, which provides electricity in the Washington region.

In summer, every degree you raise your thermostat can save 5 percent of fuel costs, Peppo says. Using fans to feel a bit cooler costs less than lowering the thermostat.

The easiest way to cut heating costs is to plug leaks in the windows during the winter. For about $8, you can buy a sheet of plastic to fit over a sliding door to a deck and seal its edges with a hair dryer. Weather stripping can help, too. Closing the flue of a fireplace can prevent heat from rising out of the chimney. In many houses, changing to more energy-efficient windows can help, but if the house is an older one, make sure the correct window size is still manufactured.

Hot water is the next biggest home-energy guzzler. The temperature on hot water heaters is often set at 140 degrees, but it doesn't need to be more than 120 degrees. (And the lower setting can be safer, too, reducing the risk of scalding children.) Washing clothes in cold water instead of hot water can save about $50 a year, Peppo estimates. New showerheads (if the existing one is more than 10 years old) cut hot water use without any discernible difference in pressure.

"The story of Toni is so fabulous," said Peterson. "They are all stories of hope and courage and beating the odds."
Focused on the story behind several single proprietor businesses, the "A Story on Every Aisle" campaign won the Idaho State Broadcasters Association award for Best Commercial Series and the Idaho Advertising Federation Rocky Awards for Best Commercial Series.

Toni's Ice Cream was the last to be shot and aired.
A camera crew of two from Channel 9, KNIN, the only independent broadcast station in Boise and one of the only independent stations in Idaho, filmed her around town on Wednesday, June 21. Brian Nelson and Andy Favore drove to Ketchum for the first time to capture Toni in action for the Boise Co-op. The connection between the Boise Co-op and the independent station is no accident.

"The Boise Co-op supports local and we do the least corporate we can get," Peterson said.

The Boise Co-op is the only Boise location carrying Toni's Ice Cream, another tribute to staying away from big and corporate.

Sun Valley Juice Company and Big Wood Bread also sold Toni, putting a bit of Sun Valley into Boise. Under the direction of Peterson and the creative team for the past 24 months has been growing at the unheard-of rate of 23 percent to 27 percent

When you start with no advertising at all you can make big strides," said Peterson, who competition than it could have five years ago.
Much of this is due to Peterson's efforts at creating a grocery that is more than a grocery. The 24,000-square-foot operation on 888 W. Fort St. connects people with their food stuffs.

"We are not just about moving product off the shelves," said Peterson. "And Toni Deakin is not about being another product on the shelf, either.

Still working completely alone with the exception of occasional help at private parties and events, Deakin always brings a personal touch to her

In the beginning, on June 20, 2000, as a matter of fact, she was a waitress at Sushi on Second and an ice cream chef on the side, a job that happened when she agreed to make ginger ice cream for the sushi restaurant in Ketchum.

"I love what I do," she said. "I had employees once and it was distracting."
At times, she unlocks the door to her Northwood Way kitchen at 5 a.m., cranks up the radio volume knob, and works merrily at her own speed. Atkinson's Market in Ketchum remains her largest account by a huge margin, but the Boise Co-op ad campaign could change that.

Deakin said she's ready. And Peterson smiles at those words, because she's seen what commercial exposure can do

First, Borsten asked a Russian friend to visit other Russian video and book stores in West Hollywood and the San Fernando Valley. The woman bought several bootleg videos of film by Joe Vitales and reported that store owners had told her to come back in a few weeks, when they would receive a new supply.

Borsten suspected that the stores were buying from a single supplier. Now she had to find him.

So she and Vidov, who is also her business partner, wrote a script featuring a character called Natyia, who is described in court records as an "unscrupulous hard-edged businessman looking for bootleg tapes at the cheapest possible price."

Vidov put out the word among Russian actors he knew, and soon found an actress who was perfect for the part: "She has a really good range. She can play a peasant woman or a princess." And this "was the best role in Hollywood."

Fed mulling interest rates at two-day session

The funds rate influences a variety of interest rates, such as those on adjustable-rate and other mortgages. It also affects rates on business loans.

In response to the Fed's expected move, commercial banks are poised to boost their prime lending rate — used for certain credit cards, home equity and other loans — to 8.25 percent.

"That will hit people in the pocketbook," said Anthony Sabino, professor of business law and economics at St. John's University.

The essence of Mexico

Colorful history, landscapes abound in Quintana Roo

Mexico is a land of diversity, a colorful kaleidoscope of fascinating landscapes and history. The southeastern coast of the state of Quintana Roo is an excellent place to set off on a journey of discovery into the land of enchantment.

Beginning at Tulum and following the Costa Maya for about 60 miles to the south, travelers will quickly be immersed in the essence of Mexico. Thick vegetation and small pueblos take the place of turquoise blue waters and white sandy beaches.

After cruising 15 miles, your first history lesson kicks in

Located on the banks of the Laguna de Chunyaxche, this site was once occupied by the Maya from the first century A.D. until the Spanish conquest of 1519. Six buildings remain standing. One of the most significant is the Castillo, which is located midway on the causeway of the ancient city. This structure supports a circular tower, which is the only building of this kind ever found in the land of the Maya.

On to Felipe Carrillo Puerto, a small, simple town that has experienced big changes in the last 150 years. Mystery continues to shroud this place, which is known as one of the last holdout places for the Maya. Legend tells us that this is the place where insurgent Maya forces witnessed what they reported to be a talking cross.

This cross supposedly assured the Mayan group that they should continue to hold out against federal forces. If so, they would have a decisive victory over the oppressing Mexican government. This movement went on until 1935 when the group finally grew weary after years of famine, sickness and fighting. The town still has a slight feeling of separatism, and it is definitely worth a stopover to see the sites.

Beauty beyond description met us as we drove along the banks of Laguna Bacalar, known in Mexico as the Las Lagunas de siete colores (The lagoons of seven colors). On the shore of the multi-colored water another history lesson came into view as we discovered Fort Bacalar. This fortified structure was built in the 18th century by the Spanish for protection against invading Maya and pirates that were known for raids in the area. Today, visitors can view the restored-stone construction complete with canons. A small museum is on site, helping visitors gain a better understanding of local history.

Our day was nearly done as we pulled into one of the most beautiful cenotes in Mexico, Cenote Azul. Crystal clear water lined with hibiscus turned out to be the perfect place to enjoy a swim and a delicious meal of fresh lobster, salsa, tortillas and locally-grown vegetables. As we sat along the edge of the cenote, we cherished the moments of our day on the Costa Maya.

Once again, Mexico proved to be a unending vista of delights. Every place reveals itself to be so interesting, every color so vivid, every scent so pure. Discover it for yourself.

Studies suggest coercive tactics are still pervasive in politics

The Washington Post

MEXICO CITY — The death of one-party rule in Mexico promised a new era of cleaner elections.

But two studies suggest that the first presidential contest since Vicente Fox ended the Institutional Revolutionary Party's seven-decade hold on power in 2000 may be tainted by many of the same coercive tactics that marred previous balloting.

Millions of poor Mexicans have been threatened with exclusion from health care and social assistance programs if they do not vote for various candidates, the studies show. Others, mostly in rural areas, have been given cash payoffs of $40 to $60 for their votes, a tidy sum in a country where the poorest families subsist on less than $4 a day.

The authors of the studies said the coercion is so pervasive that it could swing the outcome of the July 2 election, particularly if the front-runners, Felipe Calderon of Fox's National Action Party and Andres Manuel Lopez Obrador of the Democratic Revolutionary Party, finish within two percentage points of each other.

"It is ingrained in our political culture — they sell their votes because they don't think their votes make a difference," said Sergio Aguayo, a Mexico City political analyst who oversaw one of the studies.

Democracy in Mexico "is weak," Aguayo's report said, "because beneficiaries of social programs don't know their rights and don't know how to defend themselves" when pressured to vote for a candidate.

The studies were conducted by Alianza Civica, a nonpartisan citizens' group that receives financial support from the United Nations and works to aid Mexico's transition to democracy, and the Center for Higher Study of Social Anthropology, a research institution that was hired by Mexico's social development agency to conduct independent voter research.

The organizations interviewed thousands of voters. The Center for Higher Study of Social Anthropology study included a poll of more than

"It is ingrained in our political culture — they sell their votes because they don't think their votes make a difference."

— Sergio Aguayo, a Mexico City political analyst

4,600 voters in four Mexican states, while the Alianza Civica probe was undertaken in 101 cities in 22 states.

Elected officials, who have conducted voter education campaigns throughout the country, said they were confident the results would be fair but acknowledged that some vote-buying was taking place.

Marco Gomez, a member of the governing body of Mexico's Federal Electoral Institute, which enforces campaign law and tabulates results, said he did not believe the vote-buying schemes could sway the election.

"Every time we vote, these tactics are less effective," he said.

The studies said that all three major parties pressure and pay off voters. Each of the studies found that the Institutional Revolutionary Party, or PRI, is the most coercive, followed by the National Action Party, whose standard-bearers are Fox and Calderon. Lopez Obrador's Democratic Revolutionary Party, which is the smallest and youngest of the three major parties, is the least coercive, the studies showed.

As many as 4 million voters, or about 1 in 20 of those registered, have been paid to vote for a candidate, Alianza Civica said in its report, which was released last week. Much of the coercion, it concluded, is applied by local and state officials who control health, welfare and farm aid programs. The group's director, Silvia Alonso, also faulted Fox's government for not taking a more aggressive stand against coercive practices.

"It's sad," she said. "We're still in the process of transitioning to democracy."

The authors of both studies acknowledged that Mexico had come a long way from the heyday of the PRI era, when soldiers and police often harassed voters and vote-counting fraud was common. As recently as 1988, independent observers have said, the PRI blatantly stole a presidential election by staging a fake computer crash.

"Certainly things are better now than in the past — in the past, the president and the PRI controlled everything," Aguayo said, "you have to fight for democracy every day."

the electoral process," Aguayo said. "But things are still not as they should be."

Half of the 4,400 voters interviewed by Alianza Civica said social programs in their areas were being used to benefit supporters of political parties. The study's findings indicate that vote-buying and coercion are likely to increase this week, in the final days before the election.

There has been almost no effort to prosecute public officials for vote-buying or coercion. The Center for Higher Study of Social Anthropology, which last week re-released a report it first presented in April, recommended increasing voter education and referring cases of vote-buying to law enforcement authorities.

"In a democracy," Aguayo said, "you have to fight for democracy every day."

Beautiful, frightening on display in a sacred Mayan exhibit in New York

NEW YORK — The men are fierce. Huge feathers, issue from their heads, or their teeth part in angry grimaces. One has disks around his eyes that would make him look comical if he weren't so fearsome. Another is girded by snakes that twist round and round his body. These are Maya kings, all-powerful, divine and responsible for the annual corn crop, for the seasons' return, for the yearly creation of the world anew.

The Metropolitan Museum of Art uses these beautiful, frightening objects to explore the expanding concept of Maya spirituality between 200 BC and AD 600, when kings consolidated power. Coming mostly from collections in Honduras, Guatemala and Mexico, they study how abstract notions of power could be translated into concrete, often chilling, visual form.

Many of the objects at the Met depict them in ceremonial regalia: great beaked and feathered masks, heavy belts with decorated inlaid shells and intricate, swirling jewelry. As conduits between mortal and divine realms, kings were expected to peek into the celestial sphere and report back. To that end, they employed personal bloodletting, human sacrifices and hallucinogens.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

Bobby Wolff

"The world continues to offer glittering prizes to those who have stout hearts and sharp swords."

— Earl of Birkenhead

Today's deal was a hand-of-the-year award a decade ago. In four spades doubled, declarer ruffed the club lead and saw that if he played a heart to dummy's queen and East's ace, ace and another spade would leave him ruffed to find the heart jack. Declarer reckoned that East's bidding suggested a long club suit, along with most of the missing high-card points. Accordingly, he decided to play West for the heart jack, so he successfully ran the 10 of hearts. East won his ace and played a second club.

Declarer ruffed and saw that if he played the spade king, it would surely hold. East would win the next trump and force him with another club. He could ruff and draw trump, but the heart suit would be blocked. To run the hearts, he would now need the heart jack to drop doubleton. Conversely, if declarer cashed the heart queen before playing trump, East would win the second round of trumps, put his partner in with the diamond ace, and obtain a heart ruff.

Declarer guided a neat solution. Having guessed hearts so well, that he did not need to ruff one in dummy, he now reversed tack and played the heart king, then ruffed a heart with the spade king. At this point he led dummy's remaining trump. East could win and force him with another club, but declarer just drew trump and claimed his contract.

ANSWER: Pass. Your partner has suggested a six-card heart suit, but without enough values to bid two hearts at his first turn. Typically you would expect 6-9 points for this sequence, so nothing about your hand should suggest to you the need to go higher.

VIDEO GAME REVIEW

For people who like deep strategic thinking, GCII is better than a 3-D chess tournament.

Everybody wants to rule the worlds

BY JOHN BREEDEN II
 The Washington Post

"Galactic Civilizations II: Dread Lords" (PC/Windos 98 or higher, $45), has more in common with complex board games than with other computer simulations. Strategy is key as the game uses a turn-based interface, and twitchy reflexes don't amount to much while trying to chart your civilization's destiny.

There is a single-player campaign that involves the awakening of the precursor Dread Lords society, which is megapowerful and just as evil. But most people will play in the mode where they try to explore space and inevitably get a little too close to the galactic neighbors.

You control every aspect of your chosen society, be it the humans or the warlike Drengrin or any of 10 races, each with positives and negatives. If you don't like the options, you can create your own. Once you get going, you need to build colony ships and send them into the galaxy. Once you've found a new world, you are given a certain number of build spaces where you can put factories, farms, laboratories, space ports or other facilities.

You also must plan the overall direction of your society by researching such various technologies as beam weapons, advanced farming techniques and miniaturization. You also control the major political faction of your government and must keep people happy to maintain power.

And you will run into moral dilemmas, such as discovering intelligent but primitive beings on planets you want to colonize and either leaving them alone, corralling them into an area away from your colony or exterminating them. The choices you make will slowly change your empire toward good or evil.

Did I mention that space is not friendly? Some things will help you out, but others would rather eliminate the competition. So you must defend your claims and take preemptive action.

You can eventually command massive fleets and armies, though the game never leaves its turn-based play style. For people who like deep strategic thinking, GCII is better than a 3-D chess tournament. People used to a bit more action will probably grow bored quickly as they wait for their strategies to slowly come to fruition.

Where to find fun this Fourth of July

Three-Horn

Two birthday parties, a dozen and a half fireworks displays and innumerable picnics. There's no reason to stay home on the Fourth of July in south-central Idaho.

Buhl and Rupert both turn 100 this year, and they're using traditional Independence Day festivals—Buhl's Sagebrush Days and Rupert's Fourth of July Celebration—as their big parties. In Twin Falls, between 10,000-15,000 spectators are expected for an expanded Fourth of July fireworks display on the campus of the College of Southern Idaho.

Twin Falls

The fireworks will be bigger than ever, according to the Twin Falls organization that has taken over the Fourth of July celebration. Olivia Rowe of the Greater Twin Falls Association of Realtors says businesses and individuals have come forward with enough money to pay for more pyrotechnics than in past years.

The City of Twin Falls has contracted with a fireworks company from Rexburg that is promising at least twice the number of aerial shells than any previous local display has featured, according to Rowe.

Major sponsors of the fireworks—Buhl's RV Operations Management International and the City of Twin Falls—are donating a total of $20,000.

The celebration will start when food vendors get set up on CSI campus late Tuesday afternoon. People are welcome to stake out their favorite campus locations for gatherings, picnics or barbecues.

The Twin Falls Municipal Band will play a concert of patriotic music starting at 8 p.m. on the north side of the Student Union Building. At about the same time, the Lighthouse Christian Fellowship will sponsor its own musical event and gathering in a grassy area just north of the Canyon Building. Both events are free.

Tanner Langway plays with a balloon motorcycle with his great-aunt Mae Bubel, at Rupert Square during the Rupert Fourth of July celebration in 2004. Rupert's centennial Independence Day celebration opens Friday.

Meanwhile, Lezamis Real Estate Co., Wells Fargo and Wolverton Homes will sponsor a free public barbecue at the Lezamis offices across Fillmore Street from the Fred Meyer parking lot, starting at about 6 p.m.

While the new pyrotechnicians have not identified the launching site yet, it is presumed they will stage from just north of the campus in the Breckenridge Endowment land along North College Road, according to CSI spokesman Doug Maughan. The fireworks will begin at dark, which is approximately 10:20 p.m.

Buhl

The Buhl Chamber of Commerce and Buhl Centennial Committee have joined forces to bring the community an extended weekend of family fun events.

Hundreds of visitors are expected to be out and about for Buhl's Sagebrush Days. New events such as the All-Alumni Picnic on Tuesday at 5 p.m. in McCusky Park and the Northwest Engine and Tractor Show are expected to draw folks from around the country.

The All-Alumni Picnic is a special centennial-year event for anybody who graduated from Buhl High School.

"We have sold hundreds of tickets in advance so if you didn't buy one you are going to miss out on a great time," said Mayor Barbara Gletzen, who serves as co-vic president of the Centennial committee.

"We have our usual events, like the parade, tractor pull, firehouse competition and fireworks, but have added the tractor show and also have the multi-denominational revival set over the weekend as well," said Linda Winn, administrative assistant for the Chamber.

The Northwest Regional Engine and Tractor Show is especially timely for Buhl's centennial year, says Holly Langdon, who along with husband, Lauren, are members of the Branch 150 Snake River Antique Power Association.

It's their branch's turn to host the annual show for the region that includes Idaho, Alaska, Idaho, Montana, Oregon, Washington and Wyoming.

More than 40 exhibitors with their historic agricultural equipment are scheduled to attend the event, which runs Saturday through Tuesday in Eastman Park, according to Langdon.

"This is the perfect tie-in to the centennial," she said. "The mission of the group is to preserve the days of old and stimulate an interest in collecting, restoring, preserving and exhibiting gasoline and oil engines, gas/diesel and steam tractors, power-driven farm machines and other equipment of historical value."

With Buhl's farming tradition, locals should get a kick out of seeing how far they've come, Langdon says.

Some machines will be demonstrated, and one will be set up to make ice cream.

This year's Sagebrush Days follow the centennial theme of "Desert Brown to Valley Green." Residents 90 years and older are being honored as the parade's grand marshals.

The parade, one of the highlights of Sagebrush Days, starts at 10:30 a.m. Tuesday.

"Entries in the parade will continue up to the moment of 'go,'" said Charlotte Frazer, Chamber Director. "And there is no cost."

Road closures in and around Buhl for the parade will begin at 9 a.m., starting with one mile of Burley Avenue between the Corner Merc and Main Street. Only parade entries will be allowed to enter this area after 9.

The parade will start at the west end of Main Street and travel onto Broadway Avenue, then turn right at Fair Street. The procession will then head down Sprague Avenue.

Other Sagebrush Days-related activities:

'SUPERMAN RETURNS'

Still faster than a speeding bullet

BY CHRISTY LEMIRE
The Associated Press

Finally this summer, the hype is justified.

"Superman Returns" is everything you'd want it to be. It's reverential of the source material, yet a unique film all its own. It's steeped in decadent art-deco mood and details, yet completely current. It's joyous with the possibility of discovery, yet deeply moving in its melancholy. It should satisfy purists and attract new converts.

But most importantly for a summer blockbuster, it's just outright thrilling.

With technology having vastly improved since the original "Superman" from 1978, director Bryan Singer has constructed a visual marvel. The enormous set pieces are jaw-droppingly elaborate, especially a visceral near-plane crash toward the film's start that will leave you on the verge of simultaneous laughter and tears. (At a recent screening, it prompted many in the packed theater to burst into applause, and justifiably so.)

Having infused the first two "X-Men" movies with equal amount of dazzle and heart, Singer shows he's the ideal choice to take over the beloved franchise. He definitely has his own vision, but he was smart enough to retain key elements from the original film, including John Williams' score — the first few notes of which will surely inspire a wistful sense of childhood nostalgia — and archive footage of Marlon Brando as Superman's father, Jor-El.

And yet, there's something softer, sweeter, warmer about this "Superman" than its predecessors, both in its tone and its performances.

With his jet-black hair, blue eyes, chiseled facial features and muscular bod, Brandon Routh bears a great resemblance to the late Christopher Reeve — and is just as lovably klutzy in bespectacled Clark Kent mode — but he portrays the DC Comics superhero with more introspection and vulnerability, and not as much slam-bang charisma.

As Lex Luthor, Kevin Spacey does his best work since "American Beauty" and reminds us that, after starring in a string of maudlin flops, he still knows how to deliver a complex, subtle performance. He doesn't chew the scenery as Gene Hackman did in portraying the self-proclaimed criminal mastermind, but he's smolderingly smarmy in a way that's just as amusing.

Kate Bosworth, meanwhile — who happened to play Sandra Dee opposite Spacey's Bobby Darin in the soggy biopic "Beyond the Sea" — gives us a surprisingly toned-down Lois Lane. It's a bit jarring at first until you stop and realize that the hard-driving, chain-smoking girl reporter is a woman now: her mother to a young son with her longtime fiancé (James Marsden). Lois has matured and found that her priorities have somewhat shifted.

She doesn't need Superman to save her. She even wrote an editorial, "Why the World Doesn't Need Superman," to prove it — and earned a Pulitzer Prize in the process.

Things have changed in "Superman Returns." And things have stayed the same.

After a long visit to the lost remains of the planet Krypton, Superman (Brandon Routh) returns to earth to reclaim the love of Lois Lane and battle long-time nemesis Lex Luthor in "Superman Returns."

Sort of a sequel to 1960's "Superman II," this new film takes a little while to get going, but begins with the Man of Steel returning to Metropolis after a five-year absence. He'd gone searching for the remnants of his destroyed home planet, Krypton, and comes back to Earth finding that he still hasn't found what he's looking for.

But he knows to begin life again as Clark Kent at The Daily Planet (where Frank Langella has taken over as a comparatively authoritative Editor Perry White) and he responds just as instinctively to the first signs of trouble.

At the same time, Lex Luthor is back, too. He's gotten out of prison on a technicality and has an expanded posse of sycophants, including the always hilarious Parker Posey as his floozy Girl Friday in an eye-popping array of '40s-style ensembles. Here, as in the original "Superman," Lex has his eye on land, but instead of taking over California, he wants his own continent.

As always, Superman must stop him while simultaneously rescuing Lois, both literally and emotionally. Yes, "Superman Returns" is rooted firmly in the action-packed comic book world, which should keep the fanboys happy. But fundamentally, it's also a romance — a story of unattainable, impossible love that aches with longing and sadness.

So does the world really need Superman? Maybe not everyone. But people who love movies do.

• "The Devil Wears Prada" / No rating Meryl Streep steals this movie in the role of fashion magazine editor from hell. Anne Hathaway is the fresh-out-of-college assistant who transforms from preppy to fashionista with impossibly dizzying speed. PG-13.

• "The Da Vinci Code" / B If you liked the book, you'll probably like the movie. If not... well, it's hard to say. Ron Howard's very literal adaptation of Dan Brown's best-seller stars Tom Hanks as a Harvard symbologist (he does codes, hence the title) unwittingly caught up in a mystery that could crack two millenniums of traditional Christian doctrine wide open. Less blasphemous than boring (if you know the book) or confusing (if you don't know the book), the film is, please remember, fiction, not, well, gospel truth. Ian McKellen steals his every scene as a guy as mad about the Holy Grail as Monty Python and Indiana Jones put together. Rated PG-13 (disturbing images, violence, some nudity, thematic material, brief drug references and sexual content). 2 hours, 29 minutes.

• "Ice Age: The Meltdown" / B Welcome back Manny the mammoth (Ray Romano), Sid the sloth (John Leguizamo) and Diego the saber-toothed tiger (Denis Leary). And meet Ellie (Queen Latifah), a mammoth who believes she is an opossum, and her two opossum "brothers," Crash and Eddie (Seann William Scott and Josh Peck). Global warming is going to melt the glaciers and flood their valley, so off they go, on a series of amiable adventures. The stakes aren't quite as high as the first "Ice Age," and the intensity is dialed down. Good for families, but the filmmakers could have tried harder. Rated PG (mild language and innuendo). 1 hour, 30 minutes.

• "An Inconvenient Truth" / B Lights! Camera! Take Action! That's the message of this entertaining, exceedingly well-researched documentary about global warming. Narrated by new and improved Al Gore (funny, passionate, personable), the film uses statistics, charts, photos, graphics, even a cartoon to show us a planet cooking itself to death. Gore, who comes off as your favorite science teacher ever, insists this is a moral issue, not a political one, but the film does seem to be buffing his political star. Rated PG (mild thematic elements). 1 hour, 40 minutes.

• "The Lake House" / C+ The sort of movie you either go with or run from. Based on a Korean film, it's a time-tripping romance that's part "Ghost," part "Twilight Zone," part "You've Got Mail." Former "Speed" costars Sandra Bullock and Keanu Reeves share a lake house outside Chicago and fall in love via notes they leave in their magical mailbox. See, she's living at the house in 2006 and he's there in 2004. If you need a certain logic in your fantasy-romances, never mind, but if you can forgive some gaps in a time-warped love story, well, the movie holds up its end. Rated PG (some language and a disturbing image). 1 hour, 38 minutes.

• "The Omen" / C+ Mostly identical in story line to the fine and horrific 1976 original a diplomat (the capable and cardboard-like Liev Schreiber) and his wife (the equally capable and cardboard-like Julia Stiles) end up with a newborn son, Damien, who may or may not be the Antichrist. The movie is so like its original growling dogs, strange deaths, a priest howling warnings one might suspect this "Omen" to be a predictable retreat. It isn't. Though often noticeably inferior to its predecessor, it's watchable for its solid supporting performances (Pete Postlethwaite, David Thewlis, Michael Gambon and, especially, Mia Farrow) and gruesome depictions of death. Rated R (disturbing violent content, graphic images and some profanity). 1 hour, 50 minutes.

• "Over the Hedge" / B This energetic family-pleaser should make a lot of kids and their adults happy. With winter gone, some woodland chums get spring, only to find a subdivision in the middle of their former forest. The excellent voice talent includes Bruce Willis, Steve Carell, Wanda Sykes and Gary Shandling. Move millions from masterpiece, but certainly entertaining. Rated PG (some rude humor and mild comic action). 1 hour, 24 minutes.

• "Poseidon" / B Water, water everywhere and not a thought to think which is just as it should be. This kinda-sorta remake of the cheesy 1972 disaster classic "The Poseidon Adventure" treads water when something's not exploding or someone's not being heroic (or getting killed). But that's what movies like this are all about: not a special effects, not complex emotions, Josh Lucas, Kurt Russell and Richard Dreyfuss are among those trying to keep their heads above water. Rated PG-13 (intense prolonged sequences of disaster and peril). 1 hour, 39 minutes.

• "A Prairie Home Companion" / A As inviting as a plate of butter milk biscuits, as unexpected as a slice of rhubarb pie and as wistful as a round of "Red River Valley." This comic collaboration of director Robert Altman and radio raconteur Garrison Keillor is just plain wonderful. It's the (fictional) final performance of Keillor's beloved radio show a hedge-podge of homespun humor and old-timey music and stars like Meryl Streep, Lily Tomlin, Lindsay Lohan, John C. Reilly and Kevin Kline mingle with the program's regulars, while Virginia Madsen waits around in an ethereal white trench coat. It's meant as a farewell (Altman's now 81), it's a lovely one. Rated PG-13 (risqué humor). 1 hour, 45 minutes.

• "Superman Returns" / No rating An unwieldy sprawl of a movie about how close personal friend Lois Lane (Kate Bosworth), nemesis Lex Luthor (Kevin Spacey) and the other citizens of Metropolis react when Superman flies into town after being AWOL for five years. Iowa-raised Brandon Routh, whose career has been exclusively on TV, is in the title role. PG-13.

• "United 93" / A- Exactly the movie it should be - respectful of the real 9/11 victims it portrays, revealing about that horrific day's events, consistently emotionally gripping and, most certainly, startlingly honest. "United 93" underscores the confusion, the hysteria and dumbfounding reality that gripped us all as unfaithful plane hijackings resulted in attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon. Ultimately, the film's heart is the story of everyday people on United Flight 93. They are men and women leading everyday lives who face fear and most certain death — and decide to do something about it. Rated R (profanity and some intense sequences of terror and violence). 1 hour, 51 minutes.

• "X-Men: The Last Stand" / B Not Exceptional, but still quite entertaining. A cure has been found for the mutant gene, and the good-guy mutants Wolverine (Hugh Jackman), Storm (Halle Berry), etc. see it as a choice, not a dictate. The bad-guy mutants, led by Magneto (Ian McKellen), see it as a threat. Add in a wild card and the newly resurrected and hugely powerful Icy Wreid (Ramon Jansen) and all hell is about to break loose. Though the "X-Men" movies always deserve an A for effort, this time, the effort shows a bit more. rated PG-13 (intense sequences of action violence, some sexual content and language). 1 hour, 44 minutes.

"Failure to Launch"

"Failure to Launch" is the only American comedy in a long time that could be called Wilderian (as in Billy Wilder) in its concept and execution.

Wilder loved sex; he loved lies, duplicity, the clumsy helplessness of the nominal moral man before an all-too-great temptation, and the later resolve, somehow, desperately, to make it all right. That's the conceit of "Failure to Launch," and it's why the movie is one of the best American films in months and months.

It even makes you sorta kinda like Matthew McConaughey. The film takes off from the slightly sordid reality that all too many young men of the bourgeois, bright, reasonably prosperous and also well-pleased by the indulgences of liberal parents have no incentive to leave home.

So it is with Tripp (McConaughey), a beautiful 35-year-old boy-man. He lives in the same room he has lived in for 34 years. Mom Sue (Cathy Bates, good-natured and shumpy) vacuums his floor, makes his bed, does his laundry and cooks pancakes for breakfast. Meanwhile his dad, Al (amiable Terry Bradshaw, less mable than when he's on Fox), just smiles and feeds the fish.

What these people need is a professional. They find one in Paula (Sarah Jessica Parker in her best movie role), a specialist in emptying nests. She contrives a meeting with Mr. Forlorn, gets him to fall in love with her, pumps up his self-esteem and confidence, and gets him to move out. Her only rule is: No sex, please, I'm not slutish.

Thus the older folks hire her; thus she sweeps into Tripp's life, and her view of love is both shrewd and cynical. She's used to success: She gets "the client" to follow her to the ends of the earth or, more to the point, out the door. It's unstated that once he's fled the coop, she dumps him.

On this simple, sturdy frame, the writers work all kinds of comic riffs. Every character has been given enough quirk to make the movie sublimely enjoyable but not so much that it becomes precious. The movie is so swift and sure, you can say: It achieves lift-off.

"Madea's Family Reunion"
PG-13

Tyler Perry's heart is in the right place, but he still has a tin ear.

The same tonal problems that plagued last year's "Diary of a Mad Black Woman" resurface in "Madea's Family Reunion."

Serving this time as director besides having written the script and starring in three roles — including, of course, dragging it up as the pistol-packing, plus-sized Aunt Madea — Perry has a message of empowerment and self-respect that's not just important for women to hear, it's essential.

Sarah Jessica Parker's job is to get Matthew McConaughey out of the house in "Failure to Launch."

He also has a few choice words for the men in the audience: Stand by your women and your families. They need you.

Unfortunately, all that too often gets muddled in his mess of a screenplay. Maybe the material worked better in its original form on stage. But in cinematic form, "Madea's Family Reunion," like its predecessor, jumps jarringly between romance, domestic drama and broad physical comedy. At times it feels as if Perry made three separate films, dumped them in a blender and hit the puree button.

Like Kimberly Elise in Perry's first film, who went from pampered society wife to mad black woman, Rochelle Aytes stars as Lisa, the beautiful, stylish fiancée of a beautiful, stylish Atlanta investment banker. But behind closed doors, Blair Underwood's Carlos repeatedly abuses her, and Lisa's materialistic mother (Lynn Whitfield) only encourages her to withstand the beatings to maintain her comfortable life.

Madea finds time to give her and Lisa's sister, Vanessa (Lisa Arrindell Anderson), non-nonsense advice about their love lives while

Food

No problem finding a singular meal in Hagerman

BY STEVE CRUMP
Times-News Writer

HAGERMAN — If you walk into some restaurants in Europe, your bill of fare is limited to one or two to a few full-course meals.

It's an intriguing alternative to the la carte system that dominates the American hospitality industry — a chance to experience complementary flavors and combinations in a relaxed setting.

That's the idea behind the Saturday-night "soziale" supper specials at Ein Tisch Inn, a three-year-old bed-and-breakfast on Hagerman's west end that's rapidly becoming one of the Magic Valley's worst-kept culinary secrets. Ein Tisch also serves lunch on Tuesdays, Friday-night appetizers and pizza on one Sunday a month, but on Saturday nights chefs Jake and

About the Ein Tisch Inn

165 W. Valley Road, Hagerman — Ethnic cuisine with a menu that changes weekly: "Friday on Tuesday" lunches and Friday night appetizers, $4.50-$12.50. Saturday evening's exotic supper specials, $15-$20. Wine, beer, hours: Tuesdays through Thursdays, 11 a.m.-2 p.m.; Fridays, 5-10 p.m.; Saturdays, 5-9 p.m. Pizza on Sunday once a month. Reservations required for private meals. Jake and Jane Rice, owners. 837-9099.

Jane Rice pull out the stops. They choose one full-course dinner to prepare, and it's worth the drive.

Once a month, it's German food ("Ein Tisch" is German for "one table," reflecting the single master table that dominates the dining room of the B&B). My wife and I stopped by on a recent Saturday and relished wiener schnitzel with wieknkraut (wine sauerkraut) and spaezle, preceded by cold cucumber soup and topped off by zitronecreme (lemon cream dessert). I don't know anywhere else in Idaho you could find such a meal.

A giant decorative spoon hangs over the dining table at the Ein Tisch Inn that says "the soup you make together you eat together."

Wiener schnitzel is a cutlet — pork in this case — that is breaded and fried. It's an Austrian dish of Italian origin, which means that it's supposed to be more subtle than heavier dishes from the German heartland.

Until my visit to the Ein Tisch, I'd never eaten wiener schnitzel that wasn't tough and which didn't taste of grease (the Viennese fry the cutlets in lard). But this one was delicious, fried in a light oil. The taste of the meat — and not the breading — dominated.

Wieknkraut, if you've never tried it, is a delightful side dish with a much milder flavor than traditional sauerkraut. But the sauerkraut has to be fresh to start with, and the wine — a $5 chardonnay off the grocery shelf won't do — has to be dry and restrained. The Rices garnish their version with grapes: it's delightful.

Cold cucumber soup was originally a French concoction, but it's the ideal prelude to any heavy meal. Made of cucumbers, chicken broth, lemon juice, sour cream and either onion or chives, it's mild but not bland.

As always, Rupert's five-day Fourth of July celebration begins with the Christmas Lights Breakfast, from 6 to 10 a.m. Friday in Rupert Square.

Breakfast will be pancakes, eggs, sausage, hash browns and coffee or coffee. Cost is $4. Afterward, food booths will open around the square.

Kids too antsy to wait for the official opening of the weekend can visit the carnival, which will open Thursday and continue through the weekend at the Minidoka County Fairgrounds.

Musical entertainment in Rupert Square and a melodrama at the Wilson Theater, presented by the Mount Harrison Heritage Foundation, are also scheduled.

Following Friday's breakfast will be speeches and modeling competition for rodeo queen contestants, which will begin at 11:30 a.m. in the gazebo.

Hailey

Hailey has been in business since 1891, and for all but two years since there has been a parade at noon every Fourth of July down Main Street.

The 123rd annual procession will be Tuesday, starting at Main and Myrtle streets and ending at Main and Cedar.

The other tradition honored over the long Fourth of July weekend will be the renewal of the Sawtooth Rangers Riding Club Rodeo, scheduled for Sunday, Monday and Tuesday nights at 7 o'clock at the rodeo grounds located north of Friedman Memorial Airport. Tickets are $15 reserved seats and $10 for general admission; kids get in for $5. Sunday is Family Night, so kids get in free with an adult.

On Tuesday, the celebration gets an early start with the annual Boy Scouts Pancake Breakfast from 8-10 a.m. at the Upper Wood River Garage Hall, 540 S. Third Ave. Tickets are $5 for adults, $3 for kids, $15 for families and $3 for seniors). At 11:30 a.m., there's the annual Old Frontier Gang "shootout" at the corner of Main and Croys streets.

After the parade, there's the annual Button Barbecue in Hop Porter Park, accompanied by live music. Tickets are $9 for adults and $6 for children 12 and under.

The fireworks will be touched off at about 10:30 p.m.—or following the completion of the rodeo—in Quigley Canyon east of town.

Burley

Burley's fireworks will be set off at about 10:15 p.m. Tuesday in the park next to the Burley Municipal Golf Course.

Jerome

Jerome's Independence Day pyrotechnics will be touched off about 10:15 p.m. Tuesday on the Jerome High School football field.

Gooding

Fireworks begin at dusk at the Gooding Middle School.

Wendell

Wendell's fireworks display will begin about 10 p.m. Tuesday east of Wendell High School.

Shoshone

A good old-fashioned 4th of July is planned Tuesday in Shoshone.

At 4 p.m., there will be jumping toys for children on the Shoshone baseball field and little park, as well as a barbecue and community potluck dinner. Hot dogs and hamburger will be provided, but those who attend should bring a side dish.

The annual north vs. south softball game will begin at 5 p.m., followed by an ice cream and cake social.

Fireworks start at dusk and everyone is invited to attend.

Sun Valley

caring for a wayward foster daughter, sparring with her dirty-old-man older brother (Perry again, in white hair and overalls) and planning the titular family reunion.

All these elements pop up out of nowhere, with seemingly no attempt at a smooth transition between them. Madae pummels a boy on the school bus who's been bullying her foster daughter. That scene is followed by a Vanessa and her new boyfriend, Frankie (Boris Kodjoe), rhapsodizing about what a blessing kids are during a play date at the park.

There is one great moment at the family reunion, though, in which Aunt Myrtle (Cicely Tyson) lovingly scolds everyone in attendance for not behaving like bitter people.

It's a rare moment of truth in a movie that too often feels either melodramatic or self-consciously madcap.

"Ultraviolet"

PG-13

Seemed like movies couldn't get much worse this year, following "Grandma's Boy," "Underworld: Evolution," "When a Stranger Calls" and "Doogal." But it has. And it's called Ultraviolet.

The movie is intended as a futuristic, comic-book-re-envisioning of the 1980 John Cassavetes film "Gloria." It is overstyled, deafening and incoherent.

Milla Jovovich stars as Violet, an angry young woman who's lost her husband and her baby after being infected with a blood disease. This has turned her into a "hemophage." Or a vampire, or something. Whatever it is, it's made her and others like her a target for the pureblooded humans, led by the obsessive-compulsive government honcho Daxus (Nick Chinlund). And it's given her mind-bogglingly complex martial-arts skills.

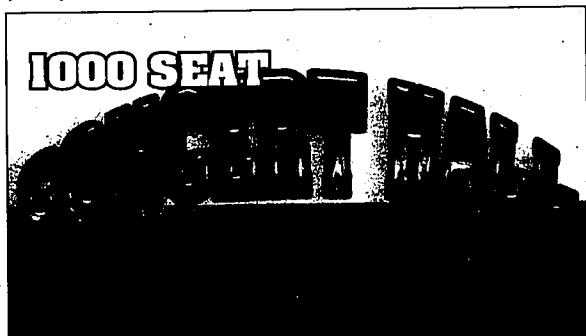

Writer-director Kun Wimmer, also responsible for the visually and thematically similar "Equilibrium" from 2002, says he created the role with Jovovich in mind. But she's impossible to take seriously. "Ultraviolet" wants desperately to be a provocative, high-concept action thriller. It is apparently trying to say something about fear and terrorism, paranoia and racism. But it looks more like a shampoo commercial.

New York opera star to sing in Sun Valley

The Times-News

KETCHUM — Leading up to Sun Valley's fireworks, big voices will entertain Wood River Valley residents and visitors

On Saturday, the Sun Valley Opera will present "Star-Spangled Voices" at its annual summer concert.

"The program includes a variety of favorite hits from the world's major stages with something for everyone, including children," said Frank Meyer, co-president of the opera. "The singers are called classical crossover due to their versatility of being able to cross over with ease from classical to popular song styles."

"Last year over 100 guests enjoyed the barbecue, which is becoming a July 4th tradition in Sun Valley," said Marsha Ingham, the other co-president of the opera. "They all sit together in the balcony at the concert, with an age range starting at age 4. This is a great opportunity to introduce children to professional performers from the New York stages of opera and Broadway and the sound of a classically trained voice."

The Del McCoury Band "The Promised Land" (McCoury Music/Sugar Hill)

The most awarded bluegrass band in the land has always drawn hosannas for its intricate instrumental interplay and the roof-raising tenor of its leader.

But "The Promised Land," The Del McCoury Band's first all-gospel album, highlights another of the quintet's outstanding virtues: their complex, stunningly beautiful vocal harmonies.

Taking a cue from fellow bluegrass star Doyle Lawson, the Nashville-based band lay church-based quartet vocal harmonies atop acoustic arrangements full of tricky, dynamic turns. Del McCoury's high, pinched tenor takes the lead, but the voices of his son Ron and Rob McCoury and fiddler Jason Carter add depth and musicality. Meanwhile, new bassist Alan Bartram proves up to the challenge of holding down the bottom for this band of virtuosos.

As for the material, the band chooses to tackle new and obscure Christian tunes rather than standard hymns. Still, the McCoury Band makes them all sound as time-tested as a favorite proverb.

Allison Moorer "Getting Somewhere" (Sugar Hill)

Allison Moorer has made a career of gutsy moves, and sudden changes in direction. "Getting Somewhere" marks her most drastic shift yet, as she reinvents herself as a modern adult rocker more akin to Liz Phair or Almee Mann than the Southern-styled Americana artist she's been in the past.

The new songs blend airy string arrangements with thumping, low-strung dirge rockers reminiscent of recent work by her second husband, Steve Earle, who produces Moorer for the first time and puts his sonic stamp on her work.

The heavier arrangements, as on the tragic family tale "New Year's Day," or the upbeat melodic rock "Work to Do," leave little room for Moorer's expressive voice.

Though still rich in tone, her vocals are too often relegated to keeping time with the complex rhythms and psychedelic undertones of her new sound.

There are several strong selections, including the touching "Where You Are," which she dedicates to her sister Shelby Lynne, and the tough podium of fly-by-night friends, "Fairweather." But overall Moorer's distinctive style seems overly restricted by her transformation.

Zitronencreme is one of those nuanced, feather-light desserts that requires a great cook to do well. Made of lemon juice, unflavored gelatin, eggs and heavy cream, it should literally melt in your mouth — and this one did.

Victoria and I each had a glass of syrah from the relatively new Cold Springs Winery in Hammett with the meal. It was a pleasant surprise.

Debra Wagoner: 'Give My Regards'

BY KAREN BOSSICK
Wood River Journal

HAILEY — Debra Wagoner hails from Richmond, Va., close to the nation's capitol. But the singing actress has made Hailey her place of choice to celebrate the nation's Independence Day for the past three years.

Wagoner's in town again — and she'll be doing a concert of Broadway and patriotic numbers with Company of Fools Musical Director R.L. Rowsey. The "Give My Regards" concert starts at 7 p.m. Saturday, Sunday and Monday at the Liberty Theater.

It'll feature such selections as "I Dreamed a Dream" from "Les Miserables," "Somewhere Over the Rainbow" from "Wizard of Oz," and several patriotic arrangements, including "God Bless America."

Wagoner will also sing "The Star Spangled Banner" at Hailey's Fourth of July Parade, before jetting to Ohio, where she is reprising ing the title role in "Always...Patsy Cline."

Rowsey said the concert is certain to add a bang to Fourth of July festivities.

"Anytime I can play for Debra it's always heaven for me," Rowsey said. "She's been such a summer institution the last three years.

Wagoner first came to the valley in 2003 to perform the role of Patsy Cline in "Always...Patsy Cline."

As word of her powerful dramatic voice spread, she found herself performing to sold-out audiences. She returned the following year to reprise her role in Hailey and Idaho Falls with Sun Valley's own Danielle Kennedy.

Last summer she returned to join Company of Fools' cast of "Quilters." During an interlude she presented a concert of songs from her CD "The Hopeful Romantic."

The CD, called "a sweetheart of a CD" by TalkingBroadway.com, includes such songs as "My Funny Valentine," the Gershwins' "Love Is Here to Stay," "Happiness is a Thing Called Joy," and "It Had to Be You."

Wagoner credits Fools' core company artist John Glenn with taking her from a student actress to a professional actress in the Fools' former playground of Richmond.

Wagoner has received a couple of awards for her role of Cline at the Swift Creek Mill Theater in Richmond. She also has portrayed Dorothy in "The Wizard of Oz" and Cinderella in "Into the Woods" for the theater.
