Canyon County sets English only rule

CALDWELL (AP) — Virtually all of Canyon County's reports, forms, brochures and signs will be issued only in English from now on, county commissioners have decided.

The commissioners voted unanimously Tuesday to ban the distribution of any county-generated materials in any language other than English, the Idaho Press-Tribune reported.

Commissioner Robert Vasquez, an ardent opponent of illegal immigration, wrote the resolution at the request of commissioners Matt Beebe and David Ferdinand.

"It's imperative and prudent to take these actions now and to have some framework in place to protect the citizens of Canyon County," Vasquez said.

The commissioners made the decision after the manager of the county's print shop said workers were getting several requests to print items in Spanish, county spokeswoman Angie Silloni said. The printing office does not have a translator on staff, so a worker in the county's information technology department was translating items on a case-by-case basis, Silloni said.

The commissioners feared that an inadvertent translation error could open the county up to lawsuits, she said.

"Plus, it's the language of the land and, that's how it should be," Vasquez said. "I don't care if you speak Swahili, Farsi, Bosnian, or Spanish. This makes it more convenient and safer for everyone."

Youngsters try to get a handle on pigs at fair

By Jamey Colter
Times-News Correspondent

SHOSHONE — College of Southern Idaho student Michelle Hoag needs a little extra money. But a part-time job like flipping burgers or moving lawns doesn't really appeal to her.

Oddly enough, pig wrestling does. And as fate would have it, the timing was right during the Lincoln County Fair pig wrestling contest, held Wednesday night at the fairgrounds.

"Last year they gave $200 for the best costume," Hoag said as she waited her turn at grabbing a slimy pig. "We go to college, we need $200."

Hoag, accompanied by friend and fellow student Ashley Thompson, complied with the rule that contestants come dressed as a rock 'n' roll star. Their choice was head-banging rockers' Guns N' Roses and Poison.

The rules for the contest, as Hoag explained them, are fairly simple.

"You have to be dressed as a rock star to get the big prize, so we decided to combine the two groups," said Hoag.

In addition to dressing as a rocker, contestants enter the muddy mess without shoes, gloves or anything beyond their own speed and fingers.

To begin the event the pigs enter the arena fully greased with regular cooking oil. Once free, the contestants attempt to capture the vicious swine, bringing an end to the timed event by dunking the porker in a barrel.

Shadric Ballard, 14, and her team Rock 'n' Roll Tina Turner Twisters from Dietrich, said that getting dirty is the best part of the night. "Oh, and dressing up," said Ballard.

Thayne Hagen, 8, of the team Pink Pig Fearer tries to bring a pig down during the pig wrestling event Wednesday night at the Lincoln County Fair and Rodeo which will run through Sunday in Shoshone.

Rupert killer serving life term dies in state prison

By Renee Wells
For the Times-News

BOISE — A Jackson area man who was serving a life sentence for the murder of a Rupert school teacher died Tuesday at a state prison in Boise.

Troy David Alonzo, 34, died Tuesday at 2:35 a.m. due to "natural causes from a chronic health issue," according to an Idaho Department of Corrections public information officer Melinda O'Malley-Keckler.

Alonzo was serving a fixed life term for the murder of Kaye Kay Ray during the Christmas holidays in 1999.

No foul play was involved in Alonzo's death, which occurred in his prison cell, officials said.

"It is our policy to call both the coroner and the sheriff in a case such as this," O'Malley-Keckler said.

"The cell was secured and they came in and investigated. The sheriff turned the cell back over to the department that same night, saying there was no evidence of any foul play whatsoever."

Cassia County investigator L. Handy Kidd said his office, which was involved in the investigation of Ray's murder.

Crews nearly contain Trailhead Fire

Times-News

KETCHUM — Barring any bad tempests from Mother Nature, today's burn should bring about a conclusion to the stubborn Trailhead Fire, near Grandjean. According to Forest Service Incident Commander Buzz Vanskike, the 840-acre fire should be contained Friday.

"If Mother Nature cooperates and we get all our resources lined up, we will conduct a large burnout on the north end of the fire and if everything goes according to plan, we will meet our estimate of full containment by Friday evening," said Vanskike Wednesday afternoon.

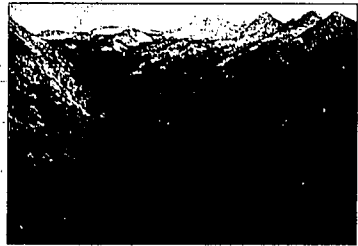

A helicopter flight over the fire Wednesday revealed little fire activity. However, Vanskike said, small fires-ups Tuesday afternoon added another 40 acres to the burn. A helicopter and two Type I hotshot crews will be utilized Thursday to aid in the controlled burn.

"The challenge for our firefighters in mopping up hot spots, especially on the higher slopes and ridges, is that there is no water," Vanskike said.

"They have to do what we call 'dry mop-up' with dirt — it takes a lot more time and effort."

According to the Forest Service, there have been no serious injuries connected with the Trailhead Fire. Six crews and three helicopters continue to work on the fire and trail closures remain in effect.

An aerial photo taken Wednesday shows smoke in an area scorched by the Trailhead Fire near Grandjean. A burn plan will be implemented today in an attempt to reach full containment by the weekend. Six crews and three helicopters continue to work on the fire.

 Seven-year-old Katelyn Perkins participated in the wrestling last year, said her mother, Shanna Perkins.
 "Katelyn did it last year, she did great, but some of the kids are scared of the pigs," Perkins said. "This is surreal and hilarious."
 But there was no trepidation showing in the eyes of Twin Falls resident Jeff Rencher — no, he was thinking as big as a pig.
 Rencher claimed that this was his first pig wrestling, but he thought he and his teammates were up to the challenge.
 "The pigs they use for our division are large — I think they're 250 pounds," Rencher said before taking on the slippery lovers of mud. "But we don't care, we're ready. Actually, if we could find the right sponsorship, we would go pro in pig wrestling."

Chicago City Council OKs 'living wage' for 'big-box' retail employees

CHICAGO (AP) — Brushing aside warnings from Wal-Mart, the City Council approved an ordinance Wednesday that makes Chicago the biggest city in the nation to require big-box retailers to pay a "living wage."
 "It's trying to get the largest companies in America to pay decent wages," said Alderman Toni Preckwinkle.
 The ordinance passed 35-14, three hours of impassioned debate.
 The measure requires megaretailers with over $1 billion in annual sales and stores of at least 30,000 square feet to pay workers at least $10 an hour in wages plus $3 in fringe benefits by mid-2010. The current minimum wage in Illinois is $6.50 an hour and the federal minimum is $5.15.
 Mayor Richard M. Daley and others warned the living wage proposal would drive jobs and desperately needed development from some of the city's poorest neighborhoods and lead giants like Wal-Mart to abandon the city.
 Wal-Mart spokesman John Bisio said earlier, that if the measure passed, "We'd redirect our focus on our suburban strategy and see how we could better serve our city of Chicago residents from suburban Chicagoland."
 Some alderman also warned that Target Corp. might rethink its presence in the city — though the Minneapolis-based company has not discussed the issue.
 Other cities with living wage laws include Santa Fe and Albuquerque in New Mexico; San Francisco; and Washington, D.C. Chicago has been at the center of the debate about the wages at big retailers ever since the city's rejection of a proposal by Wal-Mart to open a store on the South Side prompted the company to open a store just outside the city limits.

Yates innocent by reason of insanity in kids' drownings

By Angela K. Brown
Associated Press writer

HOUSTON — In a dramatic turnaround from her first murder trial, Andrea Yates was found not guilty by reason of insanity Wednesday in the drowning of her children in the bathtub.

The 42-year-old woman will be committed to a state mental hospital and held until she is no longer deemed a threat. If she had been convicted of murder, she would have been sentenced to life in prison.

Yates stared wide-eyed as the verdict was read, then bowed her head and wept quietly. Her relatives also shed tears, and the children's father, Rusty Yates, muttered, "Wow!" as his son, cried.

Four years ago, another jury convicted Yates of murder, rejecting claims that she was so psychotic she thought she was saving her the souls of her five children by killing them. An appeals court overturned the convictions because of erroneous testimony from a prosecution witness.

Yates' chief attorney, George Farnham, called the verdict

Andrea Yates, flanked by her lawyers George Farnham, left, and Wendell Odum, looks on after she was found not guilty by reason of insanity Wednesday in Houston in her second murder trial for the 2001 bathtub drownings of her young children.

this time a "watershed event in the treatment of mental illness."

Wendell Odum, another of Yates' attorneys, suggested that attitudes have changed since the first trial: "Five years ago there were a lot of people who could not get past the anger of what happened."

Yates' 2002 conviction triggered debate over whether Texas' legal standard for mental illness was too rigid, whether the courts treated oussly enough, and whether a mother who kills could ever find sympathy and understanding in a tough-on-crime state like Texas.

Yates drowned 6-month-old Mary, 2-year-old Luke, 3-year-old Paul, 5-year-old John and 7-year-old Noah in their Houston-area home in June 2001. Her attorneys said she suffered from severe postpartum psychosis and, in a decisional state, believed that Satan was inside her and that killing the youngsters would save them from hell.

"The jury looked past what happened and looked at why it happened," Rusty Yates, who divorced his wife last year, said outside the courthouse. "Yes, she was psychotic. That's the whole truth."

Prosecutors had maintained that Yates failed to meet the state's definition of insanity: that she was so severely mentally ill that she did not know her actions were wrong.

"I'm very disappointed," prosecutor Kaylyn Willford said. "For five years, we've tried to seek justice for these children."

Yates will be sent to Vernon State Mental Hospital, a prison-like maximum-security facility encircled by a 17-foot fence and guard towers. Experts say it can take decades before psychiatrists decide that a patient is healthy enough to be released, and even then a judge can reject those findings.

The jury, split evenly between men and women, deliberated for about 13 hours over three days. The jurors had not been told that Yates would be committed to a mental institution if found not guilty.

Yates did not testify. Her lawyers presented much of the same evidence as in the first trial—including half-a-dozen psychiatrists who testified that Yates was insane.

During a videotaped 2001 jail interview, Yates told a psychiatrist that her children had not been progressing normally because she was a bad mother, and that she killed them because "in their innocence, they would go to heaven."

Washington's high court hands gay marriage foes another win

Los Angeles Times

SEATTLE — Opponents of gay marriage racked up another legal victory Wednesday, as the highest court in Washington state ruled 5-4 that there is no constitutional right for people of the same sex to marry each other.

But even as the state Supreme Court upheld the state legislature's 1998 "Defense of Marriage Act," three judges in the majority urged lawmakers to revisit their ban on gay marriage and the "clear hardship" it imposes on gay people and their children.

The ruling in liberal-leaning Washington echoed one earlier this month in New York State, and it left supporters of traditional heterosexual marriage elated, as well as hopeful that the national gay-marriage movement was spitting out an end.

"Christians all over the state have been praying for this decision, and there is a sense of joy," said Rick Kingham, senior pastor of the Overlake Christian Church in Redmond, and a leader of Allies for Marriage and Children, a citizens' group. "We would truly say that God has intervened in the affairs of man."

For gay-marriage supporters, the ruling was a crushing blow. It overturned pro-gay-marriage decisions by two lower-court judges and leaves Massachusetts as the only state in the nation with legally sanctioned same-sex marriage.

But they also seized hopefully on the razor-thin margin and the majority judges' musical invitations to lawmakers as indications that their side would prevail in the end.

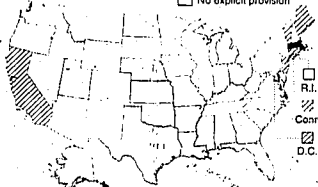

"If the legislature does not make changes first, I firmly believe that a future court will take up this issue again," said King County Executive Ron Sims, the chief elected official in a jurisdiction that includes Seattle and several of its eastern suburbs.

Another strike against gay marriage

Washington state's Supreme Court upheld a gay marriage ban Wednesday, leaving Massachusetts as the only state that grants full marriage rights to gay couples.

State-by-state same-sex marriage policies

- Constitutional amendment banning marriage
- Domestic partnership or civil union allowed
- State statute banning marriage
- Marriage license issued
- No explicit provision

NOTE: Hawaii's amended constitution does not explicitly ban gay marriage.

THE FAMILY CIRCUS

Ex's inappropriate touching must be confronted head-on

DEAR ABBY: I am in my 60s. My first husband, "Seymour," and I divorced more than 30 years ago. For the last several years, every time I see him, Seymour insists on hugging me hello and goodbye, and also tries to kiss me on the mouth. I do not encourage him in any way.

I try to avoid him when the family gathers, but Seymour comes up behind me and attempts to "sneak one in." It is wise as a situation to reach me in some way. If I reach for spoon on the buffet table, he will grab my hand and squeeze it.

Seymour and I have both remarried, and my present husband, "Michael," and I are very happy — thank you very much. But Seymour won't leave me alone. I'm always stressed out when he's around. It is impossible to enjoy myself feeling I always have to keep looking over my shoulder.

Seymour has been invited into our home a few times, for family parties involving the grandchildren. When he comes he adopts a proprietorial air and acts as if he is the homeowner. Michael can't stand to be in the same room with him, and I have to watch that situation closely.

I have considered having Michael approach Seymour at the next party and ask him to keep his hands off me. But I'm afraid it might lead to an altercation, as Seymour is very confrontational. The reason I left him in the first place was because he was both physical- and verbally abusive.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

Seymour has told me he still loves me and is sorry for the past. I responded by telling him thank you for apologizing, but I felt his affection was misplaced and should be directed toward his new wife.

Aside from excluding myself from family situations that I know Seymour will be attending, what's my alternative? — OLDER AND WISER

DEAR OLDER AND WISER: Your ex-husband's behavior could be classified as creepy. After all this time, he is still trying to assert control over you. Talk to Seymour's new wife and tell her how uncomfortable her husband's behavior makes you — because harassment is what it is.

If that doesn't put an end to it, the next time Seymour grabs you, treat him as you would any other stranger who tried to assault you. Say, "Don't touch me. I don't like it!" And if he persists after that, the person who should be excluded from the family gatherings is Seymour — not you.

DEAR ABBY: I need some help. The guy I love with, "Arnold," doesn't want to get married, but I do. We have been together for 19 years. What should I do?

Also, I don't love Arnold like I did. Should I try to get back with my first love or what? (It's my former husband.) We were married eight years and had three kids. They are all grown now.

— CAN'T DECIDE IN OHIO

DEAR CAN'T DECIDE: If marriage is what you really want, then you have already devoted far more time than you should have to Arnold. Because you no longer love him as you did, the time has come to make other living arrangements and go on with your life.

If you still care for your former husband, once you are on your own I see no harm in contacting him. However, a lot of water has drifted under the bridge over the last 19 years — so don't bet that he's still available.

This date was big for the telegraph

This day in history: On July 27, 1866, telegraph signals between North America and Europe became possible for the first time after the steamship The Great Eastern laid a transatlantic cable on the ocean floor from Valentia, Ireland to Newfoundland, Canada.

Telegraph's became more and more outlandishly tall in the 1860s, clockrooms had a problem in that there was no room, for them. Finally, in 1823, Antoine Gibus invented the collapsible telegraph, solving the problem.

Golfer health lands in the bunker, survey shows

GRAPEVINE, Texas (AP) — No one would mistake David Voelkel's body for that of Tiger Woods.

When Voelkel, 71, teed off recently at the Grapevine Golf Course in suburban Dallas-Fort Worth, the red insurance agent wasn't trying to build a body like the pros. His goal was strengthening relationships with a group of old friends who share a love of the game.

"Fellowship," Voelkel said, "and the cheesburger afterward."

America's amateur golfers are an unhealthy group, according to an unscientific online survey published in the August issue of Golf Digest. Among the results from the 514 mostly male subscribers who responded: 65 percent are overweight.

"I'd go along with that," said Voelkel, patting his round belly before heading for the fairways. "Can't you tell?"

Golfers streamed onto the course as the sun rose, attempting to beat the triple-digit temperatures promised later in the day. While some walked, holding a big bag of clubs, most hopped into golf carts. Meanwhile, two workers loaded a snack cart filled with pretzels, potato chips, beer and whiskey.

Whatever their physical condition, golfers seem to be enjoying themselves. Among survey respondents, 76 percent consume an average of 6.8 alcoholic drinks per week.

A SPECIAL RACCOON

An albino raccoon climbs up a tree with a sibling near the Amnias River north of Durango, Colo., Saturday. Pat Dorsey, regional manager for the Colorado Division of Wildlife in Durango, said albinos in wildlife are rare because they are easily seen by predators, less likely to attract mates, and they have higher risk of sunburn and melanoma. True albinos occur in about one in 10,000 births, after inheriting a rare and recessive albino gene from each parent.

Libraries: Use creative ideas to find patrons

Contrary to common belief, not every teen today is connected to an iPod, PlayStation controller or cell phone with a Shakira ringtone.

Hard as it may be to believe, kids are finding a new hot spot for social activity at the public library.

Local libraries in the Magic Valley are doing more to attract young patrons and keep bringing them back. Any library can plan an occasional event for the younger crowd. But the recent efforts to keep kids connected to information are definitely worth applauding.

The Jerome Public Library created the Flight Deck, a separate area at the library with games, CD listening stations and homework stations, along with the standard computers with internet connections. Library officials have even allowed kids to purchase and snacks to its Homework Café.

No, that's not your grandfather's library. But it's a trend that's catching on. Now the Twin Falls, Public Library is planning its own homework area for younger patrons. The area will also have a listening station for audio material, modular desks, and a juice bar with snacks.

The changes don't come cheap. Jerome's improvements were part of the $1 million endowment left by former librarian Evelyn Crowder, and Twin Falls' library foundation is setting its renovations to around $75,000.

But the new services should successfully attract more young people, if for no other reason than kids are suggesting the changes themselves.

Jerome and Twin Falls both include young patrons on their teen advisory boards. Jerome officials with around 20 people for weekly meetings during the school year, while Twin Falls' Teen Advisory Board has 12 members meeting monthly all year long. Their suggestions are welcomed by library administrators who want to introduce a new generation of readers and learners to the library.

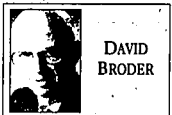

Perhaps many of these kids aren't frequenting the library to spend a rainy afternoon reading the Bronte sisters. Libraries will probably always focus on the written word, reference and research. (And as a publisher of written information, this newspaper is glad to see libraries keep the faith.)

But as society continues to delve further into a digital age, libraries have to reinvent their offerings and open their doors to various media users. The top priority will remain to help patrons learn more about the world around them and help turn information into knowledge, and eventually, wisdom.

Our view: Attracting and keeping young patrons is a vital priority for today's local libraries. What do you think? We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

GOP frustration grows wider

My weekend visitor was one of the founders of the post-war Republican Party in the South, one of those stubborn men who challenged the Democratic rule in his one-party state. He was conservative enough that in the great struggle for the 1952 nomination, his sympathies were with Sen. Robert Taft of Ohio, not Dwight D. Eisenhower.

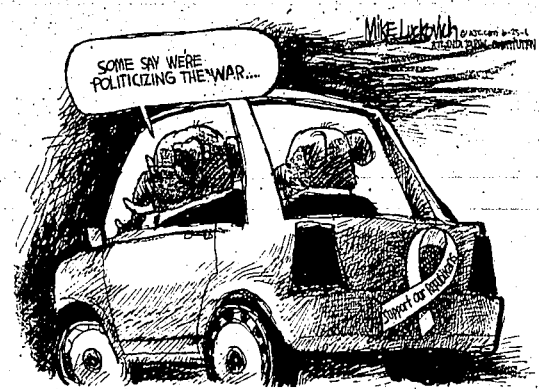

DAVID BRODER

He has lived long enough to see Republicans elected as senator and governor of his state and to see a Republican from the Sun Belt, a member of Texas capture the White House. His profession won't let him speak with his name attached, but he is sadly disillusioned.

"My wife was thrilled by the veto Bush administered last week to the bill expanding federal funding for embryonic stem cell research, because she shares the president's belief that these clumps of cells destroyed in the research process represent human life. 'I thought it was stupid,' he said. 'I know too many people who are like that and he shook his hands like a victim of Parkinson's disease — and their only hope of a cure is in stem cells. Now Bush is forcing that science to move over.'"

He went on: "How the hell long can they refuse to raise the minimum wage? He was furious, he said, with the Republican leaders of Congress who keep blocking bills to raise the minimum wage, which has been stuck at $5.25 an hour for years. 'I'm a conservative,' he said, 'but they make me sound like a damned liberal the way they act.' Then he said like fools, they run up the deficits and they refuse to give a raise to the working people who are struggling. How the hell are you supposed to live on $5.25 an hour these days?"

"If it wasn't for Pelosi," he said, "I'd just as soon the Democrats take over this fall. Get some checks and balances and teach these guys a lesson."

In the end, his dislike of Democratic Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi and his ingrained disdain for the Democrats may keep my friend voting Republican. But the complaints that I heard from him — echoed by many of his contemporaries in the Taft-Goldwater-Reagan wing of the GOP — are a significant factor in the dynamics of the midterm election. They could spell trouble for Republicans in mobilizing their vote this fall.

I first became aware of the spreading discontent on the right in visiting with people in the church social hall after the funeral service this spring for Lyn Nofziger, Ronald Reagan's longtime press spokesman and advisor. The comments about the Bush White House were not by any means notable by their absence at the service — startled me.

But since then, I have heard the refrain over and over: They never reached out to us. They never thought they needed our help. Now they're in trouble. To hell with them.

Whether or not the complaints are justified, they are epidemic. They are often accompanied, as they were in the case of my weekend visitor, with the comment that everything the White House does seems to be aimed at pleasing only one section of the Republican coalition — the religious right.

Such it was that there was so much high-fiving on e-mails and phone calls among other Republicans over the defeat last week of Ralph Reed, the one-time driving force of Pat Robertson's religious-political movement who lost the nomination for lieutenant governor of Georgia because of his links to disgraced lobbyist Jack Abramoff.

Reed, a major operative in Bush's presidential campaigns, is a symbol to many others of the influence of the religious right, though, in fact, he was much more of a political operative than he was a preacher.

But the dissent threatens Republican chances of avoiding a major defeat in the midterm elections. Andrew Kohut's survey for the respected Pew Research Center last month found Democrats far more motivated to vote this year than Republicans. The Democrats held a 16-point advantage over the GOP on the question Kohut uses to gauge the level of interest in voting, exactly the reverse of the situation in 1994, the year the Republicans took over Congress.

In the last two elections — 2002 and 2004 — Karl Iovine, Ken Mehlman and the rest of the Republican leaders demonstrated a superior ability to locate and turn out their voters. But in neither of those years did they face the formidable barriers in place this year, starting with the weariness with the war in Iraq. The last thing they need is the disaffection now being displayed in their own ranks. This looms as the supreme test of their political skills.

A teen's Y-chromosome problem

A 16-year-old Virginia boy who suffers from Hodgkin's disease has been told by a state judge he must report to a hospital this week and accept treatment deemed necessary by his doctors. The boy and his parents have chosen to pursue alternative treatment. It consists of a sugar-free, organic diet and herbal supplements supervised by a clinic in Mexico.

On July 21, Juvenile court Judge Jesse C. Dennis ruled that the boy's parents, Jay and Rose Cherix of Chincoteague, were neglectful and that they must continue to share custody of their son, Starchild Abraham Cherix, with the Accomack County Department of Social Services.

I have heard Cherix interviewed on the radio and he sounds intelligent, articulate, reasonable and capable of making such a major decision. Cherix says three months of chemotherapy left him nauseous and weak and he prefers not to repeat that type of treatment. That a court would deny Cherix and his parents such a choice prompted the family attorney, John Stepanovich, to say "I want to caution all parents of Virginia: Look out, because Social Services may be ponding on your door next when they disagree with the decision you've made about the health care of your child." In an age when we continue to debate "a woman's right to choose" when it comes to a girl aborting her baby and we are told that "it is the girl's body and no one else should make decisions affecting it, a boy has no such rights. A girl can be given birth control by the school nurse and even abortion information without her parents' knowledge or consent, but a boy can be prohibited from making decisions that affect his life and body. At least the courts are consistent. They forbid parental involvement in either case. In some states, though, parents are held responsible for their kids' illegal and anti-social behavior. Why is it that parents supposedly have power to keep their kids from committing crimes, but can be denied power when it comes to their child's health and welfare?

If a young child (say 10, or younger) is unduly influenced by parents who are members of a religion that teaches that faith alone can heal, or prohibits blood transfusions, then the state has an interest in stepping in to protect the child until he, or she, is old enough to make an informed choice. But in this case, the informed one appears to be Cherix, who says he has studied the treatment given by his doctors and doesn't want anymore of it. He prefers "alternative medicine." That should be his and his parents' right to determine, not a social worker and a court.

culture toward the value of human life is in constant flux. Like the Dow Jones Industrial Averages, it is up one day and down the next. Some want to use embryonic stem cells for research into all sorts of afflictions and diseases, though no clinical tests have proved they are effective and stem cells from placenta and other sources, which cause no harm to human life, are available. Life in the womb — indeed life emerging from the womb — may be destroyed at any time and for any reason. There is pressure at the other end of life to euthanize the elderly and handicapped when they become "burdensome" to family members or "too costly" to the state.

Attorney Stepanovich says Cherix's parents will appeal the ruling this week. Absent any additional information that has not been made public, which might prove neglectfulness and bad parenting, Cherix and his parents should decide what is best for them and not the state of Virginia.

LETTER

U.S. followed Hitler's Blitzkrieg model in Iraq

"Great article in it's World War III, and the United States is full of ideas," by Michael Goodwin. Maybe we're out of ideas because we didn't have any going in. "All you have to do is kick in the door," said Hitler just before he launched his attack of 3.3 million men into Iraq. Blitzkrieg was "stock and awe" at its best and Gen. Franks thought he added something new to warfare — bunk. But the historians who have studied the German-Russian War of World War II have concluded Hitler's Germany lost the war with Russia the day they fired the first shot.

They lost because they were smart, arrogant and supremely confident and this had drawn a distorted picture of what they were about to attempt. Germany was into lightning victories and Russia was into wars of attrition — and historically always had been. We invaded Iraq, not with well-founded ideas, a patient understanding and a deep appreciation of the grim realities of warfare coupled with a clean follow-through guided by well-defined goals, but with the same psychology as Germany invading Russia — force and fraud would win the day.

Also, the enemy was supposed to pee their pants with "stock and awe," and we wrapped ourselves in the flag knowing all would be well, but they're into wars of attrition — and historically always have been. Now we have a world at war, and Bush's political currency is bankrupt.

After 9-11, the United States enjoyed the support of most of the world, but Bush and his entourage of blows — acting — like a bunch of middle school yard bullies, have given the whole ball game away. Idiots! We've only shocked and awed everyone with our most prominent American characteristic: stupidity, dripping with the usual self-aggrandizing hypocrisy.

Craig should abandon toxic emission loophole

Sen. Larry Craig is still pushing his outrageous proposal to exempt dirty confined animal feeding operations from reporting toxic emissions as required by CERCLA (Superfund Law) and EPCRA (Emergency Preparedness and Community Right to Know). And Sen. Mike Crapo is supporting him.

EPA classifies numerous substances as "Extremely Hazardous Substances," and these include ammonia. EPCRA and CERCLA require that industries emitting more than 100 pounds per day of ammonia report these emissions to the EPA. The large dairy CAFOs, such as those in southern Idaho, can exceed that amount. According to data given by the North Carolina Agricultural Chemicals Manual, it would take at least 800 dairy cows to produce 100 pounds of ammonia per day, so dairies smaller than that are not affected. A toxic material is a toxic material, and has the same health and environmental effects regardless of source. CAFO owners should not be exempt from reporting emissions from their operations, which are after all industrial operations producing industrial amounts of waste, and are not simply traditional agricultural operations. Concerned Idahoans should urge Sen. Craig and Crapo to drop this bad idea, and consider public health and well-being before the CAFO owners' interest. JERRY HAYNE

U.S. role in Mideast no longer peacemaker

Once again, the American secretary of State is traversing the Middle East, meeting with leaders to discuss the latest eruption of violence. But this time around the mission is different.

JAMES P. PINKERTON

Jimmy Carter antagonized Israel by selling F-15 fighters to Saudi Arabia; yet he had been trusted enough to oversee an Israel-Egypt peace treaty.

But during Ronald Reagan's presidency about 1983, came a big shift, beginning the second phase of U.S.-Israel relations, which might be called an "alliance." During the next two decades, the United States and Israel inked agreements for closer economic, political and military ties; one result was to bolster Israeli confidence about building more permanent settlements in the West Bank and Gaza. And when the first Palestinian Intifada erupted in the late '80s, American sympathy for Israel as a beleaguered ally increased — even as most other countries sided more with the Arabs.

The third phase began in 2001, after 9/11, and might be called a "close alliance." The new administration of President Bush came to see Israel as not only its key ally in the region but as a major strategic partner in the global war on terror. Moreover, democratic Israel was seen as part of "the wave of the future" in the Bush-dormant Middle East, to be joined by other democracies in the making, starting with Afghanistan and Iraq.

This third phase, still continuing, has had several consequences. Most obviously, the U.S. and Israel are tighter than ever, which pleases most Americans. But other consequences are more problematic: The United States is no longer trusted, for example, by Arab governments, let alone their peoples. And other countries, too, such as France, Russia and China, seem to be siding against us on most Middle East issues, including the latest fighting in Lebanon.

So the role of "honest broker," once played by the United States, will be played, if at all, by someone else. For now, Israel and the United States are focused on their joint goal of military victory over Hezbollah. And maybe that victory will come as the United States helps Israel with the latest munitions.

But eventually if there is to be some sort of settlement — including, say, a robust international peacekeeping force for Lebanon — other countries will have to be engaged in the process. And it will be on their terms, not just Israel's. That's when we will see that the broker function, honest or otherwise, will have shifted to other world capitals across Eurasia.

Washington, D.C., and Jerusalem will still be tight, but both will discover that if and when the agenda shifts from war to peace, new players will get involved — with their own ideas for the Middle East, including a once-and-for-all settlement for the Palestinians.

Such a comprehensive deal, brokered, as it must be, by non-Americans, is not what Israel will want. But Rice & Co. — stretched thin by problems in Iraq, Afghanistan and Iran — might find themselves grateful for such outside intervention.

If so, then a split between Washington and Jerusalem could emerge. And that would be the beginning of the fourth phase of U.S.-Israeli relations.

But will such advocacy succeed for the United States? Or for Israel? Before answering those questions, let's take a look at the earlier phases.

The first phase began in 1948 to 1983, when the United States saw itself as an "honest broker" in the Middle East. The United States was quick to recognize Israel diplomatically but not so quick economically or militarily. The jets the Israelis used to crush the Arabs in 1967, for example, were made in France, not America. In the late 1970s,

Oil futures are no easy guess

Could there be an oil "bubble"? Well, yes. In early 2002, oil sold for roughly $20 a barrel; now it's close to $75. The main causes lie in tightening supply and demand — and the fact that supply (as the present Middle East fighting reminds us) could be interrupted at any time. Old-fashioned speculation may also have played a role, and that raises the possibility of a bubble. But any bubble would be a peculiar beast, and if it burst and prices dropped significantly, we wouldn't delude ourselves into thinking that this might signal a new era of comfortable abundance. It wouldn't.

ROBERT J. SAMUELSON

In financial bubbles, prices become disconnected from "fundamentals." At the height of the tech bubble, stocks of dot-com companies with no profits (and little prospect for them) sold at fabulous prices. By contrast, oil prices aren't unhinged from "fundamentals."

Despite all the griping, gasoline is still affordable. Even at $3 a gallon, it costs Americans only about 4 percent of their disposable income. The same is true globally. At $70 a barrel, global crude sales would total about $2.2 trillion annually; that's still a tiny share of the $50 trillion world economy.

Indeed, it is precisely because people and companies need oil so desperately — it's essential for almost everything they do — that any possible scarcity raises prices sharply. In economics jargon, prices are "inelastic." A big jump dampens demand only slightly.

For decades, crude was in surplus. In 1985, for example, the world used 60 million barrels daily (mbd) of oil, while countries could produce about 70 mbd. Refineries were also in surplus; in 1985, U.S. refineries operated at 78 percent of capacity. Loss of crude supplies or refineries didn't create scarcities. "Historically, when something went wrong — and something was always going wrong, a pipeline outage or refinery accident — the problem was made up somewhere else," says economist Lawrence Goldstein of the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation, an industry think tank.

Now, demand is about 85 mbd, and any surplus is negligible.

Refineries are also stretched tight. The U.S. operating rate typically exceeds 90 percent of capacity — a margin needed for maintenance. Low prices and miscalculation explain the turnaround: From 1985 to 1999, crude prices averaged $18 a barrel. Investment in expensive oil fields and new refineries became unprofitable. Companies cut budgets. Meanwhile, almost everyone underestimated demand. Driven by China, it grew much faster after 2000 than before.

So prices had to rise. Otherwise, demand might have exceeded supply.

But did they have to rise from $20 to $70 a barrel? Here's where "speculation" may have contributed.

The big players are institutional investors — pension funds, hedge funds (pools of loosely regulated funds) and investment banks. They've purchased oil futures contracts and, in effect, bet that prices six months or a year out will exceed present prices. Since 2002, investment in futures contracts may have quintupled to more than $100 billion, estimates energy economist Philip Verleger Jr.

This may have raised present (or "spot") oil prices, argues a staff report from the Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations. As investors pour money into futures contracts, futures prices rise. Since late 2001, they've usually exceeded spot prices. On a recent day, the spot price was $74.60 and the futures price for December was $2 higher.

This creates an incentive for companies to put more oil into storage ("inventories"), the report says, because it's more profitable to sell oil in the future than today. Oil inventories for industrial countries "are at a 20-year high." Spot prices rise because there's less oil on the market. It's unclear how much this sort of speculation has increased prices, if at all. The report mentions estimates ranging from $7 to $30 a barrel.

In theory, the process could

So prices had to rise. Otherwise, demand might have exceeded supply. But did they have to rise from $20 to $70 a barrel?

feed on itself and create a huge bubble. The more speculators bought futures, the more oil would go into storage — and the more spot prices would rise. At some point, the bubble would burst.

Storage would be filled. Unexpected increases in supply or shortfalls in demand could put huge downward pressures on prices, because sellers would need to sell and (again) demand is inelastic.

Whatever happens, we should avoid the easy conclusion that speculators have artificially increased oil prices. In truth, they are speculating against real risks — the risk that oil from the Persian Gulf gets cut off; that hurricanes in the Gulf of Mexico damage U.S. oil rigs and refineries; that political events elsewhere (in Russia, Nigeria, Venezuela) curtail supplies.

Oil is essential and insecure. A sensible country would minimize this insecurity by economizing on oil's use (through taxes and tougher fuel regulations) and developing its own resources. Oil use has rebounded our efforts years ago; we should do so now.

AROUND THE WORLD

LEBANON

Israeli soldiers cover their faces with camouflage paint in an apple orchard before crossing the border to Lebanon in northern Israel Wednesday.

Nine Israeli soldiers killed in heavy fighting

Key Mideast players fail to reach accord

BEIRUT (AP) — Hezbollah dealt Israel its heaviest losses in the Lebanon campaign Wednesday, killing nine soldiers in fierce firefights. With key Mideast players failing to agree on a formula for a ceasefire, an Israeli general said the operation could last weeks. Israel said it intends to damage Hezbollah and establish a "security zone" that would be free of the guerrillas and extend 1.2 miles into Lebanon from the Israeli border. Such a zone would prevent Hezbollah from carrying out cross-border raids such as the one two weeks ago which triggered the Israeli military response. Israel said it would maintain such a zone, with firepower or other means, until the arrival of an international force with a mandate to be deployed in a wider swath of southern Lebanon — as opposed to the U.N. force already there that has failed to prevent the violence.

In Rome, Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice said participants at a daylong conference on the Mideast crisis agreed Wednesday on the need for a strong international force, under a U.N. mandate. Italy, Turkey and Spain all said they might send troops. Rice said more work was needed to define the force and its mission. U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan, Lebanese Prime Minister Fuad Siniora and moderate Arab countries also attended the meeting. Israel, Iran and Syria did not.

The Israeli bombardment has failed to stop guerrilla rocket fire, even while killing hundreds, driving up to 750,000 people from their homes and causing billion of dollars in damage. Hezbollah fired another large barrage into northern Israel on Wednesday — 151 rockets that wounded at least 31 people and damaged property from the suburbs of the port on Haifa on the Mediterranean.

IRAQ

Hussein says he prefers firing squad

BAGHDAD — A thinner but combative Saddam Hussein said Wednesday he would rather die by firing squad like a soldier than hang "like a criminal." As the defiant ex-president made his final appearance before the tribunal, until it renders a verdict. The prosecution has asked for the death penalty for Saddam and two of the other seven defendants for their role in the deaths of Shiites in a crackdown following a 1992 assassination attempt against the Iraqi ruler in Dujail. Saddam, dressed in a white open-collar shirt and dark was in court to hear his court-appointed attorney read a final summation, arguing that prosecution witnesses and documents failed to link the ex-president to any of the atrocities in Dujail. But that did not sit well with the 69-year-old Saddam, who denounced the lawyer as "enemy" and claimed the summation was drafted by foreign signers he accused of manipulating the trial since it began Oct. 19.

AFGHANISTAN

U.N. envoy: Foreign money fueling Taliban

UNITED NATIONS — A Taliban insurgency in five provinces of southern Afghanistan is being fueled by international terrorist networks, foreign money and a porous border which the Pakistani government doesn't control, the top U.N. envoy in Afghanistan said Wednesday. The insurgents want to overthrow the Western-backed government of President Hamid Karzai and re-establish the kind of hard-line government that Afghanistan had under the Taliban before its ouster in late 2001 for hosting Osama bin Laden, U.N. special representative Tom Koenigs said.

FRANCE

Heat wave grips Paris

PARIS — The French capital boiled Wednesday. As the temperature climbed toward 100 degrees, Paris baked, fumed and seethed. "Paris Furnace: 98 degrees in the shade," trumpeted Le Parisien newspaper Tuesday. It could be worse. The death toll in France during a Europe-wide July heat wave has reached an estimated 40. Nothing like the summer of 2003, when killer heat combined with social dysfunction, leaving 15,000 dead.

Yankees edge Rangers

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Jason Giambi hit a two-run homer in the ninth inning and New York beat Texas to complete another three-game sweep.

After the Rangers scored four times in the eighth to go ahead 7-6, Derek Jeter led off the ninth with a single up the middle against closer Adam Lohse (2-4). Giambi followed with his 29th home, a towering shot, right landed in the seats in right.

New York (59-40) completed a six-game season sweep at Texas and got within 1 1/2 games of first-place Boston in the AL East. The Yankees also moved a half-game ahead of Minnesota and the Chicago White Sox in their cardinals race.

It was the first time since 1992 that Texas was swept at home in a season series of at least six games.

Shawn Chacon (5-3) got three outs facing two batters in the eighth. Mariano Rivera worked the ninth for his 25th save.

Orioles 4, Royals 3

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Adam Loeven earned his first major league victory and Jeff Conine homered in his first four-hit game of the season as Baltimore defeated Kansas City.

Louven (1-2), in his seventh big league start, held the Royals to one run and six hits over five-plus innings.

Conine, a 50th-round draft pick at the Royals in 1997, homered to lead off the sixth to knock out Royals starter Rumeys Hernandez (2-5). Conine's 7-for-11 (.636) with two home runs and a double off Hernandez.

Athletics 5, Red Sox 1

OAKLAND, Calif. — Frank Thomas homered twice and drove in four runs to help Dan Haren win for the first time in six weeks, and Oakland avoided a three-game sweep by beating Boston.

Thomas hit a solo homer in the fourth and a three-run shot in the fifth, both off Kyle Snyder, for his 21st and 22nd of the year. It marked the second two-homer game this season for the Big Hurt and 20th of his career.

Haren (7-9) pitched seven strong innings to end a seven-start winless stretch and three-start losing streak. He had lost his last four decisions. After Coco Crisp's two-out single in the second, Haren retired the next 14 Boston batters before Manny Ramirez doubled in the seventh. Crisp drove him in with another single.

Twins 7, White Sox 4

CHICAGO — Justin Morneau and Michael Cuddyer each hit two-run homers, and the surging Minnesota Twins beat platooning Chicago 7-4 to complete a three-game sweep and move into a second-place tie with the White Sox.

Minnesota and Chicago trail Detroit by 4 1/2 games in the Central. The Twins, who have won 34 of 42, open a three-game series at home against Detroit on Friday.

The White Sox have dropped 12 of 15. All-Star left hander Mark Buehrle (9-9) lost his fifth straight start, allowing 10 hits and seven runs in 5 1/3 innings.

Morneau and Jason Bartlett led their hits, each, and the Twins had 16 in all. Nick Punto singled twice, extending his career-high hitting streak to 18 games.

to have success. "As for a No. 2 QB, Smith added, "No one has separated out to take that spot. And we just picked up a junior college player (Brian Noye Jr.) who will battle for that spot in fall camp."

Noye played sparingly for Smith in 2004, but transferred to play junior college last year.

High school coaches had an opportunity to share their strategies, ask questions and take with them. The coaches and assistants, Craig Butters, head coach at Malad, was Carlos Silva (6-9) allowed three runs and six hits in five innings. Joe Nathan pitched a perfect ninth for his 21st save.

Tigers 4, Indians 1

CLEVELAND — Rookie Justin Verlander outpitched C.C. Sabathia, and the Detroit kept up its domination of the AL Central.

Magallo Odronez hit a two-run double in the sixth inning to break up the scoreless pitcher's duel.

Verlander (4-4) struck out a career-high eight and allowed one run on five hits and no walks in 6-2/3 innings. He is 6-0 in his last eight starts and is tied for the major league lead in wins.

Detroit improved to 30-13 against the AL Central and has the best winning percentage (.698) of any club against its division.

Angels 15, Devil Rays 6

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Juan Rivera hit a pair of two-run doubles, including one during a 10-run second inning, and Los Angeles beat Tampa Bay.

Maicer Izturis had two hits and drove in three runs in the second, when the Angels took a 12-4 lead. The 10 runs and nine hits, in the first three innings, were season highs for Los Angeles.

National League

Astros 8, Reds 5

HOUSTON — Lance Berkman homered twice and Craig Biggio added a solo shot as Houston rallied from a four-run deficit to beat Cincinnati.

Berkman's first homer, a three-run shot, capped a six-run fifth inning off Bronson Arroyo (9-7). Berkman added a solo homer in the seventh for his fourth multimillionaire game of the season.

Arroyo came back from four runs down for the second time this season and snapped a four-game losing streak at home. They also ended a four-game skid to the Reds, who led seven of nine road games.

Braves 6, Marlins 5

ATLANTA — Andrew Jones, who missed three games with a knee injury, led off the eighth inning with a tying home run and Adam Latoche followed with a two-out shot that gave Atlanta a victory over Florida.

The Marlins, battling back from a 3-0 deficit, went ahead for the first time when Dan Uggla's solo homer off John Smoltz made it 5-4 in the top of the eighth.

After giving up Jones' homer, Lugo's Kensing got the next two batters, Hankley (1-1) then yielded Latoche's 20th homer.

Nationals 4, Giants 3

WASHINGTON — Austin Kearns' bases-loaded sacrifice fly off San Francisco closer Armando Benitez capped a two-run rally in the ninth inning and lifted Washington to its fifth consecutive victory.

Benitez (4-2) came to beat the ninth with a 3-2 lead. But the right-hander walked leadoff batter Robert Fick, and after striking out Alfonso Soriano, gave up an infield single to Felipe Lopez. Ryan Zimmerman's RBI single tied the game.

Mets 1, Cubs 0, 10 innings

NEW YORK — Jose Valentin hit an RBI single with two outs in the 10th inning, and the experience coming back," he said.

New York Mets edged the Chicago Cubs 1-0 Wednesday to snap a three-game skid.

Mark Prior threw 5 2/3 hitless innings before departing after 103 pitches. He matched zeros with Mets rookie John Maine, who tossed seven innings of three-hit ball.

Prior and reliever Will Ohman held the Mets without a hit for six innings before Valentin's one-out single off Roberto Novoa in the seventh.

Pirates 8, Brewers 4

MILWAUKEE — Jason Bay homered to spark a three-run, fifth-inning rally and Pittsburgh beat All-Star Chris Carrigan's Milwaukee.

Carrigan (10-6) gave up six runs and 11 hits in five innings and threw two wild pitches. He has lost two straight decisions after winning the previous five.

Fant Maholm (4-9) gave up seven hits and four runs in seven innings, and added an RBI single in the fourth. He had lost five of six decisions and was 1-7 on the road this season.

Milwaukee has dropped six of eight but remains in contention for the National League wild card.

Cardinals 6, Rockies 1

DENVER — Jeff Suppan delivered another masterful outing against Colorado in his six innings and giving up five hits, and Aaron Miles hit his first home run of the season in St. Louis' win.

Suppan (6-5) is 3-0 against the Rockies this season and 5-1 career. Suppan struck out three and walked two before leaving with two outs in the seventh following Yorvit Torrealba's solo homer to left.

Miles' two-run homer, to the right in the eighth off reliever Ramon Ramirez was his first since Aug. 25, 2005, when he was a member of the Rockies.

Padres 10, Dodgers 3

LOS ANGELES — Jake Peavy homered, doubled, drove in four runs, and won his first game in almost two months, leading San Diego over slumping Los Angeles.

Peavy (5-10) threw 129 pitches over seven innings on another oppressively hot day at Dodger Stadium, allowing two runs and five hits. The right-hander came in 9-5 with a 4.61 ERA in eight starts since being hit, San 10-8 on May 26.

The Dodgers have lost eight straight and are 1-13 since the All-Star break and have went outscored 81-29 during the stretch. They are a season-worst 7-5 games out of first place and eight games under .500.

Phillies 6, Diamondbacks 4

PHILADELPHIA — Chase Utley hit a three-run homer to extend his hitting streak to 26 games and David Bellucci hit a solo shot to help Philadelphia beat Arizona.

Bellucci (4-7) allowed 11 hits and four runs in seven innings in winning for the first time since May 13.

Erickson the talk of WAC season preview

BOISE (AP) — Idaho coach Dennis Erickson was a dominating presence at Wednesday's Western Athletic Conference media preview — whether he was in the room or not.

With Erickson back on the Vandal's sideline, they won't be catching anyone in the conference by surprise this season.

"We're not going to sneak up on anybody," he said. "We know they have to be ready to play and I know that, too."

The nine head coaches in the conference and several players from each team attended the event to talk about their teams and the upcoming season. But Erickson's return to Idaho became the main topic.

"He's won everywhere he's been in college football, and he's inherited a good football team," said Fresno State coach Pat Hill, whose team is expected to contend for the conference title. "There will be a big turnaround in Idaho this year, I believe."

Idaho, 2-9 last season under coach Nick Holt, has had six consecutive losing seasons. Erickson was hired last February and returned to the place where he got his start as a head coach. A media pool picked the Vandals to finish eighth in the conference this season.

But Erickson has a history of turning college teams around, usually with quick-strike passing attacks. In his first start at Idaho from 1982-85, he transformed the Vandals into one of the top Division I-AA teams in the nation.

He was 144-57-1 as a head coach at Idaho, Wyoming, Washington State, Miami and Oregon State. His Miami teams won national championships in 1989 and 1991.

He has success in the NFL, going 31-33 in four years at the helm of the Seattle Seahawks and 9-23 with the San Francisco 49ers, where he was fired in January 2005.

"The first time I met him, I was in star shock," said Idaho quarterback Steven Wiechman. "He's got a national championship ring on his finger, picture of him with all these legendary players. I didn't know how to react."

Erickson tried to downplay his past victories, and expectations for his current team. "Basically, my philosophy is to spread them out and let it fly," Erickson said. "But right now, offensively, we're not going to be able to do that."

He said Wiechman has a strong, accurate arm, but that the team has yet to develop dependable receivers.

The other new coach in the conference is Boise State's Chris Petersen, who moved up from offensive coordinator and quarterbacks coach after Dan Hawkins left to take the head coaching job at Colorado.

Petersen's team was picked to win the conference title by both the coaches and media. The Broncos in the last five seasons went 53-10 and claimed four WAC titles.

In the media poll, Boise State received 432 points and 36 first-place votes, while Fresno State was picked second with 380 points and nine first-place votes — Nevada received four first-place votes and 349 points, and Hawaii one first-place vote and 306 points.

Media members followed those teams with Louisiana Tech, San Jose State, Utah State, Idaho and New Mexico State.

The coaches had the teams in the state order except Idaho and Utah State tied for seventh in that poll.

'Bama lands on its feet with Shula

By Mike Phillips McClatchy Newspapers

HOOPER, Ala. — There were about 100 of them, covered in crimson, lingering and waiting in the lobby of the Winfrey Hotel.

Waiting for the other Shula on Wednesday. "Who else would we be waiting for? He's our coach," said 40-year-old Bryce League, who sweats he has been an Alabama fan for all 40 years.

"The statement says much about Don Shula's son, Mike, who in three short years has done the near-impossible — he has made a name for himself.

Sure, he'll always be Don's son. There's no escaping that simple shadow of the winningest coach in the NFL, the man who still defines the Miami Dolphins.

But Mike Shula is the Alabama coach, lifting this storied program back on its feet, and he's being appreciated wherever they revere the Crimson Tide.

"I know the Alabama fans appreciate Coach Shula," said Ken Davis, Alabama's explosive running back. "You can see it on their faces every time they are around him. He has done so much for this program."

Just listen to League: we've been a Bama fan since birth, and I'll tell you, he hasn't done a good job; he's done a great job. He's a man we can respect and look up to. He's brought stability back to the program, to the team and to the university.

"Most of us were optimistic when he came here. We knew he was Don Shula's son. The feeling now is that he's our coach and he is here to stay."

Long-term stay

Alabama proved just how much he is wanted in May last year makes you feel good for our seniors, and where they've come from. Do we have all the answers? No. Do we need to get better? Yes. Is it going to be harder after losing some three-year starters, good leaders and talented leaders we wish the best of luck to in the NFL? Yes. Are we up for the challenge? Yes.

"These are things that are on my mind, not necessarily the perception," he said. "You get the feeling there's excitement out there. Maybe that's the best way to answer that question. If you base it on the off-season among the red elephant clubs, alumni clubs, high school coaches — in the relationships there, I think that definitely has increased, if that's any indicator."

When Shula signed a contract worth $1.55 million a year that runs through 2012.

"When he took the job, Shula, who grew in South Florida and led Miami Columbus High to its last state title game, said he felt like he was coming home to Alabama, where he had been the Crimson Tide's quarterback. But home feels much better these days.

There was Shula, just three years ago, walking into a relationship in shambles — the third Bama coach in less than three years. The Tide had lost its coach, lost scholarships and lost face.

Shula, who got a late start his first year the took over in May, led Alabama out of probation and into back-to-back bowls, tapping a 10-2 season last year by winning the Cotton Bowl and finishing ranked eighth in the nation.

"There was a lot of criticism from the media, but that's not the feeling now," said 28-year-old Scott McBride, also a lifelong fan. "But the general feeling now with fans is that he's the man. The program is on its way back up. He's done a good job recruiting — and, hey, we were 10-2. People like him."

The perception has changed, and Shula has won respect for being Mr. Shula. "The minute you think you're not on the hot seat when you get yourself in trouble," Shula said as he opened the SEC Media Days, drawing laughs from media members.

"If I talked about what the perception is among fans, it would be the first time I've talked about it," he said. "Obviously, winning 10 games

Wyche returns to high school coaching

By Pete Jacobelli
Associated Press writer

—GREENVILLE, S.C. — A healthier, happy Sam Wyche is in the game — even if his to-do list at Pickens High includes things he never did in the NFL.

Sweep out the locker room? You bet. Simplify his vast play-book for the high school game? Easily done. Watch his starting quarterback take a few days away from camp to use base-half? Not a problem.

"Money's tight up here. They're looking for any volunteers who can get," Wyche said by telephone. "I'm glad to do it."

Wyche returned to Pickens, where he worked with the team's quarterbacks four years ago, after coaching with friend Mike Mullarkey in Buffalo the last two seasons.

The 61-year-old Wyche easily could have relaxed on his 28-acre horse farm in South Carolina's Upstate, attending high school games on Fridays and college games the attend- ed nearby (Firman) on Saturdays.

But Wyche kept in contact with Pickens head coach Brett Turner, the school's defensive coordinator during Wyche's previous prep stint, and decided to come back as an assistant.

"I enjoyed every bit of my experience" the last time, Wyche said. "This time, I'm actually more involved in the offense."

Wyche was known as an offensive innovator during his 12 seasons as an NFL head coach. He led Cincinnati to the Super Bowl after the 1988 season, losing to San Francisco 20-16 on a late touchdown.

Cincinnati Bengals coach Sam Wyche slabs the air as he is carried from the field on the shoulders of his players after their 21-10 victory over the Buffalo Bills for the AFC Championship game in Cincinnati, Ohio, Jan. 8, 1989.

After four seasons at Tampa Bay, Wyche became a CBS analyst in 1999. Two years later, he underwent a biopsy on some lymph nodes in his chest. His left vocal cord was severed during the procedure, leaving his trademark voice — he once famously shouted to snowball-throwing Bengals fans, "You don't live in Cleveland, you live in Cincinnati!" — little more than a raspy whisper.

"That operation changed my life, my direction, my income," he said. "Everything." Gradually, Wyche's condition improved. He sounds clear and crisp on the phone.

"I sometimes have trouble with my volume, or when I get excited at a game," he said. Still, he's strong enough to broadcast next month's Hall of Fame Game between Oakland and Philadelphia for Westwood One radio. Should that go well, "I've already gotten a call from Marvin Albert about working with him during the playoffs," Wyche said, chuckling.

Wyche also was diagnosed with a heart condition, cardiomyopathy. It's been told by doctors that a third of his heart muscle does not work properly. At each checkup, physicals show he's about two to four years away from needing a new heart, "but they just keep rolling that number over."

There are days Wyche feels winded and weak or his voice strains as he speaks. But "I'm the best I've been in a while," he said.

There have been adjustments from the NFL life. Wyche interrupted some "housecleaning duties" with the other Pickens coaches to take a cell phone call. During the spring, Wyche-filled tri-playbook with exotic schemes before simplifying it.

"I keep reminding myself that these guys are learning in biology class and English class, dating. I can't put in way too much," he said.

Pickens starting quarterback Andy Fowler will miss a few summer drills because he's playing in the Big League World Series, something Wyche never worked about with Hooper Ebsman in Cincinnati or J.P. Losman in Buffalo.

"In the NFL, you're not there, you get fired," he said. "This is different, but it's OK."

Turner saw how easy Wyche was to work with previously and welcomed him back.

"He's such a humble guy, he's never such a stranger," Turner said.

Fowler didn't play his junior season to concentrate on baseball and said one of the clinicians to return this season was having Wyche as his coach.

"It's pretty cool having a coach who coached in the Super Bowl," he said.

"Wyche tries to keep things as light as he can. He reads jokes to players and always has something encouraging to say."

Still, Wyche might not be done with the pros. He would love another shot as a head coach, or even an offensive coordinator in the right spot. He also would enjoy a return to the broadcast booth. Then, again, Wyche said he is happy to stay at Pickens for several more seasons.

"I'll let each year dictate the next," he says. "But getting back here is refreshing."

U.S. cyclist serves up French toast

JOHN KELSO
COX NEWS SERVICE

AUSTIN, Texas — You want to know how sorry the French are? Let's paint a picture for you.

We send a guy with one testicle over there to ride a bike, and he kicks French behinds for seven years in a row.

Then we send a guy with a bad hip over there to take the place of the guy who is missing a testicle, and he kicks French butts again.

Just think how bad it would be to the French if we sent a whole guy over there to pedal. Heck, you could probably enter an American with no legs on a pencil cart and win the thing.

With that in mind, it's obviously high time we moved the Tour de France to the U.S., to some place like, say, here.

I say this because the French have been skunked again by an American in their own sport, bicycling. And this time they won't be able to go around whining about alleged drug use by the winner like they did with Lance Armstrong.

See, Floyd Landis, who won the tour last year, was raised in straight-laced Menomonee country in Lancaster County, Pa. So the French will be lucky if they can find an Advil on this guy.

Put that on the front page of Le Monde and smoke it.

I say this because the French have been skunked again by an American in their own sport, bicycling. And this time they won't be able to go around whining about alleged drug use by the winner like they did with Lance Armstrong.

The top French finisher, Cyril Dessel, came in seventh. The French haven't won their own Tour since 1985, when Bernard Hinault came in first. That was so long ago that George W. Bush was still drinking.

"This constant thumping has got to be disheartening to the French. Imagine the Daytona 500 being won by a guy in a beret driving a Peugeot.

The French must be getting tired of getting clobbered in their own game — especially by a guy who's going in for hip replacement surgery this fall. Maybe, to be fair, the French riders should be allowed to use tiny little motors on their bicycles.

The only reason they have this race in France anyway is that it's a good way to get the French to come out of their houses and watch the bicycles go by on the street. Otherwise they just sit in the house all day with their shades drawn, drinking wine. So to the French, the Tour de France is an alcohol abuse treatment program.

Not since the Germans came through in their tanks have the French had a reason to step outside and watch the parade go by.

You know, I'll betcha I could go over to the Wheatville Cop on Guadalupe Street and find a half dozen bicyclists hanging out in the parking lot who could kick everybody in France's rear end in a bike ride.

I'm starting to feel sorry for the French. Here's a civilization that couldn't even name its own politicians. What do you tell them they had French fries or they wouldn't even have known what to call them. And now they can't win their own bicycle race?

Let's take it from them and move it to us, so they can embarrass themselves again.

John Kelso writes for the Austin American-Statesman.

Vailas:
ISU could lose millionsISU president says community college proposal a threat

The Associated Press

IDAHO FALLS — The new president of Idaho State University offered a chilly reception to a legislative proposal for new community colleges across the state.

In his first-ever address to state lawmakers, Arthur Vailas said Tuesday that expanding Idaho's community college system could cost ISU up to $5 million a year.

The committee met at Eastern Idaho Technical College — the latest stop on a summer tour of educational hubs throughout the state. The committee will be in Twin Falls on Sept. 11. ISU has a satellite campus in Idaho Falls and its main campus in nearby Pocatello.

If the state builds new two-year colleges or transfers existing schools like the technical college into community colleges, Vailas said ISU would suffer because students enrolled in entry-level and professional technical courses at ISU would look elsewhere.

Vailas pressed the committee to allocate more money to ISU to offset potential declines in enrollment if the new community college system is adopted.

"All of this is 'what-if' scenarios. We don't know for sure what enrollment impact would be," Vailas said. "Let's take the worst-case scenario — if we did lose $5 million, we would hope the Legislature would assist ISU financially to restructure and reorganize so we could build back enrollment."

Currently, there are only two free-standing community colleges in the state. Advocates have stressed that Idaho needs more colleges so students can keep pace in a competitive economy.

Two community college measures failed to pass during the legislative session earlier this year.

One bill would have built more schools, while former Gov. Dirk Kempthorne had sought $5 million to pay for more community college classes.

Woman facing felony abuse trial

By Cassidy Friedman

SHOSHONE — A Richfield mother charged with abusing her son has been moved from a state hospital to the custody of the Lincoln County Sheriff's Office where she will face a felony charge.

Authorities moved Kyanne R. Johnson after keeping her involuntarily hospitalized for 18 months at State Hospital South in Blackfoot. She is charged with one felony count of injury to a child.

Her husband David Lars Johnson is currently serving a four-year sentence.

"Two designated examiners from Health and Welfare said she was 'commitable,'" said Lincoln County Prosecuting Attorney E. Scott Paul.

The couple was charged in connection with the alleged abuse of her 9-year-old autistic son.

On Jan. 6, 2005 at the request of the Department of Health and Welfare, Lincoln County sheriff's deputies went to 410 W. Nez Pece in Richfield to talk with the parents of the boy, according to an affidavit written by Deputy Josh Eggleston. Evidence was found that the boy may have been duct taped to a bed.

Her next hearing is scheduled for 9 a.m. on Aug. 21.

Victim interview should wrap up
CSI caseBy Nate Poppo
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Idaho State Police plan to interview Megan Buschman on Friday about an accident that left her with multiple injuries, including a broken benefit A benefit and raffle for CSI student Megan Buschman is planned for Aug. 10 at the Montana Steakhouse in Twin Falls.

Buschman, 19, was hit by a 1984 pickup driven by College of Southern Idaho employee Kevin Gram, 17, on July 13. Buschman was crossing the college's circle drive near the Taylor Building when Gram, of Twin Falls, hit her.

Buschman is recovering at home in Jerome after hip surgery at the University of Utah Hospital in Salt Lake City, said her aunt, Debbie Weigate of Tuhl.

Weigate expressed relief that investigators will talk to Buschman and said the matter needs to be resolved soon.

"Especially with school coming up, we need to decide who has the right-of-way on campus," she said.

It is not certain who will be found at fault in the accident. ISP Capt. David Neal previously said Buschman was at fault because she stepped in front of the truck and was not in a normal crossing area.

CSI's Policies and Procedures Manual states pedestrians have the right-of-way everywhere on campus, but ISP Sgt. Kent Oliver previously said the only thing he could follow was Idaho Code. The Code states pedestrians not in crosswalks have to yield to vehicle traffic.

Oliver, the supervisor for the case, is currently in Colorado on personal business and was unavailable to comment on the CSI policy.

Oddly, the CSI traffic policies are missing from its Web site since sometime in 2005, public information officer Doug Maughan said. It was not replaced after the manual underwent an annual review and revision.

The policy, Section 5.08, was back on the site Friday, and Maughan said the college was not trying to hide it.

"We didn't pull off the policy for any reason," he said. "It failed to get back in there, through."

The accident and ISP report may lead to a review of CSI's traffic policy and crosswalks. CSI Finance Director Slike Mason said, Maughan previously said the campus doesn't have enough crosswalks.

"It's a sure wake-up call to see what we can do to make things better," Mason said. "I think there will be more defined crosswalks in the future."

Even though the CSI policy may not end up with legal weight, Mason said, it can still serve as a guideline for those on campus. And the traffic rules seem to be working.

"This is pretty rare to have somebody actually hit our car," he said. "If we have to take some actions to better protect students, we'll do that."

Meth moms
prepare for fair

Pam Green, president of the Twin Falls chapter of Mad Mothers Against Methamphetamine, prepares to "flock" a Twin Falls home Wednesday afternoon with pink flamingos. Mad Mothers are a nonprofit organization dedicated to helping mothers with children on meth. Once a home has been "flocked" the owner can purchase anti-flock insurance for $5 and send it on to another yard for a $25 contribution to the group.

TWIN FALLS — Be on the lookout for a flock of pink flamingos migrating across town today.

Get excited, but not too excited. Real flamingos flock to Lake Nakuru in Kenya. These are fake, plastic and coveredly staked into someone's private chunk of lawn.

A $25 donation to Mad

Mothers Against Methamphetamine moves the flock to a neighbor's front yard. It's funny, it's visually compelling, and possibly even a game of light-hearted extortion.

Like it needed telling these meth moms play tough. They don't ask for donations — they scatter flock for them.

"I love it when they're not home," said Pam Green, the lead mother at MAM's local chapter. "Tousley (Twin Falls County Sheriff Wayne) got flocked. His wife, who was there, thought it was a really cute idea."

Green says Tousley's wife also promptly paid a $5 fee to guarantee future winged migrations would steer clear of her lawn.

Green says the proceeds will be used to make the mothers' presentation at the Twin Falls County Fair more engaging.

Sprucing up City Hall
Volunteerism at its best in CastlefordBy Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

CASTLEFORD — Castleford's City Hall may not be a marvel of modern architecture, but don't tell that to residents proud of their local government building.

City Hall moved to 342 Main Street about a month ago but has owned the cinder-block building for about 50 years, said Mayor Rita Ruffing.

"As long as I can remember it has been the city's building," she said. "It served as City Hall and the jail for a number of years but we really haven't used the building for quite some time."

Ruffing explained that although modest, the building is paid for and serves its function well. However, it was in desperate need of new windows and a face-lift.

"Once we moved down here, we got a donation of paint right away," she said.

Word of mouth quickly spread and within a matter of weeks donations for five new windows, paint and labor were in the bucket.

On Saturday, members of the Castleford High School football team woke early to give their City Hall a fresh coat of white paint.

Couch Scott Denn explained, "I want to enable students to give their time."

Dean is an alumnus of Hillamook High School in Oregon. It explained that a fundraising event that began earning just $1,000 for the local charities and the Portland Shriners organization now brings in over $250,000 annually.

"Students can't accept donations, they have to work for it. So you can see how much can be done with some effort," Dean said. "Young people are the ones most apt for service and work. I am also the government teacher, so I want to show students that without their work, the taxpayers of Castleford would have to pay a lot of money for this."

A lesson on community service and self-sacrifice wasn't lost on the team.

Nathan Pryor, 17 and an upcoming senior at CHS, stood high on a ladder sloshing white paint along the top trim of City Hall.

"This community means a lot to me. This is an easy way to give back," said Nathan.

Teammate Eduardo Hernandez wanted to repay the community that supports the football team.

"Castleford is really good to the football team. They are there every year and every game," he said. "Plus, this will save the town some money."

Nathan Pryor, 17, paints the trim Saturday morning on the east side of Castleford City Hall. The Castleford High School football team helped give the cinder-block building a face-lift.

BURLEY — Shanel Alexa Pruitt, a 19-year-old Burley resident, died July 22, 2006, in the Mini-Cassia area, from injuries sustained in a vehicle rollover.

Shanel Alexa Pruitt

The shine of her smile. We'll miss her all day. Dream of her at night. She gave our souls warmth. Our lives she made bright. So many she loved. So many loved her. And not soon enough. Shall we hug her again. Please, God, make us strong. To endure this heartache. And support one another. So our own hearts won't break.

She was born Nov. 16, 1986, in Twin Falls, Idaho, to Glenn and Linda Pruitt. She lived in the Mini-Cassia area most of her life and was in her second year of college. Shanel worked as a dental assistant for Dr. Banner and as a cashier for Maverick Inc. She loved her family the most, and her friends. She adored her little nephews and her niece. She also loved shopping, clothes, her dolphin collection, and sharing a love of music with her daddy.

Shanel is survived by her daddy, Glen Pruitt, and her mama, Linda Pruitt; sister, Sophia (L.T.) Easterday Bowlin; brother, Joseph (Marlie) Easterday; the love of her life, Clayton Eames; nephews, Isaac Easterday and Patrick Easterday; niece, Adia Bowlin, all of Burley; Uncle Kenny and Aunt Emily McKnight of Twin Falls.

So, my lovely Shanel. We'll see you someday in God's paradise to come. When He gives you back life. And unites us again. We love you S.A.P. (Written by her mother)

Pioneering black model Dorothea Church dies at 83

By Los Angeles Times

Dorothea Towles Church, the first professional black model to walk the fashion runways of French couture designers in Paris, died July 7, she was 83. Church, died at St. Luke's-Roosevelt Hospital Center in New York City. The cause was complications from heart and kidney disease, said Michael Henry Adams, a friend. She had been a resident of New York City for many years. In the late 1940s, after some early modeling experience in Los Angeles, Church took a trip to Paris with her sister, Lois, a music student who planned to study there.

She called on several French designers and was hired at Christian Dior to fill in for a house model in France, France. She went from Dior, Church was sent to work for Elsa Schiaparelli and, later, Pierre Balmain.

Church opened easily, and she decided to stay in Paris. "For once I was not considered black, African American or Negro," Church said in a 2004 interview with Women's Wear Daily. The French fashion establishment "treated you like a queen," she said.

The fashion industry in the U.S. was not the same. While Church was working for Balmain in the early 1950s, editors of Ebony asked about photographing some of his latest styles. Balmain's publicist turned them down, concerned that it would hurt sales among Balmain's white customers in the U.S., Church said later.

"They didn't think that African American women would buy the clothes, that they could buy the clothes," Church said in an interview for the 1998 book "Black and Beautiful" by Barbara Summers.

"That's where my education and my experience came in," Church said. "I knew about black history and black society."

She was raised among black middle-class, professional people in Texarkana, Texas. It took years for fashion promoters to recognize the potential market, she later said. Church returned to the U.S. in the early 1950s, carrying trunks filled with couture dresses she had bought at Paris designers' sales.

She settled in New York City, expecting to work for top American fashion designers, but there were few jobs for black models.

She organized a fashion show of her couture collection and toured U.S. cities with the help of Alpha Kappa Alpha, a college sorority established by black women. For each show, she hired local professional models and college students after she taught them some basic fashion design.

A dress, hat and purse from Church's personal collection are included in an exhibit, "Black Style Now," co-curated by Adams, that will open Sept. 9 at the Museum of the City of New York.

"I feel I had a great influence on American black women dressing differently and feeling good about themselves," Church said of her touring couture show, in "Black and Beautiful."

John Mack, deemed one of the country's top oboists, dies

By Adam Bernstein
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — John Mack, who spent 36 years as principal oboist with the prestigious Cleveland Orchestra and was regarded as the dean of American oboists, died July 23 at University Hospitals of Cleveland. He was 78 and had complications from brain cancer.

After working with orchestras in New Orleans and Washington, Mack became the Cleveland Orchestra's principal oboist in 1965. He toured and recorded with the organization under a series of demanding conductors: George Szell, Lorin Maazel and Christoph von Dohnanyi. In 1979, New York Times classical music critic Harold C. Schonberg named Mack among the top three oboists in the country.

The oboe's piercing, slightly nasal tone makes it one of the most distinctive sounds in classical ensembles. Great concentration and breath control are required to keep the oboe in tune. "If you're going to play the oboe, you have to have elementary bravery or you're in big trouble," Mack told a Cleveland reporter in 2001. "Some of them are nutty, wild and unreasonable. I call myself a quintessential Cleveland Orchestra player — orthodox, but zippy, and nonwacky. I hate wacky."

John Wilfred Mack was born Oct. 30, 1927, in Somerville, N.J., where his father was a Presbyterian minister. He played piano and violin before switching to the oboe in the sixth grade.

He graduated from the Juillard School of Music in New York, where he played first oboe with the orchestra and studied under Harold Gomberg, the New York Philharmonic principal oboist. After Juillard, Mack graduated from the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia. There, he met an important mentor — Marcel Tabuteau, who had been first oboist with the Philadelphia Orchestra under conductor Leopold Stokowski. From Tabuteau, Mack learned impeccable technique and an elegant way with phrasing that he called "cosmopolitan."

Mack played first oboe for the Sadler's Wells Ballet orchestra during its North American tour (1951-52), followed by 11 seasons as first oboist with the New Orleans Symphony.

He was playing with the National Symphony Orchestra in 1965 when Szell recruited him to Cleveland. Szell had long admired Mack, whom he first met in 1953 at the Casals Festival in Prades, France. "A lot of people didn't like working with him because he was tough," Mack said of Szell. "I loved him. As demanding as he was, it seemed to me always for the sake of the music. It was never for self-aggrandizement."

After Szell's death in 1970, he was succeeded by Maazel, whom Mack did not always appreciate. Later, he told The New Yorker magazine: "During an oboe solo in the Brahms First, he asked me to play a high D pianissimo, a dynamic marking that was not in the score. When I asked why, he said, 'Off the top of my head, I thought it would be beautiful.' His whim was more important than Brahms' reasoned judgment."

ISU

Continued from page C1 One of the biggest factors to maintain the preservation of an institution," Sen. Barr Davis, R-Idaho Falls, said. "Vall's comments. It is the meaningful delivery of quality education to the people, particularly in my community, where we deliver so much education in support of our national laboratory." The U.S. Department of Energy's Idaho National Laboratory is outside of Idaho Falls. Vall's said ISU options are unique and would not easily be replaced by professional technical courses at community colleges. "ISU loses 'lower division' and technical students to community colleges, the state's work force would lag behind, he said.

"If you discourage the research university not to have an integrated scheme of delivery, that puts all eggs in one basket," Vall's said. "Then we have a work force problem, and we already have a need, especially given the growing opportunity in energy and medicine. Who is going to take care of that?" Before Vall's presentation, Eastern Idaho Technical College President William A. Robertson made a case for smaller institutions. He said EITC enrolls 1,447 students in accredited programs; many of them single mothers and other students unlikely to attend a four-year college. "They're people who had good jobs trying to support families," Robertson said. "It's a marvel to me they get through."

Forest Service blasts logjam on Salmon River, debris to be cleared by today

A logjam blocking the Middle Fork, a 100-mile stretch of water in the Frank Church-River of No Return Wilderness in Idaho, is shown Tuesday.

BOISE (AP) — Teams of explosives technicians from the U.S. Forest Service blasted a logjam on the Middle Fork of the Salmon River on Wednesday.

Rafters — stranded since Monday by the pileup of 30-foot-long logs, as well as boulders and debris — will be able to float through by Thursday, Forest Service officials told the Idaho Statesman newspaper.

The logjam temporarily blocked about 200 rafters from passing through a remote stretch of wilderness, outfitters said.

The Middle Fork, a 100-mile stretch of water in the Frank Church-River of No Return Wilderness, is considered one of the most thrilling whitewater floats in the country.

The central Idaho waterway is accessible only to those with permits.

After the blast, crews continued working with ropes and hand tools, moving several remaining logs. As many as 60 logs had plugged the river at the Pistol Creek Rapids.

The Forest Service planned to scout the river first to make sure the path was clear before sending the rafters through.

The pileup clogged the river in a remote canyon, not far from the launching point for many commercial rafting trips. The area was accessible only by an airstrip about 1.5 miles away of rustic horse trail.

Meanwhile, one outfitter, Mackay Wilderness River Trips, decided to pay to fly clients on an air taxi to the Middle Fork Lodge, downriver. A group of about 24 planned to resume rafting from there.

"We are not going to leave any sooner than we have to," Walt Rotkis of Seattle, a client, told the newspaper. "We love Idaho."

Four baby condors die of West Nile virus

This image provided by The Peregrine Fund shows a young condor after its release at the World Center for Birds of Prey in Boise in 2004.

BOISE (AP) — Efforts to save North America's tiny population of critically endangered California condors suffered what biologists called a minor setback last week when four 3-month-old chicks at an Idaho raptor center died from West Nile virus.

Their demise leaves just eight condor hatchlings at the World Center for Birds of Prey in Boise, where biologists have been breeding the federally protected scavengers since 1994.

These are the first condors to die from the mosquito-borne virus at the center, run by a $10 million endowment called The Peregrine Fund.

West Nile showed up in Idaho in 2003 and has emerged a month ahead of schedule this year, as spring rains left pools where the biting insects' larvae thrive, state officials said.

Bill Heinrich, the center's species restoration manager, said the deaths aren't a devastating blow to his $1.3 million annual condor breeding program, but they're still "disappointing." Consequently, the facility in 2006 will send fewer than half the 20 birds it transported last year for release at sites including near Arizona's Grand Canyon.

Severely burned child dies after Coeur d'Alene house fire

COEUR D'ALENE, Idaho (AP) — A 13-month-old girl pulled from a burning house died in a Seattle hospital Wednesday after suffering burns over as much as 90 percent of her body, police said.

Coeur d'Alene Police detectives were notified at 1:10 p.m. that Kylla P. Fahd died from her injuries after being flown to Harborview Medical Center in Seattle, police spokeswoman Sgt. Christie Wood said.

An unconscious dog was rescued by firefighters home and resuscitated with oxygen, police said.

The fire was reported at 6:30 a.m. Wednesday and was being fought by a neighbor with a garden hose when firefighters arrived, police said.

A person at the scene had removed the girl from a couch inside the house and was trying to revive the child.

The girl was in the house alone, while her mother and an adult male were in a vehicle behind the house when the fire broke out, police said.

Investigators are working to determine the cause of the fire.

TV show COPS filming in Boise

BOISE (AP) — Producers of the Fox TV show "COPS" are teaming up with patrol officers in Boise for the next eight weeks to film upcoming episodes of the show that features real-life arrests and other police activity.

Police Chief Mike Masterson confirmed that TV crews began filming officers Tuesday and will remain in the city for the next two months.

The show's producers first asked to film the Boise Police Department earlier this year. Police officials said the show will give the public a unique look into how officers deal with the routine calls not often addressed in the local media.

More than 80 dead California bakes

By Juliana Barbaso
Associated Press writer

SAN FRANCISCO — The heat from California's record-setting heat wave grew to almost seven dozen Wednesday, forcing coroners in one county to stack victims two to a gurney in morgues as temperatures took a barely perceptible dip.

On the 11th day of triple-digit heat in the Central Valley, deaths probably caused by the heat reached 20 in Fresno County and 19 in neighboring Stanislaus County, bringing the total number of deaths in the state since the beginning of this heat wave to 83.

Fresno County Coroner Loraine Cervantes said her staff was doing autopsies non-stop in 90-degree heat to deal with the pileup. Decomposing bodies make it difficult to verify the exact cause of death, she said.

Meanwhile, Californians took stock of other damage wrought by the heat, from fruit and nuts scorched on the vine to a state power grid battered by the constant demand for electricity.

The hot weather, coupled with increased usage, blew out thousands of transformers. Hundreds of thousands of homes and businesses were without power at the peak of the hot spell, but by Wednesday just a few thousand remained in the dark.

Still, the widespread outages have left little opportunity for routine maintenance on over-worked power plants and transmission lines, officials said.

Even longtime residents on the stuffy inland valleys are shocked by the consequences of this prolonged heat spell, officials said.

"People in the valley are used to the high temperatures. The problem is they've lasted for so long even a healthy individual can get sick," said Dan Lynch, of the Fresno County's community health department.

Next-door neighbors "Joe" Baker, 73, and Curtis Flory, 68, were both found dead in the same Modesto apartment complex after neighbors and family members alerted authorities.

Along California's border with Mexico, the Border Patrol found one illegal immigrant who died possibly from the heat, one serious dehydrated immigrant who was returned to Mexico and three women who had to be taken to the hospital after being abandoned in the locked trunk of a car for 90 minutes by a driver who ran away after spotting a Border Patrol checkpoint.

Cynthia Hernandez, 8, cools off from the heat in the mist of a fan set up for visitors at the Los Angeles Zoo on Wednesday.

Endangered falcon to be reintroduced

ALBUQUERQUE, (AP) — The endangered northern aplomado falcon will be returned to its historical home in Chihuahuan desert grasslands of New Mexico and Arizona, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service said.

The federal agency said in a news release Wednesday that up to 150 falcons born in captivity will be reintroduced in southern New Mexico and allowed to fly into Arizona under a special provision of the Endangered Species Act.

"Our goal is to establish a self-sustaining resident population," said Ben Riegler, acting Southwest Regional Director for Fish and Wildlife.

The reintroduction of month-old birds could begin as early as August, said a Fish and Wildlife spokeswoman, Elizabeth Slown.

The falcons will come from the World Center for Birds of Prey, The Peregrine Fund's facility in Boise, Idaho, which also supplies birds for recovery efforts in Texas. The birds will be released in groups of five to seven on private and public lands.

The northern aplomado falcon is identified by a white stripe above the eye and a brown "vest." It was listed as endangered in 1986.

Due to the substantial experimental population designation, any birds in Arizona or New Mexico are no longer considered endangered, although they will continue to have protective measures.

For example, it will still be illegal to shoot or harass them or to take their eggs, Slown said.

Monument to polygamists jailed in 1953 erected

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A marker-honoring polygamist families arrested and jailed during a raid on their homes 53 years ago was erected in a Colorado City, Ariz., park Wednesday — a gift from leader of a Canadian polygamist sect with ties to the community.

The monument is intended both as a symbol of the past and the future, Winston Blackmore said in a telephone interview with The Associated Press. Blackmore, who runs an independent polygamist sect in Bowdler, British Columbia, dedicated the monument in a short ceremony in Colorado City's Cottonwood Park while about 100 people looked on.

"It's really important that the people in Colorado City remember what we stood for, what our old leaders stood for," Blackmore said. "If they could get that back, then maybe some of these families would take the initiative and gather together to get this community back to what it was."

Workshop to focus on Marketing on Internet

TWIN FALLS — A free afternoon workshop called "Marketing Your Business on the Internet: Preparing for the New Economy" will be from 1 to 4 p.m. today at the College of Southern Idaho. Sherry Rust, training facilitator for the Idaho Small Business Development Center at CSI, says the goal of the workshop is to provide training on how the Internet can be used as a resource and a marketing tool. The class is free, but applicants are urged to register ahead of time since seating is limited. The class will be held in Room C93 of the Government Building at CSI. For more information or to sign up, contact Rust at 732-6455 or srust@csi.edu.

Venture Forum in Boise this September

BOISE — The eighth annual Intermountain Venture Forum, scheduled Sept. 26-27 at the Boise Centre on the Grove in downtown Boise, is now accepting applications for companies interested in presenting. The 2006 program will feature keynote presentations by Steve Appleton, chairman, chief executive officer and president of Micron Technology Inc., and Paul Maeder, co-founder and managing general partner of Highland Capital Partners. The application deadline for entrepreneurs to present is Sept. 15. Is health care a problem for you?

TWIN FALLS — When it comes to health care costs, are you caught in the middle? Do you work at a job that doesn't offer health insurance benefits, but yet you don't qualify for Medicaid? Have you ever gone without health care or prescription medicines because you couldn't afford them? Have you cut your medications in half to make your prescriptions last longer? Have you ever had to file bankruptcy due to an unexpected medical crisis? Are you a small business owner who would like to offer health insurance benefits to your employees, but you can't afford to? Are you a large employer who finds it more and more difficult to pay your part of the insurance premium? The Times-News wants to hear from you. Please call Business Editor Sandy Miller at 735-3264 or e-mail her at sml@emagicvalley.com.

Coming soon: More hotels

Twin Falls a great place for hotels, Ameritel official says

By Sandy Miller
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Your eyes aren't deceiving you. The sign in front of what used to be the Ameritel Inn on North Blue Lakes indeed says "Best America Suites." Ameritel and the owners of the locally owned Best America Suites closed the deal last spring. But Ameritel has no plans to leave town. Quite the contrary, Ameritel is planning not just one, but two new hotels on Pole Line Road. On Tuesday, city planners approved a special-use permit to Ameritel to build a 78,448-square-foot, three-story hotel at 539 Pole Line Road. Once they break ground, the hotel will take about a year to build and will employ about 30 people, said Chuck Everett, operations manager for Ameritel, which has four hotels in Boise, two in Idaho Falls, and one each in Pocatello, Coeur d'Alene, Olympia, Wash., and Bend, Ore. Ameritel also plans to build a

Hilton Garden Inn franchise not far from the new Ameritel. Ameritel will own and operate the hotel, which will carry the Hilton name. That hotel, which will have a small restaurant, will employ about 35 people, Everett said. Does Twin Falls have a large enough market for two new hotels just down the street from each other? Everett said yes. "Twin has been a great market," Everett said Wednesday. "It's a natural stopping point for interstate traffic." Everett explained that Twin Falls' distance from Boise and Idaho Falls makes it a perfect stopping point for people who don't want to spend a couple more hours on the road before bedding down for the night. Also, Twin Falls' healthy industry sector brings plenty of business travelers, and Idaho's scenic beauty brings crowds of vacationers. "Just leisure travel has been one heck of a growth area for you folks," Everett said. Meanwhile, Everett said the former Ameritel site is in good hands with Best America Suites owners Yan and Nongji Xiaovan and Hobert and Teresita Cabé. The Cabés also own the Super 8 in Burley. "They're good operators and I'm sure they will continue to provide a good lodging experience to travelers into Twin Falls," Everett said. The sign out front isn't the only that's changed at the hotel on North Blue Lakes. "We're going through the hotel head to toe and anything we can improve, we're doing it," Yan Xiaovan said. Xiaovan said they've spruced up the pool area, upgraded the breakfast machines and are busy renovating the rooms. But one thing hasn't changed. The 30 former Ameritel employees all kept their jobs, Xiaovan said. "We intend to keep everybody and add more," he said.

Supervalu earnings dip on Albertson's acquisition

EDEN PRAIRIE, Minn. — Grocer and food distributor Supervalu Inc. said Wednesday its first-quarter earnings slipped 4 percent because of the cost of buying most of the Albertson's grocery chain and accounting for stock options. The Eden Prairie-based company said it earned $87 million, or 57 cents per share, during the fiscal first quarter that ended June 17, down from $91 million, or 64 cents per share, during the same period last year. Revenue slipped 3 percent to $5.78 billion during the quarter. Twin Falls is home to an Albertson's grocery store. Supervalu said transaction costs for the Albertson's deal, which closed on June 2, were 6 cents per share, and that accounting for stock option expenses cost another nickel per share. Analysts surveyed by Thomson Financial were expecting 57 cents per share on revenue of $5.8 billion for the quarter. The results released Wednesday did not include Albertson's operations. Supervalu said it would include those operations in its second-quarter results. Chairman and Chief Executive Jeffrey Noddle has said Albertson's would add to Supervalu profits right away. On Wednesday, he said Supervalu's first-quarter results were "on track with our expectations."

Stocks close marginally lower

NEW YORK — Stocks closed marginally lower Wednesday after a session of seesaw trading and profit-taking following a two-day rally. Stocks opened lower, swung to a gain after the Federal Reserve's Beige Book of regional economic conditions said inflation was in check and then dropped as the session neared its close. Consumer discretionary and industrial stocks finished lower as investors sold off Amazon.com Inc., Boeing Co. and United Parcel Service Inc. on disappointing earnings news. Energy stocks gained as a spike in oil prices helped the sector. A barrel of light crude settled at $74.94, up 19 cents, on the New York Mercantile Exchange. Oil had advanced as much as 30 cents a barrel earlier in the session. Health care and utility stocks also rose as investors headed to the traditionally defensive sectors, which tend to do well in a choppy economy. In months of erratic trading, investors have frequently met one day's advances with a selloff the next session to lock in profits. With volatility on the rise, swings of 100 points are now "the norm, not the exception," said Arthur Hogan, chief market analyst at Jefferies & Co. According to preliminary calculations, the Dow Jones industrial average lost 1.20, or 0.01 percent, to 11,102.51 after rising a total of 230 points the first two days this week.

Japanese to lift ban on U.S. beef today

TOKYO — The Japanese government will officially approve resuming U.S. beef imports from selected meat processing plants today, easing a ban imposed this year over mad cow fears, officials said. The approval will come after a strategy meeting of the Agriculture ministry on Thursday, where officials will debate when to start accepting beef shipments and other details, according to ministry officials Hiroaki Ogata. The ruling Liberal Democratic Party agreed Wednesday to resume imports from selected facilities after being briefed by government officials on a recent inspection tour of U.S. meat-processing plants.

Distributor charged with selling bogus livestock antibiotics

YAKIMA, Wash. — A national distributor of antibiotics for livestock has been charged with selling counterfeit medication, money laundering, interstate fraud and other offenses. According to a federal indictment issued last week and unsealed Tuesday, Bruce Ray Noyes, a California drug reseller and chief executive of Animal Pharmaceuticals, approved selling bogus drugs in deals valued at $1.47 million from 2001 to last fall. Also named in the indictment were five shareholders or employees of the company. Noyes could not be reached for comment Tuesday by the Yakima Herald-Republic. Charges in the case include trafficking in counterfeit goods, money laundering, interstate fraud and selling and holding counterfeit drugs. Brand names listed in the indictment are Excenel, Nufator and Baytril, antibiotics for treatment of infectious diseases in cattle, swine and poultry. The government is seeking forfeiture of the $1.47 million plus $358,000 that investigators believe was derived from money laundering. Government lawyers wrote that fake drugs were brought from California and Mexico for distribution through Animal Pharmaceuticals offices in Yakima and Jerome, Idaho. The company is accused of buying counterfeit drugs, some with concealed or altered expiration dates and others in a manner that failed to conform to manufacturers' standards, from a California supplier or a Mexican manufacturing plant. The Fresno (Calif.) Bee reported in May that the Food and Drug Administration had obtained federal warrants for three people with ties to a California animal medical supply company. Federal investigators accused the firm of importing counterfeit animal drugs in a case similar to what is being alleged in Yakima. The chief executive of that company was a large shareholder in Animal Pharmaceuticals for part of the period covered by the indictment, and the investigation began with a tip from an Animal Pharmaceuticals sales representative, the Bee reported.

WEEKEND LINES
Working From Home

People may complain about having to go into the office, but many workers choose to do so even if they can work from home. A study released July 12 found that about a quarter of U.S. employees could work from home, only 11 percent telecommute.

The modern survey of 1,018 U.S. adults was sponsored by the Robert H. Smith School of Business at the University of Maryland and published by Rockdale Associates of Great Falls, Va. The study said more telecommuting could lead to savings of $3.9 billion per year in health care, as well as time saved on the road. But the study added, it might not make a big dent on the economy, with the typical commute only 10 miles and 20 minutes each way. — Zachary A. Selditch

Chiapas provides an exciting vacation

A vacation to Chiapas, Mexico, may not seem like the ideal place for most Americans to relax and get away from it all. After all, the southernmost state of Mexico was home to a violent uprising by local rebels back in 1994.

The revolt, which put Chiapas on the map and in the headlines, came to a head when more than 2,000-armed Maya took over six local villages. The Indian soldiers, who also known as Zapatista rebels are named after the famous revolutionary hero, Emiliano Zapata, launched an attack to gain attention when the North American Trade Agreement went into effect. More than 100 people were killed during this political war fare. The chaos came to an end after the Mexican government bombed the rebel force field and regained control of the area.

After negotiations, the storm has calmed and Chiapas, one of the most beautiful states in Mexico, has regained its popularity as a vacation destination for people from all over the globe.

The state of Chiapas covers almost 30,000 square miles of southern Mexico and more than 2 million people live here. The state overflows with recreation that is sure to please almost any visitor's palate. The West Coast is home to one of Mexico's best-kept secrets, the metropolitan city near the sea known as Tapachula. More than 300,000 people reside in this city, which combines the heat of local marimba rhythms with the soothing currents of the Pacific Ocean. Nearby is one of Mexico's highest mountains, Tacaná. This once active volcano stands at 13,333 feet and is the second highest peak in Central America.

Further to the north, visitors can enjoy the capital city, Tuxtla Gutierrez. This thriving city is the distribution center for all the commercial products of the state, which includes cacao, coffee, cattle and bananas. A drive north will deliver you into the Sumidero Canyon known for sheer cliffs and amazing vistas.

Another delightful destination in Chiapas is the charming colonial city, San Cristobal. Once the capital of the state, San Cristobal is one of only two cities left in the state that houses the remains of beautiful 16th century Spanish architecture. This lovely city with rows of elegant pastel houses lining hilly streets also serves as the center of the Mexican highlands. Here you can shop, wander through art galleries and dine in local restaurants while in your midst enjoy the diverse clothing styles worn by various groups of Indians that date back several hundred years.

Most visitors to Chiapas come with one main mission, and that is to see one of the most beautiful Mayan cities ever created, Palenque.

Palenque has been described to me as "Paris in Mesoamerica." The reason for this is easily understood as you step into the site and experience beautiful Mayan architecture, which is accentuated by Mother Nature's sumptuous flora and fauna.

Temple of the Cross at the Palenque Ruins.

The Temple of Inscriptions holds the body of the man who built this city into the masterpiece we appreciate today. Lord Pacal, the Palenque and several other structures add an amazing feel to this city that thrived around 1,400 to 1,500 years ago.

Outside the ruins, travelers can enjoy another treat as Lacandon Indian men sell arrows and other handmade items to visitors. These Indians, who for hundreds of years opted to remain hidden in the highland forests, can be easily identified by their trademark white gowns and long black hair.

If you are ready for an off-the-beaten-path trip to Mexico, consider Chiapas. The landscapes flow from the Pacific Ocean to the highlands with innumerable lakes, mountains, waterfalls and unbelievable ruins to admire along the way.

Major Gulf oil field appears headed for decline

Los Angeles Times

MEXICO CITY — Output at Mexico's most important oil field has fallen steeply this year, raising fears that wells there that generate 60 percent of the country's petroleum are in the throes of a major decline.

Production at Cantarell, the world's second-largest oil complex, in the shallow Gulf of Mexico waters off the shore of Mexico's southern Campeche state, averaged just over 1.8 million barrels a day in May, according to recent government figures. That's a 7 percent drop from the first of the year and the lowest monthly output since July 2005, when Hurricane Emily forced the evacuation of thousands of oil workers from the region.

Though analysts have long forecast the withering of this mature field, a rapid demise would pose serious challenges for the world's No. 5 oil producer. The oil field has supplied the bulk of Mexico's oil riches for the last quarter of a century, and petroleum revenue funds more than a third of federal spending.

"Cantarell is going to fall a lot, and quickly," said independent consultant Guillermo Cruz Dominguez Vargas, a former executive with Mexico's state-owned oil monopoly Petroleos Mexicanos, known as Pemex. "I can't imagine the strain on this society if there is nothing to replace it."

Hispanic advocacy group hails Voting Rights Act

WASHINGTON, D.C. (AP) — The National Council of La Raza (NCLR), applauded the recent Senate passage of S. 2703 the "Fannie Lou Hamer, Rosa Parks, Coretta Scott King and César E. Chávez Authorization and Amendments Act of 2006" (VRA), which reauthorizes the Voting Rights Act (VRA).

"This is a proud and historic day for all Americans. Today the right of every individual to participate in our great democracy was reaffirmed and strengthened with the unanimous support of both sides of the aisle," said Janet Murguía, NCLR president and chief executive officer.

"We applauded the House and Senate for ensuring that the Voting Rights Act continues to be a gateway to political participation for all communities, including African-Americans, Latinos, Asian Americans, and Native Americans," Murguía said. "We urge President Bush to sign this legislation into law as soon as possible."

The council says it is the largest Hispanic civil rights and advocacy organization in the U.S.

Aguilera tones down sexuality on new album

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Christina Aguilera says she's toned down the sexuality on her new "dile-dile" album, "Back to Basics," but has no regrets about the sultry image she's projected in her last album, "Stripped," in part because it elicited strong opinions.

"The sexuality coming forward on this record is more softened," she says in the July 24 issue of Newsweek. "It's more pin-up, tongue-in-cheek. It's playful. People take sex far too seriously."

Aguilera said she was proud of the image she projected in her last album, "Stripped," in part because it elicited strong opinions.

"If you liked it, you wanted to root for me — 'Look, she's empowered.' If not, well, you'd stick all those labels on me."

Aguilera also told the magazine there was never a feud between her and a fellow ex-Monkester, Britney Spears.

"We were like best friends, but the media say a navel and blond hair and had to create some drama," she said.

Backlogs add years to green card wait

South Florida Sun-Sentinel

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — Hugo Stamp survived an attack by British fighter planes that blew a ragged hole in his arm, and then managed to stay alive for five years as a prisoner of war in Russia, escaping three times, only to be captured again.

But he can't get a green card to this life.

The World War II German Navy veteran has lived for more than 20 years in Fort Lauderdale, repairing boat engines and building a booming mechanic's enterprise. His company has sponsored dozens of skilled workers for visas and green cards. But after three attempts to make the jump from investor visa to permanent residence, he has gotten flat. Stamp's lawyer said his client appears to have been set back by an immigration backlog that slows hundreds of thousands of applications for work permits, green cards and citizenship papers, especially ones federal officials flag for security checks.

The federal government has made huge strides in reducing backlogs that cause the delays — a backlog of 3.8 million applications in January 2004, has been cut to about 300,000 today. But that figure does not include applications delayed by the FBI and the Labor Department, which clears skilled workers for entry, leaving the U.S. immigration system so clogged that some highly skilled immigrants are going to other countries, lawyers and analysts say.

"I feel discriminated," Stamp, 63, said recently, amid boards of boat knots, and behind stacks of papers that form his immigration file. He pushed forward a sheet that tallied more than $1 million in income taxes. "I paid this," he said. "I gave 120 people a job. They are all U.S. citizens or green card holders, except me."

Chris Bentley, a spokesman for the U.S. Bureau of Citizenship and Immigration Services, acknowledged that since the Sept. 11, 2001, terrorist attacks, federal background checks have caused lengthy delays. The hijackings prompted Congress to rewrite screening procedures for all visa applicants, mandating fingerprint scans and interviews. A small percentage of entrants also undergo rigorous background checks, causing significant delays.

Bentley said reducing the delays is a top priority, and that new technologies would reduce the backlog further. "Right now we're in a paper-driven system, and that system is going by the wayside," he said. Congressional caps also slow the process for temporary employment visas, and green cards for close kin of those already here. The countries with the longest waits for green cards include China, India and Mexico.

Hundreds of thousands are similarly frustrated, waiting months or years for an answer, often unable to discern where officials have sent their paperwork. In some cases, the bottleneck occurs at the FBI, which runs detailed security checks on higher-risk cases, or at the Labor Department, which clears files of the skilled workers applying for green cards.

Aspiring actress from Puerto Rico crowned Miss Universe Sunday

The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Zuleyka Rivera Mendoza's reign as the new Miss Universe got off to a rocky start when the 18-year-old from Puerto Rico fainted briefly after winning the crown.

Rivera passed out after posing for pictures and taking questions at a news conference after Sunday's show. She was given liquids and quickly recovered. Said pageant spokeswoman Esther Swan.

Rivera, who was wearing a dress made entirely of metal chains, had been standing under hot stage lights for some time in the stifling auditorium when she began to topple over. Someone caught her as she fell.

Rivera, 18, won the title over 85 other contestants. Kuram Chibana of Japan was first runner-up; Lauriane Gillieron of Switzerland was second runner-up; and Lourdes Arvalos of Paraguay was third runner-up. Miss USA Tara Conner finished fourth.

A stunned Rivera covered her mouth with her hands as she was pronounced the winner. She beamed as last year's titleholder, Natalie Glebova placed the crown on her brunette head.

"I always had faith and confidence in myself, but I never knew I was going to win," said Rivera, speaking in Spanish from the stage.

In her pageant biography, Rivera explained what made her different from the other contestants.

"Physically, I have been told by modeling agencies and friends that I represent the consummate Latino look," she said. "Everything in my face expresses our heritage, our music, and the wonderful mixes of races that we are."

The 5-foot-9 Rivera is the first winner from Puerto Rico since Denise Quiñones in 2001, and the fifth overall from the U.S. territory in the pageant's 55-year history.

In her spare time, Rivera said she likes watching the Latino version of "American Idol" and meditating. She hopes one day to act in U.S. and Latin American movies.

"My biggest goal in life is to become a great actress of infinite range," she said in her pageant biography. "I am a keen observer of the human behavior, which under my interpretation, is one of the best things an actress can do."

Conner was vying to become the first U.S. winner since Brook Lee in 1997. The Kentucky native wore a red-white-and-blue jockey outfit and cracked a whip during the opening parade of models.

Several of the contestants sported costumes featuring colorful native dress, including feathers, sequins, fur, massive headpieces and, in the case of Miss Jbara, a Samurai sword.

Lia Andrea Ramos of Philippines was chosen most photogenic in an online public vote. Angela Asare of Ghana won the congeniality award in a vote by all 86 contestants. Chibana, who carried the impressive looking Samurai sword, won the award for best national costume.

The winner travels the world for a year on behalf of charities and pageant sponsors. Rivera's prizes include a yearlong salary, a New York City apartment during her reign, and a modeling contract.

The celebrity judging panel included actor James Lesure of "Las Vegas"; "Desperate Housewives" creator Marc Cherry; actress Bridgette Wilson Sampras; former Dallas Cowboy's star Emmitt Smith; and anchor Maria Celeste Arraras of Telemundo's "Al Hojo Vivo."

Oil field

It would also be bad news for the United States, for which Mexico is the No. 2 petroleum supplier behind Canada. And it could exacerbate tight global supplies that have kept oil at record prices.

The world's great "elephant" fields have already been bagged, forcing companies to hunt in remote areas for smaller amounts of oil to feed burgeoning demand, according to Houston energy analyst William Herbert.

"Unfortunately, the era of low-hanging fruit ... has really run its course," said Herbert, co-head of research at Simmons & Co. International, a Houston-based energy investment bank. He put the odds of finding another field the size of Cantarell in Mexico or anywhere else at "slim and none."

Exceeded in size only by Saudi Arabia's Leviathan and Ghawar fields, Cantarell is a prolific giant that is past its prime. Monthly production peaked in late 2004 at 2.1 million barrels a day and has fallen more than 15 percent since then. Experts agree it has more time to go but doesn't

The multibillion-dollar question is just how quickly Cantarell will lose its productive capacity, and whether Pemex will be able to coax more oil out of it to feed hungry markets.

Pemex would not respond to requests for an interview. But officials publicly have downplayed prospects of a new field in the press and in official releases. In fact, the company has projected that its overall oil output will increase slightly in 2006 to an average of 3.4 million barrels a day from 3.3 million daily last year. The company has done extensive maintenance on Cantarell to keep the oil flowing. In a December 2005 news release, Pemex predicted that the field will produce an average of 1.9 million barrels a day in 2006, a modest 6 percent drop from 2005, followed by double-digit annual declines that will reduce average production to 1.4 million barrels daily in 2008.

Other studies aren't so optimistic. Sea water is threatening to swamp the wells of Cantarell as the field's pressure diminishes, a symptom of old age that makes it tougher to extract the remaining oil. Pemex's own worst-case scenarios leaked to Mexican newspapers show production plummeting to about 520,000 barrels a day by the end of 2008 — a 71 percent free-fall from May levels in less than three years.

Mexico City energy analyst David Shields said the swift drop over the first five months of 2006, and conversations with Pemex insiders, have convinced him that prospects at Cantarell are worse than officials will admit publicly. June figures for the field won't be available until later in July, but Mexico's overall crude production fell in June, the third consecutive monthly decline, making it unlikely that Cantarell staged a revival.

"Whether Cantarell's slide prompts changes in Mexico's oil sector remains to be seen. Critics have long lambasted state-owned Pemex as a hotbed of inefficiency and corruption that officials have treated more like an ATM than Latin America's largest company. But record oil prices have lessened the urgency to overhaul the company.

MEDIUM #78

Fill in the grid so that every row, every column, and every 3x3 box contains the digits 1 through 9. That's all there is to it. There's no math involved. The grid has numbers, but nothing has to add up to anything else. You solve the puzzle with reasoning and logic. Find the answers for today's puzzle on page E-12.

VIDEO GAME REVIEW

Some of the fighting action in the new video game 'Chromehounds' for Xbox 360.

'Chromehounds,' 'Prey' fuel violent Xbox lineup

BY MATT SLAGLE
 The Associated Press

If the violence-wracked sci-fi worlds of "Chromehounds" and "Prey" are any indication of the future, then things aren't looking too bright for us humans.

"Thank goodness, then, that these dystopian visions exist only as video games." "Chromehounds" (T-rated, $59.99) puts players in an alternative Earth where endless skirmishes rage among warring nations that use massive metal battle machines called Hounds to plow the dreary landscapes.

Following in a long tradition of so-called "mech" video games, "Chromehounds" plops you in the pilot's seat of an oversized walking tank. (In this game called a "Hound" instead of a "mech") bristling with weapons and armor.

You can control one of six different Hound types, with each offering a different gameplay experience. While snipers can pick off enemies from a distance, they won't last nearly as long as foot soldiers when it comes to close-quarters combat.

There's a boring single-player mode that serves as a good primer, but the game's true strengths only come once you fire up Xbox Live and join others for lengthy battles in the game's persistent online universe.

"Three stars out of four." "Prey" (M-rated, $59.99 Xbox 360, $49.99 Windows PCs) follows the explosive-adulterated adventures of Tommy, a disillusioned mechanic who wants nothing more than to escape from the Cherokee Indian reservation he lives on with his girlfriend and grandfather.

He certainly escapes — when a sprawling alien space ship comes searching for a tasty planet to experiment on.

The opening abduction sequence is as exciting, scary and imaginative as the start of any game I've played, but "Prey" struggles to maintain this high degree of quality and originality.

A first-person shooter in the vein of "Quake 4," you'll spend the bulk of the game blasting grotesque aliens with an assortment of weapons ranging from a simple plumber's wrench to massive organic goo blasters that do bizarre damage.

What could have been a stellar hybrid of puzzles and action is really just, another mindless shooting game.

Two and a half stars.

'Where farm meets fun'

At the Jerome County Fair, of course

Times-News

JEROME—The largest annual event in Jerome County is just around the corner.

The Jerome County Fair, slated to run Tuesday through Aug. 5, promises something for everyone. Many events reflect this year's theme, "Where Farm Meets Fun."

The fair kicks off with a parade at 5 p.m. Tuesday, starting at Jerome High School. No pre-registration is required; just check in with the parade committee at the high school parking lot.

After the parade, make your way to the fairgrounds, where admission is free.

Inland Empire Shows is back with its popular carnival rides. The show brings more than 30 rides, games and attractions. Wristbands for unlimited carnival rides are available in advance at the Jerome Oasis. Or you can get discounts online at www.FunNbiz.com.

An all-day pass for carnival rides costs $22. A sheet of 10 ride tickets will run you $12 (or $1.25 for single tickets), and rides require one to three tickets.

Families attending the Jerome County Fair will receive a special carnival buck when they purchase their ride tickets at carnival ticket booths. They'll get $1 off any large or medium drink with a food purchase, $1 off a bag of cotton candy, and three $1 discount coupons for various games on the midway.

"We like to give the folks who come to our carnival a little something extra," said L. Reed Williams, owner and president of Inland Empire Shows Carnival and Royal West Amusement. "We know that they spend money at the event, and we want to ease their budgets a bit to thank them for making our carnival part of their experience."

The fair's arena series, which runs the entire week of the fair, includes junior rodeo Monday and Wednesday, pig wrestling Tuesday, and the PRCA Rodeo Aug. 3-5. Admission for these events is $3 to $6.

New to the rodeo is "Tough Enough To Wear Pink" night. This breast cancer awareness campaign will be held Aug. 4 in conjunction with the PRCA rodeo.

Cowboys wearing pink?

Pink symbolizes the courage, strength and determination the Western industry brings to the fight against breast cancer, event organizers say.

Partners are still needed to help with the event. If you're "Tough Enough To Wear Pink," call the fair office at 324-7209.

The rodeo will also feature Burch Lehmkuhler, one of rodeo's truly funny and entertaining clowns.

Lehmkuhler was the 1989 and 1992 "Coors Man in the Can," world champion barrel man, and the PRCA Clown of the Year for an unprecedented five years.

If rodeo isn't your bag, don't worry; there will be free entertainment, fishing, exhibits, livestock, shopping, trains and, of course, delicious fair food.

Don't forget to check out this year's competition guide in a store near you to get the scoop on the basketball competition hosted by the Jerome Recreation District, the miniature horse show, local live bands, animal shows and the coloring contest.

Competitive departments include home arts, photography, arts, flowers, farm produce, antiques, youth, kitchen and pantry, agriculture, 4-H and FFA and livestock.

'THE ANT BULLY'

Despite starry vocal cast, 'The Ant Bully' sheds no new light

BY CHRISTY LEMIRE
 The Associated Press

Another week, another animated movie with a scorchingly starry vocal cast.

This time it's "The Ant Bully." With Meryl Streep, Julia Roberts, Nicolas Cage! Produced by ... Tom Hanks! (But the best work comes from Bruce Campbell, whose main claim to fame is the cult favorite "Evil Dead" series.)

Despite the wattage, though, the movie sheds no new light.

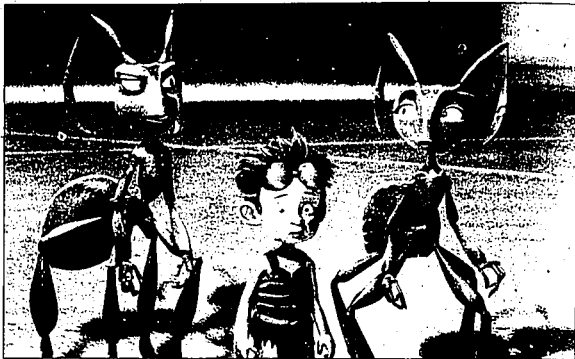

Structurally, it's reminiscent of this summer's superior "Monster House," with an awkward boy (Zach Tyler Eisen) experiencing adventures and learning to trust what he'd once feared while his clueless parents are on a week-end vacation.

Thematically, it calls to mind "Over the Hedge," with its images of suburban sprawl encroaching on nature. (It even features a similarly villainous exterminator, voiced by ... Paul Giamatti!)

And visually, it's similar to "Antz" from 1998. As in, it looks just like "Antz."

But the movie certainly messes with it, and its worth-while message (teamwork is good, selfishness is bad) should penetrate the brains of kids old enough to stay in their seats and pay attention to it. (I hank liked the story when his son brought home the book of the same name by John Nickle; he is in turn brought it to writer-director John A. Davis, an Oscar nominee for "Jimmy Neutron: Boy Genius.")

For grown-ups, there's a none-too-subtle political message. Eisen's 10-year-old Lucas flunks the ant hill in his front yard, causing a mess, chaos, and destruction for the tiny bugs film's most thrilling, with big ideas and clever, small details. Anything viewed from the ants' low perspective is inspired, from the towering blades of grass to the menacing frog who views them as snacks.

After Lucas Nickle (voice of Zach Tyler Eisen, center) floods an ant colony with his watergun, he's magically shrunken down to insect size and sentenced to hard labor in the ruins.

Once inside, the rest of the ants want to eat Lucas in revenge, but the wise Ant Queen (Streep, doing that same deliberate voice she used to devastating effect in "The Devil Wears Prada") instead sentences him to work among them in the colony, and understand what it means to be an ant, to earn his freedom.

Zoe's warmhearted girlfriend, Nurse Ant Luca (Roberts), agrees to take Lucas under her wing — only, whatever ...

stinkbug, you know that?")

She gets help training Lucas from Forager Ant Kreela (Regina King), who's tantamount to an insect drill sergeant, and the boastful Scout Ant Fugax (Campbell), who's fast-talking and full of himself but, deep down, pretty pathetic.

The vocal performances are all boisterous — it's especially pleasing to see Cage, or rather hear him, in such an unusually upbeat role — and "The Ant Bully" is never less than colorful and high-energy.

But it's hard to shake the feeling that we've all gone up this hill before.

"The Ant Bully," a Warner Bros. picture, is in theaters on some quiet rural hamlet, and action, running under 90 minutes.

SAN FRANCISCO — Last year, Thom Yorke was supposed to unwind. Radiohead, the band whose decade-long ascent has turned the singer into pop's definitive retracted visionary, was on hiatus after a protracted cycle of recording and touring. Yorke was savoring the retreat from what he yorke calls "making RECORDS, in big capital letters," and the chance to re-acquaint himself with his Oxford home, his longtime partner Rachel Owen and two young children. But instead of clearing a space for calm, Yorke found himself up to his neck in new thoughts.

"At my house, there's a room about this size," Yorke said, gesturing at the spacious suite in San Francisco's Clift Hotel where he sat discussing "The Eraser," the album he's releasing next week. "The entire room was just covered — the whole floor, with notes and scraps of paper. A friend of mine came by just before we started recording, and he was just looking at it, laughing his head off, saying, how are you going to piece this together?"

Yorke's workroom mess, mirrored by the sonic "bits and bobs and shreds of all sorts of random chaos" on his laptop, gave him a sense of freedom he'd momentarily lost with in Radiohead. In league with two longtime collaborators, the visual artist Stanley Donwood and producer Nigel Godrich, Yorke enclosed himself amid these fragments, shutting out other influences. "That's how you get that thing where a project has its own universe," he explained. "You say, well, everything in this room, that's all there is, that's all I've got."

The fruitless little island of disarray contrasted radically with the high-stakes mood surrounding Radiohead's most recent chapter, 2003's "Hail to the Thief," which left the band seriously in need of some elbow room. Made quickly, during a time when Yorke was becoming deeply involved with the environmentalist group Friends of the Earth, "The Eraser" is a return to focus for Yorke, whose energy had flagged under the weight of his band's outsized reputation.

"It was done in the context of Radiohead," he said, adding that he initially dreaded telling his bandmates he'd embarked on the effort. "The best thing about it was that it wasn't a problem. Of course it was fine. Why wouldn't it be? That the band dynamic 'is a liquid thing is very important.'"

"On its current tour, Radiohead is playing a wide swath of favorites plus some exciting new material, perhaps enriched by the condence Yorke says he's regained by making "The Eraser," which will be released on the super-hip independent label XL. Radiohead is one of pop's highest-profile free agents, having parted with EMI, the conglomerate that released its previous seven albums. "The Eraser" could be viewed as part of a larger move toward independence.

Asked whether Radiohead would consider distributing its next album independently, Yorke unhesitatingly said yes. "We have two or three options, and that's one," he said. "Once we finish whatever we think is good enough to put out, then we'll start thinking about it. We haven't discussed it a great deal. I would love for us to drop a chemical weapon within the music industry. But I don't see it as our responsibility, either."

In the meantime, there's "The Eraser" — a project the label-resistant Yorke hates to label "solo." What began as a side trip into the abstract electronic music he loves became, to the singer's surprise, 40 minutes of remarkably powerful and direct music. Sure to be one of the year's critical and cult favorites, "The Eraser" is an evocative portrait of life made slippery by urban sprawl, murky political alliances and global warming — and given hope through individual and communal resistance — with the blips and bleeps of Yorke's laptop excursions coalescing into soulful, politically charged songs.

"It started out with loads and loads of beats and la la," Yorke said, mocking his own obscurantist tendencies. "It was pretty intense and very, very heavy." Yorke's busman's holiday gave his producer a chance to highlight Yorke's poignant tenor and melodic sense. "In the midst of it all there were two or three things that made Nigel and me go, ooh, there's something really direct here. Someone might even understand it the first time around."

The leap beyond the band context might easily have led Yorke into murky territory. A fan of experimental electronica, the singer first came up with a collection of tracks that didn't really reach out. "It made complete sense to me, but there wasn't enough there for anybody else," he said of these early efforts. But the desire to meld his voice with the computer's led to unexpected intimacies.

"The music, no matter what way you look at it, is coming out of a box," said Yorke, noting that even the acoustic sounds of piano, guitar and bass "The Eraser" samples are computer-processed, and he cites Björk's 1997 electro-torch suite "Homogenic" as a primary reference point. "It has its own space. We consciously decided to not expand it beyond that. The vocals are exactly the same, right there in the speakers. The record was built to be listened to in an isolated space — on headphones, or stuck in traffic."

The computer reference is no casual one for Yorke, whose concern about the environment nearly caused him, on one point, to "flip my lid." In his songs send up warning flares that are cosmic in scope, yet movingly personal — the sonic equivalent of a hand held up to a tidal wave. That's an image Donwood included in "London Views," the "apocalyptic panorama" inspired by "The Eraser," which makes up the album's cover art. One of the lineup's most powerful segments depicts King Canute, the legendary English monarch who proved the limits of kingship power by trying and failing to command the ocean. The tale inspired Yorke's flood of lyrics too.

"In the paper one day, Jonathan Porritt was basically dismissing any commitment that the working government has toward addressing global warming, saying that their gestures were like King Canute trying to stop the tide," Yorke said of the 'British environmentalist.' "And that just went 'ta-ching' in my head. It's not political, really, but that's exactly what I feel is happening. We're all King Canutes, holding our hands out, saying, 'I'll go away. I can make it stop.' No, you can't."

TWIN FALLS — Seeking a great gift, or just the right touch for an empty wall? Art in the Park might be your answer.

The Art Guild of the Magic Valley will hold the 47th annual Art in the Park Festival Saturday and Sunday at Twin Falls' City Park.

It's where Art Guild members — local artists, artisans and craftspeople — and some of their counterparts from around the country display their work to the public.

This year, organizer Jeff Lohr said, it's a 50-50 split, with half the exhibitors from Magic Valley and the rest from various places such as Treasure Valley, Nevada and Kansas.

Exhibitors will display pottery, glass works, painting, woodworking, photography, metal art, handmade jewelry, ethnic arts and other handmade items.

If you go ...

• What: Art Guild of the Magic Valley will hold the 47th Annual Art in the Park festival.

• When: Saturday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

• Where: Twin Falls City Park.

• How much: Admission is free.

Concession booths will be an hand, but no alcoholic beverages will be served.

"The Art Guild of the Magic Valley has prided itself on presenting to the public a festival that showcases good-quality arts and crafts," Lohr said. "To maintain this high degree of quality the show is juried. This means that unless an item is made by hand it is not accepted. No wholesale items are allowed. Everything must be original."

"The festival is free to the public. The nonprofit Art Guild uses proceeds from Art in the Park vendors' booth fees to promote arts and crafts literacy in Magic Valley.

The guild will sponsor free concerts during Art in the Park on Saturday, a barbershop quartet at 1 p.m. and the Old Time Fiddlers at 3 p.m.; and on Sunday, Bob Nora at 2 p.m.

"If people are interested in buying unique and original items for themselves or others, this is the place to look," Lohr said. "Not only will there be a lot of items to look through, this will also give the public a chance to speak directly with the artists, artisans and craftspeople. Most of the exhibitors do work on commissions, so if someone has been unable to find that certain special gift for someone, chances are there will be an exhibitor who can make it."

Watch the artists at work — but bring a fly swatter

BY KAREN BOSSICK
For the Times-News

KETCHUM — The two women standing at the bottom of a Warm Springs ski run looked wide-eyed as they watched Burley artist John Horejs splash orange and lavender paint across the canvases where he planned to paint a grove of aspen.

"I don't have the faintest idea where he's going with that, do you?" one asked the other.

"A smile crossed Horejs' lips as he eavesdropped.

"Working alone in the studio you don't get a lot of feedback. This is a great chance to share ideas — I get great feedback about how people feel about my work, and I've learned a lot from the people who stop to watch, too," he said.

Giving the public a chance to observe artists at work is part of the idea behind the Kneeland Gallery's 25th anniversary Plein Air exhibition planned in Sun Valley.

The event begins Wednesday and continues through Aug. 4.

The public will be invited to watch 71 of the gallery's premier plein air painters at work at a variety of locations in the Wood River Valley.

The completed paintings will be displayed during Gallery Walk from 6 to 9 p.m. Aug. 4.

The event also includes a "Quick Draw" — the day of the Gallery Walk where artists must complete a painting in an hour. A silent auction of the works will follow; a portion of the proceeds goes to a local charity.

Plein air painting — or painting in outdoor light — captures the interplay of sunlight and other forces of nature.

Artists work quickly to capture the changes of light and shadow.

The event has attracted the merely curious, as well as those like former Ketchum actress/gardener Patricia Conwell, who took the opportunity one year to sit at Horejs' feet making her own sketch of the artist at work.

"This is an amazing opportunity to watch him work," Conwell said.

Horejs paused frequently to talk with passersby about the way he holds his brush, the button box he substitutes for a palette, the masking tape he uses to tighten his canvases and his penchant for cleaning brushes with hand lotion, among other things.

In addition to Horejs, this year's artists are Owanes Berberian, Jack Braman, Gene Costanza, Shanna Kunz, Linda Lillegraven, Louisa McIlwain, Robert Moore, Linda Tippetts, Bart Walker and Lori McNe Watson.

For more information regarding the painting times and locations, call Kneeland Gallery at 726-5512 or visit their Web site at kneelandgallery.com.

New on DVD Synopsis of a film for home viewing.

"V for Vendetta" R

Something is wrong in the totalitarian state of England. Actually, everything is wrong: minorities, gays and "radical" protesters have disappeared into death camps, the secret police known as "Fingermen" rule the night, and the population has been bludgeoned into sheeplike compliance by wall-to-wall disaster reports in the media. The face of the rabid fascist leader Chancellor Suter (John Hurt) looms from posters and TV screens, and you can almost taste the spitfire from his lips.

"V for Vendetta" wants you to wonder how much of this sounds familiar, and, worse, how much of it might become familiar with a few twists of history's tail. Then it wants you to root for the masked man who plans to blow it all up. Is he a terrorist or a freedom fighter, and what, exactly, defines the difference? The Wachowski brothers think they know. Anyone who gives thought to the matter may respond with

A mysterious figure known only as V (played by Hugo Weaving) is a persistent reminder that the state ain't always great.

Still, there's more on this movie's mind than the usual wham-bam-thank-you-ma'am trailers are promising. In adapting the groundbreaking early-'80s comic book series by writer Alan Moore and illustrator David Lloyd (since collected in paperback; it's well worth the read), Andy and Larry Wachowski of "The Matrix" fame are betting that multiple audiences are ready for a propulsive Orwellian drama disguised as an action flick. They've made a mainstream provocation at a time when we could use one—even a muddled one—and for that, they should probably be thanked.

KETCHUM — Another Opening, Another Show." The song from "Kiss Me Kate" sets the stage for the fourth annual Main Street Cabaret.

The valley's semi-professional and amateur singers are staging "A Night of Broadway Musical Memories" Friday through Sunday at the nexStage Theatre. It's the fourth cabaret-style show Laughing 'n' Stock Theatre Company has done with support from nexStage.

The show will feature familiar old show tunes from such Broadway musicals as "My Fair Lady." And it'll feature hit songs from newer musical such as "Wicked" — the untold story of the witches of Oz — and "SpanAmot," a spoof on "Monty Python and the Holy Grail."

"The Main Street Cabaret is fun for us in that it gives individuals a chance to do numbers they've always wanted to do. And it gives

The cast of Main Street Cabaret rehearses for the show, which will run Friday through Sunday at the nexStage Theatre in Ketchum.

Laughing Stock Theatre a chance to try new material, using it as a testing ground for musicals it's considering doing," said Steve Pruitt, one of the mainstays of the cabaret.

"...Last year, for instance, we performed several songs from "Full Monty" to see how they worked; and how difficult they were to do because we were considering presenting the play in 2007."

This year's cabaret features several ensemble numbers, including "There's Nothing Like a Song from "South Pacific," "Pick A Little, Pick A Little" from "Music Man," and a number from "Jacques Brel Is Alive and Well and Living in Paris."

If you go...

- What: Laughing Stock Theatre presents "A Night of Broadway Musical Memories."
- When: 8 p.m. Friday through Sunday. Doors open at 7 p.m. for cabaret-style show seating. Hors d'oeuvres, beer, wine and soft drinks will be available for purchase.
- Where: nexStage Theatre in Ketchum.
- How much: Tickets are $20, available at the door.

There will also be several solos. Twelve-year-old Megan Mahoney, for instance, will perform "I Was Born to Entertain," and Jim Britt will sing "Jody, Jody, Jody" from "The Most Happy Fella."

The cabaret is directed by New York actors Patsy Wygle and Keith Moore. Longtime Sun Valley resident Patty Parsons was imported from her new home in Fairbanks, Alaska, to oversee the musical direction.

Traveling for art

Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls artist Ralph Lehman plans some traveling. It's all part of the commission, after all.

Lehman — sculptor of the L.B. Perrine statue created for the city's centennial — said he will travel to Mexico and China to photograph two new plants for a Midwestern corporation. Back home, he'll complete watercolor renditions. When Lehman lived in Indiana, the same company commissioned him to do five watercolors of Midwest plants.

Lehman moved to Idaho from Indiana 10 years ago. Recently the corporation tracked him down. As Lehman likes to take his own photographs, the corporation was willing to send him to the sites, Lehman said he will be accompanied by someone who speaks Mandarin while in China.

Dust off your coolers; the strings are warming up

SUN VALLEY — Bob Henley has no trouble filling up his nights with Bible studies, church meetings and the like. But come the first of August, the pastor at the Church of the Big Wood hangs a "Gone Listenin'" sign on the door and tucks a blanket under one arm and a picnic basket under the other.

Then he and his wife, Jane, join thousands of other valley residents and summer visitors making the pilgrimage to the Sun Valley Esplanade where they bank in the trills of the Sun Valley Summer Symphony as it churns out Mozart, Beethoven, Liszt and Stravinsky.

"We think the Summer Symphony is one of the great gifts to everybody here in the Wood River Valley," Henley said. "This is something really majestic and wonderful about a symphony. And to have the privilege of such a fine orchestra with Alexander Neale as conductor ... his comments that prepare you for what you're about to hear provide a marvelous context for each performance."

Hundreds of valley residents are packing their picnic baskets and coolers for the 22nd season of the Sun Valley Summer Symphony.

The season of 14 free concerts starts Monday and runs through Aug. 14. The free hour-long concerts start at 6:30 p.m. in the symphony tent on the Sun Valley Resort Esplanade south of Sun Valley Lodge.

The appetizer — the Edgar M. Bronfman Chamber Music Series — continues Friday.

Those who drop their blankets on the esplanade this year will find innumerable high notes

Coming attractions

Aug. 5: Pops Night with Erich Kunzel (features selection of movie themes from "Beauty and the Beast," "Lord of the Rings" and other movies).

Aug. 12: Selection of Robert Strauss pieces, including "Dance of the Seven Veils" from "Salome, Op. 54."

Aug. 13: Beethoven's Symphony No. 3 in E-flat Major, Op. 55, "Eroica."

Aug. 14: Soprano Christine Brewer sings excerpts from "Gottedammerung."

A look ahead

Here are the high notes for the coming week, including the remaining concert in the Edgar M. Bronfman Chamber Music Series on Friday:

Friday: The chamber will start off with jazzy tango arrangements for string quartet arranged by Jeremy Cohen, a founding member of the Quartet San Francisco.

World class pianist Jean-Yves Thibaudet will then join concertmaster Jeremy Constant and cellist Steven Honberg for French composer Maurice Ravel's lone piano trio. Listeners have compared the piece, which features unique Basque flavorings, to the works of Impressionist painters.

Monday: Thibaudet will join the full Sun Valley Summer Symphony in performing Edward Grieg's Piano Concerto in A Minor.

Thibaudet made his first appearance with the symphony two years ago. He is featured on Universal Pictures' soundtrack to "Pride and Prejudice," and his playing can be heard in the soundtracks of "Portrait of a Lady" and "Bride of the Wind," in which he also made a cameo appearance.

Grieg's piano concerto, which premiered in 1869, has become synonymous with Norway.

Wednesday: Concertmaster Jeremy Constant will perform Vaughan Williams' stirring "The Lark Ascending" on an 1869 ex-Haberlein Stradivarius. The Stradivarius was donated to the San Francisco Symphony where Constant performs as assistant concertmaster, for Constant's exclusive use.

with the New York City Opera, at the Edinburgh Festival and at London's Wigmore Hall.

And, as always, you can count on Mr. Pops himself, Erich Kunzel, to lead the symphony in a salute to Hollywood.

FAIRFIELD — Instead of driving on through the Camas Prairie for mountain recreation to the north, why not stay in Fairfield and enjoy the Camas County Fair? The festivities got under way with a demonstration contest for 4-Hers earlier this week, and on Monday light poles and windrows throughout town will be decorated around the fair's theme, "Follow the Yellow Brick Road."

At 4 p.m. Wednesday at McLains (three miles south of town on Mormon Reservoir Road, and then west for 1 1/2 miles) will be the 4-H Horse Show.

The real fun gets going at 6 p.m. Aug. 3 with the Carnival-Game Night in the 4-H Park. Games like

Events include:

- Carnival Game Night, Aug. 3
- Miss Prairie Dog Contest, Aug. 4
- Community Potluck Picnic, Aug. 4
- Parade, Aug. 5
- Livestock sale, Aug. 5
- Ball Park Dance, Aug. 5
- Community breakfast, Aug. 6

bingo, face painting and temporary tattoos will be available, and vendors will sell a tasty variety of hamburgers, hot dogs, ice cream and more.

"The bingo and some other games cost a minimal fee because they are fundraisers," said Camas County Fair Board Chairwoman Gayle Bachtel.

"And there are so many fun things for the kids that the night is going to be great," Bachtel said. The park will be loaded with free inflatable rides like the jump slide and the castle bouncer.

"We want families to come out and have a great time, but what shouldn't be missed is the Miss Prairie Dog Contest on Friday night," she said. "It is an absolutely wild show."

The contest takes place during the Community Potluck Picnic which begins at 6 p.m. Aug. 4 at the 4-H Park. Bring along a main dish and salad or dessert, as well as a plate, utensils and a chair.

The pageant, set for 7:15 p.m., got its beginning 20 years ago with a joke told on the radio about the females living in Fairfield. "And not just women compete, we get guys in it too," Bachtel said. "One year we had a Miss Lumberjack — the show is just super."

The fair continues with a parade through town at 1 p.m. Aug. 5. The 4-H Livestock Sale is set for 2 p.m. at the 4-H Park. At 9 p.m. is the Ball Park Dance, sponsored by the Sons of Legionnaires and the American Legion. "The band U-Turn is booked to keep the tunes cranked.

The Camas County Fair winds down Aug. 6, with breakfast served by the American Legion on Main Street. At 10:30 a.m. will be the Church in the Park service. The time of worship and fellowship is sponsored by the Community Church, Lighthouse Christian Fellowship and the Foothills Baptist Church.

Following the service are music crafts and food booths, from 1 to 5 p.m. at the park.

Don't miss the Lincoln County Fair and Rodeo

SHOSHONE — "Come Rock With The Stock" is Shoshone's theme for the Lincoln County Fair and Rodeo. In progress now.

Admission to the fair is free, and exhibit buildings open daily at 9 a.m. today and through the weekend are various 4-H/FFA livestock shows.

Thursday, the action starts at 8 a.m. with the 4-H/Future Farmers of America goat show.

The carnival opens at 4 p.m. and is new to the fair this year, said fair board secretary Rachele Hatch of Richfield. Prices, per attraction, vary.

"We went with Extreme, a group from Utah this year," she said.

"There are a lot of different attractions like a paintball arena and bungee trampoline." Top of the evening with a barley pop at the beer garden, which opens at 6:30 p.m. Beers are sold by the drink.

Thursday-night rodeo action is set for 8 p.m.; $6 for adults and $3 for children.

At 1 p.m. on Friday is the 4-H/FFA Dairy Show with the carnival opening at 2 p.m.

The beer garden opens at 6:30 p.m., with junior rodeo action following at 7 p.m. and the rodeo starting at 8 p.m.

Saturday looks like loads of fun, too, beginning with the very young animals with the 11 a.m. Bottle Baby Show and 4-H/FFA Market Animal Sale.

Team sorting is set for 1 p.m.,

Belly up to Louisiana swamp music

BY KAREN BOSSICK
For the Times-News

SUN VALLEY — Michael Doucet once quipped that before the 1980s there was no such thing as Cajun food in most people's minds. Then, chef Paul Prudhomme burnt a fish and interest in Cajun cooking turned hotter than the flame it's cooked over. You might say BeauSoleil has done the same for Cajun music, Doucet said.

"Both Cajun food and Cajun music have always been there. But Prudhomme brought people's interest in Cajun food to a different level. And I guess you could say we've done the same with Cajun music.

"We were in the right place at the right time in the 1970s. We've played Carnegie Hall. And we were the first Cajun musicians to go out on the road."

The Grammy-winning BeauSoleil will bring its signature blend of zydeco, New Orleans jazz, Tex-Mex, country, blues and Cajun folk rock to Sun Valley on Thursday.

The concert, put on by the Sun Valley Center for the Arts, starts at 7 p.m. Thursday outside River Run Lodge.

"These guys have it all: fine solos, ferocious grooves and tight ensemble playing," said Kathryn Maguet, the center's director of performing arts. "They are recognized all over the world" for their musical excellence and for keeping traditional music alive but also evolving."

BeauSoleil features Michael Doucet on violin, accordion and mandolin, as well as guitar player David Doucet, accordion player Jimmy Breaux, percussionist Billy Ware, drummer Tommy Alesi and fiddle and banjo player Mitch Reed.

The music BeauSoleil plays has its roots in the Acadians, who were run out of Nova Scotia by the British in the mid-1700s. Many relocated to Louisiana where they mixed elements of Spanish, Native American and African music into the traditional French and Scottish music they played.

"It's basic music — it's got a wonderful beat, and a lot of emotional heart. We're talking about people who were deported from their homeland, so it has a universal love-lost message that people go for," Doucet said.

BeauSoleil has been named Best Cajun Band at the Big East Awards in New Orleans 10 years running.

In April the group recorded its 28th album, "Live in Louisiana," to coincide with the New Orleans Jazz and Heritage Festival.
