week killed thousands of cattle and poultry and cooked crops in the field. Experts say con-sumers will help foot the bill. In California, the nation's No. 1 agriculture and dairy producer, the temperature peaked above 115 degrees in late July, killing 16,500 cows. A million chickens and turkeys perished and countless peach-ess, nectarlines, nuts and mel-ons were destroyed.

As the heat plowed east-ward, farmers in the Plains states and the Midwest also reported dried-out crops and lowered milk production.

"People over the age of 50 more often suffer consequences from other health conditions." Shanahan said.

Health and Welfare staff advises people to protect themselves from mosquito and tick bites by using insect repellents, covering exposed skin when outdoors and reducing standing water on their property, where mosquitoes breed.

"If you see mosquitoes, you should consider that they may carry West Nile and take precautions to avoid their bite," Tengelsen said.

State colleges struggle as more students enroll across borders

BOISE — The path for bright Idaho high school students like national metrischolar Eric Stewart once led straight to State U. But today, many students like Stewart — and even some with less Stewart, Idaho's $8,500 scholarship couldn't compete with the full-ride from Arizona State.

In Stewart's advanced placement classes at McCall-Donnelly High School, most students were recruited by liberal arts colleges and some eyed state schools such as the University of California, Berkeley, But few made the three hour drive to scout the state's flagship institution in Moscow.

Lighthouse Christian gets accreditation

Means recognition from colleges and other high schools

TWIN FALLS — It took some time, and a lot of work, but the Lighthouse Christian School now has an accredited high school.

now has an accredited high school. The high school is now a dual-accredited school by the Association of Christian Schools International and the Northwest Association of Christian Schools. The school will new be recognized by other schools and colleges in the United States, and will make it easier for its students to transfer to other schools. "A lot of the benefits came from the process lised by fluctuation of the schools and colleges to the school and the process lised by fluctuation of the schools and log Karawedas, chairwoman for the schools accreditation Hearing Steering-Committee. Twin Falls couple raised a pair of foreign diplomats

By Casdace Baltz-Smylie Times-News corresponde

WIN FALLS — It's not WIN FALLS — It's not untrommon to have a family profession: brothers who are also dectors may have been hooked after their first X-ray; sisters who are teachers may have fallen in love with books at bedtime; multiple generations of politicians may have enjoyed lively discussions over dinner.

But in Twin Falls, Wilma and John Hougaard raised two foreign diplomats without ever leaving the continent.

The Hougaards were busy parents of five, rarely having the time or money to travel. They took the kids to some of the western states, and some of the kids visited Canada

On the might have been the end of the story, tocsep that both Mike and,
Mark Hougaard served overseas missions with The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and vanted to see more of the world.

"We did very little travel growing up," said Mark. 'Kind of strange that all we do now is travel."

Both brothers came back to the states after completing their missions, but it took a while for each to get back on a plane.

Mike, who graduated from Twin

That was about five years ago. While the brothers are now farther away from each other than they have ever heen — Mike will begin work this week in another west African nation while Mark will return to Romania — they say the work has brought them closer.

"My brother and I are very similar in many ways, especially now," said Mark, "He's probably the only person that truly can relate to me."

The brothers each come home twin Falls once a year for about a month. Their assignments are two years long, so each year they are either home on vacation or between jobs. They both work hard to be home at the same time to see each other and their parents.

The only thing they regret is not spending enough time with their parents.

The brothers have finally succeeded in getting their parents to cross the ocean, however.

They haven't visited me yet," said Mark, loking, "But they did when I was a missionary."

Wilma and John spent a month this past spring in Africa with Mike and his family. They went on three safaris and Wifma got a new appreciation for her winter flowers.

"The foliage is impressive. There are poinsettal trees. I thought they were just little plants," said Wifma. It was really the trip of a lifetime. We were real impressed with the beauty of Africa."

Even though the traveling bug bit Wifma and John late, they do plan to leave the country again, next time for Europe, where Mike may be assigned in a year.

"My brother has more cushy jobs," joked Mike. "Lie's in more developed areas, When I'm home between assignments, I try to reconnect with civilization, and, we have to shop for two years' worth of supplies."

Cancer screens save and prolong lives

Six years ago, I started the Mike Crapo Health Awareness Booth at the Western Idaho Fall. Since then the booth has been expanded to fairs in Filer, Blackfoot and to lairs in Filer, Blackloot and Coeur d'Alene, I have part-nered with regional medical centers, local nurses and centers, local nurses and physicians and others in the public, private and non-profit health care field to make these important screening centers a reality.

I can personally attest to the importance of health screenings, as my own encounter with prostate cancer came prostate cancer came a similar test done long from a similar test done long before physical symptoms had occurred. Now, when I read that the fair-haired, frighteningly unidernourished actress was cast in this role, I immediate ly assumed that she was going to be modeled after a going to be modeled after a certain fair-haired, frighten-ingly undernourished right-wing pundit. Apparently I'm not the only one who had that reaction, because the show's producer assured the public: "She's not Ann Coulter, She's not insane."

IONATHAN CHAIT

Indeed, the point of the show seems to be casting conservatives in a sympathetic and understanding light. As Jon Bolh Baltz, a writer for the show explained: "It's very, very interesting and compelling to us to try and understand this, to leave behind some of the smug presuppositions of the two coasts... to look at evolving surface in the same presuppositions of the two coasts... to look at evolving surfacilism and evolving tradit. patriotism tionalism, Ever since President Bush Ever since President Bush won re-election almost two years ago, liberals have been on the cultural defensive. Flockhart's character, according to the show's staff, represents a small effort to bridge this gap — Hollywood liberals seeking to present conservative beliefs, in all their true complexity.

omplexity. Well, God bless them.

Unfortunately, I think they have a ways to go before they understand conservatism. Flockhart's character is not Flockhart's character is not merely non-insane, she's thoughtful, Baitz explained. "She's ideologically, in some respects, very much in mind with the older parts of the party, the sort of Elsenhower Republican, the William "Sucheus conservative."

uckley conservative If you didn't smack Buckley conservative."

If you didn't smack your forehead with the palm of your hand when you read that sentence, let me explain why you should have. Buckley was a staunchitic of Elsenhower. Indeed, he founded National Review in no small part to organize conservatives in opposition to ite. As he wrote at one point: It has been the dominating ambition of Eisenhower's Moen the dominating ambition of Eisenhower's Moen to more or less please everybody. Such governments must shrink from principle.

Elsenhower was moderate who made his peace with the New Deal and accommodated labor unions. Buckley.

nions. Buckley on the other hand, was the definitive conservative hard-liner. In the 1950s, he defend-ed Joe McCarthy. In the 1960s, he spoke up for segre-

1960s, he spoke up for segregation.

Even more embarrassing, a few months ago, The New York Times printed not one but two news stories describing Buckley as a neoconservative. Those of you who dismack yourselves on the forehead two paragraphs ago may have given yourselves concussions by now. For the rest of you, let me explain again. The term "neoconservatism" refers to replan again. The term
"neoconservatism" refers to those who converted to the right beginning in the 1970s.
("Neo" means "new.") The opposite of the neoconservatives are those conservatives who date back to the movement's origins. Those movement's origins. Those origins are generally agreed to be in the mid-1950s, to when Buckley founded National Review. If there is any conservative alive who is not a neoconservative, it's Buckley.

ckley. io, clearly, the great liberal periment in understanding the right has a ways to go. I will say this, though, on behalf of my earnest, benighted liberal friends: At least they're trying. There are two blographies of Buckley that make fair-minded attempts to understand his thinking, and both are writ-ten by liberals. Even if sittom writers and newspaper reporters get things wrong, there's still a deep sense among the liberal intelli-gentsla that it's important to understand conservative thinking in all its permuta-tions.

But where are the right's efforts at outreach? You don't efforts at outreach? You don't hear conservatives mourning their lack of common ground with the English department at Columbia University. In fact, it's incredibly rare to find a conservative who under-stands liberalism as anything other than hatred for the rich and a desire to hand over our foreign policy to the United Nations.

Winning, apparently, gives conservatives the luxury of not having to care what the other side thinks.

When I got to another store, I found I had left my purse, complete with credit cards, driver's license and some cash in the cart at the first store. Upon returning, I found Turry I ligley, a Cassia County Sherlif's deputy, with my purse and wallet. He took the time and made the effort to ensure the purse was returned to its rightful owner in tact. He had called my daughter in Boise twice trying to locate me. Now, when I read that the fair-haired, frighteningly undernourished actress was cast in this role. I immediate cast in this role, I immediate by assumed that she was going to be modeled after a certain fair-haired, frighteningly undernourished rightwing pundit. Apparently im not the only one who had that reaction, because the show's producer assured the public: "She's not Ann Coulter. She's not insane."

JONATHAN CHAIT

Indeed, the point of the show seems to be casting conservatives in a sympathetic and understanding light. As Ion Robin Baitz, a writer for the show, explained: "It's very, very interesting and compelling to us to try and understand this, to leave behind some of the smug presuppositions of the two casts... to look at evolving partiotism and evolving traditionalism." show seems to be casting Ever since President Bush won re-election almost two years ago, liberals have been on the cultural defensive. We're all a bunch of latte sip-pers; we don't understand Real Americans: we should pers; we don't understand Real Americans; we should feel guilty for not caring about stock car racing, etc. Because we are but a tiny, alien coastal minority, repre-senting an insignificant 49 percent of the public, the burden of bridging the divide apparently rests with us. Flockhart's character, accord-ting to the show's staff "second apparently rests with us. Flockhart's character, according to the show's staff, represents a small effort to bridge this gap — Hollywood liberals seeking to present conservative beliefs in all their true

Unfortunately, I think they have a ways to go before they understand conservatism.

Flockhart's character is not warnly non-incapacter is not Indeed, he founded National Review in no small part to organize conservatives in opposition to like. As he wrote at one point: "It has been the dominating ambition of Eisenhower's Modern Republicanism to govern in such a fashion as to more or less please everybody. Such governments must shrink from principle." Eisenhower was a moderate who made his peace with the New Deal and accommodated labor unions. Buckley, on the other hand, was the definitive conservative hard-liner. In the 1950s, he defend-ed Joe McCarthy. In the 1960s, he spoke up for segre-Even more embarrassing, a

Those of you who did smack yourselves on the forehead two paragraphs ago may have given yourselves concussions by now. For the rest of you, let me explain again. The term "neoconservatism" refers to those who converted to the right beginning in the 1970s ("Neo" means "new.") The opposite of the neoconserv-atives are those conserva-tives who date back to the tives who date back to the movement's origins. Those origins are generally agreed to be in the mid-1950s, to when Buckley founded National Review. If there is any conservative allve who is not a neoconservative, it's Buckley.

So, clearly, the great liberal experiment in understanding the right has a ways to go. I will say this, though, on

There are two biographies of Buckley that make fair-minded that make fair-minded attempts to understand his thinking, and both are writ-ten by liberals. Even if sitcom ten by liberals. Athletes with high grades help the averages

I was amazed by your article of July 26 shout the Twh Falls School District trying to establish rules of eligibility for academic performance by athetes. I have written about this issue before, and it should be on file for your paper.

However, there are many studies that show physical superiority runs hand-in-hand with mental superiority. There are more athletes on the honor rolls of schools throughout Magic Valley than any other grouping. Has anyone wondered what average means? On the reverse side of the story—say, we did find one of those big dumb athletes to whom you allude. Wouldn't the better to give him his day in the stable than city on prove he is made to the story—say we did find one of those big dumb at the story—any than a strenge means?

Tribe, Tigers stumble in Day 2 at state

COEUR d'ALENE — The Area C teams did-n't fare well as both Buhl and Jerome fell in the American Legion A State Tournament on Friday.

Jerome goes home while Buhl has one more shot to stay alive at 9 a.m. PDT today.

Moscow 9, Buhl 3

The Buhl Tribe dropped to the losers' bracker with a 9-3 loss to Moscow on Friday; Stranded base runners killed the Tribe in the run column. "We left 11 people on base," Buhl head coach Allyn Reynolds said. "That was the key to the whole deal."

to the whole deal."

The Thib had a promising start, but lost the lead despite getting hits in the double digits. Perry lamilton again hit a shot over the fence for two RBIs in the third and Austin Laing contributed a double. Otherwise, the well of extra-base hits ran dry.

Coeur d'Alene 8, Jerome 6

The Jerome Tigers couldn't hold on through the losers' bracket, losing 8-6 to host Coeur d'Alene and knocking them out of the tournament.

The Tigers got out to an early 4-0 lead, but quickly, abdicated that lead within two limines.

Attack of the Zac: Wendell grad Davis charges to Washington's Wenatchee Valley

TWIN FALLS — Wendell grad Zac Davis has just about done it all at the prep level. He's won state titles in football, basket-ball and golf and been named to numerous All-Canyon, Idaho Statesman and Times-News teams. Now he's taking his game to the college level.

Davis will jusy for the Wenatciee Valley College (Wash.) Knights of the Northwest Athletic Association of Continuity Colleges (NWAACC), where the guard will fight for minutes and a starting spot on a team head coach Greg Franz described as "rebuilding."

"I like my chances for getting playing time," Davis said.

For Franz, Davis should be a strong peg in the program in a "guard-oriented conference."

Ortiz hits two homers as Red Sox edge Devil Rays

Utley's hitting streak ends at 35 games

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — David Ortiz had his 25th two-homer game and Curt Schilling threw seven solid innings as the Boston Red Sox beat the Tampa Bay Devil Rays 3-2 on Friday

Rampa Bay Devil Rays 3-2 on Friday night.
Ortiz's second homer of the game, his AL-leading 39th this season, was a solo shot in the eighth liming off Seth McCling (3-11) that gave the Red Soxa 3-2 lead. He also hit a solo homer in the fourth.

Schilling (14-4) gave up two runs and nine hits, walked two and struck and nine hits, waited two and struck out four. He became the major leagues second 14-game winner, join-ing Detroit rookle justin Verlander.

Jonathan Papelbon pitched the ninth for his 30th save in 33 opportu-

Yankees 5, Orioles 4

BALTIMORE — Jorge Posada home-red off Chris Ray to break a ninth-inning tie, and the Yankees railled for their fifth straight victory. Ray (1-4) retired Jason Giambi before Posada hit his 14th homer, a solo shot that soared well above the 25-foot scoreboard in right. Three of Ray's four losses have come against the Yankees.

White Sox 6, Blue Jays 4

TORONTO — A.J. Pierzynski hit a three-run homer and lon Garland outpitched Roy Halladiay to win his eighth straight decision, leading Chicago over the slumping Blue Jays.
Sluggers Jim Thome and Paul Konerko returned to the Chicago line-up. Thome went 3-for-4 with a walk after missing four games because of tendinities in his right wrist and back spassms.

Konerko went 3-for-3 with two walks after missing a game with a bruised left arm.

Kenseth not secure in Chase chances

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Matt Kenseth has een entrenched in NASCAR's top 10 all sea-on, holding strong in second place the last son, holding strong in second place the last nine weeks.

Despite the solid footing, Kenseth in no way coinsiders himself a lock to make the Chase for the champlonship. With only six naces left to ensure a spot in the playoff field, Kenseth can either play it safe and case his way in or nn hard and risk blowing it all. For Kenseth, the strategy is a no-brainer. "Everybody naces every week to win—that's what it's all about," he said friday. Tevry time 1 look at it, you get the most points for leading the most laps and winning. So that's what you to do each week."

—He'll stick to that plan in Sanddy's nice at Indianapolis Motor Speedway, a track that has been fairly good to Kenseth over the years. Although he's never won here, Kenseth has three top-five finishes and was second in 2003 — the same year he won his only NASCAR championship. If this is the year Kenseth finally gest to kiss the brides, he and his Roush Racing team will have to turn it up a notch. Although he's been decent most of the year—with two wictores and It 10p-10 finishes—Kenseth has been in a minit-slump of lair with just one top-10 in the past six races.

"I'm happy when we're consistently in the top five. I'm not happy when we're consistently in the top five. I'm not happy when were consistently 14th like we were the last couple of weeks," he said. "We have had a few weeks, "he said." We have had a few weeks, "he said. "We have had a few weeks, "he said." We have had a few weeks, "he said. "We have had a few weeks, "he said." didn't really run that good at Pocono."

Despite the rash of mediocrity, Kenseth hasn't lost much ground in the standings and trails leader. Jimmle Johnson by 37 points.

But he knows that could change with a silp of the steering wheel or a broken carpart, and points to Dale Earnhardt's recent free-fall as evidence that no one is sade. Earnhardt plummeted from third to 11th in the standings with consecutive last-place finishes.

"I don't think we're really locked into the Chase," he said. "You've seen what happened to Jutior a couple of weeks ago and how fast things can change, so I need to make sure we keep doing our job and try to operate at a champlionship level and hopefully gain some points on (Johnson)."

Although Latham has achieved a good deal of success in his racing career infancy, the road has not always been paved in gold. Latham has also been dealth his share of setbacks along the way, pointing out that his first attempt in a Southwest tour race early in the season at best enlightened the young driver as to the intensity of his chosen sport.

Most churches vehement-ly resist change and often so define love as to exclude those who are different. They have too much at stake to take a chance on a new understanding of God's word.

Both Baptist and Catholic traditions, huge institutions, resist the leadership of women and condemn homosexuality with a highly questionable rationale.

Israel severs Lebanon's last major tie to Syria

BEIRUT. Lebanon (AP) — Israel and Hezbollah fought bloody ground battles and exchanged fierce air and misselle strikes Friday — including bombing raids that severed Lebanons last major supply link with Syria and the outside world, and the guerrillas' deepest rocket attack inside Israel to date. After days of desultory diplomacy, Washington said it was near agreement with France on a U.N. cease-fire resolution, possibly by early next week.

a refrigerated warehouse where farm workers were loading fruit, kliling at least 28 near the Lebanon-Syria border. And three Hezbollah rockets landed near Hadera. 50 miles south of the Israel-Lebanon border: 188 rockets rained on other towns, killing three Israell Arabs.

Given the determination of both Hezbollah and Israel to look victorious when the conflict finally ends, the worst of the fighting may still lie ahead with the millitant Shifte guerrilla fighters perhaps making good on their threat to rocket Tel Aviv and Israel launching an all-out ground offensive, pushing northward to the Litani River.

Israeli military officials said Friday they completed the first phase of the offensive, securing a 4-mile buffer zone in south Lebanon, though pockets of Hezbollah resistance remained.

Defense Minister Amir Peretz told top army officers to begin preparing for a push to the Litani, about 20 miles north of the border — a move that would require Cabinet approval.

Peretz vowed his forces would complete "the whole mission" of driving guerrilla fighters out of missile range, a defiant response to the Hezbollah, leader's threat to

Cuba says Raul Castro is in control

HAVANA (AP) — The Communist leadership assured Cubans on Friday that Raul Castro was in firm con-trol as acting president, and the health minister said Fidel Castro was "recovering satis-factorily" from intestinal surgery.

The government also issued its first decree since Fidel tem-porarily stepped down Monday for the first time in 47 Monday for the first time in 47 years: The Foreign Ministry condemned Israel's bombing of the Lebanese village of Qana, calling it "cowardly, vile and criminal" and urging the world to force an immediate cease-fire. THE ACES ON BRIDGE[®]

"Our brightest blazes of gladness are commonly kindled by unex-pected sparks."
— Samuel Johnson

—Samuel Johnson

Playing two-over-one, after North showed values with spade support, South closed his eyes and decided to take a shot at the spade slam. It was up to the defense to prove him wrong.

The key to the defense was the signal at trick one. It is good technique to interpret third hand's play as count when a king is led against a suit slam. Especially with the diamond queen in dummy, attitude signals were irrelevant, so East could play the diamond two to the first trick to show an odd number of diamonds.

West could therefore place South with a singleton diamond on the bidding — a holding of three small diamonds was utterly incompatible with the auction. The natural, but inferior, defense was for West to shift to a trump (a fulle move, since declarer cannot ruff three hearts in dummy in any case). Had he done so, declarer could have won in hand, played heart ace, a heart ruff low, a diamond ruff, a heart-ruff sind and a diamond ruff. Then he could draw trumps and claim with six spades, one heart, two heart ruffs and three clubs.

Instead, West found the only play to trick two that might have any value for the defense, namely a club. This judo-like move attacked the opposition through its own strength by preventing declarer from both ruffing hearts and cashing all of dummy's top clubs. Whether declarer played to ruff three hearts in dummy, or to cash out the clubs. 11 tricks was the limit.

ANSWER: Bid two no-trump for takeout into a minor if you feel aggressive. A double here would be penalties (suggesting you were unable to double on the previous round because you play negative doubles). Partner is marked with some extras, so try to push the opponents up a level and see what happens!
