Bedbugs on the march

Infestations on the rise around nation

By Kate Brumback
Associated Press writer

ATLANTA — After waking up one night in sheets teeming with tiny bugs, Josh Benton couldn't sleep for months and kept a flashlight and can of Raid with him in bed.

"We were afraid to even tell people about it at first," Benton said of the bedbugs in his home. "It feels like maybe some way you're not supposed to be afraid of them. It's not a good thing, but it's not a bad thing either."

Benton said the bedbugs in his home "feel like they were a myth, but they were a myth, bedbugs are back. Entomologists and pest control professionals are reporting a dramatic increase in infestations throughout the country, and no one knows exactly why."

"It's not secret that bedbugs are making a comeback," said Dan Sulter, an associate professor of entomology at the University of Georgia.

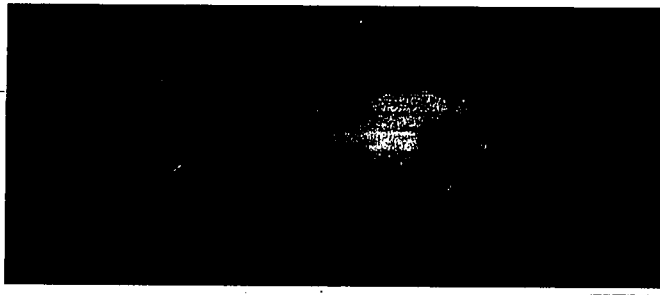

Before World War II, bedbug infestations were common in the U.S., but they were virtually eradicated through improvements in hygiene and the widespread use of DDT in the 1940s and 1950s.

Unlike mosquitoes, though, they are not known to transmit blood-borne diseases from one victim to another. They are extremely resilient and very difficult to exterminate.

Experts say bedbugs are not necessarily an indicator of unsanitary conditions.

Magic Valley canals running strong after years of parched summers

By Michelle Dowling
Times-News writer

JEROME — Ted Diehl closes his eyes when he drives over canals brimming with water.

"I'm afraid they're going to spill over," says the North Side Canal Co. manager, with a chuckle.

But Diehl isn't complaining, especially after several recent years when the canals looked more parched than peak. A wet winter gave Magic Valley a wealth of water this irrigation season, despite weeks without much rain.

The hot, dry spell the region experienced throughout much of July hasn't seemed to hurt the water supply in the Upper Snake River Basin reservoir storage system. Many farmers were decreasing their demands for water anyway to dry out their grain crops.

"It was an ideal time with the water supply and the end of the grain season," said Tim Miller, hydrologist with the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation, which operates area reservoirs.

The area is past its peak water usage, so Miller and Diehl are both beginning to speculate on how much water canal companies will be able to store in reservoirs and carry over to next year.

Should current trends hold, Miller estimates that Jackson Lake will contain about 650,000 acre-feet of water at the end of September, which is roughly 200,000 more than last year. An acre-foot covers an acre of land one foot deep in water. American Falls Reservoir could be at about 20 percent of its capacity with Palisades coming in at about 40 percent.

"Ducks like our water is going to hold up pretty good," Diehl said. "We'll have a good carryover."

• In 2004, the Twin Falls City Council enacted a water conservation ordinance, restricting city dwellers' water use to particular days and times. It includes the following provisions:

- Residents are allowed to wash vehicles only on scheduled irrigation days.
- Landscape irrigation will be restricted to the following schedule: even-numbered addresses, Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday; odd-numbered addresses, Wednesday, Friday and Sunday; places with no street address such as a median, Monday, Wednesday and Friday.
- Watering hours will be before 10 a.m. or after 5 p.m. on scheduled watering days.
- Residents may water outside landscape with a hand-held container or a drip watering system at any time.

The Anderson Lumber building on Eastland Avenue in Twin Falls, has been purchased by Lighthouse Christian Ministries. After some remodeling, it will become home to the church and schools.

Lighthouse Christian to make Anderson Lumber building a school, sanctuary

By Sandy Miller
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Except for a large special event now and then, like last year's Festival of Trees, the former Anderson Lumber building on Eastland Drive has sat mostly silent since the store closed in 2002.

But if everything goes as planned, that silence will soon be filled with the sounds of school children playing and of a congregation's singing.

Lighthouse Christian Fellowship has signed a purchase agreement with Stock Building Supply to buy the 11.5-acre property that includes the 50,924-square-foot ex-lumber store.

"We've been working with them to try to come to an agreement for the last 90 days," Lighthouse Associate Pastor Ron Heath said Monday as he confirmed the agreement.

Twin Falls County once had its eye on the property as a site to expand county offices. But, a county space study noted the former Twin Falls Clinic and Hospital would be a better, and less expensive, place to expand.

Heath wouldn't say just what the nonprofit, nondenominational Lighthouse Christian Fellowship will pay for the property, but Twin Falls County Assessor Gerry Bowden said it's appraised at a little more than $3 million.

Heath said the money to buy the property will partly come from the sale of Lighthouse's properties at 259 Main Ave. E., which houses the sanctuary and junior and senior high schools, and at 3500 East, a mile north of Kimberly, which is now home to the preschool and elementary school.

Oil field closing pushes up gas price

The Associated Press

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — BP said Monday it will replace 16 miles of pipeline from its huge Prudhoe Bay oil field and production could be closed for weeks or months, crippling the nation's oil supplies.

The news drove oil prices up by more than $2 a barrel and boosted gasoline prices. The West Coast was expected to be squeezed particularly hard and the government was considering releasing oil from emergency stockpiles to ease an expected crunch.

BP PLC, the world's second-largest oil company, began shutting down pipelines Sunday after a leak was discovered. The company said Monday it would replace about 73 percent of the 22 miles of transit pipeline it operates in the Prudhoe Bay field, 850 miles north of Anchorage.

Company officials told a news conference they did not immediately know how much it would cost to replace the lines. They said that the oil field would remain closed while they inspect the lines for corrosion and that they would bring parts back into service once it's safe to do so.

Once complete, the shut-down will cut production by 400,000 barrels a day about 2.6 percent of U.S. supply including imports, according to data from the U.S. Energy Information Administration.

"BP deeply regrets it has been necessary for us to take this drastic action," said Bob Malone, chairman of BP America.

HOW THE ORDINANCE APPLIES TO TWIN FALLS SCHOOL DISTRICT ...
City officials have no authority over the Twin Falls School District's water use since the district doesn't use city water to irrigate its lands. Instead, the district relies on its private wells and its shares in the Twin Falls Canal Co.'s supply to water lawns and shrubbery.
While city officials say the district has been receptive to their suggestions, the district has not yet agreed to any changes.

Lighthouse plans to put a second floor in what used to be the lumber store, which will increase the available space to more than 100,000 square feet. That building will house a 1,500-seat sanctuary and the preschool and elementary school. The property's warehouse will be remodeled into a junior high and high school.
Heath said Lighthouse hopes to finish remodeling the main building by fall 2007 and the warehouse by fall 2008.
Lighthouse had been looking into building a 100,000-square-foot structure on 15 acres it owns on Filter Avenue East and Carriage. But the former Anderson Lumber property began to look more and more appealing.
"With the building already up, it gives us a huge start to allow us to move forward," Heath said.

Prosecutors: Ex-CIA contractor used flashlight to beat Afghan prisoner

By Associated Press
Associated Press writer

RALEIGH, N.C. — A former CIA contractor broke both agency rules and the law when he used a 2-foot-long metal flashlight to beat an Afghan man who later died, a prosecutor told a jury Monday in the trial of the first U.S. civilian charged with mistreating a detainee during the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan.

Lawyers for David Passaro said the former Special Forces medic was a frustrated but concerned interrogator who never hit Abdul Wali and checked daily on his condition.

"Dave is guilty only of trying to serve his country," Joe Gilbert, Passaro's public defender, said during opening arguments. "He's not guilty."

Passaro is charged with two counts of assault with a dangerous weapon and two counts of assault resulting in serious injury. Although Wali died in his cell, Passaro is not charged in his death. If convicted, the 40-year-old from Lillington will face up to 40 years in prison.

Prosecutors said at least three paratroopers from the Army's 82nd Airborne Division watched Passaro, working under contract to the CIA, beat Wali during two days of questioning in June 2003 about rocket attacks on a remote base housing U.S. and Afghan troops.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Pat Sullivan said Passaro told the soldiers they couldn't touch Wali, but that he could, "because I have special rules."

"David Passaro had no special rules," Sullivan said. "He made them up."

Sullivan said Wali was chained to the floor and wall of a cell as Passaro kicked him, and struck him with the flashlight and his fists. Once, he said, Passaro kicked Wali in the groin, lining up like a place-kicker in football. Passaro's fingerprints were in batteries from the flashlight, Sullivan said, adding that photos will detail the extent of Wali's injuries.

Gilbert told the jury that Passaro's sole interest was in stopping the rocket attacks on the base, and once Wali surrendered, the rocket attacks stopped. On the day Wali died, Gilbert said, Passaro gave him mouth-to-mouth resuscitation while other medics tried to help.

The opening statements came after U.S. District Judge Terrence Boyle ruled the defense could not subpoena former CIA Director George Tenet, former agency operations chief J. Cofer Black, and University of California law professor John Yoo, along with several others whose identities were not disclosed.

Black is the State Department's former coordinator for counterterrorism. Yoo is an ex-Justice Department lawyer who helped write internal memos in 2002 designed to give the government more leeway in aggressive questioning of terror suspects.

Wisconsin cheese-factory workers say they've got winning $200M ticket

The Associated Press

PLYMOUTH, Wis. — Dozens of cheese-company workers returned to their jobs Monday after they reported being among about 100 workers who won a Powerball jackpot worth $208.6 million.

Andrea Fink, 26, of Sheboygan, said she arrived early for her second shift in the afternoon at Sargento Foods to meet with the other winners.

The group said it held the only winning ticket for Saturday's Powerball drawing.

"I don't know what to say. I can't believe it. It just seems unreal," said Fink, who was planning to buy a house with her winnings.

Sargento chief executive officer Lou Gentine said he met with the most of the winners and some other employees Monday afternoon before they started work, and the gathering often burst into applause. The ticket has been turned over to an attorney, he said, though he was not sure when it would be submitted to the lottery. The group estimates each person will receive between $500,000 and $700,000, after taxes, if they choose to take a lump sum, he said.

"To see the joy on their faces, it's just incredible," Gentine said. "We're really happy for them."

The winners are of different ages and do a variety of jobs, such as cutting and shredding cheese, loading trucks and performing maintenance, Gentine said. He said their average salaries range between $30,000 and $50,000 a year.

Colleen Summer, 51, of Crystal Lake, said she was not sure whether she would keep working at Sargento, where she has been employed for nearly 19 years.

"It's going to help how many different families. It's super. It's a lot better than one person winning," she said.

The winning ticket was sold at Ma and Pa's Grocery Express in Fond du Lac along the so-called "Miracle Mile," a stretch of South Main Street where several stores sold multimillion-dollar tickets during the 1990s. Ma and Pa's sold a winning Megabucks ticket worth $6.5 million in 1994 and has sold tickets that won $500,000, $250,000 and $100,000.

Blasting at LDS temple site continues

TWIN FALLS — Dynamite will be used this morning to remove basalt at the site of the future temple of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints on the corner of Eastland and Pole Line Road.

The blasting is needed to make way for a storm drain. Flaggers are stopping vehicles for the duration of each blast. A sign is posted asking drivers to turn off all cell phones and two-way radios in the unlikely event an errant signal could trigger the explosives.

Church members broke ground on the temple on April 15 and the project is on schedule to be finished by September 2007.

Prognosis looks good for injured firefighter

Interagency team looks into second accident of fire season

By Michelle Dunlop
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A U.S. Bureau of Land Management firefighter broke two vertebrae after being hit by a fire engine last week.

The accident marks the second vertebrae-related injury to a BLM firefighter in the Twin Falls District this summer.

An interagency team is investigating the incident, which happened Friday. John Burk, a firefighter with the BLM, remains hospitalized in Twin Falls but is expected to make a full recovery. In July, another firefighter, Thane Peters, 24, of Jerome suffered multiple injuries including a fractured right femur after a 32,000-pound fire engine rolled over his legs. Peters was at the head of a fire south of Glens Ferry.

"We don't know how or if these incidents are related," said Sky Buffat, spokesperson for the BLM. "We do emphasize safety at all times."

The BLM Twin Falls District Fire and Aviation program is one of the largest federal fire-fighting programs in the United States. Nearly 150 firefighters are employed across both Magic and Wood River valleys this summer.

A team will look into Burk's accident, which took place while the firefighter was mopping up the dwindling Raft River Fire. An engine backed over Burk, 18, and broke two

BLM crews battle flames

TWIN FALLS — Lightning sparked fires early Monday morning that are keeping the U.S. Bureau of Land Management crews busy across Magic Valley.

The BLM's Twin Falls District is juggling five fires after a storm swept through the area, starting two of the blazes. The district has called in fire engine ground crews from Boise, Pocatello and northern Utah. The agency also is receiving national aviation support.

The Owlitz fire, burning 15 miles east of Shoshone, began early Monday morning. By that evening, BLM officials estimated its size to be 5,000 acres. The agency did not predict the blaze's containment date. BLM also responded to the 60-acre Hill Creek Fire, 15 miles south of Oakley.

District fire crews continue to battle the Shale Butte and Bear Trap fires east of Shoshone, and the Banana Fire near the Juniper exit of Interstate 84. The fires have been contained but mop-up operations continue.

circumstances in each." Simonson believes the district could make changes in its training procedure based on the outcome of the investigation being conducted by two BLM and one USDA Forest Service employee. An investigation into Peters' accident provided the agency with recommendations that were used when Burk's injury occurred, Simonson said.

Although still very sore, Burk has been able to put pressure on and use his legs and seems optimistic about his recovery, Simonson said.

"He has been up and about since Saturday morning," he said.

Rupert gets its first oil well

By Laurie Weick
For the Times-News

RUPERT — Minidoka County residents may think UDell Seal has struck it rich when they see the oil derrick outside his Rupert home, and they would probably be right.

But it is not oil that Seal has tapped into, rather it's his whimsical sense of humor, which delights not only family and friends but anyone who would care to drive by his home at 1510 D Street.

"I dreamed about having an oil derrick one night and just said, 'I'm going to build one,'" Seal said. "It's been a fun project."

The well, which he built during the past two months, has moving parts and is aptly named Oil Well #1, because, he says, it is the first oil well in Rupert.

Seal has no plans to build more. "I think one oil well is enough for a family," he said. "Our children just smile a little and think we've gotten over the hill."

UDell Seal looks at the replica oil derrick he built outside his Rupert home at 1510 D Street. Seal says the replica is dubbed Oil Well #1 because it's Rupert's first oil well.

Burley man dies after being hit by pickup truck

By Reece Wells
For the Times-News

BURLEY — A Burley man died Friday night from injuries suffered when he was hit by a pickup.

Joe M. Garcia, 51, of Burley, was crossing Owend Avenue at 17th Street at 9:15 p.m. Friday. Jeffrey S. Petersen, 15, of Burley, was northbound on Overland Avenue when he struck Garcia as the latter crossed the roadway.

According to the police report, there were no other vehicles traveling northbound and nothing that obstructed Petersen's view of Garcia.

Witnesses told officers that it appeared Petersen just did not see the pedestrian.

Blood tests were taken on Petersen at the hospital to determine if alcohol or drugs played a part in the collision, a common practice in such incidents, Cassia County Sheriff Jim Hagens said.

Petersen and his passenger, Lisa Miller, 16, were taken by an ambulance to the hospital for observation following the incident. Neither was seriously injured, according to the police report. Garcia was knocked down in the road and was lying in the roadway in front of Petersen's pickup. When officers arrived, Garcia was unresponsive but alive. He was pronounced dead at Cassia Regional Medical Center.

Three hours later they came home to find Tippy missing and his brother, Brown Shosh, roaming alone.

That was on June 29. Since that day, Kevin Hixon, 41, who was born with Down Syndrome, and his disabled mother, Sandra, 69, have placed fliers in veterinarian's office windows across several counties.

Sandra has walked the town in search of the 9-year-old schnauzer mix.

someone would take Tippy. "It's not a show dog. They can't get any money for him," said the sister. "Whoever stole him was obviously just being mean."

The sister believes that through appeals to the public, Tippy may still be found.

charges. We just want this guy back."

Shirley French

SHOSHONE — Shirley French went home to be with her Lord and Savior on Sunday, Aug. 6, 2006, following a brave fight with cancer.

Shirley was born to Roger and Eva Kirtley Pounds on Dec. 6, 1934, in Nampa, Idaho. She attended high school in Hillsboro, Ore., where she was a cheerleader. She lost her beloved mother when she was 15 months old.

Following graduation, she started nurse's training in Boise. Mom returned to Oregon soon after, where she met the love of her life, Lowell French. They were married on Aug. 7, 1954, in Portland. Together, they raised five children. Mom took special pride in being a homemaker, providing for the needs of her family, keeping a clean and well-run household and putting supper on the table every night. She volunteered at her children's schools as a room mother and helped lead 4-H groups in knitting and sewing.

In the early '70s, she went to work as a dental assistant for Dennis Rteudeau, the first employee he hired as he established his practice in Lewiston. She worked with him for approximately 10 years. Shortly after, she joined Dad on the road as he continued to work construction.

Mom was a gifted seamstress. In addition to sewing many dresses for her daughters for school, she made clothes for her grandchildren, did clothes, home decor, and was asked by others to make special items such as clothes for dance competitions. In recent years, Mom spent many enjoyable hours quilting. She shared what she learned teaching other family members and her nurses in the oncology department.

Mom had a competitive spirit, and she and Dad enjoyed playing many card and board games. They also loved watching professional sports, especially basketball and golf. Mom bowled in women's league for several years and, at the peak of her game, held the third highest women's average in the LC valley.

Mom and Dad retired to Shoshone, Idaho. Dad was her best friend. Her closest friends in addition to Dad were her sisters and their husbands. One of the highlights of Mom's life was being asked to be a speaker at last year's Leukemia and Lymphoma Society's Light the Night Walk held in Twin Falls, Idaho, on Sept. 29, 2005.

Mom is survived by her husband of 52 years; three sons, Mark of Taylorsville, Utah, Matt of Shoshone, Idaho, and Curt of West Valley, Utah; two daughters, Liz Volkman and Susan Pfeiffer, both of Lewiston, Idaho; 11 grandchildren and three great-grandchildren; four sisters and two brothers; and stepmother, Carrie Garner Pounds. Preceding her in death were her mother and father.

She was also bookkeeper for Clay Elder Tire Company. After retirement, she moved to Jerome, Idaho. She founded and was a charter member of the Desert Sage Quilters. Otter must be involved to support preservation

The ongoing disagreement between Idaho congressmen Mike Simpson and C.L. "Butch" Otter over wilderness designation isn't helping either politician.

Clouds." That's a lofty goal, but it's obvious Otter is unacquainted with the collaborative process in creating wilderness. Unlike Simpson, or Sen. Mike Crapo, R-Idaho, who has introduced a plan to preserve 517,000 acres in the Owyhee desert, Otter is not risking his political capital to help shape compromise between opposing land users.

Our view: If U.S. Rep. Butch Otter wants to preserve pristine parts of Idaho, he has to engage in the discussion.

What do you think? We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

table and knows that an acre-for-acre exchange is nothing more than an artificial standard creating more barriers to the discussion. Through years of work, he knows the bill is closer than any other has ever come to passage.

Simpson says the legislation should come close to Otter's standard by creating 312,000 wilderness areas, CIEDRA also releases 131,000 of wilderness study area back into multiple use - and creates a net gain for multiple use.

The reality is you actually manage these wilderness study areas as wilderness because they're studied to become wilderness one day - or de facto wilderness," Simpson said. "If my bill becomes law, there will be less total acres managed as wilderness than there is today, because we're releasing more acres than what we use today."

How far this disagreement between the congressmen plays out is uncertain. If Simpson's bill fails, it's another year of waiting and collaboration could fall apart.

But for Otter, the stakes are higher. His gubernatorial campaign could lose momentum if he creates philosophical barriers for Simpson's CIEDRA, or for Crapo's Owyhee Initiative. Democratic candidate Jerry Brady knows a political opportunity when he sees one, and the wilderness disagreement is easy pickings.

Whether as a member of Congress or if he becomes governor, Otter must be involved with the wilderness debate rather than let others take the lead. Simpson and other wilderness advocates want to believe that Otter would protect pristine lands in Idaho. But until he actually acts on that premise, the gubernatorial front-runner is making empty promises.

Henny Penny takes on Rummy

The enunciation of a clear sentence about the war in Iraq by Hillary Clinton means that there must be an election coming up. Until now, she has been thrashing about about the most urgent issue facing the country, sending signals rightward, sending signals leftward, tacking here, tacking there. Some days she seemed to be signaling whether she intended to signal.

MAUREEN DOWD

But now, suddenly she's a woman of passion, a model of concerned clarity. After an con of calculated silence on most of the big moral questions of the day, there is a calculated breaking of the silence. The enunciation of the sentence. It's time for the drama.

But the drama played like "The Taming of the Shrew," with the only question being, who was the shrew?

Clinton was trying to bring Rummy to heel, and Rummy was trying to exert manly control over Hillary.

The junior senator from New York staged a drama in thought, first sending a letter summoning the reluctant Rummy to appear before the Armed Services Committee, then hectoring him with a litany of his "numerous errors in judgment" and finally at the end of the day, like the Queen of Hearts, delivering her climactic demand for his head.

"I just don't understand why we can't get new leadership that would give us a fighting chance to turn the situation around," Clinton said after the hearing, summing up a truth acknowledged by everyone except W. and Dick Cheney.

Dying the hearing, Hillary unmanned Rummy, as

Shakespeare would say, accusing him of incompetence, impotence and improbity.

"You did not go into Iraq with enough troops to establish law and order," she said. "You disbanded the entire Iraqi Army. Now we're trying to recreate it. You did not do enough planning for what is called phase four and rejected all the planning that had been done previously to maintain stability after the regime was overthrown. You underestimated the nature and strength of the insurgency, the sectarian violence and the spread of Iranian influence."

She pointed out that the administration succeeds only in achieving the opposite of its aims, with the number of American troops in Iraq continuing to increase, not decrease, and the violence and instability spreading.

She cited the administration's reality disconnect on the Taliban in Afghanistan, where every new claim of success has been followed by new evidence of failure. The Taliban have been written out of the war by administration flackery, but they're coming back like Mel Gibson's hangers-on and apologists.

She tarty summed up: "Because of the administration's strategic blunders and, frankly, the record of incompetence in executing, you are presiding over a failed policy. Given your track record, Secretary Rumsfeld, who should we believe your assurances now?"

There was a pause while Rummy summoned all the condescension he usually reserves for dolphin reporters. "My goodness," he exhaled finally, firing off a defense that could have been translated as: "Where do I start educating you on your utterly superficial understanding of the enemy, you hardball hippy-dippy Henny Penny?"

The Pentagon rank and file have tuned out Rummy, whose only transformation so far has been to transform himself into a dangerous, deluded cogder. But when the respected General Abizaid admitted that "it is possible that Iraq could move towards civil war," it was clear Iraq was already in one. It opened up a river of talk across the river that what people there had long been afraid to say: that Hillary's Jing Jang is not going to cut it. There needs to be an alternative strategy to keep our kids from having to fight their way out of a sectarian conflagration.

When Hillary and Rummy square off, it is a gladiatorial contest of two masters at hauteur, self-righteousness, scriptedness, infighting and belief in their own manifest destiny.

Hillary wants to avoid Joe Lieberman's fate by arguing that how the administration went about this war has caused all the problems, not that it went to a needless war, she supported. Her strategy avoids the lie that set off all the other lies, and leaves Hillary risking a John Kerry problem, being both for the war and against it. It's going to be a tough tangle. Even Bill never had to squirm his way out of something as hard as this.

Local patrols fall short in school zones

This letter is to speed limit to the school zone special limit brought up by Lisa Lindsey.

I took this problem one step further after having people honk at me, tailgate and pass me over a double yellow line near the swimming pool along with the one finger salute. So I called the police department and talked to a sergeant in the traffic division. He told me the same thing. We don't have the people to enforce the law. We can't afford new signs that restate and change the speed limit.

Where do the patrols come from when school is in? Who is protecting all the kids at the pool?

My suggestion is add a small sign that says when children are present. Or will it take an injury or worse. I'm not saying what I drive, because I've seen how it can propagate drive.

Support of 4-H clubs helps loss of shelter

This past week I showed my 4-H dairy springer at the Jerome County Fair. I am also enrolled in the Magic Valley Health and Wellness Program. This health fair has been my project for the past two years. We had a great show, Dr. Sassy looked great and was due to have in just over five weeks. On Sunday morning she was not feeling very well, and by that afternoon she became very sick and died.

Saturday was a very hard day, but I know everyone did everything they possibly could to help. I appreciate my 4-H club and their families, the veterinarian and fair board members there, and the rest of the Jerome County 4-H community for all of their help and support.

When I went back to the barn that night for our final 4-H meeting, a collection jar had been passed through the fair to help me purchase a heifer for next year. It's hard to think about next year right now, but I know that when the time comes I will be in higher spirits.

This year I have learned that 4-H is much more than competing a project. I am really thankful to be part of Jerome County 4-H and all of the great people who make it possible.

Thanks again to everyone. ZACH THIBAUT Jerome

Veterans moving wall devoted better

On July 25, we had the honor of the Vietnam Memorial Moving Wall come to our area. Veterans met with the Wall at Shoshone and escort through Paul, and to Rupert where it was to be set up and displayed. We were overwhelmed to have KMYT there to cover the story.

That evening when the news came on, I waited anxiously to watch the coverage. The news came on, then the weather, then the sports. Then, what appeared to me as an afterthought, a 10 to 15 second clip of the Memorial Wall was aired.

This made me angry, hurt and humiliated. I felt the news let us (Vietnam veterans) down again. It brought back bad memories of our homecoming. No positive news coverage, no flags, no parades, no one saying "good job" or "thank you." It was all put on the back burner in the hope it would go away.

Take a good, long, hard look at the names on the wall, and tell me these men and women that gave their life for freedom, should be forgotten. Tell them that they do not deserve to have as much news coverage as a woman that got off after drowning her five kids; or a log jam on the Middle Fork that messed up vacation plans.

The wall should have been aired during the news segment, not at the end of the broadcast. Everyone needs to know that soldiers go and do what they are told to do, they may or may not agree with it, but they try their life on the line to protect our freedom.

Over 56,000 names on the wall, as well as all fallen soldiers, have assured the "Freedom of the Press." If the press owed them better respect than the coverage they got. ROBERT ESTERHOLDT Buhl

Right to bear arms a key freedom

This is to all you who join the National Anthem and celebrate July 4 by firing off sparklers, rockets and cherry bombs, then use to restrict or eliminate private ownership of firearms. You should review history.

The national anthem is about a bloody battle and survival of the fittest, not drinking beer and cooking burgers on a grill and lighting fireworks while the kids wear red, white and blue.

Independence Day is a celebration of a life and death struggle for freedom. The ultimate meant liberty or else. We won for the same reason. We've won all since battles.

Because we had better weapons! Weapons designed and built by individuals, not some congressional committee or bureaucratic agency. We won from Wal-Mart, John Garrand, Sam Colt and others operated under a system that allowed such things. The Boeing B17 (which contributed so much during World War II to keep the world free from a dictator who held control because he had raped his nation of private firearms) was built and flown with private money.

The Second Amendment was installed not to protect the nation from foreign aggression, but to keep a local tyrant from gaining control. It also gave the individual the ability of self-protection.

You may need no such protection, feeling secure walking by the side of the road with your baby in the back seat. After six weapons, we've never agreed on color or make of a car. Let alone describing the car. You'll probably get your back eventually.

Or if you feel that much it's easier to be a soldier. You'll be robbed, raped or both. Bless you, not all of us are optimistic. WILSON PETERSON Twin Falls

Magic Valley Football: Day One

The countdown begins to the first Friday night

By Brad Guire
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Across the valley, they congregated on grassy plains for an early-morning workout. They're not fully suited up, but in training shirts, shorts and helmets present a single unit — one from many.

They exercise. They run, they jump, and they perform drills. Field sergeants bark orders and lead their squads by example, and the men comply. Somewhere on the field, the general paces the plain. Observing. Correcting. Teaching.

At over a dozen locations, they'll do this twice per day for the next few weeks: Preparing for the first battle of a fall war.

These aren't armies.

The Bruins are back

They could be spotted while driving Locust Road, dressed in gray shirts, light blue shorts and topped by a navy helmet.

The first day of practice is the foundation of every football house.

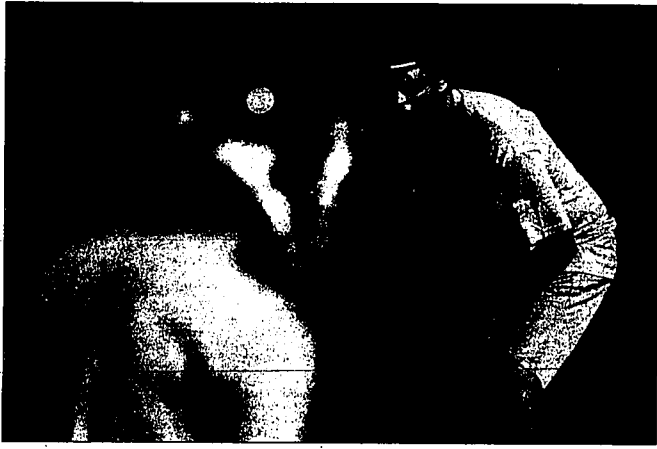

"We find out who's who," Twin Falls Bruins head football coach Brock Berryhill said. "We put people in the right positions and begin installing our offense and defense."

For those who have previously served (returning players and starters), it's not just about learning or improving upon their positions and assignments. Guys like junior quarterback Bryant Ward and senior tight end Ben Heidenreich have to provide the on-the-field leadership to their underclassmen peers.

"There are a lot of young guys here," Heidenreich said.

For him, the most important thing to accomplish on the first day is to take charge and be a leader to those players.

"I'm excited. I've been waiting for this for a long time," Ward added. "Tanner (Simmons) was a good

TWIN FALLS — Last season, the College of Southern Idaho men's basketball team averaged 81.8 points and 40.6 rebounds per game en route to a 25-10 record and the program's 22nd NJCAA Division I National Tournament appearance. For the 2006-07 season, 5.1 of those points and 0.7 of those rebounds per game are back.

Returning sophomore guard Derek Lorenzen is the lone returning player for second-year head coach Barrett Peery, meaning that Peery and his coaching staff have been very busy since the March 25 end of the season. The Golden Eagles have already signed 11 players, with more to come.

new bodies," Peery said. "We haven't had our hearts broken very often. We're very happy with how things have gone."

This year's team may have a new look, but don't mistake that for inexperience. Peery signed six transfers with collegiate experience, including four former scenic West Athletic Conference foes. Peery raided the Dixie State College cookie jar as the Rebels made their offensive move to the four-year ranks, picking up 2005-06 standouts Travis Bunker and Moteni Taukivea, along with former Rebels shooting guard Brad Garrett. In doing so, Peery picks up not only proven SWAC talent, but a wealth of rebounding tenacity. Bunker averaged 9.4 points as a 6-foot-5 freshman shooting guard and his 7.1 rebounds per game make him the conference's top returning rebounder. Taukivea earned All-Region 18 Tournament honors and All-Region 18 Second-Team honors for the regular season after averaging 13.1 points and 6.1 rebounds per game. Garrett is a 6-5 small forward with a smooth shooting touch. The 2003 Pine View High School (St. George, Utah) grad averaged 21.6 points per game as a senior.

Paul Wayne, a 6-0 point guard, formerly at Salt Lake Community College, brings his floor leadership, along with his 9.0 points and 2.5 assists per game to Twin Falls. Kelvin Davis, a 6-4 shooting guard who sat out last year on a medical redshirt after suffering a foot fracture at the University of Texas-El Paso, will bolster CSI's guard play. He played in 24 games as a freshman for the Miners.

"Kelvin Davis is as good an athlete as we've had since I've been here," Peery said. "He can really get at the rim and go."

Peery also added some size and rebounding with 6-9 sophomore transfer Brandon Stoves. Playing for Panola College in Carthage, Texas, Stoves averaged 7.0 points and 7.9 rebounds as a freshman.

One of the gems of Peery's freshman class is likely to be Terry Fields, a 6-6 small forward out of Headland, Ala. Fields averaged 22 points and 14 rebounds as a senior en route to

Rookies moving up Denver Broncos' depth chart

By Pat Graham
Associated Press writer

DENVER — On any other day, Jay Cutler's promotion to backup quarterback would've been the biggest news coming out of Broncos training camp. Then undrafted rookie running back Mike Bell went and stole his thunder.

Cutler's promotion was pushed to the back burner Monday when Denver coach Mike Shanahan said Bell had teared up Tatum Bell and Ron Dayne to claim the No. 1 spot.

When asked if he had any other news concerning the depth chart, coach Mike Shanahan just grinned.

"Isn't that enough?" he said. And to think that Bell figured he was in trouble when Shanahan summoned him to his office Sunday evening. At Bell nervously climbed the stairs, different scenarios raced through his head — all of them negative.

"I was shaking," Bell said. "Bell was still shaking when he left, but with excitement. The former Arizona star is also the team's kickoff returner."

"This is a dream come true," Bell said. "For him (Shanahan) to give me the opportunity to be the starter on a great organization like this is a blessing."

Bell's leap to the top of the depth chart is even quicker than that of former Denver running back Terrell Davis, who came into camp as a third-round draft pick in 1995 and won the starting job by the first week of the season.

Bell, who grew up idolizing Davis, earned the job — at least for now — before playing a single down.

"He's been real impressive," Shanahan said.

Cutler's promotion wasn't a total shock. When the Broncos selected Cutler with the 11th overall pick, and then signed him to a package worth up to $48 million over six years. It was inevitable that he'd soon replace backup-Bradlee Van Pelt.

While the switch came quicker than most expected, the former Vanderbilt product wasn't surprised.

"I think I've done some good things and I've got up pretty quick," Cutler said. "I still have a lot to learn."

Dayne saw the elevation of Bell coming days ago based on his performance at practice.

Farewell, summer sports

I don't ask if you're ready for some football. For one, it's a cliché to even write that. Second, I know you are, but we have other business first.

I do have the traditional "first day of practice" story. Other than that, give it another week or so, I promise. Now is the time to get summer sports out of our systems.

So let's wrap up the American Legion season and some other odds 'n' ends.

BAMA BLITZ BRAD GUIRE

American Legion

Someone from Idaho Falls must have read that the only thing missing from the American Legion AA Area C Tournament was a brawl.

There's no two ways about it: Brawls are exciting. Sure, it looks bad on teams who can't leave it on the field, but don't deny the truth. It's the only reason that hockey still draws any ratings.

But seriously, both AA and A tournaments were well-run by the Twin Falls coaches and parents that volunteered their time to keep the brackets up-to-date and to keep me hydrated in that crazy heat.

Love 'em or hate 'em, the AA Cowboys deserve credit for hanging in there long enough to win district and make a run at state. They could have easily phoned it in the rest of the season after the suspensions, but they didn't.

Allyn Reynolds of Buhl and Jesse Koopman of Jerome should also be proud of their trips to state, the first in four years for both teams.

Congratulations also to Kimberly's first year back in Area C. The Bulldogs didn't have the most stellar of seasons and didn't make the tournament, but people who kept an eye on them through the season saw a team that got better and better each time out.

Softball

The Twin Falls Bruins stumbled a bit at the end of the high school season, but many of the same girls terrorized the state during the summer.

Ken Johnson's Twin Falls Terror won the U-16 state softball title in Pocatello during July. Johnson's sophomore season at the varsity helm should be another strong one and should hopefully have a better outcome. Cementing the core of his team with a summer-league championship is not too shabby of a first step in that direction.

summer in Twin Falls. Peery has seen his players come together and begin to develop solid chemistry already, something he hopes will continue as he brings his team together for the start of the new school year.
'I think that I will probably learn that it takes time for your team to mold itself and shape itself,' Peery said of his second year at the helm. 'I think early on last year I was frustrated with how long it took for us to get to know each other. There's always that transition early in a JUCO season, because there's always new faces. This year, there's a tremendous amount of new faces, but even last year, there's a ton of new faces and it takes time for teams to mold and gel and get on the same page. I think I have to be patient with that, but my expectations have never been higher.'

'I know that we got at least one call on the next day, when — conveniently enough — a story breaks that Floyd Landis may be the one who's been allegedly doped to win the Tour. There is a lesson to be learned here, but we already knew that lesson and practice it.
Simply put, don't write about things you don't know about. That's the lesson. There's a good reason why we at the Times-News sports department try to never write columns about national sports news: we're not anywhere near those stories. We only know one-tenth of what the beat reporters for the national papers know, and we don't pretend to know. This paper has always been and always will be a regional paper with an emphasis on local news. If anything, we'll write about harmless national stuff, such as MLB hits or FHS-BHES rain delay programming.

Sure, we run Associated Press and other wire service stories, but we stay away from writing with authority on national stuff because it will bite us in the rear.

News is for why we run it: there was some funny stuff in there. It was still funny the next day. At least I can say that I didn't write it.

Martha Stewart agrees to $195,000 settlement

The Associated Press

Homemaking diva Martha Stewart will pay about $195,000 and cannot serve as the director of a public company for five years under a settlement announced Monday on civil insider trading charges with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Under the settlement, the founder of Martha Stewart Living Omnimedia Inc., a multimedia firm dedicated to stylish living, agreed to make a payment relating to losses the government said she avoided on her sale of ImClone Systems Inc. stock in December 2003.

Stewart has agreed to pay $145,673, the amount of losses she avoided from her insider trading, plus $200 in interest. But the bulk of the payment comes from the maximum civil penalty of $137,019, three times the amount of losses avoided.

In addition to accepting a five-year ban on being a company director, Stewart agreed to limits for five years on her service as an officer or employee of a public company. During that period, she will be prohibited from participating in financial reporting and, disclosure, internal controls, audits, SEC filings and monitoring or compliance with the federal securities laws.

The terms go into effect on the date the court ratifies the settlement. The broker Peter Bacanovic agreed to pay a penalty totaling about $75,000, the SEC said Monday. In a previous order, the SEC barred Bacanovic, a former Merrill Lynch employee, from associating with a broker, dealer or investment adviser.

In settling the charges, Stewart and Bacanovic, neither admitted nor denied the allegations in the SEC complaint. "This brings closure to a personal matter—and my personal nightmare has come to an end," Stewart said in a statement.

Idaho clothier sues Web survey firms

Coldwater Creek asks judge to stop companies from using its trademark

By Rebecca Boone Associated Press writer

BOISE — Sandpoint-based clothing company Coldwater Creek is suing four Internet survey companies for allegedly offering company gift cards to computer users in exchange for filling out a survey that was difficult if not impossible to complete.

In the lawsuit filed in U.S. District Court here late last week, Coldwater Creek contends that Online, iResearch Center, Apparel-Offler, Gift Reward Center and NielsenPerceptics infringed on its trademark by offering Coldwater Creek gift certificates valued at $450 and $500 to computer users who filled out an online survey with personal information.

But Coldwater contends the computer users could never actually complete the questionnaire and qualify for the gift card, and that several called the retailer to complain, wrongly believing that it had endorsed the survey.

NielsenPerceptics, based in Boca Raton, Fla., is the managing member of Gift Reward, also in Boca Raton, according to the lawsuit. Gift Reward, in turn, owns and operates the Delray Beach, Fla., company Online Reward Center and the Lake Worth, Fla., company Apparel-Offler, the lawsuit says.

Phone messages left by The Associated Press with Gift Reward, Online Reward Center and Apparel-Offler were not immediately returned Monday; a phone number could not be found for NielsenPerceptics.

"By unlawfully using the Coldwater trademarks in association with its survey seeking volumes of personal information, without delivering a gift card as promised, Online and Apparel-Offler have damaged Coldwater's reputation and good will among its customers and consumers generally, thereby injuring Coldwater's business and business prospects," the clothing company says in the lawsuit.

The company is asking a federal judge to stop the four Web companies from using the Coldwater Creek trademark.

Coldwater Creek spokesman David Gunter could not immediately be reached for comment, and the company's attorneys referred all calls to him.

Pop-up ads promising gift cards, merchandise or other rewards in exchange for people providing information are common on the Internet, said Nora Carpenter, president of the Better Business Bureau office serving southwestern Idaho and eastern Oregon.

"The proliferation of online surveys has become a really common business model," Carpenter said. "There are definitely online survey companies that are well-established and have a good record, and many times more that exist and don't have a good track record and aren't good for either the business they seem to represent or the consumer."

Nationwide, the Better Business Bureau receives hundreds of complaints every year from consumers who were offered free items through pop-up surveys but were never able to complete the transaction or get the items they were promised, she said.

It's often tough for consumers to differentiate between legitimate offers and phony ones, Carpenter said. Before filling out online surveys, computer users should try to verify the source of the offer, she said.

"If you receive a pop-up for a company that you know well, but you aren't currently on their Web site, you might want to slow down a bit," she said.

Oil up, stocks down

Traders watch the crude oil futures pit at the New York Mercantile Exchange, Monday. Oil prices jumped more than $2, surpassing $77 a barrel Monday following a shutdown at an Alaskan oil field that accounts for about 8 percent of U.S. production. Gasoline futures also rose, and experts are expecting prices at the pump to increase by about 10 cents a gallon.

Stocks slip as oilfield shutdown hits crude prices

By Michael J. Martinez Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — Near a record of prices following an Alaskan oilfield shutdown prompted investors to sell on Monday, and the Dow Jones Industrial Average fell 20.87, or 0.19 percent, to 11,219.38.

Broader stock indicators also dropped. The Standard & Poor's 500 index lost 3.59, or 0.28 percent, to 1,275.77, and the Nasdaq composite index slid 12.55, or 0.6 percent, to 2,072.50.

Banks lost ground as well in advance of the Fed meeting, with the yield on the benchmark 10-year Treasury note rising to 4.92 percent from 4.9 percent late Friday. The dollar gained against most major currencies, while gold prices also rose.

The nation's benchmark interest rate now stands at 5.25 percent, and the Fed has raised rates by a quarter percentage point in each of its last 17 meetings dating back to June 2004. Ever since the Fed signaled six weeks ago that the economy was growing at a slower rate, and that it was taking this moderation into account in its deliberations, Wall Street has been parsing economic data and looking for signs of further slowing. In hopes that the Fed would stop raising rates.

Over the past two weeks, slowing job growth and a weaker-than-expected second-quarter gross domestic product had many investors optimistic that the long-expected pause will come Tuesday. The market's modest move lower on very light trading volume showed investors' willingness to wait and see what the Fed will do.

It's looking for. The concern is, yes, they pause in August, but raise the specter of raising rates in September."

Shares of BP fell $2.09 to $70.45 on the Prudhoe Bay shutdown, which would take away 2.5 percent of the company's total daily production. BP Prudhoe Bay Royalty Trust, which manages the oilfield's business on behalf of BP and others, tumbled $1.04, or 13 percent, to $76.65.

Rival oil producers saw modest gains, however, as investors believed they would benefit from the spike in oil prices. Hess Corp. rose 72 cents to $52.72, while Chevron Corp. climbed $1.17 to $56.63.

The market's optimism was evident Monday when stocks, despite their declines, largely stood their ground amid rising oil prices.

If you plot the S&P 500 against oil prices for the last two to three years, they're both rising," said Brian Gardner, investment strategist for ING Investment Management. "Now, certainly, if oil prices stay this high, consumer spending and earnings are going to be hurt. But for now, I think we're hanging in there today because we're actually enjoying some rationality."

Consumer borrowing rises 5.7% in June

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Americans increased their borrowing in June at a much faster pace than expected, with the rise led by higher credit card debt.

The Federal Reserve reported Monday that consumer borrowing rose at an annual rate of 5.7 percent in June, up sharply from a 3.3 percent increase in May.

The June advance reflected a rise in consumer debt of $10.27 billion at an annual rate, much larger than the $3.7 billion increase economists had been expecting.

Analysts are expecting consumer borrowing to slow in coming months, reflecting the slowdown that has already occurred in consumer spending.

For June, borrowing on revolving credit — the category that includes credit card debt — rose at an annual rate of 9.8 percent, following an even bigger 11 percent gain in May.

Borrowing for auto loans and other types of non-revolving accounts rose at an annual rate of 3.2 percent in June after having fallen at an annual rate of 1.4 percent in May.

Consumer spending, the main accounts for two-thirds of the total economy, slowed abruptly in the April-June quarter, pushing overall growth down to an annual rate of 2.5 percent. The 2.5 percent level was the slowest growth rate in the first three months of this year.

Analysts are predicting that growth for the rest of the year will hover around the 2.5 percent level as consumers struggle to cope with higher interest rates, soaring energy prices, and a cooling housing market.

The increase in borrowing in June pushed total consumer credit to a record annual rate of $2.19 trillion. The Fed's measure of consumer credit does not include mortgages or other loans that are secured by real estate.

Wal-Mart changes pay structure to stay competitive

By Marcus Kabel Associated Press writer

BENTONVILLE, Ark. — Wal-Mart Stores Inc. is raising starting pay at about a third of its nearly 4,000 U.S. stores by an average 6 percent and introducing wage caps for the first time on each type of job in all stores, the company said Monday.

The largest U.S. private employer said the changes would help it remain competitive with other retailers and meet a need for workers and managers as it continues to expand.

Wal-Mart, which has a store in every state and is looking to build 2,000 new stores, has more than 1.3 million U.S. employees, which it refers to as associates.

The retailer's pay and benefits have been under fire from union-backed critics, who call them skimpy.

Wal-Mart has defended its low-wage, full-time, hourly wage of $10.11 and launched lower-cost health plans this year with premiums as low as $11 a month in some areas.

"We've created about 240,000 jobs in the last three years and we are continuing to grow. We need to ensure that we have the most appropriate classification and pay programs to meet our growth needs," Wal-Mart spokesman John Smiley said.

The changes help in two ways, Smiley said. Higher starting pay makes Wal-Mart more attractive to new workers, and the wage caps give current associates an incentive to move up to higher positions if they want to make more money.

Some associates are already making more than the new caps allow for their positions, Wal-Mart said without providing numbers.

But no one will receive a pay cut as long as they are in that position, the company said in a statement.

The retailer did not specify the new starting rates or give examples for the new pay caps. Smiley said the numbers vary too much by local market conditions across the country to provide an accurate average figure.

The new caps come in the form of pay ranges established for each type of job. Starting rates will be increased by an average of about 6 percent at more than 1,200 stores, Smiley said.

As of July 31, there were 1,148 Wal-Mart discount stores, 2,098 Supercenters that combine a supermarket with general merchandise, 567 Sam's Clubs warehouse stores and 107 Neighborhood Market grocery stores.

Nine suspected illegal immigrants die in crash

YUMA, Ariz. — A sport utility vehicle crummed with suspected illegal immigrants rolled over in an attempt to outrun Border Patrol agents, killing nine people and injuring at least 12 others, officials said.

Five of the injured, including a pregnant woman, were in critical condition, most without head trauma, hospital officials said.

The large SUV was carrying up to 22 people when the driver had tried to circumvent a checkpoint on the highway, Border Patrol spokesman Lloyd Freys said.

With Border Patrol agents in pursuit, the driver attempted to make a U-turn and rolled over. Freys said he did not know if either vehicle was traveling.

"The Suburban was grossly overloaded, and it's difficult to handle on that kind of (dirt) road," Freys said.

Shirley Maj, Leon Wilmot said the car had swerved to avoid a spike strip put out by Border Patrol agents. Border Patrol spokeswoman Agent Veronica Lozano said she didn't know whether agents put out the device.

Surgery under way on conjoined twins

SALT LAKE CITY — A pair of conjoined twins remained stable through the first hours of surgery Monday in an extended 20-plus-hours operation to separate the 4-year-old girls.

"Going great, no problems whatsoever," said Dr. Rebecca Meyers, chief of pediatric surgery at Primary Children's Medical Center. "Conjoined twins are interesting in that they seem so bizarre, but they're actually predictable, based on variations of themes."

The twins the names of conjoined twins are similar and that the surgeries doctor will perform in separating them are commonly done in many patients — not just those who are conjoined.

"What's unusual is doing them all in one single surgery, in two separate girls, followed by the physical separation of the children," hospital spokesman Bonnie Midget said.

Kendra and Mallyyah Herrin are fused at the mid-torso and share a kidney, liver, pelvis, a pair of legs and part of the large intestine.

The separation surgery is believed to be the first on twins who share a kidney, Meyers said.

The girls headed to the operating room at 7:15 a.m. Monday after a tearful goodbye with their parents, Jake and Erin Herrin.

Kemphorne holds brief talks with tribal leaders

RAPID CITY, S.D. — The president of the Oglala Sioux Tribe got what he wanted: A meeting with the new U.S. interior secretary over American Indian reservation problems.

Secretary Dirk Kemphorne had the meeting set up on short notice Sunday, one day before his scheduled appearance at the nearby Sturgis Motorcycle Rally.

He met for more than an hour with tribal leaders from five of South Dakota's nine reservations, took notes and promised to do what he could during his two years in office.

Kemphorne, a former U.S. senator and governor of Idaho, was appointed for the post by the Senate in May.

Alex White Plume, president of the Oglala Sioux Tribe, said he had 2,000 issues to take up but only addressed four, the biggest of which is sovereignty.

"I don't mean any disrespect," White Plume told Kemphorne, seated across the table. "Your whole Bureau of Indian Affairs is a worthless organization that siphons money from the tribes."

He said the BIA spends too much money administering government programs for Indians and gives tribes little flexibility in how the money is spent.

White Plume, who helped organized a protest of the encroachment of biker bars near Bear Butte, also asked the secretary to do something at the federal level to protect the site Indians consider sacred.

Kemphorne listened intently to White Plume and the other leaders and said some of the issues were too large to address during his tenure but he would do what he could. He said he plans to travel around the country over the next month and take input on other issues.

IDAHO

Sandpoint group wants to tunnel under town

SANDPOINT — The Sandpoint Public Works Committee has unanimously agreed to hold a special meeting this fall to discuss digging a 2,250-foot tunnel for U.S. 95 beneath this northern Idaho town.

The tunnel is an alternative to a proposal to route the highway around the town, which some say is dangerous and will harm downtown Sandpoint's waterfront ambience. Both projects are intended to relieve traffic congestion.

"Most of (the tunnel) is hidden from sight and that's the beauty of it," Steve Potter, a member of Citizens for the Sandpoint Tunnel, recently told the city's Public Works Committee.

Potter is a mechanical engineer. He contacted Hatch Mott McDonald, a Seattle-based company that specializes in building tunnels.

"Tunnels of this size, type and depth are quite common, and have been successfully constructed in many developed areas around the world," Stephen Mauss, vice president of Hatch Mott McDonald, told Potter in a July 19 letter.

The company has built about 1,500 miles of tunnels around the world, including a tunnel beneath the Detroit River linking the U.S. and Canada.

The tunnel beneath Sandpoint would be made with twin tubes that could each hold two lanes of traffic. Emergency access, closed-circuit TV monitoring, and lighting would also be installed.

Insects used to control weeds on Superfund site

KELLOGG, Idaho — Workers with the Idaho Department of Environmental Quality have started a two-bug attack on an invasive weed that is taking over sites in northern Idaho and forcing out native plants.

The department last week released 1,400 flower weevils among spotted knapweed in the Bunker Hill Superfund site. Next month, the second wave of insects, this time root-boring weevils, will be released.

Jan Olsen, the department's coordinator for the Bunker Hill site, said using the two weevils in combination has worked in other areas.

"It's been proven," Olsen told The Spokesman-Review. "We wouldn't have done it if it hadn't been proven. One of our contractors has done a lot of work with it in the Moscow area."

The larva of the flower weevil feeds on the seeds inside the flowers, while the larva of the root-boring weevil bore into the roots of the knapweed.

"It's good to use both these weevils, they work together," Olsen said. "It was important to get these flower-head weevils out immediately because they're flowering now, so we had a two-week window. I've got through September to get the root weevils out there."

Police track down stolen doughnut truck in a hurry

RICHLAND, Wash. — A stolen truck full of doughnuts? Better believe Tri-Cities police went on that in a hurry.

Moments after the theft of the Vier's Bakery van was reported early Friday in Kennewick, police issued an all-points bulletin.

A Benton County sheriff's deputy quickly spotted the truck. After a chase at 30 to 35 mph, Richland police got it to stop and arrested the driver, Steve Swoboda, 19, for investigation of auto theft and felony escape.

Still intact was the entire load of glazed, sugar and cream doughnuts, as well as apple fritters, bear claws.

"In 24 years in law enforcement, I've never had a call like that," Richland police Capt. Randy Barnes said. "To steal a bakery truck, how clever is that?"

"It kind of sticks out, a doughnut truck," Kennewick police Sgt. Ken Lattin said.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE Bobby Wolff

"Their starting point is different, and their courses are not the same." — Alexis de Tocqueville

Bridge score table with columns for North, East, South, and West, showing trick counts and card suits.

The first three deals of the 2003 World Junior Teams final between the United States and Israel almost decided the match. After those three hands the U.S. team had a huge lead...

BID WITH THE ACES

Bridge score table for 'Bid With The Aces' with columns for South, West, North, and East, showing trick counts.

A slightly better percentage line is to cash the second top club from hand before ruffing one. If no honor appears, you need to ruff a club in dummy and cross your fingers...

ANSWER: Raise to three diamonds for two reasons.

The first is that you cannot be sure this is not your opponent's hand, and the raise makes their lives harder. The second reason is that despite your absence of aces and kings, you might still be able to make game facing, for example, a 5-5 fit.

All hail the Queen

County fair honors matriarch

By Matt Christensen
Times-News writer

RUPERT — Who doesn't love a county fair queen?

She's young, pretty. She wears a sparkling silver tiara and a clean white satin sash. A former 4-H'er, perhaps. Raised on mom's apple pie. A gal all the girls want to be and all the guys want to date.

A good county fair queen is the symbol of all a fair is supposed to be: fun, hard-working, with a competitive spirit. A stoic, rural woman.

Minidoka County fair queens aren't much different. Most spend each summer preparing for the fair, raising livestock or building crafts. Many volunteer at a booth or in the rodeo. And when fair week rolls around, a fair queen secretly hopes that it might be her name called on the rodeo's final night.

But in Rupert, the woman most revered — elected by everyone in the grandstand at the fair's end — isn't a young sweetheart. She's an old one.

Here, the Grandma Queen gets the standing ovation. It is an old woman to whom all the cowboys tip their hats. It is an aging matriarch who will ride in the parades with the satin sash and twinkling tiara.

So on Saturday in Rupert, the final day of the fair, maybe no more than a half-dozen potential queens sat in the grandstands watching the final few cowboys cling to bucking broncos and wondering who (maybe me?) might be the 20th Minidoka County Fair Grandma Queen.

Finally, after the last cowboy was thrown and the sun had set, the rodeo arena was cleared and an oak rocking chair was lowered into the dusty ring. A gate at the far end opened and Dianne Schaefer, the reigning queen, rode in on horseback, her sash flapping in the wind. The queen's men followed — eight cowboys in blue shirts and white hats. Dianne dismounted and politely stood near the chair ready to hand over the crown.

The announcer's voice echoed through the loudspeakers: "Our Grandma Queen was born and raised in Minidoka County ... She was married on Feb. 9, 1948."

In the grandstand, about four rows up, 75-year-old Molly Mahler thought, Wait, I was married that day.

The announcer continued to rattle off facts about the winner, and Molly recognized them all from her life.

"For 45 years, her enthusiasm and support for the Minidoka County Fair has never wavered. We appreciate the dedicated service and love she brings to the fair. We would like to present Molly Mahler, the 2007 Grandma Queen."

The crowd applauded, some whistled and Molly raised her hands to her face. Lud, her husband, and Trina Mahler Dunn, her daughter, took Molly by the elbows and raised her to her feet.

Dressed in a purple cowboy hat, plaid shirt and dark jeans, Molly made her way to the gate where the blue-shirted cowboys helped her into the ring. Linda Wheeler of the fair board placed a sash over Molly's head and handed her a bouquet of roses. Dianne shook her hand. As Molly took her seat in the rocking chair throne, some in the crowd stood and clapped louder. Looking slightly bewildered and un-erpressed, Molly posed for pictures. Lud pulled a white hankie from his back pocket and wiped his face.

When the pictures were over, Susie McCall, also of the fair board, walked Lud, Trina and Molly out of the arena through the side gate.

"I can't believe it," said Molly, who is superintendent in the fair's preserved foods division. "I've never won anything like this."

The criteria for Grandma Queen are simple: She must be older than 50 and be either involved with the fair or an outstanding person in the community, Linda said. Molly is all three.

The fair board accepts nominations throughout the year and chooses a winner during fair week. This year, six women were nominated. Molly's nomination letters glowed. She represents what a county fair stands for better than anyone else, young or old — with one exception: Molly can't ride a horse.

As the gate swung shut and Molly, her family and Susie made their way back into the grandstand, Susie told the new queen about her duties, which include appearing in the Fourth of July parade.

"Oh no," Molly said. "Will I have to ride a horse?"

Susie laughed. "No, honey. We'll get you a convertible."

For history's sake

Antiques give glimpses into town's past

By Matt Christensen
Times-News writer

BUHL — Long after our ancestors have lived and died, when memories are faded and lives forgotten, we look to the objects of our forefathers' everyday lives to tell their stories. Antiques preserve our history. They are the tangible evidence of what life was like before our time.

Antiques are the link, and we seek them out, hunt for them at garage sales and auctions, in stores, attics and basements. Knowing where we came from helps us to know ourselves.

So some folks, like the ones who will enter antiques in the Buhl and Filer centennial exhibits at this year's Twin Falls County Fair, dedicate their lives to finding, preserving and protecting artifacts. Later this month, some of them will share their prized possessions at the special exhibits open at the fair from Aug. 30 through Sept. 4. Holly Langdon is one of them. She married into the Langdon family — one of Buhl's oldest — and fell in lock step with her new family of collectors. Earlier this year, Holly opened a museum in Buhl to house many of the town's treasures she'd acquired with the help of her mother-in-law, Lois Langdon. You can also see more than 100 of the artifacts at the county fair's one-time Buhl centennial exhibit.

All of Holly's antiques are Buhl-business related, many of them from the family company, Langdon Tool Belt Supply. Other treasures are items on loan to the museum, from Buhl residents.

Calendars from the early 1900s, local businesses' advertising sheets that were used as ink blotters, tokens (an early form of the gift certificate), piggy banks, jewelry, a collapsible box for delivering groceries, a beanbag chair and kitchen "kitch-knacks" are only a few of the items from Holly. Her favorite? A series of decorative plates the Langdon business gave to customers during the 1940s and '50s. They're beautiful, Holly said, and they help tell the family business story.

A few more of those same Langdon plates will be entered in the fair exhibit thanks to Twin Falls collector

Piece of country

Twin Falls woman wants to share flowers

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — For the better part of her life, Velda Lenz Taylor Greenfield was a country girl.

These days, Greenfield, 89, lives tucked back in her neighborhood, in a cozy Twin Falls neighborhood. But she spent the first six decades of her life living in rural, open spaces.

Moving into town 30 years ago, Greenfield was determined to bring some country atmosphere with her. Roses she transplanted from the family farm south of Twin Falls still line her driveway, and flowers bloom in abundance along the property line.

Greenfield relies on a wheelchair for mobility, so her flower garden isn't exactly what it was in her youth. But what lacks in strength is made up with overflowing generosity.

"I have always enjoyed flowers and like giving seeds or spring starts to others so they can enjoy their yards as well," Greenfield said. "But the roses are mine — you can buy your own."

When flowers wither and turn to seed, many folks are saddened by the passing of another season — but not Greenfield. She watches in anticipation so she can tenderly gather African daisy and Kansas sunflower seeds.

"There is going to be billions of seeds," she said. "And I want to share them."

She already has one person patiently waiting for a treasure trove of flower potential.

"I know I sure want some," said Tammy Embretson of Jewel's Home Care in Twin Falls, who comes in and helps Greenfield around her home.

Embretson said the large white daisies are her favorite. Greenfield is also interested in splitting some day lilies and some white daisies to share as well.

"I've been here for a long time and have collected a bunch of plants," she said. "There isn't any reason why others can't enjoy them as well."

Kelly Bryant, with the wholesale sales and marketing division of Moss Greenhouses in Jerome, said that plants like day lilies and other perennials can be split about every two years.

"After the plant has bloomed out and becomes somewhat dormant, you can dig around and beneath the roots," she said. "Gently bring up the plant, and break off a clump."

"The divided portion can then be relocated and is much happier than being crowded out."

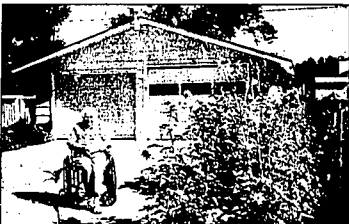

"Once your blooms become smaller and less showy you can clump it off," Bryant said. "You'll definitely see a difference. Greenfield hopes to bring happiness to maybe even your yard."

"They sure make your place look nice, and I am hoping to have lots of seeds bundled up for spring," she said.

Times-News correspondent

• Store seeds in a dark, cool place in the spring. Flowers like cosmos and sunflowers work well.

• Taking starts off established clumps of day lilies and Shasta daisies is best done in fall, after the plant is done blooming. "By taking a clump in the fall it gives the plant time to get adjusted before winter," Bryant said.

• After carefully digging around your plant, pierce it in the middle with your shovel. Break off about a six-inch-diameter section to replant. Use a root starter product like Miracle Gro in the plant's new hole. The nutrients will help the plant reestablish. • Water starts regularly until established.

Removing troublesome poison ivy and squirrel-proofing the tomatoes

By Joel M. Lerner
Special to The Washington Post

Questions: I am perplexed by an invasion of poison ivy covering my hillside and several mature azaleas. If I spray the azaleas with Roundup, I'm afraid it will kill them.

Answer: If the poison ivy is young enough, put on heavy leather gloves and pull it out by the roots. If it can't be pulled, maybe it can be dug. Even if you are allergic to it, as long as you don't touch the surface of gloves or tools that came into contact with the allergen in poison ivy oil — urushiol — it won't cause a rash. Keep gloves used to pull poison ivy separate for a couple weeks, or use them for other work, and the oils will wear off.

Where poison ivy is growing through a shrub or up a tree, or is impossible to pull or dig, the standard solution is to use the base as possible. The top growth will die, but don't grab it with bare hands. Stems contain urushiol until they are fully decayed. When at least six to nine new, mature leaflets grow from the base of the vine, spray foliage with a non-selective, systemic herbicide such as Roundup or other glyphosate-based herbicide. It will kill the plant, including the roots. This method might require a second application, but by cutting the poison back, you use a fraction of toxic material to control it and save the azaleas, too. Follow all labeled instructions.

Even if you are allergic to poison ivy, as long as you don't touch the surface of gloves or tools that came into contact with the allergen in poison ivy oil, it won't cause a rash.

Q. We have a vegetable garden with five raised garden beds. We primarily plant tomatoes, cucumbers and squash. The squirrels eat our tomatoes. We would have to fence the entire area and cover the top to keep the critters out. Any suggestions?

A. As a last resort, because your tomato yield is declining or you're losing fruits and seeds to birds, you could get netting and lay it across the top edges of a barrier fencing that encloses the entire vegetable garden. Covering fencing with a lid to protect against squirrel damage is an extreme fix. Squirrels are much more interested in seeds than vegetables. I do recommend fencing a vegetable garden against rabbits, voles and other ground pests. In fact, a 6- to 8-foot-tall fence will also keep deer out of the vegetable garden. Make sure the mesh is fine enough (one inch square or smaller) to keep small animals out. Bury the bottom of the fence 6 to 12 inches below the surface to discourage burrowing critters.

Linda Hawkins. She has two plates, both handed down from her mother, Irene McRoberts — one featuring a painting of a horse-drawn carriage from 1955 and the other a mounted rider from 1956.

Linda is also adding a bit of her own family history to the exhibit: class pictures from the Deep Creek school in Buhl from the mid-'50s.

"Oh, I'm not telling you which one is mine," she said, shaking her head. Moments later, while she looked over a black-and-white portrait of gapped-toothed first-graders, Linda gave in and pointed to a curly blond girl in a summer dress. "OK," she said. "That's me."

She held the photo in her hands and lingered. Someday, when Linda is gone, this photo will belong to her daughter, Shelly Sandau. And Shelly will hold it and remember her mother and her history.

Pull out clumps of crabgrass

The Washington Post

Pull up clumps of crabgrass by hand soon, before their seeds ripen. Pre-emergent weedkiller is ineffective now and will impede lawn seeding in September. For stubborn clumps, wet the soil the night before and use a sharp hoe or knife.

Plant ahead with perennials

By Joel M. Lerner
Special to The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — August is here. So, along with watering and weeding, you can also be seeding.

This is the time to sow many of the perennials and biennials that naturally go to seed now. Biennials are herbaceous plants that live for two years. They grow roots and foliage the first year. The second year they flower, go to seed and die. Perennials will return from their roots for many years.

To harvest your own seeds, cut faded flowers when you see mature kernels on them. Generally, they are ready when they have darkened in color. Have dry pods or start to drop seeds. You can also start with first-year seedlings. They can be dug and will be found growing near the parent plant. Dig a few and move them to other parts of your property. If they transplant successfully, you can create a flower garden in this way.

The time needed for seeds to establish varies depending on the weather. They might germinate this season and return in spring, germinate in winter or remain as seed until early spring when the kernel will swell with moisture and burst forth with growth.

If the plant you are collecting seed from is a hybrid that was bred for specific colors, sizes or other traits, those characteristics generally won't be passed along by seed, that the hybrid produces. They revert to the original species traits and might even change from year to year. Seed collected from species plants, as opposed to hybrids, usually results in plants that display the same characteristics as the parents. Given the possibility of cross-pollination between species or hybrids, however, you don't know what you have sown until it has grown.

When a plant is happy, it tells you by self-seeding — creating a family in the vicinity. Keep an eye on when your ornamental plants go to seed. Help them spread by shaking the seeds or kernels over the areas where you would like to see more of them. To control spread of plants, clip faded flowers and discard them.

A couple of perennials and biennials that are going to seed from now into September and may be able to use some moving or removing as they go to seed are black-eyed Susan (Rudbeckia) and purple coneflower (Echinacea purpurea). Self-sowing of ornamental plants is more common than you might realize; it happens 12 months a year. I have witnessed this with forget-me-nots (Myosotis sylvatica) and violets in late winter, dame's rocket (Hesperis matronalis) and sweet william (Dianthus barbatus) in spring. Summer flowers are starting to go to seed now. Hardy begonia (B. grandis) and aster will go to seed in fall. Hellebores flower and seed in winter. And, this is just a sampling of what happens in your garden every year.

If you want to plant beds of wildflowers next summer, it's time to begin controlling the weeds that would otherwise compete with them. What you can do now: Spread plastic sheeting or other weed-barrier fabric over heeding areas. If at garden or home-improvement centers. Leave it on through winter, until mid-June, just prior to planting. When you remove the weed-barrier fabric next June, loosen the soil surface a quarter-inch in depth and spread a wildflower seed mix over the area.

Because wildflowers establish much more slowly than lawn, annuals are sometimes used with perennials to give a quick cover and keep down competing weeds. You might be advised by the wildflower seed supplier to add a slow-growing grass, such as sheep fescue, especially if seeding on embankments. Stake down a biodegradable mesh fabric to hold the seed in place and allow the wildflowers to grow through.

Wildflower seeding requires patience because it takes a couple of years for the meadow to grow properly. Wildflower areas should be mowed annually in early spring prior to new growth. The area will require full sun to grow. The wildflowers you get will be limited to the species that thrive in your soil and region. Most seed mixes have from one to two dozen species in them, providing a good cross section of plants.

Reshaping Japanese maple

By Scott Aker
Special to The Washington Post

Question: I have a 17-year-old Japanese maple that was once a nice focal point but is now too large at 12 feet tall and casts excessive shade. I have tried to selectively prune its branches and reduce its size, but the remaining branches curve upward instead of gracefully down. How do I get this specimen back to its smaller, beautiful form?

Answer: You are referring, I think, to a weeping variety of Japanese maple. The branches weep in layers, and it is possible to remove some of the longest outer branches entirely while keeping lower ones for the weeping effect.

This should be a gradual process and should focus on removing a few of the longest branches every year.

As for the branches that are now upright, you can cut these back to a bud that faces outward. A new weeping branch will then grow from that bud in a way that keeps the pleasing shape of the tree.

You also should thin the branch canopy to allow sunlight to reach the inner branches of the tree. This will stimulate the growth of new shoots from the larger branches that can be trained, with time, to replace longer branches that might not be growing in the direction you intend. You also can train vertical branches to bend gracefully downward by tying a weight, such as a stone, to the ends of these branches just after growth is finished in early summer. If they are young and supple, they will bend, and, as the growth hardens, they will stay in place. The weight can be removed in the fall. Be careful to use only enough weight to bend branches slightly; too much weight might cause the branch to crack.

IF AUG. 8 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Romance burns hot this coming year, and if you are single, it may be a hidden love. Committed spouses and lovers find renewed sweetness. You put your heart and soul into everything you do — whether in your career or home life — and those around you appreciate your dedication. Take care not to overdo, as your desire to help could cause you to burn yourself out at times.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You pretty much own the hearts and minds of those around you, so use your influence wisely. Break free later today and do something new if possible — a "hot" date with the norm will be very enjoyable.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21):

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Wait a few days more to start anything important — right now, things will get off on the wrong foot and be impossible to correct later. Your energy will pick up again today or tomorrow.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Wait a few days more to start anything important — right now, things will get off on the wrong foot and be impossible to correct later. Your energy will pick up again today or tomorrow.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Plans with friends may not lead where you intend to go, and new friends may not be entirely what they seem. Put your brainpower to good use, but wait until later in the week to take action.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your thinking clears a great deal today, and your ideas have a greater chance of success. It is still highly unlikely to today a few days more before moving ahead with your schemes.

HOUSING (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Powerful communication with lasting results is in your stars today, but later this week is much more favorable for starting new projects or meeting new people. If in doubt, wait for clarity.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Take care not to swamp anyone with your strength and power and respect others, even if you privately think you are in the right. Be judicious in everything you say and do.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): The moon in your sign for the next two days will bring warm family feelings. Be careful not to be too controlling of those around you — and don't let them have unwarranted control over you either.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You'll make more headway than most today, and your popularity is running high. Your feeling that you can do no wrong now is probably correct, but a few days later is still the best advice.

Memories of young love last for lifetime

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

talks to me about her romances and almost every thing else.

— BEEN-THERE MOM, ENGLEWOOD, FLA.

DEAR ABBY: I am now 91. You gave that mother the right advice. I wish someone had told my mother the same. She scoffed at my "puppy love," but it has endured — just as Charles Schulz's "Pisces" strip never forgot his "littled-headed girl."

love of my life, and I'll always have special feelings for him — even though it has been years since I last saw him.

Even if the girl doesn't turn out to be her daughter-in-law, these relationships will prepare her son to be the man he will one day become.

— CASSIE IN GRESHAM, ORE.

DEAR ABBY: That mother missed an important teaching moment, an important milestone in her son's life. She should have validated his feelings because children do feel deeply.

When my daughter was in love for the first time at 13, we talked about what love means. It means wanting only the best for the other person. You care about the safety and welfare of that person and always treat him or her with kindness and respect. You would never encourage someone you love to do anything unlawful, dangerous or harmful. And you will know he loves you if he feels this way about you.

I repeated the same litany as she was growing up. My daughter is now 22, and still Eighty years have passed since I fell in love with Margaret Rupprecht back in Dubuque, Iowa. I can still remember her golden hair shining in the sun and her laughter. I only got to kiss her once, but I'll never ever forget her. If she's still living, I hope she sees this and knows I still love her.

— BOB C. ATASCADERO, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: I'd like to address my comment to "Shannon in Houston."

I am confused. What are the most frequent words you say to your child? "I love you," "again and again." You should say you love every day, but as soon as he professes love for someone outside the family, you tell him "he's too young to understand why I love you."

How can that possibly be true, if he has been raised in a loving family?

— JOANN L., TAMPA, FLA.

Investigator gives details of rape-slaying of teen

BAGHDAD, Iraq — American soldiers took turns raping a 14-year-old Iraqi girl and one of them put a bullet through her head after killing her parents and 5-year-old sister, an Army investigator testified Monday.

The attack followed a session of whiskey drinking and card-playing during which five soldiers plotted the March 12 assault, criminal investigator Benjamin Bierce said.

He cited details from a sworn statement by Spc. James P. Barker in which the soldier told how he and his comrades practiced hitting golf balls before heading to the Iraqi teens home 250 yards from their post at a traffic checkpoint.

After the slayings, the soldiers returned to their post, where Barker grilled chicken wings, Bierce testified. The testimony came on the second day of a hearing to determine whether the soldiers should stand trial in the rape-slaying of Abeer Qassim al-Janabi and the killing of her father, Qassim Hamza, and her mother, Fikriya Taiba, and her sister, Hadeel Qassim Hamza, in the town of Mahmoudiyah.

The rape and killings are among the worst in a series of cases of alleged misconduct by U.S. service members that have tarnished the American military.

Barker is accused along with Sgt. Paul E. Carter, Pfc. Jesse V. Spielman and Pfc. Bryan L. Howard of rape and murder. Another soldier, Sgt. Anthony W. Yrbe of Halley, Idaho, is accused of failing to report the attack, but is not alleged to have been a direct participant.

President Bush said he anticipates that Hezbollah and Israel won't agree with all aspects of a Mideast cease-fire resolution but said "we all recognize that the violence must stop."

Lebanese Prime Minister Fuad Sanjara got strong backing from Arab League foreign ministers, who warned the U.N. Security Council against adopting resolutions that don't serve Lebanon's interests. They decided to send a high-level delegation to New York to press Lebanon's case.

Israeli warplanes repeatedly bombed Beirut's southern suburbs and pounded other areas of Lebanon, killing 15 people, Lebanese officials said. In northern Israel, scores of Hezbollah rockets wounded five people, rescue workers said.

An Israeli strike on the southern Beirut suburb of Chiah at sunset killed 10 people, police said.

The blast rocked Beirut within a few hours of the foreign ministers' departure. Lebanese security officials said Israeli naval artillery had fired from ships off the Mediterranean coast, where they also are enforcing a sea blockade.

Seven people were killed when a missile hit a house in Qasrneh on the coast north of Lebanon's port city of Tyre, civil defense official Youssef Khairallah said.

Meanwhile, the Lebanese government unanimously agreed Monday to send 15,000 soldiers to south Lebanon as soon as Israeli troops withdraw. Lebanon also called up reserve soldiers to prepare for possible deployment if a cease-fire agreement is reached.

PHILIPPINES

Ash spews from volcano, prompting mass exodus

MANILA, Philippines — A volcano in the Philippines sent six explosions of ash about a half mile into the air Monday, prompting authorities to warn that an eruption appeared imminent and to evacuate tens of thousands of people.

The Philippine Institute of Volcanology and Seismology raised the alert for the 6,118-foot Mayon volcano to Level 4, the second-highest level. Officials also extended the government's permanent "danger zone" from 4.3 miles to 5 miles on the volcano's southern side. About 35,000 villagers were being evacuated Monday, and an additional 20,000 people will be moved out if there is a major eruption, said Gov. Fernando Gonzalez of Albay province, about 210 miles southeast of Manila on Luzon Island.

Army trucks and government vehicles have been deployed to ferry residents to 34 evacuation centers, officials said.

China orders dogs killed in anti-rabies campaign

DONGLING, China — Xu Kejia's two dogs were her friends and co-workers, keeping her company and guarding her goat and chickens before an anti-rabies squad arrived with orders to kill every dog.

She lost her canine companions and more, she felt compelled to sell the goat for fear it would be stolen without the dogs to guard it. "I was very sad when they said I had no choice but to give them up," said the 41-year-old Xu. "After all, I had developed feelings for them after keeping them for three years."

Authorities in two areas of China have ordered the killings of tens of thousands of dogs in recent weeks following rabies outbreaks, prompting anguish for owners and an outcry by animal lovers.

Others, however, expressed relief at the effort to protect the public in a country with one of the world's highest rates of rabies infection.

"The number of cases in China has soared as newly prosperous families buy dogs as pets. The government says 70 percent of rural households have dogs, but just 3 percent are vaccinated against rabies.

In Dongling, on the outskirts of the city of Jingling in Shandong province, teams of men arrived two weeks ago and beat dogs to death with wooden poles and pitchforks, then trucked away their bodies, villagers said.

The area around Jingling has suffered 16 human deaths from rabies over the past eight months, and authorities ordered all dogs destroyed within three miles of a fatality.

Israel intensifies strikes, killing 33 in Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Israel intensified its strikes on Beirut and southern Lebanon on Monday, killing at least 33 people in one of the heaviest tolls in days. Lebanon's prime minister won strong support from Arab states to plead his case at the United Nations for a full Israeli withdrawal.

Hezbollah guerrillas killed two Israeli soldiers with an anti-tank missile in south Lebanon, a few hours after a third soldier died from sniper fire in the same area, the Israeli army said.
