State asks Supreme Court to keep water running

Claims thousands of farm, industry and community users might have water shut off if district court ruling stands

By Michelle Dunlop
Times-News writer

BOISE — Roughly 55,000 acres of irrigated farmland, along with industries and several municipalities, may have the water turned off unless the Idaho Supreme Court stays a recent water ruling.

On Thursday, the Idaho Department of Water Resources asked the state's highest court to block a district court judge's ruling from taking effect. The ruling voided part of Idaho's water law and put at risk thousands of acres of land irrigated through groundwater pumping. If the lower court's ruling is not stopped, Water Resources Director Karl Dreher will be forced to curtail pumping for possibly thousands of users across southern Idaho.

In June, 5th District Court Judge Barry Wood declared unconstitutional the state's rules of conjunctive management. Water Resources attorney Phillip Rassier, labeled Wood's decision a "watershed ruling" in his filings with the Idaho Supreme Court. As such, Rassier argued, Wood's ruling should not be implemented until the Idaho Supreme Court can review it.

The filing is the latest in a long dispute between surface water users, like canal companies, and groundwater pumpers. Wood's ruling gives weight to Idaho's prior appropriation doctrine. The tenet gives senior right holders — typically surface users — the first right to water when it runs short.

Many Magic Valley canal companies have complained of water shortages for several years. Earlier this month, Wood refused to stay his own ruling. Instead, Wood noted that Dreher seemed "bent" on developing a new set of rules for managing water in the state rather than relying on established law and history.

Should the Idaho Supreme Court follow in Wood's footsteps, Rassier wrote, then Dreher "may have no choice but to order the immediate curtailment of groundwater use by commercial, municipal uses and groundwater irrigation for about 55,000 acres of land."

Military mental health care may leave some troops untreated

By Rebecca Boone
Associated Press writer

BOISE — It's been nearly a year since Idaho National Guard soldiers returned from Iraq, but only about a quarter have had in-depth mental health assessments, meaning many could be suffering from anger, anxiety and other lingering stresses related to spending months in combat.

Department of Defense policy requires that all returning troops be assessed for mental health issues, so that they can be referred to treatment if needed, according to the National Guard Bureau in Washington, D.C.

But for many troops, the assessment is cursory, coming in the form of several broad questions included in a routine medical health questionnaire. Any further mental health assessments are generally voluntary — and that may leave some soldiers undiagnosed and untreated.

West Nile and you

From left: Gooding children Johnny Parkov, 9, Ty Faulkner, 10, Lucas Kermer, 11, Bailey Stevens, 10, Jared Parke, 12, and Casie Bale, 10, of Utah, say they are worried about the West Nile virus but they aren't going to let it keep them from their nightly games of hide-and-seek and freeze tag.

Some people worry, others shrug

Times-News writer

GOODING — Idaho recorded its sixth West Nile-related death Friday, a Minidoka County man, and the number of infected Idahoans more than doubled in the last week to 299, prompting concerned parents and senior citizens to seek advice on how to avoid the illness.

"It's not that the disease is changing or anything," said Tom Machala, a director with South Central District Health.

Seventy-one-year-old Frank Shaske of Gooding, however, is not budging.

"I could sit out here all day," Shaske said Friday as he finished his lunch on a picnic bench. "Mosquitoes just don't like me."

The confident and perhaps courageous attitude held by Shaske was common Friday at the Gooding County Fair as residents generally brushed off the possibility of a serious infection. "It's a big scare thing," said Kenny Anderson, 31, of Gooding.

"Why should I be worried?" Anderson echoed others at the fair who said they were aware of the virus, but were not concerned because the virus targets young children and older people.

Even 12-year-old Jared Parke of Gooding, whose doctor said he had a mild case of the virus but did not prescribe anything and just advised him to rest, said he continues to play outside at night.

"I wasn't hurting," he said. Suzy Stokes, 27, said she does not have a problem spending the day outside, but has had to make several adjustments, including keeping her 2-year-old daughter inside at night, and investing several hundred dollars in vaccines for horses on her seven-acre property.

"I use more bug spray and I'm a lot more aware, but if I get bit on the hand, it's always in the back of my head. 'Oh jeez, am I going to end up getting more sick?'" said Stokes.

County Commissioner Bob Morgado said he hopes to get enough petition signatures far enough to deny him a license based on his refusal to provide his Social Security number. Lewis, who believes the government-issued number is either the biblical "mark of the beast" or a precursor to the mark of the beast, said that using the number would violate his Christian religion.

CSI not ready to talk about Duggan issue

By Eric Larsen
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — One day after College of Southern Idaho assistant to the president and athletic director Jeff Duggan announced he would be leaving the college, the reaction was a subdued "No comment" — with all eyes looking toward Monday.

On Friday, both Duggan and CSI President Dr. Jerry Beck had no comment concerning the details of what is being deemed a personnel issue after Duggan's announcement at a Thursday morning coaches meeting. However, both pointed toward Monday's planned executive and open sessions of the board of trustees as possible outlets for discussion on the matter.

Idahoan loses 'mark of the beast' appeal

By Rebecca Boone

BOISE — A Bonner County man won't be able to get a driver's license unless he provides his Social Security number — even though the requirement burdens his right to exercise his religion — the Idaho Court of Appeals has ruled.

Lawrence Lewis sued the Idaho Department of Transportation, claiming that the department was wrong to deny him a license based on his refusal to provide his Social Security number. Lewis, who believes the government-issued number is either the biblical "mark of the beast" or a precursor to the mark of the beast, said that using the number would violate his Christian religion.

But the appellate court ruled Thursday that a federal law requires that the state collect Lewis' Social Security number before it issues him a driver's license.

"The ruling is very disappointing," said Lewis' lawyer, Herbert

As a society we have stripped our teachers from being anything other than a daycare for our children. They cannot discipline or hold children accountable for their actions less the parents complain, 'not MY child.' I have seen it time and time again, and I honor those who choose to go into this profession knowing full well they will get no respect from either the parents or students.  Titus — of — McLean, Va. "Essentially the court ruled that a federal law that requires the recording of a driver's license, this prevents the state law that is designed to protect religious freedom."

Titus said he had not yet discussed the ruling with Lewis, and so did not know if he would continue to fight the matter in court.

The case began after Lewis tried to renew his driver's license but refused to put his Social Security number on the application, according to court documents. However, Transportation Department workers told Lewis he would have to give his number — unless he had proof he had never been issued one — or he would be denied the license renewal.

Lewis was issued a Social Security number in 1963, according to court documents, but stopped using it and even unsuccessfully tried to have the Social Security Administration revoke the number.

The driver's license debate went before 1st District Judge Steven Verby, who found that though Lewis' religious motivation was sincere, the state had a compelling interest in collecting the Social Security numbers of driver's license applicants in order to comply with federal law.

Part of the federal Welfare Reform Act requires that states collect the numbers from driver's license applicants to make it easier to track down deadbeat parents who are dodging child support payments.

Soldiers

 Dowling said that some national guard soldiers are having trouble coming back into civilian life without being hyper-vigilant — often due to long patrols and uncertainty over "improvised explosive devices" — homemade bombs that are widely used in the anti-U.S. insurgency and sectarian violence. Others are struggling with anger.

Though National Guard officials are encouraging the troops to get treatment now — before combat-related anxiety turns into a long-term disability ty — some soldiers are still worried about the stigma they'll face if they step forward for care.

"It was a completely objective army, it wouldn't matter," said one Idaho National Guard officer who spoke on a condition of anonymity because he worried he would lose credibility as a leader if others knew he was undergoing treatment for post-traumatic stress disorder.

"But in some circles, post traumatic stress symptoms are considered a sign of weakness in an officer. It goes to their strength, their ability to handle all situations, their fitness for being in charge."

In some ways, the Iraq war is the first conflict since Vietnam to put soldiers under extreme, daily stress for long periods, the officer said. Fighting in the first Gulf war was over relatively quick, but soldiers in Iraq spend nearly every day scanning their surroundings for snipers, bombs or people acting suspiciously.

"When I was in Iraq, I was always in danger, even on my own base," the officer said. "If you hold that stress in, it will have a dramatic impact on you and stay with you for the rest of your life."

Soldiers are a typically macho bunch and may be unwilling to admit vulnerability, Dowling said, but Idaho National Guard commanders are trying to change those attitudes.

"We're trying to change the cultural norm here to say it's OK to seek help, but we can't force anybody," she said. "Just the fact that we're doing these assessments shows that."

The Department of Defense says the military is doing more than ever to identify, evaluate, prevent and treat the mental health needs of servicemen and women, including placing mental health teams in combat areas to help soldiers while they are in the field.

Still, said Kane, until in-depth assessments are mandatory for returning soldiers, the suffering may go untreated.

"A lot of people would say it's probably none of my business," said Kane, who retired from leading the Idaho National Guard early last year. "But I would say it's everyone's business because we owe those soldiers a chance to put their lives back together and be a whole person. I just want to make sure we don't have marriages destroyed or worse because someone didn't catch someone who really had a stress problem."

Risch throws support behind Owyhee Initiative

BOISE (AP) — Gov. Jim Risch on Friday threw his support behind a bill to designate more than a half-million acres of Idaho canyonlands as federally protected wilderness, but the Republican, who hopes to succeed him in the governor's office, remained cool to the idea.

The so-called Owyhee Initiative, a compromise package sponsored by U.S. Sen. Mike Crapo, R-Idaho, would preserve 517,000 acres — more than 800 square miles — of yawning river gorges and desert buttes. In return, the plan would release some 200,000 acres previously off limits to all-terrain vehicles and ranchers.

Before a governor's office gathering of American Indian leaders, conservationists, ranchers and ATV enthusiasts, Crapo joined the GOP governor in championing what they called a cooperative model of land management.

They said this compromise method was also instrumental in ushering a similar bill, protecting the Sawtooth Mountains, through the U.S. House last month.

But U.S. Rep. C.L. "Butch" Otter, the Republican nominee for governor, has joined a splinter group of environmentalists in chiding the bills, though for markedly different reasons.

Otter missed a vote on the Sawtooth bill in the House, though he said he would have opposed the measure.

Jerri Brady, Otter's Democratic opponent in the November governor's race, supports both bills.

No natural gas hike expected this winter

BOISE — Intermountain Gas Co. filed this week its annual purchased gas cost adjustment application with the Idaho Public Utilities Commission.

It requests permission to adjust its prices to reflect the prices of natural gas supplies that it expects to incur.

"Despite increases in some other energy prices, like crude oil that has increased 30 percent during the past year, the company expects to be able to manage its natural gas purchases such that it will not need to raise customer prices for this next winter season," said William C. "Bill" Glynn, president of Intermountain Gas.

If approved as filed, all residential and commercial customers' unit prices will be essentially unchanged for natural gas this next year and the company's total net revenue will decrease by about $1.6 million (5 percent).

The proposed effective date is Oct. 1.

The proposal is subject to public review and approval by the IPUC. A copy of the application is available at offices of Intermountain Gas and the IPUC.

Former Hailey man killed in helicopter crash

By Pedro G. Salom
For the Times-News

HAILEY — Quin R. Stone, 42, a former resident of Hailey and graduate of Wood River High School, was killed with three others in a helicopter crash at approximately 5 p.m. Sunday in the Payette National Forest, approximately 18 miles west of the town of Yellow Pine.

Stone, of Emmett, was piloting the helicopter, which also carried three Forest Service employees: Michael Gene Lewis, 37, of Cascade; Lillian M. Patten, 34, of Olympia, Wash., and Monica Lee Zajanc, 27, of Boise.

Stone is the son of Dr. Bryan and Ann Stone, of Emmett, and formerly of Hailey.

According to Payette National Forest spokesman

Boyd Hartwig, Stone was flying the three Forest Service personnel to the Krassel Guard Station, in support of fire suppression activities.

Tim Wahlberg, a spokesman for Evergreen Helicopters, of McMinnville, Ore., Stone's employer, said

Stone had more than 4,500 hours of flight time in helicopters.

"He was a super guy," Wahlberg said. "He was a well-rounded pilot."

The National Transportation Safety Board is investigating the crash.

Buhl board embroiled in brouhaha

Board member McClain tries to end six-year tenure

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

BUILE — After serving for almost six years on the Buhl School Board, Pamela McClain has decided to end her term 10 months early.

She turned in a letter of resignation on July 27.

McClain said board Chairman Ken McDonald pressured her into choosing between the school board or city council, which she has served on since November.

"The working relationship on the board is counterproductive for the board and district," McClain said. "I was told that there was a conflict of interest of my being on both."

During Tuesday's board meeting, McDonald said the district's attorney told him,

"Legally she can serve on both but professionally she should resign from one. McClain was never asked to make a choice."

McDonald went on to say that McClain showed up late to the July meeting because she was on city business.

McClain's husband, David, expressed his anger with the board and asked that if there was a conflict with serving both entities, why wasn't it brought up sooner.

He also wasn't happy with McDonald's comments.

"Where is it in your job description to monitor my wife's whereabouts?" he asked.

As tempers flared, board member Jackie Frey called for the he-said, she-said.

"Enough is enough," she said. "We are here to represent the district, teachers and students. Let Ken and Pam deal with this. This is not positive nor is it productive. Actions like this destroy our credibility."

McClain will have one month to rethink her resignation because it was postponed by the board.

"There are obvious misunderstandings here," said board member Jay Anderson.

Local fire departments seeking applicants

By Kelly Jackson
For the Times-News

HAILEY — Joining the Hailey Fire Department is analogous to signing up for a football team in Chief Michael Chapman's eyes.

"You've got the quarterback on the nozzle, the coach on the sidelines and even the water boy," he said. "There's a place for everyone providing you meet the minimum health requirements."

And, if you are over 18 or will be at least 18 by the end of the three-month training process, there's a place for you.

"There's no maximum age for fire fighting (in Hailey)," he said. "I've worked with 80-year-olds before," Chapman said.

Many area fire departments are in search of new recruits, as they are gearing up for the three-month basic training program for volunteer firefighters, which begins at the end of this month.

"Essentials of Fire Fighting" begins Aug. 31 and provides an introduction to firefighting, basic incident command and hazardous materials.

The course consists of approximately 70 to 80 hours and meets once a week. The class is typically held for approximately four hours every Thursday night and the third Saturday of every month and is generally over just before Thanksgiving, Chapman said.

Participation requires that interested individuals fill out an application with the fire department they want to volunteer at and are sponsored by a department before beginning the course.

Robin Warner, 43, is one of the two female volunteers with the Hailey department and says it is the best experience of her life.

"It's physically demanding and it's mentally challenging," Warner said. "You can go as far as you want to with it. You can become an officer if you show skills and initiative."

Where have all the cowboys gone?

By Renee Wells
For the Times-News

BURLEY — From the littlest cowboy right up through the ranks, horsemanship has always played an important part in county fairs. So it is little wonder fair board members are concerned about this year's number of participants in the 4-H horse program at the Cassia County Fair. It's anyone's guess why the numbers are down this year, but board members have their theories.

"It's hard to keep the attention of these young girls when they start noticing the cowboys," said Wade Zollinger as he watched the 4-H horse show on Monday. "They lose interest to other activities. There are just too many other things for them to do."

Other board members cite other reasons. "I'm certain the price of fuel isn't helping," said Bruce Bowen. "And we've been told that some parents told their children they would have to choose between horse 4-H and Junior Rodeo."

Junior Rodeo is a new feature to the Cassia County Fair this year. On Saturday night, dozens of youngsters competed in radio events for more than four hours. But on Monday, when the horse 4-H show began, the number of participants dropped by about 30.

"You know, unless you have a piece of pasture, keeping a horse is costly," Bowen said. "We're going to talk with other counties and see what they are doing to keep their numbers up."

Others figure the diversity of projects available to youngsters makes a difference. What was once confined to cooking and sewing in the home economics field and market, breeding stock and horses in the animal category is now hundreds of events from rocketry to rats and pocket pets to photography.

Despite the diversity, the children still love the cowboy atmosphere of a county rodeo. Consider the gymkhana held Wednesday afternoon in the rodeo arena. More than 100 youngsters, some as young as 2 years old, participated in little tykes dummy roping, egg race and musical chairs.

"We are doing several things to try to keep the interest in horsemanship up," said Tammy Chatburn, organizer of the fair gymkhana. "There is just a lot of competition for the kids' time."

Horses were not required for the smallest ropers, like Keegan Chatburn, at the Cassia County Fair Gymkhana on Wednesday.

William Edward Roberts

BUHL — William Edward Roberts, 94, of Buhl, died Wednesday, Aug. 16, 2006, at his home in Buhl.

He was born Jan. 12, 1912, in the wooded hills of Crofton, Kentucky. He was the oldest son, and second child of six children of Lawson E. Roberts and Pearl Jane Clark. Growing up he worked on the farm, their main crop was corn and tobacco. They "share-cropped" for several years before coming west to Buhl, Idaho, when he was seventeen. He lived in Buhl for his remaining 78 years.

His first job in Buhl was at the old caseln plant. He worked at various jobs during the Great Depression and was blessed with work when jobs were scarce.

He was working for 15 cents an hour when he got married, sorting potatoes. He sold cars for a few years, and worked at Frozen Foods. During these times, he also had a small farm. He always had cattle and milked cows. He also enjoyed his horses.

He was a member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. He was married and sealed for time and eternity to Golda Hunt in February of 1932 in the Salt Lake City, Utah Temple. They were married for 74 years. They were blessed with seven children: one son and six daughters.

They were also blessed with the presence of another boy in their lives they are proud to call a son, Tommy.

He was as honest as the day is long — his word was his bond.

He never met a stranger. He was generous to a fault and helped many people who were down on their luck. He was never impressed with worldly things. Even though he was on crutches, he irrigated his seven acres and took care of his cattle up until shortly before his death. His spirit was willing, but his flesh was weak.

He is survived by his wife of 74-plus years; a son, William J. Roberts and wife Dawn of St. George, Utah; daughters, Shirley and Larry Hulme and Sharon and Bruce Wegener, all of Buhl; Nancy and Jim Guest of Boise; and Gloria and Rod Weir of Twin Falls. Teen accused of keeping murdered mother in freezer

By Debbie Humes/
Associated Press writer

FARMINGTON, Utah — The Bountiful teenager whose mother was found dead inside a freezer made an initial appearance in 2nd District Court on Friday.

Jeremy Hauck, 18, is charged with first-degree murder in the death of Laura Hauck, who was shot twice in the head and had her throat cut. Her body was found in a chest-style freezer and had to be thawed before a positive identification was made.

Hauck, dressed in a red Davis County jail inmate uniform, was shackled at the wrists and feet and led into the courtroom by sheriff's deputies.

Prosecutors and his court-appointed public defender, Todd Utzinger, both requested that a roll call hearing be scheduled as the next step in the case, allowing time to review the volume of evidence in the case.

A list of items investigators obtained from the Bountiful, Utah, condominium Hauck shared with his mother includes clothing, sections of carpet and dry wall, bedding and cat litter that appeared to be used to "sop up blood," according to the returned search warrant.

Judge Darwin Hansen scheduled the roll call hearing for Sept. 6. He ordered that Hauck would remain in jail on $300,000 bail.

Jeremy Hauck's cousin John Garlock attended Friday's hearing and said it was chilling to see him in court.

"It was very hard to see Jeremy. He's caused a lot of frustration, fear, anger and confusion," Garlock said after the hearing. "We want to know what happened. Why he did this."

Garlock said he hoped that eventually the death of his aunt would be explained through either a trial or a plea deal. He said he didn't care which direction the case moved as long as it had one outcome.

"I just want to know that he's not comfortable and won't be happy for the rest of his life," he said.

The body of Laura Hauck, 51, was found on Aug. 7 after police followed a trail of blood from her bed to a basement

Jeremy Hauck, 18, charged with first-degree murder in the death of his mother, appears in court, Friday in Farmington, Utah. Her body was found stuffed in a freezer after being killed, according to police.

freezer. Police had been asked to check on the family, who had not been seen or heard from since Aug. 4.

Jeremy Hauck was arrested

Aug. 9 at a motel in Missoula, Mont. Hauck and his mother lived in Montana before moving to Utah about two years ago.

Hauck had three guns, several rounds of ammunition and a knife when he was arrested, court papers said.

"We still don't have a motive," Steve Major, Davis County deputy attorney, said after the hearing.

He said Hauck has not been talking to investigators since his arrest.

Major said much of the evidence in the case has been sent to the state crime lab, which accounts for some of the delay in making it available for both sides to review.

Hauck's attorney said after reviewing the evidence in the case, he and his client will make a decision about whether they will request a preliminary hearing on that evidence or waive that right.

"We're going to wait and see what the evidence that the state has gathered would indicate," Utzinger said.

A full review of the evidence also will determine how much time would be needed for a preliminary hearing, he said.

Firefighter, a 'born leader,' dies in national forest

By Ed White/
Associated Press writer

SALT LAKE CITY — A firefighter who died on the Devil's Den blaze in Fishlake National Forest was trapped as shifting winds suddenly fueled a furious wildfire, the Millard County sheriff said Friday.

"It was terrible and fast, and the fire just erupted," Sheriff Robert Dekker said. "They called for the teams to evacuate and all were able to except for him."

Spencer Koyle, 33, died Thursday while fighting a 250-acre wildfire, about 130 miles south of Salt Lake City.

Dekker, who talked to other firefighters after the tragedy, said Koyle "had called in and said he was in trouble."

It was the first death this year of a federal firefighter while battling a blaze, according to the National Interagency Fire Center.

Koyle and others were trying to keep the fire from spreading into Oak City.

"It's sagebrush, piñon pine, some tall grass, rocky. Just difficult for firefighters to be in," the sheriff said.

Fresh out of Fillmore High School, Koyle began fighting fires part-time in 1991. He graduated from Utah State University and worked his way up to fire-operations specialist for the U.S. Bureau of Land Management, supervising 30 firefighters in two federal agencies.

"The satisfaction of protecting homes and looking out for safety of other firefighters — none of us are in this for the money," Ivie said Friday from Richfield.

He described Koyle as "our most experienced firefighter. It's been a shock to our little fire community."

The cause of Koyle's death was not immediately known. An autopsy was planned.

Investigators were traveling to the area Friday to talk to witnesses, said David Carnahan, a Forest Service spokeswoman.

"All I can say is we lost radio contact with him," she said. "The fire was burning in very rugged and steep terrain. Canyons are always a cause for concern."

Firefighters were immediately pulled off the wildfire and the site was temporarily turned over to Utah authorities.

"It was too traumatic," Carnahan said.

Italian priest teaches icon painting in N. Idaho

COTTONWOOD (AP) — A priest from Italy has traveled to northern Idaho to teach students techniques in painting icons at St. Gertrude's Monastery.

Father Gianluca Busi is teaching 10 students this week, his first workshop outside of Italy.

"And my first one in English," he told The Lewiston Tribune. "It has been an adventure."

Busi, 42, said icons are reproductions of how people look in heaven, and that icons aren't supposed to be original renditions. He said that even when originals are painted, earlier depictions must be considered.

"When you copy you must rebuild what is already there," Busi said.

At St. Gertrude's, he painted a portrait of Jesus Christ with a long and thin face.

"The intent of this is different," said Mary Frances, who helped bring Busi to Idaho. "The icon helps you see divinity through humanity."

Busi started learning how to paint icons 11 years ago after his sister bought a book called "How to Paint an Icon." He practiced at his parish residence outside Bologna, Italy, and soon began painting icons for churches throughout the country.

"Time by time I have just grown in these techniques," said Busi.

"It is not someone who is just sort of good," said Frances. "He is a master."

World Potato Congress is coming to Idaho

By Christopher Smith/
Associated Press writer

WILDEIR — Out standing in their field Thursday, leaders of the U.S. potato industry heralded the coming of hundreds of international spud specialists to the World Potato Congress opening next week in the twice-baked capital of carbs.

"It seems like a no-brainer the World Potato Congress will be in Idaho," said John Ganoe, director of the Virginia-based National Potato Research and Education Foundation. The Virginia-based group organized the weeklong symposium and exhibition that will be attended by 800 delegates from 40 countries.

Crows are erecting a warehouse-sized tent in the middle of a perfectly manicured potato plant field about 50 miles west of Boise. The latest in tuber technology will be on display.

Demonstrations will include flights by a homegrown potato Predator, an unmanned remote-controlled aircraft that transmits digital video and aerial photographs of fields to farmers to help spot weed, pest and watering problems.

"For many years, the accepted practice was to rent an airplane and fly over the fields or buy big blocks of satellite imagery, which takes a month to get the data back," said Curt Pengelly of Simplot Agribusiness, the company that designed and built the craft, which looks like a large radio-controlled model airplane. "We've developed this remotely piloted vehicle as a low-cost way to get an instant snapshot back to the crop adviser and grower."

The 40-acre exhibition farm is sponsored by Simplot, the Idaho company that provides approximately half of all the french fries to McDonald's. It's intended to show off the newest potato varieties, harvesting technology and crop treatment methods.

"No pressure, we just had to grow the crop, the world is coming to see," said Tom Basabe, Simplot Land & Livestock president. "With the weather we've had this year, we've had our fingers crossed since May."

Agricultural suppliers such as Dupont, Syngenta and BASF have also been growing test plots since April of new potato varieties and crop treatments, although details of the exhibits are closely guarded.

"There's a fear of espionage," said Mark Bandal, one of the directors of the farm exhibition. "The companies have had guys from other countries who literally put potatoes in their pockets and take them home to study the genetics to try to emulate the varieties, so they will have people from their staffs out there watching the plots."

A coinciding symposium in Boise, opening Monday, will feature economists, scientists and government officials — U.S. Agriculture Secretary Mike Johanns is scheduled to speak Tuesday — headlining panels with titles like "Tuber Moths — An Invasive Pest of Global Proportions" and "Global Forces Pushing Potatoes into the 21st Century."

This is the first time the Congress has been held in the U.S. since its inception in 1993. Idaho officials said the state's selection as the site underscores its importance as the nation's largest potato producer.

Bush defends warrantless wiretap program

CAMP DAVID, Md. (AP) — President Bush said those who agree with a federal judge that his warrantless surveillance program is unconstitutional "simply do not understand the nature of the world in which we live."

"This country of ours is at war," the president said Friday. "And we must give those whose responsibility it is to protect the United States the tools necessary to protect this country in a time of war."

The day before, a federal judge in Michigan struck down the National Security Agency's warrantless wiretapping program, ruling it was an unconstitutional infringement on the right to privacy and free speech. Upon Bush's orders, the Justice Department appealed within hours.

"I strongly disagree with this decision. Strongly disagree," he said of the ruling by U.S. District Judge Anna Diggs Taylor in a case brought by the American Civil Liberties Union.

Bush suggested he sees the issue as a politically potent one in a year when most of Congress is up for re-election, and GOP control of the Capitol is in danger.

"I made my position clear," he said. "It'll be interesting to see what other policymakers — how other policymakers react."

The president, speaking to reporters after meeting with his economic team, also acknowledged it could take time for the people of Lebanon and the world to come to his view of the war between Israel and Hezbollah as a loss for the militant group.

Bush

"The first reaction of course of Hezbollah and its supporters is to declare victory. I guess I would have done the same thing if I were them," Bush said. "Sometimes it takes people awhile to come to the sober realization of what forces create stability and what don't. Hezbollah is a force of instability."

Bush expressed some disappointment with France's decision to offer just 400 soldiers to a U.N. peacekeeping force being developed to calm the situation in southern Lebanon. France was expected to lead the mission, and its announcement of such a small number led to doubts that the force would deploy quickly.

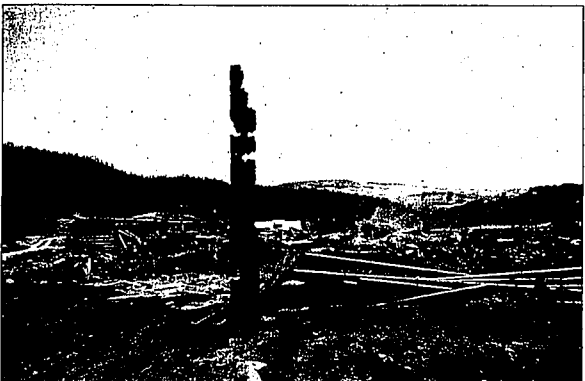

"France has said they will send some troops," the president said tersely. "We hope they send more. And there's been different signals coming out of France. Yesterday they had a statement; today they had a statement."

The United States has said it will not commit ground troops to the United Nations force, as is supposed to augment an equal number of Lebanese troops. Still, Bush said he would work to convince allies to take part.

"We'll work with nations to step up to the plate and do what they voted to do at the United Nations, and that is to provide robust international forces to help the Lebanese army retake the south," he said.

Feds estimate 11 million illegal immigrants in country this year

By Suzanne Gamboa
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — About 11 million illegal immigrants were living in the U.S. at the start of this year, the federal government said in a report Friday.

That's up from an estimated 8.5 million living in the country in January 2000, according to calculations by the Office of Immigration Statistics in the Department of Homeland Security.

The office estimated that 10.5 million illegal immigrants were living in the United States in January 2005, and that the number grew by a national average of 408,000 a year.

Estimates of the size of the illegal immigrant population vary widely according to the

On the Net:
Citizenship and Immigration Services: www.uscis.gov/graphics/shared/statistics/index.htm political leanings of groups using them.

The federal government acknowledged the difficulty of getting an accurate count in its report. "Many estimates involve assumptions and combinations of data."

A Homeland Security spokeswoman could not be reached immediately.

In March, the Pew Hispanic Center used Census Bureau data to estimate that the United States had 11.1 million illegal immigrants in March 2005. The center used monthly population estimates to project a total of 11.5 million to 12 million in March. Mexico is the largest contributing country of illegal immigrants, with nearly 6 million in the U.S. in 2005, the government said. El Salvador, Guatemala, India and China followed with a combined contribution of about 1.4 million unauthorized immigrants.

"The greatest increase in illegal immigrants in the country was among Mexicans, a jump of 260,000 from 2000 to 2005. The greatest percentage increase in the immigrant population in those years was among people from India, 133 percent, and Brazil, 70 percent."

California had the largest illegal immigrant population, with 2.8 million in January 2005, followed by Texas with 1.4 million and Florida with 850,000.

Judge rules cigarette makers deceived smokers

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge says the nation's top cigarette makers conspired for decades to mislead the public about the health hazards and addictive nature of smoking, but she says there's not much she can do to make them pay.

U.S. District Judge Gladys Kessler sided with the government Thursday in its seven-year-old civil racketeering case against the tobacco industry. However, she rejected a bid by the Justice Department to make tobacco companies pay billions of dollars in remedies. Kessler, who presided over a nonjury trial, said she was barred by an appeals court ruling that remedies must be designed to prevent future wrongdoing and not to punish bad behavior. Kessler rejected a government proposal to impose fines on the industry if youth smoking rates fail to drop in the coming years, despite finding that the companies marketed to teens and lied about it.

The judge did order the companies to stop labeling cigarettes as "low tar," "light," "ultra light" or "mild," saying they have used those terms to mislead consumers.

"They distorted the truth about low tar and light cigarettes so as to discourage smokers from quitting," Kessler said. "They suppressed research. They destroyed documents. They manipulated the use of nicotine so as to increase and perpetuate addiction," Kessler wrote in the ruling, which often referenced internal industry memos.

The government had asked the judge to make the companies pay $10 billion for smoking cessation programs, though the Justice Department's own expert said $130 billion was needed.

Attorney says Patsy Ramsey was asked to meet JonBenet suspect

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Authorities asked Patsy Ramsey in late May — a month before she died of cancer — whether she would be willing to meet with the man who claims he killed her 6-year-old daughter, the Ramsey family's attorney said Friday.

Ramsey said she would meet with John Mark Karr if it would advance the investigation into JonBenet Ramsey's Christmas-time 1996 slaying, but the meeting never took place because authorities did not get back to her before she died in June, attorney Lin Wood said.

The attorney also said the written correspondence Karr sent to Patsy Ramsey either in the form of e-mails or letters was never received by her because it was routed to someone else. He said police or someone else set up an address for the correspondence to be sent to make it look like he was writing to Ramsey. It was turned over to the police instead.

"He thought that he was corresponding with Patsy, but he wasn't," Wood told The Associated Press.

A spokesman for the Roswell, Ga., Police Department, which helped to identify and locate Karr, declined to say Friday whether his agency conducted the correspondence ruse.

"We're not commenting on any part of the investigation," Sgt. James McGehee said.

Teacher helps student-athletes develop character

CHEERS to Sharon K. Stoll, a professor of physical education at the University of Idaho, and director of U of I's Center for Ethical Theory and Honor in Competition and Sport.

As reported in the Aug. 4 edition of The Chronicle of Higher Education, Stoll has taken the lead in educating college student-athletes on the rules of ethical behavior. Stoll has studied moral reasoning abilities in sports for two decades, and has documented lower skills among those students. The teams that scored lowest on the morality scale? Lacrosse, ice hockey and football. The highest? Golf and tennis. But generally, Stoll says student-athletes show much lower moral reasoning skills than general students.

Stoll has developed a curriculum — "Winning with Character" — to help student-athletes become aware of flaws in athletic department and team policies. Her ideas have attracted interest from some of the NCAA's biggest players, including Arizona State University, Iowa State University, University of Alabama, University of Georgia, University of Maryland and Virginia Tech.

A former athlete and high-school coach herself, Stoll, 59, preaches ethics on the field, and off, and discusses hard-hitting issues with teams. Including guns, gangs, drugs, date rape, and responsible citizenship.

JEERS to Democratic congressional candidate Jim Hansen, for pinning too much blame where it doesn't belong.

Hansen is opposing Rep. Mike Simpson, R-Idaho, for the 2nd congressional district seat. Much of that race has focused on Simpson's Boulder-White Cloud wilderness bill, which has mixed support among Republicans and Democrats.

Most of Hansen Democratic colleagues (1st-district candidate Larry Grant, former Gov. Cecil Andrus, governor candidate Jerry Brady) applaud Simpson's bill and his efforts. GOP Congressman Butch Otter and the man running to replace him, Republican Bill Sall, both oppose Simpson's bill — and Hansen does as well.

But Hansen's rationale has apparently led him into his own willaenness.

"Honest" people disagree: Democrats disagree with each other on all kinds of things," Hansen said.

"I think they were right that Otter should have been in on this from the beginning. Fault lies with Simpson — significant fault — that he didn't bring Otter into the process."

When, then, had he? What exactly makes you think Otter wanted to get involved? Simpson took, a huge risk even taking this issue on after it had fallen apart on former Sen. James McClure and Gov. Andrus in previous attempts. Simpson kept Otter and the two Idaho senators enlightened on the bill's progress. But it's a stretch to say Otter was ready to do some heavy lifting.

CHEERS to McKean Motorsports, for lending a competitor a winning car at the Magic Valley Speedway.

While sports has its bench full of cheating athletes from Major League Baseball to the Tour de France, it's good to see sportsmanship reign in some venues. Such was the case last Saturday at MVS when the McKean team turned over an extra car to the Bobby Latham driving team.

Latham's own car had valve and piston problems, but McKean Motorsports rented the No. 19 car to Latham's team. After putting their own tires on the McKean car, and applying some white duct tape to the number, Latham practiced a run and then spun away to victory in the Pepsi Premier division for his third win of the year.

JEERS to Robert Hoover, president of Albertson College of Idaho, for some extra enthusiasm for his own school.

Hoover has lately made a new life for himself as president of Albertson, a private college in Caldwell, since his exit as president of University of Idaho in 2003. Hoover left Moscow in the aftermath of the University Place scandal that saw a $139 million, three-building behemoth break down under a lack of accountability and oversight.

So when Hoover chimed in last week in a Times-News Reader Comment, to boost of Albertson's ability to attract freshmen and keep low teacher-student classroom ratios, the shadows of the past were too hard to ignore.

In pointing out U of I's larger classroom sizes for undergraduates in particular, one can't help but ask whether some of those understaffing issues exist due to the University Place aftermath.

Perhaps Hoover can be more muted in his enthusiasm for Albertson's success until his old university makes a full recovery.

CHEERS to Danny Marona, the Idaho piano man who has crooned his way in to Magic Valley's heart.

This weekend marks the end of Marona's music career, which has spanned numerous states for decades. He has been a regular at Cactus Pete's in Jackpot since 1994, but it was in Twin Falls that he found home. In 22 years at the Cactus Pete's gala Showroom, and in numerous charity functions for local organizations, Marona has delivered the right note.

Check out area senior centers

I am not a senior yet, but I eat at the Rupert Senior Center several times a week and I volunteer there regularly. I have been impressed by the professional way things are handled in what can be a very thankless job!

The site manager is a very fun-loving woman who keeps things going with humor. It can be a very stressful job trying to run things on a very tight budget with ever-increasing costs of rent, power and food. It also takes a special person who can keep up with all the government regulations and red tape that goes with the job, but she manages quite well.

The secretary is young, but she is very efficient and she handles all the tasks she is given quickly and I think she brings a new perspective to the center that was missing before.

I have family that comes in regularly from Boise, Denver and California, and they say they are impressed with the management of the center and also of the variety and amounts of food served daily. Pretty impressive. I'd say.

Do yourselves a favor, readers, and check out your senior centers. They exist to help all seniors and non-seniors alike, and you have a really good one right there in your area.

Keep up the good work, senior centers. We appreciate all that you do!

If any of you have a praise or complaint, please take it to one of the advisory and/or board members. They welcome your input.

Wendell police have been improving

Past, present, future? I would like to point out a few simple facts about the Wendell Police Department. First of all, I would like the people of Wendell to think back a few years. Remember when the police department had old cars that were always breaking down? However, they did have patrol cars, but they were not reliable. If you look at what the police department has now as opposed to what they settled for.

Just in the past year, I have witnessed the Wendell Police Department change 180 degrees from years past. The police department now has dependable patrol cars as well as better equipment. It now has officers with experience, and they are also getting more and more training that may not have been available in the past.

My point of writing this letter is to point out to the people of Wendell that maybe our acting chief of police "is not doing such a bad job." In my eyes, I don't believe that anyone can or will ever have enough training while working with public services. I do know for a fact that if you do not have faith in your equipment, it is very hard to do your job and do your job well.

How do you think our police department is going to be in another year?

Schools must change how they water lawns

Cheers to the editors on your comments about the school district ignoring good watering practices. They seem to have the attitude that they are above the rest of the community and can do as they please, run their own elections, water as often and as long as they wish.

As for the overtime problem, there is a very simple solution. Put those who do the manual watering on a different shift or even split shifts that would correspond to the watering hours. It would only be necessary during the watering season.

It is time for the school district to become part of the community.

NANCY LANCASTER

Come wait with me at the airport

Three years ago, officials at Dulles Airport conducted a little experiment to improve security on international flights. They wanted most passengers to spend less time in line at checkpoints.

Today, of course, this idea sounds terribly dangerous. Who can afford to worry about passengers' convenience? Let them wait for hours. Take away those Evians of mass destruction. Now even reading material is suspect — why would anyone on a six-hour flight need a book anyway? Stop making trouble and watch the movie!

The Dulles experiment was radical even in 2003, when airport screeners thought nothing of making passengers wait while they searched Grandpa's purse for nail scissors. But a few experts wondered if there was a better use of everyone's time.

The screeners at Dulles stopped worrying about pen knives and shoes and laptops, allowing passengers to pass through more quickly. The speed of the line increased by nearly a third. The screening process required fewer workers, but they detected more problems because they worked smarter.

Instead of looking for things, they looked at people. Borrowing techniques from Israeli airports and the U.S. Customs Service, screeners observed a passenger as he entered the airport, checked luggage and stood in line at the security checkpoint.

The screeners were looking for unusual behavior like sweating, rigid posture, clenched fists. A screener would engage a passenger in conversation and ask questions he wouldn't have been trained to expect, like whether he'd seen a Redskins game the night before even though the Redskins hadn't played.

The screeners were looking for telltale body language of someone trying too hard to act natural. When they spotted it, they singled out that person for interrogation, a pat-down and a luggage search. The screeners caught no terrorists, but they consistently found people with something to hide, often a forged visa, a stolen airline ticket, drugs or other smuggled goods.

Scott McHugh, who oversaw the Dulles program for the Transportation Security Administration, is confident this type of screening would have flagged the Sept. 11 terrorists or the latest plotters in London. "If you look at the videos of 9/11 terrorists and the interviews with people who talked to them," he says, "they all exhibit symptoms of stress that would have been identified, like failure to make eye contact and failure to answer questions directly. They're not exactly sophisticated. They're under so much stress that anything out of the ordinary really throws them off their game."

McHugh, though, doesn't hold much hope for the current system. He's now in the private security industry after leaving the TSA in frustration at its inertia. Although the agency has been introducing the innovations from the Dulles program at other airports, it still spends most of its time and money looking for things. "Airport security isn't much better than it was on September 10," McHugh says. "Terrorists will always come up with something new. As long as we keep looking for things from the last plot, we're inconveniencing 99.99 percent of the people with no real benefit."

It's not that the TSA's leaders don't see the problem. Kip Hawley, who took over the agency last year, is a smart manager who has been trying to change the agency's focus. He's removed small scissors from the taboo list, and he's complained about all the time spent by screeners seizing cigarette lighters to comply with an order from Congress.

But he's making little headway because he has inherited an unworkable mess created by Congress after Sept. 11. It ignored the security model in Israel and much of Europe, where screening programs are run by airports under the guidance of a national agency. Instead, Congress ordered the TSA to both supervise and run the screening programs itself.

The result has been a waste of billions of dollars on an unwieldy federal agency that's become known as Thousands Standing Around. The TSA should be trying to anticipate new terrorist tactics, like the bomb plot uncovered in England, but it had to raid its research budget to pay for the screening program, as Eric Lipton and Matt Wald reported in the Times.

It should be looking for new ways to identify dangerous passengers, but it's too busy following Congress' mandates to search everyone's bags. Now screeners have even more stuff to look for as we all stand in line — well, almost all of us. Anyone serious about blowing up an airplane is off somewhere else working on something new.

Incentives can help teach students that education pays off

Why do we eliminate incentives from our public education system? We all agree that educating our children is important, but we fail to use the most proven performance-enhancement tool of the marketplace — cold, hard cash.

Incentives matter in life. How many of us would put forth our best if we never got a tangible reward? Instead of expecting our children to want to study for the payoff for a good education, we should deliver one sooner. Cash awards reinforce the link between learning now and earning more later.

I'm a partner in a law firm that tried a modest experiment in 2004 at Sierra Intermediate School in Santa Ana, Calif., which educates the very poorest students in one of the richest counties in the nation. Eighty-five percent of the children at Sierra Intermediate qualify for free lunches. The typical student is present for only two-thirds of the school year. These children, more than most, need incentives to stay the course and get educated.

In our experiment, we reinforced the importance of striving for excellence with cash prizes for eighth-graders who earned a B or better on the modest first-year budget of $2,500. Of that, $700 went for a first-class study guide for each student, and the remaining $1,800 went toward prizes, based on students' scores on a special test. First place earned $250; second, $225; third, $200, and so on to 15th place, which earned $25.

We designed the test to produce a bell curve, trying to avoid ties. The school administered the program and formed a public-private partnership with us. We awarded 17 prizes (despite the bell curve, there was a tie for 15th place). And when it came time for the state's standardized algebra exam, our eighth-graders were better than the results of Sierra Intermediate's previous eighth-graders — the number who scored "advanced" or "proficient" increased from 13 to 31 in one year.

Our prize structure reflected the reality of our global economy, with the better educated receiving an ever-greater share of the pie. When I graduated from high school in 1978, college graduates could expect to earn only 19 percent more in their lifetime than high school graduates. Now, college graduates earn 73 percent more, and that figure is rising.

On awards night, there was an aura of excitement in the hot, packed room. Parents began cooing and aaahing as the prize level rose. The winners were understandably proud, without showboating. One thank-you letter was especially touching: "I won $140, and I'm very thankful for it. I really needed the money because my family was having some economic problems."

(Of course, money motivates in different ways: After one of our pitches for the program, one young man's hand had shot up quickly. "Does the money go to us or our parents?" he asked sharply. "To you" was the reply — which was just what he wanted to hear.)

For those of us involved in the program, the promise inherent in every child was inspiring. Last year, we expanded the incentives. With the help of a kindhearted client, we added a program in U.S. history for about 340 Sierra Intermediate students and repeated the algebra competition.

One of the firm met with the kids and talked about the types of jobs that education could deliver. Several of the students were amazed to learn there were jobs that would pay you when you were sick: Others were surprised that they could get vacation for three weeks of paid for a year.

It's true that our incentives go only to top-performing students. But that's where they are needed most. Last year, the top winner out of about 90 students correctly answered 48 of 53 questions on what was a difficult algebra exam. That boy should be encouraged to stay on track and to keep on trying, to not quit at 16 to help support his family. Merit can take him far, and it would be a waste if low expectations — whether his or society's — got in the way.

Let's keep the competition, and the incentives going. Time will tell whether this approach bears fruit, but the worst that has happened is that dozens of kids got a pat on the head, and some real money. As the girl who won $140 wrote: "I think this type of stuff encourages us to do our best."

Mass funerals held in southern Lebanon

Lebanese army takes control of villages from Israelis

QANA, Lebanon (AP) — The breeze blew fine dust across graves where 29 people killed in an Israeli airstrike — half of them children — were buried, as the ground was opened for funerals in south Lebanon on Friday, the Muslim holy day.

Women in black robes, their heads hidden by black scarves, held pictures of the dead and threw rice and rose petals on the plywood caskets in the village of Qana, struck during the 34-day Israel-Hezbollah war. Twenty-six coffins were draped in the Lebanese flag and three in the yellow Hezbollah flag.

To the east, the Lebanese army symbolically took control of a first border village from withdrawing Israeli forces, as two soldiers drove slowly through Kfar Kila in a

Jordan posts ambassador in Iraq

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Jordan has become the first Arab state to send a fully accredited ambassador to Iraq, a major display of political support for the U.S.-backed government in the face of past kidnapping-slayings of Muslim diplomats.

The United States has long urged Iraq's Arab neighbors to upgrade diplomatic relations to the ambassadorial level, rather than maintain missions headed by lesser-ranking diplomats, as an affirmation of support.

But the Arabs had been stalling due to violence and concern over the Shiite-led government's dealings with the Sunni minority, which forms the foundation of Iraq's insurgency, and the government's ties to Shiite-dominated Iran.

The Higher Relief Council, the government agency that deals with disasters, said Friday that the Lebanese government and U.N. agencies were undertaking assessments countrywide. While the government was still absent from the reconstruction effort, there were other offers of private help besides Hezbollah's direct payments.

Qana, about six miles southeast of the port city of Tyre, held the most elaborate of several funerals in southern Lebanon on Friday after residents decided it was finally safe and hospital morgues made sure all bodies could be claimed. A caravan of cars made its way from one service to the next.

Germans seek suspects in failed train bombing

Los Angeles Times

BERLIN — German authorities announced Friday that they are searching for suspects in a failed terrorist plot involving propane bombs concealed in suitcases that were timed to explode simultaneously on two regional trains in western Germany.

"We are now working on the basis that this was the work of a terrorist group ... and was an attempt to kill a large number of people," federal prosecutor Rainer Griesbaum said during a news conference in Wiesbaden.

The bombs were constructed of propane tanks, gasoline bottles, ignition switches and timers. They were hidden in two suitcases and loaded onto trains leaving Cologne and bound for Koblenz and Dortmund on July 31. They were set to explode 10 minutes before reaching their destinations.

Joerg Zierck, president of the Federal Criminal Police, said the plan failed because "the bomb builders made technical mistakes."

Surveillance video shows the two suspects in the Cologne train station.

Swiss high court rejects Gypsy Holocaust suit against IBM

GENEVA (AP) — Switzerland's supreme court dismissed a lawsuit accusing International Business Machines Corp. of aiding the Nazi Holocaust because too much time has elapsed, the Gypsy organization that filed the case said Friday.

International Recognition and Compensation Action said it had been given notice of the decision by the Federal Tribunal in Lausanne that the statute of limitations applied to the case. It said the court's explanation would be released in several weeks.

The organization said the ruling ends the legal case before any study of the merits of the case.

"However, it will certainly not silence the voices of those victims of criminals against humanity who have decided to sue the companies which provided logistical support for their crimes," the group said.

IBM spokesman Joe Hanley said, "As we have consistently maintained, the case should not go forward. We are grateful that the Swiss federal tribunal agrees."

The Gypsies' lawyer Henri-Philippe Sambuc said in a phone interview that he wants to read the court's decision before recommending how to proceed. However, the group may consider a new action in Geneva based on foreign law.

The lawsuit was filed after U.S. author Edwin Black — in his 2001 book "IBM and the Holocaust" — said IBM's punch-card machines were used to codify information about people sent to concentration camps.

Man sets consecutive days skiing record

By Todd Johnston
Associated Press writer

Rainer Hertrich loves what he does so much that he hasn't taken a day off since Nov. 1, 2003.

No sick days. No vacation days. He doesn't need them.

After all, Hertrich is not stuck in an office or making sales calls. He's "crisscrossing down another ski slope to keep his world-record streak alive."

Hertrich reached the milestone of 1,000 consecutive days of skiing when he barreled down Oregon's Timberline Ski area on July 27. Though he surpassed the next-longest streak long ago and already holds a place in the Guinness Book of World Records, there's no sign the ultimate ski bum plans to stop.

"To me, it's flat-out fun," said Hertrich, a 45-year-old telemark skier. "I don't know of any other sport where you can go that fast on your feet."

The previous record was held by the British skier Arnie Wilson, who skied 365 consecutive days in 1994. Hertrich surpassed Wilson's mark in 2004, and kept going.

Hertrich follows winter by traveling from Oregon and Colorado to Chile and Argentina, zigzagging the Americas to ski year-round. When it's winter in the U.S., he'll be here. And when summer comes, he ventures to the Andes for South America's winter.

It's there he finds the right conditions for the other world record Hertrich set in his marathon: vertical feet skied.

He has already skied 34 million vertical feet. To put that into perspective, on an average day he skis 33,000 vertical feet. That is higher than Mount Everest.

"I'm going to South America for the adventure and keeping up the vertical feet," he said. "The adventure part is really my reward to myself."

In a telephone interview from Oregon, Hertrich sounds like a man of few worries. He is not married and has no children. There is no one to question his freewheeling ways.

Hertrich lives and breathes the cold environment. His day-to-day job as a snow groomer, maintaining and maintaining the very slopes that he skis, suits his passion perfectly. In the winter months, he works on Colorado's Copper Mountain and in the summer he helps maintain Mount Hood in Oregon during the race camp season.

Skier Rainer Hertrich stands on the slopes of Mount Hood above Timberline Lodge near Government Camp, Ore., Wednesday.

Mail-in voting resolution OK'd by Idaho county clerks

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — The Idaho Association of County Recorders and Clerks has approved a resolution to support a bill that would give counties the option to vote by mail.

"They presented the resolution and there was a lot of discussion there, none of it negative that I'm aware of," Dan English, Kootenai County clerk, told the Coeur d'Alene Press.

He said the Legislature still has to approve the bill, and that it's too early in the process for the bill to have a sponsor. "I know the Legislature will be somewhat wary because it's quite a change," English said. "But what really motivated me was the phone calls and e-mails I got from regular people who said it was a good idea."

Under the resolution, each city council would decide whether mail-in voting should be used. Counties would make that decision in areas where cities contract with counties for elections.

The association approved the resolution earlier this week, joining the Idaho Association of Commissioners and Clerks, which passed a similar resolution in June.

If mail-in voting is approved, English said traditional voting would still be available but there would be fewer polling places in each precinct.

N. Idaho school district to start random drug tests

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — The Lakeland School District in northern Idaho plans to start random drug tests of students in grades seven through 12 who take part in school-sponsored activities.

"We'll be starting the process with the opening of school in the fall," Ron Schmidt, assistant superintendent for the district, told The Associated Press Friday.

The policy is being instituted following an unanimous vote by the district's five-member board of trustees on Monday.

Under the policy, students who choose to participate in extracurricular activities — such as sports, drama, and band — are required to sign a consent form to be tested. Those who don't sign the form will not be allowed to take part in the activities.

Schmidt said the policy applies to two junior high schools and three high schools, including one alternative high school.

Broncos crisp in fall camp's final open scrimmage

By Destin Lapray
Times-News Correspondent

BOISE — It wasn't anything spectacular. But it was clean and it got the fans out of their seats.

Fans got their glimpse of the Boise State football squad during fall camp with Friday night's second fall scrimmage. The Broncos scrimmage next Friday as well, but that is closed to the public and the media.

BSU head coach Chris Petersen held out a handful of his starters Friday, to get them rest and keep them healthy.

"This is the last time that some of the young guys are really going to get a chance to play (in front of any people at least) so we wanted to give those guys a good shot," Petersen said.

In all, the team only scored 17 points, but put together some long drives and featured a much-improved game by senior starter Jared Zabransky.

Zabransky scored one of the Broncos' two touchdowns on a 1-yard sneak. He rushed for 45 yards on eight carries in the scrimmage.

"(Zabransky) has been doing a great job in camp," Petersen said. "He's a weapon. He's got to be one of the faster QB's in the country in terms of his foot speed. If he can continue to make good, smart decisions, with that foot speed, we'll be in good shape."

Zabransky also went 7-of-14 through the air for 95 yards in his limited action.

"I think he's being smart," Petersen said. "He has to be two things: an accurate thrower and a good decision maker. He's been working on that for a year solid and you can see his decisions are getting better. He's not going to be perfect, nobody is, but as long as we're making progress and getting better, we're happy with that."

Zabransky was perhaps shown up again by backups Bush Hamdan (3-for-3, 100 yards) and Nick Lomax (6-for-7, 91 yards, touchdown).

Zabransky has a bad habit of tucking the ball after his first read on the defense and running downfield. But he is making better decisions. Rather than risking a loss or throwing a bad pass, like he may have done in the past, the senior has learned to throw the ball out of bounds when needed.

"He still likes to think he's Brett Favre on occasion and fire that ball in there," Petersen said. "He's doing a good job, being a smart QB, knowing when to run and when to throw it out of bounds and when to take a shot in there."

Lomax threw the game's only touchdown pass, a 25-yard drifter, which floated into the open arms of freshman receiver Aiona Key.

"I struggled a couple of days in practice," Key (6-4, 194) said. "Then I came out on top and showed up at the scrimmage. That was a good thing."

Key was the highlight and the standout in the scrimmage, hauling in five catches for 108 yards.

"Aiona is a phenomenal athlete," Petersen said. "He really is. We're trying to figure out a way to get him on the field, we put him in on defense there at the end, too. We're trying to make him a special-team phenom. We're really trying to figure out how to get him on the field; he does make plays."

Key is part of a very deep receiving corps and probably won't get a starting spot, but he really wants a spot, any spot.

"If you ask any player: it would mean a lot (to start for BSU)," Key said. "Everybody on the team is really good, so if you can beat out another guy, that means you are really, really good."

Legedu N'Nanece, Drisan James, Jerard Rabb and Jeremy Childs are all on the depth chart ahead of Key. Friday may have been his best opportunity to catch the limelight. But Petersen will find a role for him, whether he plays safety or special teams, the man will take the field.

During the scrimmage, the Broncos worked on the backed-up offense and backed-up defense packages, designed to teach the team what it

Buckeyes at top of first poll

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — When Troy Smith, Ted Ginn Jr. and the rest of Ohio State's blazing Buckeyes were last seen on a big stage, they were whizzing around Sun Devil Stadium at warp speed.

That 34-20 victory over Notre Dame in the Fiesta Bowl made a lasting impression.

For the first time since 1998, Ohio State is preseason No. 1 in The Associated Press Top 25.

"Around here, whether you're high in the polls or not, the expectations are still the same," Ohio State coach Jim Tressel said by telephone.

The Buckeyes received 35 of a possible 65 first-place votes from a panel of media members in the poll released Friday. Notre Dame was No. 2, the best preseason showing for the Fighting Irish since they were second in 1994.

Texas will start the defense of its national title as the No. 3 team in the country. Auburn was fourth and West Virginia fifth.

Southern California, preseason No. 1 the past two years, was No. 6. Florida, LSU, California and Oklahoma rounded out the top 10.

No. 11 Florida State and No. 12 Miami will renew their rivalry on Labor Day in the Orange Bowl.

No. 13 was Louisville, followed by Michigan, Georgia, Iowa, Virginia Tech, Clemson, Penn State and Nebraska.

The final five were Oregon, TCU, Tennessee, Arizona State and Texas Tech.

Unlike the past two seasons, when USC started the season as an overwhelming No. 1, the Buckeyes received 54 percent of the first-place votes, and all the teams in the top six received at least three votes for No. 1. Notre

A logjam at the PGA Championship

Billy Andrade reacts to saving par on the 14th hole during the second round of the PGA Championship golf tournament at Medinah Country Club, Friday in Medinah, Ill.

Andrade, three others tied at 8-under par

The Associated Press

MEDINAH, Ill. — Billy Andrade was at the movies in Atlanta three days ago, the seventh alternate in the PGA Championship. Now he's in a four-way tie for the lead and starting to believe in fairy tales.

But this Hollywood script hasn't even begun to take shape at Medinah.

Andrade made a 30-foot birdie putt on the 18th hole for a 3-under 69, grabbing a share of the lead with big-hitting Henrik Stenson of Sweden, short-hitting Luke Donald of England and super-sized Tim Herron going into what should be a wild weekend.

They were at 8-under 136, all of them in the lead for the first time in a major.

And their task got a little bit tougher in the final hour of a dark, gloomy afternoon outside Chicago.

Tiger Woods, scrambling for pars early before taking advantage of the par 5, finished off his round of 68 with a 20-foot birdie putt that left him one shot behind, along with U.S. Open champion Geoff Ogilvy and the resurgent Davis Love III.

"It's always interesting to see where Tiger is," Herron said. "He wasn't on the board most of the day. He must have done something on the last few holes."

Phil Mickelson was all over Medinah, but escaped the rough on No. 18 with an approach that barely cleared a bunker and hopped onto the green to 15 feet for a birdie that gave him a 71 and put him at 4-under 140.

Andrade might be the most relaxed of the bunch, since he didn't even expect to be here and has never fared well in the majors. The last time he made the cut in a major was the 2003 PGA Championship at Oak Hill — as the seventh alternate, no less. And if he wasn't at Medinah,

Not everything has been so lovely for Love at PGA

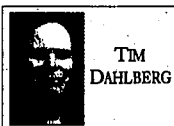

MEDINAH, Ill. — Davis Love III has always felt like he has more at stake in golf than most of his fellow competitors.

"They merely play the game. He protects it."

When a fan yells instead of politely clapping, Love is there to make sure he's removed. If a photographer clicks a shutter at the wrong moment, he's on top of it.

And don't let a writer ask a question that might impugn the integrity of the game, as one tried to do Friday when he dared ask Love what he thought about Greg Norman calling for players to be tested for drugs.

"I don't want to answer

anything Greg says," Love said, walking off in a huff.

No wonder Love is having so much trouble making the Ryder Cup team.

He's too busy making sure everyone behaves — and believes — the way he wants them to.

"I think I stand up for the things that Tom Kite or Ben Crenshaw or Byron Nelson stand up for, and sometimes that gets you in trouble," Love said. "I stand up for the things that my mom taught me and what I learned since I was a little kid in Sunday school, and sometimes people don't like that these days."

Sometimes they don't.

A lot of them didn't care much for Love threatening not to play anymore in the final of the Match Play Championship against Tiger Woods two years ago until a man who yelled "No Love" was removed from the course.

And fans might have liked to see Love celebrate the putt that clinched the Presidents Cup in 2000 instead of going after a photographer who apparently clicked his shutter at the wrong time.

Apparently everyone was on their best behavior Friday at the PGA Championship because Love managed to shoot a 68 to stay near the top of the leaderboard in the only major championship he has ever won.

Or maybe the rowdier ones were simply out following Tiger Woods and Phil Mickelson around Medinah Country Club.

Either way, Love was so free of outside worries that he managed to do something he's rarely done recently — get himself in contention for a weekend that matters as much to him as making sure everyone takes off their hat to shake hands after a round.

His 69 followed a 68 a day earlier that was one bad club away from being a whole lot lower. If Love hadn't made triple bogey by hitting the wrong club on No. 17 in the opening round and then whiffed the resulting chip shot, he would be the sole leader of this PGA.

"I'm excited about the challenge," Love said. "I've made a lot of birdies, and I know they're out there, and I've seen a lot of good shots."

Love has been this excited before, only to go home even more disappointed.

Last year at this same tournament he went into the final round with the lead only to shoot a 74 to finish tied for

Cardinals hit six homers in romp

CHICAGO (AP) — Preston Wilson was a smash in his first game with St. Louis, hitting one of the Cardinals' six home runs in an 11-3 romp over the Chicago Cubs on Friday.

The NL Central-leading Cardinals lost leadoff man David Eckstein, however, with a strained muscle in his left side. The All-Star shortstop was hurt when he slid into Cubs catcher Michael Barrett in the third inning.

Both teams were warned by plate umpire Ed Hickox after Cubs rookie Carlos Marmol (5-6) hit Scott Rolen with a pitch in the third inning. Marmol made two throwing errors in the inning.

Wilson went 2-for-5 and stole a base. He and Gary Bennett hit solo home runs in the sixth off Roberto Novoa that gave the Cardinals a 6-3 lead.

Rolen, Albert Pujols, Chris Duncan and Ronnie Belliard also homered for the Cardinals.

St. Louis Cardinals first baseman Albert Pujols tosses his bat after hitting a two-run home run against the Chicago Cubs in the seventh inning of a baseball game Friday in Chicago.

Nationals 6, Phillies 4

PHILADELPHIA — Alfonso Soriano hit a leadoff homer and Ryan Zimmerman went deep and drove in a career-best five runs for the Nationals.

Soriano became the third player in major league history to have at least four seasons of 30 homers and 30 stolen bases, and Tony Armas Jr. pitched 5 1-3 effective innings for Washington.

Soriano, who was 4-for-6, led off the game with his 39th homer and stole his 30th base in the second inning. Only Bobby and Barry Bonds have reached those numbers five times.

Mike Lieberthal homered and had three RBIs for the Phillies. Brett Myers (8-6) was terrible for the fourth straight start, lasting just 3 1-3 innings.

Mets 6, Rockies 3

NEW YORK — David Wright broke out of a slump with a pair of run-scoring hits and Steve Trachsel won his fourth straight start for the Mets.

Endy Chavez hit a two-run homer and Trachsel (12-5) worked seven innings, matching his longest outing of the season. He allowed seven hits, struck out six and walked three.

Billy Wagner pitched the ninth for his 29th save in 34 chances.

Pirates 7, Reds 3

CINCINNATI — Xavier Nady hit his first homer for Pittsburgh, a three-run homer that led Ian Snell and the Pirates to the win.

The last-place Pirates sent Cincinnati to its third loss in four games.

Nady tied his career high with four hits. He also did it Aug. 4, four days after the New York Mets added him to the Pirates for Oliver Perez and Roberto Hernandez.

Braves 6, Marlins 1

MIAMI — Tim Hudson pitched 7 2-3 innings for Atlanta, departing after an injury to plate umpire Jerry Layne caused a 13-minute delay.

Layne was hurt in the eighth inning when the barrel of a shattered bat hit him in the side of the head. He was moving his arms and talking before being taken off the field on a stretcher loaded onto a cart.

Hudson (10-10) threw 96 pitches.

allowing one run and four hits.

Brewers 3, Astros 2

MILWAUKEE — Prince Fielder singled home the winning run in the ninth inning to lift the Brewers over the Astros.

Bred Lidge (9-4) hit Mike Rivera with a pitch to start the Brewers' ninth. Jeff Cirillo then bunted right back to Lidge, but the ball scooted under the reliever's glove. Cirillo reached on the fielding error and Rivera took second. Corey Hart's fielder's choice moved Rivera to third before Lidge struck out Tony Graffanino.

American League

Yankees 12, Red Sox 4

BOSTON — Johnny Damon tripled into the Fenway Park triangle to start a rare five-game series, and later homered and drove in four runs to lead the New York Yankees over the Boston Red Sox 12-4 Friday in the opener of a day-night doubleheader.

A day after losing 12-2 to Baltimore, the Yankees moved 2 1/2 games ahead of Boston in the AL East. Bobby Abreu, a newcomer to this rivalry, got four of New York's 17 hits.

Eric Hinske, playing his first game since being traded from Toronto, and Mark Loretta each hit three doubles for the Red Sox. But Boston finished 0-for-16 with runners in scoring position and lost for the eighth time in 12 games.

Manny Ramirez added a home run for Boston, which got routed despite getting nine extra-base hits.

A rainout in May forced the long series. The Yankees and Boston last played a five-game set in 1973 in New York; the last time they did it at Fenway was 1959.

Royals 7, Athletics 1, 1st game

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Luke Hudson stymied Oakland on five hits in seven innings, leading the Royals to the win in a doubleheader opener.

Kansas City sent the AL West-leading Athletics to just their second loss in 14 games.

Hudson (6-4) combined with Jimmy Gobble and Joel Peralta on a six-hitter. The As, who began the day with a six-game division lead, had won six straight overall and 17 of 20 coming in, and they had won 12 in a row at Kansas City since May 30, 2003, outscoring the Royals 95-30 in that span.

Rangers 2, Tigers 1

DETROIT — Kevin Millwood (12-8) allowed one run and three hits in seven innings to win his second straight start after going 0-3 in his previous four.

Mark Teixeira hit a tiebreaking homer in the sixth against Zach Miner (7-4), who has won only one of his last seven starts after winning six straight.

Orioles 7, Blue Jays 2

BALTIMORE — Kris Benson (10-9) gave up two runs and six hits in seven innings for his first win since June 28, and Melvin Mora went 3-for-4 with a homer and four RBIs.

Nick Markakis and Miguel Tejada also had three hits for the Orioles, who took a 6-0 lead against Scott Downs (6-2) in the second inning. Baltimore have won three straight following a five-game skid. Vernon Wells and Troy Glaus hit successive homers for the Blue Jays in the sixth.

Devil Rays 6, Indians 5

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Carl Crawford hit a two-run single off Jason Davis that capped a three-run ninth as Tampa Bay rallied from a 5-1 deficit.

Travis Lee opened the ninth with a double off Brian Skorski (1-1) and took third on pinch-hitter Dioner Navarro's single. One out later, Rocco Baldelli's single cut the Devil Rays' deficit to 5-4.

Davis relieved and loaded the bases with a walk to Ben Zobrist. Crawford followed with his single down the right-field line.

Twins 7, White Sox 3

MINNEAPOLIS — Torii Hunter homered for the first time in 62 at-bats since July 3, putting the Twins ahead 4-3 in the sixth against Freddy Garcia (11-8).

Pat Neshek (3-0), Denny Reyes, Jesse Crain and Matt Guerrier limited Chicago to one hit over 3 2-3 scoreless innings.

Andy Roddick hits a backhand against Andy Murray in a quarterfinal match at the Western & Southern Financial Group Masters tennis tournament, Friday in Mason, Ohio.

Roddick advances, Nadal knocked out

MASON, Ohio (AP) — Rejuvenated Andy Roddick advanced to the semifinals of the Western & Southern Financial Group Masters with a 6-3, 6-4 victory Friday night over Andy Murray, ending the British teenager's whirlwind week.

The 19-year-old Murray provided the tournament's signature moment two days earlier, stopping Roger Federer's 55-match winning streak in North America with a stunning straight-set victory.

Also Friday, No. 2 Rafael Nadal lost in straight sets to fellow Spaniard Juan Carlos Ferrero, turning the tournament into an ATP rarity.

No Federer, no Nadal. It doesn't happen often.

The last 15 times Federer and Nadal were entered in the same tournament, one of them won it — a streak that began after the 2005 Australian Open. This time, the world's top two players are heading into the U.S. Open off big upsets.

And, players like Roddick sense opportunity.

The American reached his first final of the year in Indianapolis last month, then strained his left side and had to drop out of three tournaments. He started serving the day before his first match in Cincinnati, and has gotten better as he's gone along.

Using his 135 mph serve and attacking style, Roddick never let the up-and-coming Murray get a foothold. He broke him to go up 5-3 in the first set, then let out a scream when he closed out the next game.

Murray, in only his second year on the tour, was exhausted by his recent run of top-notch tennis — 14 matches in 17 days, much more than his norm. He could barely stand at the end of a three-set win over Robby Ginepri on Thursday, a 2-hour match on aching legs.

The teenager looked refreshed at the outset Friday — playing a night match allowed him few more hours' rest — but he couldn't find any weaknesses to exploit in Roddick's game.

Hings, Safina advance to Rogers Cup semis

MONTREAL — Martina Hings held off the power shots of fourth-seeded Svetlana Kuznetsova for a 7-6 (4), 6-3 victory Friday night in the quarterfinals of the Rogers Cup. Hings, the former No. 1 in the world and seventh seed, advanced to a semifinal on Saturday against 19-year-old Russian Anna Chakvetadze, a 7-6 (3), 7-5 winner over Shahar Pe'er of Israel.

Dinara Safina, the ninth seed from Russia, and 13th-seeded Ana Ivanovic of Serbia will meet in the other semifinal.

The 25-year-old Hings was the dominant player on the WTA tour in the late 1990s, taking three of the four grand slam tournaments in 1997. She left the tour after the 2002 campaign with chronic foot problems.

She won 40 WTA tournaments, including the 1999 and 2000 Rogers Cups. She returned to the Tour this season and has climbed to No. 12 in the rankings.

Hings should move higher after a rousing win over No. 7 Kuznetsova before a sellout crowd at 11,437-seat Uniprix Stadium.

"Winning the first set was the key," she said. "I gained the momentum."

"But I'm just so happy to be back in the semifinals again."

Hings broke service to start the second set and held on with the help of some surprising mistakes from Kuznetsova, who surrendered her serve without winning a point in the final game of the match.

The match featured the top two remaining seeds in a tournament that lost most of its top stars to withdrawals and injuries.

would be like to have that pressure in front of a crowd.

The team also worked on all of its special teams, including punts (two of which were blocked, one returned for a touchdown by Austin Smith). The Bronco longsnapper, Mike Dominguez had troubles with high snaps, but Petersen said he'd have that locked down. Dominguez has been the longsnapper for two years.

Overall, the Broncos looked sharp. They had fewer penalties and the defense is the main reason the offense can't get it going.

"We're not there yet, but we will be in two weeks," Petersen said. "We've got a lot of work left to do. We're now moving into the very-much detailed phase of our offense and defense. We'll start bearing down and get into our 2-deep stuff and then we'll start game planning."

The Broncos open the season against Sacramento State Aug. 31 at Bronco Stadium.

Poll

Darne had 10 first-place votes, Texas eight, West Virginia six and Auburn and USC three.

Ohio State closed the 2005 season on a seven-game winning streak and was No. 4 in the final AP poll. The Buckeyes' two losses were to Texas and Penn State by a combined total of 10 points.

The emergence of Smith, a dual-threat quarterback whose junior season started with a suspension, gave the Buckeyes a new identity.

In Ohio State's first five seasons under Tressel, defense had become the Buckeyes' forte, complemented by a play-it-safe offensive mentality. Tresselball won Ohio State a national title in 2002 with Maurice Clarett powering the offense on the ground.

With Smith running the show, Ohio State has a new MO.

These Buckeyes run a jet-powered spread-option offense, turning Smith loose the way

Texas did Vince Young. During the seven-game winning streak, Ohio State averaged 38 points per game.

"There's no question we'd love to be explosive," Tressel said. "We have some kids who can do those type of things."

Smith passed for 2,282 yards, ran for 611 more and accounted for 27 touchdowns on the ground and through the air last season. He did all that despite sitting out the first game for taking money from a booster and then sharing the job for two games.

Smith solidified his status against Michigan and Notre Dame, throwing for 642 yards.

"I think he has done an excellent job battling through adversity, some of which he created and others were circumstances that had nothing to do with him," said Tressel, who's 50-13 with Ohio State. "Now the fun thing about Troy Smith is to find out how he'll handle success."

Smith has a couple of excellent running mates in Ginn and tackleback Antonio Pittman.

Ginn, the super-fast receiver and return man who was a freshman star in 2004, was having a disappointing sophomore season until he burned Notre Darne for 167 yards on eight catches, including touchdowns of 56 and 68 yards.

Pittman had the second-best sophomore season of any running back in Ohio State history with 1,331 yards rushing — only two-time Heisman winner Archie Griffin did better — capped by game-clinching 60-yard yard touchdown sprint against the Fighting Irish.

The Buckeyes must replace seven defensive starters, including linebacker A.J. Hawk.

"You miss the maturity, the leadership and the game experience," Tressel said.

All the top teams seem to be missing something.

Notre Dame's 17 returning starters include its Heisman contender, quarterback Brady Quinn, but also most of the defense Ohio State torched.

Americans are hardly world beaters at championships

SAPPORO, Japan (AP) — Carmelo Anthony knows his job is to help restore the United States to world basketball prominence.

What he didn't realize is that when it comes to the world championships, the Americans haven't been all that prominent: three golds, three silvers, three bronze and five times shut out of a medal entirely.

"I'm surprised, just knowing the type of basketball players we have in America," Anthony said after practice on Friday. "To win the world championships only three times is kind of a surprise to me. So that's why we're here right now, to kind of redeem ourselves."

The world championships have been played 14 times. The Americans' three titles are tied for second with the Soviet Union, two behind Yugoslavia.

Think the current 12-year gap without a world championship seems huge? The Americans once had a drought that was 20 years longer. They won the second worlds in 1954, then Team USA forward Carmelo Anthony, right, watches forward Elton Brand shoot during practice for the FIBA World Championship of basketball, Friday in Sapporo, Japan.

"I didn't land another title until 1996. It was surprised when I seen the stats. But, hey, the NBA players have only been playing this a couple of years now," Dwyane Wade said. "I guess that's the difference."

Not exactly. The Americans have used NBA players only twice, and the last time resulted in the worst U.S. finish in the worlds — a sixth-place flop four years ago in Indianapolis. But the problem hasn't always been bad basketball. Sometimes, the Americans were simply the victims of bad timing.

The defense of their 1954 title was delayed a year because the venue in Chile wasn't ready in time. The tournament was rescheduled for early 1959 — in the midst of the basketball season in the United States. So the Americans ended up sending a group of Air Force volunteers — tryouts were at Andrews Air Force Base — who brought home a silver medal.

The Americans were the defending champs again in 1998 after rolling through the '94 event in their first try with NBA players. However, with a labor stoppage preventing the use of NBA players again, the U.S. was forced to field a patchwork collection of CBA and overseas players. That team, which included current team member Brad Miller, finished third. U.S. coach Mike Krzyzewski also came up short in his first try at the world championships. Coaching a team that included future NBA players Alonzo Mourning, Christian Laetner and Kenny Anderson, he led the Americans to a bronze medal in 1990 in Argentina.

Playing for a berth in the gold-medal game, the U.S. fell short against a Yugoslavia team that featured Vlade Divac, Toni Kukoc and the late Drazen Petrovic. So Krzyzewski knows how hard it was for Americans to win this title.

"I'm not surprised, because so many years we sent collegiate players and were playing men," Krzyzewski said. "Our team was really young. We played against Yugoslavia when they had all their guys together. That was like playing against an NBA team. Same thing with Russia. So our guys did well, but they were just too young."

Still, young U.S. teams won the Olympics for many years, long before NBA players started competing. The Americans won their first 63 games before its disputed loss to the Soviet Union in the 1972 gold-medal game and now have an Olympic record of 114-5.

Bengals, Bills light up scoreboard

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (AP) — Chad Johnson had cause to celebrate. He did not, however, have permission.

There was still enough high-scoring entertainment in Cincinnati's 44-31 win over the Buffalo Bills on Friday night.

Johnson and the defense led the way, helping Cincinnati produce the third-most points in a preseason game in team history — and most since a 45-0 win over Tampa Bay in 1977.

The only thing missing was a TD celebration after he caught Anthony Wright's 9-yard pass in the left corner for the Bengals' go-ahead score eight minutes into the second quarter. Johnson pleaded with the ref to put on a show without being flagged, but was turned down.

"I asked the ref if I could celebrate," said Johnson, who pleaded with the official immediately after the catch. "I offered to pay his fine. He said, 'No.'"

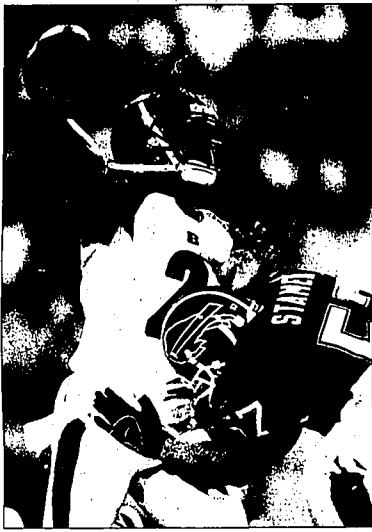

Wright finished 9-of-19 for 99 yards and a touchdown in the first half, which ended with the Bengals ahead 27-17. Carson Palmer has practiced in training camp but is still recovering from a severe left knee injury.

The Bills' (0-2) had a mixed outing. The 44 points they allowed is the fifth-most by a Bills team in preseason, and most since a 45-14 loss at Chicago in 1985.

Willis McGahee was the bright spot with nine rushes for 88 yards, including an electrifying 61-yard touchdown run on a power sweep to the left.

Quarterback J.B. Losman, however, had an up-and-down outing in his first preseason start, and after coach Dick Jauron named him the front-runner for the No. 1 job this week.

Losman finished 7-of-11 for 134 yards passing, but lost two fumbles and an interception, leading to 13 Bengals points.

Cincinnati Bengals quarterback Anthony Wright passes under pressure from Buffalo Bills' Josh Stamer (57) during first half of an NFL preseason football game at Ralph Wilson Stadium in Orchard Park, N.Y., Friday.

Browns 20, Lions 16

CLEVELAND — Little Jerome Harrison is making big plays for the Cleveland Browns. The 5-foot-9 rookie running back caught a 31-yard touchdown pass in the fourth quarter and finished with 107 total yards Friday night as the Browns rallied for a 20-16 win over the Detroit Lions.

With Cleveland down 16-10, third-string quarterback Derek Anderson led Harrison in stride over the middle for the go-ahead score. Harrison, who rushed for 1,900 yards at Washington State in 2005, ran for 53 yards on nine carries and had six receptions for 54.

Browns tight end Kellen Winslow had three catches for 37 yards in his second game back after missing most of the past two seasons because of leg injuries.

Harrison has emerged as a multipurpose threat for the Browns (1-1), who looked much better on both sides of the ball than they did a week ago in a lopsided 20-7 loss at Philadelphia. Harrison scored Cleveland's lone TD against the Eagles.

Browns starting quarterback Charlie Frye finished 8-of-11 for 41 yards with one touchdown, one interception and one fumble in four series.

Lions starter Jon Kitna played the entire first half, completing 7 of 12 passes for 94 yards and one TD, a 2-yard score to Kevin Jones. Kitna's passing was one of the few bright spots as the Lions first-team offense managed just 3 yards rushing on nine attempts against Cleveland's defensive starters.

Bears 24, Chargers 3

CHICAGO — The Chicago Bears still don't need offense to score.

Brian Urlacher returned an interception 64 yards for a touchdown on the game's third play from scrimmage and hauled Davis took a kickoff 100 yards for another first-quarter TD Friday night to lead the Bears over the San Diego Chargers 24-3.

Urlacher, last season's defensive player of the year, stepped in front of Philip Rivers' pass intended for Antonio Gates and raced in easily to give the Bears an early cushion.

Chargers running back Michael Turner broke three tackles on a tough 45-yard run around the right side late in the first quarter before Nate Kaeding kicked a 43-yard field goal to cut the Bears' lead to 7-3.

But on the ensuing kickoff, Davis bounced off a scrum at the 20, broke outside, put a nice fake on Kaeding and outran Terrence Kiel to give the Bears a 14-3 halftime lead.

Rivers completed 9 of 14 passes for 75 yards and made one of the best plays of the first half. Shaking off two tacklers, he rolled left and threw a 21-yard pass to Malcolm Floyd on the sideline.

Bears quarterback Rex Grossman, a shaky 3-for-11 in the preseason opener last week against the 49ers, looked sharp late in the second quarter by hitting passes of 24, 14 and 10 yards to drive the Bears to the Chargers 24. He finished 7-of-14 for 83 yards.

Where are they now? JetsSkins foursome didn't last long in D.C.

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Need a reminder of the dizzying pace of change in the NFL? Consider the story of the "JetSkins."

It was only three years ago that the Washington Redskins raided the New York Jets during the offseason, plucking away four expensive, high-profile players who were supposed to put coach Steve Spurrier's team into the playoffs. Knowing good intrigue when it sees it, the league scheduled the two teams to meet in the Thursday night nationally televised game that kicked off the 2003 season.

"It's was pretty intense," said JetsSkins guard Randy Thomas, recalling the Redskins' 16-13 victory. "The first time we played them, the first game of the season. The NFL lined it up right, didn't they?"

Yet, as it turned out, the JetsSkins quartet had all the staying power of a bad rock 'n' roll band. Their first season produced a 6-10 record, prompting Spurrier to quit. Kick returner Chad Morton couldn't stay healthy and was cut after two years. Receiver Laveranues Coles became so disgruntled that he demanded a trade — and the Redskins were so eager to oblige that they sent him back to the Jets in 2005 and took a $9.3 million salary cap hit in the process.

So, when the Redskins and Jets face each other Saturday night in an exhibition game, only two JetsSkins will be wearing burgundy and gold: kicker John Fial, who has lost his kickoff duties this year while trying to return two years of perpetual leg injuries, and Thomas, the only one of the four who has lived up to his billing.

Meanwhile, Coles and Morton have both settled in New York — Coles with the Jets, and Morton with the Giants.

"They had a strong love for us there in Washington," Coles said. "They showed it by paying us what they paid us and bringing us in. The guys were excited about having the opportunity to go somewhere and try to get a new start, but we're all pretty much gone our separate ways."

So, how does Coles remember his time in Washington? "It's just like having a relationship with a woman," Coles said. "When you break up with her, you always remember the good times, you never really remember the bad. That's the way it is for me now. I never want to remember anything negative that went on there."

The Jets and Redskins continue to do business. Receiver Santana Moss was acquired in the trade that sent Coles back to New York, and Patrick Ramsey — once the future of the Washington franchise and the winning quarterback in that Thursday night game three years ago — was shipped to the Jets this offseason for a draft pick.

Ramsey is in a four-way competition with Chad Pennington, Brooks Bollinger and rookie Kelvin Clemens for the Jets starting job, but Ramsey played in only one series last week against Tampa Bay. He's expected to get more chances Saturday, especially if Pennington, the favorite to win the position, is unavailable to play because of a personal matter that caused him to miss practice this week.

"It's going to be fun to see him play," said Redskins tackle Jon Jansen, who remains good friends with Ramsey, "and it's also going to be kind of sad to see him on another team."

fourth. And he had high hopes for a tournament some consider a fifth major when he shot 65 for a share of the lead earlier this year in The Player's Championship. Instead, he became the first player in the history of the event to go from leading to leaving when he followed with an 81 and missed the cut.

The way he led didn't exactly endear him to reporters who watched Love storm past them without speaking on his way to the parking lot.

That, and some other incidents with the media, led to a question after Friday's round that perhaps Love has been acting a bit childish himself to those who cover the game he wants to protect.

"No, for 99 percent of the time I've enjoyed my experience in here and out around the 18th green," he said. "I have been frustrated with myself more than anybody else the last couple years."

Easy to see why. Once a perennial top 10 player, Love has gone three without a win and came into the final major of the year after missing the cut in both the U.S. and British opens. His slump is so pronounced that he's in danger of missing the Ryder Cup for the first time since 1993.

For someone who reveres the game, that's even more disappointing than the fact he's been a chronic under-achiever in major championships — with only one PGA Championship in 1997 in his 21 years on the tour.

Love admits the Ryder Cup has been on his mind so much this year that it has affected his game. He's 15th in the standings and, to his credit, doesn't think he should be one of captain Tom Lehman's picks if he doesn't finish eighth or better this week to make the team on his own.

"I think I need to give him a reason to pick me," Love said. "I'd love to give him a reason not to pick me and go ahead and win this tournament and let him go pick somebody else."

Based on Love's past history, that's not likely to happen.

He drives the ball as well and as long as anyone, and has as much talent as anyone not named Phil or Tiger. But he admittedly struggles with the mental part of the game, and having rabbit ears on the course can't help.

Last year, Love's sports shrink told him he could win the PGA Championship if he got to Sunday in contention, but that didn't exactly work out.

Here's some better advice for this weekend: Protect your score, not the game.

Tim Dahlberg is a national sports columnist for The Associated Press.

he'd be picking up the kids from school, cooking out and tackling a honey-do list.

"I'm 42 years old. I've been doing this for 19 years," Andrade said. "It's the PGA Championship. Why not me? Why not have fun with it and enjoy it? It's not like guys like me get in this position every single major. We have a hell of a leaderboard, and I'm looking forward to continuing to have a great tour."

Herron has a little more at stake, but the ruffled one doesn't get ruffled easily. He holed a 40-foot birdie putt on the ninth hole for a 67 to move into the four-way tie, and treated it like a tap-in for the win.

Donald, who won the NCAA title at Northwestern in 1999 and still has a home in the Chicago area, made it through a steady drizzle without a bogey and is helping to carry Europe's hopes of ending its 76-year drought at the PGA Championship. Joining him was Stenson, a stout Swede who reached 9-under until hitting into the trees on No. 18 and finishing with a bogey.

No Swede has ever won a major — at least a men's major. "I really need to get going to catch Annika, huh?" he said, referring to the 10 LPGA majors won by Annika Sorenstam. He'll have to play plenty hard to keep his nose in front.

The top 24 players were separated by four shots on a soft, vulnerable course that yielded another record day — 61 players under par on Friday, beating the mark of 60 set the day before.

The cut was at even-par 144, matching the lowest in relation to par at a PGA Championship. It was even-par 142 at Riviera in 1995.

Still, Medinah has enough trees and water to punish mistakes, so no one was able to run away from the pack.

"There's a bunched leaderboard. You knew it was going to be that way with soft greens, and that's basically what it's turned out to be," Woods said. "You've got to go out there... and make some birdies, and try not to give anything back."

David Toms shot 67 to lead a group at 6-under 138 that included Billy Mayfair, who had surgery for testicular cancer, only two weeks ago. Another shot back was a crowd that included Sergio Garcia and Mike Weir, who shared the 54-hole lead with Woods at Medinah seven years ago. Those fireworks everyone expected from the marquee group of major champions finally arrived, just in time for them to go their separate ways on the weekend.

Woods got some outside help on the opening hole when his tee shot went left, hopped hard over a bunker and was headed down the slope until a fan jumped up and saved it down. Woods still had to pitch over the trees and short of the green, waiting for a wedge to 3 feet.

The British Open champion didn't know what happened until after his round.

"I knew I got a weird hop," he said. "Hey, I appreciate it. It's nice to have Shaq out there knocking them back."

Rookie leads at Safeway

PORTLAND, Ore. — Rookie Joe Young Lee birdied seven straight holes to take a two-stroke lead after the first round of the Safeway Classic on Friday.

She had an 8-under 64 on the 6,327-yard, par-72 course at Columbia-Edgewater Country Club.

Kuramoto in front at Seattle

SNOQUALMIE, Wash. — Massy Kuramoto needed only 23 putts to shoot a 9-under 63 and grab a two-shot lead in the opening round of the Boeing Greater Seattle Classic.

'Outlaw' Dalton still on the run

By Linda Brittain
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — It all started innocently enough one spring evening more than 20 years ago when Willie Dalton's family took him out to the Magic Valley Speedway where the then 8-year-old boy watched the first laps ever run at the newly built track south of town.

The following weekend Dalton climbed the ladder leading to a platform where the young "winner-of-the-junior-flagman contest stood high above the field of cars and waved the green flag to signal to start of one the first races ever held at the barely broken-in track. Twenty seasons later, Willie "The Outlaw" Dalton is now on the receiving end of the green-flag finishes, driving the No. 8 car in the Budweiser Grand Nationals Division.

Dalton, now 29, has actually been racing every season at MVS since 1998 when he remodeled his dad's race car into a ride for himself. But even before Dalton began his racing pursuits, he rarely missed a night at the speedway.

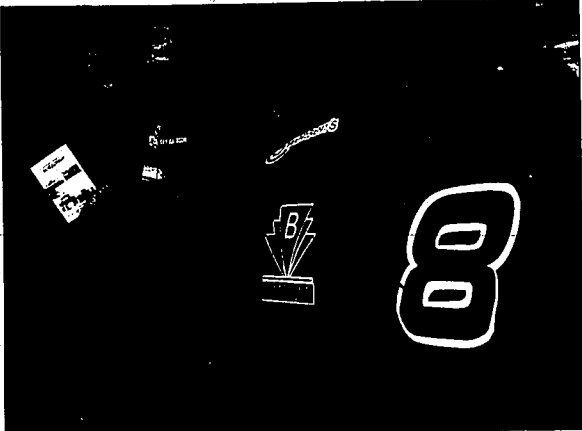

"In the entire length of time since the track has been open," Dalton reported, "I've probably only missed about 10 races out there."

Dalton's wife of eight years, Alecia, quipfully confirms the statement by adding, "We even spent our honeymoon there and our first anniversary."

As proof of his loyalty over the years to MVS, Dalton is still holding on to the original program from the opening night at the speedway, which is dated May 17, 1986, along with a photograph of the future MVS driver perched in the flag stand clutching the green flag.

"When they did their (20th season) celebration last year I brought the program out to them," Dalton said. "Steve (York, MVS promoter) was surprised to see that anybody still had it. But my mom saved it for me so I would have it for later."

The newspaper type program and photo, unlike Dalton's memories that racing was something that he always wanted to try.

Willie and Alecia Dalton are pictured in their garage with Willie's Budweiser Grand National car. Alecia is holding a Magic Valley Speedway program from the first night of racing in 1986, while Willie is holding a photograph of himself as the junior flagman at the second night of racing at the newly-opened speedway.

"I didn't think I'd be doing it this long," Dalton said. "But this is really the only sport I'm interested in. It's kind of an expensive hobby but I've liked it since I was about six years old."

Like most drivers at any track, Dalton has gone through some troublesome mechanical issues over the years, but this year has overloaded the driver with more than his share of problems. Dalton has had to sit out two races so far this season after it was determined that there was no way the car could make it through the evening.

"The very first night out we lost two rear main bearings," Dalton said. "Then another time we had a rock get sucked up in the oil pump and it broke the oil pump drive gear off. It's been some little things, we get up there so far and then something will happen and it will cut us back three steps. It can be kind of aggravating. There's been a few times when I've just wondered 'Why?'"

Part of the reason Dalton makes it back out to MVS nearly every weekend is that he feels a big loyalty to his sponsors Top Gun Truck Driving School, November Land and Livestock, Back to Basics and Central RTO and although Dalton has yet to win a main event this season, he refuses to just raise his hands in the air and give up.

"If they helped us out as far as money goes or whatever they gave us, I feel they did their part and I feel it's my part to finish the season," Dalton said.

Dalton has been receiving some good advice from several his competitors lately and is grateful for any ideas his peers can give him. And he certainly hasn't given up on the idea of capturing his first win before the season is over.

"(Jerry) McKean has helped me out a lot in the last couple of weeks," Dalton said. "I had a push in it and we never could get the push to go away, but he gave us some ideas to try last weekend one of them really worked."

McKean is more than willing to help out his competitor, explaining that most drivers at MVS are ready to help anyone that needs it.

"We're trying to make everyone equal," McKean said. "That makes it more exciting for everyone. It's not much fun to watch three cars run away from the rest of the field."

It's a sure bet that "The Outlaw" will escape to MVS once again this weekend along with his wife Alecia, who can always be seen helping him out in the pits each race night. "She's the one person that never lets me give up," Dalton said. "She always stands behind me no matter what."

When it comes down to Dalton's main reason for showing up at the track every week, it's not much different now then when that 8-year-old boy came out to MVS for the first time 22 seasons ago.

"It's all about the fun," Dalton said.

MVS drivers headed for a showdown

By Linda Brittain
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — Although the 2006 season is winding down at the Magic Valley Speedway, it's a little too early for any of the drivers to be refining the moves on their victory-lane celebration dance just yet.

This is especially true in the Budweiser Grand Nationals Division, where points leader Louis Lopez is clinging to a vulnerable one-point lead over Jerry Rice and a slim five-point lead over previous main event winner Jerry McKean. With the trio of drivers wedged into such a tight spot as far as points are concerned, tonight's main event will be pivotal in capturing the 2006 Grand Nationals championship title.

And with just three races left in the series, no one can afford to have a bad night.

"It will make a ton of difference," Rice said regarding the effect of anyone experiencing major problems in any of the few remaining races. "I don't think about it too much. But Louis (Lopez) and I were talking about it a couple of weeks ago and we were both, were... nervous, we both had a few butterflies."

Rice placed second in the final standings last season, while Lopez won the 2005 championship.

"Rice did admit it would be great to have things turn out differently for him this year. "Nobody wants to be the first loser," he said.

One would believe NAPA Pony Stock driver Jason Whited could afford to relax a little bit with a 27-point lead over his newest closest competitor, Kristi Fehringher. However, Whited seems to have no problem looking the gift horse directly in the mouth, as he runs through different ways things could go wrong his head until the 2006 season champion is crowned in the division August 26.

Whited's wife Jami says that his thoughts have been somewhat all-consuming lately.

"He's a little nervous," she said. "Even though he has a good lead he knows it's not over yet. He thinks about things that can go wrong and tries to figure out where he would need to finish if different things happen during the next race and what he would need to do if the engine blew or something like that."

Kristi Fehringher knows that winning the 2006 track championship may not be impossible, but it would take an incredible series of events to get her into the lead position.

"Jason's pretty well set," Fehringher said. "But he's had a good season and he deserves it. My biggest goal right now is to stay ahead of Lou (Anderson) and Shawn (Nice)."

Craig Nuthak has been enjoying a 17-point lead over Desi Ahrens and a 20-point lead over third-place driver Jim Howard in the Magic Valley Pipe Thunder Stock division standings for the past week, but both Ahrens and Howard are very capable of fringing up wins at any given time. There are only two races remaining in the Thunder Stock season, with the winner in the division scheduled to be honored Sept. 16.

The Intermountain Pro Truck Series will be crowning the MVS points winner in the division tonight, as rookie pro truck driver Kevan Larson leads the field by eight points over Kenny Vanderham. Larson won the truck series race in Meridian last weekend and he and Vanderham have each put in a win at MVS earlier this season. Scott Lynch of Butley will return to MVS for the final truck series race of the season. The experienced driver is a pretty sure bet to be checked up front by the time he returns to the track on the main event.

Jerry Rice, Grand National driver of the No. 4 car, will be putting his truck driving skills to the test tonight in the debut of the No. 4 truck that he intends to race full-time next season.

Gates open at 4 p.m., while green-flag racing begins at 7:05.

Burton knocks Sadler off Michigan pole

BROOKLYN, Mich. (AP) — Jeff Burton won another pole Friday, spoiling Elliott Sadler's debut in the Evernham Motorsports No. 19 Dodge.

Sadler who left Robert Yates Racing to replace retired Jeremy Mayfield in the Evernham 'ride, was the 41st of 47 NASCAR Nextel Cup drivers who made qualifying runs on the two-mile Michigan International Speedway oval.

The crowd cheered lustily as Sadler's 187.771 mph lap knocked off the 186.804 of Matt Kenseth off the top spot in qualifying for Sunday's GFS Marketplace 400. But Burton, the 45th driver in the line, easily pushed Sadler to the outside of the front row with a lap of 187.936.

"We're real excited about that," Burton said. "I'm proud of that effort because we actually ran better in race trim than in qualifying trim in practice. The team made a bunch of changes after that, and they worked. The car really stuck."

It was the fourth pole of the season and the sixth of his career for the resurgent Burton, who enters Sunday's race a solid fourth in the season standings. His first career pole came here in August 1996.

"I don't know what the hell is going on," said a grinning Burton, whose last pole before this year came at Richmond in September 2000. "During the qualifying run, I came into turn four and thought, 'Man, that's a good lap.' The cars just run so good."

Sadler, who had been with the Yates team since 2003, had to qualify on speed since the No. 19 car has fallen to 36th in car-owner points. Only the top 35 are guaranteed starting spots.

Sadler said he was thinking top 15 before getting on the track Friday.

"That was a realistic goal," he said. "But, after the first lap on the track and we went right to the top of the (speed) chart, of course, your goals change a little bit. But my main goal as the driver of the 19 right now is to make every race and get us back in the top 35 in points."

With only four races remaining before the start of NASCAR's 10-race, 10-man Chase for the championship, defending champion Tony Stewart, Hamlin, Jeff Gordon, Dale Earnhardt Jr., defending Michigan race winner Casey Kahne, Kurt Busch and Biffle are battling for spots in the bottom half of the top 10.

Hot Chamber night raises $35,000

Woman wins $8,000 dream vacation

TWIN FALLS — Greece would be nice, or maybe Italy. Maybe she'll spend a little time in both.

Vacations were on Pam Ellers' mind Friday after winning the grand prize $8,000 vacation at Thursday's Hot August Night Community Picnic and Auction, the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce's big summer fundraiser.

"It was just such a joy, such a surprise," Ellers said. "It's wonderful!"

Ellers said her husband, Lewis, bought 13 large raffle tickets and put her name on seven of them. To her surprise, one of her tickets was drawn.

"They said, 'Pam Ellers.' It's just an amazing thing." The Ellers, who live in Kimberly, have an appointment with a travel agent on Monday and they're looking at taking the trip sometime during the holidays. They might just take the whole family along, but then they'll have to choose a place closer to home. Their son and daughter-in-law are expecting a baby around that time.

"We have six children," Ellers said. "Maybe we'll just go to Cancun."

The trip, sponsored by Cooper Norman, was one of three large raffle prizes handed out Thursday night. Vickie Puyeur of Twin Falls won a Connelly Pool Table, sponsored by Snake River Pool and Spa. Jon Conder was the winner of a garage makeover sponsored by Premier Garage of Southern Idaho and Superior Door.

People also took home a variety of prize packages in the evening's live and silent auctions, and they enjoyed a picnic that included barbecued Clear Springs trout and baron of beef, presented by First Federal, Prudential Idaho Homes and Properties and TitleFac.

"The turnout was great and the weather was fabulous," said Shawn Barigar, the Chamber's president and chief executive officer. Barigar said the evening raised about $35,000 — $5,000 more than last year's event — which will be used for student scholarships, the Visitors Center and to support other community activities and events.

Meanwhile, Ellers will keep planning that big vacation.

"We just thank the community," Ellers said. "It was just a big surprise. It was wonderful."

Ford Motor announces production cuts, losses

By Sarah Karsch
Associated Press writer

DETROIT — Ford announced its largest production cuts in more than 20 years on Friday, blaming high gas prices for pushing many customers away from its pickups and SUVs and toward higher-mileage models.

Ford Motor Co. said it would temporarily halt production at 10 assembly plants between now and the end of the year to reduce the need for costly incentives to trim bloated inventories.

The decision illustrates just how out of step the lineup at the nation's second-largest automaker has become, as it loses market share to mostly Asian competitors under the watch of Chairman and Chief Executive Bill Ford.

Ford announced a turnaround plan in January that called for shedding 25,000 to 30,000 jobs and closing 14 plants by 2012. By year's end, the company was to have cut production capacity 15 percent.

Bill Ford said last month that the plan — dubbed the "Way Forward" — would be accelerated. He said Friday that the details would be revealed in September.

In response to the production cuts, Fitch Ratings downgraded Ford's debt further into junk status, while two other ratings agencies placed the company on review. Analysts said next month's announcements could include more plant closures and job cuts, as well as quicker introductions of new cars and crossovers.

The company said fourth-quarter production would be down 21 percent, or 168,000 units, from last year. Third-quarter production will be 20,000 units below what was previously announced and 78,000 units below last year.

For the full year, Ford plans to produce about 9 percent fewer vehicles than last year for a total of just above 3 million.

"We know this decision will have a dramatic impact on our employees, as well as our suppliers," Chairman and Chief Executive Bill Ford said in an e-mail to employees. "This is, however, the right call for our customers, our dealers and our long-term future."

He said it was the company's biggest North American production cut in more than 20 years.

Dearborn-based Ford, which lost $254 million in the second quarter, said last month that the speed of the market shift away from trucks had taken it by surprise. Like other U.S. automakers, Ford is heavily dependent on sport utility vehicles and other trucks, which have far higher profit margins than cars. Last year, 68 percent of the vehicles sold by the company in the U.S. were trucks, compared with 58 percent for the industry as a whole.

Wal-Mart sees first profit decline in 10 years

By Marcus Kabel
Associated Press writer

BENTONVILLE, Ark. — Wal-Mart Stores Inc. is fighting battles on multiple fronts after posting its first quarterly profit decline in 10 years, and analysts question whether the world's largest retailer can regain the feverish growth rates of its past.

Wal-Mart's woes range from high energy prices, which hit its lower-income customer base and its own costs, to setbacks in its online retail strategy. In public relations, Wal-Mart's stumble like this week's sudden resignation of civil rights icon Andrew Young as its public ambassador. Young quit as head of a pro-Wal-Mart advocacy group after he was quoted in the Los Angeles Sentinel newspaper as saying inner-city stores that overcharged black customers were run by "Jews, then it was Koreans and now it's Arabs." Wal-Mart, which has made repeated public commitments this year to diversity, said Young's comments did not reflect its views.

On the plus side, analysts say, Wal-Mart, which has a store in Jerome and is looking to build a Twin Falls store, has ambitious programs to stock tender products, remodel most of its more than 2,000 Supercenter stores and tighten its grip on the costs of inventory, labor and energy.

Combined with an ongoing public relations offensive to counter critics who claim its pay and benefits are skimpy, Wal-Mart is juggling a lot of balls at once and analysts say the outcome is still up in the air.

This image provided by the U.S. Air Force shows C-17 Globemasters from the 535th Airlift Squadron, Hickam Air Force Base, Hawaii, participating in an airdrop training mission May 16. Boeing to shut down C-17 production at Long Beach plant

By Gary Gentile
Associated Press writer

LOS ANGELES — Boeing Co. said Friday it would start shutting down production of its cavernous C-17 military cargo plane, marking the possible end of aircraft manufacturing in a region that once dominated the industry.

Unless Congress authorizes new orders, the decision could trigger a ripple of job cuts nationwide, including more than 7,000 Boeing employees and an additional 25,000 workers in 42 states that provide parts for planes still moving everything from tanks to troops around Iraq and Afghanistan.

Layoffs would not likely be immediate — Boeing has several dozen pending orders, enough to keep production into 2009. But the Chicago-based company said Friday it would no longer spend tens of millions of its own dollars making planes that may never be sold just to keep the supply lines open in hopes of new business.

"We can't continue carrying the program without additional orders from the U.S. government," said Ron Marcotte, vice president and general manager of Boeing Global Mobility Systems.

Nicknamed the Globemaster III, since it first flew in 1991 the C-17 has been valued for its ability to land on short dirt runways such as those overseas or during disaster relief. These flying warehouses played a major role airlifting supplies into areas devastated by last year's Gulf Coast hurricanes.

Congressional leaders have been lobbying to extend C-17 production and added money for three more of the aircraft in the 2007 defense spending bill, which has not yet passed the Senate. Boeing said it could keep the program if Congress funds at least 10 more planes, though a delay would increase costs above the current price tag of about $200 million each.

"We haven't given up," Marcotte said.

There is some political will to salvage production.

The Long Beach plant is the

"It is unfortunate that the Air Force and the administration have not been clear with regard to their future plans for additional C-17 production."

— Sen. Dianne Feinstein, D-Calif.

last major airplane factory left in Southern California — earlier this year, Boeing delivered its last 717 passenger jet from a sprawling complex of buildings that have been churning out planes since the 1930s. Workers have assembled 15 of the planes each year in a hangar big enough to fit several C-17s at once.

Though far from past levels, aircraft production still provides thousands of high-paying jobs.

"This is the last Californian aircraft on a line that will be dying in an election year," said Richard Aboulafia, an aerospace analyst at the Virginia-based Teal Group, an aviation consulting group. "I can't imagine Congress won't come through."

The Air Force isn't counting on it. Though the Air Force has put seven more C-17 on its list of unfunded priorities, a Department of Defense study recently concluded that the 180

C-17s already either produced or ordered meet military transport needs.

"It is unfortunate that the Air Force and the administration have not been clear with regard to their future plans for additional C-17 production," Sen. Dianne Feinstein, D-Calif., said Friday. "They have, instead, sent mixed messages, happy to let the Congress do what is necessary to buy more aircraft, but unwilling to make the difficult budget decisions to ensure that production continues."

Boeing said it has buyers for 18 of the 22 planes it has funded for production, among them NATO and the Australian Air Force.

On Friday, the company told suppliers to stop work on the remaining four. That decision affects long lead-time items purchased from suppliers, many of which have to be ordered as long as 34 months in advance.

Judge's ruling may speed Altria Group Inc., Kraft spin-off

By Vinson Tong
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — Investors who have been salivating at the prospect of an Altria breakup may not have much longer to wait now that a federal judge has handed down a much-anticipated racketeering decision.

"OK, now pop the cork!" Christopher Growe of A.G. Edwards & Sons wrote in a research note Friday. Citigroup analyst Bonnie Herzog wrote at the top of her note, "Get ready for Altria to move the cheese." In reference to its long-planned spin-off of Kraft Foods Inc., America's largest food company, which plans to close its cheese processing plant in Rupert in January, putting 140 people back out on the job market.

A decision issued after the market closed Thursday removes a legal cloud that had been hanging over the industry and also, importantly, removes a great deal of the uncertainty that had been holding back the breakup of the world's largest cigarette maker.

Judge Gladys Kessler ruled that tobacco companies — decedents smokers about the health hazards of smoking, but she said she did not have the ability to award substantial financial penalties. The Department of Justice had sued tobacco companies, seeking $14 billion in funding for smoking cessation programs and public education campaigns.

Herzog said Altria, the world's biggest cigarette maker and owner of the dominant Marlboro brand, could announce the first step of the breakup very soon.

Altria's plans for restructuring include the spin-off of its Kraft Foods unit — makers of Jell-O, Kool-Aid and Oscar Mayer products — and the split of its two tobacco divisions, Philip Morris USA and Philip Morris International, into separate companies. The tobacco company bought Nabisco in late 2000 and folded it into Kraft.

Federal Judge Gladys Kessler's ruling Thursday may open the door for Altria Group Inc., the maker of Marlboro cigarettes and Oreo cookies, to spin off its Kraft Foods Inc. division.

Don't be a couch potato, Taurus

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

IF AUG. 19 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Ambition might be your middle name in the year to come. With powerful Pluto playing tag with your spot in the zodiac throughout the next 12 months, you are likely to develop qualities such as perseverance, stamina and resilience—which lead to lasting success. A new romance or a promotion is possible in February when everyone appreciates your talents and your charms are more obvious than usual.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): This is a weekend to put vivid imagination to work. Draw a picture, sketch out a business plan or create your dream. Weave a potholder or paint the fence to put creative visualization to good use.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Don't be a couch potato. A little glamour and fun can brighten your weekend. Try something new and exciting. A day trip to the beach or a night on the town can offer a break from routines.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Act the part. Performerically mouth the words of others and give them intent. If you dream of being the VIP of your particular universe, then study for the role and pull out the wardrobe and props.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Accentuate the positive. Optimism always chases away fear and worry. Save your bean-counting ideas for the checkbook and be an enthusiastic supporter of your companion or mate.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Maybe you have been overly self-referential in the past week. Perhaps it is time to consider the needs of others. Exercise compassionate understanding and treat a special someone to something nice.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): The most likely explanation is the simple one. When you add rational thinking to a plan or dream you will find that all things are possible. Take action where it will be the most good.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Remember the lessons of "Born Free." Those who have been caged have not developed survival skills for the wild.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Relinquish doubts. You can be the king or queen of your castle and have willing subjects on hand to wait on your hand and foot. You can also play like a kid or bring a stray dog home as a pet.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Keep your ears and eyes open. You may receive a hint of an exciting new direction or opportunity that will open up soon. A significant other can explain everything in detail.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): The pessimist surely observes that every smile reveals teeth. The young at heart merely smile back. Experiment with emotional time travel to a less cynical time and share your toys.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Abandon smoke and mirrors. You need to hide your intentions—or your desires, for that matter. Be frank and direct with others and you will be surprised at how quickly you will make new friends.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Kids sell lemons by the road to make a few extra bucks; Maybe your idea is grander or more intricate, but the basic premise is similar. Be self-motivated and willing to join forces with others.

THE FAMILY CIRCUS

By Bill Keane

Man of woman's dreams doesn't share her vision

DEAR ABBY: I'm in my early 20s and very much in love with "John," the man of my dreams. I know what I want, and I'm on the road to achieving it. I have had my "fun," and hope one day to start a family. Granted, it may not be for another two five or 10 years — but hopefully sooner.

This brings me to my predicament. John has told me he's not sure he ever wants to marry. He assured me that if, one day, he decides to be married, if it's not to me, then it will be to someone just like me. I think John is worth waiting for while he decides, but I refuse to be his girlfriend for the rest of my life. Much as I love him, it would devastate me 10 years down the road if he finally decided not to marry at all.

I don't know what to do. I live on my own with no mother to run to for advice. I have always taken your answers to heart and applied them to my own life. Your advice would be greatly appreciated.

—MINDY
IN SOUTH CAROLINA
DEAR MINDY: John may be an absolute doll, but you have described someone who has made it plain he is not ready for a serious commitment. Has it occurred to you that he may be trying to keep you from getting your hopes up where he is concerned? My advice is to keep your options open, and do not sit around waiting for him to grow up and recognize what a catch you are.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: As an active member of Overaters Anonymous, I am open and honest with friends about my condition, and understanding the foods I can and cannot eat. I am hoping you can provide me with a kind and gentle response to someone who presents me with a special dessert that she (or he) may have spent hours preparing.

My life and attitudes have changed greatly since I joined OA, and I would give away this freedom from food obsession to everyone I know if it were possible.

—C.T. IN BOULDER, COLO.
DEAR C.T.: Congratulations on your abstinence. When you are confronted with an elaborate dessert you can't eat, say, "I know you worked hard on this. But I can't accept it. I have food issues. I'm addicted to sugar, and once I start, I cannot stop. So please understand."

And unless the person is a diet saboteur, she (or he) will back off.

DEAR ABBY: How does one tell a friend that the tattoo she got in honor of her recently deceased friend is misspelled? Or should one if I don't think most people would have noticed the misspelling, for what it's worth.

—GOOD SPELLER
IN PASADENA

DEAR GOOD SPELLER: Sometimes the kind thing to do is to keep one's mouth shut. If this were something that was easy to fix, I'd say tell your friend in English, and fast. However, because it's not, my recommendation is...to...let someone else give her the bad news.

DEAR ABBY: I have a friend who, last year, became the guardian of her 3-year-old granddaughter. This has severely curtailed her dating due to the need to hire baby sitters.

If a gentleman knows her circumstances and asks her out anyway, who is responsible for paying the baby sitter?

—K.B. IN MACON, GA.
DEAR K.B.: Since the child is her responsibility, it is her responsibility to pay for the baby sitters. However, if the "gentleman" knows it will strain her financially — and he can afford it — he should offer to pick up the tab.

British food to blame for Great Fire

Traditionally it is said that the Great Fire of London in the year 1666 began when some British faggots (pork pieces, breading and flavorings stuffed in intestines) on Pudding Lane scorched and sent the shop, then the town, ablaze.

This day in history: On Aug. 19, 1892, five women and a clergyman were executed in Salem, Mass., after being convicted of witchcraft.

The brutal Spanish Inquisition — begun by King Ferdinand and Queen Isabella against Muslims, Jews and other "infidels" in 1480 — didn't officially end until 1834.

Shark attacks are extremely rare: fewer than 100 a year worldwide, with only 25 to 30 fatalities. Given the number of people who visit the beach, you're more likely to die in the auto taking you there.

The name of the Lakers basketball team once made sense. When founded in 1948, the team was based in the "land of a thousand lakes" — Minneapolis, Minn. However, when the team moved to arid Los Angeles in 1960, the name illogically remained the same.

The Gravenstein apple was brought to California sometime around 1820 by Russian immigrants. The apple,

Prince of Peace being asked to promote war

A growing number of benighted Christians promote the God of peace as a blood-thirsty warmonger. A profoundly misguided preacher from Texas leads them.

John Hagee is the latest cheerleader of a belligerent and wholly non-Christian God. Nevertheless, many evangelical Christians agree with him.

They believe that military conquest, death and destruction are God's avenue to the Promised Land.

They work to bring about Armageddon, the last great biblical battle that will destroy unbelievers and usher in the reign of Christ.

STEVE GUSHEE

Since they believe that mythical cataclysm must take place in a Holy Land ruled by Jews, they vehemently support Israel and clamor for the destruction of her enemies.

Their aim is not to help Jews or safeguard Israel. Their purpose is to trigger the events that enable Jesus to return and convert or kill all Jews and other unbelievers.

The biblical Armageddon is akin to the final mythic battle between good and evil found in many religious traditions.

Neither God nor the author of "Revelation" described intended it to shape contemporary geopolitics or military strategy.

Those who so misuse Christian scripture are no better than Muslims who pervert their faith to one that encourages suicide bombers. Hagee promotes just such warped nonsense from his Christian perspective.

The graduate of something called the Southwestern Bible Institute is the founder of Cornerstone Church in San Antonio, Texas. He claims a congregation of more than 18,000 people and an audience of millions on more than 160 radio and television stations.

He organized and presided over a meeting of more than 3,500 evangelical Christians in Washington in July to insist that God enthusiastically supports the slaughter taking place in Israel and Lebanon.

The idea that Israel might show restraint in military operations is a violation of "God's foreign policy," according to Hagee. To prove his point, he cites a verse from the earliest chapters of Scripture that says God will curse those who curse the nation Abraham creates (Genesis 12:3).

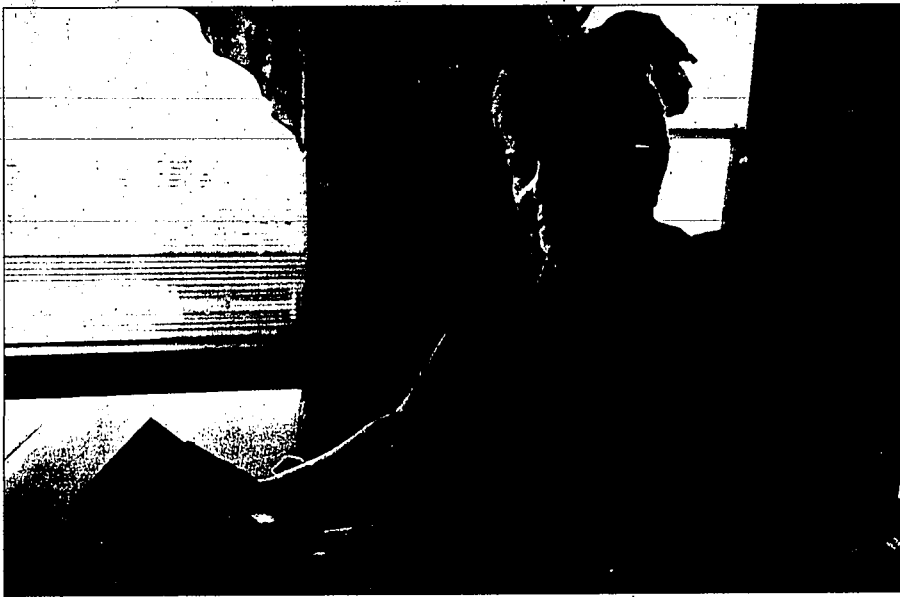

He overlooked a word from Jesus that teaches him to "bless those who curse you, pray for those who abuse you" (Luke 6:28).

Israel makes whatever military decisions she thinks necessary. Hagee, however, blasphemously invokes the God of Peace to encourage violence in that blood-soaked land.

Islamic extremists do no less.

Passage from polygamy

Author Susan Ray Schmidt of Twin Falls, the former wife of a polygamist in Mexico, recently published 'His Favorite Wife: Trapped in Polygamy,' an autobiographical story.

T.F. woman's memoir details perilous escape from Ervil LeBaron's world

By Steve Crump
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — At an age when most kids are getting their first driver's licenses, Susan Ray Schmidt was getting married.

"At 15, I became the sixth wife to Verlan LeBaron, the 38-year-old president of the Church of the Firstborn," said Schmidt, a 53-year-old Twin Falls resident. "It wasn't until I was 23 and had five small children that I finally escaped from polygamy."

They were eight eventful years. Schmidt was caught up in a blood feud for control of a polygamous Mormon-offshoot community in Mexico. She's detailed her experiences in a new memoir, "His Favorite Wife: Trapped in Polygamy," published this month.

"It wasn't that I was bound with ropes or chains," she said. "What mostly trapped me was fear — fear of giving up my promised celestial crown as a goddess, fear of losing my relationship with my parents, family and friends in Mexico. Then there was the overwhelming fear that I couldn't possibly make it on my own with five young children out in the scary, evil world."

Schmidt was raised in Colonia LeBaron, a polygamous town in the northern Mexican state of Chihuahua. Her Utah-born parents were converts to the Church of the Firstborn.

"I had a great childhood," she said. "Looking back on what happened afterward is still hard for me to believe."

What happened was a violent power struggle among three brothers. Joel LeBaron — the anointed head of the church — was murdered in the Mexican border city of Ensenada on the orders of his younger brother, Ervil Verlan, Schmidt's husband, became leader of the faction loyal to Joel.

"Ervil was charismatic, convincing, power-hungry and claimed to be Jesus' personal representative on the earth," Schmidt said. "I was 14 when he tried unsuccessfully to coerce me into marriage by insisting God had given him a revelation I was to become his wife."

But Ervil wanted their marriage to be kept secret, she says — even from her parents. Schmidt refused.

"Starting in 1969, Ervil demanded that our prophet (Joel LeBaron) hand over the church leadership," she said. "Ervil wrote threatening letters to the LDS church president and to fundamentalist groups throughout Utah, demanding they uphold him as their new leader or pay the consequences. In 1972, Ervil began a rampage of 'blood atonement' murders. Certain members of Ervil's own personal family, who had become disillusioned with his fanaticism and lunacy, were 'blood atoned.' One of these was my cousin, Lorna — Ervil's fifth wife. More than 25 killings followed, masterminded by Ervil and carried out by his faithful followers."

Softening up the saints: Plush religious toys are big-sellers

Marie Trotechaud holds the prototype Baby Jesus doll.

Los Angeles Times

ORANGE, Calif. — Some ministries rely on Scripture, music and dynamic preachers to spread the faith. Teri O'Toole's ministry relies on cotton, paint and rubber.

The 53-year-old graphic designer sold her home to finance "Soft Saints," a line of toys she hoped would inspire youth to model their lives after someone who lived an ambitiously pious life. Five years later, her squeezable saints have barreled past their intended audience and found homes in the arms of an entirely different group. Along the way, O'Toole forged an intimate bond with Marie Trotechaud, her 99-year-old grandmother. O'Toole may produce role models, but Trotechaud is hers. O'Toole's timing couldn't have been better. When Soft Saints launched in 2001, she unwittingly joined a growing market.

Plush religious toys are "definitely a trend, a very successful one," said Alan Napleton, founder of the Catholic Marketing Network, which promotes Catholic items such as statues, rosaries and, now, holy figures in miniature. New Catholic shops are cropping up each month, he said, and for the first time since the 1940s and '50s, they're gaining momentum in a business long led by evangelical Christians.

Many stores carry dolls such as Soft Saints or Faith-Filled Friends, stuffed biblical characters whose makers, a pair of stay-at-home moms, encourage parents to give their tykes saints to bring to Mass in lieu of action figures or Barbies.

One2believe, another California-based company, takes religious education one step further with its Messengers of Faith dolls, which recite Scripture with the push of a button, in an "easy-to-memorize style."

O'Toole had no such toys growing up, but her childhood was infused with faith. She grew up in the hills of Tustin, Calif., the second of 12 children — in a devout Roman Catholic household. Rather than playing house or dress-up, she and her sister

Group organizes prayers for Bryson in Tennessee governor's race

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A prayer group is hoping to provide Republican gubernatorial nominee Jim Bryson with some divine assistance during his campaign.

The "Bryson Prayer Force" is inviting others to join its 80 members in praying regularly for Bryson, his family and campaign staff.

An e-mail sent by the group included some suggested prayers, as the campaign visits all 95 Tennessee counties in what Bryson's team has dubbed the "Big Tennessee" bus tour.

"Pray for an open heaven over Jim and his team in each Tennessee county they visit, that the gates of each county would open to him and his team, and that the Lord's divine favor will be granted to him everywhere he goes," reads one example.

Polygamy

"By the late 1970's Ervil was known throughout the U.S. as 'the Mormon Manson.'"

Most of the book details her complicated relationship with Verlan, on whom she doted, followed throughout Mexico and Nicaragua and with whom she eventually became disillusioned.

"We lived in small adobe houses — mostly without toilets, running water or electricity," she said. "Food, medical attention or anything that cost money was scarce. But the most compelling reasons I left were my constant loneliness, and emptiness, from being supposedly married yet rarely having a husband and father for my children—around—I began to beg God to help me either totally accept the church and polygamy, and that he just naturally favored his sons more than his daughters, or to show me that this whole concept was as wrong as my gut instincts told me it was."

"I also began the overwhelming task of studying our church doctrine. I started with the subject of polygamy itself — and found discrepancies in the books our church considered scripture. I pointed them out to my husband and he assured me that I just needed to have faith, to not worry about a thing, and leave the heavy scriptures studying to the priesthood men."

On the pretext of a Thanksgiving vacation, Schmidt persuaded her father to drive her and her children to her brother's home in Utah in 1976. She never went back to Verlan.

"For several years after I left Mesa, I felt haunted and lost," she said. "Confusion tore at my insides, and I wondered what the answer to life's important questions really were. I'd been convinced grow-

About Ervil LeBaron

Ervil LeBaron (1925-81) was the leader of a polygamous Mormon splinter cult who ordered the murders of many of his opponents. He justified his actions with the doctrine of "blood atonement."

LeBaron had 13 wives, several of whom he married while they were legally under age.

After the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints officially abandoned the practice of polygamy in 1890, some Mormons moved to Mexico where polygamy laws were not enforced. Alma Dayer LeBaron was one of them, taking his two wives and eight children to the northern state of Chihuahua in 1924.

When he died in 1951, LeBaron passed the leadership of the community — called Church of the Firstborn — to his son, Joel. Joel's younger brother, Ervil, was second in command. The group eventually numbered about 30 families who lived in Colonia LeBaron in Chihuahua, in Utah and in a community called Los Molinos in the Mexican state of Baja California.

In 1974, the brothers split over leadership of the church and Ervil started a new church in San Diego called the Church of the Lamb of God. That same year, he ordered his brother killed. Joel and Ervil's brother Verlan became leader of the Church of the Firstborn, and Ervil tried unsuccessfully over the next decade to have him murdered.

Ervil was convicted in Mexico for the murder of Joel in 1974, but the ruling was overturned by a higher court. Ervil subsequently raised Los Molinos in an attempt to kill Verlan, who was not at home, but the town was partly destroyed and two men were killed in the process.

ing up that I was a member of the only true church on the face of the earth. All others were wrong. My little church would grow and one day soon would encompass the whole world. But that wasn't happening and I didn't believe that it ever would. What else was there? My children needed a church family just as I'd had growing up. Maybe I should go back to Colonia LeBaron," reports the church's shortcomings and realize it was the best the world had to offer. But I couldn't bear the thought."

In Utah, Schmidt worked as a waitress and a telephone operator and lived on welfare for a time, then met a man and had another child. After that relationship ended, she met her current husband. They moved to Twin Falls 25 years ago to start a small business. "One night I found a notebook and began writing my thoughts down, trying to make sense of my shattered beliefs," she said. "Night after night once my children were asleep I would pour over my notebook, writing and weeping and praying that God would guide me and heal my tormented soul. It took a few years, but my self-therapy worked, as did the love of the new husband. The prayers, friendship, and acceptance of the faithful people we met in southern Idaho ran my cup of blessings over. That was the beginning of the book."

Her search for a publisher proved difficult. "I didn't have the resume, the writing credits to attract the attention of a publishing house," she said. "So I decided to have it published in 'Twin Falls.'"

Ervil's attention was also focused on rival polygamist leaders. In 1977, he ordered the "murder of Rufon C. Alired, leader of another group of polygamist Mormon fundamentalists called the Apostolic United Brethren. In 1979, Ervil was arrested in Mexico and extradited to Utah, where he was convicted of engineering Alired's assassination. Sentenced to life imprisonment in 1980, he died of a heart attack a year later.

While in prison, Ervil continued to order his remaining followers to murder his opponents including some of his wives and children. At least 25 people died as result. Several of his Ervil's followers have been convicted of murder, while others are still on the run.

"For many years after leaving Mexico, I was plagued with recurring nightmares," she said. "In these dreams, Verlan and his many wives grasped at me, argued with me, pulled at me, Ervil haunted me. But just this past year, since completing this book, the nightmares have thankfully become a thing of the past."

Verlan had nine other wives — and 57 children — the surviving several assassination attempts by the followers of his brother, only to die in a car wreck in 1981.

Three days after Ervil died in prison of a heart attack. "His Favorite Wife: Trapped in Polygamy" is published by Kassydy Lane Publishing LLC of Twin Falls and sells for $24.95. It's available at Barnes & Noble Bookellers in Twin Falls or online at <http://www.kassydy-lane.com>

Importance of youth

Youth ministry requires more than just being 'good with kids'

The Washington Post

The philosophy of the youth ministry business these days is summed up by a recent cover story in Group magazine, the industry's must-read glossy: "Busting the 'Cool Leader' Myth."

The sarcastic cover photo — a young, cute guy wearing a goatee and jeans, with a guitar slung across his back and tossing a Frisbee — conjures up memories — many — adult Americans carry of the people who were assigned by their church, temple or mosque to be with them when they were young. Youth ministers or youth directors were likely barely out of their teens — someone who organized soft-bull and maybe led a simple Bible study.

That guy is passe. Increasingly, a position once relegated to a low rung on the pay and respect scales is getting bumped up. Spurred by a new seriousness about young people's spiritual development, youth ministers and directors today have more education, are staying in their positions longer and are being paid more than they were a decade ago, according to statistics and interviews with researchers and industry groups.

University classes and majors in youth ministry are becoming more common as the field becomes more professional and establishes standards. Attendance at conferences for youth ministers is doubling as such sessions as the psychology of faith, managing a volunteer force and sexual behavior are offered.

"Even a decade ago, the model was 'Hey, if you're faithful and good with kids, hop on board.' More and more now, there is a realization that you need to be skilled to do this; it's not just hanging out with youth. It's being able to manage budgets, deal with parents — someone who can make this a living faith, not just something that's religious trivia," said Bob Rice, who helped create a youth ministry major at the Franciscan University of Steubenville two years ago. Today, it's the second-largest major at the Catholic school in Ohio.

The increased focus on youths plays out in different ways and at various paces in various faith communities. Religious minorities such as Sikhs and Jews tend to make cultural identity and pride a key aspect of young people's programs. And although Catholic youth ministry experts say much of this is new, evangelical Protestants have been talking about it seriously for about 20 years, said Group's editor, Rick Lawrence.

That's when, he said, "the church recognized a profound truth, which is that 80 percent of people who become Christians do so before the age of 18. The church started to wake up to the reality that a lot of its work needs to be in youth ministry. The church began to take young people more seriously."

This thinking is feeding a fast-growing industry of software, videos, high-tech games, conferences and other programs created by such companies as Group, Youth Specialties and Simply Youth Ministry. For $42, youth ministers can buy "Hot Illustrations for Youth Talks," a CD with "lively and effective" parables and anecdotes for presentations to kids at camp or parents. For $625, they can attend a fall training conference with Life Teen, the company that created youth-oriented Mass programs that are attended each Sunday by 120,000 teenagers nationwide. For $60, they can order a six-week teaching package called "The Power of Sex" by acclaimed youth minister Doug Fields.

"There is an avalanche of resources pouring in," Lawrence said.

The philosophy dominating the business today is "relational" ministry, which means not so much using teen lingo or dressing cool but spending quality time with young people and understanding the morally nuanced, complex world in which they live. That can require delving into painful and emotional dialogue.

Catholic youth minister David Costanzo, 31, said his "programming model" focuses on convincing young people of their divine worth and value, in part by relating to painful problems they might have, such as depression, substance abuse or self-mutilation. Having been abused as a child, contemplated suicide and experienced counseling, Costanzo said, he can connect deeply with the teen-agers he works with at St. Mary of Sorrows Church in Fairfax Station, Va.

"Most youth ministers I've gotten to know have been through something in life, and it's been a result of their relationship with Christ that's carried them through," he said.

Some say this thinking has spurred "postmodern" youth ministry, which means exploring God not only by focusing on the precise words of the Bible but through experiences, including poetry and other arts. This shift is controversial. "For some, this is stripping the message itself of its truth," Lawrence said.

The Rev. James Black, head of North American Youth Ministries for the Seventh-day Adventist Church, said the faith community realized in the past few years that old methods such as simple Bible classes weren't even close to working.

"As a society, one day we just woke up and realized we ran into a brick wall. What are we saying to these kids? If we don't keep up, we'll be left behind," he said. Only 500 of the Adventist Church's 6,000 North American churches have full-time youth directors or youth ministers, he said, but that number is rising. This year, 3,000 to 5,000 people came to its youth ministry convention, up from 1,500 in previous years.

Part of this is possible because youth ministers are being paid more. The average salary and benefits package for a full-time youth minister has risen from $27,259 in 1990 to $36,696 in 2003 to $39,049 in 2005, according to the annual salary survey done by Group, which polls leaders from various Christian denominations.

REDEFINING RAMADAN

Scholars, astronomers aim to end a confused Muslim holiday tradition

The Associated Press

Kari Ansari recalls getting ready to celebrate one of the most important religious holidays of the year — the end of the monthlong Ramadan fast.

She and her husband bought new clothes and gifts for their three children and planned a special family meal. But there was one obstacle to starting the celebration: Leaders of the "two" local mosques couldn't agree when the feast, called Eid al-Fitr, should begin.

"We would just be sitting up at night waiting to hear the decision," said Ansari, who lives in Herndon, Va., and is editor of America's Muslim magazine.

The Muslim practice of following a strict lunar calendar, requiring a naked-eye sighting of the new moon to start a holiday the next morning, has divided the Muslim community on its most sacred days. Now a scholarly panel that advises American Muslims on religious law is trying to end the confusion.

The Fiqh Council of North America announced last week that it would no longer rely on moon sightings to determine the start of holidays and would instead use astronomical calculations. The panel released an Islamic calendar that runs through 2011, hoping Muslims in the United States and Canada can be persuaded to trade the old way for the new.

The schedule problem is more than a minor inconvenience. School calendars and vacation time from work, for instance, depend on knowing dates in advance.

The date of the Eid is based on the Hadith, traditions taken from the life of the Prophet Muhammad. The prophet taught that the holiday marking the end of Ramadan comes the morning after a nighttime sighting of the new moon.

Under the most conservative interpretation, two credible witnesses with expertise in Islamic sharia law have to see the crescent moon with the naked eye before their observations can be accepted, said Sulayman Nyang, an expert on Islam at Howard University.

But the Fiqh Council con-

Astronomer Khalid Shaikat poses with a telephone at his home in Silver Spring, Md. He uses astronomical calculations to determine the Islamic calendar, so that all North American Muslims can celebrate the holidays on the right day.

tends that the prophet used direct sightings only because no other method was reliable in his lifetime. "Now, we know scientifically whether the moon is there, even if it is not sightable because of the weather conditions," said Muzammil Siddiqi, the council chairman.

Kareem Irfan, of the Council of Islamic Organizations of Greater Chicago, where an estimated 400,000 Muslims live, said the uncertainty of the old system has been costly.

Organizers of the massive community worship services that mark the holiday had to reserve convention halls for two different days, losing money on the double deposit, he said. Muslims who needed a day off from work or had to make plans for pulling their children out of school could not say when the celebration would be.

A patchwork of practices developed, even within the same town.

Some foreign-born imams would follow moon sighting announcements from their native countries. Others followed the decision of the government of Saudi Arabia, where millions of Muslims make pilgrimages each year. It was not unusual to have members of the same family celebrating the holiday on different days.

"It makes you feel sad," Ansari said, "because not everyone is doing the same thing."

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"Look like the innocent flower,
But be the serpent under 't."
— William Shakespeare

On defense, when you duck your honors smoothly, you may deceive declarer if he assumes you would have covered if you could.

This runs directly counter to the advice of covering an honor with an honor. Still, sometimes you might decide that the risk of conceding an overtrick by not covering is irrelevant compared with the chance to set the hand by ducking and thus fooling declarer.

For example, when Geoff Hampson and Eric Greco were playing East-West in the 1997 Cavendish, they produced one of the best defenses of the tournament. Declarer, in three no-trump, won the queen of clubs at trick one to lead a diamond toward dummy's king. (Playing on spades may be theoretically better, but declarer's intention was to shift to spades if the diamond king held, of course.)

Hampson took the trick with his ace of diamonds and returned the six of clubs, ducked by Greco. Declarer won in dummy and led the spade queen, which Hampson ducked without hesitation! (Knowing his partner had the club A-K meant that if he covered, declarer was likely to have nine tricks via five red-suit winners and four black-suit tricks, but nonetheless this was fine defense.)

Now declarer assumed the spade finesse was wrong. He rose with the spade ace and cashed his heart winners — on which Greco threw two spades — then took the diamond finesse. Greco could win and cash out for a spectacular one down.

ANSWER: Your partner's jump to four clubs is a slam-try, showing short clubs (a splinter-bid). That being so, your hand measures up very nicely since you have nothing wasted in clubs. Cue-bid four diamonds and hope partner can take it from there.
