Idaho Power rethinks Twin Falls system

By Michelle Dunlop
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Getting power to the people just got a little more complicated for the region's utility.

Earlier this month, Twin Falls County's Planning and Zoning Commission turned down a request from Idaho Power Co. to build a substation off Pole Line Road. Idaho Power officials say the company needs another substation to meet the area's increasing demand for electricity. But locals argued the substation wouldn't fit with the neighborhood.

"Planning and zoning found the substation incompatible with the surrounding area," said Dan Olmstead with Idaho Power.

The proposed substation would have been used to increase Idaho Power's distribution abilities. Its purpose would be different than the Midpoint substation north of Jerome. Midpoint handles high-voltage power coming from sources like the utility's Shoshone Falls hydropower plant and coal-

-fired power plants in Wyoming and Nevada. The electricity needs to go through a smaller substation, like the one turned down in Twin Falls County, before it can go to a house or business.

In Jerome and Twin Falls counties, Idaho Power already owns 20 substations, said Lynette Berriochoa, spokeswoman for the utility. The company has not built a substation in the area since 1976 but has upgraded some existing substations.

"The growth on the northwest side of Twin Falls requires us to have a new substation to handle the load," Olmstead said.

Ideally, the company should locate its new substation between existing stations near Twin Falls and Filer.

"It makes sense electrically to locate a substation somewhere in the middle," he said.

Residents in the area, however, felt the substation would not have been aesthetically pleasing.

So, what options does the company have?

Idaho Power could expand the substations it operates in Twin Falls or Filer or it could look to build a station in a different location. Right now, officials are exploring the options. However, they won't have much time to waste in devising new solutions, Olmstead said.

The company planned to bring the proposed substation online by June. And it still needs to have a plan in place by that date.

"The need has not gone away," Olmstead said.

Scammers posing as debt collectors

By Mary Dalrymple
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The IRS warned taxpayers Wednesday not to be duped by scammers posing as private debt collectors the agency has hired to chase unpaid tax debts.

The Internal Revenue Service designed the debt collection program to minimize that risk "because we know what it's like out there with regard to identity theft nowadays," said Brady Bennett, IRS director of collection.

But some critics of the program see so many pitfalls that they're urging debtors to insist on negotiating payment directly with the IRS.

The National Treasury Employees Union, which represents IRS employees and opposes the program, has even drafted a sample letter that taxpayers can send to opt out of the private collection program and demand that the IRS handle their case.

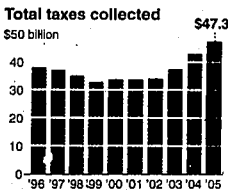

The IRS plans to assign 12,500 accounts with unpaid tax debts to three private agencies beginning Sept. 7. About 40,000 accounts will be turned over by the end of the year. The IRS chose taxpayers who owe less than $25,000 and don't dispute the debt.

Anyone contacted by a private collection agency has the right, among others, to Justice: Risch's special session illegal

LEWISTON (AP) — Gov. Jim Risch's decision to limit Friday's special legislative session to only one bill — his own and not a rival plan put forth by Democrats — is illegal, a former Idaho Supreme Court justice says.

Risch wants to ease the property tax burden by eliminating the annual $260 million school maintenance and operations levy. He'd generate the money instead by raising the 5 percent sales tax by a penny on the dollar and by using some of Idaho's budget surplus.

According to the Idaho Constitution, the governor can call an extra session for "the purposes for which he has convened it." The Legislature cannot "legislate on any subjects other than those specified in the (governor's) proclamation."

Former Justice Robert Huntley, a Democrat who served from 1982 to 1989, said considering only one bill is different from considering one subject, on which a number of bills might be put forward.

Democrats have put forward a plan that would only eliminate the school tax for homeowners. The $105 million cost of that plan would be paid for out of the existing surplus.

"If they don't get to introduce the bill because of perceived limitations in the governor's proclamation, then that would be a violation of the constitution," Huntley told The Lewiston Tribune.

TFEA approves teacher contract

By Joshua Palmer
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — This year's teacher contract negotiations seemed to pass by unnoticed, very different from last year's turbulent talks.

The Twin Falls Education Association ratified the Twin Falls School District's teacher contract proposal yesterday morning after a joint presentation by the TFEA president and the district superintendent.

"I feel like we had a very good negotiation session this year," said Peggy Hoy, TFEA president. "I think a lot of it is attributed to the return to interest-based bargaining."

Last year, the contract negotiation process was slowed by the breakdown of interest-based bargaining, which allows representatives of the local teacher's union to negotiate directly with district administrators. Tension between teachers and administrators escalated further when both sides brought in outside negotiators and attorneys to resolve the lengthy dispute.

After casting their votes for this year's contract, Twin Falls School District teachers wait outside Roper Auditorium on Wednesday morning.

Contracts

Several months past the deadline for ratification, the TEFA barely succeeded in gathering enough votes to approve the contract.

"I think what was equally important as the interest-based bargaining was the Legislature's monetary support, which helped out quite a bit," said Wiley Dobbs, superintendent of the Twin Falls School District.

During the last legislative session, the Legislature approved a 3 percent increase to base salaries for teachers.

According to a statement from the Twin Falls School District, the settlement includes a 3 percent pay raise for full-time teachers, increased insurance premiums covered by the district, and bonus money paid to substitute teachers based on the duration of time worked.

Also, in the event that the uncommitted fund balance increases in excess of $90,000, half will be distributed to total employees' salaries and half to the general fund balance.

"I think this was very positive because most teachers stayed to listen this time, and I think that shows that we are rebuilding some of those bridges that might have been broken," Hoy said.

Collectors

insist that only the IRS deal with their account. Bennett said he hoped few taxpayers with debts sent to private collectors would opt out.

"The purpose of this program is to provide value to the American taxpayer. Those who don't pay have an impact on everybody else who does," he said. "We want this program to work, and we think we've designed the necessary security, privacy protections."

Among those protections, the IRS has done background checks and designed special training for collection agency employees working on the accounts.

The IRS plans to give the collection agencies basic identifying and account information about the chosen taxpayers, including their names, addresses and Social Security numbers. The agencies do not have access to tax returns.

The selected taxpayers will know their information has been given to a collection agency because they will get letters from the IRS that will name the company handling their debts.

That letter will include information advising taxpayers of their rights.

It will be followed by another from the collection agencies telling the taxpayers they will soon be contacted for payment. Those letters will specify the amount owed.

The selected taxpayers can then expect a phone call or an additional letter from the collection agency requesting payment. The private collection agencies will try to locate taxpayers who have moved from the addresses or phone numbers the IRS has on record.

Taxpayers uncertain about the process or wanting to verify the letters are legitimate can call the IRS at 1-800-829-1040.

Identity thieves have posed as IRS agents in "phishing" schemes that use the tax agency's logo to lure victims. The e-mail schemes are designed to lure taxpayers into revealing personal financial information.

The IRS does not communicate with taxpayers through e-mail, and it will not e-mail taxpayers about debts turned over to private collectors.

The IRS also does not ask taxpayers for any passwords or PIN numbers that would allow the agency to access bank or credit card accounts.

Bennett also cautioned taxpayers chosen for the debt collection effort to make any check or money order payable to the U.S. Treasury, not a private company, and to send the money to the IRS.

The collection agencies have been told to provide addresses to the taxpayers they contact.

Collection agencies can set up agreements to let taxpayers pay their debts in installments if they can be paid within three years.

Taxpayers can also seek help from the Taxpayer Advocate Service, an office that helps people resolve problems with the IRS, at 1-877-ASK-TASI.

In Chicago, restaurateurs see faux pas in ban on foie gras

By Karl Lydersen
The Washington Post

CHICAGO — Don't come between foodies and their foie gras.

That was the message sent by Chicago diners who dug into foie gras dishes Monday, on the eve of the city's ban on foie gras. High-end restaurants had special foie gras tastings to protest the ban, and even a few down-home sandwich and pizza joints added it to their menus for the occasion.

At the 676 Restaurant & Bar on Chicago's Magnificent Mile, chef Robert Gadsby topped foie gras with Pop Rocks candies, wrapped it in prosciutto and blended it into hot chocolate as part of an "Outlaw Dinner" that also featured such controversial ingredients as wild morrels, absinthe, unpasteurized imported cheese and hemp seeds. While the seven-course, $140 dinner was completely legal, all the ingredients have been banned at some point.

Gadsby, a chef known for his pop cultural, eccentric approach to American food, called the foie gras ban "ridiculous."

"What's next?" asked Gadsby, who also hosted an Outlaw Dinner last month at his Noe Restaurant & Bar in Los Angeles, where foie gras will be subject to a statewide ban by 2012. "They'll outlaw truffles, then lobster, beluga caviar, oysters. There are diners who eat to fill a hunger urge, and there are diners who eat to be dazzled. If you take away the luxury ingredients, how can you dazzle them?"

The Chicago City Council passed the foie gras ban in April, joining California and several European countries that outlawed foie gras, alleging animal cruelty. Foie gras, French for "fat liver," is produced by force-feeding grain to ducks and geese so their liver enlarges as much as 10 times its normal size.

"This isn't telling people what to eat; this is basically a statement against cruelty to animals," said Alderman Joe Moore, sponsor of the ordinance. "This is a product of animal torture, pure and simple. It doesn't need to be on menus in Chicago."

Chicago restaurant luminaries Charlie Trotter and Rick Tramonto agree and have both vowed not to serve the liver dish.

But others want to fight. On Tuesday, the Illinois Restaurant Association and Allen's, the New American Cafe in Chicago filed a lawsuit challenging the ban. The suit alleges the ban violates the state constitution, and will cost the city $18 million in lost revenue and taxes.

The city Department of Public Health will respond to initial reports of foie gras sales with a letter; if there is a second report, health inspectors will pay a visit. Health department spokesman Tim Hadac said there is little departmental enthusiasm for the ban, which Mayor Richard M. Daley has mocked as the "silliest law" passed by the council.

"We're not exactly chomping at the bit to enforce this," Hadac said. "It's an animal rights issue; it doesn't appear to relate to human health in any way."

The ordinance bans only the sale of foie gras, so restaurateurs have speculated that they can get around it by giving away foie gras or serving it at private parties.

Gadsby jokingly wondered whether he could cook with handcuffs on.

Firm creates stem cells without destroying embryos

By Matt Cresson
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — In an innovative move, a biotech company has found a new way of making stem cells without destroying embryos, touting it as a way to defuse one of the country's fiercest political and ethical debates.

Some opponents of the research said the method still doesn't satisfy their objections and many stem cell scientists and their supporters called it inefficient and politically wrong-headed. But a spokeswoman for President Bush, who vetoed legislation last month that would have

And Dr. Robert Lanza, an executive with Advanced Cell Technology, which created the new stem cell lines, said: "This will make it far more difficult to oppose this research."

Stem cells have become a Holy Grail for advocates of patients with a wide variety of illnesses because of the cells' potential to transform into any type of human tissue, perhaps leading to new treatments. But the Vatican, President Bush and others have argued that the promise of stem cells should not be realized at the expense of human life.

The new method works by taking an embryo at a very early stage of development and removing a single cell, which can be coaxed into spawning an embryonic stem cell line.

Survivor of Sago Mine disaster, families file suits

By Pam Ramsey
Associated Press writer

CHARLESTON, W.Va. — The lone survivor of the Sago Mine disaster and the families of two victims on Wednesday sued the mine owner and five other companies, alleging negligence that put the miners at grave risk as they went about their work underground.

All three lawsuits accuse International Coal Group and a subsidiary of shoddy operation of the mine near Buckhannon, and of producing unsafe conditions that led to the Jan. 2 explosion.

Twelve men died in the blast or succumbed during their prolonged entrapment, while survivor Randal McCloy Jr. was severely injured.

The lawsuits were filed in Kanawha County Circuit Court by McCloy and his wife Anna; Judy Bennett, widow of miner Alva Bennett; and Lily Bennett, widow of miner James Bennett.

Each suit seeks unspecified compensatory and punitive damages.

Besides targeting ICG and a subsidiary, Wolf Run Mining, the suits accuse a number of mine suppliers of failing to provide proper safety equipment. Named were Burrell Mining Products Inc., Raleigh Mine and Industrial Supply Inc., GMS Mine Repair and CSI Corp.

ICG said it had not reviewed the suits but that it planned to fight them.

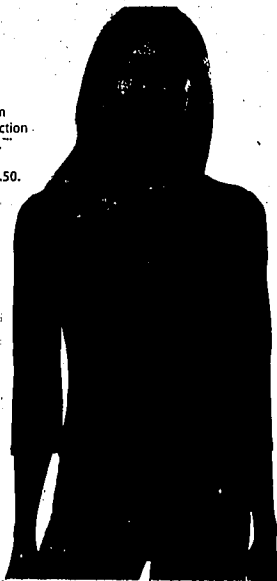

The company said it expected state and federal investigations, which have not been completed, to confirm that it was not at fault.

"The outcome of the Sago mine explosion was indeed tragic; however, that tragic outcome does not translate into negligence on the part of the company," ICG said in a statement.

Representatives of the other companies did not immediately return phone messages.

Appellate court: Drug Court not bound by due-process rules

By Rebecca Boone
Associated Press writer

BOISE — Drug court defendants can be booted out of the program without due-process procedures, the Idaho Court of Appeals has ruled.

The divided court was ruling in the case of Paul Lawrence Rogers, an Ada County man who was kicked out of his drug-court program for several violations, including allegedly trying to recruit women in the program to join an escort service.

"I was disappointed by the ruling and I'm sure Mr. Rogers will be disappointed as well," Rogers' attorney, Deputy Appellate Public Defender Erik Lehminen said of Tuesday's ruling. "As far as we're concerned, there should be a fair process in place for Mr. Rogers to challenge any accusations that come up in drug court and he should be able to get a fair hearing." Lehminen said Rogers would petition the Idaho Supreme Court.

Rogers entered drug court in 2004 after being charged with possession of methamphetamine, according to court documents — pleading guilty and entering Ada County's drug court program rather than going to trial. If Rogers "graduated" from the program, his guilty plea would be set aside and he would avoid prison time, the court said.

Rogers got off to a rough start in the program, according to the appellate ruling. He tested positive for drugs and missed treatment sessions, prompting sanctions from District Judge Ronald Wilper, who was presiding over the drug court. After 10 weeks in the program, program officials became concerned about Rogers' attempt to start a business called "Desire, Inc.," Rogers admitted that he had been recruiting females, including participants in the drug court program, into the business by handing out business cards.

— He maintained the proposed stripping and escort services was legal adult entertainment. Wilper said he believed Rogers was "enticing female members of the drug court program into prostitution," Rogers was eventually kicked out for both the recruitment efforts and the earlier violations.

Judge: Death penalty remains an option in Duncan trial

By Nicholas K. Geranios
Associated Press writer

COEUR D'ALENE — A judge ruled Wednesday that Joseph Edward Duncan III may indeed face the death penalty if convicted in his upcoming triple-murder trial and also left intact Idaho's ban on the insanity defense.

First District Judge Fred Gibler also rejected a defense request that a jury be brought in from another Idaho county for the trial because of the avalanche of news coverage after an abducted girl was found with Duncan last summer.

Gibler said there was no presumption that Duncan, 43, could not receive a fair trial from local jurors.

"The mere fact there is publicity does not require a change of venue," Gibler said. "If possible, this case should be tried in Kootenai County with citizens of Kootenai County."

He said he would reconsider the motion if it became apparent during jury selection that an impartial panel could not be found. About 800 potential jurors will be called for a trial set for Oct. 16, lawyers said.

Defense lawyer John Adams submitted evidence showing nearly 700 newspaper articles, almost 200 letters to the editor, numerous local TV news reports and tens of thousands of Internet site hits involving the case.

"Duncan has been prejudged and sentenced to death," Adams complained.

Prosecutor Bill Douglas said finding people who had not heard of the case would be impossible.

"There is not a person in Idaho who has not heard of this case," Douglas said. But he said the test is whether a juror can follow the judge's instructions.

Duncan, a convicted sex offender, is charged with using a hammer to kill Breanna Greene; her fiancé, Mark McKenzie; and Greene's 13-year-old son, Slade, in May 2005. He faces the death penalty, or life in prison without parole, if convicted in the killings at the family's home east of Coeur d'Alene. Court documents allege the killings were a means to kidnap Shasta Greene, then 8, and Dylan Greene, 9, for sex.

Duncan was arrested July 2, 2005, at a Denny's restaurant in Coeur d'Alene while eating with Shasta. Dylan's remains were later found at a campsite in Montana.

Gibler rejected a defense motion contending that Duncan should not face the death penalty because of technicalities in Idaho's charging laws. Gibler said state law was correctly followed in this case.

And the judge rejected a motion contending Idaho's ban on the insanity defense was unconstitutional. Adams said the ban was counter to hundreds of years of common law, but the judge ruled the state Supreme Court had already decided the issue.

Gibler will study a prosecution request that Shasta Greene, now 9, be allowed to testify at the trial without having to look at Duncan and with supportive adult nearby. Court documents indicate Duncan held her captive for seven weeks before her rescue in Coeur d'Alene.

New ITD leaders should use restraint on bonding

For the second time in two months, the Idaho Transportation Department is making a change in its top brass. Given the turbulent path of change in the agency in recent years, the changes don't come a day too soon.

Thursday's retirement of ITD director Dave Ekern, which was preceded by the resignation of ITD Board Chairman Chuck Winder in July, is an opportunity for the state's second-largest department to return to its traditional course of highway funding and lift agency morale in the process.

Gov. Jim Risch appointed Dwight Bower, who steered ITD from 1993 to 2003, as Ekern's replacement.

Bower will join Frank Bruneel, a former Lewiston legislator who took over for Winder as board chairman, to change ITD's wide scale reliance upon long-term indebtedness for highway construction.

Building roads through debt bonds was the basic premise behind former Gov. Dirk Kempthorne's Connecting Idaho plan.

The bonds would be grants in anticipation of revenue from the federal government's gas-tax funds, or GARVEE bonds.

The GARVEE method can be a successful way to build the most necessary roads earlier than usual. But too many projects at once on GARVEE were a drastic departure from Idaho's traditional pay-as-you-go method.

Kempthorne's firm defense of GARVEE bonding, and the Legislature's resistance to it, created a hostile debate on the issue. Lawmakers eventually settled on a toned-down version of the governor's $1.2 billion project list last winter. Six projects are in the beginning phases, while others — including a new bridge over the Snake River canyon in the Magic Valley — were cut.

But for ITD employees, the GARVEE plan ushered in additional conflicts.

A recent independent report by former transportation chief Darrell Manning that included 60 employee interviews found ITD leaders lacked effective communication with the ITD board. The report also said employees worked with little positive feedback and "an unusual amount of fear" on the agency's changing role.

"Under Ekern, the department was asked to make changes to the organization," said Jeff Stratten, an ITD spokesman. "Changes to the organization can be troubling and disconcerting."

Risch did not say whether the study figured into Ekern's exit.

But it became apparent to some local officials that even after Winder's departure in July, ITD was still playing the GARVEE card. In a meeting with Twin Falls city and county officials two weeks ago, an ITD engineer emphasized that completion of the Pole Line Road-Highway 93 connector in Twin Falls, beyond its current phase, would only be possible through more GARVEE debt.

Risch spokesman Brad Hoaglund says the governor is receptive to a scaled down list of projects that can prove the worth of GARVEE bonding.

"This is new for everybody. We've not done highway funding in this manner. Any time you do things new, there's hesitancy, there's change, and communication is a key component to make sure of what's going on and how it's going to happen."

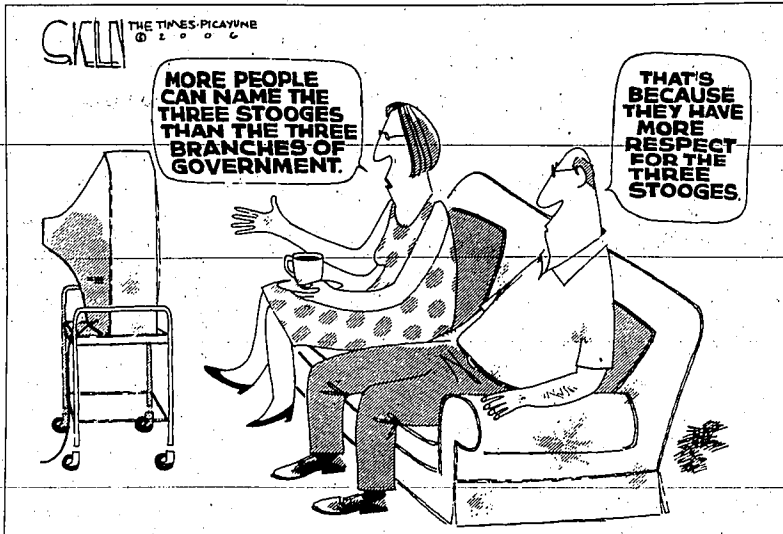

With Bower returning to the helm of ITD, the agency has a new chance to use GARVEE sparingly, and return to the traditional method of project funding. That could include a round of legislative efforts to increase fuel taxes or license plate fees. Those options and others may need to be examined, since Idaho's rate of growth is outpacing the state's ability to maintain highways.

A new governor in Boise next winter will have a greater determining factor on the future of GARVEE planning and highway projects.

But the top level transitions at ITD can send a sound message that expertise within the department can play a greater role on highway projects than executive pressure.

Our view:
Changes at the Idaho Transportation Department can help GARVEE bonding advance at a more cautious pace.

What do you think? We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

Property tax bill provides key relief

Property tax in Idaho is in need of reform. Before we can begin the discussion of lowering our property taxes, we must have a basic understanding of current property tax policy in the state.

Generally, we have two types of property taxation in Idaho.

The first is budget-driven systems such as county, city, hospital, fire, ambulance and miscellaneous taxing districts. Generally, these taxing districts are all limited to a 3 percent increase over the previous year's budget. In addition to the 3 percent maximum growth, these districts are allowed to add new construction and cities also may add annexed properties. Generally, taxpayers in these types of districts could pay an additional 3 percent unless they have voted upon themselves additional increases.

The second type of property tax is the School Maintenance and Operations levy. This is the only one of its type. In general terms, it is simply a multiplication of your taxable market value times .003. For example, if your market value rises by 41 percent in a year, then your School M&O tax also will trace with a 41 percent increase in the amount you will pay, unlike all other taxing districts.

So, to curb the large increases in property taxes, we must decouple the School M&O from the huge market value increases that many parts of the state of Idaho are experiencing. Then and only then will the debate over high property taxes be at the local level.

The Property Tax Relief Act of 2006 will be the subject of the special session to be held this Friday. It will accomplish this decoupling and is the only way to give real property tax relief to the citizens of Idaho.

The act will:

- Immediately provide $260 million in property tax relief.
 - Raise the sales tax by 1 cent, which will generate $210 million.
 - Appropriate the full $260 million back to public education from the State General Fund, which comes from the $210 million sales tax and using $50 million of the surplus, resulting in no reduction to education and a $150 million tax reduction.
 - Protect education funding by placing $100 million into the Public Education Stabilization Fund.
- The reason for the special session of the Legislature is simple. If property tax relief is something that interests you, then it is absolutely necessary to make this change prior to the issuing of the tax bills in November.

Property tax does not look at the taxpayer's ability to pay the tax. Sales and income tax generally do. Having studied this issue for several years and being a member of the House Revenue and Taxation Committee for six years, I believe this change in tax policy is necessary and long overdue.

This is only a start of the tax reform that is needed in Idaho. We also must look to a substantial increase in the Grocery Tax Credit, elimination of the Personal Property tax and a reconsideration of many of the exemptions to the sales tax.

Rep. Ken A. Roberts, R-McCall, serves District 8, Clearwater, Idaho, Lewis and Valley counties. He is the chairman of the Transportation Committee and is on the Health and Welfare, Legislative Council and Resources and Environment committees.

Tax plan excludes alternative solutions

Even out of 28-40 percent. That's all it would take for our Senate Republican colleagues to stop an unnecessary tax increase for homeowners. Can they find the courage to forge a bipartisan property tax relief bill that targets relief to homeowners without raising the sales tax? Or has the governor backed his party into the tax increase corner by limiting debate and demanding loyalty? And why has the public been denied a voice in the matter?

To understand how the Aug. 25 special session of the Legislature came to this, people need to know the two basic proposals for property tax relief.

The Democrat's Idaho Homeowner Tax Reduction Act targets relief to homeowners because their property taxes have risen four to five times faster than other property tax payers. Under our plan, homeowners who live in their homes would see their taxes reduced approximately 20 percent. The $105 million cost can be covered without raising or shifting taxes with the current budget surplus and ongoing revenue growth.

The governor's tax shift plan

does not target homeowners. In fact it serves up 60 percent of the tax cut to absentee homeowners ($15,000 to Arnold Schwarzenegger, for instance) and to special interests like utilities, agriculture, timber and commercial interests whose property taxes have remained relatively stable or even declined. To support the special interest tax cut, the governor's tax shift plan increases the sales tax by 20 percent.

What does the governor's tax shift plan mean for homeowners? Every analysis, from two University of Idaho studies to the State Tax Commission, conclusively shows that, in most instances, any benefit to homeowners is eliminated by the sales tax increase. To make matters worse, as residential property taxes continue to rise, homeowners will see any property tax benefit evaporate while they continue to pay 20 percent higher sales tax.

Is it any wonder that the special interests support the governor's tax shift plan? They believe that homeowners received too much relief when the small increase in the homeowners exemption passed in March. Do the majority of Republican senators really agree, as we're told?

A very substantial majority of Idahoans support the Democratic Idaho Homeowner Tax Reduction Act. Polling shows a 6 to 1 preference for our plan, and newspaper and radio surveys show the same level of support. That's no surprise. You probably remember that versions of the governor's tax shift plan were shot down multiple times when Legislature met in open session, with public involvement and open debate.

Yet now our interim governor, led by Republican legislative leadership, has dictated his solution while declaring any other ideas off-limits.

First, we were told that renters would benefit under his plan because landlords would pass on their tax savings. Not likely! Renters will simply see a 20 percent increase in their sales tax. Then they trotted out the idea that utility rates would decrease. Pretty pitiful considering that the average homeowner might save 15 cents a month by 2008, less than each household will pay in extra sales tax every time they sit down for supper.

When the governor's party controls 80 percent of the Legislature, why fear an open debate? On Friday, Aug. 25, the Senate Democrats will offer the Legislature a chance to say "no" to the governor's tax increase by supporting the Idaho Homeowner Tax Reduction Act.

Idaho citizens need only 11 Republican senators to support homeowners who are at risk of having tax relief given with one hand then siphoned off to special interests with the other. Will Senate Republicans have the courage to buck their party and stand with homeowners?

Sen. David Langhorst, D-Boise, serves District 16, Ada County. He is on the Legislative Council, Local Government and Taxation, Resources and Environment, and Transportation committees.

Additional school costs don't add up

The Buhl Herald, Aug. 9, published a list of school fees for virtually everything imaginable that public schools can possibly do for students elementary through high schools. The same school systems also expect parents to pay at least $100 per child per year for their children's elementary school supplies.

It's high time Idahoans took state officials, and perhaps county as well, to task regarding this educational bucket with no bottom in it. The books can't possibly be in balance.

Parents pay a small fortune annually for these costs while state and federal tax dollars, property taxes, part of the Idaho lottery and paid admission to school events also feed the kitty. Then bond issues are floated for school construction and, I'm told, teachers help pay the costs from their own salaries. And it still isn't enough! In a state (Idaho) that has higher taxes, relative to personal income, than almost every other state in the United States. While only one state, as well, is poorer than Idaho.

The books can't possibly balance and, additionally, Idaho lags far behind other states educationally. And don't blame the teachers for that. That's bull!

We need a reliable audit and better management. It's impossible to fill a bottomless bucket.

Inside Karr's mind: I have fun, rights, the media

Inside the mind of John Mark Karr: Don't worry, I won't take you all the way inside my mind — I have to save something for my Barbara Walters interview!

JAMES PINKERTON

But I will tell you three things: I am the logical culmination — or at least predictable result — of three cultural trends visible during my 41 years on this Earth: First, baby-boomer hedonism. Second, rights-based legal proceduralism. And third, the media's enabling of what I regard as "authentic" behavior.

First, as a boomer, I grew up with "Do your own thing" and "If it feels good, do it." And, of course, "Free to be ... you and me." Well, for me, spending "quality time" with children is my thing. It's what feels good to me. It's who I am.

Now, of course, the authorities are saying that I went too far, that personal freedom doesn't include having sex with children. But where were they when the novel "Lolita" was published, back in 1955? That book, about an older man's affair with a 12 1/2-year-old girl — which provided erotic inspiration to millions of pedophiles — is regarded as one of the great works of 20th century literature. And needless to say, I agree! Second, I know my legal rights. We all have rights, which keep the government from cracking down on us. Rights for everyone are embedded in our culture: young Hillary Rodham Clinton wrote her law school thesis on the legal rights of children, including the right to sue their own parents. Decades later, when Michael Jackson, exercising his romantic rights, was ambushed by the cops, he hired a bunch of lawyers and got himself off. That seems to be the test: Can you hire enough lawyers?

Sadly, I don't have Jackson's money, so I have to depend on some lawyer taking my case pro bono. But I'm not worried; I'll get a good one, because whoever takes my high-profile case is guaranteed fame and probably fortune — ever after.

Third, speaking of fame, let's not neglect my best ally, my enabler, the media. The media brought me close to girls I had never even met. Before I ever knew of JonBenet Ramsey, for example, the press had brought me the sensational news of Polly Klaas, the girl who was taken from me — you would say "murdered" — in Petaluma, Calif., back in 1993.

She became famous in death. Most people were repulsed by the crime, to be sure, and laws were changed as a result, but I had my own unique reaction — as is my right! The more I learned about her, consuming the tabloid-y news, the more I grew, shall I say, fond of her and her memory.

So of course I moved to the same town, Petaluma, to work there as a schoolteacher, to bask in the aura of her continuing ghostly presence. Does that sound weird to you? Well, turn on a TV, and you will see what I mean: In the bluish glow of television, as well as computers, the dead have a kind of second life, flitting forever across screens.

Yes, the media provide the light that pulls me out of the darkness, so that all can see me, in my male (or is it female?) glory. I am ready for my close-up, Mr. and Ms. American! My poetry, my values and my lifestyle choices might not be welcome in, say, a church, but I can always find an empathetic TV reporter — indeed, whole TV channels devoted to "true crime" — who will welcome me as a great

"get." You might think of me as a creep, or even a criminal. But in truth, I'm a performance artist, responding to my patrons, my fans.

I'm what you get if you liberate everyone, celebrate everything, and then televise anything. So I, and more like me, will be seeing you, just as you are seeing me — and all of us.

Miami Herald

Nuclear energy is the future.

This is the rationalization behind Energy Secretary Samuel Bodman's decision to provide incentives to companies willing to build the first nuclear plants in the United States in 30 years. The government is offering $2 billion in federal insurance for six new plants.

But this initiative also needs more research. There still are no good answers to the biggest problem that comes with nuclear energy — where to dispose of the radioactive waste.

Nuclear energy is crucial for the U.S. economy and environment. Reinvigorating the industry now would come at a time when energy prices are escalating.

Relatively little fuel is needed to run nuclear-power plants, and they would generate electricity at cheaper rates. Moreover, nuclear energy is the most promising long-term approach to reducing U.S. dependence on fossil fuels.

Some environmentalists believe nuclear energy is a viable strategy to reduce greenhouse gases that contribute to global warming. Additionally, these plants do not pollute the air with harmful gases such as carbon monoxide, aerosols or photochemical smog.

In addition to incentives for nuclear plants, the government should look for ways to minimize the risk from nuclear waste. Nuclear-plant construction was halted in this country after the partial meltdown in 1979 at Three Mile Island in Pennsylvania. Yet a bad historical event should be cause for improvement, not a restraint on beneficial technology.

The government should proceed with deliberate caution in developing new nuclear plants as it figures out how to dispose of the waste that will be generated.

Developers flex their muscles with city

I recently visited the Twin Falls City Planning and Zoning Commission office. I talked to a very nice lady. When leaving, I said, "Would I have the same chances with the commission as do, and I named a couple of developers that have already paved over several productive farms around Twin Falls City?" She said, yes, and believed it. I don't!

A big developer recently purchased a 100-plus acre farm in our area. Before the ink was dry on the contract, he had applied to Twin Falls Zoning to have it annexed into the city and have it changed from R4 to R1 (high density). Maybe he stands the same chance of being refused the change that I would, but I doubt it. You don't become a big developer by taking chances like that. As a local business used to advertise, "It's like having friends at the factory." Since we live between this development and the city, as presidential hopeful Ross Perot said, "there will be a giant sucking sound" as they drag us kicking and screaming into the city.

Agencies release proposed plan for remediation of contaminated tank farm soil and groundwater

Historical spills from process piping and valves, and activities (such as maintenance and sampling) inadvertently released waste to the surrounding soil. No leaks occurred from the tank/vault systems themselves. Contaminants released to the soil include primarily three radionuclides: cesium-137, strontium-90 and technetium-99 and nitrate.

Contamination also came from a former wastewater injection well (plugged in 1989) that released radioactive contaminants (cesium-90 and iodine-129) to the Snake River Plain Aquifer.

The agencies finalized a remedial investigation/feasibility study earlier this year that concluded actions must be taken to protect workers and the Snake River Plain Aquifer. Five alternatives were evaluated as part of the study: (1) limited action (i.e., protective controls, maintenance and monitoring); (2) capping and monitoring, (i.e., installing a cap over the tank farm to limit water infiltration and protect workers, and installing a cap over the tank farm and groundwater); (3) hot spot removal, capping and monitoring (i.e., removing contaminated soil from the largest leak at the tank farm, installing a cap and monitoring); (4) hot spot grouting, capping and monitoring (i.e., grouting the most contaminated soil in place, installing a cap, and monitoring); and (5) contingent aquifer pump and treat.

The agencies identified capping and monitoring as the preferred alternative. Two types of caps would be installed over the tank farm, both limiting water infiltration, but one would also protect workers from radiation exposure. Administrative controls are currently in place to protect workers, and some infiltration controls have been implemented. Capping the tank farm would prevent contamination that is currently in the perched water system (i.e., a zone of water over 100 feet below the tank farm) from moving down and contaminating the Snake River Plain Aquifer.

A final remedy will be selected for the tank farm soil and INTEC groundwater after grouting and capping. All information submitted during the 30-day public comment period on the proposed plan.

Additional information is available in the Administrative Record file for Operable Unit 3-14. The Administrative Record is located at the DOE Reading Room of the INL Technical Library in Idaho Falls. Marines thought their duty was done, now face involuntary recall

By Thomas Watkins
Associated Press writer

SAN DIEGO — After spending six months in Iraq, Marine reservist David Morgan figured he was done patrolling the dangerous streets and could focus on building his biotech business.

He may be wrong. Now Morgan could be returned to active duty as part of the first involuntary call-up of reservists since the early days of the war.

"It would be devastating to my career," said Morgan, 37, vice president and general manager of Irvine-based US Labs, a medical diagnostic company with 700 employees.

The call-ups, announced Tuesday, will begin in the next few months. Most of the Marines are expected to serve in Iraq and Afghanistan.

More than 2,500 Marines will be recalled at any one time, but there is no cap on the total number who may be forced back into service for up to two years.

Morgan, a lieutenant colonel, said he believes in the U.S. mission in Iraq, but fears another deployment would hurt his company.

"We have a highly specialized work force," Morgan said. "If leaders leave, workers could get skittish."

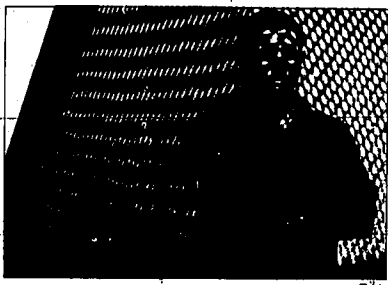

The call-up will affect Marines in the Individual Ready Reserve, a segment of the reserves that consists mainly of those who have left active duty but still have time remaining on their eight-year military obligations.

In Columbia, Mo., Marine families are buzzing with questions about the latest call-up order, said Tracy Della Vecchia, who oversees MarineParents.com and whose son is in the ready reserve.

"You think you're done," said Della Vecchia.

She's also concerned that newsworthy events may be brewing elsewhere in the world — perhaps in North Korea. She says people "never know the whole story until it hits us front and center."

Her son, Derrick Jensen, is a 23-year-old Marine who has already seen three tours of combat duty as an infantryman and communications specialist, including stints in some of Iraq's most volatile war zones. He still has three years remaining on an eight-year contract.

Even though Della Vecchia said her son knew he made a long-term commitment, neither was prepared for the roller coaster of emotions created by repeated trips to the battlefield.

"He was home. He was starting his life. He was going to make up for four years of lost time, catch up with his friends and his wife," she said. Jon Soltz, an Iraq war veteran and chairman of VoteYes.org, said the recall is a sign that troops are drastically overextended and it is "the last thing that happens before the draft."

Paul Hackett, an attorney from Cincinnati who specializes as a civil affairs specialist makes him a prime candidate for an involuntary recall, as there is a shortage of Marines like him.

Two weeks ago, he received a packet from the Navy requesting updated information for a security clearance — a sign, he believes, that a recall order could be coming.

Hackett, a major, returned in 2005 from a combat tour in Iraq. Soon after, he ran unsuccessfully as an anti-war candidate in a key Senate race.

If he is forced back to Iraq, Hackett, 44, said it would be hard to be away from his wife and three young children, but he wants to fight with his fellow Marines.

"Even in this miserable excuse of a war that this administration has gotten us into, the Marine Corps is a great operation," he said.

Woman admits stealing $2.3 million from employer to buy lottery tickets

RIVERHEAD, N.Y. (AP) — A former bookkeeper for a doctor's office pleaded guilty Wednesday to stealing more than $2.3 million from her employer to buy lottery tickets.

Annie Donnelly, 38, of Farmingville spent as much as $6,000 a day playing lotto and scratch-off lottery games, prosecutors said. She faces four to 12 years in prison for stealing the money from her employers, Great South Bay Surgical Associates.

Donnelly, who is being held in lieu of $150,000 bail, also will have to repay the money. She is charged with second-degree grand larceny.

"She obviously had a gambling problem," said Donna Planty, assistant district attorney. "She appeared to be caught up in the high of winning."

Investigators believe Donnelly may have won jackpots of $5,000 or even $25,000, but never enough to cover the amount stolen overall, Planty said.

Defense attorney George Vlachos declined to speak with reporters. A telephone call to the employer was not immediately returned.

Show me the way

CSI sophomores focused on national title defense

TWIN FALLS — Humor a brief screenplay, if you would.

The stage is set as the late-afternoon sun slowly wanes along with the oppressive August heat that consumes the junction between U.S. Highway 93 and Interstate 84 north of Twin Falls. An athletic woman, dark-skinned and aged in the twilight of her teens or infancy of her 20s, stands alone, a black jacket piped with the yellow words "College of Southern Idaho Volleyball" covering her back. As the lean woman sets her gaze east, a dapper young man enters the scene from the west and clears his throat.

Man: Excuse me Miss, do you know how to get to West Plains?
Woman: West Plains, Mo.? Man: (Nodding in agreement) The exact one.
Woman: Start conditioning in August, pound the ball for four months and hope your team peaks by Thanksgiving. As the scene fades to black, the man's befuddlement is eclipsed by only one thing — the glint of sun off gold from the woman's 2005 NJCAA National Volleyball Championship ring.

That fictional meeting at the crossroads may sound like the setup to a bad joke, but there's no joking in saying that all roads to West Plains, Mo., and the 2006 NJCAA National Volleyball Tournament share something in common with U.S. Highway 93. They all run through Twin Falls, where the defending national champion Golden Eagles begin pursuit of their ninth national title with tomorrow's CSI Outback Invitational. While head coach Ben Stroud has assembled another uber-talented class of eight freshmen, it's the combination of three sophomore returnees and a transfer familiar to Twin Falls that will provide the leadership necessary to make a return trip to the "Show Me" state.

What 2006 CSI sophomores Anell Cubi-Otineru, Kaylene "Pudgie" Finau, Christine Manuel and transfer Whitney Bond need to show is that they're match-tested and ready for the task of writing one more successful page in the program's storied history. While a 50-2 tour de force to last year's title saw the Golden Eagles make winning matches look easy time and again, this year's sophomores know that winning a championship and defending it are completely different monsters.

"Even though we're defending national championships, just being CSI, that's a name right there," Cubi-Otineru said. "Everybody wants to get CSI out, because we have so much (success) from before."

CSI's eight national championships mean not only that Stroud and his program own the most titles of any NJCAA team, but are also consistent recipients of their opponent's best efforts. The proverbial bull's-eye that comes stitched into the fabric of every CSI jersey also means that the pressure to perform is always there.

"I'm nervous, just because it's a lot of pressure because we are defending national champs," Manuel said. "I just kind of want to live up to that because everybody's going to be looking at us, wondering how we are."

The wondering will soon be over and the answer to those

Quest for nine

CSI starts four-month odyssey

TWIN FALLS — For a man who's more comfortable in a T-shirt and shorts than anything buttoned down, Ben Stroud sure owns a lot of rings.

Outside the world of athletics, the collection would be a flamboyant eccentricity. For the College of Southern Idaho head volleyball coach, the eight rings in question — and the NJCAA championship they represent are proof that Stroud has built a bona-fide sports dynasty in Twin Falls.

In 2006, they could also be a problem. No, not because the NJCAA's best will all be gunning for CSI. They've been doing that for years. The problem is a simple matter of real estate. Eight rings for eight fingers mean that Stroud's ninth title will have to be a big one. Big enough to warrant a ring that will fit around a coaching legend's thumb.

Of course, it's easy to put the cart before the proverbial horse with the Golden Eagles. The defending national champions finished 50-2 last year and swept through the national tournament without dropping a single game over four matches. That was without then-injured setter Kaylene "Pudgie" Finau. Now, with Finau on the verge of return after months of rehabilitation on her surgically repaired anterior cruciate ligament, the vaunted CSI offense is kicking into gear. The fleet of foot hit the field

Burley senior Anguiano closing in on 100 goals

By Brad Guire
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — He's so close. It's almost here. Burley Bobcats senior Eduardo Anguiano is less than 25 goals away from hitting 100 high school career goals.

In a match against Wood River on Tuesday, he netted three to put him at 77 with 13 games left in the regular season. He'll have to average two per game if he wants to hit the century mark before the district tournament. It's doable.

"He's on track, we hope," head coach Wes Nyblade said. "It'd be a fitting way to finish out his high-school career."

Meanwhile, the Bobcats will again want to get past the rest of the Great Basin Conference West and East for a slot in the 2006 state tournament. Last year saw the Bobcats take third place at state with a 4-1 victory over the East's Pocatello.

"We'll be in the hunt again," Nyblade said. "We've got good senior leadership. Our big issue is replacing our all-state goal keeper (Michael Kelsey), and we graduated most of the defense and back line. We had a tremendous JV team last year, so we're figuring out how they fit into our game plan."

3A Community School

Outthroat soccer is like an atom, with its four returning starters as the nucleus of another state-bound team.

The positions of goalkeeper (O'Reilly), sweeper (Campbell), and a few midfielders (Caleb Sonneland, Alden Remington) will make up the core of this year's team. At forward, Travis Stone will be back to put some in the net. He scored 18 goals as a sophomore in 2005.

With a strong group of fresh faces to complement the seasoned vets, The Community School could take District IV again.

They begin the 2006 season against Twin Falls in Ketchum on Saturday.

Declo

For a program still trying to elevate itself to the top of the conference, nothing could be worse than to be hit by graduation.

That is the situation the Declo Hornets soccer team finds itself in entering the 2006 season.

The 2005 season saw Declo pick up five victories, which was one shy of tying the school record. However, with 13 players off of last season's team gone to graduation, things could get a little interesting for coach Tim Henriksen.

Seniors Nathan Brown, Lucas Spradling and junior Eddy Alvarez figure to have huge roles on this season's team.

Brown will be the anchor on the Declo defense, playing as a stopper. Alvarez will be the center midfielder, and Spradling will likely play wherever he is needed this season.

The goalkeeper position is still up for grabs, with Chad Christensen and Zach Carson in the running to win the position.

SAPPORO, Japan (AP) — With a record 35 points by Carmelo Anthony and first place in its group, the United States had plenty to celebrate Wednesday night.

Anthony scored 19 points in the third quarter, leading the Americans back from a 12-point deficit to beat Italy 94-85 — their toughest test yet in the world championships.

"That's probably the toughest game we had in international play so far," Anthony said. "We're used to beating teams by 20, 25 points in the two previous games. You come into this game thinking, 'OK, we're going to try to beat them by 25. When we thought like that, they almost were up 25 in the first half.'"

Playing extensive minutes with fellow captains Dwyane Wade and LeBron James after U.S. coach Mike Krzyzewski was forced to scrap his two-unit rotation, Anthony went 13-of-18 from the field, including 5-of-7 from 3-point range.

He broke the U.S. scoring record set by Kenny Anderson, who scored 34 points in a 1990 world championships game — for a team also coached by Krzyzewski.

"Carmelo was amazing," center Elton Brand said. "He got hot, and he's that type of scorer. He can shoot from anywhere."

Wade added 26 points, helping the Americans (4-0) finally seize control for good midway through the fourth quarter with six points and an assist during a 10-2 spurt that gave the U.S. a 13-point lead.

The U.S. clinched the top seed in Group D and will face the fourth-place team from Group C on Sunday in the round of 16.

But the U.S. wasn't the only team that walked off the floor with pride. The Italians gathered in a circle after the game ended and applauded themselves, knowing how close they had come to duplicating a victory over the U.S. in 2004.

"I'm very honored to coach this team," Italian coach Carlo Recalcati said. "We tried to keep under control of the game for 40 minutes, but it was not possible. Every time we made a mistake they go and score easily."

The Italians (3-1), done in by a five-minute stretch without a field goal in the third quarter, can still earn Group D's No. 2 seed by beating Puerto Rico on Thursday.

But they were thinking bigger after controlling the first half to the delight of a group of fans chanting "Italia Italia!"

Marco Belinelli scored 25 points for the Italians, the 2004 Olympic silver medalist. They defeated the U.S. 95-78 in an exhibition game prior to those games.

The Italians were expected to take a step down from that level after turning to a younger team following a ninth-place finish in the 2005 European championships that forced them to need a wild card to qualify for these world championships.

They hit 30 3-pointers in their first three games, and the Americans tried to negate that by extending their defensive pressure farther from the basket. But the Italians took advantage with dribble penetration while working their offense expertly in the first half, when they shot 58 percent.

Thome injured as Sox top Tigers

DETROIT (AP) — Jim Thome limped off the field in the second inning with a hamstring injury in the Chicago White Sox's 7-5 victory over the Detroit Tigers on Wednesday night.

The White Sox lost the first two matchups in the four-game series with the AL Central-leading Tigers, but bounced back with Joe Crede's two home runs and Jermaine Dye's three-run homer. Chicago, which had lost six of eight, trails the Tigers by 6½ games in the division and has a slim lead over Minnesota in the wild-card race.

Freddy Garcia (12-8) allowed five runs and seven hits over 5 1/3 innings. Thornton and Mike MacDougal combined for 2 2/3 innings of scoreless relief before Bobby Jenks worked the ninth for his 36th save in 38 opportunities.

Rookie Zach Miner (7-5) gave up six runs, four hits and two walks over 1 1/3 innings. Dmitri Young hit a two-run homer for the Tigers.

who lost their fourth straight and sixth of seven. Alfonso had a go-ahead double in the eighth inning of Tuesday's 7-6 victory.

Mets 10, Cardinals 8

NEW YORK — Jose Reyes hit a three-run homer. Chris Woodward had a three-run double and the Mets held on.

Steve Trachsel (13-5) gave up six runs and six hits in five-plus innings but still managed to win his fourth straight decision. Billy Wagner pitched the ninth for his 32nd save in 37 chances.

Marlins 9, Nationals 7

MIAMI — Miguel Cabrera homered twice and drove in four runs to help the Marlins complete a three-game sweep.

Cabrera, who went 3-for-4 and scored three times, became the fifth active player to reach 100 career home runs before his 24th birthday. He also became the sixth-youngest player overall to reach the milestone.

Scott Olsen (10-7) allowed three runs and seven hits in six innings to snap a personal three-game losing streak.

Pirates 5, Braves 4

ATLANTA — Freddy Sanchez hit a tiebreaking homer in the seventh inning and the Pirates handed Atlanta another loss at Turner Field.

Jason Bay also homered for the Pirates, who won two of three in Atlanta after coming into the series with baseball's worst record on the road. They won only their third series away from PNC Park, having lost 17 and split another.

Brewers 7, Rockies 1

MILWAUKEE — Ben Sheets pitched seven sharp innings and Prince Fielder drove in two runs for Milwaukee.

Tony Gaffanino also had two RBIs for the Brewers, who won for the fourth time in five games to move within four games of Cincinnati in the NL wild-card race. Sheets (4-5) struck out seven, and allowed six hits and one run.

Phillies 2, Cubs 1

CHICAGO — Jimmy Rollins doubled in the go-ahead run with two outs in the top of the ninth to lead Philadelphia to its fifth straight win.

Matt Murton's one-out homer in the bottom of the eighth tied the game at 1-1 for Chicago after Brett Myers (9-6) held the Cubs scoreless on three hits through the first seven innings.

Owens reagravates hamstring in practice

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Terrell Owens won't be in any hurry to get off the bicycle this time.

Like he did for most practices during training camp in Oxnard, Calif., Owens rode a stationary bicycle Wednesday when the Dallas Cowboys held their first workout at home.

The receiver said he reagravated his left hamstring injury by returning to practice too soon last week.

"At this point, yeah, I will be close to 100 percent before I get back on the field," Owens said. "I'm not going to jeopardize my health just because of speculation or anything like that."

Owens characterized his injury as a "severe certainty" and said he almost certainly will miss his third straight preseason game. The Cowboys play at home Saturday night against San Francisco, Owens' original team.

"It's frustrating, but it's not what I need it to be to play and perform like I need to," Owens said. "So at this point, I'm going to be smart about it."

Asked if he could play if the regular season were starting, Owens said, "I doubt it, not the way I need to play."

After missing 14 consecutive training camp practices and the preseason opener in Seattle because of the hamstring problem that has bothered him all month, Owens returned for five practices last week. He then missed the final full workout in California and didn't play Monday night against New Orleans in Shreveport, La., after the hamstring tightened up on him.

Owens had returned to practice after Cowboys owner Jerry Jones suggested that the receiver needed to learn how to practice at less than 100 percent. His first practice back came only hours after coach Bill Parcells reiterated that Owens needed to be on the field.

Titans' Young hurts throwing hand

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Vince Young gave the Tennessee Titans — and himself — a scare Wednesday when the back of his throwing hand slammed against a helmet during practice.

Young was upset with the trade because Nolan assured him earlier in the week he wouldn't be dealt. He told the newspaper Nolan was a "first-time head coach with too much power."

"He walks around with a chip on his shoulder, like he's a dictator, like he's Hitler," Barlow told the paper.

Young was examined on the field, then walked off for X-rays and did not return to practice. Coach Jeff Fisher said he wasn't too concerned, because the preliminary examination on the field indicated only a bruise.

"It's going to be all right. X-rays were negative," Fisher said. "It's going to have a sore hand, and we haven't ruled him out for the game."

The Titans host Atlanta on Saturday. Young said he would see his hand Thursday to see if he could grip and squeeze a ball.

The sound of his hand crashing against the helmet and the resulting sting worried the No. 3 pick overall in last April's draft.

"I scared me a whole lot just hearing the sound effect. The hit and hearing it all a little bit," Young said. "It's all right though."

Barlow apologized Wednesday to 49ers coach Mike Nolan for comparing him to Adolf Hitler in a newspaper interview.

Barlow, who was traded from San Francisco to New York on Sunday for a fourth-round pick, made his inflammatory comments to the Contra Costa Times. The often outspoken Barlow said after practice Wednesday he left a detailed message for Nolan.

"If I could take it back, I would," Barlow said. "I was very emotive in all I knew at the time was San Francisco, that was where I started my career, that's where my house was. It was a shock to me."

"I'm a passionate player, I'm an emotional guy when it comes to on the field and off the field. Sometimes it gets the best of us. I put it behind me, and I'm glad to be a Jet."

Barlow was upset with the trade because Nolan assured him earlier in the week he wouldn't be dealt. He told the newspaper Nolan was a "first-time head coach with too much power."

Twins 4, Orioles 1

BALTIMORE — Rookie Matt Garza allowed one unearned run in six innings to earn his first major league victory, and Michael Cuddyer had three hits and two RBIs to lead Minnesota.

Torii Hunter homered for the Twins, who got 13 hits off Baltimore starter Rodrigo Lopez (9-13). Minnesota started the day a half-game behind the Chicago White Sox in the AL wild-card race.

Devil Rays 7, Rangers 3

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Jorge Cantu hit his first homer since July 29 and drove in three runs to lead Tampa Bay.

Cantu hit a two-run drive in fifth and a run-scoring double one inning later that gave the Devil Rays a 4-3 lead. He sat out the previous two days and was hitting just .146 since July 24 before going 3-for-4 against Texas.

Carl Crawford added a two-run shot in Tampa Bay's third-inning seventh.

Athletics 6, Blue Jays 0

TORONTO — Esteban Loaiza pitched a four-hitter for his first shutout in more than two years, and Frank Thomas and Milton Bradley homered to lead Oakland.

Thomas hit his 475th homer, tying Willie Stargell and Stan Musial for 23rd on the all-time list.

San Francisco's two-run shot off Gustavo Chacin (6-3) in the first was his 27th homer. Bradley had an RBI double in the first and a two-run shot in the sec-

National League

Astros 7, Reds 3

CINCINNATI — Aubrey Huff's bases-loaded single highlighted Houston's wacky seventh-inning rally and the Astros avoided a sweep with a 7-3 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

Willy Taveras batted for a single that extended his hitting streak to a club-record 26 games, and Adam Everett homered and drove in a pair of runs for the fading Astros. The defending NL champions won for only the third time in their last 12 games.

Giants 7, Diamondbacks 6

SAN FRANCISCO — Rookie Eliezer Alfonzo delivered the go-ahead hit for the second straight game and Pedro Feliz ended an 0-for-15 stretch with a tying two-run double in the seventh for the Giants.

Alfonzo tripled to right-center moments after Feliz doubled to center against Brandon Lyon (1-3) to tie it at 6. The Giants completed a three-game sweep of the stumbling Diamondbacks, Cade Baugh, Alejandro Delgado and Jesus Torres netted goals for the Indians while Jared Lassen picked up the Wildcats' lone goal.

Buhl (1-0) hosts Jerome Saturday morning. Filer (0-1) travels to Ketchum to face The Community School Monday.

American Falls 5, Minico 2

RUBERT — The Minico Spartans fell on hard times again against American Falls with a 5-2 loss at home on Wednesday.

Raul Martinez and Luis Herrado picked up goals, both were assisted by Raul Navarrete. The Spartans had the game tied at two goals apiece, but gassed out and allowed American Falls to rally in the second half.

"Our conditioning is not what it should be. We're quite sluggish," Minico head coach Dennis Haynes said.

The Spartans (0-3) travel to Pocatello today.

Gooding 5, Declo 0

GOODING — This time the Hornets got stung as they dropped a 5-0 game to Gooding on Wednesday.

The Spartans netted goals from Juan Valdez and Julio Ledezma in the first half, while Scott Zarate, Cesar Hernandez and Ledezma scored in the second half.

"For a first outing, it was a good game for both teams," Gooding head coach Roger Johnson said. "We need a lot of work, but I was impressed with Declo."

Gooding (1-0) plays in-country rival Wendell away on Monday. Declo (0-1) hosts Bliss on Monday.

Twin Falls

A new year brings another new coach, but this time in girls soccer. Katie Kauffman has come full circle to take over the Twin Falls Bruins varsity squad, which hopes to make another run at state. Kauffman isn't a stranger to the team or the area, as she spent three years at the junior varsity level and with the Twin Falls Rapids. She is also a Twin Falls graduate who put in a few years with Boise State University playing club soccer.

"We're a very strong team with some key offensive players," Kauffman said. "We lost our goalie from last year (Erin Donnelley) to graduation (and others), so we're trying to work some JV girls into some positions this year."

Some familiar faces on the team include Dusty Easter and Natasha Brenner of Bruins softball fame. Last year, the Bruins fell in the consolation bracket at state.

Tiger Woods smiles as he waits to hit from the fairway on the fourth hole in the practice round of the Bridgestone International World Golf Championship, Wednesday in Akron, Ohio.

2006 Magic Valley Soccer Capsules

TWIN FALLS — A look at the prep soccer teams in the Magic Valley.

Boys
Class 5A
Region Four-Five-Six
Twin Falls Bruins

Head coach: Trent Felton, eighth year
Assistant coaches: Robert Ortoski, Nathan Thompson
2005 record: 7-6-0

Team notes: This will be the youngest team Felton has had with eight seniors, four juniors and a gaggle of sophomores. Jeff Jewell returned from a two-year layoff and earned a spot as team captain through tryouts.

Class 4A

Great Basin Conference West
Burley Bobcats

Head coach: Wes Nyblada, 13th year
Assistant coach: Manuel Espinoza
2005 record: 17-3-1

Offense: Eduardo Angulano, sr. forward; Dax Greener, sr. midfielder; Martin Hernandez, sr. midfielder; Victor Del Toro, Jr. midfielder; Gabe Rios, sr. midfielder.

Defense: Gustavo Sanchez, Jr. defenseman; Jesus Alvarez, senior defenseman.

Team notes: The Bobcats should once again establish themselves among Idaho's Class 4A elite, led by the offensive skills of senior forward Eduardo Angulano, Burley's all-time leading scorer. Angulano will close in on his 1,000th career goal this season, while Burley's traditionally strong midfield will be led by seniors Dax Greener, Martin Hernandez and Gabe Rios. Seven of Coach Nyblada's players return after seeing significant playing time last year. One big question: Who will step up to replace all-conference performers Benficio Sanchez and Michael Kelsey at forward and goalkeeper, respectively.

Class 3A
District IV

Bliss/Hageman Bears

Head coach: Daniel Knapp, fourth year
Assistant coaches: Mike Casten

Offense: Eli Gough, sr. forward; Jovan Rojas, sr. forward; Lalo Coronado, Jr. midfielder; Dale Butler, Jr. midfielder.

Team notes: The Bliss Bears team up with Hageman after taking last year's Class 3A District IV championship. The Bears lose five of last year's standouts, but will field another solid team to play on the home field, "The Dog Scratch." A solid crop of incoming freshmen will bolster the depth of Coach Knapp's roster.

Filer Wildcats

Head coach: Bill Sweet, fourth year
Assistant coach: Jeff Sweet
2005 record: 0-12

Offense: Jared Lassen; Joel Tovar; Jack Williams; Jose Ross; Casey Murray; Black Packer.

Defense: Murray; Tyler Rue; Jayden Hatch; Lance Watson; Anthony Haffinger; Michael Barmuta; Justin Orban.
Team notes: The Wildcats will be a hungry team looking for wins this season, but don't return too many players with experience starting.

Girls

Class 5A

Region Four-Five-Six

Head coach: Katie Kauffman, first year

Class 4A

Great Basin Conference West
Minico Spartans

Head coach: Amanda Tapla, fourth year
Assistant coaches: Chad Ashford, Mabel Tapla
2005 record: 6-12-3

Offense: Dany Ramirez, sr. forward; Kelsha Lloyd, Jr. forward; Lacy VanEwyke; Kelsie Halverson; Marissa Hansen, Bianca Santana.

Defense: Shalom Frank, Amanda Rogers, Mona Merrill, Sarielcee Brown.
Newcomers: Ariel Beinaip, Kayle Legault, Ashley Robinson, Vicki Vega, Hollie Wright, Ruth Anthony, Megan Harper.
Team notes: Coach Tapla returns two of the area's top offensive players in senior forward Dany Ramirez and junior forward Kelsha Lloyd, who missed last year due to injury.

Ramirez was Minico's leading scorer last year, while Lloyd held that title in 2004. That experienced offense, coupled by a defense led by the aggressive Shalom Frank, will look to lead the Spartans to greater things in the Class 4A ranks this season.

Class 3A
District IV
Buhl Indians

Head coach: Sasha Pavlovich, fourth year
Assistant coaches: Tom McCaulley, Heidi Stutzman

Offense: Madeline Meiers, sr. forward; Jessica Harris, Letty Nevarez, Trista Allen, Misty Henson, sr.; Autumn Yurbe, soph. forward.

Newcomers: Kristen Fahrenwald, Katy Hulise, Kim Madsen, Trazia Wuensch, sr.; Tori Berger, Marcela Munguia.
Team notes: Sophomore forward Autumn Yurbe returns as one of the area's best young offensive weapons and will form a solid two-pronged attack with senior Madeline Meiers, while senior Janna Lively will reprise her role in goal. Seniors Eva Stutzman and Amanda Lyon will give solid effort to Coach Pavlovich, one of the area's top soccer minds.

Community School Outthroats

Head coach: Kelly Feldman
Assistant coach: Carolina Stevens

Newcomers: Nellie Brown, fr.; Kayla Cloud, fr.; Maddy Kate Curry, fr.; Maddie DuPont, so.; Erica Eshman, fr.; Keller Gibson, so.; Mattie Griswold, so.; Madison Murch, fr.; Kerry Lee Nelson, fr.; Lily Pidgeon, fr.; Marin Sheperdson, so.; Anita Vorstveld, fr.; Delaney Willey, fr.

Team notes: The Outthroats went a perfect 8-0 in league play last year and look poised to defend their conference title in 2006.

Tiger returns to a comfortable place

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Tiger Woods was given the choice to play one golf course where he had to win, with a few stipulations.

Augusta National was closed. And his passport had expired, so he couldn't go to St. Andrews.

The best options would be Torrey Pines or Firestone, where Woods has won four times each among his 51 victories on the PGA Tour.

"It would be probably be here," Woods said Wednesday at the Bridgestone Invitational, where he is defending champion and will try to win for a fifth time on Firestone South.

"It's a treat to get to play a golf course like this, because of all the modern courses aren't like this," he said. "They don't have trees like this or defined fairways. Every hole looks like it's an alley way. It's more of a ball-striking course."

Woods has won by 11 shots and won in a seven-hole playoff, and he has never finished out of the top 10 at Firestone dating to 1997, when it was the World Series of Golf.

"This is his benefit tournament," said U.S. Open champion Geoff Ogilvy.

Making him even more dangerous this week is the timing. Woods is coming off a five-shot victory in the PGA Championship and will go for his fourth consecutive victory this week.

It is at his best when he is in his comfort zone. Sometimes that can be on a golf course, such as the Firestone, Torrey Pines or Muirfield Village (three victories). And sometimes that can be a position on the leaderboard.

Woods improved to 12-0 in the majors and 37-3 on the PGA Tour when he has at least a share of the 54-hole lead, beating Luke Donald last week at Medinah.

"You'd like to go into a final round thinking that the pressure was on him because he's expected to play well," Donald said. "But it's almost reversed that way, because he's been there so many times. And for me, that was one of my first times. He knows how to do it. It's been there many times. It comes a little bit easier for him."

In the majors alone, Woods has failed to break par only one time when playing in the final group, a 2-over 72 at Bethpage. Black when he won the 2002 U.S. Open by three shots. His average score in those situations is 69.25, while his 11 opponents (Sergio Garcia has played with him in the final round twice) is 72.67.

It wasn't always like that. Woods said he has noticed a transformation in his comfort level over the last 10 years, from his first time playing in the last group at a major (a nine-shot lead) to three days ago at Medinah.

"Winning breeds winning, and the fact that I've been down the stretch and I've been there enough times where I've had to handle the heat, that gives you an added confidence," he said. "I can always say, 'I've done that.' Because I have. As the years go by, you still are nervous but probably not as much."

There's not much to get nervous about this week. The Bridgestone Invitational is a World Golf Championship — Woods already has won 11 of those, by the way — which means different things to different players. To some, it's a short field. To others, it's an elite field.

To most, it's free money. The field is composed of Ryder Cup and Presidents Cup players, along with the top 50 in the world and selected tournament winners from the six main tours around the world.

It adds to 78, everyone from Woods to Shiv Kapur of India, from Phil Mickelson to Gonzalo Fernandez. They will be playing for $7.5 million, with $1.3 million going to the winner and $30,250 for last place.

If there's pressure, it might fall to the Europeans. The United States set its Ryder Cup team Monday, with Tom Lehman choosing Stewart Cink and Scott Verplank as his captain's picks. Europe's team won't be determined for another two weeks, ending at the BMW International Open in Germany.

Five players qualify through world ranking points, and the other five list from a European tour money list that began last summer. Where it gets tricky is that most Europeans play a full schedule in America and rely heavily on the world rankings. But at a tournament like the Bridgestone Invitational, the money can go a long way.

Nick Price optimistic at Reno-Tahoe Open

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Once arguably the best golfer in the world, Nick Price's priority these days is spending time with his family. Nonetheless, the man with 18 victories and more than $20 million in career earnings on the PGA Tour said he's optimistic his first trip to the Reno-Tahoe Open will bring out the best in his game as he readies to join the Champions Tour in January.

"The best way to describe it is I'm treading water, waiting for the Champions Tour, which is coming around in about four months time," he said before Wednesday's pro-am. "I really feel I can crank it up a notch or two and be competitive."

Price, who was inducted into the World Golf Hall of Fame in 2003, turns 50 on Feb. 28. Four past champions — John Cook, Kirk Triplett, Chris Riley and Notah Begay III — are among those playing this week at the 7,472-yard Montreux Golf and Country Club that winds through ponderosa pines and mountain streams on the edge of the Sierra Nevada. Jesper Parnevik, Fredrik Jacobson, Steve Elkington, Shigeki Maruyama, Alex Ceja, Graeme McDowell and Jason Day are among the other international players entered. Others in the field for Thursday's opening round include PGA Championship runner-up Shaun Michael, Mark Brooks, Rich Beem, Woody Austin and Jonathan Kaye.

another special year for his program. "It's just a matter of now we have good athletes and we have kids that can hit," Stroud said. "We just need to get that execution level and get Pudge back so we can get our team together and keep growing as a team."

Those early growing pains will be smoothed by the experience and talent of Anelli Cubi-Olivera and Christine Manuel. Stroud said that Anelli Cubi-Olivera has put in the work it takes to be the nation's top player — this year, while the steady Manuel is better than ever.

"She looks awesome to me," Stroud said. "She looks like a First Team All-American."

Stroud didn't find a replacement for 2005 NJCAA Player of the Year JoAnna Kaczor. Instead he brought in a group of nine players that offer more depth than last year's squad. Every setter Leslie Aki and Whitney Bond, to outside hitters Ivana Bramborova, Kawsa Cubi-Olivera and Hannah Richards, the Golden Eagles are two deep in every position. Or three deep at middle blocker, as a trio of 6-foot-1 players — Jackie Fonu, Gabriela Bolawczyk and Jordana Price — will all contribute. Price, a redshirt freshman transfer from Oregon State University has been an early success for Stroud.

"Jordana's been a really pleasant surprise," Stroud said. "She's really good off one foot, which is a very hard thing to defend. She's worked her tail off the whole preseason. She's worked very hard to try to establish her spot on the team and she's done that."

Freshman Chantelle Esteban will take over the libero duties that Pohai Nu'uhiwa monopolized last year. CSI doesn't have the all-around height of last year's team, but will feature better offensive balance and size throughout the lineup.

"We aren't as big this year, definitely, so we have to work a little harder," Manuel said. "I think we're trying to speed things up, get ahead of all the bigger girls."

The Golden Eagles have four week-ends of nonconference tournaments to work some new wrinkles into their offense before opening Scenic West Athletic Conference play in Price, Utah against the College of Eastern Utah on Friday, Sept. 22. Brent Martindale's team will be led by sophomore outside hitter Maren Ericson and sophomore setter Heather McFarland.

With the departure of Didi State College to the NCAA Division II ranks, every match in the 12-game SWAC schedule will carry added weight in the five-team conference.

Brett Taylor: 2005 Region 18 Coach of the Year, and his North Idaho College Cardinals will again be a contender with sophomore outside hitters Cintia Alessi and Konaee Purcell leading the way.

The Salt Lake Community College Bruins return 2005 Region 18 second-teamer Kris Hymas and brought in three solid international freshmen to help with the offense. Head coach Les Colles had middle blocker Elise Rees back, one of only returning Region 18 First Team members. The other is CSI's Anelli Cubi-Olivera.

ing time late in the season. Averaged 1.12 blocks per game as a CSI freshman. He has coached 28 NJCAA All-American recipients and holds a 926-189 record at CSI.

Career highlights: This season marks Stroud's 22nd at CSI. He has led the program to eight National Junior College Athletic Association Division I championships, including the 2005 national title. That title list also includes a run of six straight between 1993 and 1998. Among his accolades are eight NJCAA Coach of the Year awards. He has coached 28 NJCAA All-American recipients and holds a 926-189 record at CSI.

In 2005: The Golden Eagles earned their eighth NJCAA title, compiling a 50-2 record en route to a dominating performance at the NJCAA National Tournament. CSI defeated Miami-Dade Community College 30-24, 30-20, 30-23 in the championship match. The team featured two NJCAA First Team All-Americans (JoAnna Kaczor and Anell Cubi-Otneru) and five All-Region 18 Team members.

Personal: Stroud graduated from Fairfield's Camas County High School before attending Treasure Valley Community College in Ontario, Ore. He earned a bachelor's degree in physical education from Boise State University, and a master's degree in athletic administration from Idaho State University. Stroud and his wife, Shari, have two children, Casey and Hailey.

Kaylene 'Pudgie' Finau

Hometown: Salt Lake City, Utah
Class: Sophomore

Position: Setter
Career highlights: As a freshman, averaged a SWAC-leading 11.19 assists per game (eighth nationally) as the Golden Eagles' lone setter before her season was cut short due to an anterior cruciate ligament tear suffered at North Idaho College on Oct. 29, 2005. Came back to play briefly during CSI's opening-round win over Cape Fear Community College (N.C.) at the NJCAA National Tournament. Finau will reprise her role as CSI's top setter after successful off-season surgery.

Stroud says: "I think once she gets going, she's going to bring that leadership that we need and also the execution part. She's going to be able to deliver balls when people can hit them."

Chanelle Estelhan

Hometown: Hawaii Kai, Hawaii
Class: Freshman
Height: 5-7
Position: Libero
Career highlights: Named to the 2005 HHSAA Division II All-Tournament Team as a senior at Kaiser High School.

Stroud says: "She just wants to do whatever she can for this team to ensure we have a chance to win a national championship. Hannah is kind of that multi-purpose kind of player where if we get in a bind, she could step for us. She's going to find a role on this team."

Redshirt

Hometown: Mountain Home, Idaho
Class: Freshman (redshirt)
Height: 6-1
Position: Middle blocker
Career highlights: Redshirted the 2005 season at Oregon State University after signing out of Mountain Home High School. Earned South Idaho Conference First Team honors in 2004 and High Country Conference First Team honors in 2003 at Hillcrest High School in Idaho Falls. Three-year varsity letter winner in volleyball also earned two basketball letters and one in softball.

Stroud says: "I think she's just going to keep getting better because she didn't play last year at all. She redshirted at Oregon State. So I see her as a person that's going to keep growing."

Delphine 'Babes' Kalulu
Assistant coach

Career highlights: Kalulu is known as one of the top volleyball players to come out of the state of Hawaii. She went on to play for the University of Hawaii, earning a varsity letter in 1989 and starting as a freshman for the Rainbow Wahine. Kalulu came to CSI during the middle of last year's volleyball season and helped with the team as a volunteer. When former assistant coach T.J. Lopez left the program in the offseason, Kalulu was promoted to assistant coach.

Personal: Kalulu is the older sister of current CSI players Anell Cubi-Otneru and Kawena Cubi-Otneru.

Stroud says: "I think she brings some intensity. She's not afraid to get in there and coach. The kids really respect her and off the court, she gets along with them real well. She cares about them and she's somebody they can go to and she's going to help them. She's going to be a really good coach."

Leslie Aki

Hometown: Honolulu, Hawaii
Class: Freshman
Height: 5-6
Position: Setter
Career highlights: Played setter and outside hitter for Hawaiian powerhouse Kamehameha-Kapalama High School. The Warriors won the 2005 Division I state title, the school's first since 1999.

Stroud says: "She really puts up a nice, hittable ball. She's got really sweet hands. She just needs to get in better condition."

Aneli Cubi-Otneru

Hometown: Hale'Iwa, Hawaii
Class: Sophomore
Position: Outside hitter
Career highlights: Named a NJCAA Division I First Team All-American and Region 18 First Team member after averaging 3.65 kills, 1.05 aces and 2.67 digs per game as a freshman at CSI. Originally a University of Hawaii signee, Cubi-Otneru led Punahou High School to two state championships and was named Gatorade Player of the Year in 2003 and 2005. Set a state record for kills in a three-game match with 37.

Stroud says: "She is jumping better than she's ever jumped right now. She's looking good. She's really strong. She legitimately has a chance to be that player (NJCAA Division I Player of the Year)."

Jackie Fotu

Hometown: Alpine, Utah
Class: Freshman
Height: 6-1
Position: Outside hitter
Career highlights: Named to the Salt Lake Tribune's Class 5A All-State Second Team and Region IV First Team member as a senior at Lone Peak High School. Helped Lone Peak to consecutive Class 4A titles in 2003 and 2004.

Stroud says: "She's getting better every day because she's getting in better shape. She moves pretty well and has a pretty good arm. She's going to be a really good player by the time she's finished here."

Christine Manua

Hometown: Gresham, Ore.
Class: Sophomore
Height: 5-11
Position: Outside hitter
Career highlights: Led the SWAC and was eighth nationally with a 46.2-percent hitting efficiency as a Golden Eagles freshman. Helped Gresham High School to a 46-4 record during her junior and senior seasons and was a member of Gresham's 2003 state championship team.

Stroud says: "I'm really excited about Christine and she has a good motor. She's always making plays. She's always in the right spot at the right time, hustling, so she's going to have a good year."

Kayse Herman Manager

Career highlights: Played in 57 games over 30 matches for the Golden Eagles last year, contributing key play-

Whitley Bond

Hometown: Twin Falls, Idaho
Class: Sophomore

Was a two-year varsity letter winner in volleyball and four-year varsity track standout at Twin Falls High School. Was named volleyball captain, team MVP and Region Four-Five-Six Honorable Mention in both her junior and senior seasons.

Stroud says: "She's going to do anything that she can to help the team, and you need kids like that. She never takes a play off. She's always working hard. She's going to be a person that's going to be backing up Chanelle at the libero spot."

Gabriela Bulawczyk

Hometown: Sulechow, Poland
Class: Freshman
Height: 6-1
Position: Middle blocker
Career highlights: Originally a 2005 CSI recruit, Bulawczyk suffered a ligament tear in her right knee that put her out of action for a year. Played for Poland's national program along with former Golden Eagles standouts Marta Slemiatkowska and JoAnna Kaczor.

Stroud says: "She's improving every day and she's starting to hit the ball a little bit harder now and jumping a bit better. I think in another month or so, we'll find out what she's all about."

Kawena Cubi-Otneru

Hometown: Hale'Iwa, Hawaii
Class: Freshman

Stroud says: "She's another one of those kids that we have to keep pushing to get in better condition, because as she gets in better shape, then her performance level is going to come up. She's got a lot of potential."

Defense

questions will likely be that these Golden Eagles are still very good. Manuel is a returning All-Region 18 Second-Team performer and led the Scenic West Athletic Conference in hitting efficiency last year. Finau would have liked to see a Region 18 first-teamer had a not been for her midseason anterior cruciate ligament tear. That injury may limit her playing time early in the season, but Stroud's return to a 6-2, two-setter offense will allow him to rest his star setter.

"It's a process. It's a day-to-day trying to get stronger," Finau said. "It's more of my hamstring. As long as I get my hamstring strong, I'll be ready. I don't know about this weekend, but maybe next weekend for sure though."

Perhaps no CSI player will have greater expectations placed upon her shoulders than Cubi-Otneru, who returns as a 2005 First Team All-American after averaging 3.65 kills, 2.67 digs, 1.22 assists and 1.05 aces per game as a freshman. Carrying the expectations that go along with that, as well as the expectations of her to help lead CSI this year could be hard to deal with it, but Cubi-Otneru has a unique way of dealing with them.

"I don't, personally," she said. "I mean, it's a good name and everything, but you still have to play for yourself, play your own game. If you play your own game and do well, your game will improve. It's cool to have (All-American status), but it's just a name."

Bond, a sophomore transfer from rival North Idaho College, will provide CSI with the kind of tenacity and all-around game that will keep the Golden Eagles regulars sharp in practice. She'll also provide solid setting and defense off the bench. After finishing her standout 2005 senior season at Twin Falls High School, she played sparingly for the Cardinals, appearing in 13 games over 11 matches as a freshman. After missing out on a trip to the NJCAA National Tournament after last season's 30-20, 22-30, 30-25, 30-19 Region 18 Tournament final to CSI, the chance to make it all the way with the hometown team was something Bond didn't want to miss.

"It's really exciting," she said. "These girls can play at a whole other level, so it's fun to have that new experience."

It's also fun not to worry about facing the CSI attack four times a year, as Bond and NIC had to last year.

"We made sure at NIC we had strong blockers, especially against Asha (Kaczor) and Anell," Bond said.

"We made sure we had tough defense, because they can hit the ball."

The Golden Eagles' success in 2006 will likely boil down to taking the right steps at the right times.

"We can't be thinking that we have to take nationals right now," Cubi-Otneru said. "We have to be thinking about what we need to do now to get there... We have to think that we're the underdogs."

After eight national championships, it's doubtful anyone outside of CSI is buying that notion. If the Golden Eagles keep that hunger though, No. 9 could be well on its way.

Henin-Hardenne and Mauresmo advance at Pilot Pen after long layoffs

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Justine Henin-Hardenne looked anything but rusty Wednesday night in her first match since Wimbledon. The second-seeded Belgian cruised into the quarterfinals of the Pilot Pen with a 6-4, 6-2 win over Anabel Medina Garrigues. Recovering from a right knee injury

Henin-Hardenne accepted a wild card at New Haven last week hoping to regain the form that's earned her singles titles, including five majors. "It's great to be back. I missed the tennis the last few weeks," Henin-Hardenne said. She moved Medina Garrigues all over the court with her crisp passing and impressive backhands. Her deft play at the net proved just as effective. Her soft drop shots fell time and again out of reach of the 24-year-old Spaniard. "There's still a few things to improve for sure," she said. "I'm trying to be more aggressive. I played very well on the important points, on the serve-and-volleys." To her opponent, Henin-Hardenne hardly looked like someone who's missed the last six weeks. "I think there's just a difference when you play the top players," Medina Garrigues said. "She's moving very good. You can't make any mistake. I don't feel like she was a month and half without matches." She takes on Mara Santangelo of Italy in a quarterfinal on Thursday. Henin-Hardenne's last match was a loss in the Wimbledon final to Amelie Mauresmo, the top-seeded player at New Haven. It's the first tournament for both since then.

High schools offering dual-credit classes

TWIN FALLS — High school juniors and seniors are encouraged to look into dual-credit classes offered at their schools in which they can earn high school and college credits at the same time.

Arrangements between the College of Southern Idaho and 26 southern Idaho high schools allow students to enroll in dual-credit classes in English, accounting, economics, physical education, political science and history classes that can earn the simultaneous credits. Dual-credit students often graduate from high school with 10, 20 or more credits toward their higher education.

High school students generally have until two weeks after their semester begins to sign up. CSI Dual-Credit Director John Miller encourages interested students to speak with their counselors as soon as possible.

Miller also invites students or parents to contact him at 732-6280 or at jmillercsi.edu.

Meth, dogs and the 4th Amendment

By Cassidy Friedman
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Seizing drugs from a car without a warrant is much easier than from a home.

That was the word Morgan Case, a senior specialist with the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office, presented to the Mad Mothers Against Methamphetamine at the group's last meeting.

The mothers meet again tonight.

When stopping a vehicle, Case's K-9 partner gives him

If you go

What: Mad Mothers Against Methamphetamine meeting. Where: 8 p.m. today. Where: Pam Green's backyard in Kimberly. Call Pam at 212-0283 for directions.

considerable leverage in locating drugs. The sniff of a K-9 alone can supply probable cause and can lead Case to hidden drugs.

So why not stick the dog on the dozens of known meth houses around town? Mad Mother's chief mom Pam Green wanted to know.

"This type of stuff is mainly for vehicles," Case said. "On a residence, they have more right to privacy. The reason we can search vehicles in these incidences is due to the mobility of the vehicle."

Law enforcement can still confiscate drugs it seizes improperly, Case said. The arrest just won't get charged.

Case said he can think of no officer in the Magic Valley who has willfully violated probable cause. Still, it's easy to unin-tionally cross that line, he said.

"It is a murky line," he says. "We (law enforcement) have to ask: Do we want to press this issue at this point in time?"

"Their jobs are at stake. Constitutional protection is at stake."

One gray area is a camp trailer — is it a vehicle or a private residence? That depends, Case said.

"If a camp trailer is hooked up to utilities, it is considered a home," Case said. Trailers plugged into outlets in the lot at Rock Creek Park, for example, have to be treated as homes.

Green said Case's presentation helped the mothers better grasp the impediments to meth arrests. Dozens of court cases have renegotiated the rules of engagement for K-9 units.

"It's an evolving thing," Case said.

In his opinion, there are still too many restrictions on using K-9s to establish probable cause.

"I feel it's moving too slow," he said.

Gas leak empties YMCA

A chemical reaction brought the Twin Falls Fire Department to the YMCA on Elizabeth Boulevard in Twin Falls after a diluted chlorine solution was released into the air. Above, firefighters leave the building as a YMCA volunteer waters the flowers Wednesday. No one was injured.

No one hurt as alert staff clears building

By Cassidy Friedman
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — In the boiler room of the YMCA on Elizabeth Boulevard, Stan Fivas' nose detected a foul, acrid smell and immediately he threw on a gas mask.

Minutes later, the smell reached the lobby. About 2 p.m., a YMCA employee began blasting a blue air horn. YMCA chief executive Karen Jachimowski called 911 and rushed employees out the door, warning them "We have to evacuate. Now!"

"It was a fairly benign incident other than the room it was in," said Battalion Chief Dick Capps.

No one was hurt, including Fivas, the YMCA's head maintenance man.

A chemical reaction in the YMCA's swimming pool chlorine system ruptured a plastic line, releasing approximately one to two gallons of diluted chlorine solution into the air.

"It was new tablets of chlorine that we had put in. And it mixed with the old tablets," said Jachimowski. "The reaction was like a smell, a really bad smell and a little bit of a fog over our chlorinator."

Diluted in water, the tablets formed a corrosive gas.

"It can burn your lungs," Capps said. "It would have been immediately dangerous if he hadn't been sharp enough to throw the mask on."

None of the children enrolled in the YMCA's summer program was on the scene when the incident occurred. They were at the city pool.

Both firefighters and Jachimowski prepared for the worst. Firefighters cleared the black around the YMCA of traffic and Jachimowski huddled her employees in the front parking lot.

Throughout the commotion, one volunteer remained unperturbed and went about watering the flowers, diluting the tension at the scene with an odd sense of tranquility.

Moscow votes to pay city employees a living wage

MOSCOW (AP) — The Moscow City Council has passed a resolution to ensure that full-time city employees and some contract workers are paid at least $10.25 an hour.

The lowest-paid city worker already makes $10.75 an hour. "But we wanted to make this statement," Councilwoman Linda Pall told the Associated Press on Wednesday. "I think that the greatest plus for a resolution like this for Idaho cities is to put on record their support for progressive economic development."

The resolution, passed Monday on a 4-2 vote, also applies to businesses with city contracts worth at least $25,000 that employ 10 people or more or more. Pall said it could effect bids on the janitorial contract, and possibly such things as consulting contracts.

"We want to make sure no one working for the city is paid so little that they can't support themselves or a family," Pall said, according to the Moscow-Pullman Daily News. "We want to make sure your tax dollars and other city revenue is not used to unintentionally exploit our workers."

The minimum wage in Idaho — $5.15 an hour — "is embarrassingly low. We should be combating negative social problems in the community," said Councilman Bob Stout, who also voted for the resolution.

"My problem with the resolution is telling another employer within the city what they are going to pay their employees," said Councilman John Webber, who voted against it.

Fires keep local and federal crews busy across Mini-Cassia

By Reese Wells
For the Times-News

ALMO — Fires kept local and federal firefighters busy Tuesday across Mini-Cassia.

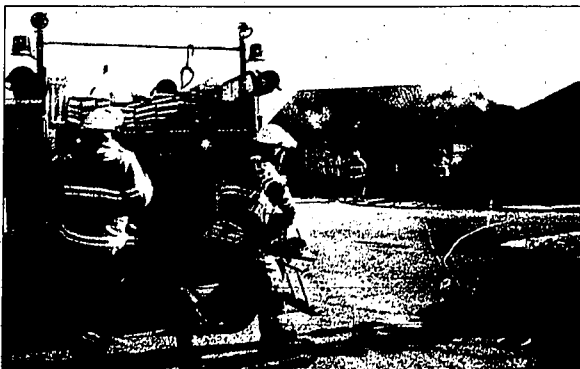

Three fires burned in southeast Cassia County, including one that destroyed log structures along the highway near Castle Rocks State Park.

Almo-Conner-Elba (ACE) Fire Department responded to the fire that burned west of the Cedar Rest Cemetery nearby to the state park boundary. It burned about 140 acres, but was kept mainly in juniper and sage and away from residences, according to Stan Lloyd, tanker driver for ACE.

"It did burn the log structures across the highway from Gary Jones' home," Lloyd said. "It really moved through the juniper."

Retardant dropped from a small plane helped control the blaze.

Five Bureau of Land Management tankers and four trucks from the ACE Fire Department responded to the Almo fire Tuesday.

Firefighters across Mini-Cassia had their hands full Tuesday and Wednesday as several fires burned throughout the area, including Hagerman, Almo and Conner.

The Conner Road Fire started about 2 p.m. Tuesday and spread north of state Route 77 from Connor Creek Junction southeast of Albion. It was burning in sage, grass and juniper. Single-engine air tankers dropped retardant on the blaze, according to a release from the BLM Interagency Fire Dispatch. Eleven engine crews, water tenders and dozers made progress on the ground.

Causes of both the Conner Fire and the Castle Road Fire near Almo are under investigation.

A field fire west of Burley started when a truck backfired, sparking a fire in tall grass.

The fire spread, burning the tires off five 10-wheelers and two truck trailers, according to Burley Fire Chief Bruce Allcott.

"There was insurance on three trucks and the two trailers," Allcott said. "The estimated loss was about $2,500."

Outside Mini-Cassia, the Windmill Fire burned four miles west of Hagerman. One engine was working on the fire that started from a bird flying into a power line.

The Goodtime Fire started Tuesday from a lightning strike, control was expected by Wednesday evening. The fire burned more than 4,300 acres south of state Route 26 between Gooding and Shoshone.

National Lampoon founder dies

DALLAS (AP) — Robert K. Hoffman, one of three founders of the irreverent National Lampoon magazine, died Sunday. He was 59.

Hoffman, a noted Dallas philanthropist, died at an area hospital. He had suffered from leukemia since December, according to his family. He was a co-founder and managing editor of the humorous National Lampoon, spawned from the Harvard Lampoon, created while he was a student at the university.

The magazine spun off successful films, the best known being "Animal House."

Hoffman and his partners sold their interest in National Lampoon in 1975. He continued to serve as a trustee of the Harvard Lampoon.

Hoffman was named one of Business Week magazine's top 50 philanthropists for 2005.

Ketchum high school student charged as adult in kidnapping case

KETCHUM — A 17-year-old high school student in this town central Idaho ski-resort town has been charged as an adult in 5th District Court accused of using a loaded shotgun to kidnap two convenience store workers and then steal a 12-pack of Keystone Light beer.

Samuel Samudio of nearby Halley may have had as many as three accomplices, investigators say. Ketchum Police say they recovered a loaded shotgun and beer when they arrested Samudio five minutes after the alleged robbery.

Under Idaho law, Samudio could face life in prison.

Police believe drugs may have been involved in the weekend incident.

Samudio has been released from the Blaine County Jail on $150,000 bond, but remains under house arrest.

"I was scared to death," said Charley Pate, one of the convenience store workers.

"But it turned out all right. I'm still here. They caught him, and that's it."

U of I to spend settlement on recruiting researchers

MOSCOW — University of Idaho President Tim White says the school will spend much of its settlement money from the University Place scandal to recruit new researchers to campus.

The school and a trust managed by the university's foundation agreed to a $2.5 million settlement in March, ending the litigation phase of a long-running dispute over the troubled project.

In a speech to university professors and staffers, White said $1 million in settlement money will be spent hiring new professors and starting major research projects, such as building laboratories. Last year, UI spent more than $100 million on research projects, far outpacing all other Idaho schools.

He said $750,000 of the settlement will be spent launching a capital campaign to tap private donors. The remaining $750,000 will go to a rainy-day savings fund.

"Because it always seems to rain," said Doug Baker, university provost and executive vice president.

After an investment deal for University Place unraveled, the university lost millions of dollars and failed to complete the Boise expansion. The settlement reimburses the school for some of those losses.

Investigators later found that foundation officials used a scholarship fund to keep the project afloat. Several lawsuits were filed, and a criminal investigation is ongoing.

Mayor, leaders make case for Albertson's presence

BOISE — Mayor Dave Bieter and business leaders fearing the impact of Albertson's sale had a meeting in Minnesota this week with executives from SuperValu Inc., the Boise-based supermarket was split into three parts and sold. An investment consor-cium and the drugstore chain CVS Corp. acquired the other parts.

"We wanted to make the case as best we could for maintaining a significant presence in Boise and actually for growing that presence," Bieter said. "And I think most importantly we just wanted to make sure they knew how important it is to us, both the city and the business community."

SuperValu executives offered no commitments, saying financial decisions about the company's future in Boise were still pending. Even so, some Boise leaders said they did their best.

"I think it was very worthwhile for us to come here and maintain an open dialogue," said George Illif, incoming chairman of the Boise Metro Chamber of Commerce, who accompanied Bieter.

SuperValu acquired about 1,100 grocery stores from Albertson's Inc. in June when

Idaho native wins primary in Alaska race

By Matt Voz
Associated Press writer

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — Republican Gov. Frank Murkowski, stung by accusations of arrogance and stubbornness, lost his bid for a second term Tuesday after polling last in a three-way GOP primary.

Sarah Palin, an Idaho native and former mayor of Wasilla, a growing Alaskan town, won the Republican nomination for governor after capturing 51 percent of the vote. Former state legislator John Binkley came in second with 30 percent and Murkowski polled just 19 percent.

"We expected to win, we didn't win, so we'll support the nominee," Murkowski said after arriving at election headquarters to concede.

Palin graduated from the University of Idaho in 1987 with a degree in journalism before settling in Alaska.

Tony Knowles, a former two-term governor, won the race to be the Democratic nominee for governor in the Nov. 7 general election. He beat state Rep. Eric Croft.

Sarah Palin, right, is congratulated by former Alaska governor Tony Knowles at the election center in Anchorage, Alaska Tuesday as Palin won the Republican gubernatorial primary and Knowles won the Democratic primary.

"I'm excited about what's ahead," Knowles said. "I want to bring Alaska together as a state. We face a lot of issues and I want to help overcome them."

Elections also were held Tuesday in Wyoming and Oklahoma.

Murkowski, 73, sought to make the primary a referendum on his proposal to build a $25 billion natural gas pipeline to Canada, calling the project "the greatest significant event since statehood."

His approval ratings have skidded over the past four years because of much-criticized decisions such as appointing his daughter to his U.S. Senate seat and purchasing a state jet after his request for the aircraft was denied by both the federal government and state Legislature.

In the campaign's final days, Murkowski also was stung by the partial shutdown of the Prudhoe Bay oil field, where production was cut in half earlier this month because of leaks and corrosion. The governor's opponents accused his administration of allowing the oil company BP PLC to go years without proper maintenance of its facilities.

Murkowski pledged to hold BP accountable, but insisted state government should not be in the business of physically monitoring the company's facilities.

On Tuesday, Murkowski shook Palin's hand in the middle of a crowd of Palin's supporters, all waving signs. "Congratulations, you've got my support. I'll do everything to see that you're elected," Murkowski told Palin.

Alaska voters also decided Tuesday whether to adopt a $50 per-person tax on cruise ship passengers. Proponents want the industry to pay more for improving ports and other visitor services. The cruise industry spent nearly $2 million trying to defeat the measure.

Canada confirms another case of mad cow disease

TORONTO (AP) — Canada confirmed mad cow disease in an animal on an Alberta farm Wednesday, the country's eighth case of a terminal ailment that has rolled its livestock industry.

The latest case was found in a dairy cow between 8 and 10 years of age, Canada's Food Inspection Agency said.

The agency says exposure to the terminal disease likely occurred before or during the introduction of new feed regulations that were supposed to stop the spread of the disease.

Shipments of cattle to the United States were halted in 2003 after the first reported cases of mad cow in Canada. Trade in cows younger than 30 months resumed last year.

Last month, the U.S. suspended plans to increase imports of beef and cattle from Canada over concerns about an infected cow born in 2002, five years after Canada enacted safeguards against mad cow disease. At issue is a ban on using cattle remains in cattle feed, the primary firewall against the spread of mad cow disease.

Craig shouted down at a feisty forum on immigration in Coeur d'Alene COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — A town hall meeting with Sen. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, dissolved into angry shouts and walkouts when Craig began discussing the controversial issue of immigration.

"I am sick of listening to these lies," one woman said, interrupting Craig as she left the Tuesday meeting, the Coeur d'Alene Press reported.

Stan Hess, candidate for the North Idaho College Board of Trustees, screamed at Craig as others booed. Before leaving, Hess yelled at a woman, his face inches from hers, as several people tried to separate them.

Craig planned eight town hall meetings in three days during a swing through northern Idaho that ends Thursday.

He's promoting a plan that would allow some of the 12 million illegal immigrants already in the U.S. to apply for citizenship if they meet certain requirements, including having been in the country at least two years and having paid taxes.

"The reality is that there are 2.5 million jobs here that Americans won't do," Craig told the 60 people at the Coeur d'Alene meeting. "For 20 years, immigration laws have failed. We know there's a problem and we're working on it. The first step is securing the border and we're doing that."

Craig asked people to listen to the proposal, but some said they wanted illegal immigrants deported immediately. Others said Craig wasn't doing his job. The senator is accustomed to spirited town hall meetings, said his spokesman, Sid Smith.

"It's fair to say it was pretty confrontational and at some point looked like it was about to get kind of ugly," Smith told The Associated Press on Wednesday. "But we weren't really thinking about calling the police. I was there and talked to all our staff who were there, and they agreed it was ugly, but not that ugly."

"It certainly isn't the first time it's been a very spirited and emotional town hall meeting," Smith said. "I would say (Craig) wasn't surprised or disappointed in that."

Craig also held town hall meetings in Sandpoint and Bonners Ferry on Tuesday, which Smith said were more subdued.

Helping youth

Probation officer lives dream of assisting others.

By Pat Marcantonio
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — As a teenager, Jose Orozco got into trouble, not big trouble, just kid trouble.

When a Twin Falls police officer took time to talk with him, taking him home to his parents instead of taking him in, it sparked what would become a change in Orozco's life.

"It was cool that he (the officer) did that," he said. "It was big deal."

Orozco started to realize that he wanted to be someone who would help others.

Now 30 years old, Orozco has achieved that and more as the juvenile meth court probation officer for Twin Falls County Juvenile Probation, where he's worked since 2001. He was recently named this year's recipient of the program's Flame Award for "going above and beyond" to work with at-risk young people in the community and for being "truly extraordinarily committed to the youth of the Magic Valley."

A native of Texas, he has lived in Twin Falls since the late 1980s. He grew up in the South Park area of Twin Falls, and aside from his parents, he says there were few role models then.

After working other jobs, he decided to realize his dream to help kids so he obtained a Bachelor of Science degree in criminal justice through Boise State University.

In his job, he sees young people on the edge.

Juvenile probation officer Jose Orozco was recently recognized with an award from Twin Falls County Juvenile Probation and the courts for his work with young people.

when entering the county juvenile detention center, the process kicks into gear, Orozco said. A young person gram through "meth court."

"Our program is unique because it involves the family as part of the team," Orozco said.

He works with young people going through the meth court program who sometimes call at all hours, asking for advice or just to talk, but it is time well spent so they can stay out of trouble, he said. Recently, for example, a girl called to ask him to help her get over a situation that could trigger drug use.

Seeing the kids succeed and graduate from the program is his great reward.

"That to me is pretty awesome," he said.

However, the job can also be repetitive and frustrating when the young people they are trying to help don't appreciate that help or don't comply with the rules set by the courts.

"What didn't I do?" is the question he asks himself in those cases.

The number of methamphetamine-youth related cases also has grown. When he started, he had four or five on going cases — mostly girls. Now, it's up to 15 ongoing cases. Most of those people he deals with are non-Hispanics, which he says is surprising because "meth targets everyone."

Chief Probation Officer Kevin Sandau says what makes Jose Orozco special is his relentlessness on behalf of the kids.

"He's just out there every night. He is not always trying to catch kids doing the wrong things, but catching them doing the right things," Sandau said. "When every one of these folks graduates from GED or to the next step in the Walker Center (substance abuse treatment), he always goes and attends that function, and I think that means a lot to those kids."

One of the gang experts in the department, Orozco also put together a computer presentation used to train volunteers.

"He is a real leader in our department, he really is and he leads by example," Sandau said.

Orozco cares about the young people and that makes him good at his job. "He really has a knack for this kind of work," Sandau said.

Orozco has also donated his time as a "Lunch Buddy," being a lunchtime mentor to a youngster in a program run by the Twin Falls County Juvenile Probation.

The county probation program sponsored — along with the Fifth Judicial District Court — the award won by Orozco, who almost didn't go to the award ceremony.

At first, he wasn't going to attend the event that honors volunteers because he hadn't volunteered last year, but his wife suggested they go. Then, the announcer started talking about the recipient for the Flame award.

"I think they're talking about me," he told his wife, Connie.

"I did not expect (the award) and it just blew me away. We get burnt out as probation officers. But stuff like this and your spirits are raised a little," Orozco said. "That is pretty amazing."

He credits his family for their support in a job that is not always 9 to 5.

His advice to young Hispanics and others: Stay focused on your goals. "To me, that is what did it: to make sure I knew what my goal was."

Playground built in a day

TWIN FALLS — Volunteers from the Idaho Migrant Council and Home Depot built a playground in one day on July 27 at the El Milagro Community Park at 4512 McMurry Drive.

The playground's design was based on drawings by children from the El Milagro community during a design day in June. The Idaho Migrant Council, a private nonprofit agency that provides job training, housing and other services to migrant and seasonal agricultural workers, operates the El Milagro housing complex.

In addition to providing funding for the project, more than 150 associates from local Home Depot stores helped build the playground.

This project is part of the Home Depot's commitment to the KaBOOM! project to create and refurbish 1,000 play spaces in 1,000 days.

U.S. may seek death penalty for suspected drug kingpin

The Associated Press

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The federal government may seek the death penalty for the accused kingpin of one of Mexico's oldest and most notorious drug cartels, a prosecutor said Monday.

Francisco Javier Arellano Felix currently faces a maximum sentence of 40 years in prison under a 2003 indictment that accused him and others of moving tons of Colombian cocaine and Mexican marijuana to the United States and involvement in a string of assassinations or plots, U.S. authorities said.

Laura Duffy, an assistant U.S. attorney, said the government may seek new charges against Arellano Felix that would allow for the death penalty or life in prison if he is convicted. She did not elaborate on the possible charges at a hearing before U.S. District Judge Larry A. Burns.

Arellano Felix, 36, dressed in an orange jumpsuit and shackled at his wrists and ankles, gave one-word answers in Spanish and did not seek bail during a hearing Monday.

He pleaded not guilty last week to racketeering, racketeering conspiracy, conspiracy to import and distribute controlled substances and money laundering.

Last week, Mexican Attorney General Daniel Cabeza de Vaca also said Mexico would seek Arellano Felix's extradition to Mexico, but perhaps not until he had been tried and sentenced for crimes in the United States.

Arellano Felix. He was captured last week off the coast of La Paz, Mexico, aboard the U.S.-registered sport boat Dock Holiday.

Seven other men aboard the yacht were arrested and taken to the United States last week, including Arturo Villarreal Heredia, whom U.S. authorities said was a high-ranking figure in the Tijuana-based Arellano Felix cartel.

Man facing second deportation finds that he's legal after all

The Associated Press

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Duarnis Perez became an American citizen when he was 15, but never knew it. It wasn't until after he was deported and served jail time for trying to get back into the country that he found out.

In a case of mistaken status, Perez faced a second deportation before the government told him of his citizenship. Even after discovering his status, federal prosecutors fought to keep him in custody.

Last week, a federal judge scolded prosecutors for the mistake and ruled that Perez never should have been deported to the Dominican Republic in the first place. The case has gotten the attention of immigration observers, who call it a striking example of the gaps in an overworked immigration system.

"In effect, the government is arguing that an innocent man who was wrongly convicted should not be released from the custody of the United States," U.S. District Judge Lawrence Kahn wrote.

Perez became a citizen when his mother was naturalized in 1998. In 1994, he was deported to the Dominican Republic after a Duarnis Perez was caught trying to re-enter the United States in 2000 from Canada. But he wasn't informed he was a citizen until the spring of 2004, after serving three-and-a-half years in prison for that 2000 arrest.

drug conviction. He was caught trying to re-enter the United States in 2000 from Canada. But he wasn't informed he was a citizen until the spring of 2004, after serving three-and-a-half years in prison for that 2000 arrest. It was not clear why Perez's status wasn't discovered. Messages left over three days seeking comment from Immigration and Customs Enforcement in Washington were not returned. Perez, who is now in his early 30s, remains in the United States, said his lawyer, J. Jeffrey Weisenfeld of New York. Weisenfeld would give no other details. "He would like to get on with his life quietly," Weisenfeld said. "It was an unpleasant experience for him."

In early 2005, Perez filed a lawsuit to vacate the illegal re-entry conviction. He also has sued the Bureau of Prisons and the Department of Justice, claiming they had no right to imprison him, and against the Legal Aid Society in Albany, which represented him on the illegal re-entry charge. Immigration watchers wonder if he can sue for being deported in the first place.

"I woke up at 4 this morning and just said, 'I gotta write about this,'" said Daniel Kowalski, a Texas attorney who publishes Bender's Immigration Bulletin, a publication that tracks immigration issues. "Beyond legality, it's just an issue of common sense and humanity."

U.S. immigration courts handled 368,848 matters in 2005, a 23 percent increase over the 298,474 cases addressed in 2004, according to U.S. Department of Justice's Executive Office for Immigration Review.

A spokesman for the U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services said the government has no practical way to inform people of their citizenship in such cases because of the complexities involved.

"The responsibility rests fully on the shoulders of the new citizen, so the questions of the citizenship of children are adequately addressed," said Chris Bentley. "Many times, we honestly won't know about it." Assistant U.S. Attorney Sara Lord, who prosecuted Perez, declined comment when asked if the government would appeal.

In a brief, she argued Perez was at fault for not knowing his status, saying he "cannot base his failure to discover the circumstances on the alleged omissions of others."

Estelle McKee with the University of Wisconsin Law School said the responsibility is shared. "The immigration service has to prove someone is removable. It's their job," she said.

"It's remarkable to go through an entire removal process and not know the person is a citizen."

'Malinche': Invented story of a real woman, Cortes' translator and mistress

The Philadelphia Inquirer

Lots of writers create thick dossiers on their literary characters, filling pages and pages of scrap paper with facts about their fictional lives, motives, fears and desires.

It's an exercise meant to help them put flesh on imagined bones, and it is what Laura Esquivel has done in her new novel, "Malinche," the fictionalized life story of a very real indigenous slave woman who served as translator and mistress to Spanish conquistador Hernan Cortes during his taking of Mexico.

La Malinche, who lived in the early 1500s, is a controversial figure in Mexican history. To this day, she is regarded as either a national heroine who helped rein in the Spanish soldiers' violence against the Aztecs, or a tragic traitor who helped the white intruders wipe out the Aztec way of life.

It would be hard to find a juicier character for a novelist — particularly Esquivel, who is Mexican and clearly revels in broad, romantic, mythic stories like the one told in her best-selling first novel, "Like Water for Chocolate" — to take on. And it's clear from the lyrical text of this book that Esquivel enjoyed strolling through ancient history in this woman's shoes.

About the book

"Malinche" by Laura Esquivel, translated by Ernesto Méndez-Reed; Atina ($22.95)

Using prose that sings with the rhythm of myth, Esquivel imagines La Malinche's birth — "After the waters had spoken, a great silence took root and was broken only by the cries of a young baby girl whom they named Malinali ..." — and her tragic girlhood, spent at the side of a wise but blind grandmother and a mother who sells her into slavery after the grandmother dies.

Esquivel follows Malinali as she is given to Cortes, is renamed Malinche by the Europeans (called Malinche by other natives) and becomes Cortes' interpreter, lover and confidante. We learn that she believes Cortes was sent by the Mayan god Quetzalcoatl to put a stop to the Aztec practice of human sacrifice, and that is why she agrees to help him.

"It's a story so full of mismatched desires and conflicting ambitions that it seems it just can't fail. And yet it does, mainly because it reads more like one of those author's character dossiers than a fully developed piece of literature.

Esquivel presents us with little more than a fable populated by a sorrowful but well-meaning Malinali who speaks of pleasing the gods of water and wind and corn over and over again, and a one-dimensional Cortes who is blinded by both his lust for gold and his uncontrollable desire for Malinali. She seems unable to remove Malinali from her exalted place in history even for a moment, and show her dealing with the sort of earthly emotions that would connect her to a 21st-century reader.

Much of the problem lies in the relentlessness of the language. Esquivel uses a fable-speak that is so over-the-top that it winds up sounding like New Age table. "She knew from her ancestors that the light emitted by the stars was not only physical, but spiritual as well, and that their passage through the heavens served to unify the thoughts of men, the cycles of time and space. The contemplation of the skies, like a game of mirrors, became an internal contemplation, an instrument of transformation."

A relative of a passenger killed in a plane crash in Ukraine, cries in Pulkovo St. Petersburg airport on Wednesday while arriving to fly to the crash scene.

Group claims responsibility for kidnapping Fox journalists

By Ibrahim Barzak
Associated Press writer

GAZA CITY, Gaza Strip — An unknown militant group demanded the release of Muslim prisoners in U.S. jails within 72 hours in exchange for two kidnapped Fox News journalists, who were shown sitting cross-legged and barefoot on the floor in a video released Wednesday.

The video, which broke 10 days of silence from the kidnapers, marked the first time militants in Gaza have issued demands going beyond the conflict with Israel. The footage also had none of the trappings of locally produced videos, such as flags or masked gunmen, raising the possibility that foreign extremists may have taken root in Gaza.

Palestinian and Israeli officials say al-Qaida has been trying to infiltrate Gaza in the aftermath of Israel's withdrawal a year ago.

The Egypt-Gaza border is now rife with smuggling tunnels, and Palestinian militant groups have blown up a border wall to allow people in and out of the area.

In the footage, American correspondent Steve Centanni, 60, of Washington, D.C., and cameraman Olaf Wiig, 36, of New Zealand appealed for help in getting released. The images of the men sitting in a dark, drab room were the first sign of the journalists since they were abducted Aug. 14 from their TV van in Gaza City.

"Our captors are treating us well," Centanni said.

In a statement attached to the video, a group calling itself the Holy Jihad Brigades railed against the U.S. wars in Afghanistan and Iraq and characterized them as a war against Islam. It made no demands of Israel.

Local militant groups routinely try to limit the conflict to a fight between Palestinians and Israel, fearing they could otherwise cause a backlash against the Palestinian cause. Major militant groups, including the ruling Hamas movement, have all condemned the kidnapping and called for the journalists' release.

Russian passenger jet crashes in Ukraine

By Sergei Vesnyansky
Associated Press writer

SUKHIA BALKA, Ukraine — Investigators focused Wednesday on weather conditions, including lightning and turbulence, as the possible cause of the crash of a Russian jetliner in a swampy field in eastern Ukraine, killing all 170 people aboard.

Stunned relatives mourned the victims of the third airline catastrophe this year in the former Soviet Union, raising new concerns about the state of the Russian aviation industry.

Searchers found the two flight recorders amid the blackened debris of the Pulkovo Airlines Tu-154 jetliner, Transport Minister Mykola Rudkovsky said. The discovery raised hopes that authorities would also soon determine what sent the aircraft into its doomed dive Tuesday.

Experts ruled out terrorism and officials have focused on weather conditions.

Rudkovsky said that weather had been severe at the time. The storm brought heavy wind and rain to the Donetsk region, 400 miles southeast of Kiev, temporarily knocking out power to some residents and turning the sky so dark that street lights automatically switched on.

Other officials suggested the plane might have been struck by lightning, or hit strong turbulence, causing the 39-year-old pilot to lose control.

Mykola Kulbida, head of Ukraine's meteorology center, was quoted by the Kommersant newspaper as saying that strong cumulonimbus clouds reached as high as 42,000 to 47,000 feet, which meant planes would have no alternative but to pass through them.

The plane had been flying from Anapa — a holiday destination on the Black Sea — to St. Petersburg, Russia, when it disappeared from radar screens after making at least three distress calls. Ukrainian officials said the pilot had asked to make an emergency landing, and received permission to change course by about 12 miles to escape the storm.

Some officials said there were reports of a fire on board, although others denied that.

Fragments of the plane were found scattered around rolling fields and a small forest near the village of Sukhia Balka, north of Donetsk.

World Potato Congress draws spud specialists

By Keith Riller
Associated Press writer

BOISE — The titans of taters have gathered for the Sixth World Potato Congress in the United States' top potato-producing state, drawing about 850 participants from 41 nations.

"We need all the key players, from the policy makers down to the field," said Dongyu Qu, a scientist with the Chinese Academy of Agriculture, based in Beijing.

Delegates ranged from South African farmers to snack makers in Japan to potato experts in Argentina, and discussions ran from import and export deals to finding a way to use dehydrated potatoes to feed the world's hungry.

U.S. Agriculture Secretary Mike Johanns addressed the crowd Tuesday, noting that Idaho — which produced 12.5 billion pounds of potatoes in 2005 — was a natural location for the event's first visit to this country. He also announced $13 million in federal money to fight an isolated infestation of potato cyst nematodes, which feed on potato roots. The infestation was discovered earlier this year in Idaho.

"When you're talking potatoes, there are a few mystic places," said Frank Muir, president of the Idaho Potato Commission. "You've got Peru, you've got Ireland, and you've got Idaho."

Most foreign delegations brought their own interpreters but the congress supplied two, both Spanish speaking. About 80 of the attendees were from Latin America, including Marco Alvarez, operation manager for Bartel, a snack-producing company in Toluca, Mexico.

"It's important to know the trends, new varieties and new equipment," he said, adding that he was also looking for potato producers to make deals. "The potato production in Mexico is not sufficient for us."

Tuesday's sessions dealt with global potato processing and the global potato industry outlook. Sessions planned here through Thursday included topics such as "Seed Potato Issues," "Potato Genome Sequencing" and "New Varieties Roundtable."

The event then moves about 50 miles west of Boise to a farm show in Wilder on Friday and Saturday.

Ernest Yzel, a South African farmer, had already visited some Idaho farms and came away impressed with the size of the machinery.

"We are not used to that kind of big machinery in South Africa," he said, adding that the farmers are about what he expected. "Farmers seem to be all the same — same problems, same complaints."

Potato industry leaders for years have been fighting low-carb diets that cut out potatoes. They still recite long lists of the potato's nutritional benefits, but recently hired Denise Austin — a fitness expert popular on morning television exercise programs — to tout tubers.

Dr. Ettore Accenti, world market director of Eseeded System in Italy, is hoping to market gnocchi, a type of dumpling generally made from a potato base.

"The reason we are here is to understand how the Idaho potato performs," he said. He also said he was trying to determine how the U.S. market might respond to gnocchi.

"That's our longtime objective," he said. "We are just sniffing around now."

A very fair opportunity

Filer looking forward to economic boost that comes during fair week

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

FILER — Close to 100,000 people are expected to attend the Twin Falls County Fair and Rodeo from Wednesday through Sept. 4.

For the city of Filer, that's a large crowd with at least a little money to burn. Businesses and locals alike are preparing to get a helping from the gravy train soon to come.

Marie Whelan has lived across the street from the sprawling fairgrounds for 35 years and has found that people will pay, and pay well, for a parking spot just a stone's throw from the main gate.

"The first year I was here, three people pulled into my yard and said that the previous owners always let them park here," Whelan said. "So I thought, why not?"

In the beginning, Whelan's yard was full of bushes and trees. Over the years, a little at a time, the excess greenery has been cleared and she can now comfortably fit 55 cars in her front yard.

At $5 a spot, it makes for some nice spending money.

"I used to get enough to pay the property tax and insurance on my home," Whelan said.

"Now my granddaughter, Anita, lives with me and is off to nursing school so I imagine it will be there to help her."

Once those cars head off, a few local businesses are hoping they pull into their own parking lots.

Tammy Nipper owns the Riley Creek Restaurant in Filer with her husband, Dennis. Open since November, this is their first fair week. Already, they are excited and preparing for some crowds.

"The little bit extra we make is nice," Whelan said. "Even if you don't go to the fair, I think that everybody looks forward to it for one reason or another."

Read more about the highlights of the upcoming Twin Falls County Fair and Rodeo in "A Year in the Life of the Fair," a special section to be published Tuesday in the Times-News. "A Year in the Life of the Fair" will also be posted on the Times-News Web site at <http://www.magicvalley.com>.

Riley Creek plans on offering an array of specials through fair week and might even need more staffing for the rush.

"We are excited," Nipper said. "The fair is fun and everybody is so happy to be getting out with their families. It should make for a nice business perk."

Twin Stop Texaco is also preparing for a customer boost.

Although she wouldn't disclose a dollar amount, Manager Tanya Rost explained that robust sales are expected throughout the week.

"From gas to convenience store items, we are stocking up and getting ready for what should be a pretty interesting week," Rost said. "More customers mean more business so we need more of everything."

"That means extended hours and more help on the floor."

"We will be staying open until midnight instead of closing at 10," Rost said. "And we will probably need to add another person to work in the store."

Regardless of what fairgoers might need, it looks like Filer will have you covered — when and where you need it.

"The little bit extra we make is nice," Whelan said. "Even if you don't go to the fair, I think that everybody looks forward to it for one reason or another."

Home sales plunge

By Jeannine Aversa
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Sales of previously owned homes plunged in July to the lowest level in 2 1/2 years and the inventory of unsold homes climbed to a new record high, fresh signs that the housing market has lost steam.

The National Association of Realtors reported Wednesday that sales of existing homes and condominiums dropped by 4.1 percent in July from June to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 6.33 million. That was the lowest level since January 2004.

In Twin Falls County, the sales of existing homes dropped by 18 percent in July from June, according to the International Multiple Listing Service.

The latest snapshot of housing activity was weaker than analysts expected. Economists were forecasting the pace of sales to fall to 6.55 million.

The median price of a home sold last month was $230,000. That was up just 0.9 percent from the same month last year and marked the smallest year-over-year increase since May 1995. The median price is the middle point, where half sell for more and half sell for less.

A sign advertises an 'Apartment Sale' Monday in Midvale, Utah. Sales of previously owned homes plunged in July to the lowest level in 2 1/2 years and the inventory of unsold homes climbed to a new record high, fresh signs that the housing market has lost steam.

The inventory of unsold homes in July rose to a record high of 3.86 million. At the current sales pace, it would take 7.3 months to exhaust that overhang. That is the longest period to exhaust the supply of home since the spring of 1993.

By region, sales dropped by 5.4 percent in the Northeast. They fell by 5.9 percent in the Midwest and 1.2 percent in the South. Sales declined by 6.4 percent in the West.

Wednesday's report shows that the bloom is off the rose. For five years running, home sales had hit record highs as low mortgage rates lured buyers. But the housing sector has lost steam this year as mortgage rates have gone

A 430-home subdivision in development in Heyburn

By Renee Wells
Special to the Times-News

HEYBURN — More than 430 homes could be added to the tax rolls of Minidoka County if county officials accept the plans of two Kent, Wash., land developers.

Sunridge River View Estates, planned by Sunridge Land Co. LLC, would be built in seven phases over the next five years or so, according to developers Dave Walker and James Gauthier, who recently applied for a preliminary subdivision plan.

The land, owned by A.B. Leavell, of Gooding, consists of 560 acres in Minidoka County and 80 acres in Jerome County, according to the application filed with the Minidoka County building and zoning department.

The application calls for construction of 437 homes on lots that will sell in the range of $75,000 to $100,000. Some of the lots border the Snake River and Milner Reservoir.

Also included in the plan is a community park, riverfront marina and an 18-hole golf course.

But the developers have some hurdles to jump. A letter dated Aug. 17, from A&B Irrigation Company, sent by its attorney Roger Ling, expressed concerns that the subdivision will not have the water it needs for irrigation purposes.

Ling noted that, of the 560.55 acres included in the plan, only 371.6 acres receive irrigation water from the district. The Bureau of Reclamation does not allow water delivered to a farm to be "Pursuant to its contract with the Bureau of Reclamation, no changes in the district by exclusion or inclusion can be made without the approval of the Secretary of Interior," Ling's letter stated.

"The district is required to deliver water for irrigation to a single point of delivery for each farm unit included in the irrigation district."

Ling's letter suggests that the developers need to provide proof of how each lot within the subdivision would be provided the water allotted to that lot. Each acre that is part of the A&B District will be assessed operations and maintenance fees by the district.

"A&B Irrigation District will not deliver water to a farm unit if the assessments of all landowners within that farm unit have not been paid," Ling said.

"(The district) is not interested in dealing with disgruntled lot owners in a subdivision as a result of their inability to receive water, even though they are subject to the assessments of the irrigation district."

Minidoka County Zoning Administrator Paul Aston said water is an issue.

"I think water is going to be the single biggest hurdle these guys have to jump," Aston said Monday.

Ling pointed out the subdivision is being planned in an area that has been designated as a critical groundwater area. He said due to the fact the developers are not paning a public water or sewer system, each lot must be at least one acre in size and must have access to any irrigation water allotted to that land.

"The subdivision is subject to the improvement standards contained in Chapter 5 of the zoning ordinance, which requires, among other things, that the developer provide irrigation water rights and a delivery system to each individual lot," Ling's letter points out.

On behalf of A&B, Ling expressed opposition to any new groundwater diversions from the Eastern Snake River Aquifer for use in the Sunridge River View Estates plan.

"It is believed that any new groundwater diversion would be in violation of the existing moratorium on new groundwaters within the Eastern Snake River Plain Aquifer," Ling said in his letter.

"It is further the opinion of A&B Irrigation District that the proposed subdivision is within what the district believes to be a critical groundwater area, as the inflow to groundwater in this area is substantially less than the existing diversions."

Medicare drug benefit hits $50 million glitch with refunds

By Keith Franks
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Don't cash that check. The federal government has erroneously reimbursed about 230,000 Medicare recipients for monthly premiums they paid this year for prescription drug coverage. For many, the checks — totaling nearly $50 million — have already arrived.

The refund will undoubtedly cause confusion, particularly because it comes with a letter that mistakenly instructs seniors that their monthly premiums will no longer be deducted from their Social Security check.

Mark McClellan, who oversees the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services, said people who get the check need to know two things. One, the money has to be returned. Two, their prescription drug coverage will continue.

"It's very important for people to know their coverage is continuing," he said. "There's no disruption at all." Medicare recipients say they caught the glitch just after the checks were sent out last week. As a result, they sent a second letter Tuesday letting people know about the problem. The average overpayment comes to about $215. In many cases, seniors get their Social Security payment through direct deposit. They, too, should set the extra money aside and not use it for other purposes because the payment will have to be returned, officials said.

About 5 million people pay their monthly premiums for Medicare drug coverage by having the government withhold it from the money from their Social Security check.

eBay Sellers are Making $120,000+

By D. Angela Crus
Independent Staff Writer

In the last few years the job market and the average worker have suffered significant economic blows, which is why more people than ever are becoming self-employed. Nationwide 1.64 million jobs were lost after Sept. 11, leaving a record number of people signing up to sell on eBay. One of these people was Michael Syme. As a single parent, Syme found he had to make money fast and turned to online auctions. It was not long before he replaced his income and made as much as $10,000 a month. "People shouldn't wait until they find themselves out of a job before they find out they are not financially secure, they should start ensuring their own and their family's financial future immediately," said Syme, now an online auction expert and author of the book Keys to Making Money with Online Auctions. Online auctions are becoming one of the easiest and most profitable ways to earn financial freedom and security. There were more than $50 billion in sales in 2005 alone, and this number is expected to be much greater in years to follow, demonstrating the high demand for products on eBay and other online auction sites as well as the significant opportunity for sellers to make money. This can also be seen in the more than 580,000 people making a full-time or part-time living selling on eBay. Many "power-sellers" are making $150,000 a month. In addition to income, eBay has more to offer. By selling just $1,000 a month, people can qualify for health, dental, vision and pharmacy benefits. There are already 145,000 who already qualify according to the Associated Press. Syme and others have found they not only make money, but the only work commute they worry about is driving to the bank. It is not unusual for them to deposit hundreds or thousands of dollars daily. Many people are finding the growing demand: consumers have for online auction products has allowed them to make an income equivalent to a traditional job. In half the time. Often, auctioned items are not expensive or hard for online sellers to buy and sell at a profit. Items from a garage, closets or attics are money-makers waiting to be discovered. "One man's trash is another man's treasure," may be a cliché, but only because it has been proven true time and again. Everything from clothes and tools, to toys, electronics and collectibles are in demand. One seller found out first-hand how easy it was to bring in extra cash. Larry Rueschhoff was surprised after "finding an old camera for $8 and watching it sell for $1,120." That meant Rueschhoff made $1,112 with a single sale on eBay. Other sellers found specializing in specific items successful. An example of this is Jim Wilson, who decided watches and software were areas he wanted to focus on. "I happened upon a nice little [software] program," Wilson said. "I bought 200 for only $8 each including shipping from a buyer's club. They sold in less than 2 months for an average of $70 plus shipping." This meant his $1,600 investment turned into $14,000, nearly a 1,000 percent return, in 60 days. This was a feat no stock investment could earn in today's market. This is why many are turning to online auctions. "Anybody can do it if they know the right technique," Syme said. "With the right techniques it's easy to make extra income." People quickly learn how to market items to attract a higher bid, from photo quality to product listing. Sellers eventually become the experts in online auctions. Although online auctions are simple to use, experts such as Syme warn first-time sellers to be careful of pitfalls. Simple yet costly mistakes occur when people don't take time to learn about selling online first. "It's like driving a car," Syme said. "It's easy to do but, if no one shows you how to drive, you could end up in an accident that costs you time and money to fix." This doesn't mean people should avoid online auctions. It actually means the opposite. It's easy to get started. With a computer, Internet access, and some basic computer know-how, you, too, can be on your way to doing business over the Internet. "Why wait to win the lottery when selling on eBay is like winning the lotto every day," Syme said. With so much money being made for so little investment and effort, the online auction world and doing business over the Internet is becoming a dream come true for those seeking a full or part-time income from home.

Turn on the cruise control, Taurus

IF AUG. 24 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Smooth sailing and sunny celestial skies are something to be grateful for in the year to come. You can count on having few important bumps in the road, so remain secure in your situation and present relationships. Optimism and a feeling of well-being can infuse you with fresh sense of purpose in December. That is a fine time to seek greater pastures or ask for favors. If there is something you truly need, such as a job or a friend, the universe will probably provide it.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Hold your horses. Today is not the best day to negotiate, make a business decision or start a new project. It will be much easier to obtain cooperation and bypass roadblocks tomorrow.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Turn on the cruise control. Don't make any sudden stops or starts; just keep on truckin'. Opposition to your plans or a temporary roadblock can prevent you from making headway.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Know whom you are dealing with. By digging deep, you might find a treasure in a close friend or cherished partner.

HOROSCOPE Jeraldine Saunders

Casual acquaintances or the public might not be communicative.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Patience is a virtue. With money matters it is best to wait out today's fiery flurry of celestial turbulence before making a decision. The answer to a dilemma may be clear by tomorrow.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Don't throw good money after bad. A temporary situation could put you between a rock and hard place where business dealings are concerned. Wait to take action or to strike a bargain.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Puzzles require your patience. Use resources to find the answer to a question or dig deep to get to the root of a problem. Any disputes can be settled amicably tomorrow, not today.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Apologies might be accepted. You have the ability to straighten out a problematic personal situation. This, however, is not a good day to negotiate a busi-

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Finders keepers, losers weepers. Business matters can teach some harsh truths, so keep your head down and don't stir things up. Tomorrow is a better time to settle a controversy or problem.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You can be seen in a favorable light. Don't make deals or sign important business papers today and steer clear of controversy. You can ask for favors or cooperation tomorrow.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): He who hesitates is smart. Back away from making important decisions about work, career or business. There is a brief period today when a troublesome mistake could be made.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): All's well that ends well. Tiny tensions could put you off your game today. Plan to finalize transactions or offer apologies tomorrow when others will be more likely to cooperate.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Don't jump to confrontational conclusions. Minor emergencies or surprises can distract you from deadlines. Adjust to changes with good grace but do not finalize a business transaction yet.

THE FAMILY CIRCUS

By Bill Keane

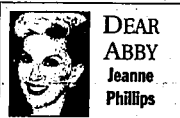

Accidental mother finds no joy in being a parent

DEAR ABBY: I'm 26 and have never wanted children. Last year, however, two lines appeared on a pregnancy test and 41 weeks later the girl was born. I pleaded and begged my husband throughout the pregnancy to sign adoption papers with me. He refused. He is in the military and was gone through most of the last seven months. We now live thousands of miles from my family, and I am miserable, stuck with a colicky baby who still doesn't sleep through the night.

I find no joy, no pleasure and no love being a mother. I can't sleep knowing I must wake up to a crying baby and the same routine of feeding, diapers, baths and bottles. I have become more and more detached from the girl and have nothing to enjoy. Showers are short. Dinners are rushed and usually cold. I can't even enjoy a cup of coffee without looking over my shoulder to see where the girl is. I don't want her to touch me, and I can barely hide my revulsion when I have to pick her up.

I am exhausted beyond belief, and my thoughts are turning darker every day. It's not the girl's fault she was born, but I can't help feeling resentment and anger toward this little person who more and more resembles a block of concrete on my feet.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

We can't afford day care, and we have no friends or relatives remotely close by. I can't stand to wake up much longer, and these long stretches of crying have my nerves shot and my hands itching to shake the girl until she shuts up. (I have never shaken her.)

I'm scared of my feelings. What's wrong with me? Why can't I love my child? Should I put her in foster care? My husband can't stand her, either, but he's adamant that we keep her. Yet I'm suffering, and so is she. She deserves a mother who loves her.

—GOING CRAZY IN SAN DIEGO

DEAR GOING CRAZY: It is not a crime not to feel maternal — not everyone is. In a case like yours, adoption might have been the better option. I wish you had included your name, address or a phone number so I could have contacted you directly. Because you didn't, I can only recommend that before another day goes by, you contact the doctor who delivered your daughter, or her pediatrician, and repeat what you have told me. You may be suffering from post-partum depression, a hormonal condition that is treatable, and you may need a respite from motherhood.

Once your chemistry is balanced again, consider making a trip to visit your family for a few weeks. If you leave the baby with your husband, and he must assume responsibility for her care in your absence, he may begin to see the wisdom of placing her with a family who really wants her and is willing to accept the responsibility that goes along with having a baby. Please, don't wait.

West Coast water cooler than the east

The water on the West Coast is about 20 degrees colder than the water on the East Coast. Because ocean currents in the Northern Hemisphere go clockwise, the water on the eastern coast comes up from the tropics, but on the west coast it comes down from the arctic.

Solar system rethink provokes space squabble to be decided today

New definition could eliminate Pluto and trio of candidates as proper planets

By William J. Kole Associated Press writer

PRAGUE, Czech Republic — It's a cosmic clash, a space squabble, a mutiny in the Milky Way. Leading astronomers are bitterly divided over new galactic guidelines that for the first time would define what is and isn't a planet. The debate all but dooms a proposal being put to a vote today to expand the solar system to 12 planets from the traditional nine.

Caught yet again in the crossfire is puny Pluto, scorned by many as a poser that could be demoted as a dwarf — slightly shrinking Earth's neighborhood instead.

Opponents "smell blood, and I think they're going to get it," Alan Boss, an astrophysicist at the Carnegie Institution in Washington, D.C., said on the eve of a vote by members of the International Astronomical Union.

Leaders of the group, the official arbiter of heavenly bodies, caused a sensation last week by proposing that Pluto's largest moon and two other objects officially be designated as planets. They suggested that Pluto and the three newcomers be the first of a new class of planet dubbed "plutons."

The rationale was their initial draft definition of a planet: any object larger than nearly 500 miles in diameter that orbits the sun, has a mass roughly one-12,000th that of Earth and has enough self-gravity to pull itself into a round shape.

But for many of the 2,500 astronomers from 75 countries meeting in Prague, the universe hasn't been the same since.

After days of spirited and sometimes combative debate, renegade scientists have won some key concessions. A planet, they insist, must be the dominant object in its area. That would draw a sharp distinction between the eight "classical planets" — Mercury, Venus, Earth, Mars, Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus and Neptune — and Pluto, which would be known as a "dwarf planet."

Pluto's largest moon, Charon, the asteroid Ceres, which was a planet in the 1800s before it got demoted, and a recently discovered object known as 2003 UB313 and nicknamed Xena, also would be dwarfs.

The precise wording of the definition remained a work in progress Wednesday. However, if astronomers agree that a planet must have "orbital dominance" in its own neighborhood, the new guidelines would eliminate Pluto and the trio of tentative candidates as proper planets.

"It's a kind of compromise: There would be only eight planets, plus the dwarf planets," said Japanese astronomer Junichi Watanabe, a member of the IAU's planet definition committee.

Many believe there's simply no scientific justification to grant full planet status to most of what's floating in the vast sea of rocks that reside in the Kuiper Belt — a mysterious, disc-shaped zone beyond Neptune containing thousands of comets and planetary objects.

"It's impossible to draw the line between the new dwarf planets and large asteroids," said Mark Bailey, director of Britain's Armagh Observatory. "And forget the term 'pluton' — it's already history."

Under pressure from a growing faction of astronomers, the planet definers have been tossing around other options: plutoids, plutonids, plutonoids, plutans, or Tombaugh objects, or planets in honor of Clyde Tombaugh, the American who discovered Pluto in 1930.

Among the scientists who torpedoed "pluton" were geologists, who pointed out — somewhat embarrassingly to astronomers — that it's already a prominent term in volcano formations for deep igneous rock formations.

"What were they thinking? The reaction in the geologic community was rolling of eyes," said Allen E. Ginzler, a geologist at the University of North Carolina. "It would be like botanists trying to distinguish between trees and shrubs and coming up with the term 'animal'."

Harvard's Owen Gingerich, who chairs the planet definition panel, conceded: "We perhaps stumbled."

After the panel got dozens of objecting e-mails, "we backed off," he added.

which is smaller than Earth's moon.

Its underdog status has inspired scores of tributes, including one by New York folk singer Christine Lavin that laments: "I guess if Pluto showed up at a planet convention, the bouncer at the door might have to ban it."

"Some say, 'No, Pluto is a nice planet,'" and should remain one, Watanabe said.

"It's an important object that has played an important role," he said. "But this is a natural way to draw a line."

ANSWER: With doubleton heart honors this hand is worth only 15-17 points, so make a one-no-trump overall instead of doubling and then bidding no-trump to show 18-20. Although you have a number of honor-tricks, your lack of support for either major and your poor intermediates are further weaknesses. If partner passes, you will not have missed anything.

Idaho's treasure; the Eastern Snake River Plain Aquifer

Idaho is a land of amazing natural treasures for our eyes to behold; from the rugged mountains and pristine canyons of central Idaho, north Idaho's great lakes, forests and vast roadless areas, abundant wildlife and blue-ribbon fishing. However, Idaho's greatest and most valuable treasure is hidden from view, under the thousands of square miles of sagebrush desert and irrigated farm land of the eastern Snake River Plain. It's the Eastern Snake River Plain Aquifer.

The Eastern Snake River Plain Aquifer in Eastern Idaho is the largest aquifer in Idaho, and one of the largest and most productive aquifers in the world.

The Snake River Plain Aquifer in Eastern Idaho is the largest aquifer in Idaho, and one of the largest and most productive aquifers in the world.

It's often said that water is the life-blood of Idaho. The Snake River and Eastern Snake River Plain Aquifer allow the Snake River Plain—land that would otherwise be desert—to produce the lion's share of Idaho's agricultural products. Vast fields of potatoes, sugar beets, wheat, barley, beans, peas and alfalfa, along with dairies and feedlots, rely on the combined resources of the Snake River and its aquifer, really one and the same resource. It also provides water for aquaculture, or fish-farming. Three quarters of our nation's farm-raised trout come from farms fed by the Eastern Snake River Plain Aquifer.

The crystal-clear water of the Eastern Snake River Plain Aquifer is also the only source of drinking water for nearly 300,000 residents of eastern Idaho. That's why the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency designated it as a "sole source aquifer" in 1991.

The crystal-clear water of the Snake River Plain Aquifer is also the only source of drinking water for nearly 300,000 residents of Eastern Idaho.

An aquifer is "sole source" if it supplies at least 50% of the drinking water for people living above the aquifer and if there is no alternative source of drinking water that could physically, legally and economically supply all those that depend on that aquifer.

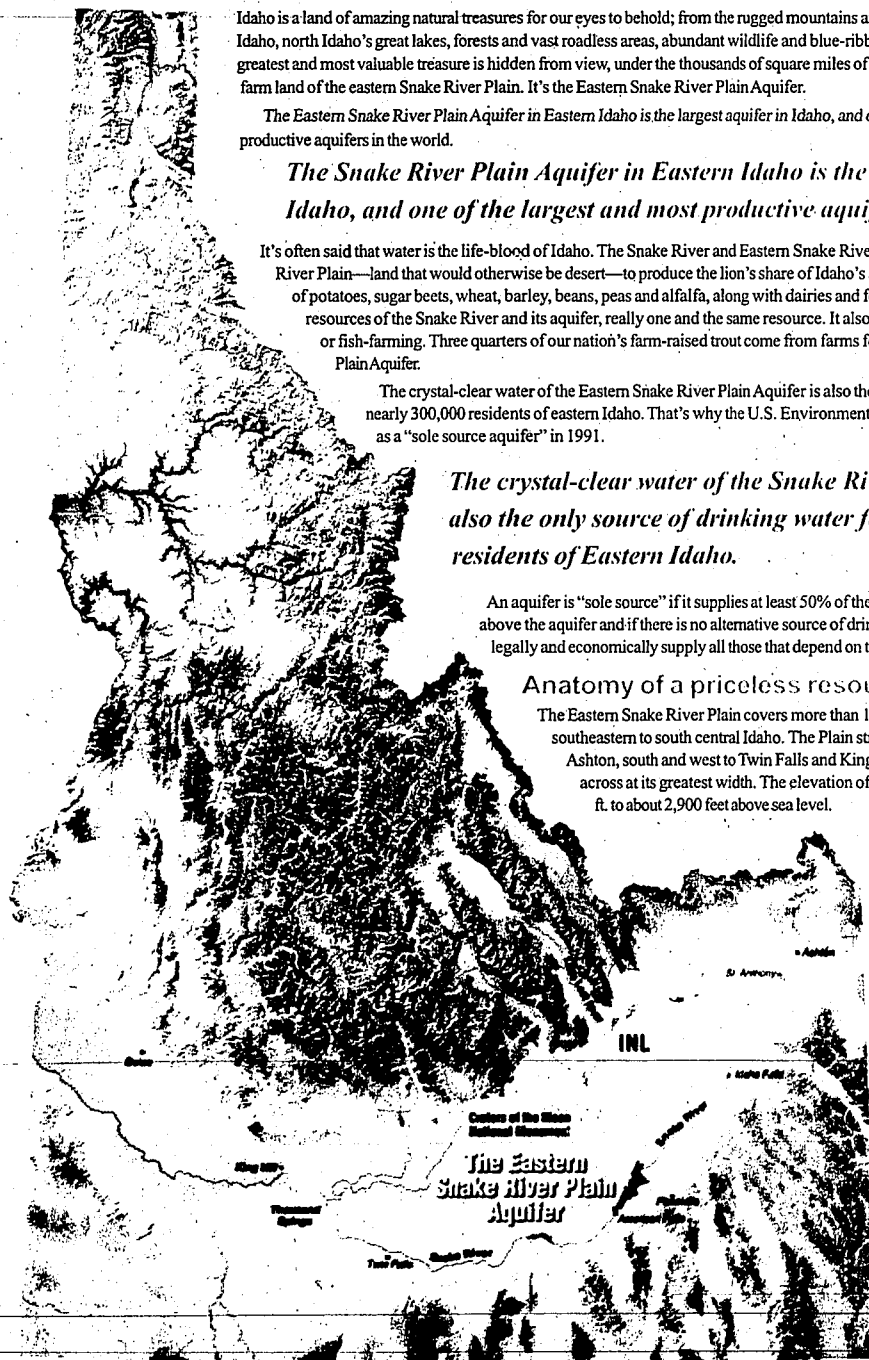

Anatomy of a priceless resource

The Eastern Snake River Plain covers more than 10,800 square miles of southeastern to south central Idaho. The Plain stretches more than 170 miles from Ashton, south and west to Twin Falls and King Hill, and is more than 60 miles across at its greatest width. The elevation of the Plain ranges from over 6,000 ft. to about 2,900 feet above sea level.

Snow and rain that falls on the 36,000 square-mile upper Snake River Basin, including parts of Wyoming, Utah and Nevada, supply the Snake River and Eastern Snake River Plain Aquifer.

Each year, about 8 million acre feet of water flow past King Hill, the western boundary of the Eastern Snake River Plain. This is enough water to cover all of the Eastern Snake River Plain with about 16 inches of water.

In contrast, the entire Eastern Snake River Plain Aquifer is thought to contain as much as a billion acre feet of water, enough to cover the Plain with about 140 feet of water, creating a lake more than twice as deep as Lake Erie.

ANATOMY of an AQUIFER

It's the Rocks!

Our aquifer is composed of basalt lavas intermixed with sediments from lakes and rivers, and wind-blown dust. Most of the aquifer (about 90%) is basalt, and it's the broken basalt of the Eastern Snake River Plain that makes our aquifer so productive. The depth to which these broken basalts extend determines the thickness of our aquifer. From St. Anthony and Ashton at the northeastern edge of the aquifer to the Snake River at Thousand Springs and Hagerman, water-saturated basalt is as much as four thousand feet deep. Water flows more easily in the upper few hundred feet of the aquifer. The depth to the aquifer is as much as a thousand feet in the center of the Eastern Snake River Plain.

The Secret Life of Snake River Plain Volcanoes

The Eastern Snake River Plain is so unique that it represents its own "Plains-style" volcanism. The Plain's relatively flat landscape is composed of a distinctive combination of broad, gently-sloping mounds of lava ("shield" volcanoes or "hubcaps"), basalt flows fed by lava tubes that can stretch for miles, and flows fed by long fissures filling in the spaces between the shield volcanoes. A few, relatively small basaltic cinder cones also dot the landscape.

Eruptions began along tension cracks in the Plain, as southeast Idaho was being stretched from northeast to southwest, along with the mountain ranges on either side of the Plain. Groups of these open fractures, stretching for several miles, can be seen on the Plain today.

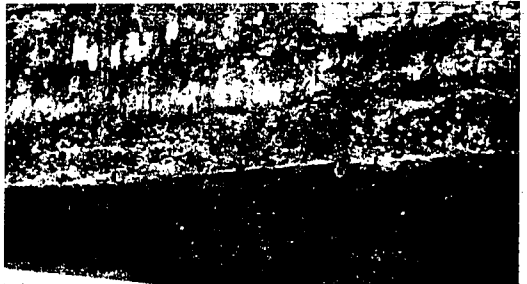

Basalt lava flowed from some of these cracks, taking different forms due to the type and length of eruptions. Shield volcanoes formed when eruption activity lasted for years in the same vent area. Lava-tube fed flows formed as eruptions lasting from months to years cooled to form a crust on top while a lava stream continued to flow, forming a tube underneath. Fissure-fed flows resulted from eruptions that lasted for shorter periods, days to months. Increases in the amount of dissolved gas, new surges of lava, or lava encounters with groundwater caused more explosive eruptions, forming cinder cones.

Another kind of lava, rhyolite, is found in a few places on the surface of the plain. It is thicker and more viscous than basalt and typically has more explosive eruptions. Rhyolite can form thick "domes," like Big Southern Butte along INL's southern boundary, from quiet eruptions. It can also form widespread sheets of ash from violent eruptions, like those forming Yellowstone Park.

Overall, the lives of individual Snake River Plain volcanoes were short, probably days to years, with hundreds to thousand of years between eruptions.

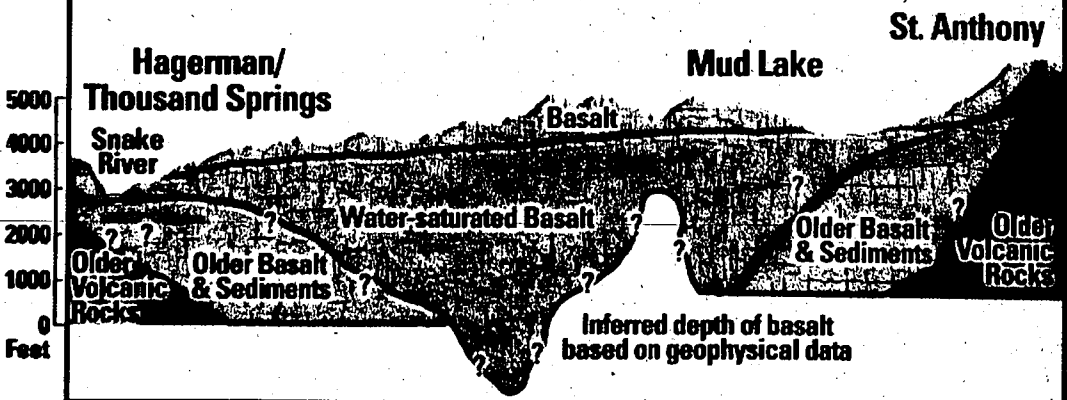

The large, broken blocks and columnar joints seen in places like this box canyon on the usually dry bed of the Big Lost River near Arco are features that help us see how water can travel so easily through the basalt of the Eastern Snake River Plain Aquifer.

Contrast in permeability is most obvious in the Snake River Canyon. The older basalt (brown in this picture) marks the base of the aquifer (the grey basalt in this picture). The elevation of the springs along the canyon wall is controlled by this older, less permeable basalt.

Simplified Geologic Cross Section of the Eastern Snake River Plain

Deep wells and remote sensing tools like the travel time of seismic waves tell us the basalt lavas are as much as 4,000 to 5,000 feet beneath the surface across the Eastern Snake River Plain, with other lava rocks and sediments below. Due to the age of the rocks (meaning more time for dissolved minerals to clog up water flow), most of the deeper basalt is saturated with water. The most permeable rocks, where water flows easily, are those in the upper 200-300 feet of the aquifer.

Convoluted path

The shortest distance between two points is a straight line, but the easiest path for water flow in an aquifer is usually anything but straight. Tortuosity is the word used to describe the convoluted path water molecules take to weave in and out, above and below the grains and broken pieces of rock in an aquifer.

The water flow rate of 1 to 10 feet per day given for the Eastern Snake River Plain Aquifer refers to the "straight line" distance the water has traveled.

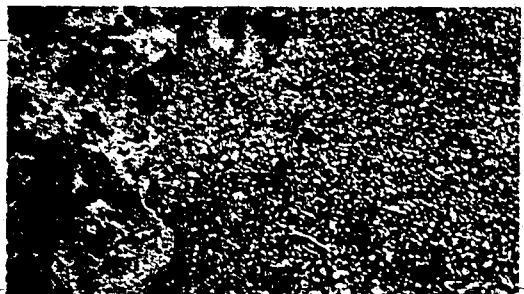

Under the surface: basalt

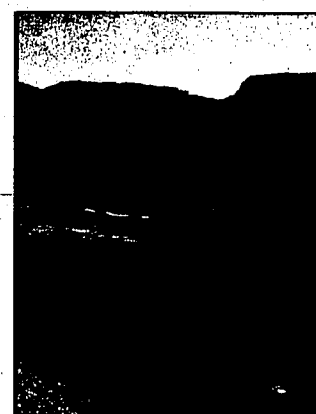

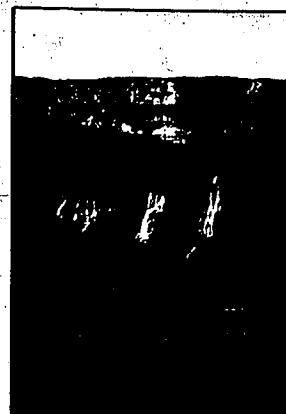

Our aquifer is composed mostly (about 90%) of basalt lavas. The basalt layers are not like cake layers, even and uniform from one side of the plain to the other, but more like a pile of pancakes thrown across a table. The basalt lava flows are typically just a few feet to tens of feet thick, and can vary considerably in thickness across short distances. The highly fractured basalt is often broken in blocks. It can also form distinctive "columnar" joints.

Sediments

Sediments of the Eastern Snake River Plain fill in the gaps between lava flows, making up about 10% of our aquifer. Sand and gravels from rivers flowing across parts of the plain and silt from lakes formed at different times in the past slow down aquifer water and can trap or "perch" water above the aquifer. There are also thin layers of wind-blown silt formed when other rock layers were exposed to the surface.

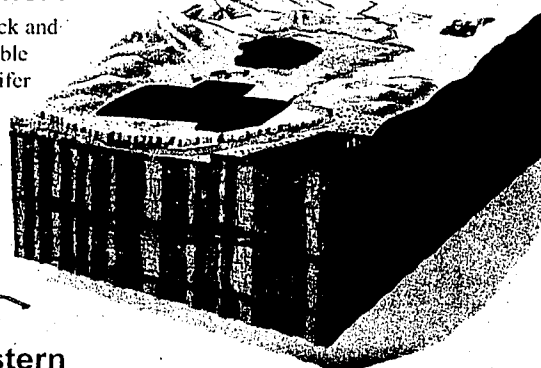

The Eastern Snake River Plain AQUIFER

What is an aquifer?

An aquifer is a body of rock and sediment that will yield usable quantities of water. An aquifer isn't like an underground river or lake, but more like a giant sponge or a network of tiny interconnected pipes that can hold and transport water.

What is the Eastern Snake River Plain Aquifer?

The Eastern Snake River Plain Aquifer is one of Idaho's treasures. It's one of the largest, most productive aquifers in the world. It covers over 10,800 square miles of southern Idaho, stretching from Ashton to King Hill. The aquifer contains an estimated billion acre feet of water, about as much as Lake Erie and 600 times the capacity of American Falls Reservoir.

What is the aquifer made of?

About 90% of our aquifer is basalt, lava erupted from fissures and volcanoes during the past few million years. The remaining 10% of the aquifer is sediments from rivers, lakes, and wind-blown dust. The fractured nature of the aquifer's basalt is what allows our aquifer to hold and transport so much water. Basalts saturated with water are as much as 4,000 feet deep in the center of the Eastern Snake River Plain.

How does water flow?

Water flows through the aquifer via spaces in rocks and sediments, through larger cracks in rocks and tiny holes between rock grains. Water can take a convoluted path as it zigs and zags around rock grains. It travels more quickly through permeable areas—rock layers containing lots of connected spaces. Water flows most easily through the upper-200-to-300-foot-of-our-aquifer.

About 60% of the water going into the aquifer (called recharge) comes from irrigation. Other recharge comes from small aquifers in valleys along the edge of the plain, infiltration from rivers and canals, and precipitation (rain and snow). On the image below irrigated fields appear as

Where does the water go?

About 86% of the water going out of the aquifer (called discharge), about 7.1 million acre feet, eventually flows into the Snake River. Groundwater pumping accounts for 14%, or 1.1 million acre feet, of the aquifer's discharge. Of the groundwater pumped, 95% is for irrigation, with the rest for drinking water and commercial or livestock use.

14% Groundwater pumped
86% Snake River gains

Water In Water Out

How fast does water flow in the aquifer?

Water in the aquifer generally flows from recharge areas on the northern and eastern border of the plain to the Snake River at Thousand Springs.

Water in the aquifer flows probably between 1 to 10 feet per day, much slower than a river, but fast for an aquifer. Water beneath the INL probably takes about 150 to 250 years to travel to Thousand Springs.

State of Idaho Oversight MONITOR

Samples of aquifer rocks can be collected when wells are drilled. This core, which can be hundreds of feet long, is a record of what the aquifer looks like and can help understand contaminant and water flow. The core samples here show sedimentary layers between basalt flows. Beneath the INL are several sedimentary layers tens of feet thick that can slow water and contaminant movement to the water level in the aquifer.

It's like trying to assemble a huge three-dimensional puzzle without having all of the pieces...

Decoding the Aquifer

Understanding the anatomy of our aquifer, how water travels through it, and the impacts of contamination from times past gives us clues to how the aquifer and contaminants might behave in the future. Our aquifer doesn't give this information up easily; we have to sift through evidence and decode its mysteries. We use what we learn to improve how we monitor the aquifer, make decisions about how to best clean up contamination, such as places beneath the INL, and ensure ongoing activities protect the aquifer.

To understand the aquifer, scientists use many different tools and make a wide range of measurements. These tools and measurements produce small pieces of the aquifer puzzle, and these smaller pieces must be brought together to see the whole picture. Scientists often must devise new tools or make new measurements to fill in holes left by "missing pieces."

Measurements are made of the quantity of water soaking into the Eastern Snake River Plain (from irrigation, rivers, canals, and snow and rain) to recharge the aquifer, and water leaving the aquifer, discharged from springs and pumped from wells. Also measured are changes in aquifer water levels in wells, and concentrations of minerals and contaminants dissolved in samples of aquifer water.

To learn about the pieces of the puzzle beneath our feet, scientists drill wells to collect samples of the aquifer rocks and make measurements of their characteristics. Different basalt and sediment layers can also be detected by measuring how seismic waves travel or magnetic and gravitational fields vary across the Plain.

By assembling these pieces, we can create a model of how the aquifer works. If something happens the model didn't predict—like when concentrations of the radioactive element technetium appeared near the INTEC Tank Farm where they weren't expected—we revise the model.

It's a cycle of collecting data, revising models and reviewing decisions to achieve our goal—protecting the aquifer and the people who depend on it.

Read between the lines—of basalt

Basalts of the Eastern Snake River Plain range from the 2,000-year-old flows at Craters of the Moon to three-million year old flows buried beneath the surface. Where the Craters of the Moon lava field includes hundreds of cubic miles of basalt from a series of eruptions dating back to around 15,000 years ago, the much smaller lava fields at King's Bowl and Hell's Half-Acre likely came from shorter-lived eruptions, maybe just days long.

In the years between lava flows on the Plain, sediments accumulated—wind-blown dust, and deposits from the many rivers, lakes and streams flowing onto the Plain from the mountains to the north and south. Sediments from rivers and lakes have formed deposits up to several hundred feet thick in some areas, while basalt lies bare at the surface elsewhere.

Sediments are intermixed with the basalt flows. At times, basalt flows and eruptions changed the course of streams and rivers, eventually separating the Big Lost River, Little Lost River, Birch Creek and Camas Creek from the Snake River.

During times of wetter climates, lakes formed on the Snake River Plain. One such now-dry lake, Lake Terretton, left sediments found at the north end of the INL. Lakes have also existed along the Snake River, when lava flows dammed the river. Sediments and the remnants of a dam of basalt near American Falls show a large lake existed there once.

Away from the recent deposits of the Snake River and streams that flow onto the Plain, the Plain is covered with deposits of wind-blown dust (also known as loess) in layers from a few inches to nearly six feet thick. This sediment was deposited as dusty winds blew across the Plain, primarily during the last Ice Age, more than ten thousand years ago.

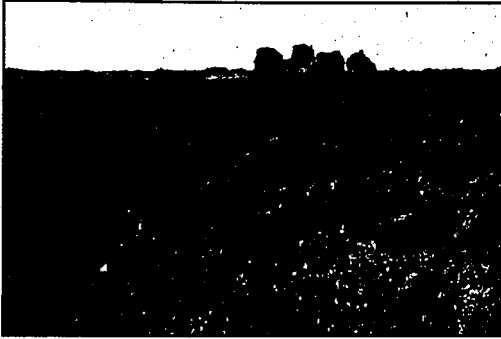

If something happens the model didn't predict—like when concentrations of the radioactive element technetium appeared near the INTEC Tank Farm where we didn't expect them—we make changes to the model.

Craters of the Moon geology offers insight into aquifer

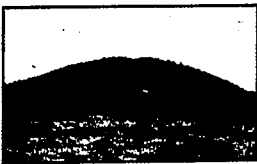

The well-preserved volcanic features of the Craters of the Moon National Monument and Preserve give us an idea of the complexity of the basalt flows beneath the surface that form most of the Eastern Snake River Plain Aquifer. Craters of the Moon National Monument contains three major lava fields covering almost half a million acres. A series of eruptions formed these lava fields between 2,000 and 15,000 years ago.

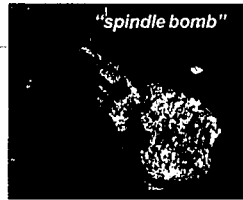

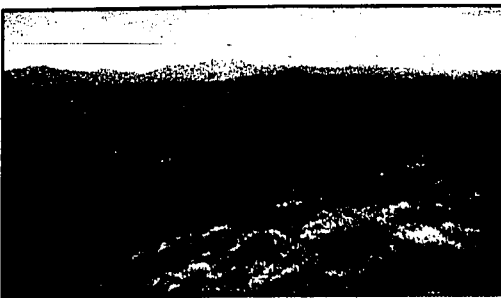

“Aa” lavas, named after the Hawaiian word meaning burn, are basalt flows that typically cool as massive bodies of rock with rough, jagged surfaces. Water typically travels more slowly through the massive cores of aa lava flows, but fairly easy through the jagged surfaces. Water flows more quickly through areas of the aquifer where there are series of thin lava flows and more slowly through thicker lava flows.

“Pahoehoe” lavas, named after the Hawaiian word for paddle, are basalt flows that make smooth wavy ropes. Pahoehoe lava flows rapidly and tends to spread out. Because of the wavy, ropy nature of the lava, series of pahoehoe flows tends to have lots of open spaces or voids. These spaces allow water to flow more easily through the aquifer. Lava closer to vents tends to be pahoehoe, grading to aa farther from the vent.

Cinder cones form when a vent erupts and accumulates cinders (light, gas-filled rock fragments), bombs and lava spatter around a central crater. The Craters of the Moon lava fields contain over 25 major cinder cones. The photo shows one of them, Big Cinder Butte. Water can move relatively easily through cinder and broken lava deposits.

created from twisting of the glob during flight. Bombs form several kinds of shapes—“cow pie” bombs from when bombs don’t completely solidify during flight and flatten on landing.

Lava tubes form when lava flows long enough to cool and form a crust on top, while continuing to flow underneath. If the molten lava drains out, it leaves an empty tube under the crust. Water can move easily through lava tubes, which can vary from one to 50 feet in diameter and up to several miles long.

The Craters of the Moon Lava Field is an example of many of the types of basalt lava flows buried beneath the surface of the Eastern Snake River Plain. The fractured nature of the rocks seen at the surface helps us see how water can travel so easily in our aquifer.

The Eastern Snake River Plain AQUIFER

Idaho and the Eastern Snake River Plain Aquifer

It's said that biology is destiny. For humans, that may be true. But for Idaho, geology is destiny, and much of that destiny is defined by the presence of the Eastern Snake River Plain Aquifer.

Lured west with the false promise that "the rain follows the plow," homesteaders traveling the Oregon Trail crossed the Snake River Plain. Some decided to stop, gravitating to the areas where water was plentiful—next to the Snake River and its tributary streams.

In time, Idahoans developed the technology and the infrastructure of canals and dams to thrive whether the rain followed or not. With the addition of pumps, they tapped the aquifer and farms spread out. No longer tethered to just those areas adjacent to surface water, land was cultivated throughout the Eastern Snake River Plain, molding the arid stretch into one of the most productive agricultural regions in the world.

Today, the pure, cold spring water that flows from Thousand Springs supports a thriving aquaculture (fish-farming) industry; sixty-nine percent of the trout farmed in the United States come from Idaho. Twenty-nine percent of the nation's potatoes are grown in Idaho, and the state ranks sixth in the number of cattle produced. The Eastern Snake River Plain, once little more than a dry passage to the west, now helps feed people all over the world.

This newsletter is the first of a two-part series on the Eastern Snake River Plain Aquifer, discussing basic building blocks that make up our aquifer. Another issue of the Oversight Monitor discusses aquifer recharge, storage, and discharge.

It's said that biology is destiny. For humans, that may be true. But for Idaho, geology is destiny, and much of that destiny is defined by the presence of the Eastern Snake River Plain Aquifer.

Lured west with the false promise that "the rain follows the plow," homesteaders traveling the Oregon Trail crossed the Snake River Plain. Some decided to stop, gravitating to the areas where water was plentiful—next to the Snake River and its tributary streams.

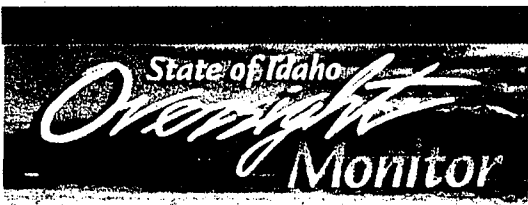

In time, Idahoans developed the technology and the infrastructure of canals and dams to thrive whether the rain followed or not. With the addition of pumps, they tapped the aquifer and farms spread out. No longer tethered to just those areas adjacent to surface water, land was cultivated throughout the Eastern Snake River Plain, molding the arid stretch into one of the most productive agricultural regions in the world.

Today, the pure, cold spring water that flows from Thousand Springs supports a thriving aquaculture (fish-farming) industry; sixty-nine percent of the trout farmed in the United States come from Idaho. Twenty-nine percent of the nation's potatoes are grown in Idaho, and the state ranks sixth in the number of cattle produced. The Eastern Snake River Plain, once little more than a dry passage to the west, now helps feed people all over the world.

This newsletter is the first of a two-part series on the Eastern Snake River Plain Aquifer, discussing basic building blocks that make up our aquifer. Another issue of the Oversight Monitor discusses aquifer-recharge, storage, and discharge.

VIDEO GAME REVIEW

One of the many environments in the new video game 'Tekken: Dark Resurrection' where players will have to wage battle in this new fighting game for Sony PlayStation Portable.

Tekken brings fighting fun to PSP

BY MATT SLAGLE
The Associated Press

If you've never played a fighting game like "Tekken: Dark Resurrection," there are a few important things to know.

As with most video games, hand-eye coordination is certainly important. But above all else, you need fingers of steel.

This new T-rated, $39.99 title for the PlayStation Portable often comes down to how long your poor digits can endure pounding buttons in quick, endless succession.

For a portable system that doesn't have very many fighting games (or very many good games at all, for that matter), "Dark Resurrection" is a gorgeous, button-mashing extravaganza.

The gameplay is simple enough for novices to jump right into and enjoy, yet the many combinations and special attacks will take a long time to master.

People like me who struggle with the sophisticated button slaps needed to win games like this will appreciate the practice mode, where I was able to hone my skills with minimal humiliation.

You begin by choosing from an array of warriors — there are dozens of oddball characters including a kangaroo and a panda, as well as more traditional human combatants. Each has special moves and fighting characteristics.

These battle royales play out in 3-D environments such as wolf-infested forests and high-tech arenas that really come alive during the one-on-one fights.

Graphically, "Dark Resurrection" is one of the best-looking PSP games yet. Each fighter has a distinct look and features detailed, fluid movements as they flail around, throwing and blocking punches and kicks.

Of the several fighting modes available, the player-versus-player online mode offers the most replay value. Two PSP players within wireless range can duke it out, which is far more interesting than the built-in computer foes (who still provide plenty of challenge, however).

Though much of the game showcases the audiovisual prowess of the PSP, "Dark Resurrection" also points out one of the system's biggest annoyances: the button placement.

In a frantic game like this, it's painfully clear that the directional buttons are spaced too far apart from each other, if only by a millimeter or two.

Archery targeted at this year's Renaissance Faire

BY KAREN BOSSICK
For the Times-News

SUN VALLEY— Once upon a time in a land far away, the most feared weapon in all the land was not a nuclear, a SCUD missile or even a nuclear bomb.

It was a longbow.

The most deadly weapon of its time, the longbow dominated the battlefield from the late 13th century until the late 16th century, when guns began to emerge as the weapon of choice.

Five thousand fighters could shoot 40,000 yard-long arrows a minute. They could wound from 250 yards away, kill from 100 yards and penetrate armor from 60 yards.

Visitors to this weekend's Renaissance Faire can get a taste of the longbow—and medieval archery in general—as vendors hawk bows and wooden arrows, and knights shoot bows from horseback. Organizers have even planned an archery competition.

"It's sort of like a Robin Hood competition," said Prue Hemmings, an organizer. "We have a lot of bow men in this valley, so we're hoping some of them will come out and take part."

Seven Meadows Archery of Tacoma will sell handmade bows made by Hungarian bow maker Ist Van Toth, who also makes bows and arrows for History Channel programs and such movies as "The Scorpion King" and Ben Stiller's upcoming "Night at the Museum."

The bows, accompanied by traditional wooden arrows and knives, are similar to those that the ancient Hungarians and Mongolians, Huns, Tatars and other nomadic people of the Steppes used.

"These are quite functional bows. People use them for hunting and target shooting," says

Kimberly Coleman of Seven Meadows Archery.

The Old Magyar bow was made of five materials, including soft wood, a glue made from fish air-bladders and sinew, which allowed the bow to be drawn farther and easier than other types.

To prevent the bow from going too far forward once fired, horn from the ancestors of the Hungarian longhorn cattle was added.

This also prevented the bowstring sagged, so Magyar archers never needed arm or hand protection.

The modern bows, which sell for $100 to $300, contain fiberglass, as well.

"They're very fast and powerful," Coleman says, "they release the arrow real fast yet they're easy to draw. And they're comfortable to shoot, too. They don't splat your hands the way some bows do."

If you go ...

Reather Sherry Daech has traded in her red Hummer for a four-legged steed, and librarian Chris Millsbaugh is honing his one-liners for his upcoming gig as king.

The two will preside over the 4th annual Sun Valley Renaissance Faire on Saturday and Sunday at Sun Valley Festival Meadows on Sun Valley Road.

The event is set for 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday and 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday.

The weekend will feature jousting on horseback by The Seattle Knights, live performances featuring Robin Hood and Maid Marion and a King's Feast Luncheon, as well as vintres for peasants. It also will feature sword and maypole dances, minstrels, medieval artisans and vendors, Punch and Judy shows, children's games and a medieval farm.

Costumes are encouraged. Weapons must be peace-tied, and dogs must stay home, by the order of the Sheriff of Hatchingham.

Admission is $8 for adults. Children will be admitted free.

"It's all for an honorable cause," says organizer Prue Hemmings. "It supports the Sun Valley Shakespeare Festival, and it supports performing arts in this town in general."

It's not all clash and splash. There are spots of sweetness, too, at Sun Valley's Renaissance Faire.

Slacker college comedy takes revenge for the nerds

BY GLENN WHIPP
 Los Angeles Daily News

The amiably trivial teen comedy "Accepted" follows a group of misfit high-school graduates who cook up their own fictional college to get their parents off their backs. The stunt spirals out of control when every slacker within a 100-mile radius shows up at the campus, each one offering a $10,000 tuition check, happy just to be accepted somewhere.

Rather than pull the plug on this "experimental program," earnest scam artist Bartleby Gaines (Justin Long) decides to empower his fellow ne'er-do-wells, asking them what classes they'd like to take.

Suggestions include: "Taking a Walk and Thinking about Stuff," "Romantic Rehab" and "Skepticism."

There's also a class titled "The Decline and Fall of Chevy Chase," a curious inclusion given that Long borrows so heavily on Chase's relaxed, fumbling coolness that the filmmakers should include a special thank you to the elder comedian in the end credits.

It could be that the 28-year-old Long, playing 18 here, has never seen Chase and is instead taking his cue from his "Dodgeball" co-star Vince Vaughn, who was heavy into Chevy in that film. Maybe that's also why the South Harmon Institute of Technology — the movie gets a lot of mileage from its acronym — doesn't offer a course titled "Vince Vaughn: The Lost Years," covering Vaughn's wanderings as a dramatic thespian between "Swingers" and his "Old School" rebirth.

The point is, should the writers of "Accepted," writers whose main credits encompass "Country Bears," "Herbie: Fully Loaded" and an Olsen twins movie, be making light of anyone's career trajectory? Their creation, directed by John Cusack collaborator Steve Pink, burns off its freshness in its first half hour and then settles into requisite genre machinations — nerds battling frat boys, nerds wooing willowy blondes, nerds making big speeches about how it's better to be different (exemplified here by cheating, binge drinking and smoking pot) than it is to conform (i.e. go to school).

"Accepted" makes a point of highlighting the differences between the stressors of "fancy" learnin' places (you know, ones with actual professors) and the Zen-like atmosphere of the South Harmon campus.

But it would have been funnier if it had acknowledged the similarities between the twin and how more college grads learn more from life experiences and "thinking about stuff" than they do from broad survey classes.

Of course, it does help ultimately to have a goal and take an interest in something that might qualify as a career. By taking it to the extreme, Bartleby's big, movie-ending populist speech (Capra would have been proud) goes a long way in explaining all those stories about college graduates returning home to live with their parents. Skateboarding is righteous, but, unless you're Tony Hawk; it doesn't pay the bills.

Movie nuggets

• "Accepted"/C+ So maybe this isn't the most original movie in the world. It's a little like "Animal House," a little like "Revenge of the Nerds" and a lot like "Old School." It calls to mind elements of "Real Genius," "National Lampoon's Van Wilder" and "PCU," which starred a then-unknown Jeremy Piven and seems to be playing somewhere on cable television 24 hours a day — even though it came out in 1994. And maybe its premise isn't the most plausible: A bunch of slackers and weirdos form their own college, where "liberal" doesn't even begin to describe the liberal arts education. Doesn't matter. "Accepted" is a lot more fun than you'd expect from a comedy coming out in the dead of summer. Directed by Steve Pink from a script by Adam

Cooper, Bill Collage and Mark Perez, and featuring a performance from the infinitely likable up-and-comer Justin Long, the film has a certain subversive élan that keeps it light on its feet — until the very end, that is, when it turns self-righteous and takes itself way too seriously. Blake Lively, Jonah Hill and Lewis Black co-star. PG-13 for language, sexual material and drug content. 92 minutes.

• "The Ant Bully"/B Ten-year-old Lucas, who likes to torment ants, learns what it feels like on the other end when he's reduced to bug size and forced to live in an ant colony. Visually, the movie isn't up to, say, "Cars," but it's got any number of impressive action pieces (like a wasp attack) and countless imaginative contrasts: a "The Incredible Shrinking Man" (a soda can the size of the Empire State Building, a shag-carpet jungle). The stellar voice cast includes Julia Roberts, Nicolas Cage, Paul Giamatti and Meryl Streep. Rated PG (some mild rude humor and action). 1 hour, 28 minutes.

• "Beerfest"/No rating American brothers head for Germany to spread their grandfather's ashes at Oktoberfest and discover a less reverent pastime: an underground beer-drinking competition. R.

• "The Descent"/B+ A smart, scary and very gory endurance test. British writer-director Neil Marshall's film sends six women (including Shauna Macdonald and Natalie Mendoza) into an uncharted Appalachian cavern, where a cave-in traps them. As they search for an escape, their nerves start to fray. The title applies to the women's literal expedition underground and also their regression to basic survival instincts — especially when they realize they're being stalked by something quick, quiet and hungry. (Steve Murray) Rated A (strong violence/gore and language). 1 hour, 39 minutes.

• "How to Eat Fried Worms"/No rating A school bully makes a weird challenge to a new fifth-grader. Not rated.

• "Idlewild"/No rating Out-Kast headliners Andre Benjamin (aka Andre 3000) and Antwan A. Patton (a.k.a. Big Boi) star in a musical about speakeasies, gangsters and lovers in 1930s African South. R.

• "Invincible"/No rating Mark Wahlberg and Greg Kinnear star in a tale of a man who redeems himself as a football star after losing both his wife and his job. PG

• "Lady in the Water"/F A washout. M. Night Shyamalan's newest film isn't merely a disappointment; it's a catastrophe. A kind of quasi-religious fairy tale, the movie stars Paul Giamatti as the savior in an apartment complex who discovers a sea nymph (called a narf and played by a palely determined Bryce Dallas Howard) in his pool. The talented Giamatti struggles mightily with this nonsense, but even he can't prevail over the filmmaker's utter failure to establish a credible myth, the stereotyped characters and the convoluted story. Think of it as Movie Down the Drain. Rated PG-13 (some frightening sequences). 1 hour, 50 minutes.

• "Miami Vice"/C Michael Mann's big-screen version of his '80s TV series is a dark, grainy and heavy drama, and so super-serious and smoky thick it could be called "Miasma Vice." For two-plus hours, mega guy stars Jamie Foxx and Colin Farrell play cops who exhibit little personality and dip into illicit drug trading, fire guns, talk tough and have sex with tough-talking women. Then they have more sex. The film, shot in the grungy style of "Collateral," is occasionally interesting to look at, but at times nearly incomprehensible. Rated R (strong violence, language and some sexual content). 2 hours, 12 minutes.

• "Monster House"/D A monstrosity. Done in the same creepy animated style as "The Polar Express," this tale of an ominous old house with a dark secret is at least bearable until the last third, when it turns into an over-the-top nightmare. A kid named DJ (voice of Mitchell Musso) thinks something's going on and enlists his friends to help him find out what it is. The decent voice talent (Steve Buscemi, Maggie Gyllenhaal and Jason Lee, among others) is mostly wasted. Rated PG (scary images and sequences, thematic elements, some crude humor and brief language). 1 hour, 31 minutes.

• "The Night Listener"/B- Toni Collette's very fine performance as a possibly very unstable woman helps hold together this intriguing but uneven psychological thriller. Robin Williams co-stars as a late-night talk-radio host who becomes emotionally invested in Collette's 14-year-old adoptive son (Roy Culklin) after reading the boy's first-person account of sexual abuse and pedophilia. With his own life falling apart, Williams finds himself in a situation that may not be as it seems. Rated R (language and some disquieting sexual content). 1 hour, 31 minutes.

• "Pirates of the Caribbean: Dead Man's Chest"/B+ Even better than the first one and, oh, that Johnny Depp! Reprising his Oscar-nominated role as the roguish Capt. Jack Sparrow, Depp romps through — and often saves by sheer charisma — a somewhat incomprehensible plot. It has something to do with Jack owing a blood debt to Davy Jones (Bill Nighy, buried in an octopus beard). Keira Knightley and Orlando Bloom return as the young lovers, now in hot water for aiding Jack's escape in the original film. Plus cannibals, sea battles, ghost ships and a helluva giant squid. Rated PG-13 (intense sequences of adventure violence, including frightening images). 2 hours, 30 minutes.

• "Scoop"/C Doesn't come close to matching last year's comeback, "Match Point." Woody Allen backslides in this mildly entertaining piffle about an American journalism student (Scarlett Johansson) in London who gets a tip from beyond the grave. Namely, the city's newest serial killer may be dashing aristocrat Hugh Jackman. Allen appears as a hack magician she invites — for no discernible reason other than to give himself more screen time — to help. The whole thing's rather reminiscent of Allen's "Manhattan Murder Mystery," but not as good. And even that was midlevel Woody. Rated PG-13 (some sexual content). 1 hour, 36 minutes.

• "Snakes on a Plane"/B+ This is a rare example of a film not just living up to the hype, but surpassing it. And it's the best time you'll have at the movies all summer, if not all year. Granted, it's difficult to separate the two — the sensation of watching the film on masse and the film itself. Having said that, "Snakes on a Plane" does stand up on its own two, er, feet as a thrilling action flick. It accomplishes exactly what it sets out to do, and it does so in brilliant fashion. It's intense and suspenseful, scary and gory, darkly funny and sometimes giddily hysterical. Samuel L. Jackson is the guy you want at the controls, starring as an FBI agent escorting a murder witness on a redeye flight across the Pacific Ocean. Also on board are hundreds of deadly snakes, which a crime lord has arranged to take the witness out. R for language, a scene of sexuality and drug use, and intense sequences of terror and violence. 90 minutes.

The big wave slams into luxury liner, somewhere east of Java, about 15 minutes into "Poseidon." When it hits, it hits like a sledgehammer wielded by an angry sea god who doesn't like ships that look like the cities in '50s sci-fi movies.

Director Wolfgang Petersen doesn't spare the carnage. People die in the hundreds, the thousands. And when they die, their bodies float in the sloppage of water that sloshes through the topsy-turvy decks or lie all twisty-still and bloodied from concussion.

Against this carnival of death, the film quickly isolates a small team of free thinkers who head upward, trusting their instincts over official bromides. The two main guys are high-end gamblers played by Kurt Russell and Josh Lucas, and they attract a few others who happen merely to be standing next to them when they start the journey.

The movie is not about being, it's about doing. It's basically an ordeal by ordeal. It's one thing after another, and the personalities emerge from the action, they aren't imposed on it. "Poseidon" is two words shorter in title and 20 minutes shorter in running time than "The Poseidon Adventure," its beloved 1972 predecessor.

You might say: "Poseidon" isn't a ship. It's a freight train that just goes faster and faster. It plays like "Titanic," if "Titanic" had begun at Minute 127. I happen to prefer by far the second edition.

Petersen knows a little about disasters, particularly those at sea. He was, many years ago, the genius behind "Das Boot," that odyssey of German submariners. There, he showed a peculiar gift for evoking the existential horror of people trapped beneath the sea. It wasn't much fun and it wasn't very pretty.

He brings that same imagination for ordeal to this film. He leaves out, largely, character, back story, anecdote and warm personal relations. "Poseidon" isn't "Silent Hill"

R

The story of a mother (Radha Mitchell) who brings her sick daughter (Jodelle Ferland) to a West Virginia ghost town with hopes of curing her does have some genuinely frightening imagery. It all seems rather drug-induced, though; paranoid, delusional visions of being covered in enormous, crawling bugs; gnarled, burning children staggering about menacingly; a muscular giant in a dark hood who tries to stab you with an oversized kitchen knife. It's some pretty disturbing stuff.

But then the movie turns just plain silly as the crotchety townsfolk go on a literal witch hunt for anyone who seems different.

Their cries of "Heresy! Burn her!" call to mind a high-school production of "The Crucible." And the protracted climax features cacophonous organ music, signaling the return of a demon child who rises from the fires of hell to take revenge on her persecutors.

Hovering above them, she finds elaborate ways to torture them with razor wire, and the blood sprays in all directions like something you'd see in front of the Belagio in Las Vegas.

For a while, though, the film from French director Christophe Gans ("Brotherhood of the Wolf"), which he wrote with Roger Avary and Nicolas Boukhrief, is compelling in a nightmarish way; the scares come in flashes, in pieces that initially don't make sense.

Mitchell's Rose Da Silva crashes her car on the way to Silent Hill and ends up in what seems like an ash-covered, war-torn version of the abandoned town; it's almost like a parallel universe.

"Just My Luck" is a formulaic story that's a variation on Lindsay Lohan's big hit "Freaky Friday." Only this witcheroo lets the victims kiss a lot.

Daughter Sharon has run off, and Rose scurries around trying to find her among the town's dilapidated buildings. Sharon had been walking in her sleep, screaming about Silent Hill, a place to which she seems to have had some connection before her parents adopted her. Hence the road trip.

Meanwhile, Rose's husband, Chris (Sean Bean from "The Lord of the Rings" trilogy), hunts for them in the real Silent Hill, a sun-splashed place where he's accompanied by a suspicious police detective (Kim Coates). He knows Rose is there somewhere but he keeps missing her. Like that episode of "The Twilight Zone" where the little girl goes through a hole in her bedroom wall and ends up in the fourth dimension.

Now that was creepy from start to finish—and it only took a half-hour.

"Just My Luck"

Wondering when a 19-year-old is going to stop acting like a teenager and start acting like a woman seems unfair. I mean, can't a girl dance on a table for a few more minutes?

But if the 19-year-old is Lindsay Lohan, 20 can't come soon enough. By then, we can hope that Lohan will have outgrown her contractual obligation to appear in junk like "Just My Luck."

This mangy comedy only demonstrates that Lohan's star power is too bright for falling into mounds of mud, rooting around in cat litter for a contact lens, and getting punched out by a rough-neck jallbird, as she does here.

Lohan plays Ashley Albright, one of those entitled Manhattan girls with a walk-in closet the size of most studio apartments. Everything she does is perfect. Elevators bearing hot young male heirs appear at her convenience. Chris Carmack plays one such hottie, who claims to be the son of a Boston Celtics owner and flies her in his private copter to a game.

But in a single night Ashley's charmed life vanishes when she makes out with a nerdy klutz named Jake (Chris Pine) who suffers nothing but misfortune in attempts to win a record deal for the band he manages.

What anyone could have predicted—even a hammy Tovsh Feldshuh as the movie's Russian fortune teller—is that the formulaic story would turn out to be a variation on Lohan's big hit "Freaky Friday." Only this witcheroo lets the victims kiss a lot.

There is a humongous flaw in all of this: When these two meet again after their fortunes have flipped, Jake demonstrates no memory of their magical smooch. Most guys would consider this kiss an excuse never to wash their mouths again.

Even by the haphazard standards of his "Miss Congeniality" and "How to Lose a Guy in 10 Days" director Donald Glynn seems bored here. Maybe it's because the script, by I. Marlene King and Amy Harris (a former "Sex & the City" writer), is full of wearisome prafalls and dialogue that's eager to name drop. (OMG, Sarah Jessica Parker totally lives in Ashley's building!) But, sadly, that's to be expected nowadays in Hollywood movies aimed at MySpace cadets.

CSI Theater Department holds open auditions

Times-News

TWIN FALLS — College of Southern Idaho theater professor Laine Steel is inviting community members to audition for "Sweeney Todd," the first play of the school year.

Auditions will be held from 3 to 6 p.m. Friday and Saturday in the CSI Theater.

Those who audition must come with their own three-minute monologue and up to 20 bars of a song from a musical theater show, and also provide their own accompaniment.

It is still debated whether the tale of Sweeney Todd is truth or fiction, according to a CSI press release. The story revolves around a 19th-century barber who kills his clients with a straight razor. His accomplice then bakes the victims' remains into meat pies. Stephen Sondheim composed the music for the 1979 Broadway musical.

The play will run Oct. 11-21 on the CSI Theater stage. Parts that are not given to CSI theater students will go to those who pass the auditions.

CSI band, wind ensemble seeking new members

Times-News

TWIN FALLS — The College of Southern Idaho Symphonic Band is now rehearsing for the 2006-07 concert season — and soliciting new members.

The band's first concert will be at 3 p.m. Oct. 22 in the Fine Arts auditorium and will feature marches, popular music and concert selections.

Community members are also invited to participate in the CSI Wind Ensemble, which will perform in conjunction with the Symphonic Band on Oct. 22 and will perform a separate concert at 7:30 p.m. Dec. 5.

The Symphonic Band becomes the CSI Pep Band on Oct. 22, performing at all CSI home basketball games. Rique Heinemann, who has directed bands at Jerome High School for the past two years, was named recently to direct the Pep Band this season.

There is no cost to join either group. Applications must be completed by Sept. 1.

For information, contact CSI music professor George Halsell at 732-6767 or ghalsell@csi.edu.

Diamondfields still turning out good food

BY STEVE CRUMP
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — In another era in Idaho, hot restaurants used to be the places to go for fine dining. Into the 1960s, the Hotel Rogerson in Twin Falls, the Ban-nock Hotel in Pocatello, the Idanha Hotel in Boise and the Hotel Bonneville in Idaho Falls attracted locals as well as travelers in search of a good meal and elegant surroundings.

But building eateries within hotels is a dwindling practice nowadays, and those that remain are mostly coffee shops. So it was pleasant to rediscover Diamondfields Restaurant in the Red Lion Hotel Canyon Springs — formerly Diamondfield-Jacks.

I've eaten there off and on in the 23 years that I've lived in Twin Falls, and never been disappointed. It's not gourmet fare, but the menu is varied and the service is good.

On a recent visit, I chose an intriguing-sounding dish called paella risotto ($14.95). Paella — that's Spanish for "frying pan" — is a rice, chicken, sausage and vegetable dish from the Spanish port city of Valencia. There are thousands of variations, but rice, saffron and olive oil are the essential ingredients.

Risotto is arguably the most famous rice dish in the world. When it's cooked, dry rice is fried briefly in oil before the broth is added. That gives the rice a lighter, vaguely crunchy consistency — not at all soggy like conventional cooked white rice.

Risotto, which originated in northern Italy, and paella are first cousins — and an intriguing combination. Paella has a rich and piquant taste; risotto has a more reserved flavor but doesn't disappear into the background.

In the Diamondfields version, it's prepared with Parmesan cheese, which nicely complements both the risotto and the paella.

Paella can be a fiery dish, but that's not what the Valencians intended. It serves a similar role as beef stew or chili do in American cuisine — rib-sticking, soul-filling comfort food.

Paella is usually cooked in a big, shallow, flat pan. First the meat, and then the vegetables are stir-fried in olive oil, and rice is added. Boiling chicken stock is then poured in and reduced by boiling. Once the rice is nearly cooked, the paella is removed from the heat and left to absorb the remaining water.

Diamondfields has several entrees less conventional than typical full-service restaurants' in Twin Falls. They're worth a try.

In addition to chicken and chorizo — chill-and-paprika-flavored pork sausage — Diamondfields' version uses shrimp and a variety of vegetables. The most important single ingredient is saffron, which has a slightly metallic, honey-like taste. If you use too much saffron, the paella is bitter, but too little fades from recognition in your palate.

This particular dish had a nice balance of seasonings, and the risotto made it lighter and more interesting than conventional paella.

Take the Bard and add some pirates

BY KAREN BOSSICK
For the Times-News

KETCHUM — Avert eyes, ye landlubbers!

There's pirates running around these parts — and they have nothing to do with "Pirates of the Caribbean" take two. These cutthroats in eye patches and head scarves have run up the skull and crossbones right in the middle of Shakespeare's "Comedy of Errors."

That's right, mates. The stage has been transformed into Port Royal — the Jamaican port where English invited Spanish-hating buccaners to settle and trade Spanish plunder during the golden age of piracy in the 1680s.

And the players have been transformed into that complex mix of terrorist, sailor and soldier known as pirates.

"Pirates were a big part of Shakespeare's world. And everybody loves pirates. They hearken back to our childhood. And they're villains we can understand versus the kind we have in the world today," says Prue Flemming, spokeswoman for the nextStage Theatre's Sun Valley Shakespeare Festival and its companion Renaissance Faire.

"Pirates hearken back to an age of honor that we don't have anymore," interjects Freddie Harris, who plays Luclana, the corset-bound tedious sister in the play. "Even pirates had a code. And it was a time when it was man against man. Sword against sword. Humans don't stand a chance against the machine guns and weapons of today. But they do stand a chance against swords."

The play is William Shakespeare's shortest and one of his funniest, thanks to its outrageous slapstick, bawdy jokes and mistaken identity.

Based on a Roman comedy and later recycled for Rodgers and Hart's "The Boys From Syracuse," the play is set to an aggressive Celtic punk mix of fiddle, banjo and accordion.

It opens with a merchant who's about to be hung because he cannot pay the fine required of foreigners who venture onto the island on which he finds himself. The merchant says he looks forward to his death since his life has been nothing but sorrow.

As a young man, the merchant says, he had twin sons for whom he purchased twin slaves. Caught in a tempest at sea, he lashed himself to the mainmast with one son and one slave while his wife lashed herself to another post with the other children.

But he and she were split asunder when a rock split their raft, and they haven't seen each other since. Now, 18 years later, his son and his slave have set out in search of their brothers. And, when they failed to return, the merchant set out in search of them.

The island kingpin is so moved by his story he gives to the merchant the rest of the day to try to obtain the money he needs to avoid execution.

As it turns out, the merchant's missing son and his slave are also on the island searching for their brothers.

The son sends his servant on an errand to deposit money and is confounded when the servant reappears denying any knowledge of the money and demanding that he go home to dinner with his wife.

If you go ...

The nextStage Theatre's Sun Valley Shakespeare Festival rolls out "Comedy of Errors" Aug. 24-27 and Sept. 1-3 in Ketchum's Forest Service Park at First and Washington streets.

The play starts at 6 p.m. Tickets are $20 for adults and $10 for children under 14, available by calling 726-411K and at Anticosti Books in Ketchum, Sun Valley and Halley. Picnics and low chairs are permitted.

The son's alleged wife is convinced that her husband is cheating on her, even as the son's twin brother returns home for dinner and becomes enraged to find that he is locked out of his own home. And on and on it goes.

"It's a hilarious stretch but not over the top," says Harris. "It's a very complicated play to do, particularly the way we're doing it using one person to play two characters," added Please see SHAKESPEARE, Page 14

TWIN FALLS — Forever on the edge, but never quite going away.

That describes Bowling for Soup, a hard-to-pigeonhole punky pop quartet that will make a stop at Kruger's Night Life here Friday. The 12-year-old Texas band earned a following in the late '90s touring with bigger-name punk and ska acts and racked up a string of hit records: "The Blotch Song," "Summer of '69," "Girls All the Bad Guys Want."

But guitarist Jared Reddick and Chris Burney, bass player Erik Chandler and drummer Gary Wiseman have shown remarkable staying power: "1985," a single off the album "Hangover

You Don't Deserve," was a hit in 2004, and the album itself reached No. 37 on the Billboard charts.

Soup's latest quirky venture was covering the "Gilligan's Island" theme song for TBS' new reality series, "The Real Gilligan's Island," set to premiere on Nov. 30.

The show is based on the '60s comedy that starred Bob Denver. Castaways include a real-life skipper, first mate, millionaire couple, movie star, professor and farm girl who will work together to try to get off the island.

Jamey Reynolds, who plays the island kinglypin. "It's not uncommon for an actor to play two characters, maybe three, in one play but to play twins only slightly different from each other is something different altogether. You have to block it in just right and everything."

Ashland-based director Bruce Hostler calls the play a search for identity.

"All these actors are going, 'Who am I? Am I this guy? Am I that guy?' Comedy is really difficult because it requires split timing and precision. I'm really lucky because I have really, really good actors playing the sets of twins. And I hope someone who has never seen Shakespeare will come and say, 'That's really funny.' You don't have to have a Ph.D. to see Shakespeare, you know."

The cast features the laughing-getting, Sun Valley Shakespeare veteran Scott Creighton of Seattle, who plays battered clown Dromio, Keith Moore, of New York and Sun Valley, performs the befuddled Antipholi twins.

Patsy Wyle of New York and Sun Valley, plays neurotic wife Adriana, who wonders why her husband claims not to know her.

London-born actress Freddie Harris plays Luciana, the passive sister who suddenly finds herself being wooed by Adriana's husband, Claudia McCain plays the saintly abbess and Jamey Reynolds the daunting pirate duke.

Jana Arnold plays the inheri- tated goldsmith trying to collect for a precious piece of jewelry she gave the wrong twin; David Blampied, the captured Egeon; and Bob Rais, the eccentric Dr. Pinch who is intoxicated by vodka.

"The play appeals because it highlights the myriad ways people can miscommunicate and still think they're communicating effectively," adds Creighton.

"It's a good Shakespeare for the entire family to see," says Hemmings. "It's short. It's understandable. And it's hilarious. We're in stitches the whole time just watching rehearsal."

Author takes inspiration from her childhood

Times-News writer

JEROME— Dixie Thomas Reale readily admits to an ornery and fun-loving take on the world.

You can see it in her eyes, sparkling with mischievousness and wit.

That mixed with childhood inspirations, like smoking in an outhouse and a love of Sunday comics, has resulted in Reale's first book, "Squirrel Pie and Other Morsels," a collection of 10 fictional short stories, published by Sanbun, a subsidiary of Hemkunt, a 50-year-old publishing house in New Dehli, India.

Reale's stories take rural life on a spin through poignancy, childhood wonders and woes and, of course, a heaping helping of humor.

"I grew up in Idaho, and various incidents of my childhood inspired the stories," Reale said.

Take "Mush," which tells of a quiet but intense battle of wills between a mother and her daughter over oatmeal.

"Squirrel Pie" is about a girl with a pet squirrel and boy with a crush on her who treats her to a squirrel pie, unfortunately made from her pet.

Has the author ever eaten such a pie?

"I hope I never had," said Reale, 64, with a hearty laugh. "I had a pet squirrel as a kid."

Reale was born in Caldwell and grew up near Wilder on a 40-acre farm, which she called "one of those old-fashioned, self-sufficient family farms."

She has a master's degree in fiction writing from San Francisco State University, had short stories and creative nonfiction published in several magazines and is a correspondent for the Times-News.

She found her writing ignited in rural Idaho rather than in big cities.

"Nothing really came together until we moved back to the Idaho," Reale said. "Stories set in the city never quite worked out for me. I don't have the right mind-set for city life. It doesn't click together."

Reale is also a lifelong rock hobbyist, very apparent by her many pretty rings. She is in the process of opening a rock shop in King Hill and sells her creations at flea markets and fairs.

"(But) I always wanted to publish a book, and it seems like life got in the way. I just kept plugging away with it. It's like an accomplishment," Reale said.

Sanbun director Arvinder Singh called Reale's book well written and enjoyable.

She is working on more short stories and reworking a novella, all of which she also hopes to publish. Life may get in the way again, but she must continue writing because writing is more than hobby or job.

"It helps me define what's happening in my life. It helps define you as an individual, who I am and what my purpose in life is."

M.V.Arts Council lauds 6 volunteers

Times-News

TWIN FALLS — The Magic Valley Arts Council recently honored six volunteers at its annual Arts Organization Luncheon.

"Our Hometown Arts Heroes award recipients were recognized because they play a significant role in helping our community grow and increasing the quality of life enjoyed by our residents," said Stacey Madsen, the arts council's executive director. "They all have a deep determination and belief in the arts and culture that helps to make our community beautiful."

Those recognized were Yvonne Jacques, Tony Prater, Sandy Hacking, Ray Strolberg, Mark Stowman and Libby Magee.

Jacques was honored with the Quiet Giver Award for her volunteer work in the arts council's Full Moon Gallery. As a two-term president of the gallery board, she was recognized for supporting the diversity of needs in the local arts community.

Prater was given an award for continuing support for the council's programs. He is actively involved in various fundraising efforts, donating his time and energy to many programs.

Hacking was honored with the Achievement in Arts Organization Leadership Award. A clarinet player, she has been president of the Twin Falls Municipal Band for the past 16 years, serves as president of the Dilettantes of the Magic Valley, and as secretary/treasurer for Magic Valley Little Theater, and performs with the municipal band, the College of Southern Idaho Wind Ensemble and Symphonic Band and the CSI Pep Band, and occasionally with the Magic Valley Symphony. She also is organist for two churches.

Strolberg was given the Outstanding Initiative or Leader in Excellence in Supporting the Arts Award for directing the logistics for the art council's annual Kids Art in the Park event for the past five years.

Stowman was honored with the Above and Beyond Special Volunteerism Award. He assists with all First Friday Full Moon Gallery openings, sets up multiple traveling art exhibits and has served as chairman of the council's Jazz and Wine at Kimberly Nurseries committee since 2002.

Magee received the Board of Directors Special Recognition Award. A member of the board, she has been in charge of registration for Kids Art in the Park for the last 12 years and has served as chairwoman of the Kids Art in the Park for the past three years.
