Five ways to ward off evil on Friday the 13th

By Andrea Sachs The Washington Post

Friday is the 13th, and if you're not careful, an evil spirit could enter your body and steal your soul — or, at the very least, cause you to drop a meatball on your crisp white shirt. To ward off bad luck, protect yourself with any of these five rituals or tokens employed by cultures around the world.

Muslims call it the Hand of Faima, while Jews refer to it as the Hand of Miriam, hamsa hand or hamesh hand. Both faiths, however, agree on its powers. The hand with the colored eye—found on necklaces, ornaments, stickers, etc. — will shield you from the ris of the evil eye.

rs at the evil eye. Layer on the cycliner and smoky eye shadow. Ancient Egyptians believed that makeup prevented the cyll one from entering your eyes.

Show the "horned hand." It looks like a secret greeting among Metallica-heads, but Italians do the "mano comuta" for protection. To form the gesture, use your flumb to hold down your middle and ring fingers, then extend your pointer and pinkie like s. Though this might ward off evil spirits, it could also attract heavy-metal rockers or ersity of Texas fans.

In Jewish tundition, you have a few options: Spit three times on your fingertips, then wave them in the air, throw sal; say in Yiddish, "kayn aynhoreh" ("no evil eve") or earl uso of gardle. For Transylvanians, the gardle (worn, not ingested) also frightness off vamand werewolves.

Grab a carrot, a replica of the Washington Monument of any other phallic object.

According to Romans, such objects seduce the evil spirit away from you — however, your carrot might then be possessed.

A major cause of residential fires in the United States is portable heaters. But the EdenPURE* cannot cause a fire. That is because the quartz infrared heating element never gets to a temperature that can ignite anything. The outside of the EdenPURE* only gets warm to the touch so that it will not burn children or pets. Pets can sleep on it when it is operating without harm.

The EdenPURE* will also make you healthier. That is because, unlike other heating sources, it will not reduce humidity or oxygen in the room. Typical heating sources reduce humidity or oxygen in the room typical heating sources and makes your skin dry. With other heating sources, you'll notice that you get sleepy when the heat comes on because they are burning up oxygen.

on because they are burning up oxygen.

The advanced spuce-age EdenPURE* Quartz Infrared Portable Heater also heats the room evenly, wall-to-wall and floor-to-ceiling. Other heating sources heat rooms unevenly with most of the heat concentrated high in the room and to the center of the room. And, as you know, portable heaters only heat an area a few feet around the heater. With the EdenPURE* heater. With the EdenPURE's, the temperature will not vary in any part of the room.

Unlike other heating sources, the EdenPURE's cannot put poisonous carbon monoxide into a room or any type of furnes or any type of harmful radiation.

radiation.

For more details on the amazing EdenPURE* Quarz Infrared Portable Heater, here is my interview with Julius Toth, Director of Products Development for BioTech Research*.

Q. What is the origin of this amazing heating element in the EdenPURE*?

A. This advanced heating

A. This advanced heating element was discovered ac-cidentally by a man named John Jones. He had a large John Jones. He had a large old farmhouse that was impossible to heat. Jones had a coal furnace in his basement. Jones placed a sheet of cured copper near the furnace to store it. Cured copper is a type of copper that goes through an extensive heating process to give it special properties.

After the fire went out in the coal furnace, Jones noticed that the sheet of copper was heating his entire basement evenly, even though the furnace was no longer putting out heat. He also was amazed as to how long the the furnace was no longu-putting out heat. He also was amazed as to how long the heat stayed in the copper, and continued to warm the room. Jones was so taken back by this that he started to experiment. He formed a company to develop a heating source out of this cured copper. But Jones had a number of children and he did not want a heating source that would cause a fire or create other hazardous situations like creating carbon monoxide or want his children to get burned. To make a long story short, through a great deal of research and development, Jones developed a heating source that utilized commercial infrared quare tubes.

Q. What advantages does infrared quartz tube heating source have over other heating source products?
A. John Jones designed

his heating source around the three most important consumer benefits: economy. sumer benefits: economy, comfort, and safety. The final development of this infrared quartz heat source cannot be matched by any other heating system in the world. In the EdenPURE® system.

system in the world.

In the EdenPURE's system, electricity is used to generate infrared light which, in turn, creates a very safe heat. Infrared is the safest form of heat because it does not create carbon monoxide or harmful adiation. And, most importantly, infrared heat does not encach a burning temperature. After a great deal of research and development, very efficient infrared heat chambers were developed that utilize three unique patented solid copper heat exchangers in one Eden-PURE's heater, Over 5 years of research, development and real life field testing stand behind his heat source. It has now worked in residential and commercial applications worldwide for over 25 years.

Q. Why is it that this quartz infrared heating source uses less energy to create heat than other sources?

A. Actually, there is more

than one reason. One of the primary reasons is that heat at combustion level, which is what all other heat sources use, causes the heat to instantly rise to the ceiling. Therefore, the heat is not evenly distributed, causing a very inefficient and uncomfortable heat source.

The EdenPURE? Quartz Infrared Portable Heater does not use burning heat. Once the heat exchanger absorbs the infrared heat, it exhals the heat into the living area which is carried by the existing humidity in the air. This causes the heat to travel apidly and evenly throughout a room. than one reason. One of the using infrared lighting demonstrated that the heat was almost perfectly even from floor-to-ceiling and wall-to-wall. The Eden-PURE® Quartz Infrared efficiency is based on the distribution of energized air, not on just fan movement. This heat is coined as "soft heat" due to how comfortable it is.

Q. What are the other disadvantages of combustion heat sources?

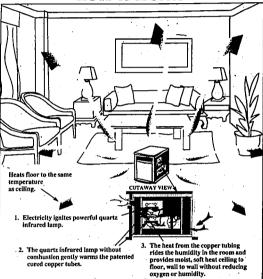

A. Heat sources that are above the burning level have many unhealthy side effects. One of these is that it creates dry, irritating indoor air. It also burns a great deal of oxygen in the air. If you remember, when you sit in front of a fireplace or a portable heater or close to a heat source, you will remember yawning. This is because you are not getting enough oxygen.

This dry irritating heat and lack of oxygen dries out signess and meues in the throat, and makes people susceptible to disease. The lack of oxygen dries out signess and meues in the throat, and makes people susceptible to disease. The lack of oxygen earses faigue.

Also, many combustible.

Also, many combustible heat sources produce carbon monoxide, static cling, and some produce radiation.

How it works:

Q. So you're saying that children or pets can come up to this unit and touch it and not be harmed?

A. That is absolutely correct. As a matter of fact, pets are actually drawn to this heat because it is a natural source of heat, just like the sun heats the earth. Animals are much more instinctive than humans. This heat not only heats the air, but it also heats the objects in the room. It is a perfectly balanced heat.

Q. How can a person cut their heating bill by up to 50% with the EdenPURE*8.

A. First, the EdenPURE*8.

uses less energy to create heat than other sources, but that is just part of wity jt will cut a person is heating bill. The EdenPURE*9 will heat a room in minutes. Therefore, you can turn the heat down in your house to as low as 50 degrees, but the room you are occupying, which has the EdenPURE*8; will be warm and comfortable. and comfortable. The Eden-PURE* is portable. When you move to another room, it will quickly heat that room also. This can drastically cut heating bills, in some in-stances, by up to 50%.

Q. I also understand that the Eden-PURE* pro-duces clean fresh air with-out furnace filters. How can it do that?

A. A furnace generates a lot of dust due to the combus-tion. By lowering the furnace temperature, you are using your furnace fliters. Also, when there is no combustion, there are no harmful furnes.

Q. So, the Eden-PURE* is totally safe to use?

A. It absolutely is. The Eden-PURE* has zero clear-ance, which means you can push it up against the wall or furniture without risk of fire. Tests prove the unit does not transmit any energy into the number of geographic locations. Idaho's state map is dotted with 93 creeks, canyons, peaks and springs that bear the name squaw.

Consider ways to drop references to 'squaw'

Once again, the Coeur d'Alene Tribe says it's time to drop the moniker. Its members may very well be right.
Coeur d'Alene tribe members expected to petition the state to drop squaw from 13 locations on the state map. Linguists and historians have debated the actual meaning of that word, which many today identify as simply Indian woman. But northwest ribes argue the word originated with French trappers, as a reference to a woman's genitals.
"It's been a long time coming to have such a derogatory word taken off our maps." Coeur d'Alene tribal council member Norina Peon told the Spokesman-Review. We know why they used that word back in the day."

council member Norma Peon told the Spokesman-Review. We know why they used that word back in the day."

Such a reference is obviously an affront both on a context of race and gender. Yet the discussion to purge the term is hardly new. In 2001, the Idaho Legislature failed to pass a measure that would have removed the term from all Idaho maps. The proposal fell in a House committee after passing the Senate 33-1. A year later, a resolution passed that urged individuals and local governments to recommend name changes to offensively named places. Then this year, the Idaho Geographic Names Board, the organization that gets the ball rolling for landmark name changes; officially recommended that squaw be recognized as a derogatory name. In a meeting held last week in Boise, the state discussed the proposal to actually drop the name on the 13 landmarks, but action was deferred to February. Should the tribe's 13 recommendations go through, they will also require federal approval by the U.S. Board on Geographic Names. That agency will weigh the complaint against recommendations go through, they will also require federal approval by the U.S. Board on Geographic Names. That agency will weigh the complaint against recommendations of locally elected leaders.

It's likely that some of those leaders will oppose dropping squaw from landmarks. After all, Idahoans are an independent bunch that tends to flinch when historians cleanse the past. The states's history was filled with frontiersmen who were as wild and unrefined as the terrain they settled. Erasing those remnants of racism, sexism and bigotry can sometimes be perceived as trying to forget them.

But in keeping the name squaw, Idaho may go beyond remembering racism, and toward preserving it. Tribal members who grew up with the term note how its usage continues to deliver a direct attack on their identity. If the term means what they claim, there's even closely similar to it against other minorities, or to men, for that matter. The stigma attached to the word isn't just a

High noon arrives for Congress

The old theater adage demands that if you, show a pistol in Act 1, you better fire the gun in Act 3. That same wisdon applies to politics.

DAVID S BRODER

The voters have been pointing a symbolic gun at the Republican regime in Washington for many months now. All that remains for Election Day is to pull the trigger. When you examine the latest round of pre-election polls, what is striking is the stability of public autitudes over the necessity of the process of the processing months. In stability of public additudes over the preceding months. In this week's Washington Post-ABC, News poil, for example, President Bush has a job approval score of 39 percent, with 60 percent disapproving. The public has shown similar consistency with party support for Congress. In the latest poll, Democrats lead Republicans, 54 percent to 41 percent among registered voters. In November 2005, the Democrats led 52 percent to 37 percent. The margins are almost identical.

To take one more example.

To take one more example, look at the broad question of the overall direction of the nation — right path or wrong track. In this latest poil, by a margin of 66 percent to 32 percent, people said, "wrong track." Last November, the comparable numbers were 68 percent and 30 percent and 30 sergent. executive transte, and a need for relief there as well. For inately, the voters have the power — if they pull the trigger on Election Day — to create a new plot for the Washington drama. This election campaign has been a learning experience for candidates of both parties, incumbents and challengers alike. They have been hombarded with messages from their constituents, telling them that the public is tired of the partisan lickering, tired of the gridlock, and eager to elect people who will focus on the real problems and work together to find solutions.

If that lesson is reinforced

Washington will change. Congress will be run by peo-ple who talk with each other, ple who talk with each other across party lines. And even the White House may learn that it needs to end this isola-tion and engage more broadly, at home and abroad, if it is salvage some substantial accomplishments from Bushs final two years in office. That kind-of fundamenul change in the political envi-ronment is possible — indeed, it is imminent and will be wel-comed. But it will happen only if voters pull the trigger.

Supreme Court mulls whether victim's photos on buttons influenced trial

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The supreme Cont on Wednesday debated whether a murder vicinis family prejudiced the trial of an accused siller by wearing buttons to court bearing a picture of the slain man. The justices waded into some of defendants' rights struggling with the question of whether the huttons visible to the jury in Mathew Musladins case denied blim a fair trial or were a harmless expression of grief. The state of California is seeking to reinstate Musladins conviction, which was thrown out by the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

In a separate case, the justices considered when a judge's discretion to impose additional time behind bars violates a convict's constitutional rights.

"Ye read where they say that, no matter if Boise goes undefeated, they're not a BCS team. Who do you think is putting that stuff out?" said New Metococach Rocky Long. The big boys (BCS teams) want to keep it quiet how good they are.
"While Long doesn't have to worry about trying to beat the No. 20 Broncos — they're not on New Mexico's schedule — that's

Petersen, the former offensive coordinator under Dan Hawkins, took over when Hawkins was hired by Cotorado, and the Broncos haven broken stride. This year they've outscored opponents 236-75 and rank sixth in the nation in scoring. Two weeks ago they handed Utah (36-3) its worst home loss in 17 years. So what chance does New Mexico Sinte have? This is the program that owned the country's longest losing streak going into this season and has had just four winning seasons in the past 39 years.

KETCHIM—The sound of howling wolves promipted two U.S. Forest Service Employees to call for a helicopter evacuation from the Sawtooth Wilderness late last month, officials said.

The employees — both from Utah—became frightened Sept. 23 after seeing wolves chasing a hull elk across the meadow and later hearing the animals howl, said. Ed. Waldapfel, a spokesman for the Sawtooth National Forest.

A little willte later they started bearing wolves howling all around them. Waldapfel told the lidaho Mountain Express. "They called on their radio or satel-supervisor if they could leave the area."

Waldapfel did not know the employees' names, but said they were from the Rocky Mountain Research Station in Ogden and were conducting forest inventory work in the Sauroubs.

Lawyer says Duncan will admit to four slayings

SPOKANE, Wash. — Lawyers for Joseph Edward Duncan III said Wednesday he will admit to the murder of 9-year-old Dylan Groene at a campslte in Montana and to three slayings in Idaho if state prosecutors will agree not to seek the death penally.

In a letter to Prosecutor Bill Douglas of Kootenai County, Idalto, Duncan's lawyers said their client will cooperate fully with law enforcement officers, even though what he says will likely be used against him if he faces a possible death sentence in federal court later.

7Mr. Dunean will admit to the intentional killing of Dylan Groene in Montana in the early part of 2005, as well as all other crimes committed against Shasta and Dylan Groene. Said the letter signed by public defenders John Adams and Roger Peven.

Peven, head of the federal public defenders office in Spokane, said Douglas has rejected the office.

Duncan allegedly took the two children to a primitive campsite. In Montana and Dylan was killed at some point. Shasta, 8 at the time, was resident at the county's restaurant in Coeur d'Alene after seven weeks of capitivity.

Peven said Duncan is willing to plead guilty to spare Shasta the trautum of facing him incourt.

Peven told The Associated Press. "Mr. Duncan doesn't advantage himself in any way." A gullry plea would eliminate an anticipated two decades of appeals in which Shasta, the sole survivor of the carmage, would have to face Duncan in court, Peven said. Alaska's Prudhoe Bay oilfield shutdown will last several days

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — ANCHORAGE, Alaska — America's largest oil field will be shut down for several days as operator BP scrambles to fix an electrical problem. So far, the loss of 300,000

"How do I do business in Pahrump with an ordinance like this?" Bill Martin, president of Nevada State Bank, said of the proposed "English Language and Patriot Reaffirmation Ordinance." The law would prohibit accepting foreign identification, offering housing, or loaning or giving money to undocumented immigrants in this fast-growing town 60 miles west of Las Vegas. It would make English the official language and prohibit dying a foreign flag by itself.

For unrelated reasons, the price of oil fell to its lowest level this year on Wednesday. Crude oil futures have plunged by more than $20 a barrel since mid-luly amid rising global inventories, concerns about slowing economic growth and a milder-than-anticipated hurricane season. On Wednesday, doubts grew that there is a consensus within OPEC for an immediate output cut, sending oil futures to put cut, sending oil futures to $57,59 a barrel.

I finally decided to change careers after only five years in the field. But then, I live in a small town. If I still lived in the large city I moved from three years ago. I'd have simply changed employers or gone into a different type of nursing. Unfortunately, there are no such options here.

More and more nurses are opting for career changes. Abby, it's a shame, too, considering the nursing shortage in our country. Your advice to "Susan in St. Louis" was right on. Living where she does, she's bound to find something better suited for her than where she is now — or maybe she should switch to a different department in the same hospital.

Civilian deaths spiked in Baghdad last month

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP)
More than 2,660 Iraqi civilians were killed in the capital in September amid a wave of secturian killings and insurgent attacks, an increase of 400 over the month before, according to the Iraqi Health Ministry.

The increase, eame despite, an intensified U.S.-Iraqi sweep of Baghdad that was launched in mid-August to try to put down the wave of violence that has swept over the capital. The violence consists of a deadly combination of bombings and shootings by Sunti insurgents.

The pope's intent is to "help overcome the schism and help bring (the ultraconservatives) back to the church," said the official, who asked that his name not be used because the papal document has not yet been released.

papal document has not yet been released. It was not clear when the pope will make his decision public, but the official said it was expected soon. The Times of London, in a report Wednesday, said-the-pope-hassigned the order and it may be published within weeks.

The 16th-century Tridentine Mass — the name of the old Latin Mass — was swept away by the so-called New Mass that followed the 1982-65 Second Vatican Council. The reforms called for Mass to be said in local languages, for the priest to face the congregation instead of having his back to worshippers as he faced the tarr and for the use of lay readers.

To celebrate the old Latin

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

Fate gave what Chance shall not control, His sad lucidity of soul." — Matthew Arnold

At the Dyspeptics Club, players do not give up their opportunity to play the hand without a struggle. When South heard his right-hand When South heard his right-hand opponent make a one-heart over-call, he decided against doubling, preferring to introduce his four-card spade suit, judging that a spade contract on a 4-3 fit might be optimal. If you play negative doubles. this route normally promises five spades, but South's action was far from unreasonable, whatever his motives for definit it.

promises live spades, but south's action was far from unreasonable, whatever his motives for doing it. What was less reasonable was his zline of play in the spade game.

When the defense led three trounds of hearts, South ruffed and cashed two top trumps. When the ispade nine appeared on his left, South sniifed the air for a few seconds, but decided against playing for the actual lie of the cards. (Attacking the side suits might have let him take 10 tricks.) Instead, he drew another round of trumps, and now East had the last trump and two heart winners for down two.

and two heart winners for down two.

When South started to bluster that the spade nine might have been a false-card and that drawing the third trump might have been right on a different day, he received short shrift from North, who cut him off by letting him know where his real error was. Can you see it?

All South had to do was discard a club on the third heart. Now he can ruff the fourth heart in dummy and draw trumps in peace and my and draw trumps in peace and quiet for his 10 tricks.

ANSWER: It is tempting to blast to three no-trump here. But you might be off the whole heart suit, or not have nine tricks facing a or not have nine tricks lacing a singleton spade. Cue-bid two spades to show a limit raise or better in diamonds. You can al-ways bid three no-trump on the next round, but at least you give partner a chance to get involved in the final decision.

VIDEO GAME REVIEW

'Cooking Mama' best enjoyed in small bites

BY MATT SLACEF The Associated Press

At first bite, "Cooking Mama" is a gourmet meal at a five-star restaurant. But be careful: too much of this delightful new culinary video game might give you an unset stomach.

No real-world fond skills are required in this E-rated, $19.99 Nintendo DS game from Japan. Anyone who can boil a pot of water or open a milk carton will find "Cooking Mama" an immediate pleasure that's hard to put down initially.

It makes good use of the DS touch screen as you prepare one of 76 different recines.

Some, like pizza or Salisbury steak, will be instantly familiar to Western palates.

But many are straight out of the "Iron Chef" television show with specialties like fried actopus dumplings or grilled gyoza stuffed with cabbage and meat.

The goal of "Cooking Mama" is to correctly prepare ingredients and then quickly cook the meal. Each task serves as a microgame that's very similar to Nintendo's "WarioWare" series

Do well and you'll get a gold star and a beaming smile from saucer-eyed Mama.

But she can turn hateful with a slip of a knife; even á few lijtimed egg cracks and she'll stare you down with flaming

Some dishes require you to blow into the microphone, but mostly you'll be using the DS' plastic stylus to simulate slicing, peeling, stirring, kneading, deep frying and sauteing. among other things.

This variety of tasks keeps the game light and fun in brief potatoes. This contrasts with stupefyingly simple goals like setting a timer to 30 minutes, then pressing enter.

Anyone with a passing interest in food will enjoy how easy and intuitive it is to play "Cooking Mama."

But like a doughnut, the sugar rush doesn't last long. After a few hours, I was hungering for more to do as the game felt repetitious.

You can also combine dishes (pork curry and rice with grilled mackerel, anyone?) or try to earn a gold star of approval from Mama for every recipe.

What "Cooking Mama" really needs is some sort of wireless multiplayer feature where you can compete in cook-offs with Heck, I would have settled for a secret, unlockable dessert menu, which this game completely lacks.

If the developers do make a sequel, hopefully they won't forget to add these features a second time.

BY KAREN BOSSICK For the Times-News

SUN VALLEY - Imagine Roy Rogers singing with Louis Armstrong.

Now, see it for yourself - or, at least, something like it - on Tuesday when the Sun Valley Swing 'n' Dixie lazz lamboree kicks off with a free concert for the community.

The 7 p.m. show in Sun Valley's Indoor Ice Rink, sponsored by Atkinson's Market, will feature Igor's Jazz Cowboys, a rootin' tootin' bunch of jazz-loving renegades out of Tempe, Ariz.

Led by Igor, who plays upright bass, these jazz cowboys ride the jazz trail from Florida to Canada and California to Connecticut playing acoustic Western swing with a horn section that smokes like a Colt .44.

'MAN OF THE YEAR'

Williams' political satire in need of a sharper wit

BY DAVID GERMAIN

The Associated Press

We've seen plenty of "Ion Stewart for president" humper stickers, and it would be fun to see a straight-talking scathingly satiric guy like him on the campaign trail against the usual suspects.

Barry Levinson's "Man of the year" aims for that scenario, though, lumy as he is at times, Robin Williams in the commennator-turned-candidate role is a lightweight, almost as empty a suit as the career politicians he's up against.

With a premise too absurd for belief even alongside 2000's photo-finish presidential election, "Man of the Year" becomes a campaign of character, relying mattly on its cast to see it through.

Luckily for writer-duction Levinson, Williams and especially co-stars Jaura Linney, Christopher Wuken and Lewis Black deliver well enough to keep the, movie in the race, making viewers care about these people more than the story merits.

The actor and filmmaker behind "Good Morning, Vietnam" reunite, for the story of Tom Dobbs, a political commentator yeho seems less about substance and more about the manic standup jabber on which Williams built his early carreer.

Williams Tom is the comic host of a political talk show that supposedly tells it like a sick-andtired electorate wants to hear it. We're led to miderstand that Tom's an insightful wit whose assaults on Washington's port brokers have made him so belowed his TV audience wildly theers at his imocent comment about running for president himself.

The trouble with Levinsons screenplay is that Tom talks a lot but doesn't say much. We essentially see Williams doing his schtick, prattling in such a bluster that the mildly amusing material sounds funnier than it is, with some generic politically rabblerousing tidbits thrown in to establish him as a voice of dissent, a title—the character doesn't de-

TV Lalk show host Tom Dobbs (Robin Williams) decides that he will run for president in 'Man of the Year,'

Even so, from shakes up the establishment by lumping in as an independent alternative to the bland Republican incumbent and the blander Democratic challenger. Though Tom polis like a respectable third-party candidate, it's all meant as a lark and a reminder to the real politicos that their Job is to serve the American recorde.

Then the impossible happens. Under a new computerized voting system, Tom wins the election. As his sickly manager (Walken), head writer (Black) and other minions prepare for the transition to ultimate power, an employee of the company that developed the voting system, Eleanor Green (Linney), turns up claiming a software glitch mistakenly handed the election to Tom.

It's left to Tom to reveal the possible mistake or keep his mouth shut and take the job.

With the ext-polling that private parties do in every election, Levinson's plot just crumbles. His far-better political satire "Wag the Dog." with its outrageously manufactured IV war to distract the electorate, was credible stuff by comparison.

It's outlandish that a guy on the ballot in just 13 states — and polling a distant third in those would be declared the winner without an uproar. Yet the media, the political parties and the public simply shrug and accept the fact that Tom won.

What keeps "Man of the Vearalive is the homey interplay of its principals, Tom's talk-show staff coming off like a fun family of kooks, Walken's a grand old man as the entertainment manager who becomes an unlikely kingmaker, despite an old subplot about his character's health problems from smoking.

Black, toned down from the bellow of his standing act, is surprisingly even-keeled as Tomis wise and wisceracking writer. leff Goldblum is thrown in to hitle effect as the dastardly corporate attorney hiding the ruth about whether or not the computerized voting system was flawed.

Haweet. Linney's the real victor, creating a rich, noble, conflicted character who's much worthier a successor than form to the everyman heroes of such films as "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," which Levinson seems to be emulatine.

There was a much better movie tucked inside the story of Linney's lileanor, the meek corporate serf fighting back against corrupt bosses.

If the title wasn't already taken by a Katharine Hepburn-Spencer Tracy classic, Eleanor would have made a fine heroine for a movie called "Woman of the Year."

Running time: 115 minutes.

Even though this is an Americanized version of the 2002 Hong Kong hit "Infernal Affairs." it's vintage Scorsese - for a while at least. The veteran director has made two-thirds of a great film about Boston cops and mobsters, with rich, meaty performances from a dizzyingly stellar cast and an ambiance that screams Scorsese's typical cultural authenticity. "The Guardian" / D Action flick in which Kevin Costner attempts to resurrect his career by teaming with youthful pop-culture icon Ashton Kutcher, It's super-serious stuff, all about lifesaver training, the Coast Guard. military salutes, raging sea storms and trumped-up dramatic situations. Costner is Coast Guard veteran and macho man Ben Randall, who gets sent to train hot-dog Kutcher and other unsuspecting newbies as rescue swimmers. A silly movie made of Hollywood taped-together bokum, Rated PG-13 (intense sequences of action/peril, brief strong language and some sensuality), 2 hours, 16 minutes.
- "Invincible" / D+ It isn't. Meant as an inspirational movie based on the true story of Vince Papale (Mark Wahlberg, just fine), an average loe who played for the Philadelphia Eagles in the mid-'70s, the film is riddled with feel-good platitudes and plagued by an overacting supporting cast. Greg Kinnear (also good) is new coach Dick Vermeil, who gives Vince his shot, "Rudy" is a better little-guy-who-could flick, "The Rookie" is a better aging-athletewho-fulfills-his-dream picture. And "Rocky" is, well, "Rocky," But if you're looking for a movie about bad '70s hair and sportsmovie cliches, here it is. Rated PG (sports action and some mild language). 1 hour, 44 minutes.
- "jackass: number two" / B The Three Stooges have nothing over the intoxicating physical idlocy heaped upon moviegoers in the latest edition of the totally bad-boy "lackass." It's more of the same physical buffoonery - outrageous stunts and gags with branding irons, bees, a game of "medicine ball dodge ball in the dark" and such - only often more gross. These clowns are so good at what they do (or is it that are they so wonderfully inept?) that the film is often drop-jaw funny. But be forewarned, when you're not laughing out loud, you could well be trying hard not to lose your lunch. Rated R (extremely crude and dangerous stunts throughout, sexual content, nudity and profanity). 1 hour, 35 minutes.

- "let Li's Fearless" / C+ This Chinese martial arts film. purportedly let Li's last, has the physical stuff down pat - the fights are mostly impressive with blistering hand and foot moves. But its story, an epic sweep involving the founding of the influential ling Wu Sports Federation. is overly melodramatic. Director Ronny Yu avolds almost every semblance of camp, which is odd. since that is the precise element that elevates some Chinese actioners (such as kung fu kickazoid "iron Monkey") and is what. makes Yu's earlier films, "Freddy vs. Jason" and "Bride of Chucky." so darned watchable, Rated PG-13 (violence and martial arts action throughout). I hour, 43 min-
- "Little Miss Sunshine" / R. An out-of-the-blue gem. The setup sounds depressingly like "RV"/Chevy Chase territory: a dysfunctional-family road trip in an equally dysfunctional vintage VW bus. But this movie has more in common with the complex humor and bittersweet tone of the Thanksgiving-themed "Pieces of April." Little Olive (adorably chubby Abigail Breslin) wants to compete in a beauty contest, so her family hits the road. The flawless ensemble cast includes her parents (Greg Kinnear and Toni Collette), grandpa Alan Arkin and gay uncle Steve Carell, Smart and goofy, tender and laugh-out-loud funny, this is the sleeper hit of the summer, Rated R (language, some sex and drug content). 1 hour, 41 minutes.

"Click" follows from the premise that Adam Sandler, impersonating worksholic architect Michael Newman, acquires the ultimate in universal remotes that is, a remote that controls the universe. With the click of a hutton, he is able to fast forward through the boring or unpleasant parts of his life, pause to consider snappy comebacks or extract a petty revenge on oppressors, turn down the volume on arguments with his wife (poor, forlorn Kate Beckinsale). pretty much treat his life as a DVD. It even has a commentary section, where some snarky critic offers unpleasant interpretations of his decisions

It's certainly the movie that the trailers and the mega-milliondollar pub campaign suggested you were going to get for your money, a crass physical comedy of unrelenting irrelevance with a gag or two amid the many other examples of bad taste, extrapolating toward infinite on the theme of remote control reality.

But what's wrong with this movie isn't the movie, it's Sandier himself, his sensibility, his sense of humor, which is aggressively hostile. Why does screwball sci-· entist Morty (Christopher Walken) give the gizmo to Sandler's Michael? Because he's a good guy who deserves a break. Except he's not a good guy who deserves a break. He's a selfish, self-absorbed, smuglittle weenie. who turns on everybody at the drop of a hat, who cheats to succeed, who brutalizes his children, who screams at his wife, and who looks to be a pretty mediocre architect in the bargain. In fact, halfway through the overlong film I was the one wishing for a remote. I'd have at that off button so fast it'd make your nose bleed. - Washington Post

> "Garfield: A Tail of Two Kittles" PG .

Despite the Dickensian cant of Its title, "Garfield: A Tail of Two

Adam Sandler just can't wait to see how things turn out in 'Click.'

Garrison Keillor, Meryl Streep and Lindsay Lokan are walting for The Axeman in Robert Altman's film version of 'A Prairie Home Companion.

Garfield does London in 'A Tail of Two Kitties.'

Kitties" really draws its inspiration - well, maybe that's too grand a word - from Mark Twain's "The Prince and the Pauper," about a high-born and a low-porn of identical anpearance and age who involuntarily switch places in the capital city of the British empire, to each's mutual benefit and education.

But instead of prince and paupers, the transferees are fat, blobby, grange American tabbles, one the famous Garfield of cartoon fame (Bill Murray does the laconic, hipster voice) and the other named Prince, the heir apparent to an English estate (Tim Curry does that voice). And, of course, there's no empire anymore. The movie is intermittently amusing, particularly when the American human Control of the parties are the conpart of the cast (Breckin Meyer and Jennifer Love Hewitt) are off-screen, the longer and farther the better.

Mostly what the movie documents has to do with the animals of the estate rebelling against the opportunings of the knavish Mr. Dervish (Billy Connolly) to expel them and turn the place into a theme park or retirement home or some such. It's mostly a falldown-go-boom sort of enterprise, though now and then a. musical breaks out as when Garfield leads the barnyard through a rock ode to the making of lasagna. Nothing happens that you haven't seen before, although if you haven't seen it before (you would have to be younger than 3), you might crack a smile or two. --- Washington Post

The end looms large in Robert Altman's "A Prairie Home Companion," which nevertheless takes its sweet time saving goodbye, Written by Garrison Kelllor. creator and host of the lone-running public radio show, the movie is a pretty curious artifact - a retraction of a send-up, in which Keillor's mild, pleasedwith-itself spoof of old-time radio variety shows is recast as an actual old-time radio variety show. The audience filling the Fitzgerald theater in St. Paul, Minn., in the movie doesn't appear that different from the ones who might fill it in real life or who tune in from the coasts. But the performers on stage - including a hangdog emcee known as G.K. (Keillor) - don't exactly look like NPR coffee-mug types. Most of them are shucksy and worbegone for real.

Altman has made a long, varied career of pecking under the rug of various subcultures to reveal the underside of the weave. On the face of it, making a movie about "A Prairle Home Companion," a show that has run for 32 years, would seem to make sense. But far from taking a "Larry Sanders Show"-style approach, Keillor's script wants to be "interestine" more than it wants to be honest. Bather than focus on internecine rivalries, disconnects between the characters and the people who play them. .etc., Keillor creates an alternative universe that resembles the fictional universe of his show. It's as If Restoration Hardware's marketing department woke up one day suddenly believing its own conv.

The result is at once familiar and disconcerting, meta-Keillor done in Altman's desultory, distracted style. The formidable cast of characters fluttering around the imperturbable host includes Meryl Streep and Lily Tomlin as sisters Yolanda (Streep) and Rhonda (Tomlin) Johnson, the last remaining members of a musical family whom Yolanda describes to her daughter Lola (Lindsay Lohan) as "the Carter family, only not famous": a hardboiled private detective Guy Noir (Kevin Kline) of the public radio show's occasional nuln fiction: parody: Maya Rudolph as a putupon assistant: and Woody Harrelson and John C. Reilly as a duo of singing cowboys - characters who don't belong on the same plane of existence, let alone in the sumo movio

The gumshoe business not being what it used to be. Gov has taken a job doing security for the show. The movie takes place almost entirely within the confines . of the theater on the night of the 30-year-old show's final broadcast, as the radio station has been bought by a Texas conglomerate run by Rible-thumping vulgarians - they've never even heard of E Scott Fitzgerald - who plan to shut down the operation. While he's expecting "The Axeman" (Tommy Lee Jones) to make an appearance, Guy doesn't know what to make of the apparition in a white trench coat who shows up unannounced

Of course, no one expects the angel of death, especially not when she looks like Virginia Madsen. But that's what she is - the celestial continuation of a lonetime "Prairie Home" listener who laughed at a joke, lost control of her car and died, come to escort an elderly cast member to the Given their status as living anachronisms, it's natural that "A Prairie Home's" fictional characters would feel threatened with extinction. But the fear seems to come from an unusual source. Of all popular entertainment programs, surely "A Prairie Home Companion" has the least to fear from the pipple censoring fundies, even if it is a bastion of Minnesotan liberalism, What's harder to figure is why the modem world Kelllor and Altman have created - with its censoring Christians, philistine corporations and hysterical regulatory agencies - feels so old-fashioned and off the mark.

Go ahead, Pick a pizza, You won't regret it.

On our recent visit, my husband and I shared a 10-inch Idiot's Delight ($9.95) - our favorite pizza in town and, judging from its popularly at Maxie's, a favorite among a good many other folks, it's a not-sounusual combination of pepperoni. Canadian bacon, ground beef (for which you can substitute Maxie's own Italian sausage), mushrooms, green peppers, onions, black olives and cheese. With notso-usual flavor.

"Well, you know, it's been a long time," he said. Yes, indeed.

The business opened downtown in 1956, offering the first pizza in Twin Falls and -Humphries contends - the rest of southern Idaho, It moved to its current location on Blue Lakes Boulevard in the late 1950s and changed to the Maxie's name in 1963, when Humphries' father bought the restaurant.

The building's expansions over the years included conversion of an adjacent laundry to dining rooms. It's been remodeled and remodeled and remodeled.

The result is disjointed, with different decor from room to room. But fireplaces and seatvoorself informality encourage conversation in those homey rooms. The restaurant's display of community sponsorship plaques speaks to its long history and local ownership. Indeed, Maxle's is a place where even a newcomer can feel like part of something larger.

It's Trailing of the Sheep time

Blaine County event turns 10 years old

BY KAREN BOSSICK For the Times-News

KETCHUM — The sheep were late to their own party the first year.

 Even Wood River Valley schoolchildren turned out for the first Trailing of the Sheep that clear, crisp Columbus Day.

But the sheep had partied under a full moon the night before, and it took a while for sheepherders to round them up.

reruers to round mem up.

'The Trailing of the Sheep Festival has gone full steam ahead
since, growing into a three-day event complete with a folklife fair, cooking classes, sheepherder carving talks, music and dancing and talks by authors such as Ivan Doig.

"The first year we stood back and said, 'Well, that works, That was fun.' Then the next year we said, 'Let's try it for one more year,' it really has been a yearby-year process,' said Diane losenby Peavey.

losephy Peavey and her husband, John, organized the first Trailing of the Sheep simply as a way to explain to newer residents of the valley why sheep were passing their condo windows and running down their bike paths.

The first trailing attracted one protester holding a sign denigrating the sheep industry, and he attracted far more boos than thumbs up.

"We hadn't realized we had so much support in the valley," said Peavey. "I think for the people who have lived here 15 to 50 years it's like going home. It's about who we are and who we were."

It didn't take long before the Trailing was attracting the attention of the national media, including "CBS Sunday Morraing," which filmed it as an antitraction of the sunday with the that had enveloped the country

Blaine County's Trailing of the Sheep Festival commemorates the Wood River Valley's key heritage Industry.

HAILEY - For 11 years, Company of Fools has approached theater in conventional fashion - presenting plays for an audience sitting on the other side of the stage.

Now the Fools are turning the

For the next three weeks theater members will bring the audience alongside professional actors on stage and technical directors behind the stage as they seek to show the magic of theater from every room in the house. "It takes a village to put on a play - not just three of us. We're kicking open our doors and inviting the community into our home. And in the process we hope they learn something about us, and we hope we learn something about them," says Denise Simone, one of the Fools' core artists.

"Fools Exposed" is a mindboggling array of 11 play readings, three performances, and six workshops offering John O. Public the opportunity to learn about playwriting, improvisation and the technical aspects of theater

You'd be a fool not to check it out — each event is only $5. And a pass good for all the events is

"Five bucks, Five bucks, Five bucks. Why so cheap? Because sometimes the best things in life should be." Simone said.

The idea came from the community, according to John Glenn, another of the Fools' core artists: "We'd go grocery shopping or to the Barkin' Basement and we'd get comments like. 'I loved what you did.' Or, 'I didn't understand why you did this."

"People would say, 'Where are you off to?' and then when they'd find we were going to the theater. they couldn't understand what we'd do there during the day. They didn't realize it's a full-time tob making this happen and they were full of questions. We thought we'd look for small ways we can share that information."

Fools Exposed will include a staged production of John Patrick Shanley's "Danny and the Deep Blue Sea," which explores the relationship between a guy and a gal from the Bronx as they seek to rise above their selfloathing and feelings of guilt.

Play readings include Tom Lehrer's "Tomfoolery," a satirical look at racism, the Boy Scouts and more through song.

Three Thursday lunch workshops will challenge participants to tap their creativity and show participants how the Fools create technical magic.

Aspiring playwrights can explore the craft of playwriting in a two-part workshop with James Still, who wrote "And Then They Came For Me" - a fresh take on the Anne Frank story, which the Fools performed a few years ago.

Even preschoolers and their adult companions will get the opportunity to share the wonder of sounds through 35 minute storytelling-and-music sessions at Iconoclast in Halley.

The Fools hope the various events will attract newcomers to their theater in addition to longtime supporters. Last year, for instance, the Fools found that people love play readings and that readings often attract an entirely different audience than those who attend full productions.

This time they plan to offer two of the performances of "Danny and the Deep Blue Sea" at 9:30 p.m. for younger audiences and those who work late.

Symphony opens season with Haydn — and Uranus

RY STEVE CRUMP Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Consider the thin line between music and caconhony.

"How do we turn those voiceless papers of black notes and symbols and a few words, mostly Italian, into the sublime sounds you look forward to hearing?" said Ted Hadley, Magic Valley Symphony musical director, who will conduct the season-opening symphony on Sunday in the College of Southern Idaho Fine Arts Center auditorium.

"We bring to the stage 50 or so sound-producing devices, crafted to close tolerances, but still capable of both music and noise. We place them under the control of 50 or more people, each bringing to their own art a unique life of study and experience, and capable of an infinity of emotions."

The alchemy that follows still comes as surprise to Hadley.

"In its pure form, magic is no more than the unexplainable process of making the unexpected appear, or maybe vanish," . Hadley writes in the program notes for Sunday's concert. "It is as if saying 'magic words' makes the impossible happen. That timeless incantation, 'abracadabra, even means il create as I speak' in the ancient Hebrew-Aramalc."

On Sunday, Hadley and his orchestra will conjure up Joseph Haydn's "Surprise" symphony. and "Uranus the Magician," part of British composer Gustav Holst's seven-movement orches-· tral suite "The Planets."

Soloists are oboist Trent Parke, a junior at Carey High School, and pianist Pernecia Heinemann, a University of Idaho sophomore from Kimberly. They were the winners of the symphony's Youth Soloist Competition for 2006.

Parke, son of Dan and Shawna Parke, commutes to Twin Falls to study oboe with Janie Griff and piano with Sue Miller. He plans to ... study oboe performance at Brigham Young University and Heinemann, daughter of Wayne and Gayle Heinemann, was home-schooled and learned to play the violin from her dad. She performed with the Magic Valley Symphony for six years from age 10, and studied plane with Margaret Vincent for almost 12 years.

Heinemann hopes to follow a career in the specialized area of plano accompaniment.

"The depth of talent attracted to our biennial contest was a challenge for our judges, which you will appreciate in the capable musicianship of our winners," Hadley said.

Haydn is called "the father of the symphony" (he's also credited with inventing the string quartet). The 18th century Austrian court musician changed the format of the symphony radically, expanding its length, weight and complexity and making the orchestra dominant and the chorus second-

His 94th symphony, the "Surprise," was one of his best. First performed in 1792 when Haydn was living in London, it includes one of the composer's trademark musical jokes: A jarring chord sounds near the beginning of the second movement after a tranquil opening. The chord "disappears" . as quickly as it arrives, and the music immediately returns to its original dynamic, as if nothing had happened.

"(It's a) joke Haydn was said to have intended to wake up an inatrentive audience," writes the Magic Valley Symphony's publicist and historian, Paula Brown Sinclair, in the program notes.

"But the rest of the notes, too, bring delight, imaginable as the soundtrack for the stage show of any famous illusionist. Hear the drama as the stage is set, the tittering of the audience, the poof! as the rabbit appears or the white tigers disappear, the intervals of high spirits and quiet wonder. building to an exuberant climax worthy of any magician, or sym-

Holst, an English composer of Swedish extraction, was influenced by Indian spiritualism and English folk tunes. He wrote "The Planets" during World War I, but they weren't performed until after the Armistice.

"At a time of midlife crisis, a traveling companion introduced him to astrology, reawakening his intrigue with mysticism and unteaching renewed creativity." Brown Sinclair wrote, "The result was what he called a 'series of mood pictures' based on the astrological, not astronomical, characteristics of the seven known planets in order of distance from

"Uranus," the sixth movement named for the seventh planet, uses a bassoon as the voice of the magician, boistered by a "mischievous woodwind metody," according to Brown Sinclair. The low brass portrays evil.

"The Planets' brought fame and fortune and international recognition, all so unwelcome to Holst that he swore off belief in astrology (though still casting horoscopes for friends until his death), while the work that brought most acclaim was for the composer, without joy," Brown Sinclair writes.

The Magic Valley Symphony's senson will continue Nov. 14, accompanied by lyric tenor Cole Scaton. Other performances are scheduled for Feb. 25 and April 27.

A lot has happened in 10 years, Peavey said. Some of the sheep men and women who have swapped stories at the Sheep Tales Gathering, including John Peavey's mother Mary Brooks, have died. Others, including Pete Cenarrusa, have left the sheep business.

And there are only about 25,000 sheep in the area - way below the 2.65 million that plodded through in 1918 when Ketchum and Sydney, Australia, were the leading sheep exporters in the world.

On the bright side, the festival has grown to encompass the stories of the various people who have worked with sheep over the years from Navajos to Polish Highlanders.

And sheep ranchers who were bemoaning prices that fell to 38 cents a pound a few years ago are now getting $1.05 a pound, thanks to a new packing co-op Western ranchers have organ-
