North Korean A-bomb may have fizzled

By Robert Caros and Anne Garzan
Associated Press writers

WASHINGTON — An air sampling taken after North Korea's claimed nuclear test detected radioactive debris "consistent" with an atomic explosion, Bush administration and congressional officials said Friday night. They said no final determination had been made about the nature of last weekend's mystery-shrouded blast.

One congressional official said that radioactive material was found in an air sample collected on Wednesday. It was one of several tests to determine the validity of North Korea's claim that it had set off a nuclear test.

"The betting is that this was an attempt at a nuclear test that failed," another official said. "We don't think they were trying to fake a nuclear test, but it may have been a nuclear fizzle." The officials who described the results spoke on condition of anonymity because of the sensitive nature of the information.

The administration briefed key members of Congress about the preliminary test results.

Length matters: The longer your ring finger is compared with your index finger, the more likely you are to be aggressive, athletic and prone to depression, researchers say.

Upside of balance: Those with symmetrical attributes are more likely to be athletic, have lower metabolic rates, be more competitive and have higher IQs, said Gordon Gallup, a researcher at the State University of New York, Albany.

A warning: In one survey of mate heart attack victims, John T. Manning, a British researcher, found those with longer ring fingers had their heart attacks later in life.

Maybe not: Some critics dismiss the field of body symmetry as something close to junk science.

Researchers report links between body symmetry, some traits

By Dennis O'Brien
The Baltimore Sun

What does your body say about you?

A lot, it turns out. For example, extend your hand and compare the length of your ring and index fingers. For most women they're about the same length, and for most men, the ring finger is a bit longer.

The longer your ring finger is compared with your index finger, the more likely you are to be aggressive, athletic and prone to depression, researchers say.

Now measure the smallest finger on each hand. If they match in length, you may be close to symmetrical, which is good news if you're looking for a mate. If you're not symmetrical, you may have trouble getting a date.

OK, this isn't an exact science. But some researchers believe that body symmetry and the relative lengths of our ring and index fingers are influenced by our exposure to testosterone in the womb.

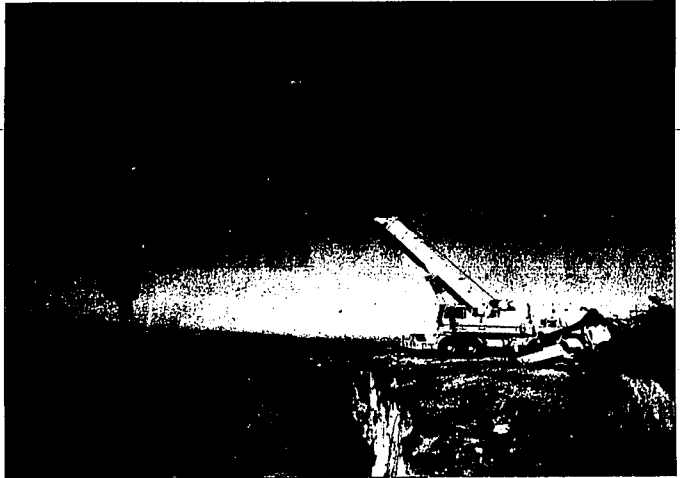

That exposure, they say, also influences a variety of personal traits. So for the past decade

BLM lifts junk from massive illegal dumpsite

JEROME — The Snake River Canyon: tourist attraction, scenic locale, recreational hotspot, garbage dump.

Mostly out of sight, and reachable only by following country roads south of Jerome to the canyon's north rim, is an illegal dumpsite used for years by criminals who toss everything from garbage sacks to automobiles over the edge and onto public land.

Now, the Bureau of Land Management is stepping in to clean things up.

On Friday, BLM officials and a contracted cleanup crew hoisted about 25 cars — most of them riddled with bullet holes — furniture and appliances from the canyon's base using cranes. Officials said the cleanup project will soften the blow from a potential health hazard and alleviate an eyesore that's scarred the canyon floor for decades.

"Something like this, we should never have this happen," said Tim Fuller, an environmental specialist with the BLM. "Unfortunately, you still have a minority of the population who are slobs." The BLM, which has been

Some of what was found

These are just a few of the items removed Thursday and Friday from an illegal dumpsite in the Snake River Canyon:

- A 1958 Rambler Ambassador
- A Thunder Jet bicycle
- A stove
- Several tractor tires
- Assorted piles of twisted metal
- Approximately two dozen bullet-riddled vehicles, many too mangled to identify planning the project for about three years, spent $45,000 in grant money to hire Kellogg-based cleanup crew North Wind Inc. and local subcontractor Iwlin Falls Crane Service for the two-day project. But when the crew began lugging debris from the approximately 500-yard by 250-yard pile, they realized the site was much larger than anticipated.

Recently dumped dirt and other debris hid an 11-foot-deep trash pile that contains about 50 mangled car bodies, said Mark Feldman, project manager with North Wind. Based on the car models craned from the canyon floor, Feldman and BLM officials guessed the site has been active for about 70 years.

"I can get you a good deal on a Studebaker," Fuller joked.

The crane crew and BLM employees at the scene said they'd never seen a more dramatic dumpsite — including Fuller, who's been with the BLM for about 30 years.

Fuller said the BLM has known about the area for some time but lacked funding to address the situation until now.

Without more money to extend the project, however, the BLM can hope only to put a dent in the site.

The area has become slightly less enticing for illegal dumpers in recent years after the BLM built a rock berm to block access to the rim. But many dumpers simply drove around it — same with concrete barriers.

Catching illegal dumpers is as hard as preventing

Live from Jerome! Jerome High School begins broadcasting events online

By Joshua Palmer
Times-News writer

JEROME — While the Jerome High School football team was testing itself against Wood River, an entirely different test was happening behind the scenes.

That's because the Journalism program was testing its latest experiment — live online broadcasts of school events.

The Jerome High School Journalism program is working with the district's technology department to play live video — also known as webcasts — on the school district's website.

Jerome High School seniors Steven Kincheloe and Nick Dalsoglio talked about the idea a few months ago and then discussed it with Chris Gibson, the district's technology director.

"We were just kind of talking about it, but when we talked to Gibson about it he got really excited," said Dalsoglio. "We've done a couple of live tests with four people working it, but I think it will work."

Please see JEROME, Page A3

Pedro Camarena, a senior at Jerome High School, creates a webcast that will air on the district's Web site.

To see the webcast, visit the Jerome School District Web site at: <http://www.d261.k12.id.us/>

Proud Mom: "You neglected to report that the ESS Merchants 2 team beat their opponents Jerome Kwanis 42 to 6. They worked hard, played great and got third place!"

On 'One killed, three injured in collision'...

Concerned: "Regardless of weather or not it was legal for the concrete truck driver to leave the scene, is not the most important question. Why did he? Is the question. When there were more severely injured people in the other truck. Did he have something to hide? Who was the private vehicle? Was it a friend of his? or was it a passerby? Why didn't he help the other injured and dying people first and stay to make sure they were ok? Is there a warning of a "stop sign ahead" clearly marked for that intersection? Our prayers are with both families."

On 'Consider ways to drop references to squaw' editorial...

What hatred? "C'mon Times News, I'm not opposed to dropping the name for the sake of courtesy, but your statement "allows hatred to exist today" is bunk. I've never known anyone to look at a map of Idaho and say, "yes, I really hate those guys. You don't need to make it more than it is. The world is full of words that mean something different now than in years gone by."

Idaho can't restrict Sho-Ban casinos
 BOISE — The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals says Idaho can't limit the number of video gambling machines operated by the Shoshone-Bannock Tribes, nor can state officials force the tribes to renegotiate their compact with the state.
 The ruling, handed down Wednesday, upheld an earlier ruling in favor of the tribes from U.S. District Judge B. Lynn Winnmill. The state and the Idaho State Lottery had hoped to overturn Winnmill's 2004 decision that found the Shoshone-Bannock tribes did not have to renegotiate a 2000 gaming compact signed by then-Gov. Dirk Kempthorne in order to install video gambling machines. Winnmill had ruled that the Shoshone-Bannocks automatically got the right to the machines when three other Idaho tribes were allowed to install similar devices. SEE PAGE A7 them. The BLM employs just two law-enforcement officers who are responsible for about 4.3 million acres. The path to the site is largely out of view from nearby houses, and much of the illegal dumping takes place at night.

Fuller said he's heard of insurance companies lowering people to the site to check vehicle identification numbers on dumped vehicles but isn't sure if anyone was ever prosecuted.

Dumpsters must cross private property to get to the BLM-managed rim. Adrian Boer, who has owned that private property for about 20 years, said he's never seen someone use the site. In fact, he wasn't aware the dumpsite was even there.

"I've never even looked down there," said Boer, whose house is about three miles from the rim.

Fuller said the cleanup, which ended Friday, would likely require about $100,000 more to get all the trash. That's not including extra costs that would have to do with removing, potentially hazardous materials, though none was found on this project. Other Western BLM offices have spent as much as $10,000 to remove hazardous waste from dump areas.

That's money the Idaho BLM doesn't have. So, for now, the dumpsite remains.

The broadcasts are recorded by students and then relayed to the district's central computer system. However, only about 60 people can view the webcasts at one time because of limited technology.

"So Friday night was the big test. 'I'm almost a little nervous about tonight,'" Gibson said. "We can only have as many as 60 viewers, but I don't know if we will have six or 600."

Regardless of the limitations, students and educators both agreed that the concept opens up a realm of possibilities.

One possibility was even being tested Friday afternoon when Journalism students recorded a video by Scott McClure, D-Jerome, who is running for a seat in the Idaho House of Representatives.

Kincheloe and Dalsoglio said they would like to see it used for other school sports, as well as school plays and other events. They said the class is already working on a project that will be "like a video yearbook."

"My main purpose in the beginning was to instill some enthusiasm in the kids for this kind of thing," Gibson said. "Now I envision doing so much more with it."

And people will be watching. Gibson's son, who played football for Jerome High School three years ago, is serving in Iraq and will try to watch the games when he has access to the computers. A group of students at the University of Idaho who graduated from Jerome told Gibson that they would also be watching the game Friday night.

Audio will also be provided by a local radio station, which will broadcast simultaneously with the video.

scientists have been measuring and comparing hands, feet, ears, limbs, joints and other body parts to see whether they provided clues to personality and behavior.

"They're an amazing kind of subtle, yet salient, cue in our development," said Randy J. Nelson, a psychology professor at Ohio State University.

Over the years, the field has generated more than 170 scientific papers identifying links, in one form or another, in athletic ability, aggressive behavior and propensities for early heart attacks, depression and even sexual preference.

"Those with symmetrical attributes are more likely to be athletic, have lower metabolic rates, be more competitive and have higher IQs," said Gordon Gallup, a psychology professor and researcher at the State University of New York, Albany.

Some critics dismiss the field as something close to junk science. "I've always distrusted all of this, from the 'beginning,'" said Richard Palmer, an evolutionary biologist at the University of Alberta. "I don't think it's a reliable indicator of anything."

Research into finger length was initiated in the late 1930s by John T. Manning, a British researcher who was intrigued by the finding that finger length ratios are one of the few differences between the sexes that develop in the womb and are unaffected by puberty. Finger length ratios remain constant throughout our lives.

"Lots of things show our sex differences, but most of them become larger or more obvious with the onset of puberty," said Manning, a researcher at the University of Central Lancashire in England. "This is one thing that doesn't." There is no way to know the exact percentage of men or women with equally sized ring and index fingers, Manning said. But in a 1999 report on a survey of 102 men and women, he found men with longer ring fingers scored highest in tests used to detect symptoms of depression. There was no such pattern for women.

In another survey of male heart attack victims, he found those with longer ring fingers had their attacks later in life. "There are pluses and minuses to these things," he said.

But among the most consistent results are studies that link finger length to athletic abilities, Manning said. A recent report by researchers at King's College in London, which linked running ability to longer ring finger ratios in women, was one of seven studies in recent years to make such a connection, he said.

In that study, researchers found that of 607 female twins ages 25 to 79, those with ring fingers longer than their index fingers were more likely to participate in sports and compete at higher levels — particularly in sports such as soccer that involve running. Previous studies have shown the same pattern in male athletes.

At Ohio State, researchers found a link between finger length and aggression by monitoring how hard 100 male and female college students slammed down the phone when they received rude comments during what they thought was a phone charity solicitation.

The students were more likely to slam down the phone if they had either long ring fingers or some asymmetry in their finger lengths, palm sizes, wrist diameters, elbow widths, ankle circumferences, or ear and foot sizes, the researchers said.

"It's amazing how angry people get. In interviews it came out pretty clearly," said Nelson, a co-author of the 2004 study.

Researchers in San Francisco measured the fingers of more than 700 men and women, then asked them about their sexual preferences. They found that lesbians were more likely to have ring fingers that were longer than their index fingers. There was no similar pattern among gay men, said Marc Breedlove, the Michigan State University psychologist who did the survey.

"I have to say, I think it's strange," said Breedlove, who published the study in the journal Nature in 2000, while he was a researcher at the University of Calif., Berkeley.

Breedlove, who studies the influences of sex hormones on rats, mice and hamsters, cautioned people against drawing conclusions from their own hand measurements, or those of friends. The studies are based on averages and have little meaning for any individual, he said.

"You can't tell anything definitively by the length of one person's finger," Breedlove said. "If your index finger is longer than your ring finger, don't panic."

Manning acknowledged that some results are more reliable than others. "There's no question, there's still a lot of work to be done in the field," he said.

"Most people have imperfections that throw them off their symmetry a bit — and that can actually make them more attractive in an offbeat way, experts say."

Researchers say that body symmetry has implications throughout the animal kingdom. Birds, rodents and other animals show a preference for symmetrical mates.

Humans appear to function the same way with faces that are symmetrical. The same is true in men's preference for women, Trivers said.

Superstar Brad Pitt comes close to being perfectly symmetrical, experts say. But actor Owen Wilson is an example of a man with an asymmetrical face that seems to work well.

"Very few people are perfectly symmetrical. It's usually the people who are really attractive," Nelson said.

BUHL — Three people have been arrested in connection with a marijuana-growing operation in Buhl.

Glenn Conner, 54, Laura Sinclair, 42, and Travis Pederson, 19, all of Buhl, were arrested Thursday at 4500 N 1520 E, according to a press release from the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office.

Investigators from the narcotics unit stated that "while not a large operation," numerous marijuana grow sites had been located near the residence along a creek, along with seed germination boxes used to start the marijuana plants.

Investigators have found seven mature marijuana plants, which were found at the residence and had recently been harvested.

The plants were being dried and readied for use.

Conner, Sinclair and Pederson appeared before the magistrate court on Friday and all three had bond set at $10,000.

Investigators from the sheriff's office continued to search the residence of Conner.

They stated that more arrests regarding the marijuana grow operation are pending.

Education services for deaf, blind to expand

Effect on Idaho School for the Deaf and the Blind unknown

By Joshua Palmer
Times-News writer

LEWISTON — To improve the quality and availability of deaf and blind education programs in Idaho, the Idaho State Board of Education has approved plans to create education standards and expand services statewide.

The new effort's effect on the Idaho School for the Deaf and the Blind in Gooding remains unknown.

"The when is second" to the "what," said Luc Willis, public information officer for the State Board of Education. "Obviously, the Idaho School for the Deaf and the Blind is a hot-button issue, but the board believes in a holistic approach where standards are first and the location comes second."

The board first appointed a study committee, which gathered input from stakeholders and outlined significant and broad issues in improving the state's programs for deaf and blind students.

Under the new recommendations, students would be offered services that fit their individual needs. The means of expanding services will be studied over the next 18 months.

In addition, the board will ask the Legislature to appropriate two full-time administrators — one to the Idaho Commission for the Blind and Visually Impaired and the other at the State Board of Education — to create standards and establish services statewide.

Cassia County faces wrongful death claim in inmate demise

By Renee Wells
For the Times-News

HEYBURN — A Heyburn woman has filed a tort claim against Cassia County on behalf of her granddaughter, who died in March while in the custody of the Mini-Cassia Criminal Justice Center.

According to papers filed in the Cassia County Courthouse, Donna J. Hunt filed the complaint Sept. 12, claiming her granddaughter, Martha Montoya, 36, of Heyburn, died at Cassia Regional Medical Center only hours after she was transported there from the jail.

Montoya was in custody at the time for a probation violation, according to the Cassia County Sheriff's Office.

The claim alleges that Montoya, a diabetic, suffered from ketoacidosis the night before her death. The condition signals dangerously high levels of ketones, or acids, built up in the body as a result of a lack of insulin and can be fatal if not treated.

Hunt's claim alleges that

The claim alleges that (Martha) Montoya's cellmates attempted to alert jail guards that Montoya was complaining of extreme illness, but their concerns went unheeded.

Montoya's cellmates attempted to alert jail guards that Montoya was complaining of extreme illness, but their concerns went unheeded.

The claim alleges that no one checked on Montoya during the night or did anything to alleviate her symptoms.

Records indicate that at 6:30 a.m. on March 31, guards checked on Montoya and determined she was ill enough to be taken to the hospital. She died within four hours of her arrival there.

Hunt is suing for wrongful death, claiming the jail guards were negligent because...they...did...not respond to Montoya's personal health needs. She is seeking $1.5 million in compensatory and punitive damages.

Following Montoya's death, county officials asked Gooding County sheriff's officers to conduct an investigation of the incident. At that time, Cassia County Sheriff Jim Higgins said it is common procedure in an incident of this kind to have an outside agency conduct an investigation.

A report of the investigation was returned to Cassia County, but has not been made public.

Now that a tort claim has been filed, all information concerning the incident has become subject to attorney-client privilege and is not open to the public, according to Boise attorney Jim Davis, who is representing Cassia County in the claim.

Burley attorney Kent Jensen is representing Hunt in the case. An attempt to contact Jensen for comment was unsuccessful.

Cassia County Prosecutor Al Barrus and Criminal Justice Center Director Dennis Dexter both said they are unable to comment.

California family on their way home involved in tragedy

Times-News

TWIN FALLS — An Okadale, Calif., family returning from a horse show in Montana were the people caught up in a fatal wreck Wednesday southwest of Twin Falls.

William R. Edsall, 29, was dead at the scene. The driver, Clayton M. Edsall, 26, and passengers Sharon S. Edsall, 49, and Tammy M. Adams, 28, are recovering from their injuries.

The wreck happened Wednesday afternoon at the intersection of 3700 N 1900 E near Buhl.

A Dodge pickup driven by Clayton Edsall ran a stop sign and collided with a cement truck driven by Monty T. Doy, according to the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office.

Reached by phone Friday at his home in Okadale, Clayton Edsall said his passengers were his brother, William, his mother, Sharon, and his fiancée, Tammy.

They were returning from a horse show in Kallispell, Mont. "We still are really fuzzy about what happened," he said. "That stop sign there, it's heavily treed looking to your right. It's still pretty blurry to me."

Citations are pending, said Nancy Howell with the sheriff's office.

OBITUARIES/MAGIC VALLEY

DEATH NOTICES

Lisa Lynne Uriguen

James Kent Roll

HEYBURN — Lisa Lynne Uriguen, beloved daughter, twin wife, mother and friend, passed into God's presence after dying tragically in her home on Oct. 11, 2006. She was 39 years old.

Lisa was born on July 1, 1968, in Burley, the daughter of Kari and Rick Uriguen. She attended Burley schools and graduated from Burley High School in 1986. Lisa's first son, Rhett Uriguen, was born in 1985. As a single mother, Lisa worked hard to support her son. Lisa later married Fred Haman, and her second son, Cameron Haman, was born in 1991. The family moved to International Falls, Minn., in 1995. Being Idaho natives, Lisa and the boys were accustomed to snow, but the Minnesota winters, complete with 10-foot snowdrifts and snowmobiles as a primary source of transportation, were a surprise to them all.

Missing her family and home after four long years, Lisa brought Fred and the boys back to Idaho. Lisa worked at Connor's Café up until her death and was one of the most beloved waitresses there, always greeting her customers with a wide crack and that beautiful smile. She eventually purchased her grandparents' home in Heyburn. Lisa's house was always filled with people, as she opened her heart and doors to anyone in need. She always gave freely of what little she had.

In addition to work, Lisa enjoyed shopping for "treasures" at thrift stores with her mother, aunt and sisters, going to concerts, throwing backyard barbecues, playing with her dogs, coaching her son's basketball team, camping with her family, and being the bright light of any family gathering. Lisa's pride and joy, however, was her boys whom she worked hard to keep in line.

Lisa is survived by her two sons, Rhett Uriguen and Cameron Haman, both of Heyburn; her husband, Fred Haman; her parents, Karl (Rick) Brown of Richfield and Rick (Kathy) Uriguen of Pittsburgh; her sisters, Kolly Uriguen and Mairi Nelson; the "daughter she never had," Becca Roberts; her stepdaughters, Becci Urwin, Monica McMillin and Stephi Brown; her grandmother, Nancy McCoy; her aunts and uncles, Donna (Gary) Ennis of Rupert, Chuck (Karin) McCoy of Jarbridge, New, Jackie (Billy) Rittichs of Paul, Roy (Bev) Uriguen of Boise, Bobby (Karen) Uriguen of Burley; and numerous cousins, friends and loved ones. Lisa was preceded in death by her grandparents, Joe and Labors Uriguen and Timi McCoy; and her cousin, Terry Shelby.

The funeral will be at 11 a.m. Monday, Oct. 16 at the Paul Baptist Church, 25 N. Fourth E. A graveside service will follow. There will be a viewing from 6 to 8 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 15 at the Hansen Mortuary Rupert Chapel, 710 Sixth St. In lieu of flowers, the family requests that donations be made in Lisa's memory to Key Bank.

In her abbreviated life, Lisa touched the hearts and lives of everyone who knew her.

She was truly an angel on Earth and will be dearly missed.

She will forever be remembered for her sense of humor, generous heart and that big, beautiful Lisa smile.

HEYBURN — James Kent Roll, son of Harriet and John Roll, died in an accident Oct. 11, 2006. 15 miles north of Paul at the junction of Highway 24 and 600 West, near Kimama. James was born in Fargo, N.D., on March 1, 1958, the youngest of seven children. When he was 9 months old, the family moved to Heyburn, Idaho, to care for his grandmother.

He has lived in this area ever since. James was raised in Fronca Bradshaw on July 9, 1983, and from this union three children were born, Rocklyn, Chelsea and Hannah. All of them are now married. James was raised in one of Jehovah's Witnesses and later dedicated and baptized his life to serving Jehovah on Jan. 7, 1976. James gave his creator all honor and glory. He taught his children to do likewise. He was a very loving and attentive father.

He was currently employed at McCain's of Burley, Idaho. He also worked at Sliptrot and as a carpenter, meat cutter and a pipe fitter. He was always a hard worker. He loved riding his bicycle, marksmanship, hunting, hiking, camping, snowboarding and sharing a home from the Bible with others. James loved doing all these things with his family and friends.

He is survived by his children, Rocklyn (LaDawn) Roll, Chelsea (Scott) Veeda and Hannah (Aaron) Silver; mother, Harriet Roll; sisters, Carol Rooness, Patricia Sandstrom, Bonny Cardenas and La Donna Hopkins and brothers, Marvin Roll and Delmar Roll. He was preceded in death by his grandparents, Martin and Helen VanLishout and Mike and Rosa Roll.

His family will miss him until we meet again in Paradise.

A memorial service will be at 4 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 15 at the Jehovah's Witness Kingdom Hall, 233 W. Third N. in Burley, Idaho.

Arrangements are under the direction of Hansen Mortuary Rupert Chapel.

WASHINGTON

Rep. Bob Ney pleads guilty, says he'll resign

WASHINGTON — Rep. Bob Ney pleaded guilty Friday in the Jack Abramoff influence-peddling investigation, the first lawmaker to confess to crimes in an election-year scandal that has staked out a Republican-controlled Congress and the Bush administration.

Belonged GOP leaders said Ney will be expelled from the House if he doesn't quit by the time they return to Washington after the Nov. 7 elections.

FDA: Food warning system fails many tests

WASHINGTON — A warning system meant to alert food companies in the event of a food poisoning outbreak failed one-third of the time in a recent government test. The Food and Drug Administration was able to reach an emergency contact for a food facility in every two out of three cases.

NEW YORK

Western New York hit by record snowfall

BUFFALO — The Buffalo area lay all but paralyzed Friday after a record-breaking early snowstorm whited-out the brilliant colors of fall, burying pumpkins and apples and catching this city world-famous for its wintry weather flat-floored.

The heavy, wet snow snapped tree limbs all over western New York, leaving some 392,000 homes and businesses without power.

At least three deaths were blamed on the storm, and a state of emergency was in effect in four counties, banning all nonessential travel.

FAA bans fixed-wing planes from East River

Fixed-wing planes have been banned from the East River corridor in New York unless the pilot is in contact with air traffic control, the Federal Aviation Administration said Friday. The announcement comes two days after a plane carrying New York Yankees pitcher Cory Lidle above the East River slammed into a skyscraper.

CONNECTICUT

Shays: Abu Ghraib abuses were sex ring

HARTFORD, Conn. — Republican Rep. Christopher Shays, who is in a tough re-election fight, said Friday the Abu Ghraib prison abuses were more about pornography than torture.

The veteran Connecticut congressman said a National Guard unit was primarily responsible for the abuses although it was actually the 372nd Military Police Company from Greatpoint, Md., an Army Reserve unit.

"It was a National Guard unit run amok," Shays said in a telephone interview with The Associated Press. "It was torture because sex abuse is torture. It was gross and despicable ... This is more about pornography than torture."

Shays sought to defuse controversy over his previous comments suggesting the Abu Ghraib abuses weren't torture but instead involved a sex ring of troops.

"Now I've seen what happened in Abu Ghraib, and Abu Ghraib was not torture," Shays said at a debate Wednesday.

BANGLADESH

Bangladeshi economist wins Nobel Peace Prize

DHAKA — The simple yet revolutionary idea of loaning tiny sums to poor people looking to escape poverty by starting businesses won Bangladeshi economist Muhammad Yunus and the Grameen Bank he founded the Nobel Peace Prize on Friday.

Yunus — and his tiny, known as microcredit — has spread around the globe in the past three decades and is said to have helped more than 100 million people take their first steps to rise out of poverty. Some bought dairy cows, others egg-laying hens. In recent years, money for a single cell phone has been enough to start thriving enterprises in isolated villages without phone lines from East Asia to West Africa.

"Lasting peace cannot be achieved unless large population groups find ways in which to break out of poverty," the Nobel Committee said in its citation in Oslo, Norway. "Microcredit is one such means. Development from below also serves to advance democracy and human rights."

FLORIDA

Police find bodies of four along highway

PORT ST. LUCIE — Police on Friday found what appeared to be a family of four gunned down overnight along an isolated stretch of highway, a woman clutching two children in a forlorn effort to protect them, with a man's body nearby.

Investigators believe the victims' vehicle had pulled to the side of Florida's Turnpike before someone else in the vehicle shot them and drove away sometime between 1:30 and 3 a.m., Sheriff Ken Mascara said.

The sheriff would not say whether investigators knew of a motive or had any suspects. A passer-by spotted the bodies around 8 a.m. in Port St. Lucie, about 100 miles north of Miami, and alerted the Florida Highway Patrol.

Elk escapes from another Idaho hunting park, shot by officials

BOISE (AP) — Idaho state game officers, already trying to exterminate one herd of escaped domesticated elk near Yellowstone National Park, have shot and killed a farm-raised trophy bull elk that was outside the fence of another private hunting park.

The elk, with a prized seven-point antler rack, was killed Wednesday morning near Gray Lake, 10 miles from the Mountain Ranch, a "shoot or bull" hunting park owned by Steven McGrath of Idaho Falls.

Carl Anderson, an Idaho Department of Fish and Game wildlife manager, told the Post Register that area residents had reported seeing a "wey-tame" elk at the lake since Saturday.

Idaho Department of Agriculture officials contacted Pine Mountain Ranch and another private hunting park near Blackfoot owned by former NFL Denver Broncos star Rulon Jones and asked if they were missing any elk. Employees at both panned elk farms said all their animals were accounted for, Anderson said.

State game and ag officers Wednesday found the escaped bull elk 400 yards from a county road and shot it after spotting a blue ear tag that identified it as a domestic livestock animal. Because it no longer had a clean bill of health from the Department of Agriculture, officials said the elk had to be killed to prevent disease transmission and crossbreeding with wild elk.

The ear tag identified the elk as property of the Pine Mountain Ranch.

"The Pine Mountain people said they weren't missing elk as far as they knew," Anderson said. "They had no idea how this thing could have gotten out."

McGrath did not immediately return calls Friday from The Associated Press, but Anderson said about 100 Idaho employees told state officials the elk would have fetched $10,000 if a client of the ranch had shot it inside the 1,500-acre enclosure.

Idaho Department of Agriculture officials are investigating how the elk got out of the fenced hunting park. State officers rode the fence line at Pine Mountain Wednesday and found no evidence of a hole or tree-fall that would have allowed the animal to escape.

Another domestic elk escape in the same region has increased pressure on state lawmakers to outlaw hunting parks and game farming in Idaho.

In August, as many as 160 domestic elk broke out of feeding veterinarian Rex Rammell's Chief Joseph Elk Ranch near Ashton. On Sept. 7, Gov. Jim Risch ordered state officers to shoot any escaped farm-raised elk on sight.

The Idaho Fish and Game Commission subsequently authorized two special public depredation hunts in an attempt to exterminate as many of the animals as possible, although wildlife officials say crossbreeding has likely already happened between wild and domestic elk because of the fall mating season.

Last week, Wyoming Gov. Dave Freudenthal wrote Risch a letter asking Idaho to ban game farms and to help enact a communication system among the two states and Montana to protect Yellowstone's elk herd health and genetics. Wyoming banned game ranching 30 years ago because of the risks to wildlife and to avoid situations like the domestic elk escaping, Freudenthal wrote.

U of I might cut bus service to reduce debt

The University of Idaho may stop paying for local shuttle bus service, officials said.

Lloyd Mues, the university's interim vice president of finance and administration, said this week that the school is committed to helping the regional Wheatland Express and Valley Transit shuttle programs. But the school doesn't want the $100,000 it contributes each year to each of the programs coming out of its own pocket. Instead, school officials will ask students to pay a transit fee and will raise parking-pass prices to cover the amount.

The student body is expected to vote on the proposed fees this year. If the students reject the fees, funding for the transit programs could stop completely.

Woman pleads guilty in autistic child's death

A 2-year-old accused of killing a 6-year-old autistic child she had taken to her home for therapy pleaded guilty to reduced charges this week.

Michelle Bott-Graham, 40, an unlicensed therapist, was originally charged with first-degree murder in the death of Cameron Hamilton last December. On Thursday, she pleaded guilty to one count of involuntary manslaughter and one count of felony injury to a child.

In exchange for her guilty plea, prosecutors agreed to recommend a sentence of between five and 10 years in prison.

Idaho loses bid to restrict Indian casinos run by Sho-Ban Tribe

By Rebecca Boone - Associated Press writer

BOISE — The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals says Idaho can't limit the number of video gambling machines operated by the Shoshone-Bannock Tribes, nor can state officials force the tribes to renegotiate their compact with the state.

The ruling, handed down Wednesday, upheld an earlier ruling in favor of the tribes from U.S. District Judge B. Lynn Winmill. The state and the Idaho State Lottery had failed to overturn a 2004 decision that found the Shoshone-Bannock tribes did not have to renegotiate a 2000 gaming compact signed by then-Gov. Dirk Kempthorne in order to install video gambling machines. Winmill had ruled that the Shoshone-Bannocks automatically got the right to the machines when three other Idaho tribes were allowed to install similar devices.

But unlike the Shoshone-Bannocks, the gaming com-pacts signed by the Coeur d'Alene, Nez Perce and Kootenai tribes limit the number of machines and require the tribes to contribute 5 percent of their annual gaming revenue to local schools.

"The fact that the (Shoshone-Bannock) Tribes may now be in a technically better position than the other tribes is purely a function of the terms of the compact that Idaho and the (Shoshone-Bannock) Tribes voluntarily entered into," Judge William Canby Jr. wrote for the unanimous three-judge panel.

In fact, the appellate court found, the Shoshone-Bannocks case was even stronger when it came to the payments made to local schools.

The compact prohibits the state from collecting "any Idaho tax or contribution in lieu of taxes or fees on or measured by gaming transactions, gaming devices permitted under this compact, gross or net gaming revenues, or the tribes' net income," according to the court ruling.

"The (Shoshone-Bannock)

Tribes did not bargain away their immunity from such taxes or payments in the compact," Canby wrote. "The fact that other tribes have accepted a package of benefits and burdens when they voluntarily amended their compacts does not change the terms of the compact between the (Shoshone-Bannock) Tribes and Idaho."

The attorney representing the Shoshone-Bannock Tribes in the case, Scott Crowell, said the appellate court victory was the last hurdle the tribes faced before moving forward with a "substantial investment" in gaming operations.

"It should be expected and anticipated that the tribes will now look for some significant capital to be invested in this operation," Crowell said. "We did not believe that this was a well-founded appeal to begin with and we're gratified that the court agrees. Now the tribes can begin receiving the benefits of tribal gaming, which is to provide a revenue source for the tribal government and jobs."

Both Cooper, a spokesman for the Idaho attorney general's office, said the state was still going over the ruling.

"We'll need to review the opinion and consult with our client, the state lottery, before making any decision on further action," Cooper said.

State budget surplus still on track

BOISE (AP) — Idaho remains on track to post another budget surplus at the end of the fiscal year next June, after tax revenue in September came in $8.9 million above forecasts, the state said this week. So far in the year that started in July, tax revenue has exceeded predictions by nearly $23 million.

If the projections hold, Idaho will have a $208 million surplus for fiscal year 2007. The governor's Division of Financial Management predicts that Idaho will likely bring in more than $2.5 billion in fiscal 2007 from taxes and other sources.

The state had a $203 million surplus in fiscal year 2006. Gov. Jim Risch has said he wants to use the state surplus to pay for property tax relief passed on Aug. 25, as well as move $100 million into a "rainy day" savings account to bolster school finances in the event of an economic downturn.

"This fits into the revised forecast made by my budget office in August that we should have another surplus for this fiscal year," said Risch in a statement. "Our economy continues to be very strong and that is very good news for the state's general fund."

The revenue figures for September showed individual income tax exceeded forecasts by $1.4 million; corporate income tax brought in $2.8 million more than projected; sales taxes were up $4.8 million; and combined product and miscellaneous revenues were on target, the state said.

While sales tax revenues jumped, state officials say, the state's budget deficit has been a result of consumers making last minute, end-of-September purchases of expensive products before the Oct. 1 start of an increase in the sales tax to 6 percent from 5 percent.

Bears shouldn't mess with this Idaho babysitter

CHEERS to the bear-killing babysitter in northern Idaho. The baby sitter, who did not want her name revealed and could not be reached for comment, was baby-sitting for her sister, Becky Henslee, near Portlath.

Henslee said her 3-year-old daughter Brooklyn and twin 2-year-old sons Cleo and Charles were playing in the backyard of their home on the Canadian border early last week when Brooklyn alerted their aunt by shouting "Bear! Bear!"

The baby sitter grabbed the children, moved them inside the house, loaded a .7mm hunting rifle and returned to the back door, where the 122-pound black bear had pawed the screen door and broken the door frame. The woman, who had a valid Idaho bear hunting tag, shot twice and instantly killed the bear.

It made news around the state, and will undoubtedly be a story the family will tell for years to come.

CHEERS to the organizers of the Magic Valley Junior Football League. The fifth- and sixth-grade championship games were held Wednesday night in Twin Falls. Teams in the league, which has been around for many years, are financed by area businesses and service clubs. And the number of players in the league grows every year, according to Commissioner Nate Lossler.

"We love football and seeing the kids jumping around and getting excited," Lossler said. "We wish we had something like this when we were kids."

But the mixed league teaches boys and girls in the Magic Valley more than how to block, tackle, and run. They learn also about sportsmanship, commitment, discipline and teamwork.

CHEERS to Mike Trabert, the YMCA in Twin Falls and city officials.

Trabert, the Twin Falls High School assistant swim coach, deserved to have his YMCA membership revoked if he has behaved in the manner described by some staff members at the Y. Some of those employees are said to be afraid of Trabert.

The timing of the YMCA's decision regarding his membership, however, seems suspicious. It happened days after city officials outlined plans for an advisory board to resolve concerns at the pool, which belongs to the city and is managed by the YMCA.

Trabert had voiced frustrations about apparent contract disputes between the YMCA and the swim team, which is a club team managed by parents and not officially sanctioned by the high school. He had also voiced concerns about having to share the pool with the Magic Valley Marlins YMCA Swim Team, a USA Swimming-sanctioned team that requires its members also belong to the Y.

It sounds to us as if the city waited too long to form the advisory committee. But it obviously needed to resolve issues at the pool.

CHEERS to the two U.S. Forest Service Employees who were afraid of the big, bad wolf. We only hope they are safe back in Ogden, Utah, where they came from before going to the Sawtooth Wilderness late last month.

The sound of howling wolves prompted them to call for a helicopter evacuation.

They became frightened Sept. 23, after seeing wolves chasing a bull elk across the meadow and later hearing the animals howl, said Ed Waldapfel, a spokesman for the Sawtooth National Forest. "A little while later they started hearing wolves howling all around them."

The wolves never made any aggressive moves toward the pair, and there are no documented cases of wolves attacking humans in Idaho. But that didn't stop the unnamed employees from requesting the evacuation.

"No matter which way they went they said they could hear the wolves," Waldapfel said. "They admitted they were very scared and wanted to get out of the area."

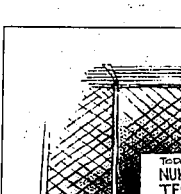

When torture feels right No smooth rides for nukes

I am pro-torture. And I don't mean just the music-blaring, sleep-deprivation, forced-standing kind. I'm talking out lamp wires, wetting a guy down and shocking his nipples while staring at him with your one crazy blue eye and one crazy green eye and screaming, "I am not going to ask you again! Where is the bomb?" Admittedly, most of what I know about interrogation is from the TV show "24."

thing is important enough to kill and die over, then it's important enough to torture for. For me, that list would include protecting my freedom, my family and a few of my friends whom I would name here if I had that kind of room.

As was, go the post-Cold War has been a pretty good one. The collapse of communism, the spread of free-market democracies and the general ring of stability bought and paid for by U.S. power all combined to create a world in which China and India have been able to rise peacefully. America has prospered and Europe has become whole and free. Yes, there's been 9/11, Bosnia, the rise of the neo-dictators and African wars — which are hardly trivial.

Too bad it's probably over. Yes, one day historians may argue that the post-Cold War started on 11/9 and ended on 10/9.

The Berlin Wall fell on 11/9 — Nov. 9, 1989, which ushered in the post-Cold War world. The apparent North Korean nuclear test went up on Oct. 9, 2006, which may have ushered out the post-Cold War world and ushered in a much more problematic era — the post-post-Cold War world.

behavior. It gets neither. And that is what the Bush team has gotten.

So, thanks to North Korea's nuclear test, we've come to a moment of truth. Yes, we have to make up our minds, but so, too, must Moscow and Beijing. They constantly advocate "multilateral" solutions. Well, will they sign up for the kind of biting multilateral sanctions that would work vis-a-vis Iran and North Korea and make "unilateral" U.S. military options unnecessary? If Russia and China want to see the post-Cold War world continue, they have to free sides any more opposing both U.S. and North Korea and make "unilateralism" ineffective multilateralism that requires them to do something hard. They've got to start paying a price to preserve this world. If they do, this multilateral benign post-Cold War world might continue. If they don't, if they keep trying to be free riders on our bus, we'll all still — because America can't keep this bus moving along any longer, especially when the road gets this dangerous.

Although we have killed more than 50,000 Iraqis for reasons that no one is able to explain other than that letting crazy, anti-Western, death-cult Arabs vote for their own crazy, anti-Western, death-cult Arab leaders is awesome, we have decided that we cannot accept misreading captives' motives. Apparently we are under the impression that countries fond of using "shock and awe" are actually judged on how many Michelin stars their prisons get.

"Waterboarding" really isn't effective, yielding only lies told to please captors, then maybe that's a good reason to end it. But if shooting people to get them to embrace pro-Western democracy also doesn't pan out, we might want to lighten up on that, too.

But all in all, compared with the vast repression and nuclear standoff that characterized the Cold War, the post-Cold War era has been much better for a lot of humanity.

Too bad it's probably over. Yes, one day historians may argue that the post-Cold War started on 11/9 and ended on 10/9.

Together these will add up to a much more dangerous and volatile post-post-Cold War world — unless.

Unless, what? Unless China and Russia get their act together and understand that the post-post-Cold War world is a much bigger threat to their prosperity than a post-Cold War world in which U.S. power is pre-eminent. You read me right — the post-Cold War world can be preserved only if Russia and China get over their ambivalence about U.S. power and if the Bush team gets over its ambivalence about Iran and North Korea.

If China told North Korea that unless it dismantled its nuclear program and put its facilities under U.N. inspection, Beijing would cut off its nuclear program, the ayatollah would relent. He is not suicidal. Anything less than such an explicit Chinese threat will mean a nuclear North Korea and eventually a nuclear Asia — which will certainly not be good for China's growth prospects.

The bus stops here.

Thomas L. Friedman is a columnist for The New York Times.

Compared to murder, maiming or the firebombing of entire cities, torturing for information is clearly the lesser moral crime. The reason we don't like torture is that it makes us squeamish. When we drop bombs on a village from thousands of feet above, we picture clean, video-game annihilation — not severed limbs and charred skin and babies killed in front of their parents. But it's impossible not to visualize dunking a man's head underwater until he believes he's drowning. We may not have had our homes bombed, but we have been in a pool with older kids. This is why not even Donald Rumsfeld would sign off on interrogation by extended wedgie.

Torture seems wrong because it involves hitting a guy when he's down.

It's fine to fight for the survival of civilization by shooting your enemy in the field, but once he's captured, warfare is suddenly a civilized game with lots of rules. This idea is so patently ridiculous that they made a sitcom out of it with Bob Crane.

This post-post-Cold War era will be defined by three new features — if things continue as they are. First is a nuclear Asia, triggered by North Korea's flaunting of its nuclear weapons. How long will Japan, Taiwan and South Korea remain non-nuclear?

Thomas L. Friedman

Together these will add up to a much more dangerous and volatile post-post-Cold War world — unless.

And if China and Russia told Iran that they would join in the toughest possible U.N. economic sanctions on Tehran if it persisted in its nuclear program, the ayatollahs would also back down. Because then the Europeans would have the spine to join in sanctions and Tehran would face a united front.

So, thanks to North Korea's nuclear test, we've come to a moment of truth. Yes, we have to make up our minds, but so, too, must Moscow and Beijing. They constantly advocate "multilateral" solutions. Well, will they sign up for the kind of biting multilateral sanctions that would work vis-a-vis Iran and North Korea and make "unilateral" U.S. military options unnecessary? If Russia and China want to see the post-Cold War world continue, they have to free sides any more opposing both U.S. and North Korea and make "unilateralism" ineffective multilateralism that requires them to do something hard. If they don't, if they keep trying to be free riders on our bus, we'll all still — because America can't keep this bus moving along any longer, especially when the road gets this dangerous.

My fear is that by banning torture, we get to pretend that the rest of war is a rational diplomatic tool instead of a desperate and brutal survival response. If someone, all-terrain vehicles, snow-mobiles, etc., if they choose.

Every politician says he or she will reduce taxes. When I graduated from Twin Falls High School in 1961, 33 percent of my wages went to pay all my taxes. Last year, it took 51 percent of my wages to pay all my taxes. What happened to all those reductions we were promised?

On the evening of Oct. 3, I was in attendance at a political forum sponsored by the Citizens Protecting Resources' Group of Jerome. Just as "beauty" is in the eyes of the beholder, so must "news" be in the eyes of the reporter with a headline to sell papers.

Mr. Harris also a candidate for county commissioner, made the correct decision not to comment on the subject of which he had no prior knowledge. Mr. Harris was correct — not to be drawn into a dispute between Ms. Oberauer and the present commissioners.

Twins Falls is such a great place to live. There are so many things to do such as sports, recreational and cultural events.

Last weekend, the Magic Valley Little Theatre opened with its annual show. This year the show is "The Sound of Music." What a marvelous way to spend the evening!

Bengals seek second straight road win

By Mark Lipiak
Times-News correspondent

POCATELLO — It's the survival of the fittest. That's the best way to describe today's game between Idaho State and Portland State.

The Bengals (2-3, 1-1 Big Sky) are coming off their most impressive road win in years, having blasted Northern Colorado 41-13. The Vikings (3-3, 2-2) were shut out courtesy of Montana State, 14-0.

Right now Portland State is hard to figure out. The Vikings have one of the conference's top defenses, but the offense has been inconsistent the past few weeks. Part of that can be blamed on quarterback injuries that grew so severe the Vikings picked up former University of Colorado QB Brian White as an immediate transfer. White has already seen action. However, starting quarterback Sawyer Smith returned from a hip injury last week and struggled against a rejuvenated Montana State defense. Smith finished 8-of-18 for a mere 39 yards.

He figures to be a little sharper this week, but could have his hands full against the Bengals. Last week, ISU put pressure on UNC to the tune of three sacks and two interceptions — the best performance this season in both categories. A similar effort on the road tonight would be a boon to the Bengals' cause.

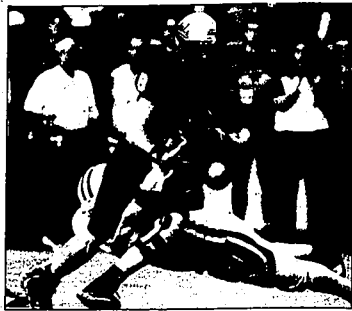

Even though Matt Gutierrez had a fine game versus the Bears, he and the offense had mistakes in the second half. Gutierrez tossed a pair of picks and ISU also lost a fumble. The Bengals need to be sharper against a Vikings defense that has 15 sacks and 12 interceptions in six games.

It's a fact not lost on the Bengals Larry Lewis. "We need to develop the killer instinct in closing teams out," Lewis said. "We can't allow them breathing room when we have a lead. We can't have a bad half, quarter or minute against Portland State. And turnovers are a big problem for us right now that we're trying to fix. We need to eliminate turnovers."

Saturday's game starts a tough stretch for ISU. Next week, Montana State comes to Pocatello. That's followed by a road matchup with conference leader Montana. With one conference loss already, the Bengals simply can't lose today and stay in the title chase.

Today's game kicks off at 7 p.m. MDT. The game will not be televised.

Three-way tie at the top at Bighorn

PALM DESERT, Calif. — Annika Sorenstam pulled away early and had to catch up late Friday on what turned out to be a tumultuous second round for just about everyone in the Samsung World Championship.

Annika Sorenstam celebrates after her approach shot lands just a foot from the cup on the fifth hole during the second round of the Samsung Challenge at Bighorn Golf Club in Palm Desert, Calif., Friday.

When it ended as clouds began to hover over Bighorn, Sorenstam nearly holed a sand wedge on the 18th hole for a tap-in birdie that salvaged a 1-under 71 and left her atop the leaderboard with Sophie Gustafson (70) and Paula Creamer (68).

They were at 6-under 138, one shot ahead of Women's British Open champion Sherri Steinhilber, who shot a bogey-7 on 67.

Lorena Ochoa (73) and Karrie Webb (69) were at 4-under 140 and faced a big weekend as Nos. 1-2 on the LPGA Tour money list and in the Player-of-the-Year race.

Michelle Wie had more adventures in the desert, joining caddy Fanny Sunesson in a rock removal project on the third hole to find a place in the sand to drop her ball, then taking double bogey when a pitch shot slammed into the bottom of the bin and came back some 10 feet. She took one other drop in desert fauna — that makes six puttings in two days — and shot 72 to finish eight shots behind.

Sorenstam pulled her next tee shot into a desert bush and had nowhere to drop. She finally chose the cart path, which was a risky move. If it bounced sideways into the bush, it would be in play and she would have to take another penalty stroke. Holding her arm steady for the drop, it might have been her best move of the day.

"It was the most consistent," she said. "Both landed in the same place."

They settled outside the two club lengths she was allowed, so she was able to place it on the path and then take free relief onto the grass. But that was the only good news on No. 9, as Sorenstam came up short of the green, chipped weakly and made double bogey.

Gustafson surged ahead by two shots, only to give them back with consecutive bogeys.

Points has lead at Frys.com Open

LAS VEGAS — D.A. Points trimmed another eight shots off-par to open a two-stroke lead midway through the Frys.com Open.

Points shot a second-round 64 at TPC Summerlin to go with his opening 65 at the par-71 TPC Canyons course. At 14-under 129, he led Todd Fischer, Tom Pernice Jr. and Aaron Baddeley by two strokes. Fischer and Pernice shot 7-under 65 at Summerlin, and Baddeley had a 6-under 65 at the Canyons.

The players alternated between the two courses for the first two days of the tournament, with the final two rounds at Summerlin.

Baddeley was among the last to finish the round, which was delayed an hour and 8 minutes by lightning during a light shower in mid-afternoon.

Play was halted because of darkness with 22 players, none near the lead, still on the course. They will tee off early Saturday morning to complete their second rounds before beginning the third.

Haas has share of lead on Champions Tour

SPRING, Texas — Tom Purtzer, Jay Haas and Dick Mast shot 7-under 65 to share the first-round lead in the Champions Tour's Administrist Small Business Classic.

The leaders shared the day with Arnold Palmer, the 77-year-old star who announced after the round that he would no longer play competitive golf.

Palmer hit two balls into the water on the fourth hole Friday then said he was withdrawing because of a sore lower back. He continued playing with his threesome of Lee Trevino and John Mahaffey but didn't keep score the rest of the round.

Bruce Lietzke and Dave Eichelberger opened with 67s on the Augusta Pines course, and Curtis Strange, Dana Quigley, Tom Jenkins and Brad Bryant had 68s.

Goosen in front at China Masters

SANYA, China — Defending champion Retief Goosen shot a 7-under 65 to take a three-stroke lead over Michael Campbell and Lu Wen-tch in the China Masters.

Goosen, the two-time U.S. Open winner, had a 15-under 129 total. Campbell, the 2005 U.S. Open champion, shot a 68, and Lu had a 69.

T.O. and receivers coach 'merely co-workers'

DALLAS (AP) — Terrell Owens is done talking in his position coach.

T.O. said on his radio show Friday that his relationship with Dallas Cowboys receivers coach Todd Haley was ruined by a blowup this week. It began when Owens missed the start of Wednesday's practice because of an upset stomach, and Haley berated him for being late. Owens held his tongue then, but they later argued during a meeting.

The story getting out seems to bother Owens the most, because Haley vowed since training camp that all internal matters would stay behind closed doors. Owens spoke with reporters for 45 minutes Wednesday without ever mentioning any problems with Haley. But the incident was reported by several media outlets Friday before Owens gave his side of the story later on his weekly show.

From now on, T.O. said, "there will be nothing else, no more dialogue" between him and Haley.

"There will be no more friendly nothing, because I don't trust anybody like that," Owens said. "I will go out and practice hard. I will respect him as a coach, and he should respect me as a player."

Seahawks' Engram out with thyroid condition

KIRKLAND, Wash. (AP) — Seahawks receiver Bobby Engram will miss Sunday's battle for the NFC West lead at St. Louis with a thyroid condition and will remain out indefinitely.

Engram, Seattle's leading receiver last season, has 18 receptions in four games this year. He was at home resting for the third consecutive practice day on Friday. He previously had been listed as questionable for Sunday.

Coach Mike Holmgren said tests revealed the 11-year veteran has a thyroid condition that is causing an accelerated heart rate and fatigue. The 33-year-old Engram will have more tests in about a week.

"He feels like he's going a million miles an hour," Holmgren said. "So he kind of has to slow that down just a little bit. And he has no energy just."

"He's taking it easy this week. He's on medicine, getting his strength back. He's feeling better, but I don't even want him coming into (the team) building."

Holmgren said team doctors still do not know whether Engram's condition is being caused by a virus or perhaps by Graves' Disease — a treatable autoimmune condition in which antibodies the body uses to fight disease begin attacking the body itself and cause the thyroid to produce an excess amount of hormones.

Holmgren stressed the Seahawks believe they have the condition under control and that Engram should be back soon.

yards in a loss to Philadelphia on Sunday. It was a key division game for the Cowboys and a personal revenge game for Owens after the Eagles dumped him midway through last season.

Wandals aim for 3-0 start in WAC

By Grant Joki
Times-News correspondent

MOSCOW — Fans of the University of Idaho Vandals have reason to feel optimistic this week. For the first time since Nov. 11, 2000, the Idaho football team is at the 500 mark. Last Saturday's 28-20 win over the No. 1 offensive team in the nation, New Mexico State, gave the Vandals back-to-back wins for the first time since 2003.

And with two Western Athletic Conference wins under their belt, others are starting to take notice. Of course, realists recognize Idaho's wins thus far have come against teams projected at the bottom of the WAC.

"We have six games left against real, real difficult opponents and all we can do as a football team is try to find a way to win the next one."

— Idaho head coach Dennis Erickson

Idaho at La. Tech

When: Today, 5 p.m. MDT
Radio: 1310 AM; TV: None

Today's game at Louisiana Tech will provide a better measuring stick for the Vandals.

"We're just going to try to win our fourth game," said Dennis Erickson when asked if the Vandals win streak had changed any goals for the season. "We've been able to win two (WAC) football games and that is the extent of it. We have six games left against real, real difficult opponents and all we can do as a football team is try to find a way to win the next one and see what happens."

The Vandals held the Aggies offense to a season-low of 373 yards.

New Mexico State coach Hal Mumme said Erickson is turning Idaho into "a force to contend with."

"They're playing very well right now," Mumme added.

As for today's game, the Idaho Vandals are injury-plagued after a brutal nonconference slate and the topseed loss at Boise State. Tech will play out starters at nose guard and safety. "We are banged up," said Bicknell. "We've played some physical defenses and are being a little bit. We're not matching up physically with people."

Bicknell, whose team beat Idaho 41-38 in Moscow last year, is concerned with Idaho's line game against defenses and are being a little bit. "We're not matching up physically with people."

But Erickson acknowledges his players' rise in confidence. "I think that they bought in from the beginning," he said. "I mean anytime you sit up there as a coach and you try to sell what you have and you have success in those things, obviously it gives them a little more confidence in what they're doing and it's a lot more fun at practice when you win."

Bicknell, whose team beat Idaho 41-38 in Moscow last year, is concerned with Idaho's line game against defenses and are being a little bit. "We're not matching up physically with people."

The Bulldogs found the going extremely hard last Saturday in Boise. The 20th-ranked Broncos continued their offensive prowess with a 55-14 romp in both teams' WAC opener. Bicknell sees Idaho as a team on the rise and credits Erickson for the recent Vandals surge.

"I'll tell you what... they're a much, much improved football team," said Bicknell. "Their quarterback, I loved him last year. He's doing a great job this year and I feel he's one of the better guys in the conference. They have great running backs, one big, strong physical back."

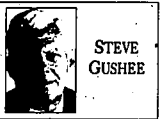

Notes: Idaho is the homecoming guest for four WAC teams this season and that fact has Erickson's wit and humor hitting on all cylinders. "We are going to get dam good at judging parades, courts and flosses. You know what it means when you are the homecoming opponent, don't you? The Vandals are three-point underdogs today... Tech's Joe Aillet Stadium... (30,600) feel good on the Vandals' feet. The grass has been removed and Sprinturf has been laid down. Sprinturf is the surface on the Vandals practice field... Erickson knows Jack Bicknell from the days when Erickson was at Miami and Bicknell at Boston College... Erickson has never coached against Louisiana Tech... Sports Illustrated currently ranks Idaho as the nation's No. 91 team and Louisiana Tech as No. 92... Linebacker David Vobora continues to lead the nation in solo tackles at 8.7 per game. He is ranked No. 2 in the nation in total tackles at 12.7... Cornerback Stanley Francis ranks fourth in the nation in interceptions with five.

That's the best a team has prepared for us all season," said the Aggies Chris Williams, who had one touchdown and 260 all-purpose yards against the Vandals. "They knew what we were doing and they were ready."

Christians are vacating the land of Christ

The forgotten faith of the Middle East may be headed for extinction in the region. Caught in the midst of Islam's internecine struggle and the politics of the great powers, Christians are voting with their feet and leaving in droves. No one seems to care.

The Iraq war is one reason for the exodus. The Israeli-Hezbollah spat is another. Many Christians in the West Bank's occupied territories have long since departed. Unless that trend is reversed, virtually no Christians will remain in the land of Christ's birth.

STEVE GUSHEE

Since the invasion of Iraq in 2003, more than 600,000 Iraqi Christians, half the prewar Christian population, have emigrated, according to a sad report in America, the Jesuit weekly magazine. There have been Christians in Iraq since the second century.

The new Iraqi constitution demands religious tolerance, but chaos and Muslim infighting have nullified that promise.

In Lebanon, an obviously unintended consequence of the Israeli incursions has been to increase the popularity and authority of Hezbollah, the militant Shiite Muslim shadow government in that ancient country.

Hezbollah's dream of making Lebanon a militant Islamic state endangers the country's modest experiment in religious toleration among Christians, Muslims and Druze, according to America. Druze is an offshoot of Islam influenced in the 10th century by Greek philosophy and Christianity.

Lebanon is an officially recognized religion in Lebanon.

There are an estimated 10 million to 14 million Christians in the region, although the numbers are notoriously unreliable. Most Christians, between 6 million and 10 million, live in Egypt as Coptic Christians under duress from the Muslim majority. Lebanon may have a million and a half Christians, nearly a half of the population. Christianity's demise there will be catastrophic. Other sites in the area, including the Holy Land, have only taken Christian communities.

An Arab Christian is almost an oxymoron to many in the West, since Arab and Muslim have become erroneously interchangeable in the media and in politics. Arabs, however, were present at Pentecost 50 days after the resurrection of Jesus and were among the very first followers of the risen Christ, according to the book of Acts (Acts 2).

The editors of America suggest several optimistic remedies to the crisis, but all depend on peace in the area. That is unlikely. The result may be that Christianity is doomed in the place of its birth.

Shoua Yue, 67, waits on the opposite side of an East Anchorage, Alaska, mobile home as some of her grandchildren are given a religious lesson by Mormon missionary Douglas Bennon. Yue has not converted to Mormonism. She says she wants to have her soul reunited with her husband after death. If he dies first, she has to practice the old ways so she can call his spirit back with the family, she says.

Exiled Hmong take refuge in Mormonism

"A lot of people think converting to Christianity is the way you become a new people."

— Tom Lee, who converted to Mormonism in April

By Julia O'Malley
Anchorage Daily News

MULDOON, Alaska — Douglas Bennon, a 20-year-old Mormon missionary with a buttery complexion and jelled hair, rides in an immaculate silver Mercury Sable through the Rangeview Mobile Home Park to where the bumpy street narrows and the park takes on the feel of somewhere else.

It's just after dinner time. Fish sauce and the starchy aroma of bubbling rice sweeten the air. Vegetables grow in place of grass in plywood-fenced backyards. As Bennon's car pulls to a stop, children drop their ball in the street.

"Wassup, Elder Bennon?" one calls as he gets out of the car.

Standing on the soft mud in his suit and tie, Bennon slips high-fives all around.

Missionaries have always loved Alaska. Pioneer Protestants and Roman Catholics flocked here 100 years ago to convert the indigenous people to Christianity. Now the migration is in the opposite direction. Mormon missionaries who live here are welcoming non-Christian newcomers to their flock.

In Anchorage's fast-growing Hmong community, Hmong speakers such as Bennon, a Utah-reared young man on loan from Brigham Young University, play a central role in helping immigrants, many newly arrived from years in Thai refugee camps, to learn about American culture.

Though there are efforts by other groups, the Mormons from The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints sponsor the largest outreach into one of the city's most needy and isolated immigrant groups, literally going door to door.

The Hmong community has at least quadrupled since detailed census information came out in 2000, from about 300 to approximately 1,200.

Community leaders' estimates are closer to 2,000. About 700 Hmong students attend Anchorage schools.

Hmong in Anchorage are growing the same way other immigrant communities grow: An adventurous few settle here and extended families follow.

Mormon leaders say roughly 300 people are involved in some way with their church. About 100 are part of a newly established Hmong congregation that meets Sundays at the Baxter Chapel, an LDS church across from Cheney Lake in East Anchorage. In 2000, almost every Hmong person in Anchorage was living below the poverty level, according to census estimates. An average of seven people lived in each home, nearly all of them rental units. The median household income was $25,500 — $30,000 below the city median. Only 13 of 203 people over 25 had a bachelor's degree. Everyone spoke a language other than English.

The Mormons support hundreds of these families with donated clothes, furniture, food, employment assistance, spiritual guidance and friendship. Missionaries are candid that their goal is to convert the Hmong, though they say they visit and provide assistance to many who may not convert.

Hmong with LDS ties practice an array of spiritual traditions. Most households are split, with younger people choosing to convert while older relatives remain loyal to the old ways. Many blend the old with the new, attending church events and welcoming missionaries into their homes while calling in a shaman to tend the sick and tacking metallic "spirit paper" on the walls to ward off evil spirits.

For the young and converted, taking on Mormon beliefs is often bundled up with a desire to fit into American society, and to succeed.

"In America, there is no way we can survive with the old culture; our culture has run to the end," said Tom Lee, who converted in April, several years after he encountered missionaries in his Palmer yard while building a chicken coop. "A lot of people think converting to Christianity is the way you become a new people."

Bennon, accompanied by a church chaperone, knocks on the metal door of a mobile home in East Anchorage. Mitchell Her, 6, peeks out, holding Kevin, a messy-faced baby, on her tiny hip. She grins and moves out in the way. Bennon slips off his shoes, sticks his head in the door and gives a cheerful hello that sounds like "Nyah-zhong!"

Nine people — four adults and five children — live in the two-bedroom, double-wide. Music plays from the television. Plastic bags of donated clothes sit open along the walls. As is common practice when missionaries visit, grandmother Shoua Yue, 67, sets out two folding chairs. Everyone else sits on the floor, which is partially covered with woven mats.

Until he was transferred to Fairbanks last month, Bennon and a companion missionary or a chaperone spent most evenings making calls like this on Hmong in trailers and crowded, lower-end homes in Mountain View and Muldoon.

Bennon picked up basic Hmong from another missionary over the course of six weeks. He has an uncommon gift for the language, in which words have different meanings depending on the tone used to pronounce them. People at church say it's because he has a musical ear — he plays half a dozen instruments and sings hymns in both Hmong and English in a fitting tenor. In his bag, he carries translated versions of the Book of Mormon, the Bible and hymnals, though many of the Hmong he visits can neither read nor write their language.

Bennon functions at once as a spiritual adviser, a counselor, a friend and a social worker. In a given night, he may drink a bowl of spiky noodle soup with a family, arrange the drop-off of a used bunk bed, lead a living-room charades' tournament, give advice on where to find work, and explain to a circle of children the idea of resurrection using a handful of laminated, crayon-colored characters spread across the floor.

"It's a lot about building a relationship of trust with the family," he said one night on the way back to the church on Baxter Road. "Once you have the family's trust, you can get a lot further."

Often Bennon explains why he is there by putting his hand on his chest and saying, "I love you guys a lot."

Mormons say polygamy news paints them with wrong brush

The Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — David Winters braces himself for a sarcastic retort when he tells someone he's Mormon.

"About half the people make jokes about how many wives we have," said Winters, editor of LDS Today, a Web site that compiles news stories about The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. "There's definitely a quick association."

Most of the time, it doesn't bother Winters, who lives in Atlanta and works as a manager at Coca-Cola.

But his concern grew with headlines about the hunt for Warren Jeffs, leader of a sect that practices polygamy. A TV program put Jeffs' picture over the image of the Mormon temple in Salt Lake City.

"An image like that creates a mental association between polygamy and the church that is both grossly inaccurate and very tough to erase," Winters said.

Jeffs, 50, is president of the Fundamentalist Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, one of several polygamy sects that practice polygamy and claim Mormon roots. Utah and Arizona have charged him with crimes related to arranging marriages between teenagers and older men.

Jeffs' arrest in August brought more headlines and frustration as some news outlets wrongly stated that Jeffs was charged with the mainstream Mormon church, Winters said.

"In some ways we feel it's tarnishing who we are and what we stand for," he said. And the association with polygamy seems to extend beyond Mormons to Utah in general. At the Sept. 2 football game in Pasadena, Calif., between the University of Utah and UCLA, a group of pig-tailed Bruins fans broke into a teasing chant as some Utah fans walked by.

"They were chanting 'Warren Jeffs, Warren Jeffs' over and over again," said J.B. Richards, a Salt Lake City mortgage broker who was at the game.

Richards laughed, but said as a Mormon he's buggy by the stereotype. He also doubts any polygamist taunts would be hurled at fans from an Arizona team, even though many from Jeffs' FLDS church live in that state.

"Utah is tied to it that much more," Richards said. "Mormons don't dispute that polygamy is part of church history, but by putting his hand on his chest and saying, 'I love you guys a lot,'"

But the church disavowed the practice in 1890, and in the early 1900s began excommunicating members found to be still practicing plural marriage.

Republicans losing their hold on evangelicals

The Washington Post

ANOKA, Minn. — Lynn Sunde, an evangelical Christian, is considering what for her is a radical step. Come November, she may vote for a Democrat for Congress.

Sunde, 35, manages a coffee shop and attends a non-denominational Bible church. "You're never going to agree with one party on everything so for me the key has always been the religion issues — abortion, the marriage amendment" to ban same-sex unions, she said.

That means she consistently votes Republican. But she said she is starting to worry about the course of the Iraq war, and she finds the Internet messages from her neighbor, Mark Foley, R-Fla., to teen-age boys "pretty sickening." When she goes to the voting booth this time, she said, "I'm going to vote twice... I'm not going to vote party line as much as to vote issues."

Even a small shift in the loyalty of conservative Christian voters such as Sundede could spell trouble for the GOP this fall. In 2004, white evangelical or born-again Christians made up a quarter of the electorate, and 78 percent of them voted Republican, according to exit polls.

But some pollsters believe that evangelical support for the GOP peaked two years ago and that what has been called the "God gap" in politics is shrinking.

A nationwide poll of 1,500 registered voters released Thursday by the nonpartisan Pew Research Center found that 57 percent of white evangelicals are inclined to vote for Republican congressional candidates in the midterm elections, a 21-point drop in support among this critical part of the GOP base.

Even before the Foley scandal, the portion of white evangelicals with a "favorable" impression of the Republican Party had fallen sharply this year, from 63 percent to 54 percent, according to Pew polls.

In the latest survey, taken in the last 10 days of September and the first four days of October, the percentage of evangelicals who think that Republicans have become "in a more honest and ethical way" than Democrats has plunged to 42 percent, from 55 percent at the start of the year.

Here in Minnesota's conservative 6th Congressional District, the loosening of the GOP's hold on religious voters is helping Patty Wetterling, an anti-war Democrat, run an unexpectedly close race against Republican state Sen. Michele M. Bachmann, who has made opposition to abortion and same-sex marriage her signature issues.

This week, Wetterling became the first Democrat in the country to air a television advertisement about the Foley scandal.

"It shocks the conscience. Congressional leaders have admitted covering up the predatory behavior of a congressman..." the commercial said, adding that Wetterling is "demanding a criminal investigation and the immediate expulsion of any congressman involved in this crime and cover-up."

Wetterling is best known as an advocate for missing children. Her 11-year-old son, Jacob, was abducted in 1989 and never found. The uproar over Foley's sexual correspondence with teen-age employees of Congress has played into her political strength.

"This is something we all watched with churches years ago, where they didn't do anything. Congress has no excuse — they know better," she said in a telephone interview.

The incumbent Rep. Mark Kennedy (R), is vacating his seat to run for the Senate. The national GOP has spared no effort to bolster Bachmann. President Bush, Vice President Dick Cheney, political strategist Karl Rove, House Speaker J. Dennis Hastert, R-Ill., and Commerce Secretary Carlos M. Gutierrez all have been out to campaign for her.

Backer for married Catholic clergy finds himself shunned

The Associated Press

It would seem that Roman Catholics challenging the ban on married priests have found a leader in Archbishop Emmanuel Milingo.

He's defiantly appeared with his bride from a 2001 wedding where hundreds of couples tied the knot. He stood his ground last month after being excommunicated for installing four married men as bishops.

But the 75-year-old cleric from Zambia floundered more shunned than celebrated, even by his ideological allies.

Many of the established movements pushing for optional celibacy are keeping a cautious distance. Milingo's flamboyant style and unusual associations — including the Rev. Sun Myung Moon — are simply too edgy for those trying to work within the system to alter centuries-old church views on marriage and the priesthood.

It's another example of how head-on defiance of the Vatican — whether the issue is openly gay clergy or ordaining transgender women — can attract widespread attention but often winds up putting anti-status quo forces on the fringe of the debate.

The "married priest" groups, led by American Catholics, mostly favor a different strategy: seeking to avoid direct clashes with Rome. Instead, they believe time is on their side.

They predict the Vatican may be forced in coming decades to seriously consider married clergy because of pressures including declining vocations and more tolerant views from the next generation of bishops.

"The general feeling is that Milingo is a bit 'out there' for us. Do we really want to tie our future to a loose cannon?" said Bob Morycka, who served for nearly two decades as a Chicago-area priest before being expelled to marry in 1998. He now helps lead a group known as Weore — the Old English word for "work" — that includes nearly 2,000 men who were ordained priests and later wed.

"People have shied away from Milingo for the same reason they shy away from people calling for schisms or those hanging out a shingle and starting a breakaway church," he said. "Yes, we are dissent, but we still remain faithful and loyal to the church."

Such a straddle is possible because priestly celibacy is long-held practice but not immutable doctrine.

In early Christianity, there was no formal ban on marriage for clergy. The Bible mentions St. Peter's mother-in-law and many scholars suggest other apostles had wives — as well as at least some popes such as the 9th century Hadrian II.

In the early Middle Ages, however, movements for celibacy gained momentum and it became a requirement by the 12th century.

Survey: College professors more religious than commonly believed

BOSTON (AP) — Contrary to stereotype, most college professors are not atheists or agnostics, according to new research.

In fact, only about one-quarter of professors deny God exists or claim it is impossible to know, according to survey results analyzed by sociologists Neil Gross of Harvard University and Solon Simmons of George Mason University. The rest say they believe in God at least part of the time, or at least in some kind of higher power.

College professors are less religious than the general population, the authors report. For example, about 40 percent of professors frequently attend religious services, compared to 47 percent for the general population.

But the authors say religious commitment levels are higher than indicated by previous surveys, which did not to include professors at community colleges.

—Community college professors are more religious than those in elite, doctoral universities. But even at the elite universities, a majority of professors are neither atheist or agnostic, and 20 percent say they have no doubt God exists.

Indiana nun who bucked bishop to become the first U.S. saint in 6 years

Lt. Commander John Dickens, a Navy chaplain, does not mention Jesus Christ in prayer during events that non-Christian Marines and sailors are required to attend. Otherwise, he says, "You may wind up doing greater harm in the name of religion than good."

TERRE HAUTE, Ind. (AP) — An Indiana nun once banished from her congregation by a bishop will be proclaimed a saint on Sunday, providing a model of virtuous life to America's Roman Catholics — even if they find themselves at odds with church leaders.

Pope Benedict XVI will canonize Blessed Mother Theodore Guerin as the first new U.S. saint in six years, a span marked in this country by the scandal over the sexual abuse of minors by clergy.

The pontiff also will canonize a Mexican bishop and two Italians who founded religious orders.

The celebration of a new saint offers a respite from the lawsuits and settlements that have dominated much of the discussion of the U.S. church in recent years, and Guerin's life story can inspire those struggling in their own faith, said members of the religious order she founded, the Sisters of Providence of St. Mary-of-the-Woods.

The bishop here in Vincennes was impossible to work with, yet she always kept her faith. She held on to it," said Sister Marcia Speth, one of the order's leaders. "In that way, she witnesses to us how to be today in an imperfect, flawed, sinful church."

In that way, she is like many saints who found themselves being persecuted while alive, only to be

Sisters of Providence make their way to the casket of Mother Theodore Guerin at the front of the Church of the Immaculate Conception during a ceremony earlier this month at St. Mary-of-the-Woods, Ind. The remains of 19th century Roman Catholic nun, who Pope Benedict XVI plans to canonize this month, will be moved to a temporary shrine about ground just outside Terre Haute from a grave in the floor of a nearby church.

acclaimed as saints after their deaths, said the Rev. Richard McBrien, a theologian at the University of Notre Dame and the author of the 2001 book "Lives of the Saints."

"So many leading figures who had tussled with their bishop or other high-ranking ecclesiastical officials were later rehabilitated. History remembers them, but not the officials who gave them a difficult time," McBrien said. "I dare say that Mother Guerin, as a soon-to-be-canonized saint, will achieve an elevated status that will forever elude the bishop who dismissed her."

When Guerin and fellow sisters stepped off the stage-coach at St. Mary-of-the-Woods, only a simple church in a dense forest awaited them. They boarded with a local family until acquiring a small cabin that was so cold their bread froze. They faced anti-Catholic prejudice in frontier western Indiana.

Guerin raised money and built an academy for girls billed as the oldest Roman Catholic college for women in the U.S. It's known today as St. Mary-of-the-Woods College. The sisters also founded schools across Indiana. Today the order has 465 sisters, with 10 women currently in formation to become nuns.

Guerin, who died in 1856 at the age of 57, remains a role model for women at the college today, said Samantha Dunn, a 19-year-old sophomore from Morgantown, Ind., who is traveling with other students to the Vatican for Sunday's canonization.

"She wants us to be strong women, stand up for ourselves and make our own way in life," Dunn said.

Guerin will become the eighth U.S. saint and the first one canonized since Sister Katherine Drexel in October 2000.

A little more than a year after Drexel's canonization, the scandal over the sex abuse by Catholic priests erupted in the Archdiocese of Boston and spread across the country. Since then, hundreds of millions of dollars in settlements have been paid out, and bishops' popularity has waned, despite reform measures.

Sister Marie Kevin Tighe, who promoted Guerin's cause for sainthood for the order, said she hopes the canonization will refocus the attention of Catholics and non-Catholics alike on holiness.

"I think every time it happens, it is an impetus for the rest of us," Tighe said. "God did not create just some people to be special. We are all on earth on a faith journey to heaven."

Chaplains divided over speech issue

Los Angeles Times

When Lt. Commander John Dickens, a Navy chaplain at Camp Pendleton in California, was assigned to offer a prayer at a change of command ceremony recently, he knew the parameters of his invocation.

He asked for God's blessing on the outgoing Marine officer and for God's help in providing guidance to the new battalion commander.

But Dickens, a United Methodist chaplain who recently served in Iraq, was careful not to mention Jesus Christ the way he frequently does during his Sunday services for Protestant troops.

"His goal, he said, was to lend a spiritual tone to the otherwise secular occasion, without alienating non-Christian Marines and sailors who were required to attend.

"When you begin to pray in a way that shows a clear affinity to a faith group, that could knock out a lot of people who could otherwise feel included in a prayer that refers to God in a way that all can acknowledge," he explained. "You may wind up doing greater harm in the name of religion than good."

The distinction between his prayer language at public military events and at voluntary church services on base or in the field follows Navy tradition and recent policy.

But those customs are at the heart of a debate about a chaplain's liberty to express his own faith in a secular setting and whether phrases such as "praying in Jesus' name" could offend others.

"Chaplains do not leave behind their First Amendment rights when they put on a uniform."

and cause divisions in the military ranks.

Earlier this year, Navy Secretary Donald C. Winter issued instructions that religious portions of events such as graduations or command changes should be "non-sectarian in nature" and that chaplains must "be willing to function in a pluralistic environment."

Chaplains faced no restraints in "divine services," such as Easter Mass for Catholic sailors or Passover services for Jewish Marines.

Pentagon officials say the rules, and similar recent ones in the Air Force, simply reinforced long-standing tradition, albeit in more detailed language.

But the rules triggered strong opposition from some House Republicans in Congress and from some religious groups, especially conservative evangelicals.

"Chaplains do not leave behind their First Amendment rights when they put on a uniform," said Richard Land, president of the Southern Baptist Convention's Ethics and Religious Liberty Commission.

American Orthodox leaders form commission on different church traditions

CHICAGO (AP) — Leaders of America's Orthodox Christian churches, meeting jointly for only the third time, agreed to form a pastoral practices commission on "bringing coherence and unity to our expression of Orthodoxy."

But the Standing Conference of the Canonical Orthodox Bishops in the Americas also asserted that Orthodox churches, which began splintering along ethnic lines a century ago, "must respect and honor the legitimate differences that exist within our one Church."

The announcement was made after a four-day meeting in Chicago that ended Oct. 6. About 30 Orthodox leaders attended to discuss their joint mission and humanitarian programs.

The American Orthodox are split among more than a dozen separate jurisdictions, or church groups, many with membership reaching no higher than the tens of thousands. Some Orthodox lay people and clergy have been pushing for a merger, arguing that pooling resources would make Orthodoxy stronger and more attractive to newcomers.

HOROSCOPE Ierakine Saunders

IF OCT. 14 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: With gentle and whimsical Neptune swinging into alignment with your part of the cosmos this year, you can expect to become more attuned to celestial rhythms. Since you will find more intuitive and sensitive toward others, you are likely to find peace and contentment. Keep your nose to the grindstone in January and February when big demands may be made, but big rewards for your efforts could materialize, as well. This is a great year to improve your health, and for making strides through imagination and creativity. Concentrate on developing your artistic or spiritual side during March, April and July. ARIES (March 21-April 19): If you adopt a defensive posture, someone is more likely to attack. Dust off those microscopic chips on your shoulder and spend time with friends. TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Steer clear of the moonman. Do the unexpected and delight an audience. Enjoy being foot-loose and free with a new companion. Test your wings with a new pastime or hobby. GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Circulate. You are like the ceiling fan that wafers a breath of fresh air into stale surroundings. Visit your friends, book a table at the newest restaurant, or peruse antique malls or swap meets. CANCER (June 21-July 21): Second thoughts might not be necessary. Your home might be the center of social activity, so you don't need to agonize over what to wear or serve. Be spontaneous to be satisfied. LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Hiding away in a secluded nest satisfies your needs temporarily, but even a hermit needs human contact or a change of scene. Friends might pop up on your doorstep. VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Impulse buying could be the bane of your existence. Something you purchase might go on sale next week. Be sure to keep register receipts as what actualizes your turn you off tomorrow. LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Fly by the seat of your pants. Dive right into new experiences, seek unusual surroundings, and don't expect anything to be humdrum and ordinary. Everybody wants to be your best friend. SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Get out and about. Plan a shopping expedition or a trip to the zoo. Your special someone might have a few surprises up his or her sleeve. Remain unfettered by worries or responsibilities today. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Routines might be disrupted by a phone call or a request. Take in stride whatever comes. Add your own alchemy and turn a mistake into a triumph. CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Meet something outrageous as a conversational piece. Take some extra money along and spend it on a one-of-a-kind experience. Ride a Ferris wheel or buy a lottery ticket. AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): The best fun may beg you to buy it. Don't become too enamored of a sudden craze or let fleeting popularity go to your head. Measure the value of relationships, as well as possessions, by the test of time. PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Someone might think you walk on water. New admirers may quickly disappear into the woodwork or you could hit the jackpot by missing what turns out to be a loyal and trustworthy friend.

Wife who sleeps alone is trying to figure out why

DEAR ABBY: Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: Is it OK for two brothers (in the range of 40 years old) to sleep in the same bed? My husband says he is very close to his family. I sleep alone in our bed almost every night because my husband falls asleep on the couch a lot watching TV. He and his brother were watching a ball game together the other night in his brother's room. (Unfortunately, he lives with us almost year-round.) They were on the bed and fell asleep there.

unusual, and the reason usually isn't that what's on television is so compelling he can't drag himself into the bedroom. You should consult a licensed family therapist pronto. And if your husband won't go with you, go without him.

DEAR ABBY: Occasionally you publish letters from readers discussing what they are grateful for. I have never seen one like mine. I am a woman in my early 50s, married 25 years, with no children.

I am grateful for excellent mental health. Until eight years ago, I suffered from manic depression. Other than my supportive husband, no one knew it. I held a job and, for the most part, functioned much like everyone else day-to-day.

True, I may have lost a job or two because of it. Also true, it was a major factor in our deciding not to have children. I couldn't handle that responsibility when each day was a delicate dance between feeling all right or very sad and anxious.

Because of counseling and anti-depressants, my life is now wonderful. I am writing to urge anyone who thinks he or she might suffer from debilitating depression to seek help. There is nothing to be ashamed of about seeking help for mental illness. People wouldn't feel that way about consulting a doctor for a broken leg or diabetes. Depression can be caused by a chemical imbalance.

I have been blessed with a kind, supportive spouse and a productive life. I wake up each morning grateful to be alive. Life is too short, so I hope your readers will take this letter to heart.

DEAR GRATEFUL: Sometimes the most important words in the English language can be among the most difficult to say. They are, "I need help." And yet, admitting it and reaching out are crucial to healing.

Every time I advise people to discuss emotional problems with their doctor, I am sure to hear from readers telling me they are without insurance or can't afford it. Counseling is available on a sliding fee scale through your county's mental health services, which are listed in the phone directory.

Kangaroo hops onto Austrian highway

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Kangaroo sightings are a bit more common in Australia than Austria, but several people in this Alpine country reported to police that they spotted one hopping along a highway in Tyrol province.

Police said Thursday the marsupial escaped from an enclosure in the village of Volkersdorf two weeks ago. The animal is still at large, they said.

Oddly, the sightings were not the country's first kangaroo-related incident. In March, a kangaroo led police in southern Austria on a chase after it jumped a fence of its cage. A local veterinarian helped capture the animal using a stun gun. That kangaroo belonged to a breeder in Tyrol.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

He and his brother were watching a ball game together the other night in his brother's room. (Unfortunately, he lives with us almost year-round.) They were on the bed and fell asleep there.

I should mention that their mother is very "touchy-feely" with them and often sits next to them, caressing her sons' inner thighs. Where I grew up, this is considered inappropriate behavior. What is wrong with this picture? If I mention anything about this, my husband gets very angry, as he is the "controlling" type.

— FEELING ILL

DEAR FEELING ILL: If your intuition is telling you that "something" is wrong, then you should listen and act upon it. What's clear from your letter is that you're unhappy and unsatisfied in your marriage, with good reason.

For a 40-year-old man to spend almost every night sleeping on the couch instead of with his wife is highly unusual, and the reason usually isn't that what's on television is so compelling he can't drag himself into the bedroom.

You should consult a licensed family therapist pronto. And if your husband won't go with you, go without him.

DEAR ABBY: Occasionally you publish letters from readers discussing what they are grateful for. I have never seen one like mine. I am a woman in my early 50s, married 25 years, with no children.

I am grateful for excellent mental health. Until eight years ago, I suffered from manic depression. Other than my supportive husband, no one knew it. I held a job and, for the most part, functioned much like everyone else day-to-day.

True, I may have lost a job or two because of it. Also, true, it was a major factor in our deciding not to have children. I couldn't handle that responsibility when each day was a delicate dance between feeling all right or very sad and anxious.

Because of counseling and anti-depressants, my life is now wonderful. I am writing to urge anyone who thinks he or she might suffer from debilitating depression to seek help. There is nothing to be ashamed of about seeking help for mental illness. People wouldn't feel that way about consulting a doctor for a broken leg or diabetes. Depression can be caused by a chemical imbalance.

I have been blessed with a kind, supportive spouse and a productive life. I wake up each morning grateful to be alive. Life is too short, so I hope your readers will take this letter to heart.

— GRATEFUL IN ILLINOIS
DEAR GRATEFUL: Sometimes the most important words in the English language can be among the most difficult to say. They are, "I need help." And yet, admitting it and reaching out are crucial to healing.

Every time I advise people to discuss emotional problems with their doctor, I am sure to hear from readers telling me they are without insurance or can't afford it. Counseling is available on a sliding fee scale through your county's mental health services, which are listed in the phone directory.

Teddy Roosevelt's life was saved by his speech on this day in history

This day in history: On Oct. 14, 1912, just minutes after being injured in an assassination attempt, Teddy Roosevelt calmly carried on with a speech in Milwaukee. Afterward, doctors removed the bullet that had lodged in his chest and credited the text of his speech, folded neatly in his breast pocket, with saving his life.

Kangaroo hops onto Austrian highway

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Kangaroo sightings are a bit more common in Australia than Austria, but several people in this Alpine country reported to police that they spotted one hopping along a highway in Tyrol province.

Police said Thursday the marsupial escaped from an enclosure in the village of Volders about two weeks ago. The animal is still at large, they said.

Oddly, the sightings were not the country's first kangaroo-related incident. In March, a kangaroo led police in southern Austria on a chase after it jumped a fence of its cage. A local veterinarian helped capture the animal using a stun gun. That kangaroo belonged to a breeder in Tyrol.

GREGG MIDDLEKAUFF'S QUOTE OF THE DAY
 "You can't just sit there and wait for people to give you that golden dream. You've got to get out there and make it happen for yourself."
 -Gregg Middlekauff

Tigers one win from Series

DETROIT (AP) — From the very first day of spring training, Jim Leyland told his Detroit Tigers — demanded, in fact — to walk with the swagger of World Series champions.
 One more win, and this once-lost franchise will get a chance to play for that golden trophy.
 Kenny Rogers pitched the game of his life for the second straight week while the Tigers backed him with their fists, gloves and legs, beating the Oakland Athletics 3-0 on a frosty Friday to take a 3-0 lead in the AL championship series.
 Pushing aside two decades of frustration and failure, the Tigers made it look like easy, just like the 1984 team that stormed to the title. And long gone was the embarrassment of 2003, when Detroit dropped 119 games.
 "With what we've done now, it feels that season has finally been wiped off the map," third baseman Brandon Inge said.
 Leyland made another lineup hunch pay off as the wild-card Tigers posted their sixth straight playoff victory. On a cold day, the thought that Detroit was on the brink of the World Series sent a chill through the fans packing Comerica Park.
 "That's our goal. That's what we play for," Rogers said. "I can't say enough for the way the guys played behind me."
 The Athletics sense they're up against something special, too.
 "We're running into a better team and they're knocking down everybody in their path," As third baseman Eric Chavez said. "It's not frustrating, they're better than we are."
 Added slugger Frank Thomas: "That's a whole new team over there right now. That's not Detroit Tigers starting pitcher Kenny Rogers reacts after striking out Oakland Athletics' Jay Payton in Game 3 of the American League Championship Series in Detroit on Friday.

 "The team I've been battling for years,"
 "Putting aside temperatures in the low 40s that forced both teams to put flame-throwing blowers in their dugouts, Rogers shut out the Athletics on two mere singles over 7 1-3 innings.
 He drew a thunderous ovation when he left and took off his cap, waved it to the crowd and then spun around for all to see. The fans also got into the act, waving white towels.
 "You could really see the emotion building late in the game," Tigers leadoff man Curtis Granderson said.
 Craig Monroe homered, Placido Polanco delivered two more hits off losing pitcher Rich Harden and Tigers closer Todd Jones finished for his second save of the series.
 The Tigers led 2-0 after the first inning and at this rate, nothing seems able to stop them. Want evidence? Leyland pulled Game 2 star Alexis Gomez, put Omar Infante into his first postseason game and the DH singled and walked.

 "I think it's a matter of having confidence in all your players," Leyland said. "And I think there's a little luck that goes along with it."
 Certainly the Tigers' luck didn't change on Friday the 13th. And, a day after the earliest measured snowfall in the city's history, the weather was no problem, though it helped the game was switched from nighttime to day.
 The As got one last chance Saturday in Game 4, with Dan Haren starting against former Oakland draft pick Jeremy Bonderman. Only once in baseball history has a team rallied from a 0-3 deficit in the postseason, with Boston doing it against the New York Yankees in 2004.
 "For most of the year, the Detroit Tigers were the best in baseball," Athletics general manager Billy Beane said. "They seem to be, at this point, at least in the first three games, playing like that."
 Thomas remained hideous in the series, yet the Big Hurt wasn't the lone Oakland hitter to feel the Big Chill against the 41-year-old Rogers.
 Coming off his first victory in a previously awful playoff career, Rogers reprised his role as an October ace. He blanked the Yankees for 7-3 innings in the first round and the As never did much against him, either.
 Rogers was not nearly as animated as he was in the win over the Yankees. He saved his reaction for the end, thanking the 41,669 fans with a wave of the cap, making sure to salute every corner of the park.

Subs save St. Louis in win

NEW YORK (AP) — Super subs So Taguchi and Scott Spiezo saved St. Louis on a night when Mets closer Billy Wagner wobbled, allowing the Cardinals to head home with a split in the NL championship series.
 Taguchi hit a tiebreaking homer off Billy Wagner leading off a three-inning ninth-inning lifeline. St. Louis to a 9-6 victory Friday night tied the NL championship series at one game apiece.
 NL Cy Award winner Chris Carpenter faltered, but the Cardinals tied the game after trailing 3-0 and 4-2, then came back again in the seventh after falling behind 6-4.
 During the regular season, Taguchi isn't much of a power threat: He homered just twice in 316 at-bats this year. But he's 2-for-2 with a pair of homers in the postseason, also connecting off San Diego's Scott Linebrink in Game 3 of the first round.
 Wagner entered with the score 6-4 in the ninth. Taguchi, 0-for-5 against him in his career, worked the count full and, on the ninth pitch of the at-bat, drove the ball over the left-field wall.
 "Unbelievable. He was all jumping around down there," Spiezo said. "But he's got a flair for the dramatic. He's a little guy, but he's got a lot of power."
 Albert Pujols then singled and scored on a double by Spiezo, whose seventh-inning triple off Guillermo Mota had tied the score. Juan Encarnacion followed with a run-scoring single off Wagner, who had gotten the save in New York's opening 2-0 win Thursday night but was booed when he walked back to the dugout after being removed with two outs.
 Yadier Molina had a two-run double and Jim Edmonds hit a two-run homer for St. Louis, and Josh Kinney got the win by pitching a scoreless eighth — getting Carlos Beltran to ground into an inning-ending double play with two on. Tyler Johnson finished for the save.
 Carlos Delgado drove in four runs with a three-run homer and a solo shot off Carpenter, but John Maine lasted just four innings and while he gave up two hits, each drove in two runs. He walked five and threw 92 pitches — three more than Tom Glavine needed to get through seven shutout innings the night before.
 Carpenter had trouble controlling his curveball and with plate umpire Jim Joyce's tight strike zone, allowing five runs, six hits and four walks in five innings.
 Because of Wednesday's rainout, there is not a travel day. When the series shifts Saturday night to the new Busch Stadium not far from the Mississippi River, Steve Trachsel (15-8) pitches for the Mets against Jeff Suppan (12-7).

 Spiezo, playing because slumping All-Star third baseman Scott Rolen was benched, nearly had a home run in the seventh — but right fielder Shawn Green got his glove above the wall, and the ball ricocheted off the thumb of his glove, then hit the top of the fence and bounced back onto the field.
 Right field umpire Tim Welke got the initial call right and, after Cardinals manager Tony La Russa came onto the field, the umpires held and upheld the decision, which replays showed was correct.
 It was 54 degrees at gametime, down 13 from the opener. Shortstop Jose Reyes wore a black ski cap with a Mets logo during batting practice, and some of the umpires wore gloves during the game.
 Rolen, 1-for-14 in the postseason as he tries to play with a sore left shoulder, was dropped after going hitless in the opener.

Labor law violations hit Wal-Mart to tune of $78 million

By Maryclair Dale
Associated Press Writer

PHILADELPHIA — Wal-Mart Stores Inc. must pay at least $78 million for violating Pennsylvania state labor laws by forcing employees to work through unsafe breaks for whom they received no pay, a jury decided Friday.

Michael Donovan, a lawyer for the plaintiffs, had asked the jury for at least that amount in compensatory damages for what he said were missed or shortened breaks, or time employees worked off the clock.

He will now seek an additional $2 million in damages because the jury found that Wal-Mart acted in bad faith. Common Pleas Court Judge Mark Bernstein is expected to rule on that issue later.

The class-action suit involves 187,000 current and former employees who worked at Wal-Mart and Sam's Clubs in Pennsylvania from March 1992 through May 2005. The jury found Thursday that the nation's biggest retailer violated state labor laws.

Wal-Mart attorney Neil S. Manne said the company plans to appeal both the class certification and the jury's findings.

Lead plaintiff Dolores Hummel, who worked at a Sam's Club in Reading from 1992-2002, charged in her suit that she had to work through breaks and after quitting time to meet work demands in the bakery. She said she worked eight to 12 unpaid hours a month, on average, to meet work demands.

After the jury ruled on Friday, Hummel said the lawsuit was necessary "to show how we were treated working at Wal-Mart working off the clock and not getting paid."

The plaintiffs used electronic evidence, such as systems that show when employees are signed on to cash registers and other machines, to help win class certification during several days of hearings last year.

Wal-Mart, which has stores in Terome and Burley and is looking into building a Twin Falls store, had a corporate policy that gives hourly employees in Pennsylvania one paid 15-minute break during a shift of at least three hours and two such breaks, plus an unpaid 30-minute meal break, on a shift of at least six hours.

The changing face of Bankruptcy

Filings slow and paperwork mounts a year after bankruptcy law changes

By Mary Gordon
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The ranks of people seeking to erase their debts have thinned noticeably in the year since the biggest changes in U.S. bankruptcy laws in a quarter-century took effect.

At a public session at the U.S. Trustee's office in Alexandria, Va., on a recent morning only about half the 50 or so chairs were occupied — in a room that used to be jammed with anxious people and their attorneys.

Most were there seeking to file under Chapter 7 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code, which wipes the debt slate clean after certain assets are forfeited. The bankruptcy trustee's red-jacketed files on them land with a thwack on the official table, fattened by new documents required by the landmark bankruptcy law that took effect on Oct. 17, 2005.

After an eight-year campaign by banks, retailers and credit card companies, Congress changed the law to require for the first time an income-based test for measuring a debtor's ability to repay obligations.

Those deemed to have insufficient assets or income can still file a Chapter 7 bankruptcy. But those with income above their state's median income who can pay at least $6,000 over five years are forced into Chapter 13, where a debt repayment plan is ordered.

In Virginia, where the median annual income is $43,000, more cases are ending up in the latter category.

"It's designed to make life miserable for anybody who owes money," says Lawrence Brooke, an attorney in Alexandria, across the Potomac River from Washington. "It's a help-the-banks, squish-the-little-guy law."

Brooke is one of several lawyers in northern Virginia who have abandoned consumer bankruptcy work since the new law took effect. "I won't have anything to do with it," he said, even though it has reduced his income.

Brooke said the paperwork hurdles for debtors to qualify for Chapter 7 have become insurmountable for many, and the workload and aggravation for attorneys have increased.

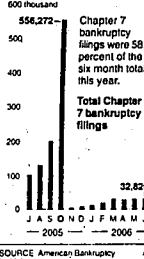

The income test for qualifying for Chapter 7 means more forms for people to give their lawyers: tax returns and pay stubs, and more questions from a bankruptcy trustee in the mandatory public sessions that already had probed into details of a person's mortgage, bills, life insurance, child support obligations, car payments.

"It's a whole different game now," said Gordon Peyton, one of the trustee in Alexandria. "It's much harder to file bankruptcy now."

Numbers tell the story: There were 263,660 personal bankruptcies filed nationwide in the first half of this year, down dramatically from 851,683 in the first six months of 2005 and 809,867 in the same period in 2004, according to the American Bankruptcy Institute, an organization of bankruptcy judges, lawyers and other experts.

Chapter 7 filings accounted for 58.8 percent of this year's first-half total, down from 75.8 percent in the first half of 2005 — while filings under Chapter

Clearing the debt

now, said Gordon Peyton, one of the trustee in Alexandria. "It's much harder to file bankruptcy now."

Numbers tell the story: There were 263,660 personal bankruptcies filed nationwide in the first half of this year, down dramatically from 851,683 in the first six months of 2005 and 809,867 in the same period in 2004, according to the American Bankruptcy Institute, an organization of bankruptcy judges, lawyers and other experts.

Chapter 7 filings accounted for 58.8 percent of this year's first-half total, down from 75.8 percent in the first half of 2005 — while filings under Chapter 13 debt reorganization jumped to 41.1 percent from 24.1 percent a year earlier.

Peyton, who used to preside over three or four of the so-called Section 341 sessions on the Thursdays it was his turn, says he now holds only two. His one-on-one interviews of the people filing, who sit across from him at a table after raising their right hand and being sworn in, can take up to 12 minutes or more — compared with an average 35 seconds or so before the law took effect, he said.

"It's gotten so tricky. There are a lot of pitfalls," said Peyton, a private attorney appointed as a bankruptcy trustee by the Justice Department whose job is to administer a heavy load of cases.

Bankruptcy lawyers say the required changes have meant more work for them, and they are charging clients more for their services. Fees in some cases in northern Virginia have jumped from $750 or $1,000 to $1,500 or more.

In addition, under the new law people seeking bankruptcy protection are required to take credit counseling courses, which they must pay for.

Proponents of the law say it has created a more balanced system that eliminates abuse and provides debt relief at the level at which people truly need it.

More drug plans offering breaks on generics

By Linda A. Johnson
Associated Press writer

THENTON, N.J. — Consumers are suddenly getting a break on the cost of generic drugs as discount retailers and some prescription benefit managers start programs that provide a host of popular medications at very low costs.

In the last month, Wal-Mart stores Inc. and Target Corp. have begun programs at pharmacies in their Florida stores, including Wal-Mart's Sam's Club, offering dozens of generic drugs for $4. Last May, Kmart Holding Corp.'s 1,100 stores began offering generics for $15 for a 90-day supply.

On Thursday, Medco Health Solutions, one of the largest U.S. prescription benefit managers, announced a plan targeting consumers indirectly through small- and mid-sized businesses struggling to offer employees prescription coverage.

Medco, based in Franklin Lakes, will offer its "Generics First" plan through partner health insurers for which it manages prescription claims and shipments from its mail order pharmacies. The plan kicks off this week through the first insurer to sign up, Nationwide Life Insurance Co., said John Driscoll, Medco's group president for new business development.

"While many of the companies were targeting have little or no insurance plan today, they want it or may have had it in the past," Driscoll said. "The biggest and fastest-growing need in the marketplace is for some sort of low-cost prescription plan."

Driscoll said the employers will get Generics First at about half the monthly premium cost for a traditional prescription plan, and their employees will get generic drugs for as little as $10 for a 90-day supply via mail order. The Medco plan covers 818 different medications, more than three times the number offered at Wal-Mart, and offers discounts on brand-name drugs and use of about 55,000 drug stores.

While the discount retailers are looking to boost customer traffic and sales of other products, Medco is aiming to sign up new customers in a market generally overlooked as its competitors focus on plans for corporations and agencies.

"I think plans like this will be attractive to small and midsize employers because Medco is offering both generic and brand-name drugs," said Anthony Wisniewski, head of health care policy at the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

Medco and its competitors have long been pushing generic drugs — which bring a higher profit margin than brand-name ones — as a way for employers to quickly reduce costs. On average, generic drugs cost about 70 percent less than brand-name counterparts.

Business development classes coming up in Twin Falls

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — The Idaho Small Business Development Center is offering a number of classes and workshops this month that would appeal to current and future business owners and entrepreneurs.

A seminar on how to open a franchise business will be held from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m., Wednesday in Room 258 of the Taylor building at the College of Southern Idaho. Cost is $15 per person, which must be paid in advance.

Presenter Liz Beck will discuss what it means to own a franchise business and help students develop a commitment based on their personal attributes.

The seminar will provide the key steps in evaluating franchise opportunities, whether to start from scratch, buy into an existing business, and how to evaluate the kind of business that's right for an individual's needs. Participants will learn how to evaluate what kind of personal and financial risk they're willing to take.

Bolse patent attorney Ken J. Pederson will conduct a workshop, "Patents Demystified," from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. Friday in Room 247 of Student Union building at CSI.

The workshop will provide information on rights to manufacture and market creative innovations. Participants will learn to perform preliminary patent searches, protect inventions, and avoid patent infringement.

The fee is $29 per business, which must be paid in advance. "Help, I Need a Logo," a new class offered by the Idaho Small Business Development Center, will be held from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. Oct. 26 in Room C39 of the Evergreen building at CSI.

Instructor Shannon Gnesa, owner of Desktop By Design in Twin Falls and a graduate of the CSI Small Business incubator, will show workshop participants how to design a logo for their business, logo, letterhead, business cards and newsletters. Gnesa said the class will be taught with the assumption that most small businesses don't have large budgets to create attractive marketing pieces and will instruct how to get the most from small investments.

The cost $39, which must be paid in advance.

Business start-up Boot Camps especially designed for aspiring or current small-business owners will be held in October, November and December in Twin Falls, Burley and Pocatello.

The workshops are designed for those who want to start a small business and don't know where to begin, those who need a business plan and anyone who has questions about owning his or her own business. Personal business "survival kits" of handouts will be provided.

Admission is free. Participants can choose any of the single-session workshops offered. All classes are from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Twin Falls classes will be held Oct. 26, Nov. 9 and 30, and Dec. 6 and 9 in Room C77 of the Evergreen building at the College of Southern Idaho.

Burley classes are set for Nov. 14 and Dec. 12 in the Pomerele Conference Room at Idaho Commerce and Labor, 127 W. Eldo St. N.

The Gooding class will be Nov. 20 at the CSI North Side Center, 202 14th Ave. E. in Gooding.

Pre-registration is required; no walk-in registrations will be allowed because of seating limitations.

For more information or to register for any of the classes above, contact Sherry Rust at 732-6455 or rust@csi.edu.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"He never wants anything but what's right and fair, only when you come to settle what's right and fair, it's everything that he wants and nothing that he want."

— Thomas Hughes

Roy Hughes latest book, "Card by Card" (details at <http://www.masterpointpress.com/declarer/cardbycard.html>), includes this deal from the 1989 Bermuda Bowl semifinals in Perth, Australia.

In six clubs imagine you win dummy's spade ace, lead a club to your king as both follow, and lead a club back, West playing the jack. At the table both players in the semifinal between the United States and Australia won the ace, as East showed out. At one table, the declarer went down now. At the other, he unblocked dummy's king-queen of hearts and crossed to the 10 of diamonds.

The 10 of diamonds now needs to find West with at least one more red card, and a second diamond is far likelier than a third heart. He should lead a diamond to dummy, ruff a spade, and cash the ace of hearts. West does best to throw a spade. Now a heart ruff, spade ruff, and a heart will score dummy's 10 of clubs en passant.

Declarer, however, led the heart ace in the above position. Now all West needed to do was throw his losing diamond, an easy play, but he ruffed the heart ace low, and declarer was once more in a position to claim.

But both declarers had missed the club jack. If they had simply ducked the club jack at trick three, they would have been completely safe unless there was an immediate redsuit ruff available, and that would have been almost impossible. Declarer can ruff a spade, finesse in trumps, and claim 12 tricks.

ANSWER: Although you are a passed hand so that partner will not play you for the earth, it looks wiser to respond one no-trump than to bid two hearts. You would like a sixth heart, better spade support, or another heart intermediate to bid to the two-level voluntarily.
