Cassia County unemployment just 3.2 percent

By Sandy Miller
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Brent Tolman was more than a little surprised Friday when he saw Cassia County's latest unemployment numbers.

"In all the time I've been in Burley, I've never seen them so low," said Tolman, who has managed the Mini-Cassia office of Idaho Commerce and Labor for eight and a half years.

In October, the unemployment rate in Cassia County was just 3.2 percent, the lowest it's been in at least a dozen years, Tolman said. He could only find statistics going back to 1994.

"I expected it to be around 4 percent," Tolman said. "Some good-size businesses have come to the Burley area in the past year, including Dutchmen Manufacturing, Gossner Cheese and Multi-hold Positioning Systems, bringing lots of good-paying jobs with them."

"There's been a lot of activity going on and a lot of jobs created," Tolman said.

Blaine County had the highest unemployment rate — 4.1 percent — in the south-central, eight-county region. That's up slightly from 3.9 percent last month, and down from 4.8 percent in October 2005.

Blaine County had the lowest unemployment rate — 2.3 percent — in the region, down from 2.9 percent last month and 2.5 percent in October 2005.

Statewide, the seasonally adjusted unemployment rate for October dropped back to a record low 3.2 percent, matching the rate in March, according to a news release from Idaho

Attention Deficit Disorder underdiagnosed in girls

By Joshua Palmer
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — She was growing apart from her daughter, but she didn't know why. About two years ago, Melle Harris was spending more time trying to keep her daughter focused, and less time doing the things they used to do together.

It seemed like it would take hours for her daughter, Taylor, to complete a homework assignment. There were no visible signs that Taylor, who is now 13 and an eighth-grader at Hansen Junior High, having problems at school. Her teachers said she was rarely disruptive during class and she always seemed attentive. And the Harris' home was like a page out of Good Housekeeping. Her parents made it a habit of doing homework with their children, and when the kids were not busy with school activities the family would spend time together. But something wasn't right.

"It was when I really felt like we were growing apart that I thought something needed to be done," Harris said. "That was when we started testing to see if she had signs of ADD."

Attention Deficit Disorder, along with Attention Deficit/Hyperactivity Disorder, is one of the most common neurobehavioral disorders among school-age children in the United States. But many girls are not being treated for it simply because they rarely show the signs commonly associated with the disorder.

Police: Philadelphia man met women online, lied, raped them

By Maryclare Dale
Associated Press writer

PHILADELPHIA — He was an online dater's dream: Tall, clean-cut, with a fashionable address and a taste for upscale bars and restaurants.

He said he was a doctor, an astronaut, a spy — though he was really an on-and-off nursing student. And, with woman after woman, he would slip something in their drinks and then rape them, police say.

Jeffrey J. Marsalis, 33, of Philadelphia, is facing trial on nine rape counts involving eight women, while a 10th charge is pending in Sun Valley, Idaho. He met most of the victims here through a popular online dating site, authorities said.

In court this week during Marsalis' preliminary hearing, the women told strikingly similar stories of meeting the smooth-talking Marsalis and then feeling unusually intoxicated after returning from the bathroom or letting him buy a round from the bar.

They said they woke up hours later, back at his apartment after an apparent sexual encounter or even in the middle of intercourse.

"It was like waking up from surgery," one woman said. "My body was there, and I could see what was going on around me, but I couldn't move."

Marsalis' lawyer says the women are suffering from regret after being duped about his accomplishments and dumped after consented sex. "Some of this may be bayer's remorse," defense lawyer Kathleen E. Martin said Thursday.

None of the Philadelphia victims — most of them well-educated professionals — went to police or a hospital afterward, Martin pointed out. Instead, police sought the women out after they seized Marsalis' computer as part of an earlier case.

Marsalis was acquitted of three similar assaults at a trial in Philadelphia in January. Before he could leave the courtroom, however, he was handcuffed by police and accused of the new charges. A judge later denied bail.

TWIN FALLS — A Tuesday night fight in which a teen was stabbed began when three teenagers busted into Dean Shotswell's northeast Twin Falls home to fight one of his sons, the homeowner said Friday.

"I tried to talk him out of it," said 39-year-old Shotswell. "He blew by me into the house."

The names of the alleged assailants and participants are being withheld by the Times-News pending formal charges.

A fight unfolded in Shotswell's house at 765 Altuna Street, across the street from Candy Cane Park, involving 10 teens already in the home and three who arrived in two cars, he said. Shotswell said he and numerous others at the home were injured. One of the three teens who entered his home was stabbed in the skirmish and taken to the hospital.

"They came on my property wanting to beat up one of my kids," he said. "The general story is they came here looking for a fight."

It was a game that saw the Bengals with a chance to win in the fourth quarter despite accumulating less than 100 yards of total offense. Idaho State's offense ranked ninth nationally in points per game going into that contest. But against the Griz, the mangled defense played well while the offense struggled.

Commerce and Labor. The current rate is down one-tenth of a percentage point from last month and four-tenths below the 4 percent rate recorded one year ago.

The October rate continues a historic, 18-month streak of unemployment rates below 4 percent, the news release said. Idaho's unemployment rate also remains below the national rate of 4.4 percent, which decreased from 4.6 percent in September.

The October rate is the lowest for the nation since May 2001.

Idaho's declining October

unemployment appeared to be driven by moderation in the construction industry. Although commercial and heavy construction remained extremely strong, those sectors are less labor intensive than residential construction, which is subsiding from the record levels of 2005.

"We're coming back to more sustainable, reasonable levels in the construction sector," Commerce and Labor Director Roger B. Madsen said in the news release. "We're no longer going a hundred miles an hour in a 50 mile-an-hour zone. We're moving back toward the norm."

"I think there are some children being medicated simply because it just makes them easier to deal with," said Dr. Richard Worst, a child psychiatrist with Magic Valley Regional Medical Center. But what we are finding is that the most common cause of under-diagnosing is typically with girls."

Worst said girls rarely show signs of hyperactivity, which is commonly found in boys who have the disorder, so parents and teachers have difficulties identifying the disorder in girls.

Growing disorder

Children who do not receive treatment for the disorder often struggle in school and other social situations. It is estimated that 3 to 7 percent of school-age children have been diagnosed with the disorder. That means that in a room of 25 to 30 children would have at least one student with ADD.

According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, 63 percent of children in Idaho are diagnosed with the disorder. But the disorder is also one of the most poorly defined. Parents and teachers rarely know what symptoms to look for, and some believe the disorder is nothing more than an excuse for an energetic child or an unruly student.

But it can affect a child who does not receive treatment for the disorder can be devastating.

In 2000, the CDC created an agenda to address the disorder because it found that ADD was not only contributing to poor class performance, but also drop-out rates, crime and unemployment.

"The majority of people with ADHD are not criminals," Worst said. "But if they're not treated, they do have an increased risk of becoming substance abusers and participating in criminal behavior as an adult."

Worst said it's not that girls with the disorder are less intelligent — it's just that they cannot prevent their thoughts from wandering.

Attention to academics

But problems in girls usually are not apparent until their academic performance begins to suffer.

"I think I just felt like I couldn't do the work that other kids in my class were doing," Taylor said. "I would listen to my teacher, but I would start thinking about other things, and when they called on me in class I wouldn't really know what to say, so I was kind of embarrassed."

Schools accommodate students with the disorder, but in districts such as Twin Falls, the over-crowding makes it difficult to do what is needed. If a student is diagnosed with the disorder, the schools provide assistance such as longer time on tests, tutoring and a seat toward the front of the classroom. But as schools place more students into smaller classrooms for longer periods of time, even hearing the teacher can be a challenge.

"We were concerned about Taylor because she was going to go to the junior high, and there are more students in the classes," Harris said. "We were fortunate that she went to Hansen, because the classes are still smaller there, but we knew it would be a challenge."

Taylor's mom said she thought the disorder was something the family could resolve, and she admits that she was hesitant to use medication to help Taylor.

Reluctance for Ritalin

As the number of children diagnosed with ADD began to climb in the 1990s, so did the number of prescriptions for drugs such as Ritalin, Adderall and Methylphenidate. But most parents still hesitate to medicate their child because they hear stories about children abusing the drugs.

The U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration classifies the drugs as Schedule II controlled substances — the same classification as cocaine or methamphetamine. However, doctors have lobbied to remove the drug from the list because the drugs "are as addictive as Tylenol."

However, pharmaceutical companies recently released drugs, such as Strattera, that are not stimulants and are not classified as controlled substances.

Worst said studies indicate that children with ADD who use the drugs are actually less likely to abuse drugs or alcohol.

"It is interesting that we treat people with a controlled substance in order to prevent them from being substance abusers," he said. "But even as these children grow older, more than one-third of them will usually stop taking the medication because they don't need it any longer."

Harris said she has been working with Taylor to teach her how to be proactive about working with ADD. Taylor currently takes Strattera during the school year, but her mom hopes she will no longer need it once she learns how to live with the disorder.

As for Taylor, she rarely talks about her disorder with other students, but she said she takes the initiative to discreetly make her, environment more focus friendly.

"There was a kid in one of my classes that said he had ADD and a lot of people kind of joked about it," she said. "So I don't really let anybody except a couple of my friends, but I do things like move to another part of the class where I can focus better."

Less than two years after Taylor's grades began to fall, she has managed to not only bring them back up, but she also is enrolled in the advanced math class. She has also become somewhat of a bookworm.

"She used to have a hard time reading, and it really concerned us," Harris said. "I think what I love the most about this change is hearing her say that she actually enjoys reading."

to prove the use of date-rape drugs, because they metabolize before victims are alert enough to get a drug screen.

"If you're not at the hospital within 12 hours after ingestion, the chances are so slim that they'll find anything," said Jennifer Sommers, a county prosecutor in Rochester, N.Y., with a master's degree in toxicology. "Most people don't realize they've been drugged until it's too late."

But a jury could still find him guilty of rape if it decides the women were too impaired to consent to sex.

The outcome may hinge on whether prosecutors can build a circumstantial case by trying all the cases together or whether the defense will try to send the cases, attorneys for both sides said. The lawyers declined to discuss their trial strategy.

Nine women testified during the two-day evidence hearing that concluded Thursday in Philadelphia Municipal Court. One said Marsalis, posing as a doctor, later visited her in a hospital during an unrelated stay. He had a stethoscope around his neck and checked her chart.

Another said she became pregnant from the encounter — and Marsalis went with her when she had an abortion.

"This guy is not shy. He's confident. He's plotting," said Capt. John Darby, head of the ID's sex crimes unit. "He showed IDs to a lot of these women supporting the various roles, positions that he's assuming here. He really put on a hell of a show."

In the pending Idaho case, the woman did go to a hospital the next day, and evidence from Marsalis' apartment was sent to a police lab for testing, police told the Idaho Mountain Express. The alleged assault occurred in October 2005, while Marsalis was awaiting trial in the first Philadelphia case.

"She had experienced sudden loss of memory, impairment inconsistent with the amount of alcohol consumed, blacking out for an extended period of time, waking up feeling something had happened and short flashes of memory about the incident," Sun Valley police said in a news release. "All of those experiences are consistent with having ingested a date-rape-type drug."

The woman worked with Marsalis for the Sun Valley Co.,

which operates the area's ski resort.

Records show Marsalis has moved frequently, having lived in Park City, Utah; Kent, Wash.; Cave Creek, Ariz.; and Broward County, Fla., where he obtained a permit for a concealed weapon.

Darby considers Marsalis no less dangerous than the predator who attacks strangers in an alley.

"Certainly he presented himself as an appealing individual. And that's the danger," he said.

Voting twice

Separate polling places slated for some ballots

By Blair Koch

Times-News correspondent

WENDELL — Voters in Wendell will need to make two steps on Tuesday — once to vote on the city wastewater bond and another to cast their ballots on county and state issues.

"We didn't get our bond information to the county in time to include the issue to vote on at the American Legion Hall," said Mayor Rex Strickland.

Voters in Burley, Rupert and Heyburn face the same situation regarding a vote on an Intermountain Power Plant bond issue.

That means that after Wendell voters cast their ballots at the American Legion they will need to go to City Hall, or vice versa, and vote on the $11.2 million wastewater revenue bond.

"We are a bit concerned that voters won't go to both places," Strickland said. "Voters need to know that it is important to stop at both locations."

Wendell City Clerk Carol Boudreau explained that city residents also need to note that the polling places have different hours of operation.

"The Legion Hall will open from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m., but the City Hall will only be open from noon to 8 p.m.," she said. "We know it is going to be a slight inconvenience but we urge everyone to come in and vote."

In Filer, residents will vote at the Filer Middle School, but will still have to vote on two separate ballots in separate voting booths.

"We will have different stations set up" said City Clerk Shari Hart.

"Voters will decide on county and state issues at one and the city wastewater bond at another station."

Filer voters will also be deciding on a $12.5 million wastewater system revenue bond.

Voters are allowed to register at the polls with proof of address and a photo ID.

Illegal immigrant deported for dealing drugs

By Renee Wells
For the Times-News

RUPERT — A man in the country illegally was sent back to Mexico by 5th District Judge Barry Wood, with a warning that returning to America could result in his spending the rest of his life in prison.

Isui Fuentes, 27, of Burley, was given separate sentences Monday on two counts of delivery of a controlled substance.

The first count netted him a 15- to 20-year sentence and the second resulted in a 20 years to life sentence.

Wood suspended both sentences and put Fuentes on lifetime probation. He was turned over to the Immigration and Naturalization Service with orders that if he ever returned to America, he would be required to serve his sentences.

Fuentes was charged with delivering roughly one gram of methamphetamines to a confidential informant on March 15 and March 20. The delivery took place in Rupert and the case was tried in Blaine County.

Court records indicate the transaction took place at an apartment within 1,000 feet of a school and resulted in an enhanced penalty, which was dropped as part of a plea agreement. Fuentes' wife, Maribel Fuentes, 40, also was charged with delivery of a controlled substance.

She took a confidential informant to the Rupert apartment to make the first purchase under a directive from her husband, who was at a local bar involved in a dart tournament at the time, according to court records.

She was sentenced to 7 to 15 years in the Idaho State Penitentiary, with the court retaining jurisdiction for 180 days.

Others were implicated in the transaction and have court cases pending.

Blue Lakes

Times-News

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls man was reported in critical condition Friday night in the intensive-care unit at Saint Alphonsus Regional Medical Center in Boise.

Doru Contardo, 27, was riding a bicycle west on Cheney Drive at 6 p.m. Thursday, a police spokesman said, when he was hit by a car driven by Doris Hartscock, 75, of Twin Falls. She was driving a 1997 Toyota Camry south on Blue Lakes Boulevard North.

Police said Contardo was not wearing a helmet or reflective clothing, according to witnesses, and did not have a light on his bicycle. He failed to yield to traffic in the intersection of Cheney and Blue Lakes, according to a police report.

Contardo pulled in front of Hartscock's car and was hit, the police said. No citations were issued.

Contardo is the son of Gigi and Tina Contardo of Twin Falls.

Rupert teen to be tried as adult for murder of father

By Renee Wells
For the Times-News

RUPERT — Jurisdiction has been waived on a Rupert teenager who will now be tried as an adult in the murder of his father.

Jason Lopez, 16, of Rupert, appeared in juvenile court Wednesday, where Juvenile Judge Larry R. Duff waived juvenile jurisdiction and bound the youth over to be tried as an adult. He is charged with the first-degree murder of his father, Tomas Nunez Lopez, 39, on Oct. 15, at their home northeast of Rupert.

Officers found Tomas Lopez lying on the floor of a home at 774 E. 400 N., Rupert, after a 911 call about a shooting was received by dispatch. He was pronounced dead at the scene from gunshot wounds to his head and abdomen.

Jason Lopez was arraigned Friday in Magistrate Court as an adult after Duff waived jurisdiction of the case Wednesday.

A preliminary hearing in Magistrate Court has been set for 9 a.m. Nov. 17. Hailey attorney Keith Roark is representing the teenager, according to court officials.

Utah, resort officials talk about ski resort transit.

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A consensus emerged Friday in a brainstorming session on connecting Wasatch Range ski resorts: Water protection must be the first priority.

In a meeting hosted by Gov. Jon Huntsman, government officials, resort managers and environmental advocates seemed to agree any new transit system that draws more visitors shouldn't sacrifice the supply or quality of mountain water crucial to the Salt Lake Valley.

Some familiar divisions also emerged as officials kicked around ideas for a system of road tunnels, cable systems or rail lines connecting Wasatch resorts. Six of the resorts share borders or are close to one another, but some are separated by steep canyons or towering ridges.

At forces skiers going from one resort to another to drive down one canyon and back up another, even though many resorts practically touch one another.

Officials say traffic is heavy in winter on dead-end roads such as Cottonwood Canyon, which holds Brighton and Solitude resorts, and Little Cottonwood Canyon, home of Alta and Snowbird.

Our road has been at capacity for years," Alta Mayor Tom Pollard said. "They're out of control on weekends."

Skiers leaving Alta after a day of skiing need to rush to their cars before 4 p.m., he said. "If you don't leave before 4, you should wait until 6," he said.

Making it easier for skiers to get to one Wasatch resort from another is an idea that's been kicked around for decades.

But for just as long, Salt Lake City has been opposed to any grand interconnect scheme, said Leroy Hooten, the city's utilities chief.

Tunneling into mountains will divert ground water and pollute stream water, he said.

Salt Lake City is worried that linking resorts would make them more popular, drawing more crowds whose water and sanitation needs would sap or pollute the city's water supply.

Friday's discussion also brought out Save Our Canyons, a group that has long opposed any elaborate ski resort links. Its members include backcountry skiers, who don't want competition from lift-assisted skiers for the remaining open areas of high-elevation, moderately sloped terrain prized for deep, stable snow.

Some advocates envision a Euro-style complex of six connected resorts offering 12,000 acres of skiing all on one lift ticket.

But the Wasatch Range is narrow, 25 miles at its widest, and can't absorb as much development as the mountains of Europe, said Salt Lake City attorney Pat Shea, former director of the Bureau of Land Management.

Manstman said he was taking no position on the idea, but he encouraged other to hash out the issues.

Sen. Carlene Walker, R-Cottonwood Heights, said she favored a circular road with tunnels for safety issues.

Bob Young, former mayor of Augusta, Ga., talks about an antique rocking chair that was once owned by Mormon President Brigham Young and one of his wives during a news conference Friday in Salt Lake City.

Descendants donate Brigham Young's rocking chair to church

By Debbie Hummel
Associated Press writer

SALT LAKE CITY — Two great-great-grandsons of Brigham Young formally presented an heirloom rocking chair to the Mormon church Friday at a home where one of Young's many wives likely sat in it to soothe their children.

Brothers Bob and Skip Young said the chair has been cherished by their family, but they felt its historical value would be better appreciated by the church and the people of the city founded by their ancestor.

The Youngs are descendants of Lucy Decker Young, one of the wives of the church president who led members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints to the Salt Lake Valley in 1847. Brigham Young had 27 wives, who bore him 56 children, according to a history on the Web site for Brigham Young University. A nonprofit genealogy Web site sponsored by the LDS church lists 38 wives.

Skip Young said he and his brother were reared as Episcopalians, but he remembers talking to his grandmother, Mildred Ferguson Young, about her "Book of Mormon" and they were always aware of their relationship to the man Mormons consider a prophet.

The Young brothers' father, Ferguson Ferguson Young, had the chair carefully restored in the late 1960s. It had been covered in fabric, hiding the original cane seat and back.

The chair was given to Skip Young by his grandmother. He said the chair is one of the few possessions he has repeatedly taken with him when he's been forced to evacuate his Hilton Head, S.C., home under threat of hurricane.

Skip said it was after he evacuated with the chair for the third time that he told his brother: "You take the chair and enjoy it" and then let's do the right thing.

"It's history to us but its greater history is to the Mormon church and the people of Salt Lake City," Skip Young said.

The brothers delivered the chair to the church about two years ago, said Bob Young, who is the former mayor of Augusta, Ga., and now the regional director for the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development in Atlanta.

Scheduling problems delayed the presentation ceremony until Friday, he said. His family has also donated a tablecloth and mustard dish to the church.

"I'm going to see if it's on the table," Bob Young said. The brothers were taken on a tour of the Beehive and Lion houses, Brigham Young's homes that are now museums located near the church headquarters.

"Putting with a family heirloom is a very generous gift on your part," said Marlin K. Jensen, church historian. The chair will be kept in the Beehive or Lion houses where it was most likely used by Lucy Decker Young, he said. Lucy Decker and Brigham Young had seven children, including the Young brothers' ancestor, Ernest Irving Young.

The Young brothers were presented with a book about Brigham Young and his family history compiled by a church employee.

The chair is a bentwood-style rocker, recognizable by armrests that curve into a spiral connecting with the seat of the chair, said Richard Oman of the church's historical department.

Oman said the style was popular from 1840-1890 and the chair in question probably dated to the 1870s.

Skip Young said he has a platter that was part of Brigham Young's china that he will use for one last Thanksgiving and then donate to the church's history department.

Escaped elk weren't infected, but governor won't apologize

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — A spokesman for Gov. Jim Risch says Risch will not apologize for ordering an emergency hunt in September for elk that escaped from a private hunting preserve even though the elk that were killed have tested negative for disease.

Risch signed an executive order Sept. 7 ordering the destruction of an estimated 160 domesticated elk that escaped in August from the Chief Joseph private hunting preserve operated by Rex Rammell near Ashton. Risch said the elk could spread disease and pollute the gene pool of wild elk in eastern Idaho.

Tests on 36 of the escaped elk killed have tested negative for chronic wasting disease, brucellosis, tuberculosis and red deer hybrid genes, said Wayne Hoffman, spokesman for the state Department of Agriculture.

"I knew they were negative — we tested them," Rammell told the Post Register. "The only way they'd come up with a positive result was if they planted one. I think a few people owe the elk industry and me some apologies — Fish and Game, Governor Risch and some local guys."

Brad Hoaglin, Risch's spokesman, said an apology is not forthcoming.

"Absolutely not," he said. "We hoped that there was nothing there, but it was a situation where we had to check and have these animals tested. Certainly, this is good news."

Besides the elk that were killed, tests on 61 live elk at the hunting preserve did not show any signs of brucellosis or tuberculosis.

"We've been keeping our fingers crossed that the test results would come back negative," said Steve Schmidt of the Department of Fish and Game. "If they come back positive, we'd have a real situation on our hands."

Rammell said he plans to sue the state over the emergency hunt, which he said put him out of business. Hunters at the preserve paid upward of $5,000 to hunt trophy domestic elk.

Since the escape, Rammell has sold his ranch and said he plans to sell his remaining elk.

"I feel we have a very strong case," he said. "But it's difficult to sue the state, and expensive."

In other court action, Rammell will be preparing his defense in a pair of legal fights. On Nov. 16, he faces a preliminary hearing in 7th District Court on misdemeanor battery charges. He's also pleaded innocent to obstructing officers after he sat on one of his dead elk and refused to get up.

Rammell's daughter, 21-year-old Amanda Rammell, last month won the Miss Idaho USA competition. Afterward she vowed to never to be photographed with Risch because of the emergency hunt he ordered.

Prosecutor won't file charges in fatal fire

COEUR D'ALENE, Idaho (AP) — The Kootenai county prosecutor's office has declined to charge the mother of a 13-year-old girl killed in a July house fire started by a candle the mother had left burning.

Investigators with the Coeur d'Alene Police Department recommended that prosecutors charge Megan Longoria Pahl, 26, with involuntary manslaughter because the admitted methamphetamine user stepped outside while the candle ignited the fire.

"Chief Deputy Prosecutor Rick Baughman said there was insufficient evidence to prove the charge beyond a reasonable doubt."

The girl, Kyia Pahl, was sleeping on the couch, when the fire began.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Don't make party loyalty your voting factor

We are losing our perspective by continuing to vote for "the party" instead of voting for the good of our country. Issues of economy, terrorism, the war in Iraq and scandals are overshadowing the big picture of our national debt. It is getting to the point where interest payments alone will be as much as all taxes our government collects. I have gone to the polls consistently for 66 years. I am proud of that voting record and also proud that at least 90 percent of my primary votes are always thrown out. I know out because I refuse to vote a party ticket. What is best for my country is to vote for the qualified candidate and not "the party." I honestly do not care if that person is Republican or Democrat. I very much care if they are qualified to serve.

We, the American populace, must take responsibility for some of the incompetence and corruption we are seeing in incumbents. They are there because we voted for them. When they are continuously re-elected because of party affiliation, they are not representing the people who elected them. It will not be too late to get our country back on a sane, sensible, moral and ethical course until after we walk out of the voting booth. That means voting for qualified people instead of "the party." The most important thing is to V-O-T-E.

A quality candidate emerges in Jim Hansen

In previous elections, I have reluctantly voted for whomever seemed to have the best odds. This year, I will enthusiastically cast my vote for a truly outstanding candidate for Idaho's 2nd Congressional seat in the U.S. House of Representatives — Jim Hansen.

Jim's dedication to the people of this district is evident in the way he has conducted his campaign the hard way on the high road. Jim has visited all of the district's counties at least once and has personally spoken with thousands of citizens. Jim's campaign reflects his honest communication, impartial standards and impeccable integrity.

Jim has refused campaign contributions from political action committees, corporations and other special interests. Further, he set a maximum contribution limit at $100 from any donor. Consequently, the money that Jim has raised originates 100 percent from individuals, with small contributions from many, many, many Idahoans. I dare say that Jim is the only candidate in the entire country to run a campaign requiring such enormous personal strength and courage, as well as an unwavering faith in the morality and righteousness of people-powered politics.

Jim understands that the strength of our society is directly related to the well-being of its individual members. His priorities in Congress will reflect that — working to ensure good jobs with fair compensation, pushing for access to health care for all, fighting for the right to a quality public education, holding the government accountable for its actions, challenging Congress to elevate its ethical standards. We have a chance in this election to revitalize our democracy and to uphold what makes our country great — working together for the benefit of all.

If these ideas are important to you, too, vote for Jim Hansen next Tuesday. But most of all, support our democracy and vote!

Prop 2 makes needed fix to eminent domain

Like most people, I was upset last year when the Supreme Court ruled that local governments could take people's homes and give their land to private developers. This was an inappropriate interpretation of the concept of eminent domain and has since been fixed in many states.

But here in Idaho, the problem still exists. Although the Legislature passed a so-called eminent domain fix earlier this year, the politicians' half-baked solution doesn't do enough to protect landowners. I left the door wide open to government abuse of my property by using land use laws to demolish properties so that eminent domain can later be used.

In other words, fixing eminent domain was only the tip of the iceberg. But there is a solution: It's called Proposition 2, and it closes the door on government abuse of people's homes and property. With Prop 2, government must pay just compensation when it seizes valuable someone's land. Bureaucrats and politicians won't be able to downsize your home or farm so that they can then seize the land for whatever special interest projects they have on their minds.

Note to give people a say in how their land is used. Vote for Prop 2.

Amendment exceeds laws for marriage ban

In our great country, amendments to the Constitution have served the purposes of adding to and protecting rights, not taking them away. Let us continue that tradition in Idaho by voting no on HJR2.

This proposed amendment to the Idaho Constitution goes beyond existing Idaho law which already states, "A marriage between a man and a woman is the only domestic legal union that shall be valid or recognized in this state." If adopted, HJR2 will ban every alternative to marriage, including civil unions and domestic partnerships.

Before you vote, read carefully the proposed amendment and the effect of its adoption. HJR2 is unnecessary, unfair, and not representative of Idahoans who respect all citizens in policies that respect all citizens.

Both initiatives create disorder for Idaho

I typically don't weigh in on ballot issues in my position as a state senator. However, I have had a number of constituents ask me about the propositions on the Nov. 7 ballot.

I SUPPORT THE TROOPS BUT IF YOU DON'T STUDY HARD
YOU'LL BE ONE OF THEM...
OR A RIGHT WING
NUT JOB.

AKRON BEACON JOURNAL © 06

Ads supporting Prop 1 would lead you to believe that K-12 education is under-funded and, if you don't vote yes, you don't support education. Citing a single statistic distorts the true facts.

Idaho ranks high nationally in the amount of per-student funding as a percentage of per capita income. This is a direct reflection of our lower cost of living. During my four years in the Legislature, we have bent over backward to support K-12 education. In the lean years, this support was at the expense of our higher education and other state agency budgets.

If Prop 1 passes, we will have a $200 million hole in the state budget. There is no way to balance the budget without raising your taxes. Our choices will be to eliminate the property tax relief (average 20 percent reduction) we approved during the special session or tack on another 1 cent, a 16 percent increase on the sales tax. I strongly urge your no vote.

Proposition 2 alleges to fix an eminent domain problem that doesn't exist. During the regular session, we passed legislation that closed any possible loop holes in the state's takings law.

Having spent 10 years as the planning and zoning administrator for the city of Buhl, I believe I am qualified to comment on this issue. If passed, this proposition would bring complete disarray to the planning and zoning process that protects your property rights. Funded by out-of-state money, this proposition has no business on our Idaho ballot. I strongly urge your no vote.

SEN. TOM GANNON
Buhl

Inmates must work to purge meth habit

We need to cut waste, not raise taxes. One of the biggest drains on the state budget is the jails. We house prisoners for $30,000 each, while they watch TV. We need to put prisoners to work, as Oregon does, where they make blue jeans. You work. Prisoners should work, too.

The methamphetamine crisis is causing crime, swelling our jails with addicts. Hard work may not motivate every addict to stay drug free, but it will ease the burden on the hard-working taxpayers. Putting prisoners to work will actually help their recovery, both in and out of jail.

When addicts try to go straight after leaving jail, the temptations are enormous. They will come home tied from a low-paying job. They will remember the delusional escape of meth, and many seek it out again. At this moment of weakness, a strong memory of the hard work they did in jail will help the addict. It is the rock bottom choice they must make. They may be tired from work, but they are free to see their spouses. They can keep their wages and freedoms, or they can go back to hard work in prison and keep no money or freedom.

Prisoners could do manual labor, like laying bricks, to lessen the cost of building schools and new jails.

In the video called "The Faces of Meth," a meth user's first mug shot looks good. But the repeat mug shots increasingly reveal the quick self-destruction of the meth addict.

A picture's worth a thousand words, especially to kids we are trying to keep off drugs. We need to expose more children to this video before they are exposed to meth.

Idaho has a bright and clean future. If we protect our children, I would appreciate your consideration of my candidacy.

Otter remains true to conservative roots

Burch Otter has campaigned as a conservative and his voting record is in step with that philosophy. Jerry Brady has campaigned as a conservative, too. Brady is clever, for he knows that in order to be elected in Idaho, he must downplay his liberalism.

With Otter, what you see is what you get. With your vote, we can expect him to govern along conservative lines. If Brady wins, experience has taught us he will govern as a liberal. The pressure state and national liberal interest groups apply will be relentless and overwhelming.

The choice is yours on Nov. 7.

Luna brings scarce education experience

I urge voters to examine the candidates for the Nov. 7 election. I researched the candidates who are running for the office of Idaho superintendent of schools, and I have concerns regarding Tom Luna's run for office.

I have read Mr. Luna's resumes, where he lists himself as "senior adviser to the Secretary of Education Rod Paige." I searched the Internet for any reference to Mr. Luna in this capacity, and both the Executive Office and the Department of Education Web sites have nothing archived on this appointment.

I researched another position listed on Mr. Luna's resume, director of the White House Initiative on Tribal Colleges and Universities. Once again, I did not find one mention of him.

I was able to find a press release from the Department of Education listing Luna as the director of the U.S. Rural Education Task Force. In an article from the Ridebaugh Press, the author, Randy Stapiulis, tells us that this task force has managed to accomplish only one thing — a virtual town meeting. Wow!

Tom Luna received his bachelor's of administration degree in 2002 from an online university in New Jersey. His degree was in weights and measures, probably because he could acquire credits based on his work experience in this area (he owns Scates Unlimited Inc.). This says a lot about the value he puts on education.

The Idaho Statesman touts Luna as the savior of Idaho's education system because he is a businessman, not an educator. As a teacher, I want someone in office who understands the complexities of the education system. Only then can it be managed. Tom Luna may have a background in business, but his track record in education is almost nonexistent.

When you go to the polls on Nov. 7, remember that politicians — do not vote for Tom Luna.

Please remember you can register to vote on the day of the election, Tuesday, Nov. 7. If your county recorder to find out the location of your polling place, in Twin Falls County, call 736-4040.

I am voting for Dr. Peter Rickards for our state representative. Peter has provided more detailed, positive solutions to our energy, tax and agriculture issues than any candidate.

Idaho Power and the coal companies' planning transmission lines from "supplier states like Idaho" down to California are hoping you stay home.

Like I said before, I have followed Peter's work since 1988, when the first attempt to cluster all nuclear dry work was tried in Idaho.

Please honor those who have fought for your right to vote, and your right to life and liberty. Please take an unregistered friend with you. If regular good people don't take control their future, the coal companies will take control for you.

Luna is courteous figure to local school

I am writing about the letter by Zora Fausler about the letter by Tom Luna.

For the last couple of months, I wake up every morning at 6 a.m., and the first thing I do is log on to our local paper and read the letters to the editor to see if there is anything about my uncle. I have been very involved in my uncle's campaign. I am very interested in politics. You can even ask my social studies teacher, Mr. James. He says I'm very politically educated for my age. (I'm 12)

Please remember that we supposedly need to our custodians and made their work any harder than it already is, I called my uncle because that didn't sound like the uncle I knew. I told me the only uncle I had was ever been to Jerome High School was that day he announced he was going to run for office. That was in October of 2001.

When I was in 8th grade, so the announcement was done outside in the front of the building. I was there. We never went inside the building, and my uncle has never been inside of that school.

So I just wanted to let Ms. Fausler know that my uncle isn't a bad guy and has a lot of respect for our teachers and all of the staff at all schools. Please reconsider your vote — that was not my uncle.

Buhl bangs out another victory

By Brad Gaire
Times-News writer

BUHL — The Buhl Indians are out to prove that they're no longer a one-stand-alone team when it comes to the Class 3A state football playoffs and they got Snake River's attention with a 28-12 throttling of the Cougars at Bowers Field on Friday.

Buhl head coach Stacy Wilson said this is the farthest the Indians have been since the 1980s as they now prepare to face Shelley in the semifinals next week. After the Sugar-Salem game, he noted that each week would get harder and that was the case against the Cougars.

"It was rough, a lot of banging going on," he said. "I challenged the kids this week, and they were ready to go and hit them in the mouth every snap."

The Indians and Cougars exchanged touchdown drives during the first quarter, both on drives of 60 yards or more, but the Indians had a slight 7-6 lead as Snake River kicker Kyle Gelles' PAT went wide right.

Business really picked up in the second quarter. Buhl and Snake River each turned the ball over on downs and each quarterback (Buhl's Austin Laing and Snake River's Michael Reece) threw an interception. The difference was that the Indians produced points.

Laing completed big passes to James Osterkamp and Will Chivers, and then came up short on the next two plays for fourth-and-3 at the Cougars'28. Eric Hernandez picked up five yards from a Laing pass to keep the drive alive, but with less than 45 seconds left in the half, Snake River was called for pass interference on an incomplete pass from Laing.

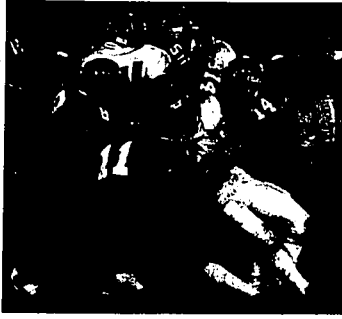

The ball went to the 11 and Karrick Kelly hauled in his second score to cap the 52-yard drive and put Buhl in the driver's seat. Laing sent the football up, and away for 184 yards during the half with Kelly picking up the majority of the yards.

"(Austin) just throws them up, and we make plays," Kelly said. "This is the hardest game we've played this year, and we knew we had to play our best ever."

"Karrick always runs great routes," Laing said. "He goes open soon as I turn my head. It just makes it easier on me."

The second half was another slobberknocker with Snake River piling on the yards, namely a 68-yard TD run from Abby Ibarra. Other than that, the Cougars couldn't come up with the goods as they were continually stuffed by the Buhl

CSI clobbers Central Arizona

Full-court press keys Golden Eagles in rout

By Eric Larsen
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — That full-court press might be for real.

The No. 25 College of Southern Idaho men's basketball team jumped out to a 21-point halftime lead, came near to perfecting their press after halftime, and cruised past Central Arizona College 115-72 during Friday's second day of the 30th Annual K&T Steel Tournament at the CSI gymnasium in Twin Falls.

After playing an at-times porous full-court press during the first half, head coach Barrett Peery and the Golden Eagles made a few halftime adjustments before opening the second half with an 18-2 run. The Golden Eagles forced eight turnovers during the Vaqueros' first 14 possessions of the half en route to forcing Central Arizona into 39 turnovers for the contest.

"I thought we started off a little slow and tried to gamble too much and got greedy," Peery said of the press in the first half. "I told them to try to keep them in front, keep the pressure up but not gamble as much."

The Golden Eagles took full advantage of those turnovers, pouring in 45 points off of Vaqueros miscues. CSI also demonstrated its commitment to rebounding, as the Golden Eagles hustled for 64 rebounds that led to 29 second-chance points. CSI outrebounded Central Arizona 64-41, led by the hustle of sophomore center Kevin Ford, who snatched up 13 boards, including seven on the offensive end.

"Coach just told us to go to the boards and every practice it's to the glass, to the glass," CSI freshman shooting guard Terry Fields said.

"Tomorrow it's going to be a good game. Sheridan is No. 17, so they're better than us. We've got to play hard."

Sophomore shooting guard Kelvin Davis scored a team-high 20 points for CSI, while Brandon Stokes added 17 points and eight rebounds. Seven Golden Eagles players scored in double figures, including Brad Garrett (13), Mo Tuukivava (12), Reggie Guyton (10), Derek Lorenzen (13), Juan Patillo (11) and the aforementioned Davis and Stokes. Fields added nine points and five rebounds, and was one of the many Golden Eagles who attacked the glass for 32 offensive rebounds.

"I tell you man, that offensive rebounding is my favorite part of the game," Peery said. "We went at it and got 32 more tonight."

Central Arizona (0-2) was led by Tracy Stanton's 29-point effort, though he was the only Vaqueros player to finish in double digits. Lloyd Strickland added 10 rebounds, while Jeff Ingram scored eight points for Central Arizona.

"Everything is great right now, but we've just got to throw that behind us and come out hard tomorrow," Fields said.

The Golden Eagles gained a 53-32 halftime lead with a massive scoring spurt in the first half final 7:30. Already up 28-20, CSI's frenetic pacing led to a 25-12 run to end the half. The Golden Eagles scored on 13 of their final 18 possessions of the half to make up for a sloppy start to the game.

CSI thrived at the game's higher speed, forcing Central Arizona into 20 first-half turnovers and converting 20 points off turnovers to Central Arizona's zero.

Davis led CSI with 10 first-half points while Patillo added nine points and six rebounds before the break. CSI freshman guard DeCarlos Riley did not play on a coach's decision.

Freshman forward A.J. Wilson will spend this season practicing with the Golden Eagles as a redshirt. CSI will face its biggest test of the early season tonight against the No. 17 Sheridan (Wyo.) College Generals. The Golden Eagles played well Friday night, but look to tighten up some of the defensive

Mushers lose at Mackay

Times-News

MACKAY — The season came to a close Friday night for Camas County as the Mushers fell 46-26 to Mackay in the opening round of the Class 1A Division II playoffs.

Camas County actually led 8-0 on a touchdown pass from Trevor Dalin to Logan Ivie in the first quarter. From there, the teams played even through three quarters as Mackay held a slim 20-26 edge heading into the final quarter.

But the Miners closed the game with 18 straight points to put the game away.

Ben McClam led the Mushers with 66 yards rushing on 15 carries. Dalin completed 7-of-16 passes for 241 yards and two touchdowns. McClam had a 21-yard touchdown run and a 60-yard scoring reception.

Ivie led the way receiving with three catches for 72 yards.

But Mackay ruled on the ground, totaling 297 rushing yards.

The Mushers end the season with a 5-5 overall record.

Fans wanted as CSI seeks share of SWAC title versus NIC

Just show up today. That's not asking much. Show up at the College of Southern Idaho gymnasium at 3 p.m. and should you choose, cheer the Golden Eagles volleyball team on as it finally comes out for air.

Show up, and should you choose, stand up and applaud the Golden Eagles for succeeding under the strangest of circumstances. Most of all, just show up.

That shouldn't be a hard sell, considering that today (two of the nation's preeminent junior college volleyball programs meet in Twin Falls with at least a share of the Scenic West Athletic Conference regular-season championship on the line as No. 8 North Idaho College takes on CSI. The 29-13 Golden Eagles have the opportunity to win their 30th match of the year and split the SWAC title with the Cardinals with a victory. Or, the Cardinals can claim the SWAC title outright heading into next week's Region IBA Tournament, which they will host.

Win or lose, the completion of Saturday's match will mark the end of the most heart-wrenching volleyball season the Golden Eagles have ever suffered through. This trumps the 2004 season that saw the Golden Eagles' season cut short before tournament time due to an NCAA infraction. No one lost their job that year and no one had to play through 43 matches full of questions about this year's firing of longtime head coach Ben Stroud and the NCAA

Last time they met: The Cardinals took two SWAC contests earlier this season in Coeur d'Alene. Saturday's match will be CSI's final match of the season. If the Golden Eagles win, they will share the regular-season SWAC title with the sansations that led up these events. In 2004, Heidi Carlisser didn't have to play the role of human bandage she's had to play this year in keeping the program together during her first year as CSI head coach. Today, the bulk of that struggle ends.

"It's good because — you know — I don't have to say," freshman libero Channelle Esteban said of the end of CSI's season. "And bad I guess because our team is a family and we stick together so well. I love volleyball and it's been unfortunate this year with nationals and regionals stripped from us. But hey, if we play our hearts out Saturday, there's nothing bad you can say about that."

But here's something bad to say about Saturday's match. If it's anything like the rest of the season, no one's going to show up. No one's going to show up and watch a team that has won in excess of twice as many matches as it's lost and would likely be ranked in the Top 10 in the nation if not for the fact that since CSI is ineligible for the postseason, it's also ineligible to be voted for in the NJCAA Division I Volleyball Poll. The fair-weather fans will continue to stay home, hiding behind the pretense that Saturday's match doesn't matter.

But for Carlisser and the eight Golden Eagles players that don the black and gold today, you can bet it matters.

"Coming to the end of our season, this is everything that we can work for at this point in time under all these circumstances," Carlisser said. "Just do the best we can and try to get up on North Idaho from the start."

Against a disciplined Cardinals team that has won two of the year's

Former CSI coach Eddie Sutton found unconscious in car

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Former Oklahoma State basketball coach Eddie Sutton was released from a Stillwater hospital Friday after a response to a medication led paramedics to take him by ambulance to the emergency room.

The 70-year-old Sutton, who ranks fifth in career wins among Division I men's coaches, was released early Friday afternoon, said Shyla Eggers, director of public affairs at Stillwater Medical Center.

Smiling Sutton appeared fit Friday night when he attended Oklahoma State's first exhibition game of the season, an 84-67 win over Pittsburg State.

New head coach Sean Sutton, Eddie Sutton's son, said he was happy to see his dad at the game.

"It is feeling a lot better and doing well," Sean Sutton said. "I spoke to the doctor that was caring for him and he said that he felt my dad had had an allergic reaction to some medicine that he had started taking last night. He was in the hospital for a couple hours and then they released him."

Eddie Sutton had been "largely unresponsive" but able to communicate verbally with police officers and paramedics after they responded to a 911 call from a Stillwater car surveillance store around 9:34 a.m. Friday, Stillwater Police Capt. Randy Dickerson said.

"The ER physician stated that Mr. Sutton is not under the influence of alcohol; however a possible reaction to new medication prescribed by his physician may be the cause of this incident," the hospital said in a statement released by Eggers.

Sutton told The Oklahoman the new medication was for neck pain.

"I feel better now than I have in three or four years physically and emotionally," Sutton told the newspaper.

Maddux earns record-tying 16th Gold Glove

Los Angeles Dodgers' Greg Maddux won his 16th Gold Glove on Friday tying the record shared by pitcher Jim Kaat and third baseman Brooks Robinson.

NEW YORK (AP) — Greg Maddux has become a constant in an era of change.

The slick-fielding pitcher won his 16th Gold Glove on Friday, tying the record shared by pitcher Jim Kaat and third baseman Brooks Robinson.

"I'm honored," Maddux said in a statement. "I take great pride in my fielding. This award means a lot to me."

Traded from the Chicago Cubs to the Los Angeles Dodgers on July 31, Maddux has won the NL pitching award each year since 1990 except for 2003, when Atlanta's Mike Hampton interrupted the streak.

Maddux was 15-14 with a 4.20 ERA for the Dodgers. The eight-time All-Star and four-time NL Cy Young Award winner has 333 career wins.

Kaat won AL Gold Gloves for pitchers from 1962-75, then won the NL award the following two years. Robinson was honored as the AL's best fielder at third base from 1960-75.

Rawlings has presented Gold Gloves annually since 1957 based on voting by managers and coaches before the end of the regular season. They may not select players on their own teams, and they vote only for players in their own league.

"I never thought at the age of 39 I would be getting Gold Gloves," Vizueta said. "It's really weird. I'm a middle three errors out of the last weeks of the season. It is amazing I can keep that kind of concentration to put that level of concentration into play. You have to be anticipating."

Atlanta center fielder Andrew Jones won his ninth, consecutive Gold Glove. Among outfielders, he trails only Roberto Clemente and Willie Mays (12 each) and Al Kaline and Ken Griffey Jr. (10 apiece).

St. Louis third baseman Scott

Rolen won his seventh Gold Glove, his first since 2004. Cardinals first baseman Albert Pujols won the first time in 2006. New York Mets center fielder Carlos Beltran.

Houston catcher Brad Ausmus won his third award, his first since 2002. San Diego center fielder Mike Cameron won for the first time — he earned Gold Gloves in the AL with Seattle in 2001 and Orlando.

Second baseman Orlando Hudson won with Arizona after gaining the honor for the first time with Toronto last year.

"People pay to see web games, but they also want to see home runs," Hudson said. "It's an offensive game right now."

Beltran and Vizueta each earned $100,000 bonuses, while Cameron, Pujols and Grady got $25,000 apiece. Ausmus gets a $25,000 bonus.

Scott shares lead with Durant

ATLANTA — Adam Scott didn't have much of a chance the last time he was in contention, six shots behind Tiger Woods going into the last round of the American Express Championship. But he noticed that day how Woods finished off tournaments, and realized that he needed to do a better job himself.

His next opportunity comes at the final PGA Tour event of the year.

Scott kept himself in the short grass and out of trouble Friday at East Lake, giving him a 3-under 67 and a share of the lead with Jim Durant, 68, at the Tour Championship.

"You look at how Tiger closes out the lead when he's in contention, and that's something that I need to figure out how I can do that," Scott said. "I had two or three really good chances this year to do that, and I didn't get it done. That was disappointing, but that's something a young player needs to learn."

One of eight players in the 27-man field without a PGA Tour victory this year, Scott put himself in position to change that by making only one mistake on another chilly afternoon amid the golden flora of East Lake. That was a plugged lie in the bunker on No. 10, and Scott didn't let that get him down. He finished with eight pars and one atop the leaderboard with Durant at 4-under 136.

Durant had to work for his share of the lead, saving par from the bunker on the 17th hole. He came up short of the 17th green from a fairway bunker and chipped to 2 feet, then blasted out of the bunker to 6 feet on the par-3 closing hole and made the putt.

"Didn't hit it great, but just tried to stay very patient," Durant said.

Kevin Pritchard made six birdies in the second round, the low score so far this week, and was in the group at 1-under 139 that included Retief Goosen (71), Stuart Appleby (70) and Brett Quisenberry (68), who earned the distinction as the only player to get around East Lake without a bogey.

"I don't make a bogey out here is unbelievable," Quisenberry said.

That starts with keeping the ball in play, and Scott did that better than most. The statistics will show that he missed only four fairways, but he was in the first cut every time. The rough is his most punishing, but deep enough that players have to guess whether they will catch flares or the ball will come out flat.

"I'm driving the ball well, which I think is really a key around here," Scott said. "It's been pretty stress-free for me, which is nice."

With only a breeze in the 58-degree weather, the conditions weren't quite as difficult. Even so, only six players broke par in the second round, and only eight on Thursday. And halfway through the season-ending tournament, just six players were in red numbers.

"The course is not letting you get on enough of a roll to make birdies," Appleby said. "Sometimes it's just barely letting you hang on to make pars. As you see by the scores, we're trying our best. It's tough out there."

Adam Scott tees off on the eighth hole during the second round of play at the Tour Championship golf tournament in Atlanta on Friday.

Luke Donald made the only eagle this week at the par-5 15th, then followed that by becoming the first player to make birdie on the 16th hole. That carried him to a 67 and put him at even-par 140, along with Jim Furyk (71) and Zach Johnson (69).

Vijay Singh was chasing the leaders until he bogeyed the last two holes for a 72, leaving him at 141 but still only five shots behind. David Love III was headstart for an amazing turnaround after opening with an 82, but he played his last three holes in 3 over for a 71 and again will have to play by himself on Saturday.

Scott didn't need a reminder that he hasn't won this year, but he got one earlier in the week when he saw Gary Phillips, who runs the winners-only Mercedes-Benz Championship at Kapalua, that starts the 2007 season.

The last time he hoisted a trophy in America was last year at the Nissan Open, which did not count as an official victory because it was only 36 holes due to rain. And while this might be his most consistent year, he doesn't have a victory.

"I've probably played the best I ever have over the period of a year, but there's nothing much to show for it other than a win in Singapore," Scott said. "I was looking for a little bit more than that, really. This weekend is a good chance for me to get something out of my good play over the year."

Joining him in the final group Saturday will be a guy sorry for the year end.

Durant feared losing his card until he turned his game around, which he attributes mainly to making putts from 4 to 10 feet, the kind that usually keep a round going or kill any momentum. The perfect example came on the par-3 11th, when he blasted out of the bunker to 6 feet and rolled it into to finish off his 68.

Mizuno Classic

MIAMI, Japan — Annika Sorenstam opened her bid for an LPGA Tour record sixth straight Mizuno Classic title with a 1-under 71, leaving the Swedish star six strokes behind first-round leader Rachel Hershberger.

Coming off a six-stroke victory Sunday in the Ladies European Tour's Dubai Ladies Masters, Sorenstam dived the par-5 13th to reach 3 under, but bogeyed the next two holes and closed with three pars on the Kashikojima Country Club course.

Last year, she became the first player in LPGA Tour history to win a tournament five straight times and matched the tour record she shares with Mickey Wright, "for victories in an event. It's the Sam Snead Championship last month."

Coming off a six-stroke victory Sunday in the Ladies European Tour's Dubai Ladies Masters, Sorenstam dived the par-5 13th to reach 3 under, but bogeyed the next two holes and closed with three pars on the Kashikojima Country Club course.

Hershberger, the 34-year-old Australian who won the last of her eight LPGA Tour titles in 2003, shot a 7-under 65, highlighted by a 25-yard wedge shot for eagle on the 495-yard 13th. Former Duke star Brittany Lang was three strokes out at 69 along with Paramey's Julietta Korda and Japan's Mitsuko Kawakami and Rui Kitada. Australia's Karrie Webb, seeking her fifth tour victory of the year, was in a 14-player group at 69 that included 21-year-old Japanese star Ai Miyazaki.

FANTASY FOOTBALL Players to start, and to avoid, in Week 9

NEW YORK (AP) — Thankfully, the Colts have gotten over the crazy idea of winning with defenses.

They worried fantasy football players last year when they went 7-0 with a defense that didn't force Peyton Manning to carry the team. He had 11 of 300 yards passing in the second and third weeks went without a TD. But the 2006 Colts have been pleasing their real fans and fantasy dorks alike, again going 7-0 but this time piling up big stats.

Well, secret? They've stopped playing defense altogether. The Colts risk died last against the run and have allowed 19 touchdowns. Of 16 teams with winning records, only the few falling Ravens and defenses Bills have allowed more points.

While a bad defense can ruin an offense by taking it out of its game plan, the Colts seem to get more points when Manning's frustratingly flinging the ball around. So celebrate the lousy defense, leave the fretting to the Indy fans and join in the cheers for Tom Brady to light up the Colts again this week.

As you prepare to enjoy numerous failed an in-jokes, here are some players to start in Week 9, some to avoid and a few long shots that just may pan out.

QUARTERBACKS

A SAFE BET
• You never know if the Patriots will throw every play on run every play. Either way, the Colts' defense is bad enough that Brady will rack up big points. He's thrown for three TDs in his last two regular-season games against the Colts.

After looking impressive in his first start, Dallas' Tony Romo shot far well again in Week 8. Washington secondary that's allowed more TD passes than 29 other teams. (The prospect of a big sideline smooch from coach Bill Belichick could be a deterrer, however.)

Neither of the Saints' high-profile backs runs much these days, so keep starting Drew Brees. He has thrown for 659 yards and six scores in his last two games. (Also a ton of interceptions, but most leagues don't penalize too much for that.)

Just when we were all goggling at Seattle for having to start Seneca Wallace, he pulls off a three-touchdown game. He should do more of the same Monday against the Raiders, who have already defied all odds by winning twice.

TAKE A SHOT

Alex Smith of San Francisco could put up some big numbers this week. The Vikings' Matt Cassel, Brad Patey provided the blueprint for shredding a Minnesota defense that's maybe a little overrated.

BACK AWAY SLOWLY AND NOBODY GETS HURT

Please, in the name of Rusty Hilger, don't start these guys:
• Bench Jacksonville's David Garrard against Tennessee, only because the Jaguars make absolutely no sense. They've throttled the Cowboys, Steelers and Eagles, but have been thrashed by the Texans and Redskins.

• Philip Rivers has been sold for the Chargers, but why would he do anything but hand off to LaDainian Tomlinson against a Browns' rushing defense allowing more than 130 yards per game.
• David Carr's still the starter in Houston, but you should never go with a player who's even once been benched in favor of Sage Rosenfels — not to mention outplayed by him.

RUNNING BACKS

ALL DAY LONG

Now that Slingin' Michael Vick has accepted a multi-lapse NFL suspension, Atlanta's passing game looks for Warrick Dunn to find more openings in Detroit's defense. (OK, I was just trying to sound smart; there are always openings in Detroit's defense.)

New England's Corey Dillon may only come in for 1 yard TD runs in the shootout against the Colts, but there could be plenty of tosses. In fact, throw in Laurence Maroney as well.

The Vikings' Brad Johnson looked every bit the 54-year-old in last week's embarrassing loss, so look for him to go back to handing off to Chester Taylor 30 times against a San Francisco defense U.S.A.'s allowed 11 TD runs.

Ahman Green appears to be his old self in Green Bay (his production is up to 100 yards in two straight games, something he last did to start the 2004 season).

HE CAN FIND A SEAM

If you're hating for a runner, consider a situational back who just scores all the time. Dallas' Marion Barber III has six TDs in his last six games. He's scored 30 times against Brandon Jacobs has scored in three straight.

RED FLAGS

Tennessee's Travis Henry was averaging 150 yards a game for a couple of weeks before failing to reach 30 against Houston. Yes, that's 30, and yes, that's Houston. (Of course, he could go for 100 against the Jaguars since they make sense, but that's pushing the theory.)

Don't start any Belts in Denver. Mike had a big game once Tatum got hurt, but even if you figure out how to get Belts in Denver, they'll have a tough time in Pittsburgh.

WIDE RECEIVERS

THROW HIM THE DARN BALL! With only 150 yards a game for a time to leave Dallas' Terrell Owens in the lineup no matter what. He's coming off his first 100-yard game as a Cowboy and should make a real splash out of the waning Redskins secondary.

Saints rookie Marcus Colston also has moved into that category of guys you never bench. The seventh rounder from Hofstra has six touchdowns in seven games, and he went for 163 yards and two scores last week.

Now that the Ravens are interested in offense again, Derrick Mason's could due to do something this week. He's been a steady defense. He was expected to have a big year with Steve McNair, but so far he hasn't sniffed the end zone.

Speaking of the Ravens, start all the Cincinnati receivers you can scrape up. Baltimore has allowed 385 and 365 yards playing the last two games. (Maybe it's time for Bill to take over as secondary coach, too.)

Though I swore I'd never again recommend a Buffalo player, Lee Evans could actually hang on to a few balls against Green Bay's secondary.

SHOW HIM THE DARN BENCH!

Javon Walker has had a couple of decent games despite Denver's avoidance of the forward pass. You may want to steer clear of every other involved in the Broncos' offense against the desperate Steelers in Pittsburgh.

Texas race a big one for Earnhardt

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — If Dale Earnhardt Jr. is going to make a serious run at this year's NASCAR Nextel Cup championship, he's got to win the Dickies 500 at Texas Motor Speedway on Sunday would be the perfect time to make a move.

Earnhardt goes into the race tied fourth in the Chase for the championship with Jeff Burton, both of them 84 points behind leader Matt Kenseth and also trailing Jimmie Johnson and Denny Hamlin.

For Earnhardt, who missed the Chase last year after finishing fifth in 2004 in the inaugural stock car playoffs, just being part of the season-ending battle is a big deal.

"It's exciting," Earnhardt said. "It's fun to be battling for the championship with (nine) guys and just feels more prestigious to me, as far as the way it all rolls out throughout the season and how we crown a champion in this system."

Earnhardt, whose late father won seven NASCAR championships, is a realist, too.

He has won two Busch Series titles and watched seven Cup championships go by to know that it would take a miracle for him to come out on top of the standings after the season finale Nov. 19 at Homestead unless he makes up some serious ground at Texas and Phoenix the next two Sundays.

"I figure we've got to be within maybe 20 points (going into Homestead) to have a real chance," Earnhardt said Friday before the start of practice on the 1.5-mile Texas oval. That's why the Texas race could not have come at a better moment for the 32-year-old Earnhardt.

It's the track where he won his first Busch race and where he also took the first of his 16 Cup victories.

"It's very special," Earnhardt said of TMS. "I always love running here."

Texas was the place where I realized I could make a career out of racing. Before our Busch Series years here in '98, I wasn't sure I was going to make it as a race car driver. I was living in a doublewide (trailer) and trying to get my career going. I hadn't had much success in racing up to that point, but we won that race at Texas, and it set the foundation for our championship this year."

Earnhardt didn't hurt his chances any in Friday's qualifying. He was 10th fastest, while Kenseth was 36th — the slowest of the contenders — and Johnson fifth, Hamlin sixth and Burton 29th.

Consistent Kenseth and Johnson, on a roll with a win at 69 along with Paramey's Julietta Korda and Japan's Mitsuko Kawakami and Rui Kitada. Australia's Karrie Webb, seeking her fifth tour victory of the year, was in a 14-player group at 69 that included 21-year-old Japanese star Ai Miyazaki.

But a third-place finish last week at Atlanta put Earnhardt in a better mood, particularly after he held off Kenseth by inches at the finish.

No wiggle room left for Vandals

Idaho needs win over streaking Nevada to keep bowl hopes alive

By Grant Ioki
Times-News correspondent

MOSCOW — The cold, hard facts are staring into the face of head coach Dennis Erickson and the Idaho Vandals (4-5, 3-2 Western Athletic Conference). Idaho has three games left in November, along with a bye weekend. All three outings must produce Vandal victories in order for Idaho to maximize its shot at a postseason bowl game.

Any slouch out of what appears to be an insurmountable task for Erickson's first-year rebuilding efforts is that two of the games are in the friendly confines of the Koolha Dome.

Nevada (5-3, 2-2) hopes to prey upon a shell-shocked Vandal team that was hit with a 68-10 loss at Hawaii last week. The Wolf Pack, defending WAC co-champs, is on a roll after a rough early schedule. After stumbling to road losses at Fresno State and Arizona State, the Pack has won five of its last six games. Nevada's only loss in that stretch came three weeks ago at the hands of Hawaii in a 41-34 setback on its islands.

Said Erickson: "They're obviously playing as well as anyone in the league right now. They're very explosive on offense. (Quarterback) Jeff Rowe, of course, was back last week and they got some great returning players and (wide receiver) Caleb Spencer is playing really well. Besides their offense, what really stands out is their front seven on defense." Nevada is yielding 338 yards and 22.5 points per game.

An injury forced Rowe (109-of-163 for 1,240 yards) to miss the Oct. 21 game with San Jose State. His favorite target, Spencer, has 38 receptions for 408 yards and one touchdown. Last Saturday the Wolf Pack was impressive in its 49-21 home win over New Mexico State.

Idaho's defense is giving up 34.4 points and 398 yards per game. But for the first game this season, the secondary came up without an interception. However, Colt Brennan continued his passing efficiency — he's thrown 158 consecutive attempts without a pick — against the secondary that has not taken to the game with cornerback Stanley Franks ranking No. 2 in the nation

Idaho head coach Dennis Erickson watches his team from the sidelines during their game against Hawaii in Honolulu Oct. 28. Hawaii won 68-10. The Vandals host Nevada today.

"We're just trying to pick ourselves up and win our fifth game. I mean, we got beat pretty bad (at Hawaii). A bowl is the last thing our guys are thinking about."

— Idaho head coach Dennis Erickson on his team's chances of reaching a bowl game.

in interceptions. Idaho's defense dropped from No. 7 to No. 12 in interceptions while Franks slipped to third.

"We knew they were a good football team, but we made them look awfully good. Brennan (61-for-30 for 333 yards) was on all the time," said Erickson, whose team surrendered 497 total yards. "In all my years of coaching college football, I don't know if I've seen an offense as productive as this one."

Another glaring flaw was Idaho's kickoff offense. The Vandals usually use a squib or lofty push kick from the toe of Tino Amaneto. But the haunting memory of Boise State's Rashawn Scott's 42-yard return, after Idaho closed the gap at 28-26 late in that game, resurfaced on the opening kick off last weekend as Hawaii's Ross Dickerson went 100 yards for the score.

"We saw in film how they overplayed their left side and we knew we had a chance to take one back," Dickerson said after the game.

But with this poor showing and the worst grounding Dennis Erickson has ever taken in his career, there is still a flicker of hope for the Vandals. "After all, the game of football is one of overcoming adversity, isn't it?" Erickson said.

The whipping the Vandals took from the Warriors has no effect on Wolf Pack head coach Chris Auti. "You can see they're a vastly improved ball club," Auti said. "They play very well at home and they give Boise State all they wanted and had some nice opportunities to win that one. We think they're a very capable ball club."

Auti likes two traits that stand out for Idaho. "I think (quarterback) Steve Wichman does a nice job with the play-action pass and their defense is one that flies around," Auti said. "We have looked at the tapes of their last four ball games and they show improvement."

Last year's meeting in Reno between the Vandals and Wolf Pack was a similar outcome to Idaho's trip to Hawaii last weekend. The Wolf Pack rolled to a 62-14 romp as Rowe threw for 251 yards out of the Pack's "pistol" offensive set. Spencer caught five of Rowe's darts, two for touchdowns.

"Nevada is into the year and they're just getting better. They're playing well together as a group. They linebackers are very aggressive. They change fronts up and the secondary is playing well," said Erickson. "They're front seven controls the line of scrimmage and the offensive line protects Rowe real well."

Idaho has shown resiliency coming off of lopsided losses like the 56-10 setback at Washington State and the 38-0 thrashing at the hands of Oregon State. The Vandals rebounded with four wins and a strong showing against No. 14 Boise State.

But there's no wiggle room for Idaho, which can control its own destiny with two wins in the Dome (Nevada and San Jose State) and one on the road against a struggling Fresno State team. A 7-5 overall and 5-3 WAC mark could put them in a bowl. Even if the Vandals can go 2-1 down the stretch, they could sneak into the bowl picture at 6-6.

"I don't have an answer for a 6-10," said Erickson. "If someone does, please let me in on it. We are just trying to pick ourselves up and win our fifth game. We got beat up pretty bad."

"We'll play better than we did (at Hawaii)," Erickson added of this week's matchup. "Our players have a lot of pride and a lot of heart. I think they'll bounce back and play better."

Kickoff for today's 24th meeting between Idaho and Nevada is scheduled for 3:05 p.m. MST. Nevada is a 10-point favorite.

Game notes: Idaho's David Vobora is No. 1 in the nation in solo tackles at nine per game. He is No. 2 nationally in total tackles. ... On the injury front, Vandals receiver Max Kramer is out for two weeks with a shoulder injury, while Brian Flowers and Lee Smith are questionable for today's game. Cornerback Reggie Smith is healthy and will play. ... Nevada leads the all-time bowl win coming in 1999.

Bengals seek third straight over Sac. State

By Mark Ullatak
Times-News correspondent

POCAHELLO — Perhaps Idaho State assistant coach Nick Whitworth said it best when this reporter ran into him earlier this week at Holt Arena. "If I have to tell you next week that we had another game that we should have won, I think I'll explode," said Whitworth.

Whitworth was referring to ISU's 23-10 win at Montana last Saturday. It was a game that saw the Bengals with a chance to win in the fourth quarter despite accumulating less than 100 yards of total offense. Idaho State's offense ranked ninth nationally in points per game going into that contest. But against the Griz, the maligned defense played well while the offense struggled.

New ISU has nothing left to play for but pride. A conference crown, an all-large bid to a bowl game and even a winning record are now out the window, crushed by inconsistency, turnovers and injuries.

Today, the Bengals face Sacramento State, a club with a record of 3-5 overall. ISU has won two straight against the Hornets and three in a row at Holt Arena. "The Hornets have beaten us up on the weak sisters in the Big Sky, knocking off Eastern Washington, Weber State and Northern Colorado — but only by a combined nine points. In fact, considering the raw numbers, head coach Steve Moschibian may have done one of the best coaching jobs around. Statistically nothing about Sacramento State is impressive. The Hornets leading rusher, quarterback Marcel Marquez, only has 143 yards for the season. It's also thrown more interceptions (nine) than touchdowns (eight) and is only averaging 158 passing yards per ballgame. Sacramento's leading receiver is Andre Taylor with only 17 catches good for 253 yards. Defensively the Hornets are a little better. They've forced 17 turnovers and safety Brent Webber has six interceptions.

For ISU the big question this week is injuries. At one point last week the Bengals' three starting receivers were all out. Two should be back today but that was part of the reason a normally prolific offense struggled so badly in Missoula. At this time of season coaches have had a real chance to diagram against an offense, but Bengals head man Larry Lewis continues to try to counter those moves.

"We try to do something new every week, maybe run out of a different formation, maybe throw in motion that teams haven't seen yet to give us an edge," Lewis said.

Lewis is also hoping that his chubb hasn't taken in the towels with these winnable games left, including two at home. "You lose hope and lose belief then you've lost everything. I'm extremely proud of the team for their effort at Montana," Lewis said. "We need to maintain that one-game-at-a-time attitude for every game."

Beck leads BYU into game with slumping Rams

Cougars aim for sixth straight win and a spot in the Top 25

FORT COLLINS, Colo. (AP) — Sonny Lubick won't say where John Beck rates among the long list of famous BYU quarterbacks. But that doesn't mean the venerable Colorado State coach isn't impressed by the Coug.

"It's hard for me to compare their quarterbacks," Lubick said when asked to match Beck up to the likes of Jim McMahon, Marc Wilson and Steve Young. "I can tell you that this young guy is pretty darn good."

Colorado State faces BYU, which sits alone atop the Mountain West Conference having won five straight, including all their conference games.

Much of the credit belongs to Beck. Through eight games, the senior has a sparkling 172.5 efficiency rating and has thrown for 30 touchdowns and 2,068 yards with only three interceptions. He's been sacked only eight times.

"Beck stays in the pocket and can stare that blitz right down and still deliver the ball for a strike," Lubick said. "That's the mark of an experienced and courageous quarterback."

BYU coach Tom Mendenhall agrees. "The work ethic, doing things exactly right at his position, demonstrates the competitiveness of him," Mendenhall said. "What you see is a mature, poised, confident player that is willing (to) risk, appropriate ones when necessary that lead to results that you've seen."

The problem for the Colorado State defense

Brigham Young linebacker Cameron Jensen celebrates after recovering a fumble by Air Force in the first quarter of a Mountain West Conference game at Air Force Academy, Colo., Oct. 28.

Saturday extends beyond Beck and a passing offense that ranks fourth in the country. BYU is a respectable running attack as well.

Curtis Brown has run for 548 yards and two touchdowns. Iul Vakapuna has chipped in another 346 yards and six TDs on the ground.

"They run the ball pretty darn well and are the most balanced offensive team that we've seen," Lubick said. "They will be a handful to contain."

The Rams, who have a 10-game losing streak, do not have such a luxury. Their running game — the heart of the offensive scheme — has abandoned them this year.

Colorado State ranks dead last in the Mountain West in rushing, averaging 75 yards a game. There isn't anyone on pace for a 1,000-yard season. Garrett Johnson's 277 yards leads the team and Naamdi Osher has run for only 178 yards.

Lubick can only raise his hands in trying to find a reason why the team hasn't been better.

"I could suggest how it would get better," Lubick said. "You get in the 'I' formation and you keep running the ball."

Quarterback Caleb Hanic has kept the Rams in games by throwing the ball, racking up a 65 percent completion rate, nine TD passes and four more running the ball. He's also hurt CSU with interceptions like the one he threw last week that ignited New Mexico's comeback.

"The frustrating part for me is we probably had two games that we could have won," Lubick said referring to losses to Air Force and New Mexico. "Yeah, that takes a lot out of everybody."

Mendenhall doesn't buy into it. Nor does he expect to face a down team.

"I don't think at Colorado State with coach Lubick, you can ever underestimate what he's capable of doing with that program," Mendenhall said. "He's given them a chance to win championships. I've seen a coach like that who has had great results wherever he's been."

Post-USC letdown a question for the Beavers against Sun Devils

CORVALLIS, Ore. (AP) — According to Arizona State quarterback Rudy Carpenter, Oregon State's play following the USC upset could go either way. Either the Beavers are pumped for the rest of the season or they're done.

Carpenter is betting they're pumped.

"I am sure that their confidence and their emotional level are both high right now. They are going to be pumped. Our quarterback said, 'They can either be ready for a letdown or they can be so confident that they can beat anyone now. I would prepare for the latter one.'"

The Sun Devils aren't the only ones with interest in how the Beavers respond to last Saturday's surprising 33-31 victory over the then-No. 3 Trojans.

The Beavers started addressing the issue on Sunday.

"Whether you dwell on a loss for too long or you dwell on a win too long, you can't get beaten by that game. I think it's about a mental thing as well as anything," coach Mike Riley said.

Saturday's game between the Sun Devils (5-3, 2-3 Pac-10) and the Beavers (5-3, 3-2) pits two similar teams, especially in respect to how their seasons have unfolded.

Arizona State got off to a 3-0 start, but stumbled with a three-game losing streak to ranked opponents

California, Oregon and USC. Victories since over Stanford and last weekend at Washington have put the Sun Devils on the verge of bowl eligibility.

"It almost seems as each week goes on, the next game gets bigger and bigger," Carpenter said. "That is a good thing, because if we keep losing, these games wouldn't matter. It feels good to be one win away."

Carpenter is one of the reasons the Sun Devils are having their recent success.

Over the past two games he has completed 80 percent of his passes, going 30-of-37 for 330 yards and three touchdowns. He has not thrown an interception over that span.

"His efficiency is back up there where it should be. He is being very productive without turning it over," coach Dirk Koetter said. "That is how he was playing all last year. I just think we went through a low or three-week stretch where he tried to do too much."

Oregon State quarterback Matt Moore went through a rough patch, too, and it got so bad that he was benched by the home fans at Reser Stadium in a loss to Washington State on Oct. 7.

The Beavers have won three straight since then. Moore completed 21 of 32 passes for 262 yards and a touchdown against USC, and celebrated on the field at Reser with the fans afterward.

"I'm just so happy for him. He's gone through so much this season from the fans, the alumni, broadcasters," center Kyle DeVann said. "No one has even given him the benefit of the doubt. People don't understand what kind of leader he is on the team."

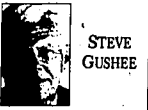

The Beavers need seven wins over a 13-game schedule — they include the season at Hawaii — to be bowl eligible.

The Sun Devils have defeated the Beavers in nine of their last 10 games. Last season the teams combined for exactly 1,000 yards in total offense, but six turnovers by the Beavers led to a 42-24 ASU victory.

National Cathedral is a place of contradictions

A Gothic church that boasts a rock from the moon in one of its stained glass windows ought to juggle ancient tradition and contemporary issues with ease. The Washington National Cathedral manages such apparent contradictions handily.

The magnificent building overlooking the nation's capital serves as a national church for a secular state that insists on the separation of the two. A secular nation of religious people says its official prayers there, celebrates and mourns its national events.

STEVE GUSHEE

The cathedral is a fascinating example of a workable church-state compromise.

The contradictions continue. The National Cathedral of a country with a conservative administration is governed by the Episcopal Church that ordains gay clergy and elevates women to its highest office.

This weekend, the cathedral will host multiple services to acknowledge a woman as the first presiding bishop in the Episcopal Church and the first female leader of any of the 38 provinces of the Anglican Communion. That's a spiritual union of more than 70 million people throughout the world.

Katharine Jefferts Schori, bishop of the Episcopal diocese of Nevada, will be invested with the symbols of the office of presiding bishop Saturday. The church's general convention elected her this summer.

Schori will preside and preach at the main Sunday service where she will be welcomed formally to the cathedral that will be her official seat.

The cathedral is a fascinating example of a workable church-state compromise. Congress granted the Episcopal Church a charter for it in 1863. Washington city designer Pierre L'Enfant planned for a church to be used for national purposes of public prayer and open to all.

President Theodore Roosevelt attended the groundbreaking in 1907. The final towers were completed in 1990. It is the sixth-largest cathedral in the world, the second-largest in America after New York's Cathedral of St. John the Divine, and measures nearly two football fields in length.

Builders used no public money, but the cathedral quickly became a place for the public to express a kind of national faith. Dwight Eisenhower's funeral was there and the inaugural prayer service for George W. Bush. Woodrow Wilson is buried in the building. Martin Luther King Jr. preached his last Sunday sermon there in 1968.

The cathedral hosted the National Prayer and Remembrance service after the attacks of 9/11. A National Cathedral run by Episcopalians for a secular state is a strange contradiction that seems to work.

Hagerman's St. Catherine's church completes stained-glass makeover

By Steve Crump
Times-News writer

HAGERMAN — The grudging light of a November afternoon plays coyly across the stained-glass soul of St. Catherine's Catholic Church.

"They look a little different, depending on the weather and the light and the time of day," said Christi Ritchie, who created the 10 windows that line the sanctuary. "Which one do you like best?"

St. Catherine's is a tiny church, even by small-town Idaho standards, yet window by window over the past five years, it's been transformed. St. Michael, St. Patrick, St. Ignatius Loyola ... now, in the far corner of the sanctuary, Mother Teresa, Ritchie, a stained-glass artist who's lived in Hagerman since 1986, reimaged St. Catherine's in translucent tints of ochre, cobalt, burgundy and dazzling green.

"We get a lot of requests for weddings now," said John Hurley, the church's deacon. "It's beautiful."

The cost — "several thousand" dollars for each window, according to Ritchie — has been paid for by individual donations and fundraising efforts by members of the St. Catherine's congregation and by others in the community.

It really has been a communitywide effort," Hurley said. The dedication of the final window in the sanctuary — Mother Teresa's — will mark the completion of the stained glass in the sanctuary of the Depression-era, New England-style frame church, but perhaps not the end of the project. The 32-family congregation is still debating whether to replace an 11th window, located in the vestry.

Stained-glass window artist Christi Ritchie recently completed a number of windows for St. Catherine's Catholic Church in Hagerman.

"It's just been a labor of love for me," said the Colorado-born Ritchie, a lifelong Catholic.

The original idea came from the Rev. Robb Keller, pastor of St. Edward's Catholic Church in Twin Falls from 1992-2000 and of the Immaculate Conception Catholic Church in Buhl from 2002 until his death two years ago. He often conducted services at St. Catherine's.

One by one, the congregation chose the subjects of each window, and Ritchie — who owns Prism Stained Glass in Hagerman — set to work on sketches.

"I worked from pictures of the saints," she said. "But I left the snakes out of the window of St. Patrick (the fifth century Irish bishop famously credited with expelling snakes from the Emerald Isle) so they wouldn't scare the children."

Each 3-foot-by-6 1/2-foot, roughly 200-pound window took hundreds of hours over a several-month period.

"I bought the faces and the hands from a company that specializes in making them," she said. "If you make them yourself from stained glass, they look so wrinkled and they're hard to recognize."

She recalls the day when her first window was installed.

"The installer was just covered in sweat," Ritchie said. "And I was praying."

She also made a set of interior doors, thereby creating a "cry" room that allows parents of small children to remove their kids from the sanctuary and still hear the service.

The whole project was both bigger — the first stained-glass church retrofit Ritchie had ever attempted — and more satisfying than Ritchie anticipated.

"I didn't do this," she said, surveying her surroundings. "God did this."

National evangelical leader admits to meth and massage but not gay sex

The Associated Press

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. — Evangelist Ted Haggard admitted Friday that he bought methamphetamine and received a massage from a gay prostitute who claims he was paid for drug-fueled trysts by the outspoken gay marriage opponent.

Haggard resigned Thursday as president of the National Association of Evangelicals and stepped down as leader of his Colorado megachurch while the two groups investigate the allegations.

Talking to reporters outside his house Friday, Haggard denied the sex allegations but said that he did buy meth from the man because he was curious.

"I bought it for myself but never used it," he said. "I was tempted, but I never used it."

Haggard, a married father of five, said he never had sex with Mike Jones, a 49-year-old male prostitute who sparked the scandal when he told a radio station he had had a three-year sexual relationship with the minister. He said he did get a massage from Jones after being referred to him by a

Denver hotel. Haggard resigned as president of the 30 million-member association Thursday and stepped down as the leader of the New Life Church pending investigations into Jones' claims.

The executive committee of the National Association of Evangelicals, which claims 30 million members, planned a conference call Friday and said it would release a statement afterward.

The acting pastor of Haggard's New Life Church, Ross Parsley, told congregants in an e-mail that the church's four-member board of overseers had met with Haggard on Thursday.

"It is important for you to know that he confessed to the overseers that some of the accusations against him are true. He has willingly and humbly submitted to the authority of the board of overseers and will remain on administrative leave during the course of the investigation, the e-mail stated.

The scandal hit as voters in Colorado and seven other states are getting ready to decide Tuesday on amendments banning gay marriage. Besides the proposed ban on the Colorado ballot, a separate measure would establish the legality of domestic partnerships providing same-sex couples with many of the rights of married couples.

Members of Haggard's 14,000-member megachurch were stunned.

"It's political, right before the elections," said Brian Boals, a New Life member for 17 years. Church member E.J. Cox, 25, called the claims "ridiculous."

"People are always saying stuff about Pastor Ted," she said. "You just sort of blow it off. He's just like anyone else in the public eye."

Jones said he decided to go public because he was also upset when he discovered Haggard and the New Life Church had publicly opposed same-sex marriage. "It made me angry that here's someone preaching about gay marriage and going behind the scenes having gay sex," he said.

Don't be too cynical today, Libra

HOROSCOPE Jeraline Saunders

IF NOV. 4 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You will have the energy and determination to accomplish miracles in the year ahead, but be careful not to bulldoze the people around you in the process. Your combination of graciousness, good looks and serious brainpower make you even more formidable. Use your good judgment at all times and don't take any gray-area shortcuts. Don't lose sight of the important people in your life while you're busy becoming rich and famous. Being home with the people you love can refresh you — as can lighthearted play, so make plenty of time for both.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Maintaining focus could be difficult since you are attracted to doing so many things at once. Ration your energy to get everything done, one thing at a time. Watch out for harsh words.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Don't panic if there seems to be a damper on romance and creativity for a few days—the stars will change soon and things will lighten up again. Remember your good ideas and put them into practice next week.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You have a black belt in chara today, but should use it wisely.

optimistic perception of the universe will return soon, for your immense relief.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): The night is made for love, as are the next three days (you probably have something in mind along those lines, anyway). Plan to spend time with your love if taken, or to look for a new flame.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Today is another great day for mental exercises of all kinds. You wit is sharp and your curiosity is boundless. If in doubt, err on the side of practicality; you could be unrealistic.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): If in the remotest doubt of what to say or do, zip your lip and keep it zipped for at least three more days. Rubbing any one the wrong way now could create a lasting hurt or enmity.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): If you could just bottle your appeal now, you'd make a mint. It's OK to use your charm, but be sure to stay completely honest at all times.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Everyone wants you on their team, or just to be your friend. Use your charm and charisma energy to forge ahead, but do so in a gentle manner. Time with a sweetheart will be well spent.

Trucker's lonely wife craves four-legged companionship

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: I have been married to "Jim" for 12 years. We recently got a dog, and I knew he wouldn't want her living in the house. I love dogs, and she's a very small breed. I want her to live in the house as a member of the family, but every time I mention it, Jim gets angry and says he just won't come home as often. My husband drives a truck and is often gone for weeks at a time. This has put a real stress on our relationship. I find his opinion cruel and inhumane. Should I push the issue or just drop it?

—LONELY IN BURLEY, IDAHO
DEAR LONELY: You forgot to mention that your husband is also somewhat selfish. He should be glad that you have a four-legged friend instead of a two-legged one. If he is gone for weeks at a time, it should not be surprising that you would like companionship during his extended absence. The best when they are a part of the household because they are usually better trained and better behaved, so stand your ground. Your husband should be ashamed of himself for threatening you, because the problem isn't the dog; it's that he's gone so much.

DEAR ABBY: Please do your readers a favor and advise them to keep a copy of their own medical history. When they have any medical work done, such as an EKG, blood work, X-rays, etc., request a copy from their doctor for their records.

According to our state board of physicians, while doctors are required to maintain their patients' medical history for five years, there is no incentive, oversight or penalty to ensure that they actually do.

I found this out when the clinic I went to disbanded, and medical records over six months old were discarded. I lost 20 years of my medical history and learned of other patients in the same boat. Now I ask for copies of everything.

—LEARNED TOO LATE, IN MARYLAND
DEAR LEARNED TOO LATE: That's good advice, and I'm pleased to help you publicize the message. The kind of record-keeping you describe has never been easier. I have received samples (in years past) of "workbooks" for filing medical and insurance information that can be purchased at local bookstores. I only wish they had been available to my mother when my brother and I were children. Then we wouldn't have to ask ourselves, "Was it chickenpox or measles? Mumps or swollen glands?"

DEAR ABBY: My teenage daughter, Dayna, is asked to baby-sit by a neighbor who seems to ask her only when the other teenage girl in the neighborhood is unavailable. This doesn't bother her so much as the fact that the last time she baby-sat, she was paid less than what the other teenager receives. Dayna is friendly with the other girl, and they talk, so my daughter was very hurt when she found out the neighbor thought she was worth less.

If Dayna is asked to baby-sit again, what should she say to these parents without causing a rift in the neighborhood?

—CONCERNED MOM IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR CONCERNED MOM: Baby-sitting is a business. When the neighbor calls, now that your daughter knows what her friend is being paid, she should tell the neighbor that her price has gone up and state what it is. Your daughter is under no obligation to tell the woman why, and if the woman is intelligent, she won't have to ask, because she will know the girls compared notes.

Orthodontist pays kids for their Halloween candy

WILLISTON, Vt. (AP) — Taking a radical approach toward preventive dentistry, an orthodontist is conducting a Halloween candy buyback.

Dan Ryan is paying $1 per pound to children and donating a matching amount to a food bank.

He said his goal is to promote a healthy Halloween and contribute to the community. "Halloween is a fun holiday for kids of all ages, but too much candy can contribute to tooth decay," he said.

Kids wearing braces are especially at risk from hard or sticky candies.

Ryan is urging his patients to eat soft candies, such as peanut butter cups, and brush their teeth soon after eating them. "We understand that kids are gonna have candies," he said.

Last year, Ryan collected about 200 pounds of candy that were shipped to Tanzania, where it was distributed by a former patient who was a Peace Corps volunteer.

IRAQ
Iraq braces for expected verdict in Saddam trial

BAGHDAD — Iraq canceled leave Friday for all military officers two days before an expected verdict — and possible death sentence — in the trial of Saddam Hussein for the second time this week, a top Bush administration official huddled with the Iraqi prime minister.

Many of Saddam's fellow Sunni Arabs, along with some Shiites and Kurds, are predicting a firestorm of violence if the court sentences the ex-president to death, as is widely expected. Bloodshed is already high, with police finding the bodies of 83 torture victims throughout the capital between 6 a.m. Thursday and 6 p.m. Friday.

Officials: About 100,000 refugees flee monthly

GENEVA — Nearly 100,000 Iraqis are fleeing each month to Syria and Jordan, forcing the United Nations to set aside its goal of helping refugees return home after the U.S.-led invasion, officials said Friday. Instead, the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees has drawn up plans to deal with the exodus of hundreds of thousands of Iraqis who are desperate to escape the violence, chief spokesman Ron Redmond said.

"Much of our work in the three years since the fall of the previous regime was based on the assumption that the domestic situation would stabilize and hundreds of thousands of previously displaced Iraqis would be able to go home," Redmond said. "Now, however, we're seeing more and more displacement linked to the continuing violence."

TEXAS
Border cameras suffer technical problems

AUSTIN — Texas launched its ambitious effort to use Internet users to watch the border for illegal immigrants. But the network of surveillance cameras Friday was plagued by technical problems, the images were grainy and the cameras were placed so high that it was hard to distinguish a person from, say, a bush.

Iran test-fires three new models of sea missiles

TEHRAN — Iran test-fired three new sea missiles in the Persian Gulf Friday, indicating that the maneuvers should send a clear message to the U.S. not to conduct any more military exercises in the area.

Iranian state television broadcast footage of the Revolutionary Guards firing three sea missiles with a range of about 106 miles. This was the second day in a row that Iran had announced the development and testing of missiles in the maneuvers.

The tests exercises came only days after the U.S. conducted naval maneuvers in the Gulf, and as U.N. Security Council members wrangle over what steps to take against Iran for ignoring its call to cease uranium enrichment a key step in making nuclear bombs.

"Our enemies should keep their hostility out of the Persian Gulf," said Sardar Fardavi, the deputy chief of the Revolutionary Guards navy.

"They should not initiate any move that would make the region tense," Fardavi said in a clear reference to the United States. The admiral was speaking to state radio about the U.S.-led maneuvers, which ended Monday. Fardavi called the exercises "adventurist."

Five years later FBI has no anthrax answers

WASHINGTON — Five years after a series of deadly anthrax-laced letters rattled the nation, the FBI has offered no indication that it is any closer to solving the first major act of bioterrorism on U.S. soil, leading critics to speculate the probe has stalled and to question how well federal officials would handle future attacks.

Members of Congress and targets of the attacks — which killed five people between Oct. 5 and Nov. 21, 2001, sickened 17 and exposed thousands of others — increasingly are expressing dismay that the FBI-led federal investigation, code-named Amerithrax, has been mismanaged. FBI officials have stopped providing regular briefings to victims and lawmakers about the investigation. The federal task force leading the investigation has shrunk in half. And it is in its third year.

Authorities prepare to transport the bull. The 3-year-old mixed breed bull had a nodule tag affixed to its back, indicating it wasn't far from the Final Roundup.

The bull was first spotted at 10 p.m. Thursday, running up and down an industrial street leading to Newark's heavily populated downtown. Police shooped onlookers away and blocked off streets to keep the crowd away from the animal, which managed to elude its pursuers until Friday morning.

"He was jumping over and over conditioning units and over small fences," infield said. "He was a little wild." Infield finally chased the bull into the empty parking lot, where he tossed a rope around its neck and nudged it close enough for a second animal control officer to jab it with a tranquilizer syringe.

"He's a sweet boy," Infield said, rubbing the animal's flank. Authorities called in a trailer from Popcorn Park Zoo in Lacey Township, a refuge for abused or unwanted animals that is operated by the Humane Societies. Infield said the bull would be taken there to live out the rest of his life.

Five years later FBI has no anthrax answers

sharp contrast to bold predictions the agency made about the investigation in its early days. "Their public pronouncements about their confidence level were obviously way off the mark all the way along," said Tom Daschle, the former Democratic senator from South Dakota whose Capitol Hill office was one of the targets of the attacks. "It has sort of been the domestic version of Iraq. They made a lot of assumptions that turned out to be accurate."

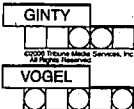

Daschle, now a senior fellow at the Center for American Progress, said he asked the FBI about a month ago for an update but was rebuffed. "Clearly, this whole investigation has gone very cold," he said. "Because it has become so cold, they are all the more apprehensive about acknowledging that they do not have any real good evidence or leads."

Alberto R. Gonzalez, Grassley is threatening to subpoena FBI officials to testify before Congress or to hold up Justice Department nominations if the agency does not divulge more information soon.

The FBI says its investigation remains highly active. It has told lawmakers that it would not provide any more briefings on the case in part out of fear that sensitive information would be leaked to the media. "We have a substantial number of agents continuing to work on that case, and my expectation is that it will be solved and that the person or persons responsible will be brought to justice," FBI Director Robert S. Mueller III said in an interview in September. "Some cases take longer than others."

The anthrax attacks triggered one of the federal government's costliest manumissions ever — starting just a week after the Sept. 11 attacks — when letters containing anthrax began coursing through the malls, targeting members of the media and the Capitol Hill offices of Daschle and Sen. Patrick J. Leahy, D-Vt.

The FBI said it has conducted 9,100 interviews and obtained 6,000 subpoenas. It has hired psychologists, handwriting analysts and forensic analysts. It has spent millions on scientific studies to determine everything from the strain of the bacteria to the water used to prepare the lethal spores. And it has tracked a spate of anthrax "hoax" letters; one such letter was received late last month by the Los Angeles Times.

Supervalu moving 400 Idaho jobs to Minnesota

By Christopher Smith
Associated Press writer

BOISE — Supervalu Inc. said Friday it would transfer 400 positions from the former Albertsons Inc. Idaho headquarters to the company's corporate offices in Minnesota over the next 18 months.

Supervalu acquired about 1,100 grocery stores from Albertsons' in June when the Boise-based supermarket chain was split into three parts and sold. An investment consortium and the drugstore chain CVS Corp. acquired the other parts.

Supervalu, the nation's third-largest grocery chain behind Kroger Co. and Safeway Inc., had been reviewing duplication within the two operations. Chairman and CEO Jeff Noddle said the company chose to consolidate its merchandising and marketing staff in the Minneapolis area, transferring 400 positions now in Boise.

"That's the one area of the company that has to be together in one location because they interact every day to deliver our procurement, to fulfill our promotional functions and to meet with vendors," Noddle told The Associated Press on Friday.

Supervalu has 5,600 employees in Idaho, including 2,000 corporate positions at the former Albertsons headquarters complex in Boise. Noddle said the company did not know how many of the 400 Idaho employees would apply to continue working in their positions in Minneapolis.

"The jobs are going to go to Minnesota and we are encouraging people in Idaho to apply for those," he said. "But we recognize realistically, not everybody can move."

Boise Mayor David Bieter and Idaho business leaders had traveled to Minneapolis in August to encourage Supervalu to retain a strong presence in Idaho.

"While we're disappointed that these 400 jobs will be transitioning out of Boise we are encouraged that so many Supervalu corporate jobs will remain and that Supervalu has reiterated its commitment to the Treasure Valley," Bieter said Friday. But U.S. Sen. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, was "angered and frustrated" Supervalu had decided to pull jobs from Idaho.

"There are many good reasons why companies and their employees want to locate in our state and Supervalu should open offices and follow the leaders back to Idaho," Craig said in a statement.

Noddle said Supervalu would continue to "operate" its Intermountain West regional division from Boise, which oversees Albertsons' brand stores in markets such as Boise, Portland, Ore., Salt Lake City and Seattle.

Of the 50 executive leadership posts named since Supervalu acquired Albertsons' Inc., 20 positions at the vice president level or higher have remained in Boise while the remainder are in Minneapolis.

"We had said we would have an important presence in Boise, and we have very talented people in both locations," Noddle said. "We look forward to being a major corporate citizen in both communities for years to come."

Cabela's might open in N. Idaho

The Associated Press

POST FALLS — Officials with Cabela's Inc., a national outdoor sporting goods retailer, say a proposed store in northern Idaho appears likely.

"We are very close to finalizing negotiations on this new store in Post Falls," Dennis Higby, Cabela's president and chief executive officer, said in a statement Thursday.

"Idaho has been a great supporter of Cabela's for many years through our catalogs and Internet site as well as our new Boise store."

Plans for the Post Falls store call for a 125,000-square-foot showroom with a "Conservation Mountain" complete with streams and waterfalls. It would open in the fall of 2007.

Post Falls Mayor Clay Larkin said Cabela's would be an economic boost to the city.

He said shoppers would be drawn from Montana, Canada, the Tri-Cities and Yakima, Wash.

He predicted sales at the store would come from tourists drawn by Cabela's, and would not take away business from smaller outdoor shops in the area.

According to Cabela's, the store would employ about 250 people and include a gun library, indoor archery range, and a deli serving wild-game sandwiches.

The company, based in Sydney, Neb., has been considering Post Falls and Liberty Lake, Wash., as the location for a new store to serve the Spokane-north Idaho market.

The Post Falls site hinged on the building of a freeway exit from Interstate 90 leading to the store.

Cabela's said it would pay the $12 million to $15 million for the exit if the company could get back some of its sales tax for five years.

Lawmakers in northern Idaho introduced the proposal to give Cabela's back some of the sales tax earlier this year, but it didn't make it through the legislature.

Rep. Bob Norval, R-Coeur d'Alene, said Cabela's planned to go ahead with the Post Falls location even without any promises involving the freeway exit.

"I think it's pretty official," Norval told The Spokesman-Review of Spokane.

In August, the company opened a store in Boise, one of 18 it has in the U.S.

Stocks fall as oil rises, offsetting gain from drop in unemployment

By Tim Paradis
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — Wall Street ended the week with a moderate decline Friday after oil prices jumped on word of possible attacks in Nigeria near production facilities. The rise in crude prices sapped enthusiasm over a Labor Department report that the nation's unemployment rate fell to a five-year low.

While stocks overall fell for a third straight day, the Dow Jones industrial average, the best-known stock index, logged its first six consecutive day drop since June 2005.

Light, sweet crude rose $1.26 to $59.14 on the New York Mercantile Exchange after U.S. diplomats in Nigeria warned that militants are planning a series of kidnappings and bombing attacks in the coming days in areas where oil is extracted.

The Labor Department said the unemployment rate fell to 4.4 percent last month from 4.6 percent in September, causing some concerns that the economy has slowed too quickly.

For more than a week, investors have been nervous about the strength of the economy following a stream of disappointing data. While Wall Street wants growth to cool so the threat of inflation will dissipate and the Federal Reserve can cut interest rates, a precipitous slowdown could slide into consumer spending and corporate profits.

Alan Glynn, senior investment strategist and director of asset allocation for Truco Capital Management, said the employment figures suggest the economy has more power than expected going into the holiday spending season but warned that the strength could make the Fed uneasy.

Investors have to digest the notion that the Fed is going to remain poised to lift interest rates as we go into 2007.

The Dow closed down 32.50, or 0.27 percent, at 11,986.04. It was the average's first close under 12,000 since Oct. 19, when it finished above that milestone for the first time.

Broader stock indicators also closed lower. The Standard & Poor's 500 index fell 3.04, or 0.22 percent, to 1,364.30, and the Nasdaq composite index fell 3.23, or 0.14 percent, to 2,339.79.

For the week, the Dow fell 0.86 percent, while the S&P lost 0.95 percent and the Nasdaq lost 0.84 percent.

Friday's economic data sent bonds falling sharply; the yield on the benchmark 10-year Treasury note jumped to

PMT to pay $265,000 to customer dividends

RUPERT — Project Mutual Telephone's board of directors recently approved $265,000 to be paid to member customers in patronage dividends this year, the largest amount in the history of the 90-year-old cooperative, according to a PMT news release.

The dividend each customers receives depends on the amount of business they have done with the cooperative. The more PMT services used by each member, the larger the patronage check. This year's dividend payment will be issued in December and represents information earned in 2005 and 2006. Checks will be mailed in early December. For those whose dividends are $10 or less, the credit will be applied to their December bill.

Board of Medicine Web site ranked 8th in nation

BOISE — The Idaho State Board of Medicine's Web site — www.bom.state.id.us — was ranked 8th in a national study released last week by Public Citizen, a consumer advocacy group.

Public Citizen evaluated each state's profile and disciplinary information using criteria that fit into two basic categories — physician information available to consumers and methods consumers can retrieve disciplinary information about physicians. In addition to providing information on physicians and six other types of health professionals licensed through the state, the Board of Medicine's Web site allows citizens and businesses to verify a license, obtain a license application, check a profile, and view and download board actions, according to the study.

Wal-Mart cuts electronics prices

By Anne D'Innocenzo
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — First, toys, now electronics.

Wal-Mart, which began discounting its holiday toys in mid-October, announced on Friday deep price cuts on almost 100 electronics, setting the stage for price wars in advance of the holiday season.

The discounting move, which focuses on high definition TVs, cellphones and digital cameras, came a day after the world's largest retailer announced disappointing November sales and a lackluster October outlook.

The discounts, or what Wal-Mart Stores Inc. counts as rollbacks, are effective through Dec. 31.

They include such items as Panasonic 42-inch HD plasma TVs, slashed to $1,294 from $1,794; the Polaroid LCD HDTVs, reduced to $997, from $1,297; and Cingular C139 prepaid phones, marked down to $19.97 from $29.98.

On Thursday, Wal-Mart, which has stores in Jerome and Burley and is looking into building a Twin Falls store, said it planned to "reinforce Wal-Mart's price leadership position" in such areas as toys and electronics.

Wal-Mart said that its move to cut prices on more than 100 holiday toys is already resulting in a "significant lift in unit volume."

Given Wal-Mart's size and dominance among U.S. retailers, the move seemed likely to be more bad news for its electronics rivals like Best Buy Co. and Circuit City Stores Inc.

Analysts are predicting slower sales growth this year for the consumer electronics industry as prices for products like flat-panel TVs drop, big draws from holidays past like digital cameras, mature and no big hits have dropped up.

Wal-Mart's same-store sales in the U.S. for the four weeks ended Oct. 27 grew 0.5 percent, a figure that includes growth of a mere 0.3 percent at Wal-Mart Stores and 2 percent at Sam's Club.

Analysts surveyed by Thomson Financial expected same-store sales to rise 1.5 percent.

Wal-Mart blamed the lackluster sales on a variety of factors, including a failed apparel strategy that went too trendy and a store remodeling program that it says disrupted the business.

The company also said that its sales, which were measured against September 2005 figures, paled in comparison because the year-earlier results were blunted by a rush of pre- and post-hurricane shopping.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"It is so stupid of modern civilization to have given up believing in the devil when he is the only explanation of it."
 — Ronald Knox

On the route to six hearts there was confusion over the meaning of the four-no-trump call. Was it Blackwood, or was it quantitative, asking North to bid on only with a maximum? South intended it as the latter; North took the other view.

On the lead of the spade queen, South was threatened with a slow loser in both trumps and diamonds. Was there any way — other than a miraculous trump position — to come home?

South spotted a chance. He won the spade lead in hand and cashed three rounds of clubs at once, essential lest East get some of his clubs away prematurely.

Now he crossed to the spade ace and ruffed a spade as East pitched a diamond. He next took the king and ace of diamonds and ruffed another spade, as East could do no better than discard again. Had he ruffed in, either high or low, he would have given up his natural trump trick.

At this point South had taken three club tricks, two spades, two diamonds, and two ruffs in hand. He was down to three trumps and a losing diamond in both hands. When he exited with a diamond, West discarded a spade, and East took the trick. Now, in the three-card ending, East led a low trump (hoping his partner had the Q-9 or Q-10 of hearts), but he was out of luck.

South took West's queen with dummy's ace and finessed in hearts, making his slam — a perfect example of the Devil's Coup.

ANSWER: It is very easy to overvalue all good hands and undervalue the bad ones. Here, though you have an 18-count, a simple raise to two spades is quite sufficient. Your partner's call of one-spade suggests he has no more than nine points, and he may have only four spades (three on a bad day!). Even two spades may be a struggle, facing a weak hand.
