Last call a lot earlier at Phat Eddy's

Club connected in recent murder closing at 10 p.m. until special-use permit obtained

By Cassidy Friedman
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — One in a hundred. Of the 100 calls made to 911 from Phat Eddy's nightclub in the last 365 days, only one brought news of a killing. But the unlucky number belonged to Luis Carlos Ramirez, a 21-year-old student at the College of Southern Idaho who was fatally shot Nov. 19 in the parking lot outside the bar. Action against Phat Eddy's, 233 Fifth Ave. S., was swift. On Nov. 22, the city ordered the two-year-old bar to start closing at 10 p.m. until it obtained a special-use permit to stay open late. The business had been serving alcohol until 1 a.m., at which point it became an alcohol-free dance club until 4 a.m. On Jan. 9, the nightclub will ask for a permit to stay open until 1 a.m.

Teacher perks

Idaho Board of Education considers teacher incentives

By Jesse Harlan Alderman
Associated Press writer

BOISE — The state Board of Education will consider drafting proposed legislation that would offer financial incentives, such as student loan forgiveness, to increase the number of teachers in high demand subjects like math, science and special education. If the board agrees at its scheduled Thursday meeting in Pocatello, the proposed loan forgiveness plan would be added to a long and expensive education wish list to be presented to the state Legislature, which convenes in January.

Budget writers are wary of some of the plans, while receptive to others, but one fact is certain: there is not enough money to fund all the proposals at once, said state Sen. Dean Cameron, R-Rupert, a member of the joint budget committee.

A sample of the education measures seeking state money could include the loan forgiveness plan, building a new multi-million-dollar community college and paying for new high school graduation requirements in math and science, as well as new college scholarships for the financially needy.

"The state board and by large has always been treated with respect and we'll listen to their needs and desires," Cameron said. "Their requests are pretty voluminous this year. It'll be difficult."

The board will discuss offering three different incentives targeted to teachers in the high-demand areas, said Luci Willis, a board spokeswoman. The proposal could include state money to pay for current

Fish and Game examines wings for clues to bird-population health

By Matt Christensen
Times-News writer

FILED — The Idaho Department of Fish and Game knows how to throw a party.

Eighteen bird experts, two boxes of donuts, a canister of coffee, two slow cookers full of hot food and a few dozen burlap sacks stuffed with sage grouse wings.

Welcome to the department's annual "Wing Bee" — when Fish and Game biologists from across the state meet to gather information about the state's sage grouse population.

Fish and Gamers from the Treasure Valley, as far north as Salmon and as far east as Pocatello met Wednesday in a garage at Magic Valley Steelhead Hatchery to examine grouse wings harvested during the September hunting season. The wings give biologists clues about the health of grouse populations across the state.

Each hunting season, Fish and Game places barrels in hunting areas for sportsmen to deposit one wing from each harvested bird. It's not mandatory, but most hunters comply. Other wings are gathered at check stations in

Husband convicted in wife's murder tries to collect life insurance

By Alicia P.O. Wittmeyer
Associated Press writer

BOISE — A Mountain Home man convicted of killing his wife by poisoning her with sleeping pills and drain cleaner wants Idaho's highest court to help him collect on her life insurance. Larry Severson, 52, was not present in Idaho Supreme Court Wednesday because he is serving a life sentence in prison. But his attorney, Jay Clark, argued that Severson should get half the payout of his wife's $200,000 policy under Idaho's community property laws. Under Idaho's "slayer statute," a person convicted of killing another cannot receive any benefits, including collecting on a life insurance policy, from the victim's death. Judge Michael Wetherell originally ruled in 4th District Court last year that the insurance money should go to the wife's estate.

But because Mary Severson's policy was paid for with mutual funds from their marriage, half the proceeds belong to Larry Severson, regardless of whether he killed her, Clark argued.

Audit recommends letting more fires burn

GRANTS PASS, Ore. — A federal audit says the U.S. forest Service should let more wildfires burn and demand that state and local governments pick up a bigger share of firefighting costs that regularly top $1 billion a year. The audit released Wednesday by the U.S. Department of Agriculture's inspector general said protecting private property where cities meet forests, known as the wildland-urban interface, is the major factor driving up Forest Service firefighting costs.

the city of Twin Falls police. "That understanding with the police may not stop the public backlash."

That backlash began after Nov. 19, when, according to court records, an inebriated James M. Steel tried to enter the nightclub with the gun tucked into his pants.

Alex Williams, the head bouncer at the door, told Steel to put the gun in his car. Steel left the area. Five minutes later, Williams said he heard a "pop." Police were called at 1:54 a.m. — they won't say by whom.

Some say that Eddy's invites violence by being open late and does not do enough to stop it. Others say the staff does everything it can to reduce the violence on and near its grounds and often gets blamed for violence caused by non-patrons. That Eddy's property ends at its front door, according to Eddy Sabia, the manager and former owner of Phat Eddy's and ex-husband of Jodi Sabia.

The parking lot falls under city police jurisdiction, Jodi Sabia said.

She said security guards manning the door are still expected to call 911 if they see an incident in the parking lot. But she said that when the city closed Lucky's, a Main Avenue bar known to have many police calls, it seemed to discourage bars from calling 911.

"I don't think that bar owners and security should be afraid to call the police," Jodi Sabia said. "At Lucky's bar, the number of calls was something they used to say, 'You're unsafe.'"

Wade Koepnick, who worked as a disc jockey at Phat Eddy's for 10 months, said the management's fear of making calls for service often stopped security from calling police.

"I would have gotten fired if I called the cops," he said. "Their policy? If there's a problem, we'll handle it ourselves in order to not lose our permit. But I'd see guys in there that would be in fights three to four times and I couldn't understand why they'd let them back in. They'd just shuttle them into the parking lot and they'd turn a blind eye."

Chad Wells is a DJ at Phat Eddy's and his wife tends bar. He said fighting comes with the territory of late-night partying. It's a Catch-22, he said.

"You're trying to provide a service. You can have all them kids out on the street or congested in one place," he said. "I think our guys are doing their job, but I think there could be some improvements."

Before Steel attempted to enter Phat Eddy's with a gun, court records show, he was first out partying at Kruezer's, a bar a few blocks from Phat Eddy's.

Randy Paulino, Phat Eddy's general manager who is buying the business from Jodi Sabia, said Phat Eddy's gets blamed for incidents involving patrons at Woody's, a bar next-door to Phat Eddy's and Kruezer's.

"Usually, when something's happening down the deck by Woody's, it gets closed on us," Paulino said.

Jodi Sabia said close to 30 percent of calls for service made to Phat Eddy's involve patrons of other bars.

Paulino said there were small acts of violence are not tolerated. Security refuses entry to anyone on a blacklist more than 70 names long.

"The thing that simply blows my mind," Paulino said, "is the Nov. 19 killing. We simply had nothing to do with it."

Wings

This year, the department collected several thousand wings.

"The most important thing we learn is how many chicks survive the winter," said Tom Hemker, a wildlife program coordinator with the department's Boise office. "What we're really doing is getting a good index for how the population is."

Wing length, color and molting patterns reveal a grouse's age and sex. Bird experts also can determine if the harvested bird has reproduced based on wing characteristics.

It's not a layman's job. Before the actual data collection, the Fish and Game experts practiced identifying bird sex and age, and then they took a practice test.

When the test was over and everyone had eaten a donut, they gathered in five-person circles. Burlap sacks in the middle, each person used a ruler and one person in each group recorded measurements on a clipboard.

"It's serious work, but the experts tried to have as much fun as is possible in a frozen garage full of feathers."

"For lunch today, we're having sage grouse fondue," cracked David Mussil of the Jerome field office.

Hemker grinned.

"You usually have feathers in your ears for a few weeks after this," he said.

But it's worth it. The department will analyze the data next week and use it to structure management strategies for the struggling bird.

teachers to get advanced certificates, a fund to pay off the student loans of creditable teachers and a scholarship and generous state loan for college students who commit to teach in Idaho after graduation.

"The point is to get more teachers in the classroom and make it attractive, especially in areas like math and science where you can make a lot more money in the private sector," Willis said.

Depending on the board's recommendation, education staff could draft legislation to bring to the Legislature this coming session. At that point, the board could estimate the annual cost of such a plan, Willis said.

The financial incentives would dovetail with state boards plan to increase the number of math and science classes required for high school graduation, Willis said. "The enhanced graduation requirements would also need lawmakers' approval."

Willis acknowledged it could be tough to get legislative funding for several of the board's spending requests.

That's especially likely if lawmakers decide that recent voter rejection of Proposition 1 — a ballot referendum aimed at increasing spending on education by $219 million per year — means Idahoans are not demanding more money for schools.

"It's not adding money, existing programs," Willis said. "It's adding programs. It's not maintenance; it's enhancement."

Cameron said Proposition 1 failed primarily because voters feared an additional sales tax increase after the Legislature already hiked the tax by a penny-on-the-dollar this summer to pay for property tax cuts.

He said most lawmakers want to invest in better schools and community colleges, but they cannot agree on the plans.

The stalemate is best evidenced by a joint legislative panel designed to make a recommendation on financing new community colleges. The group met several times over the summer, but failed to reach a compromise proposal, existing programs," Willis said. "It's adding programs. It's not maintenance; it's enhancement."

Frist abandons plans for 2008 presidential bid

By David Espo
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Sen. Majority Leader Bill Frist renounced a bid for the White House in 2008 on Wednesday, an early dropout from the most wide-open presidential race in decades.

"In the Bible, God tells us for everything there is a season, and for me, for now, this season of being an elected official has come to a close," said the Tennessee Republican, a surgeon before he entered politics in 1994.

While the first national convention delegates won't be chosen for more than a year, jockeying among potential presidential contenders is well under way.

Frist made his announcement as several potential GOP hopefuls were descending on Miami for the annual meeting of the Republican Governors' Association. Among them were Massachusetts Gov. Mitt Romney, outgoing head of the group, and Arkansas Gov. Mike Huckabee. Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., planned private meetings with governors Thursday followed by a reception.

The roster of potential candidates in both parties is long in the first White House campaign since 1928 in which neither an incumbent president nor vice president is in the early mix of candidates.

Frist's brief statement did not specify a reason for dropping out of a race he had eyed for more than a year, and had included trips to the key early states of Iowa and New Hampshire.

In a statement, he said he "will take a sabbatical from public life" and "return to my professional roots as a healer, and to refocus my creative energies on innovative solutions to seemingly insurmountable challenges Americans face."

His decision capped a 12-year career in politics marked by a speedy rise but an uncertain tenure at the peak of Senate power.

He won his Senate seat in 1994 and pledged to serve no longer than two six-year terms.

His launching pad to national power was the chairmanship of the Senate GOP campaign committee, which gained seats under his direction in 2002. That, in turn, positioned him to become majority leader when Mississippi Sen. Trent Lott made racially insensitive comments after the election and was forced to step aside.

As majority leader, Frist worked to implement President Bush's agenda, from passage of tax cuts to confirmation of conservative judges. He played a significant role in legislation that overhauled Medicare and created a prescription drug benefit.

His politics and his medical training collided in 2005 in the case of Terri Schiavo, and he was widely criticized for pandering to religious conservatives by injecting himself into the debate over the brain-damaged woman. Doctors in the case said she was in a persistent vegetative state. Frist, in his office in the Capitol, viewed a videotape of her, then publicly questioned the diagnosis. An autopsy later confirmed their judgment, not his.

Device turns out to be ancient Greek computer

Los Angeles Times

After a century of study, scientists have unlocked the secrets of a mysterious 2,100-year-old device known as the "Antikythera mechanism," showing it to be a complex and uncannily accurate astronomical computer.

The mechanism, recovered in more than 80 highly corroded fragments from a sunken Roman ship, could predict the positions of the sun and planets, show the location of the moon and even forecast eclipses.

The international team of scientists reported Thursday that the first-century B.C. device, the earliest known example of an arrangement of gear wheels, shows a technological sophistication that was not seen again until clockwork mechanisms were introduced in the 14th century.

The results "imply that Greek technology was much more advanced in this area than was previously thought," said the team's leader, physicist Mike C. Edmunds of Cardiff University, United Kingdom. "If they could do this, what else could they do?"

An even bigger question, according to science historian Francois Charette of Ludwig-Maximilians University of Munich, Germany, is why the technology disappeared for more than 1,400 years before reappearing in a less advanced form.

"Much of the mind-boggling technological sophistication available in some parts of the Hellenistic and Greco-Roman world was simply not transmitted further," he wrote in an editorial accompanying the team's report in the journal Nature.

U.S. settles lawsuit filed by Ore. lawyer

By Dan Eggen
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The U.S. government agreed Wednesday to pay $2 million to settle a lawsuit filed by an Oregon lawyer who was arrested and jailed for two weeks in 2004 after the FBI bungled a fingerprint match and mistakenly linked him to a terrorist attack in Spain.

Mayfield

Under the terms of the settlement, filed Wednesday in U.S. District Court in Portland, the government also issued an unusual apology to Brandon Mayfield for the "suffering" caused by his wrongful arrest and imprisonment. It acknowledged that the ordeal was "deeply upsetting" to Mayfield and his family.

Mayfield will be able to continue pursuing his legal challenge to the constitutionality of the USA Patriot Act and terrorism law, which was used to obtain his personal records while he was under investigation.

The payment is a clear embarrassment for the FBI, which arrested Mayfield as a material witness in May 2004 after FBI examiners erroneously linked him to a partial fingerprint on a bag of detonators found after terrorists bombed commuter trains in Madrid, killing 191 people. The bureau compounded its error by stridently resisting the conclusions of the Spanish National Police, which notified the FBI that the fingerprint did not belong to Mayfield three weeks before he was arrested.

Mayfield's lawsuit alleged that his civil rights had been violated and that he was arrested because he is a Muslim convert who had represented some defendants in terrorism-related cases.

The settlement includes payments of $1.9 million to Mayfield and $25,000 each to his wife and three daughters, according to court documents. The amount is more than twice what the U.S. government agreed to pay earlier this year to Wen Ho Lee, a U.S. nuclear scientist who alleged that officials violated privacy laws by identifying him as a suspect in a spying investigation.

The government has also agreed to destroy all material obtained during electronic surveillance of Mayfield and from clandestine searches of his home and office.

The case has become a potent symbol for civil liberties advocates who argue that it shows how easily the government can abuse its powers to detain alleged or suspected suspects under relaxed standards of probable cause.

Mayfield said in a statement Wednesday that he was threatened with the death penalty while in custody, that he and his family were targeted "because of our Muslim religion," and that he looked forward "to the day when the Patriot Act is declared unconstitutional."

"The power of the government to secretly search your home or business without probable cause, under the guise of an alleged terrorist investigation, must be stopped," Mayfield said.

Justice Department spokeswoman Tasia Scolinos issued a statement emphasizing that the FBI does not aware of Mayfield's Muslim faith when he was first identified as a suspect and that the FBI "did not misuse any provisions of the USA Patriot Act." Scolinos also said the FBI has implemented reforms to avoid a similar mistake in the future.

A report released in March by Justice Department Inspector General Charles Finsch found that while Mayfield's religion was not a factor in his initial identification, it contributed to the FBI's reluctance to re-examine its conclusions after challenges from Spanish police.

Army sees increase in number of soldiers losing their security clearance because of heavy debt

By Thomas Watkins
Associated Press writer

SAN DIEGO — Like the other branches of the military, the Army is seeing a marked increase in the number of troops stripped of their security clearances because they are so deep in debt, according to military data obtained by The Associated Press.

Soldiers need security clearance when they work with seer information and sometimes when they are sent overseas. The Pentagon says financial problems can distract personnel from their duties or make them vulnerable to bribery and treason.

The number of soldiers who are losing their clearances because of financial problems has nearly doubled over last year but is still an extremely small percentage of the Army's ranks.

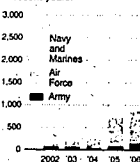

The Associated Press reported in October that growing numbers of Navy, Marine Corps and Air Force troops are so deep in debt they are losing their security clearances. The Army refused to supply data at the time, but later complied with a Freedom of Information Act request from the AP.

Over the past five years, 400 Army soldiers have been stripped of their clearances for financial reasons; during that span, the Army granted 747,000 clearances. After hovering at around 70 clearances per year since 2002, the number jumped to 149 in the fiscal year that ended in September.

Army spokesman Paul Boyce said the relatively low numbers reflect efforts to manage soldiers about money management. "Soldiers from their first days in basic training are reminded of the Army's policy on indebtedness and the possible consequences," he said.

Indebted troops

The number of troops denied or revoked a security clearance due to finances has increased in recent years.

* 2002 through Sept. 21. Navy and Marine Corps data not available for the year.

SOURCES: U.S. Air Force, Navy, AP, Marine Corps

Data supplied by the Navy, Marine Corps and Air Force showed that the number of clearances denied for financial reasons rose every year between 2002 and 2005, climbing ninefold from 204 at the start of the period to 2,654 last year. More than 7,000 troops in the three branches have lost their clearances because of finances' since 2002.

The increase comes as the military is stretched thin by the fighting in Iraq and Afghanistan.

Military officials said they saw no evidence that personnel have been deliberately falling into debt to stay out of combat.

All the other armed services offer financial planning classes, too. Those branches blame the rise in clearance denials on a lack of financial smarts among recruits; reckless spending among those cadetted to make it home alive from a tour of duty; and the profusion of "payday lenders" — businesses that allow military personnel to borrow against their next paycheck at extremely high interest rates.

Dress code yet another legal trap for teachers

Add another item to the list of drawbacks to working as a teacher. You might be sued for doing your job.

That's the latest threat that has surfaced in the Minidoka County School District recently, in discussions related to the district's dress code.

West Minico Middle School Principal Suzette Miller told the district's school board last week that the faculty has clamped down on violations of the dress code. "We do not allow cleavage; we do not allow short skirts," she said. But some male teachers have hesitated addressing certain situations because they feared being accused of sexual harassment.

"They aren't alone either. It's a complete embarrassment to me," said bus driver Colin Marriott to the South Idaho Press.

That shouldn't be the case, however. The blushing parties should be students who are baring some skin, not to mention their parents who let them walk out the door in fashions more suitable for the beach than for band class.

School districts across the valley are creating dress codes (in some instances, with students' help) because they instill discipline and respect in the classroom. But when educators don't think they can enforce the code, because of the threat of legal retaliation, then discipline has gone to the spring chickens.

If that's the case, school officials in the Minico School District, or anywhere else for that matter, should make their jobs easier with three simple words.

Send 'em home.

Don't make them change with clothing provided by the school, don't send them to detention in the office. Just have them call the parents, and send them home. Parents may not pay attention to the fashions they or their kids buy at the store. They may be just as clueless when their kids leave in the morning. But a call to home or the office explaining that their student isn't dressed suitably for school ought to grab their attention.

Some kids hide their "fashionable" light clothing underneath bulky jackets or sweaters when they leave home, and then shed them during the day. This is where teachers have to step in and make students toe the line.

When a teacher does have to confront a student, it shouldn't be a legal trap. If an educator feels that confronting a student about the dress code would create a sensitive situation, perhaps a colleague of the same gender can be asked to intervene.

In any case, the recommendation should be subtle and succinct. If you're not dressed to learn, you can go learn somewhere else.

Our view:
Districts have a right to strictly enforce dress codes without fearing legal retaliation.

What do you think? We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

Sports, comics are young readers' favorites

Hi! My name is Jackie. I go to Popplewell Elementary School. I'm 10 years old, and all of my classmates thank you for giving us the newspaper.

My teacher loves the funnies. We especially like to read Pearls Before Swine. We also read Garfield.

I also like that you put sports in the news. I'm really interested in sports. I also like to see my sister's pictures in the sports section. JACKIE SANCHEZ Buhl

Ed board should leave Sali alone

I find it amusing to observe the lengths the Times-News editorial board will go to marginalize Idaho's newly victorious congressman, Bill Sali. The board is suffering from extreme cognitive dissonance over the fact that Sali impressed his congressional colleagues so much that they elected him president of the freshman class.

After all, political correctness demands that anyone who dares to cross the line of actually speaking out to protect women with the abortion and breast cancer link should be run out of town on a rail, not elected to Congress.

I ask the esteemed editorial board: Have any of you taken the time to actually read the volumes of available evidence showing that abortions, especially those experienced in the teen years, have an apparent link to heightened risks of breast cancer? Or is this clinical observation so preposterous to the avid abortion fan that no amount of medical facts could possibly usher in an advanced understanding?

The board's additional charge that Bill Sali "is so far out of the mainstream" is also quite amusing. After all, if receiving the majority vote in a general election is not a valid indicator of being in the mainstream, I don't know what is.

My wish is that, we the readers of the Magic Valley, could vote with our dollars. If we only had a choice in the local print media, perhaps the Times-News would finally discover who it is that's actually out of the mainstream.

At least our political system still offers us a choice. The leadership of Congressman Bill Sali will serve this state well. Idaho is what America used to be. KELLY WALTON Burley

No one to lose to in Iraq

After the Thanksgiving Day Massacre of Shilites by Sunnis, President Bush should go on Rupert Murdoch's Fox News and give an interview headlined "I did it, here's how the civil war in Iraq happened."

He could describe, hypothetically, a series of naive, arrogant and self-defeating blunders, including his team's failure to comprehend that in the Arab world, revenge and religious zealotry can be stronger compulsions than democracy and prosperity.

But W. is not yet able to view his actions in subjunctive terms, much less reflective ones. Bush family retainers are working to deprogram him, but the president is loath to strip off his delusions of adequacy.

W. declined to tear himself away from his free-range turkey and pumpkin mousse trifle at Camp David and reassure Americans about the deadliest sectarian attack in Baghdad since the U.S. invaded. More than 200 Shilites were killed and hundreds more wounded by car bombs and a mortar attack in Sadr City. October was the bloodiest month yet for civilians, and in the last four months, 3,600 men, women and children have died.

American helicopters and Iraqi troops did not arrive for two hours after Sunni gunmen began a siege on the

MAUREN DOWD

Health Ministry controlled by the Shilite cleric Muqtada al-Sadr, who has a militia that kills Sunnis and is married to the Malki government.

Continuing the cycle of revenge on Friday, Shilite militiamen threw kerosene on six Sunnis and set them on fire, as Iraqi soldiers watched, and killed 19 more.

The New York Times and other news outlets have been figuring out if it's time to break with the administration's use of euphemisms like "sectarian conflict." How long can you have an ever-descending descent without actually reaching the civil war?

Some analysts are calling it genocide or clash of civilizations, arguing that civil war is too genteel a term for the butchery that is destroying a nation before our very eyes. Anthony Shadid, the Washington Post reporter who won a Pulitzer Prize for his Iraq coverage, went back recently and described the final, frenzied maturity of once-inchoate forces unleashed more than three years ago by the invasion. There was civil-war-style sec-ularian killing. Its echoes in Lebanon a generation ago. Alongside it were gangland turf battles over money, power and survival; a raft of political parties and their militias fighting a zero-sum game; a raging insurgency; the collapse of authority; social services a chimera; and no way forward for an Iraqi government ordered to act by Americans who themselves are still seen as the final arbiter and, as a result, still depriving that government of legitimacy. Civil war was perhaps too easy a term, a little too light.

It will be harder to sell Congress on the idea that America's troops should be in the middle of somebody else's civil war than to convince them that we need to hang tough in the so-called front line of the so-called war on terror against al-Qaida.

With Iraq splitting, Tony Snow indulges in the ludicrous exercise of hair-splitting. He said that in past civil wars, "people break up into clearly identifiable feuding sides clashing for supremacy in Iraq." Snow do have a lot of different forces that are trying to put pressure on the government and trying to undermine it. But it's not clear that they are operating as unified forces. But Lebanon was a shambles with multiple factions, and everybody called that a civil war.

Snow has said this is not a civil war because the fighting is not taking place in every province and because Iraqis voted in free elections. But that's like saying that the Battle of Gettysburg only took place in one small corner of the country, so there was no real American Civil War. And there were elections during our civil war too. President Lincoln was re-elected months before the war's end.

The president's comparison to how Vietnam turned out a generation later, his happy talk that Iraq is going to be fine, is preposterous.

As Neil Sheehan, a former Times reporter in Vietnam who wrote the Pulitzer Prize-winning "A Bright Shining Lie," told me: "In Vietnam, there were just two sides to the civil war. You had a government in Hanoi with a structure of command and an army and a guerrilla movement that would obey what they were told to do. So you had law and order in Saigon immediately after the war ended. In Iraq, there's no one like that for us to lose to and then do business with."

At the moment, that would be no one.

RFK flick a boost for Democrats

If a contemporary politician, no matter how ordinary, can successfully associate himself or herself with a political golden age, well, that's a huge plus for the next election.

JAMES P. PINKERTON

admiring, even fawning look at Kennedy during his dramatic and doomed quest for the presidency in 1968. So, while the reviews have not been kind and the overall audience is likely to be small, the film's buzz potential — not to mention prize potential — is enormous.

The chattering classes on both sides of the political aisle are disproportionately likely to see it — and, of course, to chatter about it. David Brooks of The New York Times, for example, a self-described conservative, was nonetheless moved to devote a whole column to Kennedy's love of ancient Greek poetry. And what chatterer doesn't love a poet?

Indeed, "Bobby" can be thought of as a modern hagiography — that's Greek for "study of saints." In the film Kennedy appears as a sort of magical presence, speaking to us only in old TV news clips — meditating on war, peace and social injustice — all lovingly woven into the movie's story line. And although that character, featuring 32 important Hollywood actors whose characters all find themselves in Los Angeles on the fateful night of June 5, 1968, is mostly a string of "Grazie, grazie, grazie" soap opera clichés, maybe that's the point: We live our humdrum, even cheesy little lives, except for those rare moments when we are greeted by the brief, shining heroic, albeit tragic figure.

Director Estevez makes sure to tell us what he thinks Americans lost when Bobby left us the brief chance we had, back in '68, for peace abroad and '68 for peace at home. And if that leads people to think that Bobby's party, the Democratic Party, is better for America today, well, that's OK, too.

The movie does not remind us, of course, that it was Bobby's brother, President John F. Kennedy, who accelerated U.S. involvement in Vietnam in the early '60s. Nor does it tell us that the original "peace" candidate in 1968 was another Democrat, Sen. Eugene McCarthy; it was McCarthy, not Bobby, who dared challenge the pro-war incumbent president, Lyndon B. Johnson. Bobby came along later, after LBJ was politically crippled, seeking to snatch away the peace platform that McCarthy had established.

It's said that a free press is guaranteed only to those who own one — and that goes for studios, too. Yes, the Internet has small-"d" democratized much of the media, but it's still not possible for bloggers to make a movie. So while occasionally a Mel Gibson can slip through the filter with a film that makes a culturally conservative point, for the most part, as "Bobby" makes plain, liberals still control the gate keeping and green-lighting in Hollywood.

And so the left will continue to control the press, the shaping of our memory of that past. And that's the key to power in the political here and now.

Hannity goes for Brokeback

Have I ever wondered what a wonderful world it would be if only my fans could get together, talk about how great I am and fall in love over their joint love for me? Sure, but unlike Fox News commentator Sean Hannity, I haven't done anything about it. At Hannity.com. In addition to enjoying the book club (Newt Gingrich, Jeff Foxworthy), song club (Charlie Daniels Band, Martina McBride), photo club (Hannity's Insanity in Phoenix) and comic books ("Liberty for All" in 2021 and has a bionic Hannity, G. Gordon Liddy, Oliver North and a man born on Sept. 11, 2001, fighting to save a U.S. controlled by the U.N., including Ambassador Osama bin Laden), visitors can log on to Hannitydate.

Conservatives need late-night, out-of-town hookups just as much as liberals. They also, it seems, need some hot man-on-man action. If you pull down the menu on Hannitydate, you can select "I am a male, seeking a male." This was surprising because not even eHarmony allows same-sex pairings. Stranger still for a Fox News commentator's site, you can set ZIP Codes in Beverly Hills, Provincetown and San Francisco.

Figuring this was an embarrassing oversight by the Hannitydate.com administrator who must have bought the dating service software from some liberal company, I immediately contacted Hannity, hoping he'd panic and cry and possibly use his bionic powers. But it turns out Hannity was well aware of the gay Hannitydate feature and its fine with it. "Hannitydate is open to everyone," he informed me. "Even lonely L.A. Times reporters." He may be soft on gays, but Hannity can still hit a lonely, empty-desked, downsizing liberal newspaper where it hurts.

I found 21 gay profiles, a full 11 of which I thought were real (though I'd like to believe that the guy called "Seeking Fellow Cowboy Fans," who wants to get "back to my favorite mountain" and needs "help herding sheep," is totally legit). I called Michael Burke, 31, a New York restaurant general manager "looking for a normal guy." A normal guy, that is, who thinks he can meet hot gay men on Sean Hannity's Web site. Burke, who found binary Goldwaters' "The Conscience of a Conservative" at the library when he was 12 and voted for President Bush twice, loves Broadway musicals, Michigan State football, being bands, Civil War books and Margaret Thatcher.

A longtime Hannity listener, Burke said he heard about Hannitydate on the radio and figured he'd check to see if there was a same-sex option. Hannity, it turns out, is against same-sex marriage but is pretty libertarian on gay relationships, often standing up to gay bashers on his show and putting gay former New Jersey Gov. Jim McGreevey's book on his book club list. In fact, Burke said he's seen very little homophobia from Republicans who aren't Christian fundamentalists. And he points out that among all the presidential front-runners, Rudy Giuliani is the most gay-friendly. Especially since he lost the comb-over.

"Because I'm gay and do favor legalization of gay marriage doesn't mean I feel a certain way about the war on terror or taxes," Burke said. He has no interest in being a one-issue voter in Democratic primaries or joining the Log Cabin Republicans, whom he finds too left-leaning. And, I'm guessing, kind of dorky. More important, he thinks a gay guy with Hannity's social values might be a better fit than the guys he meets at bars.

After years of red versus blue, it's easy to forget how personal politics are. And that people are closer to the center than you might think, regardless of sexuality or ability to muffle Alan Colmes. I hope Burke finds the love of his life on Hannitydate and that one day they can get married. Because I want to see a wedding with Broadway tunes and a Margaret Thatcher impersonator. I just hope Eddie Izzard's booking fees are reasonable.

Idaho needs to enforce seat belts on buses

A few years ago while I was in London, England, we went to visit Oxford. We went to the bus depot and got on the bus. A few minutes later, the bus driver came on board and stated that we would be leaving in about two minutes and would ensure that our seat belts were fastened. I thought he was kidding, but sure enough, there we the lap-type seat belts similar to ones used in aircraft.

On my return to the states and being a trustee of the Office of Education in California, I asked the county superintendent why school buses did not have seat belts. I also checked with the district superintendents and the answers I received varied but the ones that struck me most were: (a) it would cost too much, (b) it was too much work for the bus driver to check that the children had their belts fastened, and (c) there were three kids to a seat because of the cost of fuel. I was also told that only the bus driver had a seat belt.

I checked with the California Highway Patrol and was informed that seat belts for school buses were exempt from the law. I wrote to the governor, The state superintendent and the local politician and received no reply. I even wrote to the newspaper explaining that this was unacceptable and a disaster waiting to happen. I was therefore saddened to hear of the tragic accident of a school bus that went over a ramp and fell 30 feet and killed four students.

I now live in Idaho and beg the state superintendent to see if he can pass a law that requires all school buses in Idaho to have seat belts. What price do we put on a child's life?

Change strategy against insurgency in Iraq

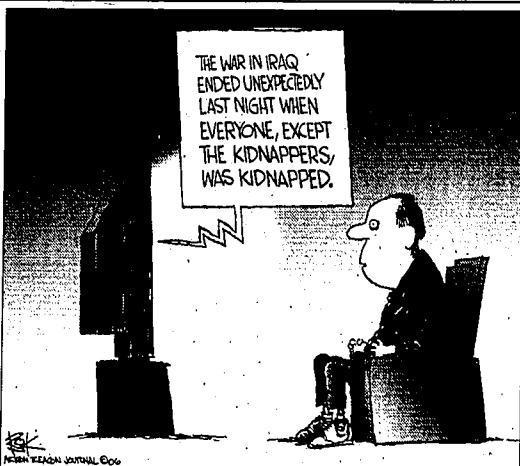

With the change of power in our Congress comes the rhetoric on the war and all the options to win. The problem being the powers to be are not addressing the real problem: that is, there are two wars in Iraq — our war of confrontation and the other is the war of insurgency. When you pick up a newspaper or watch the nightly news, what do you see? You see our troops standing around, riding around in their vehicles, otherwise in the open. Where is the enemy?

We got a glimpse in Korea and it came to defeat us in Vietnam. The operation of the insurgent or guerrilla was extremely effective. A handful of guerrillas could outperform a platoon of conventional soldiers. With our present status quo, we are only succeeding in providing them with three elements of a perfect training camp: Live. Enemy. Exposed.

Can we win the war? Not a chance. I don't care if we send in more troops, train more policemen, set more curfews, we don't stand a chance. The only way to win this war is to join theirs. We need to become the insurgents. If we do not make the change, we need to bring our troops home.

Bipartisan group reaches agreement on Iraq policy, leader says

By Pauline Hinkok
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — A bipartisan commission has reached a consensus on new U.S. policies for Iraq and will announce its recommendations next week, the group's co-chairman said Wednesday.

Former Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., declined to disclose any specifics about the Iraq Study Group's decisions. The report, much anticipated by the Bush administration and members of Congress, is coming out next Wednesday amid the spiraling violence in Iraq that has raised questions about the viability of the Iraqi government and U.S. policy for a deeply unpopular war.

"This afternoon, we reached a consensus ... and we will announce that on December 6," Hamilton told a forum on national security at the Center for American Progress, a liberal group.

"We're making recommendations," said Hamilton, who led the group with former Secretary of State James A. Baker III.

Defense officials, meantime, said the Pentagon is developing blueprints to send four more battalions to Iraq early next year, including some to Baghdad.

The extra combat engineer battalions of Army reserves, would total about 3,500 troops and would come from around the United States, said officials who spoke on condition of anonymity because the deployments have not been announced.

President Bush is under growing pressure to craft an exit strategy to withdraw substantial numbers of U.S. troops while shifting more responsibility to the Iraqi government. Even so, top military commanders have said they would consider increasing U.S. troops, at least temporarily, if they deemed it necessary.

Bush said Tuesday he would not withdraw American forces "until the mission is complete."

The study group is expected to recommend regional talks involving Syria and Iran. The Bush administration has been reluctant to engage those two countries, which it says have abetted the violence in Iraq. It was unclear what the group would recommend regarding possible U.S. troop withdrawals.

Study: Taking a break from HIV drugs doubles risk of death

By Mike Stobbe
Associated Press writer

One of the largest-ever studies of HIV treatment has found that patients who temporarily stop taking their powerful medicines more than double their risk of dying.

Many HIV patients have sought doctors' permission to periodically take a break from the intensive regimen of AIDS-fighting drugs, which can cause incapacitating side effects. Several small studies have suggested "holidays" from medication might be OK for patients who appear to be doing well.

But the new study, published this week in the New England Journal of Medicine, suggests such a strategy can be dangerous: The rate of disease progression or death was more than twice as high in patients who took medications intermittently than in those who took them every day.

However, many of the deaths were not related to AIDS, so it's not clear why the numbers varied, researchers said.

The study involved nearly 5,500 patients in 33 countries. About half were assigned to continuously receive AIDS drugs. The others stopped the therapy when key immune system blood cells reached certain levels, and restarted when they fell below a threshold.

The second group's treatment breaks varied, but on average they were taking drugs 33 percent of the time. Patients in the first group were on therapy about 94 percent of the time.

The study started in January 2002 but enrollment was stopped in January 2006, when it became clear that more people in the intermittent-treatment group were dying.

The numbers were small, however. Only 3 percent of all the study participants died or developed AIDS-related illness. In the group that took drug holidays, 55 people died, compared to 30 in the group that stayed on their medication.

The leading causes of death in both groups included cancers, cardiovascular disease, substance abuse, and opportunistic diseases associated with AIDS.

In the group that had interrupted drug therapy, another 65 people had non-fatal diseases like bacterial pneumonia, fungal infections and AIDS-related cancers. In the continuous group, 17 people had non-fatal infections.

After loss to Broncos, Nevada seeks redemption vs. Miami

The Associated Press

RENO, Nev. — Nevada will play Miami in the MPC Computers Bowl, an opportunity Wolf Pack players and coaches said Wednesday will give them a chance to redeem themselves after a big loss to Boise State in the regular season finale.

"To get a chance to have another game after last Saturday's game makes a lot of our seniors happy because that isn't the way we wanted to go out," said Tim DeWetter, Nevada's defensive coordinator and assistant coach.

Nevada (8-4, 5-3) suffered a 38-7 drubbing at Mackay Stadium in Saturday's regular season finale at the hands of No. 12 Boise State, the undefeated champions of the Western Athletic Conference.

Now the Wolf Pack can look ahead to Dec. 31 when it plays Miami, ironically at Boise, Idaho.

Nevada senior quarterback Jeff Rowe said it would be extra special to finish the year on Boise State's famous blue turf against a team with such a high profile as the Miami Hurricane. The two teams have never met before.

"We've never played a team of that caliber. It is a good challenge for us and we are going to be up for it," Rowe said.

"I can't wait to see what a team like (Miami) is like," added senior tight end Anthony Pudevell. "All I have seen is when they play on television."

Senior cornerback Joe Garcia said it will be "a little weird playing on Boise State's field since we have a rivalry with them."

MPC bowl will be Coker's final game with 'Canes

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (AP) — Larry Coker's difficult and final year at Miami will end on the blue turf of Boise.

The Hurricanes accepted an invitation Wednesday to the MPC Computers Bowl, where they'll meet Nevada (8-4) of the Western Athletic Conference on Dec. 31 in Idaho's capital city. It'll be the first meeting between the programs, plus Miami's first appearance in that bowl.

It will also be Coker's 75th and final game at Miami; he was fired last week after a 6-8 regular season, one that dropped his six-year record with the Hurricanes to 59-15 with one national championship.

The school retained him for the bowl game, while it conducts a search for his replacement.

"We have a lot of young players, and I think a bowl experience will be very good for them," said Coker, whose team will resume practice in mid-December after finals.

The Hurricanes haven't formally revealed a complete list of who's under consideration to replace Coker, but athletic director Paul Dee confirmed Wednesday that defensive coordinator Randy Shannon — who is thought to have the support of Hurricane players — is a candidate.

"But all we are thinking about is Miami and we are looking forward to playing them," he said.

The formal invitation from bowl officials came during a conference call with DeWetter, Rowe and athletic director Cary Groth. Coach Chris Auti was recruiting.

"It's a great opportunity to meet a school with a lot of football tradition," Auti said in a statement.

It's only the second time in the history of Nevada's 110-year-old football program that it has appeared in consecutive postseason bowls.

The Wolf Pack beat Central Florida 49-18 in overtime in the Hawaii Bowl last year. Nevada made consecutive appearances in the Las Vegas Bowl in 1995-96.

Weather could play a factor for the Hurricanes.

The average high in Boise on New Year's Eve is 35 degrees, with a low of 22 — figures about 40 degrees below the norms in South Florida on the same date.

"It really doesn't matter," Miami center Anthony Wolschlagler said. "What matters is we've got another game to play."

Declo defeats youthful Wendell

Trojans suffer through 22 turnovers in loss to Hornets

By Diane Phibbs
Times-News writer

WENDELL — Coaches will say that there is one thing about youngsters they can always hope for — as they mature, they will get better.

Wendell coach Tom Huse supports that statement, but Huse is also pleased with the progress his young Trojans girls basketball team has made so far this season — even after watching Declo defeat Wendell 62-39 in nonconference action Wednesday night.

"We just have to patient," said Huse. "The kids get nervous at times but they are working to get through it. They have learned a lot."

This year's Trojan roster has no seniors and only one junior, Whitney Gines. The starting lineup has Gines surrounded by four sophomores in Jori Fleming, Laurie Andrus, Jael Lancaster and Erin O'Brien.

Fleming led the Wendell scoring with 10 points and pulled down seven rebounds. Freshman Kristen Brandman came off the bench and registered a game-high 12 boards and tossed in nine points.

Declo forced Wendell into 22 turnovers with most of those coming in the first half as a result of the Hornets' full-court press. Sydney Christensen was the major recipient of the press as she was able to score 10 points off a combination of Hornet steals.

Declo (3-2) held a 36-10 lead at the break.

"We had the big lead after the first half and appeared to let up and didn't play with the same intensity the second half," said Declo coach Val Christensen. "We gave up some easy buckets and seemed to be playing just to go home. We need a lot of work especially on our post defense. Many of the girls don't have much varsity experience but they are getting better. It's a long season. We are looking and working to where we want to be in January."

Declo had three players score in double figures as Sydney Christensen had 15 points for game-high honors. Senior point guard Kendra Koyle had 12 and Macey Jones added 11 and registered nine boards. Koyle also dished out seven assists.

"We have a little break before our next game," said Huse. "A lot of good practice time."

Wendell (2-5) hosts Castledown on Dec. 7, while Declo hosts Astoria Falls tonight.

Wendell sophomore guard Carissa Nelson looks to pass the ball off as she is double teamed by a pair of Declo defenders Wednesday night in Wendell.

CSI women stay at No. 13 in NJCAA poll

Times-News

TWIN FALLS — The College of Southern Idaho women remained No. 13 in the latest NJCAA Division I poll released Wednesday.

The Golden Eagles (7-1) received 106 points and are tied with John A. Logan College (Ill.).

Odessa College (Texas) stayed atop the poll, garnering seven of eight first-place votes.

Salt Lake Community College (5-1) slipped from No. 18 to No. 23 this week and is the only other SWAC school in the poll.

Last week, CSI won a pair of games at the 2006 Wolverton Challenge, besting Phoenix College 83-63 on Friday before topping Yakima Valley 72-62 on Saturday.

The CSI women are off this week, but open conference play Dec. 8-9 at North Idaho College in Coeur d'Alene. The No. 6 Golden Eagles men (8-0) also play at NIC Dec. 8-9.

Boise State holds off BYU's furious late rally

The Associated Press

BOISE — Koby Karl scored 18 points and Boise State snapped a two-game losing streak Wednesday night, building a big lead, then holding off a furious BYU rally to win 72-68.

With BYU trailing 70-68, Boise State's Eric Lane stole the ball and raced the length of the floor before being fouled attempting a layup. He hit both free throws with 8.6 seconds left to give the Broncos (2-3) their final margin.

Jason Balderson scored 15 points for BYU (3-2), which saw a three-game winning streak end.

Matt Nelson scored 15 points for Boise State. Austin Alingo and Keena Young each had 14 for BYU.

The Broncos shot 40 percent from the field compared to BYU's 43 percent. The Broncos hit eight of 20 3-pointers, while BYU hit 11-of-21 of its 3-point attempts, most in the second half to fuel the rally.

Karl hit a 3-pointer and then two free throws near the end of the first half as part of a 17-8 run that broke open the game for the Broncos.

Boise State led by as many as 24 points early in the second half but saw BYU close within 10 points after Alingo hit three free throws after being fouled on a 3-point shot.

Alinge, the son of former NBA player and coach Danny Alingo, hit three 3-pointers in the final eight minutes.

Karl went cold in the second half and missed two free throws and a 3-point attempt in the final minutes.

Balderson and Lee Cummand hit back-to-back 3-pointers to give the Cougars a 12-11 lead with 1:55 left in the first half.

But Karl hit a 3-pointer and then put back his own miss and the Broncos began to steadily pull away to take a 40-25 lead at halftime.

Kaho St. 75, Carroll, Mont. 74

POCAHONOC — Freshman Austin Kilpatrick scored a career-high 15 points and David Schroeder added

14 points and five rebounds Wednesday night as Idaho State held on to defeat Carroll College 75-74.

Idaho State (2-4) opened the game with an 8-3 run, including two 3-pointers from Kilpatrick.

Carroll (6-5) then dominated the rest of the first half. The Saints went on a 16-2 run, holding ISU scoreless for nearly seven minutes and building a 19-10 advantage.

Idaho State closed to within three points on two different occasions, but Carroll ended the half with a 9-2 run for a 45-35 halftime lead.

The Montana school shot nearly 60 percent in the first half, including going 9-14 from 3-point range, and outrebounded Idaho State 17-7.

Idaho State stormed back in the second half, using a 10-3 run in the first four minutes to cut Carroll's lead to 48-45. A 3-pointer by Idaho State's Akbar Abdul-Ahad tied the score at 43, and sparked a 10-2 run that saw the Bengals open a 63-55 lead.

Carroll regained the lead at 73-72 on a lay-up by Eric Henkel with 1:26 left, then Idaho State grabbed a 75-73 advantage with 1:01 left on a 3-point play by John Ofoegbu.

Henkel was fouled with two-tenths of a second left while shooting a 3-pointer, but he converted only one of the three free throws and ISU held on for the victory.

Henkel led Carroll with 20 points and four assists, while Dallas Leslie added 18 points.

No. 13 Washington 87, Idaho 66

SEATTLE — Freshman Quincy Pondexter scored a season-high 25 points to lead No. 13 Washington to an 87-66 victory over outmanned Idaho on Wednesday night.

Sophomore Ryan Appleby had 11 points and was the only other Washington player to score in double figures.

Keoni Watson led Idaho with 19 points. Mario Mackey added 15.

The Vandals (1-5) dropped just eight players because of injuries.

Brigham Young forward Keena Young, foreground, drives past Boise State forward Reggie Larry during the first half Wednesday in Boise.

Ravens can be first team into playoffs with win vs. Bengals

CINCINNATI (AP) — Marvin Lewis won't compare Baltimore's current defense to the record-setting one that helped the Ravens win the Super Bowl six years ago. "That's a long time ago," said Lewis, who was their defensive coordinator in 2000. "I don't even remember that. That's this year's version of the Baltimore Ravens."

Cincinnati Bengals head coach Marvin Lewis encourages his players during their game against the San Diego Chargers on Nov. 12 in Cincinnati. The Bengals host the Baltimore Ravens tonight.

This version is looking like a champion, too. With a victory over Lewis' Cincinnati Bengals on Thursday night, the Ravens (9-2) would become the first team to clinch a division championship this season. A victory in Cincinnati would snatch the AFC North title away from the Bengals (6-5) and put the Ravens on course for greater things.

the playoffs — they're currently one game out in the wild-card standings. "They also knew there was no margin for error. "I know what's at stake," Houshmandzadeh said. "We can afford to stumble and lose another game."

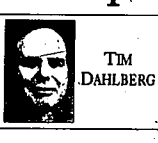

"Deep down, we know we're better than Baltimore and they know it," Houshmandzadeh said. "We've got better players than they do." "Houshmandzadeh isn't backing down. "I think we're better than them," he said Tuesday. "We'll find out. Sure will."

"Confidence is probably one of the biggest things that gets overlooked and biggest reason why a team is successful," tight end Todd Heap said. "You take Pittsburgh, for example. They certainly trust their defense, which leads the league in interceptions, ranks second in sacks and is third in points allowed. The offense has settled into a comfort zone behind quarterback Steve McNair, who is 10-3 career against the Bengals as a starter."

"There was a confidence in Cincinnati's locker room that week, a sense that all was well again. The Bengals knew that a victory over Baltimore would leave them in good shape for 'Keep your mouth shut, man. Play football. ... If you think you're a better team, then come out and let's play football, man.' — Baltimore safety Ed Reed on comments made by Cincinnati receiver T.J. Houshmandzadeh

A bad time for the preeners and pouters of pro football

Extended properly, the middle finger usually works every time. So it was probably overkill when Michael Vick used both of his to let the fans in Atlanta know just how he felt. Then again, everything is super-sized in the NFL these days. Even boorish behavior. Vick's two-fingered display ended up costing him $10,000, or five grand per digit. Which seems a bit pricey for an act we suggested, merely showing fans how many wins the team had in its last six games. Give Vick some credit.

TIM DAHLBERG

"I don't quite understand what his motivation is, or what his lack of motivation is in those type of situations," Strahan said. "I'm pretty sure I'm going to try to see what it is and try to see if I can talk to him about it."

San Diego's T.O. wannabe made a big catch for the Chargers as they rallied against Oakland, then jumped up and spun the ball forward in celebration. The only problem was no one had touched him, and Oakland's Fabian Washington jumped on the ball. Luckily for Jackson, when it was all sorted out his team kept the ball with a measly 5-yard penalty for an illegal forward pass. "If not, he might have been joining Mike Vanderjagt in the unemployment line."

It's not like I gave the bird to somebody in the stands or anything like that," he said. No, and it's not like Vincent Jackson is a real deep thinker either. San Diego's T.O. wannabe made a big catch for the Chargers as they rallied against Oakland, then jumped up and spun the ball forward in celebration. The only problem was no one had touched him, and Oakland's Fabian Washington jumped on the ball.

"I don't quite understand what his motivation is, or what his lack of motivation is in those type of situations," Strahan said. "I'm pretty sure I'm going to try to see what it is and try to see if I can talk to him about it."

Maybe he should ask Randy Moss, who used to be a pretty good pass catcher in the NFL himself. That's used to be because he had only three passes thrown in his direction against San Diego, didn't catch any of them, and played like he didn't care.

My emotions just got me for second," Jackson said. That seems to be happening a lot in the NFL lately, where getting on ESPN's highlight clips seems more important to some players than winning. Get a sack and strut around like you've just hit the lottery. Make a catch and dance like you're Emmitt Smith.

Edwards bared it on his "passion for the game," which must be the same passion that prompted him to criticize the Browns' conservative play calling a week before and question a hard hit by one of his own teammates on Ocho Cinco himself earlier this season. Besides, Edwards knows quarterbacks who act even

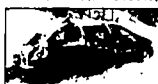

Of course, Moss usually quits before a play begins, not during it. Actually, in Minnesota he once quit before a game was even over. Maybe it's something in the Gatorade wide receivers are drinking lately. Or maybe they just isn't just want to be like T.O. I mean, when's the last time you saw an offensive lineman stomping around on the sidelines, screaming and grabbing his quarterback's jersey like Cleveland's Braylon Edwards did last Sunday?

Not matter that your team is losing by three touchdowns. It's the six that counts. Atlanta cornerback DeAngelo Hall was out to get some when he faded back to protect against a Hall Mary pass on the final play of the first half against New Orleans. Bating down the ball was too simple. Instead, he flailed at the ball in an ill-advised attempt at an interception.

Things are not so good in New York, where loudly coaching back is calling out the coach, the coach is calling out the quarterback, and more fingers are being pointed in the locker room than Vick has on both of his.

The ball, of course, was caught by a 49-year-old coach-down that probably cost the Falcons the game. Hall made it on SportsCenter all right, just not quite how he envisioned it.

Twin Falls man arrested in Jackpot

JACKPOT — A Twin Falls man was arrested Tuesday on drug charges after a motel manager noticed too much foot traffic to the man's room. Santos Tena, 27, was arrested on charges of trafficking in a controlled substance and possession of drug paraphernalia. His bail was set at $50,632.

The manager of the Covered Wagon Hotel in Jackpot called an Elko County sheriff's deputy after he saw a "large amount of foot traffic from the night before," Elko County Sheriff's Sgt. Robert Songer said. The manager asked the deputy if he would search the room.

Songer found two glass pipes and 6.8 grams of methamphetamine.

Tena identified the meth for Songer, but the deputy still tested the drug to confirm.

Armed robber strikes Addison Ave. motel

TWIN FALLS — Police reported an armed robbery at 10:08 p.m. Tuesday.

The robbery occurred at the Branding Iron Hotel at 450 Addison Ave. W.

No one was hurt. Police have not released any other information.

Witness wanted in Five Points collision

TWIN FALLS — If you were driving near Blue Lakes Boulevard North on Tuesday evening, you may have seen it.

About 5:30 p.m., a blue Chevy Tahoe collided with a maroon Buick four-door sedan.

The accident occurred at the intersection commonly known as Five Points. That is where Shoshone Street intersects with Addison Avenue and Blue Lakes Boulevard North.

Anyone who witnessed the accident is asked to call Twin Falls Police Officer Dave Weigt at 735-4357 or 735-7396.

Out and about

Brent Culbertson, construction manager for Wills Building Association, lectures 50 Twin Falls High School students on Wednesday at a new subdivision off Washington Street South in Twin Falls.

Small Learning Communities visit local businesses

By Joshua Palmer
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — If it seemed like school was out Wednesday afternoon, that's because it was for many students.

Juniors and seniors at Twin Falls High School were out visiting local businesses and doing community service as part of the school's Small Learning Community program.

Twin Falls High School is the second school in Idaho to implement the program, which works by creating small "communities" of students, who take courses together and share similar interests in career fields.

All juniors and seniors are required to enroll in one of five learning communities depending on their career interests.

Students in the Industrial Engineering SLC visited a new subdivision owned by Wills Building Association, where Construction Manager Brent Culbertson taught students about building a house from

"They are out here teaching us how they build a house from the ground up by showing us houses in different stages — beginning with the blueprints."

— Lori Barnum, who teaches the Industrial Engineering SLC

the ground up.

"We've seen a decrease in the amount of skilled people that we can hire," Culbertson said.

"So that's why Wills has been involved with things like this (SLCs) and the residential construction program at CSI."

And educators are hoping students will understand the importance of their education by seeing how it applies in real-world situations.

They also want the learning communities to become more integrated in the community so students can build professional relationships with local businesses.

"I think it's great that Wills is doing this for us," said Lori Barnum, who teaches the Industrial Engineering SLC. "They are out here teaching us how they build a house from the ground up by showing us houses in different stages — beginning with the blueprints."

She said there are about 50 students in the Industrial Engineering SLC.

But unlike the high school's academics, which require students to meet minimum grade requirements and complete career-oriented projects in addition to regular class work, small learning communities cannot exclude any student from the program.

Proving benefits of early prevention

Program aims to help parents and teachers prevent escalation in juvenile problems

By Joshua Palmer
Times-News writer

SHOSHONE — The idea is that parents are the first line of defense against juvenile problems such as crime, substance abuse and delinquency.

And now one community group is going to try to prove it. Lincoln County Community Justice received a $100,000 grant from the Songraves Family Foundation to create an early intervention program that will help parents and teachers work with children who show signs of behavioral problems.

Magistrate Judge Mark Ingram, chairman of Lincoln County Community Justice, said the program will try to prevent behavioral problems in youth from escalating into more serious problems.

Janitor sings his farewell to Mini-Cassia school

By Laurie Welch
For the Times-News

RUPERT — The man known as "The Singing Janitor" graced a Mini-Cassia stage one last time Wednesday night before heading to Nashville to cut a record.

Tom Stimpson, a janitor at Minico High School, hopes to push his benefit concert tally over the $10,000 mark during his final Mini-Cassia appearance.

Stimpson's concerts and CDs to date have raised $5,000 for various local charities.

"This is all about helping other people out," Stimpson said.

He has performed at numerous benefit concerts and produced several CDs, including a selection of patriotic songs that raised $150 for Rupert's fireworks fund. He has been the recipient of several awards for his Champion, played football, loved to ski, rock climb and ride motorcycles. After high school, Mike attended college until he realized being a ski bum was more important. He worked odd jobs and work with construction to support his skiing habit. He married Tina Puder on Sept. 1, 1984, in Reno, Nev.

TWIN FALLS — Ruth Marietta Perkins Hansen, 100 years of age, passed away Nov. 28, 2006, at Sunbridge Care Center in Twin Falls, Idaho.

She came into this world early the morning of Oct. 7, 1906, in Owatonna, Minn. She was born of parents, Marietta Soper and Charles Darwin Perkins of English descent. She was the second of three sisters, Dorothy Perkins Reed and Frances Perkins, both deceased. Her parents and family moved to Idaho in 1914, along with their herd of dairy cows. She lived in Jerome, Idaho, until she married George Salmon Broughton in 1931, and they settled in Rock Creek. To this union a daughter, Ann, and a son, Don, was born to them.

In time, Don joined the Air Force. Ann married and had six children. Don married and had three children. Ruth and George later divorced, and Ruth went to work for the State Health Department in Rlby, Idaho, where she was employed for 12 years until her retirement in 1972. In 1964, she married William Hans Hansen.

In 1972, they purchased a mini-farm in Rupert, and then William passed away suddenly. Ruth sold the mini-farm in 1983 and moved to Arizona for eight years, and then returned to Idaho and moved to Castletown. She lived there until April of 1998, when she moved to Twin Falls and remained until her passing. Ruth recently celebrated her 100th birthday with family and friends.

She had three parties provided by Sunbridge Care, her church ward and her family.

She received a letter of recognition from President on behalf of Laura Bush on achieving 100 years.

She especially enjoyed her car rides in a 2005 used Jaguar convertible provided by John Anderson, which she would have driven if he would have let her, a 1927 Model T and a 1936 Ford Roadster provided by Pam and Roger Bolton as a surprise for her birthday.

Surviving Ruth are her children, daughter, Ann Broughton; son, Donald Broughton; and four Hansen stepchildren, nine grandchildren, and many great-grandchildren, and great-great-grandchildren. Her parents; sisters, Frances and Dorothy Hansen; husband, William Hansen; daughter-in-law, Helen Broughton; and eight Hansen stepchildren preceded her in death.

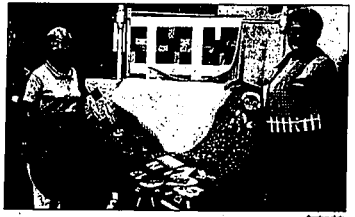

Funeral services for Ruth will be held Saturday, Dec. 2, at 11 a.m. at the Twin Falls Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 1618 Ward, 229 Park Ave., with Bishop Victor Smith officiating. Interment will be held Saturday at 3 p.m. at the Mar Cemetery in Rupert, Idaho. Friends may call Friday, Dec. 1, from 6 to 8 p.m. at the Parke's Magic Valley Funeral Home, 2551 Kimberly Road, Twin Falls, Idaho. In lieu of flowers, the family asks that memorials be sent in Ruth's name to the American Cancer Society or to the LDS Church, in care of the 16th Ward Church Building Fund.

All services and arrangements are under the direction of the Parke's Magic Valley Funeral Home of Twin Falls, Idaho.

daughter, Toni Leonetti of Twin Falls, one sister, Laura (Craig) Johnson of Ketchum; and one brother, Mark (Sandy) Leonetti of Star, Idaho. A party celebrating Mike's life will be held at 3 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 9, 2006, at Tribus Interiors, 203 Fifth Ave. S. in Twin Falls. The family suggests that those attending bring photos, stories and any other memorabilia related to Mike's life. Arrangements under the direction of Payne Mortuary, 221 W. Main St. in Burley.

"Even before anyone becomes involved in any type of court procedure, there are ways of making positive changes in their lives," Ingram said. "Quite honestly, when the courts become involved there are a lot of barriers that go up, so this aims to make changes before those barriers go up."

The program will bring educators, community members and juvenile justice officials together to identify at-risk youth and ensure that services are available for them.

"We're going to try and prove that early intervention can prevent these problems from going to the juvenile justice system," said Joanna Petrone, a coordinator for Lincoln County Community Justice.

"We think that the parents are the primary influence for youth, and the teachers are the first people to recognize behavior problems in kids."

The program, which officials hope to begin within a year, will help parents and teachers find services for students with behavioral problems. It will also provide some financial assistance for services if families are unable to afford them.

"Part of the grant is in establishing a policy so that we can put tools in the hands of the teachers for youth who are at risk," said Mel Wiseman, superintendent of the Shoshone School District. "The vision, at least in my opinion, is to have a place where teachers could go for recommendations on the correct services."

Officials say that juvenile crimes and behavior problems are growing as the population in Lincoln County continues to grow. And proponents of the program say it might save the county money in the future by steering youth away from crime and addiction. Officials estimate the county's cost of incarceration to be about $128 per day.

The program will be offered in Twin Falls and Lincoln counties.

Seagraves Family Foundation was started by Janice Seagraves Robinson, who was born and raised in Halley and began the foundation after winning the Idaho Powerball Lottery in 1997.

After she died in 1999, her family continued the foundation.

"We were fortunate to come up with a concept for early intervention," Ingram said. "But we were really blessed that the Seagraves Foundation was willing to support that concept."

DOE: Hanford, INL among 11 possible nuke fuel recycling sites

By Shannon Dinkley
Associated Press writer

YAKIMA, Wash. — Eleven sites, including south-central Washington's Hanford nuclear reservation and Eastern Idaho's Idaho National Laboratory, have been selected as possible places to reprocess spent nuclear fuel from reactors, the Department of Energy announced Wednesday.

The program is part of the Energy Department's Global Nuclear Energy Partnership, or GNEP, which the Bush administration has been touting as a means to safely expand nuclear energy.

The 11 sites will share as much as $16 million in grants next year to begin site studies to house either a recycling center that would separate spent fuel for reuse, a fast reactor that could convert highly radioactive materials to shorter-lived isotopes while burning them for power, or both.

Proponents say the program will allow countries to increasingly rely on nuclear energy while reducing the amount of waste generated by nuclear power plants.

"As our economy grows, so will the need for reliable, emissions-free energy generation. Nuclear energy can help meet that need and GNEP can do it in a way that maximizes the benefit of nuclear fuel while minimizing the risk of nuclear proliferation," Dennis Spurgeon, DOE assistant secretary for nuclear energy, said in a statement. Critics of the initiative have argued that resuming reprocessing — abandoned in the 1970s for proliferation reasons — could make it easier for terrorists or enemy states to obtain plutonium for nuclear weapons.

"People living near these proposed new nuclear sites should have the right to know the truth and have a say about the massive dangers that some of their neighbors and elected officials want to bring into their communities," Edwin Lyman, a senior staff scientist, said in a statement.

Sites in Washington, Idaho, South Carolina, New Mexico, Illinois, Tennessee, Kentucky and Ohio were selected for consideration. In Idaho, an environmental group also criticized the selection of sites there. The Snake River Alliance maintains that a 1995 cleanup agreement at the Idaho National Laboratory bans the shipment of spent commercial fuel to the site. However, the Energy Department has challenged the validity of some parts of that agreement in court.

Learning

"You can't do that if you mandate that it takes place in the schools," Barnum said. "So we have students who are interested in the engineering and some who are here because they had to choose one."

"Like any class, it was apparent that some students in the SLC were more interested in having fun with friends than learning about engineering. But there were also students who listened intently to Culbertson describe the construction process.

Laura Johnson, a senior and the only girl in the Industrial Engineering SLC, said she chose to be in the engineering community because it fits her interests.

"I know that I have to learn things like math and English because it's used all the time for stuff like this (engineering)," Johnson said.

"But things like this interest me more because I like working with my hands or anything with technology."

Janitor

"That same day he sang the national anthem at a boys' basketball game and brought the crowd to its feet.

That night he received two or three offers to sing elsewhere and the demand for his talent has never slowed.

Stimpson says he got his stage name during a local radio show when the announcer introduced him as The Singing Janitor on air.

"The name just stuck," Stimpson said, and he plans to keep it if possible.

"Ever since then I haven't been able to stop performing and it's really given me confidence. Five years later, I'm headed to Nashville to do a recording at the first of the year."

Stimpson said the opportunity to make the CD, which will be cut in the Dolly Parton Studio, came about after auditioning for Boss Entertainment. He said he plans to move to Pocatello soon.

"This is something I've always wanted to do, and all these little things I've done around here have prepared me for what is happening now," Stimpson said. "A lot of people here have trained me as a performer."

Stimpson said it will be hard to leave an area that has embraced him, but he is looking forward to the upcoming challenges.

"The entertainment business is a tough business, but I'm ready for the challenge and I think I have what it takes to be successful," he said.

The Last To Leave The Land

Once, nearly everyone worked the land. It was our collective way of life. Times change and only about 18% of us maintain this lifestyle in Idaho today.

Those that continue to grow our food and fiber do so for reasons the rest of us may not understand, but can hardly object to. They like it, and that's a good thing. Studies show that when you like your job you do it well. It is comforting to know these neighbors are growing our food and doing it well.

Today, in the U.S., we pay 10 cents out of every dollar we bring home on food. The next closest country, Finland, pays 16 cents, Germany 21 cents, Japan 26 cents, and on it goes from there.

Idaho's food producers don't expect a pat on the back for a job well done. For the most part they are quiet, unimposing folks who prefer to stay out of the limelight.

From time to time however, they would appreciate a little support and understanding from the rest of us on issues that directly affect the job they do.

Heavy snowstorm cited in at least five Colorado deaths

By Dan Elliott
Associated Press writer

Colorado State Patrol trooper R. Gilbert Mares Jr. stands in front of a minivan that rolled on Interstate 70, killing four people and putting 11 in the hospital, in Idaho Springs, Colo., Tuesday.

At least five people were dead after a wintry storm dropped up to 2 feet of snow in the Colorado mountains and turned the morning commute into an icy crawl along the populous Front Range on Wednesday.

Authorities said slick roads contributed to the crash of a minivan Tuesday night that left four people dead and as many as 11 injured in a suspected immigrant-smuggling operation. The State Patrol initially said weather did not appear to be a factor.

A 10-year-old boy was killed Tuesday night when a pickup skidded off a snow-packed highway and rolled. A collision Wednesday morning that left one person dead may have been weather-related, authorities said.

Dozens of schools opened late or told students to stay home. Most highways through the mountains were open but chains were required for trucks, buses and big vans on many high passes.

"It's not going very fast, but it's moving," the highways spokesman Mike Murray said from the Department of Transportation's traffic control center.

Temperatures plunged into the teens and single digits across the state. Xcel Energy, the state's largest utility, reported no power failures.

Winter storm and heavy snow warnings were in effect for metro Denver, northern Colorado, the northeastern plains and the Colorado Springs area, with up to 12 inches expected to fall in some areas.

Names of the dead and injured in the minivan crash were not released. The vehicle was eastbound on Interstate 70 about 20 miles west of Denver when it missed a curve, struck a tree and rolled, the State Patrol said. The driver fled but was apprehended about four hours later and taken to a hospital.

The patrol said 10-year-old Taber Martin of Oak Grove, La., was killed when a pickup driven by his mother rolled on Interstate 25 about 55 miles north of Denver. Taber's mother, Theresa Cupit, 43, and another passenger, Bonnie Garner, 55, both of Oak Grove, were treated at a hospital and released.

A man driving his daughter to school in the east Denver suburb of Aurora was killed and the daughter was injured when their vehicle collided with another and rolled Wednesday morning, Arapahoe County Sheriff's spokesman Bruce Williamson said.

Winter storm and heavy snow warnings were in effect for metro Denver, northern Colorado, the northeastern plains and the Colorado Springs area, with up to 12 inches expected to fall in some areas.

Six bulls shot so far in Montana's bison hunt

BOZEMAN, Mont. (AP) — The second year of Montana's bison hunt is moving along without a hitch, a Montana Department of Fish, Wildlife and Parks official said.

As of Wednesday, six bulls had been killed since the hunt's Nov. 15 opening, said Sam Sheppard, warden captain for Region 3. Two of those six were shot on opening day. Three were shot on the north side of Yellowstone National Park and three on the west side.

No problems have been reported, Sheppard said. "It's gone well," he said. "There's been no issues, no conflicts, nothing."

The hunt has been divided into two time periods. The first one ends Dec. 31 and includes 25 either-sex bison tags.

"There aren't many permits," FWP spokeswoman Mel Frost said. "But also, there aren't many bison out (of the park) right now."

This week's snow and cold weather could spur more bison to leave the park, she added. Bull bison usually begin leaving Yellowstone in the fall, while cows and calves leave in the winter.

The second time period runs from Jan. 1-Feb. 15. It offers 70 either-sex tags and 45 cow/calf tags. The majority of them are good only on the park's west side, where more bison traditionally gather as the winter progresses.

A total of 140 tags have been issued for this season's hunt.

IF NOV. 30 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Have faith that everything will fall into place. Because others think highly of you, favors will be granted or a wish could come true by the end of December or the beginning of January. Don't look a gift horse in the mouth, because this will be your best time to make a huge improvement in some area of your life or to land an important plans. You could seek a promotion, change jobs or make a commitment to a loved one. You may have other opportunities in March, but they won't be quite as helpful or as easy to obtain. Remain optimistic, as bliss is sure to enhance your life all year long.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Countdown to contentment. Challenges to your authority or opinions can be tiresome. The good news is that holidays are just around the corner. Keep chipping away at the workload.

TARUS (April 20-May 20): Polish your public persona. Let everyone know you are down to earth and committed to home, family and success. Or volunteer to handle the extra work that is piling up on the sidelines.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Aim for a bull's-eye. Where romance or reputation is concerned, you aren't likely to miss hitting the mark. Make an effort to keep the folks on the home turf informed of your activities.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Don't dwell on past problems. You may be inspired to find a way to have your cake and eat it, too. Your objective could be to get the employee-of-the-month award or to ooze sophistication.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You'd prefer to be on a bicycle bulb to work. Pedal harder to achieve your ambitions. You can be the soul of discretion when it is called for and to others might seem like a born romantic.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Exceed expectations. Actions do speak louder than words and often draw out controversy. Strive to make your sweetheart proud or to get recognition in the business world for a job well done.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): True romance could be on your mind. You genuinely want to please. Playing social one-upmanship is simply not your game. Some people are playing by a different set of rules.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Learn what you have in common. Age, religious affiliations or brand of toothpaste shouldn't matter. You can make progress in business or love by being tolerant and willing to compromise.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Ring the bells and blow the whistles: Let everyone know you are just interested and dedicated in current projects. Put off fresh initiatives until cosmic conditions are more agreeable.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Some fiction has the ring of truth. Then, of course, there is the old saw that truth is often stranger than fiction. You could flip a coin or go with intuition, but past experience is the best guide.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): It is either paranoia or vision. The walls certainly could, like Jericho, come tumbling down. You might possess an elegant solution. This is the time to head off problems at the pass.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Giving is better than receiving. Just don't go ditching out something you wouldn't accept yourself. For best results, treat your friends like royalty—and your loved ones even better.

Respect can lead to love in families trying to blend

DEAR ABBY: As a licensed marriage and family therapist, a licensed professional counselor and a stepparent, I would like to offer some information to "Ashamed in the South" (10/7) that might help to ease her mind.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: Please tell "Ashamed in the South" that many stepparents feel bad for not immediately loving their new stepfamily.

I would like to offer some information to "Ashamed in the South" (10/7) that might help to ease her mind. She was troubled because she didn't feel love toward her stepchildren. There seems to be an unspoken expectation that stepparents should love their stepchildren. If stepparents do love their stepchildren from the very beginning, it's a nice plus, but it is not required. What IS required, in my opinion, is that people in stepfamilies treat each other respectfully. Love often comes in time, but not always.

DEAR ABBY: Please tell "Ashamed in the South" that many stepparents feel bad for not immediately loving their new stepfamily. I would like to offer some information to "Ashamed in the South" (10/7) that might help to ease her mind.

A wonderful family psychologist gave me some advice that has helped enormously. "Think of love as an action instead of an emotion. Thereafter, I acted as if I loved my stepchild, and over the years the habit of action grew into emotion. She's long since grown, but we're good friends, and my dad often asks me about the time we spent on the phone."

In addition to your good advice, I would say to "Ashamed in the South": Be open to the possibility of love, but give yourself a break. You are not a bad parent because you don't feel love toward them at this time. Love their father and expect less from yourself.

DEAR ABBY: As I prepared to adopt my child a few years ago, social workers warned me that I might not bond with him or her. They said the important thing was that even if I didn't feel love for my child, I should treat that child as if I loved him or her. This helped me have a plan, so my actions would ensure that my child felt loved. I was lucky. I fell in love with my son the moment I first held him.

—NOT-SO-WICKED STEPMOM IN OREGON

Abby, I can't help but believe that if she can take some of the pressure off herself, she might find that she will begin to feel differently toward her stepchildren.

I say kudos to the writer of that letter, who, most importantly, is treating her stepchildren with love. In time she may feel love for them. But even if she doesn't, she shouldn't be so hard on herself.

DEAR ABBY: Growing up, my mother was always trying to turn me against my stepmother. My stepmother always treated my sister and me as if we were her own children. She became my best friend, and still is 30 years after walking into our lives. My relationship is better with my stepmother than it is with my biological father, and the same is true for my sister. Our stepmother has always been there for us to talk to.

—FAMILY THERAPIST IN THE SOUTH

Study: First beer tastes the best

In taste tests using four kinds of beer, researchers found that people tended to choose whichever one they tasted first.

While the Wright brothers can lay claim to the very first successful airplane flight, they also can claim the first fatal airplane crash. A passenger on one of their early flights was killed on impact. This was before seatbelts, floating seat cushions—or even seats.

This day in history: Weeks after quipping, "I am dying beyond my means," the mortally ill Oscar Wilde died on Nov. 30, 1900, in a Paris hotel. The much-quoted writer was also much-misquoted, leading to a legend that his last words were, "It's the wallpaper or me one of us has to go."

RANDOM KINDS OF FACTNESS

We know that Homer Simpson's middle name is Jay and Rocky Squirrel's is "J." But Donald Duck's is more obscure. It was revealed on his enlistment in the military that his middle name is Fauntleroy.

Likewise, research shows that the candidate listed first gets an average advantage of about 2 percent over those listed later. The word "huzzah!" comes from the Norse "Huzza!" and was shouted as Scandinavian warriors raced headlong into battle. If they were not they believed, they'd go straight to a warrior's heaven called Valhalla, instead of ending up in a more mundane afterlife for non-warriors called Hel.

It's the formal name for an ant farm. Here's an irony: the continent that has one and a half billion of ants was invented on Independence Day 1956.

A beaver can swim over half a mile underwater on one single breath of air.

There are typically between 360 and 523 dimples on a golf ball. Each measures up to one-hundredth of an inch deep.

ID request too much for customer

QUINCY, Mass. (AP) — John Russo says he has been a victim of identity theft. So when he was asked to fork over a photo ID just to see about an IHOP pancake restaurant, he flipped.

Odds & Ends

'Turtles on Parade' will march on Charleston
CHARLESTON, S.C. — First came cows and palmetto trees — as well as deer, moose, dinosaurs and cod. Now come the turtles.

The statutes will remain on display through the summer when they will be auctioned as part of a final fundraiser.

"You want my license? I'm going for pancakes. I'm not buying the Hope diamond," and they refused to seat us," Russo said, recounting his experience this week at the Quincy IHOP.

This spring, dozens of decorated turtles will be sunning themselves along Charleston's streets as part of "Turtles on Parade." The loggersheads will be the work of artists using life-size molds of 3-foot-long, 300-pound loggerheads.

It's the whimsical. It's fun. It's great public art," said Ellen Dressler Moryl of Piccolo Spoleto.

The restaurant now has signs to renege the policy of requiring customers to turn over their driver's licenses before they can order — a rule that was enacted to discourage "dine and dash" thefts.

Other cities have seen everything from deer and dinosaurs to caribou and cod and, in Myrtle Beach, there were carousel horses.

Venomous fish gets the best of New Jersey aquarist

EAST ROCKAWAY, N.Y. — A man was taken to a hospital after struggling with a venomous fish in his home aquarium, police said.

The restaurant now has signs to renege the policy of requiring customers to turn over their driver's licenses before they can order — a rule that was enacted to discourage "dine and dash" thefts.

The turtles project, which will be on display as part of the Piccolo Spoleto, was the idea of Robin Asbury, who while working for the University of Wisconsin-Oshkosh, helped create a parade of lions.

A one spot foxface rabbitfish bit the 19-year-old aquarist Tuesday night while he was working on his fish tank in East Rockaway, said Nassau County Police Officer Thomas Brussell.

IHOP Corp., based in Glendale, Calif., released a statement Monday night at WCVB that said an employee felt the policy could eliminate the problem of people leaving without paying.

He expects as many as 75 turtles to be part of the exhibit with the money raised going to sea turtle rescue and other conservation work at the South Carolina aquarium.

Business sponsors support the project and pick proposals from artists, who get a $1,000 stipend. The statues will remain on display through the summer when they will be auctioned as part of a final fundraiser.

"This was done without the knowledge or approval of management. ... We apologize to any guest who was inconvenienced," the statement said. Russo said a security guard at the restaurant held 40 "40" licenses in hand when he arrived to eat.

Business sponsors support the project and pick proposals from artists, who get a $1,000 stipend. The statues will remain on display through the summer when they will be auctioned as part of a final fundraiser.

Business sponsors support the project and pick proposals from artists, who get a $1,000 stipend. The statues will remain on display through the summer when they will be auctioned as part of a final fundraiser.

"Identity theft is rampant. I wouldn't want to give my license to my neighbor or Social Security number to anyone that I'm not familiar with," Russo said. "I'm going just for breakfast."

Audit: Let more wildfires burn, get more money

By Jeff Barnard
Associated Press writer

GRANTS PASS, Ore. — A federal audit says the U.S. Forest Service should let more wildfires burn and demand that state and local governments pick up a bigger share of fire-fighting costs that regularly top $1 billion a year.

The audit released Wednesday by the U.S. Department of Agriculture's inspector general said Forest Service personnel feel that protecting private property where cities meet forests, known as the wildland-urban interface, accounts for more than half of Forest Service firefighting costs, which have exceeded $1 billion in three of the past six years.

Produced at the request of the Forest Service, the audit said that by picking up so much of the cost of fighting wildfires, the Forest Service was taking away incentives homeowners would have to take responsibility for protecting their homes in the woods.

And because state and local governments control development in the wildland-urban interface, they should bear a greater share of the costs, the audit added.

"We are pleased with the results and hope to have all the recommendations in place for the 2007 fire season," Forest Service spokeswoman Jennifer Pyle said from Washington, D.C. "It's something we looked at and felt we needed some outside help to decide how to approach it."

Many western forests evolved with fire, but the Forest Service has long put out all the fires it could, despite recognizing for many years that this led to an unnatural buildup of fuels that has increased the size and severity of wildfires.

The audit said current Forest Service policy calls for giving equal consideration to putting out fires and letting them burn to reduce buildups of brush and small trees, but outside pressure and a lack of trained personnel make it difficult to choose to let fires burn. It noted that only 2 percent of wildfires from 1998 through 2005 were allowed to burn for ecological benefits.

The audit urged the Forest Service to train more personnel to assess and monitor wildfires for the practice known as wildland fire use, and hold wildfire incident commanders and line officers accountable for controlling costs.

Rogue River Hot Spot Chris Lyko is silhouetted against flames as he works a burn out operation on the leading edge of the Eyerly Complex fire near Sisters, Ore., seen in this July 19, 2002, photo.

The Forest Service should also ask Congress to decide who has primary responsibility for protecting homes in the woods, and if that turns out to be the states, renegotiate its firefighting agreements with them.

Andy Stahl of the Forest Service Employees for Environmental Ethics agreed that more wildfires should be allowed to burn, but disagreed that protecting homes was driving up costs.

"Ninety percent of the homes lost to wildland fire are located in one tiny part of the country, Southern California," said Stahl. "So home loss is simply not a particularly significant issue where we fight most wildfires. To Southern California's credit, they are doing a lot, certainly more than anywhere else, to make their communities fire resistant."

The Wilderness Society has been urging the Forest Service for years to let more fires burn and supports many of the receding frontiers, but how much they can reduce firefighting costs is anybody's guess, said wildfire policy analyst Judith Hall-Fivera.

"Apparently the main reason the Forest Service has not done this is it feels the states object to it — concerns about fires escaping and smoke," she said. "You have to have a balance of what is ecologically appropriate with what will help you reduce suppression costs."

"Unfortunately the moniker 'Let it Burn' has caught on, but that's not what wildland fire use is," she said. "It's a very highly managed process, with teams of people on the ground."

New study downplays link between bark beetles, fire risk

DENVER (AP) — The infestation of tree-killing bugs sweeping through millions of acres of forests in the West might help prevent wildfires rather than fuel them as feared, according to a new study.

The outbreak of beetles that burrow under the bark, eventually killing the tree, might reduce wildfire risk by naturally thinning forests, according to the report released Tuesday by researchers from Colorado State University, the University of Colorado and the University of Idaho.

"We are suggesting that the supposed fire risk is probably overblown," said Bill Romme, professor of fire ecology at Colorado State and the lead researcher. "It's possible the insects are doing the forest thinning that we would never be able to afford."

An expert with the U.S. Forest Service criticized the report as "selective science," saying it appears to advocate a hands-off approach to managing forests.

State and federal land managers have become more alarmed about swaths of dead trees turning into fuel for wildfires as the beetles have fanned out through Western forests. Beetles have destroyed more than 7 million trees in Colorado over the past 10 years, said Joe Duda, forest management division supervisor for the State Forest Service.

Congress appropriated $1 million this year to help remove dead or dying trees.

The new study cautions that removing trees won't stop the spread of the beetles. Dead or dying trees don't mean the forest is unhealthy but "may instead reflect a natural process of forest renewal," according to the study. Similar outbreaks have occurred in the past. The study notes warmer weather, drought and denser forests because of decades of fire suppression have also contributed to outbreak, the report says.

In October, Forest Service scientists said a review of studies showed there was no large amount of evidence suggesting that insect outbreaks significantly increase wildfire risk.

'Thrill killings' adding to boost in Nevada big game poaching

RENO, Nev. (AP) — State game wardens are investigating an increasing number of incidents they call "thrill killings," a new and disturbing form of poaching of big game in Nevada that is likely to result in the most fatalities in more than a decade.

"The group killings, those are nothing but thrill killings," said Rob Buonomici, acting director of the Nevada Department of Wildlife. "Very rarely did we see that before. We are seeing it now. That's what's kind of alarming."

Some of the worst cases to date include:

• A group of five deer, three fawns and two does, shot and killed, with their bodies left to rot together in the mountains near Elko.

• A cow elk killed and a bull elk wounded in Lincoln County.

• A California bighorn sheep, one of the West's rare animals, killed, its head removed, and the Santa Rosa Mountains north of Winnemucca.

Wardens don't know who's doing it.

"We could be looking at kids," Buonomici told the Reno Gazette-Journal. "You could be looking at intoxication, an 'under the influence' issue. These aren't (legal) hunting deaths."

Reported poaching incidents this year reached 65 by Oct. 31, just five fewer than all of last year and 21 more than the 44 recorded in 2000.

The actual number of illegal killings is much higher. State wildlife officials estimate only 1 percent to 5 percent of poaching incidents are discovered.

"We always see these kinds of cases year after year," said Buonomici. "A game warden based in Elko. But this year, there seems to be more of everything."

Most cases of poaching in Nevada involve animals that are shot out of season or killed by hunters without proper licenses. It's a felony in Nevada, punished by up to four years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

"We probably convict half a dozen a year," said Buonomici, a game warden for 27 years. "We don't convict that many because of the time involved in the investigations."

The task of policing the state's hunters can be overwhelming. Nevada has 31 game wardens; each patrols an average of 3,587 square miles, the largest of any state in the continental U.S. In Texas, by comparison, wardens patrol an average of 543 square miles each.

"The only fix is more game wardens," Buonomici said. "We are just spread too thin."

Nevada's few wardens rely on legal hunters for information about poaching incidents.

In 2005, the number of registered hunters in Nevada totaled about 50,000.

"We are getting a lot more public involvement," Buonomici said.

Late summer economy not as slow as expected

By Manoel Aversa
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The economy lost steam in the late summer but not nearly as much as first thought, a hopeful sign the country is weathering the housing slump.

The Commerce Department reported Wednesday that economic growth clocked in at a 2.2 percent annual rate in the July-to-September quarter.

The new reading was a considerable upgrade from the government's earlier estimate of a 1.6 percent growth rate, which would have been the worst showing in more than three years if it had held up.

The main factors for the higher estimate were stronger inventories amassed by companies and a trade deficit that didn't strain economic growth as much.

The improvement, however, could not hide the fact that the economy has been losing momentum all year.

Over the first three months of the year, the economy grew at a blistering pace — 5.6 percent, the best performance in 2 1/2 years. From April through June, the growth rate was 2.6 percent as consumers and companies tightened spending in response to sagging energy prices.

The further slowdown in late summer mostly reflected the deepening housing slump. Investment in home building was reduced by the largest amount in 15 years.

"It was a tough quarter, but not as tough as previously estimated," said Mark Zare, chief economist at Moody's Economy.com. "But there's reason to be optimistic that the expansion will remain intact. With businesses so flush with profits, they will continue to invest and hire and the economy will continue to move forward," he predicted.

On an encouraging note, a Federal Reserve survey released Wednesday found that most parts of the country had moderate economic growth in the late fall despite troubles in the housing market and the automotive industry.

The Bush administration insists the economy is fundamentally sound. But Democrats who feel the poor and the middle class have benefited little from the economic expansion over the past five years.

Democrats who will take over the House and Senate in January want to raise the federal minimum wage, among their other priorities.

The cost of living

Sister Rosemary Bossen of La Posada Ministry shops for groceries at a store in Twin Falls. Local shoppers spent more on groceries this summer — compared with the national average — than they did last summer, according to a recent study by the American Chamber of Commerce Research Association.

Local cost of living edges up compared with national average

By Sandy Miller
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — People paid more for their pork sausage and eggs at the grocery store this summer than they did last summer, but they spent less for their ground beef and milk.

They forked out considerably more cash on rent and gas but less on a prescription for Lipitor. And a hamburger from their favorite fast food restaurant cost them exactly what it did last year, according to third-quarter numbers from the American Chamber of Commerce Research Association, which compares the cost of living in Twin Falls to other cities across the country.

From July through September, Twin Falls' cost-of-living index rose to 94.9 percent of the national average, up from 91.4 percent during the same period last year, according to the most recent ACCRA study.

Utilities — electricity, natural gas, heating oil and telephone bills — saw the largest comparative increase from last year, with costs rising from 89.1 percent to 94.4 percent of the national average.

Twin Falls residents also spent more on housing from July through September. Renters paid $675 a month for a two-bedroom apartment with 1 1/2 to two bathrooms, up from $600 a month during the same period last year. The cost of a 2,400-square-foot upscale new home shot up from $189,500 to $250,000.

"From an economic development standpoint, it's important to know how our cost of living stacks up to the rest of the country. Every business that relocates here has employees, and it's important to know what the cost of living is going to be."

— Shawn Barigar, president and CEO of the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce

Costs also rose at the grocery store, compared with costs around the country. Twin Falls shoppers spent 103.1 percent of the national average on groceries, up from 99.1 percent during last year's third quarter. But health care here cost 106.9 percent of the national average, down slightly from 107.5 percent last year.

It's important to remember that all those numbers do is present a snapshot of the cost of living in Twin Falls when compared with other cities across the country. Although some good information can be gleaned, some things can be misleading, said Shawn Barigar, president and chief executive officer of the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce, which participates in the study by gathering local prices.

"They survey 30-something items for groceries, but for transportation, they survey two" — gas prices and the cost of a tire rotation, Barigar said. "That might be a narrow view of transportation costs. And a $10 increase in the cost of Lipitor (a drug for lowering cholesterol) may skew the figure for health care a few percentage points."

And when Judie House, the chamber's office coordinator, calls around for local prices, the numbers she gets "happen to be the price that day at that time," Barigar said.

How Twin Falls compares

Still, the study does provide some good information, Barigar said.

"The first thing I look at is how the composite stacks up to the rest of the country," Barigar said. "What's good news is it costs less to live here than the average place in the U.S."

For instance, the cost of living in Fresno, Calif., was 122.4 percent of the national average, while the cost of living in San Francisco was 169.2 percent of the national average. The most expensive place to live, according to the study, was Manhattan — where the cost of living was a whopping 210 percent of the national average. And the cheapest was McAlester, Okla., where the cost of living was just 78.9 percent of average. Boise and Idaho Falls were the other two Idaho cities in the study. Boise's cost of living for the third quarter was 95.5 percent of the national average, slightly higher than Twin Falls', while Idaho Falls' costs were 90.9 percent of the national average, 3.5 percentage points less than Twin Falls' index.

Barigar said that overall, the numbers show Twin Falls is a pretty inexpensive place to live, and that's good news for local economic developers.

"From an economic development standpoint, it's important to know how our cost of living stacks up to the rest of the country," Barigar said. "Every business that relocates here has employees, and it's important to know what the cost of living is going to be."

Taking the long view on Microsoft's new Vista

Businesses to upgrade slowly after today's release

By Alan Siewers
The Washington Post

After five years of development, and repeated delays, Microsoft is releasing its Windows Vista operating system for sale to corporate customers.

But don't expect drumrolls in the world of corporate computing, where technology managers are notoriously slow in upgrading their systems. Most businesses will proceed cautiously in testing and evaluating Microsoft's new flagship operating system, leading to a phas-

Steve Klynhans, vice president for client platforms at Gartner.

Instead, he added, Vista offers a variety of smaller features that make it attractive, such as improvements in security and reliability and the addition of a desktop search function. While businesses will welcome these enhancements, Klynhans said, there is little pent-up demand to replace Vista's predecessor.

Windows XP because it runs well and most of its bugs have been identified and resolved.

But eventually, companies will want a newer operating system, Klynhans said, and will feel comfortable rolling out Vista in about 15 to 18 months — relatively fast for the adoption of an operating system.

Brad Goldberg, Microsoft's general manager of Windows product management, agreed businesses would roll out Vista gradually but predicted it would be adopted faster than any other business operating system.

"There is no need to wait," he said. "The sooner companies start deploying the product, the sooner they reap the benefits around productivity, security and cost savings."

A search for understanding

CSI student seeks answers to life in poetry

So, what's life
Without love?
Well,
It's still life.

— Alex Luna from
"Though I Stand Alone"

By Pat Marcantonio
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Alex Luna dived into the questions and answers about his life and family through words, and from out the other side came poetry.

Luna, 30, is a College of Southern Idaho student who last year self-published "Though I Stand Alone," a collection of his writing. But this poet came a long way to find his written voice.

There is a hidden power within us,
Just lying around, waiting to be seen.

Born in Mexico City, Luna moved to California with his family when he was 9. His mother, Maria, worked in the grape fields after "escaping his father, an attorney, who was abusive," Luna said.

The United States gave her a chance to start again.

"My mom raised four kids by herself in a foreign country not knowing the language. That was pretty rough on her working for minimum wage in the fields," said Luna, a young man with a quiet, but intense, intelligence.

But his father followed them, finding only jobs as a laborer, he said. They all became citizens through the amnesty laws of the 1980s.

While his parents worked, he admits he got into trouble, even getting arrested for joyriding in Fresno, Calif., he said. The family eventually moved to Jackpot, Nev., where he graduated from high school, which had a large Latino population.

"I got a lot out of it. It helped me to be in that kind of environment. I belonged," he said. However, he didn't go to college. "I should have, but never did."

After graduating from high school, Luna moved to Wendover, Nev., and Utah, mostly working in restaurants and living in "the now."

"My life had been meaningless the whole time," he said. "I didn't have no direction, nothing. I couldn't go on like that forever."

While in Wendover, Luna saw a poster of "Desiderata," in a bathroom. The poem, written in the 1920s by Max Ehrmann, captured what Luna called a unique philosophy of life. While he had been introduced to poetry in high school, he never had a fondness for it. However, this poem inspired him and changed the way he viewed life. It seemed to beckon him toward a meaning that he lacked.

Poet Alex Luna of Twin Falls says he used his past experiences of growing up in an American city to write his poetry in a collection of poems entitled, "Though I Stand Alone."

"From that day, I got interested in finding knowledge," he said.

It is there, deep within the maze
That we begin

Alex Luna began to sort out feelings about his family, especially his father, who abused alcohol. For all the time and schooling it took his father to become a lawyer, he never really enjoyed it, Luna said. He also gave up everything in Mexico, came to the United States and died a poor man.

"I couldn't find any logic in that," Luna said. "I just wanted to understand the man. I wanted to understand what happened to our family."

To gain that understanding, he began reading philosophy books, from Kant to Plato to St. Thomas Aquinas. He also began writing poetry. He was in his mid-20s. "The reason I started writing, I was searching for this certain style and content of poetry," like the kind he read in the "Desiderata," he said.

He wrote in English and Spanish, but his Spanish vocabulary was limited. (He took a Spanish class at CSI to improve his skills.)

"I speak English and this is America. It went more smoother in English."

He estimates that he's written more than 1,000 poems, but "I only like an eighth of those."

He decided to self-publish his poems through Amazon.com, which cost him about $2,000 that he put on a credit card. He went with print on demand because the book would always be there, while most poetry books go out of print after two years, he said. He wanted to share what he had discovered about human relations, emotions and character. He was pleased with the book and may do a follow up.

"I tried to write everything I couldn't find in my search to understand life and myself and human nature," Luna said.

Raquel Arenz, a CSI professor, calls Luna a calm, personally very humble, who gave each person in his Spanish class one of his books.

"I'm just impressed with him," Arenz said. Luna is majoring in hospitality management at CSI, as well as working at Lamb Weston. When he was very young he wanted to be a doctor or lawyer, like his father. But he saw that his father worked a lot at his office and his home, Luna said. Now older, he wants work that he can enjoy and one where he can spend time with his family. (He's engaged.) In Jackpot, he had caught the bug for the hospitality biz when he worked at a casino.

He knew there was no money in poetry, but he had found other rewards.

"I did gain a lot of wisdom from my search."
I have discovered something complicated. Yet in its simplicity, it is amazingly great. I never knew that there was so much in front of me before.

Brawling lawmakers try to stop inauguration

The Associated Press

MEXICO CITY — Lawmakers wrestled, slapped each other and tumbled across the floor of Mexico's Congress after opposition legislators threatened to block the inauguration of the incoming president, whom they accuse of stealing the election.

By late Tuesday, the brawl had turned into a tense standoff between congressmen of President-elect Felipe Calderon's conservative party — who want him to take the oath of office in Congress — and opposition leftists who have vowed to block the swearing-in ceremony.

The battle showed how hard it could be for Calderon to unite a nation divided since he narrowly defeated opposition candidate Andres Manuel Lopez Obrador in the disputed July 2 election. Congress has seen plenty of degrading behavior, but Tuesday's brawl came as Mexico faces central questions on the effectiveness of its government, with escalating turf wars between drug gangs and bloody street battles Mexican legislators stand around the podium of the Congress hall, interrupting a session in Mexico City, Mexico, Tuesday, just days before President-elect Felipe Calderon is to be named president. Above, a sign reads, 'Fatherland First,' in Spanish.

In the southern city of Oaxaca, which was seized for five months by leftist protesters, Calderon has pledged to reach out to the millions of people who didn't vote for him by building a coalition government that will include several of his rivals' proposals to help the poor. But so far, he has stacked his Cabinet with militants from his own party.

The congressional chaos began after conservative legislators of Calderon's National Action Party, or PAN, took over the speaker's podium only in the day amid rumors that leftist lawmakers planned to seize Congress, as they did before President Vicente Fox's Sept. 1 state-of-the-nation speech.

Leftists from Lopez Obrador's Democratic Revolution Party, or PRD, quickly followed, and scuffles broke out.

Tired and bedraggled, the lawmakers ate fast food and occasionally broke out into fresh bursts of shouting and shouting late into the night. Nearly everybody in Mexico's political scene found the spectacle depressing.

"I'm sorry this had to happen, but we were forced to do it," said PAN Rep. Juan Jose Rodriguez Pratts, whose colleagues occupied the upper steps of the broad, mixed-speaker's podium, while opposition legislators formed an angry knot on the bottom steps.

Iran: Americans should demand troop withdrawal

By Edith M. Lederer
Associated Press writer

UNITED NATIONS — Iran's president urged the American people in an open letter Wednesday to demand the withdrawal of U.S. troops from Iraq and reject what he called the Bush administration's "blind support" for Israel and its "illegal and immoral" actions in fighting terrorism. President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad's letter to "Noble Americans" which was distributed by Iran's mission to the United Nations, also accused Bush of governing by "coercion, force and injustice." Ahmadinejad appealed to the American people to work to reverse the U.S. leader's policies, and called on the Bush administration and the new Democratic-controlled Congress to heed the results of the recent mid-term elections. He urged Bush to put the United States' "wealth and power in the service of peace, stability, prosperity and the happiness of all peoples through a commitment to justice and respect for the rights of all nations, instead of aggression and war." In a message to Democrats, he said: "You will also be held to account by the people and by history." "But if the approach remains the same, it would not be unexpected that the American people would similarly reject the new electoral winners," he said, adding that the recent elections did not reflect a victory but rather "the failure of the current administration's policies."

Ahmadinejad's letter also said the U.S. invasion of Iraq has led to hundreds of thousands of deaths, an exponential growth of terrorism and the destruction of Iraq's infrastructure. "I consider it extremely unlikely that you, the American people, consent to the billions of dollars of annual expenditure from your treasury for this military misadventure," he said. He suggested it would be beneficial for the U.S. to withdraw its troops from Iraq and spend its money instead on domestic problems, citing the "many victims" of Hurricane Katrina who continue to suffer and "countless" Americans living in poverty. He also said the Bush administration's policies in its fight against terrorism were harming Americans directly. "The U.S. administration's illegal and immoral behavior is not even confined to outside its borders. You are witnessing daily that under the pretext 'the war on terror,' civil liberties in the United States are being increasingly curtailed," he said. "I have no doubt that the American people do not approve of this behavior and indeed deplore it," he said.

Ahmadinejad focused some attention on the past good relations between the U.S. and Iran, and said both countries' people are "inclined towards the good, and toward extending a helping hand to one another, particularly to those in need." Ahmadinejad has alienated many Americans by calling for Israel's destruction and repeatedly dismissing the Nazi Holocaust as a myth. He also strongly supports the Palestinian militant group Hamas and the Lebanese faction Hezbollah, which the U.S. considers terrorist organizations.

Al-Sadr loyalists boycott parliament, Cabinet over Amman summit

By Hanza Hendawi
Associated Press writer

BAGHDAD, Iraq — Six Cabinet ministers and 30 legislators loyal to anti-American cleric Muqtada al-Sadr decided Wednesday to boycott Parliament and the government to protest the Iraqi prime minister's summit with President Bush. Within hours of the announcement, the White House said Iraqi Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki's first meeting with Bush in their key two-day summit in Jordan was canceled. Senior Iraqi lawmaker Redha Jawad Taqi said the meeting was canceled at the request of the Iraqis after al-Maliki learned that the Jordanian monarch planned to broaden the discussion to include the Arab-Israeli conflict.

Murat al-Rubaie, loyalist to Muqtada al-Sadr, delivers a message following the meeting in Sadr City district of Baghdad Wednesday. Lawmakers and Cabinet ministers loyal to anti-American cleric Muqtada al-Sadr have suspended participation in parliament and the government.

In addition, the U.S. military announced the deaths of two more American soldiers. Heavy fighting continued in Baquba, 53 miles northeast of Baghdad, where clashes between coalition forces and Sunni Arab insurgents have killed scores of militants and civilians in the past few days. In the day's deadliest violence, U.S. forces backed by aircraft killed eight al-Qaida in Iraq insurgents during a raid near Baquba that also left two Iraqi women dead, the U.S. military said. The eight were killed in the aerial bombing. While searching the area, U.S. forces also found the bodies of two females who had died during the fight. No coalition casualties were reported. Meanwhile, a statement issued by the Sadrist lawmakers criticized al-Maliki's Shiite-dominated government for his decision to request from the United Nations a one-year extension of the stay in Iraq of the U.S.-led multinational force numbering around 160,000. The request was granted on Tuesday.

First Bush-Al-Maliki meeting canceled

The Associated Press

AMMAN, Jordan — President Bush's high-profile meeting with Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki on Wednesday was canceled in a stunning turn of events after disclosure of U.S. doubts about the Iraqi leader's capabilities and a political boycott in Baghdad protesting his attendance. Instead of two days of talks, Bush and al-Maliki will have breakfast and a single meeting followed by a news conference on Thursday morning, the White House said. The abrupt cancellation was an almost unheard-of development in the high-level diplomatic circles of a U.S. president, a king and a prime minister. There was confusion — and conflicting explanations — about what happened. Bush had been scheduled to meet in a three-way session with al-Maliki and Jordan's King Abdullah II on Wednesday night, and had rearranged his schedule to be in Amman for both days for talks aimed at reducing the spiral of violence in Iraq. White House counselor Dan Bartlett denied that the delay was snubbed by al-Maliki directly at Bush or was related to the leak of a memo written by White House National Security Adviser Stephen Hadley questioning the prime minister's capacity for controlling violence in Iraq. However, Redha Jawad Taqi, a senior aide of top Shiite politician Abdul-Aziz al-Hakim who also was in Amman, said the Iraqis balked at the three-way meeting after learning the king wanted to broaden the talks to include the Israeli-Palestinian conflict.

Radiation found on British planes; authorities seek thousands of passengers

By Tarq Pasha
Associated Press writer

LONDON — Officials found traces of radiation on two British Airways jets as part of an investigation into the poisoning death of a former Russian spy, and the airline appealed Wednesday to tens of thousands of passengers who flew to Moscow or other cities to contact health authorities. Two Boeing 767s at London's Heathrow Airport tested positive and a third was grounded in Moscow awaiting examination, British Airways said. The airline said "the risk to public health is low" but that it was attempting to contact to some 33,000 passengers who have flown on the jets since Oct. 25. The announcement was the latest twist in a case that has aggravated tensions between Britain and Russia and could strain sensitive negotiations on issues as diverse as energy, NATO expansion, and the nuclear ambitions of Iran and North Korea. Britain has been careful not to blame the Kremlin for the death of Alexander Litvinenko — a former KGB agent and fierce critic of Russian President Vladimir Putin. But criticism of Putin's increasing authoritarianism has intensified since the poisoning — even within Prime Minister Tony Blair's Cabinet. The tests were conducted after the British government contacted British Airways on Tuesday night and told the airline to ground the jets and allow investigators looking into Litvinenko's death to examine them for possible radiation. "The search of the planes came as investigators checked places Litvinenko and others who met with him had visited in the weeks before he fell ill Nov. 1. Litvinenko had said before he died that a group of Russian contacts who met him Nov. 1 had traveled to London from Moscow. Authorities would not say if the radiation on board the two jets was polonium-210. High doses of polonium-210 — a rare radioactive element usually made in specialized nuclear facilities — were found in Litvinenko's body, and traces of radiation have been found at six sites in London connected with the inquiry into his death Nov. 23.

NATO moves to include more ex-communist states

By David Holley and Peter Walkstein
Los Angeles Times

RIGA, Latvia — NATO leaders concluded a two-day summit Wednesday by renewing their commitment to help build a stable democracy in Afghanistan and announcing steps toward welcoming up to eight more once-communist states into the alliance. In a surprise move, the leaders invited Serbia, Montenegro and Bosnia-Herzegovina to join the Partnership for Peace program, a step toward membership that also signals intent to build warmer relations with participants. That marked a reversal of policy NATO had previously demanded that Serbia and Bosnia first show greater cooperation in tracking down high-profile suspects accused of war crimes in the Balkan wars of the 1990s. A final declaration from the gathering held out the prospect that invitations to join NATO could be issued to Albania, Croatia and Macedonia at the next alliance summit, in 2008, if those nations can show that they meet required standards at that time. The declaration also stressed members, Estonia and Lithuania. Moving to boost the alliance's fighting capacity in the face of a resurgence of the Taliban in some parts of Afghanistan, many countries in the 26-member organization agreed to reduce or eliminate restrictions on how their troops could be used here. Some members pledged to increase the number of soldiers, officials said. Commitments made at the summit mean that of 32,000 NATO soldiers in Afghanistan, about 26,000 can now be used more flexibly, NATO Secretary General Jaap de Hoop Scheffer said at a news conference. Scheffer described the decision to invite Serbia and Bosnia into NATO's Partnership for Peace program as a "political" decision that was made without any intent to undermine continued pressure on those countries concerning war crimes suspects. NATO is pushing the two Balkan nations to assist in arresting former Bosnian Serb political leader Radovan Karadzic and military commander Ratko Mladic, who were indicted by the U.N. tribunal for the former Yugoslavia in The Hague.

NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE

On Tuesday, February 27, 2007 at 10:00 a.m., the Trustee First American Title Company, 260 Third Avenue North in Twin Falls, Idaho, Charles Johnson of Johnson Olson, Chartered (a member of the Idaho State Bar and a member of the Idaho Trustee Association), will sell at public auction, to the highest bidder, for cash in lawful money of the United States, all property at the time of sale, the following described real property, situated in the County of Twin Falls, State of Idaho, to-wit: LOT 5, BLOCK 3, TURNERS ADDITION, TWIN FALLS COUNTY, IDAHO, ACCORDING TO THE ORIGINAL PLAT THEREOF, RECORDED IN BOOK 2 OF PLATS, PAGE 7, RECORDS OF TWIN FALLS COUNTY, IDAHO.

The Trustee has no knowledge of a more particular description of the above-described real property for the purposes of compliance with Idaho Code Section 50-113. The Trustee has been informed that a street address of 533 Main Street North, Kimberly, Idaho may sometimes be associated with said real property. Further information may be obtained by calling First American Title in Twin Falls at (208) 734-2905.

This sale will be made without warranty or warranty regarding title, possession or encumbrances to satisfy the obligation secured by and pursuant to the power of sale conferred by a Deed of Trust executed by John G. Hadden and Linda D. Hadden, husband and wife, as Grantors to First American Title as Trustee, and American Security Services, Inc., a Nevada American General Financial Services, Inc., as Beneficiary, dated November 10, 1998 and recorded on November 12, 1998, as Instrument No. 1988020317. The above Grantors consented to comply with section 45-1506 (4)(a), Idaho Code. No representation is made that they are, or are not, responsible for this obligation.

The conditions for which this sale is to be made are presently:
a) the breach and failure to make the monthly payments of $789.82 for two (2) months (August and September of 2006) prior to this date, plus the accrued interest and late charges in the amount of ONE THOUSAND SEVEN HUNDRED FORTY-TWO AND 29/100 DOLLARS ($1,742.29), plus all future accruing payments, interest and other charges after said date of September 29, 2006 if this check is dishonored;
b) the failure to pay the real property taxes for the years 2003, 2004 and 2005 in the total amount of $2,828.32 plus interest and late charges in the amount of $181.22 per day for each and every day until paid in full; plus accruing late fees, costs, and attorney's fees until paid.
c) the failure to insure the premises for damages by fire or other losses to protect the interests of the Beneficiary American General Finance as required by the Deed of Trust.

Further, the Note Decedent made by deed of trust secured, the Beneficiary of said Deed of Trust, declared all sums secured by said Deed of Trust to be due and payable, and that the balance due and owing on said Deed of Trust is SIXTY TWO THOUSAND EIGHT HUNDRED FORTY AND 21/100 DOLLARS ($62,840.21) as of October 9, 2006 plus the accrued rate of 10.25% per annum for each and every day of the month of October 9, 2006 through the date of October 9, 2006 plus all future accruing payments, interest and other charges after said date of October 9, 2006 plus all future accruing payments, interest and other charges after said date of October 9, 2006.

PUBLISH: November 30, December 7, 14 and 21, 2006

NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE

On Tuesday, the 6th day of March, 2007, at the hour of 10:00 o'clock A.M. of said date, at Alliance Title & Escrow, 1411 Falls Ave., E., Ste. 1315, Twin Falls, in the County of Twin Falls, State of Idaho, Charles W. Faucett, Trustee Successor Trustee, will sell at public auction, to the highest bidder, for cash, in full, the money of the United States and the interest thereon, the WEST 48 FEET OF LOT 9 AND THE EAST 5.5 FEET OF LOT 10 OF KINGS NO. 2 SUBDIVISION, TWIN FALLS COUNTY, IDAHO, ACCORDING TO THE PLAT THEREOF. RECORDED IN BOOK 7 OF PLATS, PAGE 11, OF DEEDS OF SAID COUNTY. The Successor Trustee has no knowledge of the more particular description of the above-referenced real property, but for purposes of compliance with Section 8013 Subsection 2, Successor Trustee, has been informed that the street address of 171 Wiseman, Twin Falls, Idaho, is sometimes associated with said real property. Said sale will be made without covenant or warranty regarding the accuracy of the encumbrances to satisfy the obligation secured by and pursuant to the power of sale conferred in the Deed of Trust executed by Robert L. Schell and an Unmarried Woman, Grantor, to Charles W. Faucett, Successor Trustee, for the benefit and security of GMAC Financial Services Corporation, recorded May 15, 2003, as Instrument No. 2003-012487, and re-recorded on October 12, 2003, as Instrument No. 2003-027218. Mortgages assigned to the Idaho Housing and Finance Agency by Assignment of Mortgage Deed of Trust recorded on November 12, 2003, as Instrument No. 2003-028251, Mortgage records of Twin Falls County, Idaho, to be sold, as Trustee, are NAMED TO COMPLY WITH SECTION 45-1506 (4)(a), IDAHO CODE. NO REPRESENTATION IS MADE THAT THE SALE IS NOT PRESENTLY RESPONSIBLE FOR ANY OBLIGATION.

The default for which this sale is to be made is the failure to pay when due monthly installment payments under the Deed of Trust Note dated May 19, 2003, in the amount of $549.00 per month for the months of June through August 2006, inclusive; and for each and every month thereafter until date of sale or reimbursement. All delinquent payments, including late charges, plus any costs or expenses associated with this foreclosure, plus the accrued interest at the rate of 12% per annum as of May 1, 2006. The principal balance owing as of this date on the obligation secured by said Deed of Trust is $56,283.21, plus accrued interest at the rate of 5.35% per annum from May 1, 2006.

DEED THIS 1st day of November, 2006. /s/CHARLES W. FAUCETT, a Member of the Idaho State Bar, SUCCESSOR TRUSTEE

ANSWER: These days most playbooks are responding to a strong two clubs with a bad hand use a spec, not negative. In this auction three clubs serves that purpose, with no two-trump a natural rebid. If you play that way, as I do, a three-club bid now shows 0-4 points or so. The bid has nothing to do with clubs, of course. That you have five of them is merely coincidental.

VIDEO GAME REVIEW

In 'Lumines II' for PlayStation Portable, the object is to create larger blocks from smaller colored squares.

Hardcore players take liking to 'casual' games

BY LOU KESTER
The Associated Press

Earlier this month, hundreds of thousands of people lined up for the chance to buy a PlayStation 3, lured by its dazzling visual firepower. Millions more watched the chaos on TV and then turned to their computers for a relaxing game of "Bejeweled," "Diner Dash" or one of dozens of simple games that don't require a blu-ray DVD drive or Sony's state-of-the-art cell processors.

Those millions — the great, silent majority of electronic game players — are what the industry calls "casual" gamers, and they're becoming an influential force. Let's face it: Most adults don't have 60-plus hours to invest in something like "Final Fantasy XII." But they'll happily spend part of their lunch hour on "Tetris," "Zuma" or an online game of hearts.

Most casual gamers find their favorites on the Internet, but video-game publishers have started to take notice. Microsoft's Xbox Live has created a new market for elegant games like "Geometry Wars." And casual titles like "Brain Age" and "Lumines" are thriving on portable systems.

Come to think of it, those are exactly the kinds of games we saw campers playing last week while they waited for the PS3. Guess there's a little, casual gamer inside everyone.

"Lumines II" (Buena Vista, for the PlayStation Portable, $29.99) — The concept behind "Lumines" couldn't be simpler. You're presented with 2-by-2 blocks, in two colors, and you have to arrange them to form larger, single-color blocks. The original "Lumines" delivered that elegant gameplay with unprecedented audiovisual panache, and the sequel looks and sounds even better. The core game is essentially the same, and the multiplayer games haven't changed much either.

But a new "mission" mode ramps up the challenge, requiring you to complete certain feats (such as clearing the entire screen with just a few moves) before moving to the next level. And the "puzzle" mode has been beefed up with more than 100 problems in which you must recreate a simpler picture, like a dog or an alligator, out of one color. Fans of "Lumines" may be disappointed that there isn't more new stuff in "Lumines II," but it's still the PSP's most addictive brainiacer. Three stars.

CSI theater students 'Inherit the Wind'

"The Bible is a book. It's a good book, but it is not the only book."

— Defense attorney Henry Drummond, "Inherit the Wind"

BY STEVE CRUMP
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — In the beginning, there was John Scopes.

In 1925, Scopes was a high school football coach and substitute teacher in a small Tennessee town. He was talked into admitting that he had taught Charles Darwin's ideas about evolution to students in violation of state law.

Knowing such a public confession would provoke criminal charges, a group of Dayton, Tenn., businessmen hatched the idea as a publicity stunt to put their town on the map.

Their plan succeeded in spades.

Clarence Darrow, the most famous criminal defense attorney of his day, came to Dayton to represent Scopes. The prosecution recruited William Jennings Bryan, two-time Democratic nominee for president and a former secretary of state. Every big-city newspaper in the country sent a reporter to Tennessee.

In a sensational trial, Scopes was convicted and fined $100 (the verdict was later overturned on a technicality by the Tennessee Supreme Court), but Darrow's eloquent defense of freedom of thought was widely interpreted as a moral victory for those who believed evolution was solid science.

Today, Darrow's and Bryan's arguments don't sound all that different from the debate going on in Kansas, Pennsylvania and other places where the teaching of evolution in public schools — and the rise of a competing philosophy called Intelligent Design — is being considered.

"Things haven't changed that much, it seems," said Tony Mannen, the College of Southern Idaho theater professor who's directing a production of Jerome Lawrence and Robert E. Lee's play "Inherit the Wind" that opens Wednesday night in the new CSI Fine Arts Theater.

Written in 1953, "Inherit the Wind" quickly became a favorite actor's piece. Paul Muni, the most famous Hollywood actor of the 1930s, and George C. Scott played the Darrow character on Broadway. Ed Begley and Charles Durning did the Bryan role on stage, and in 1960 Spencer Tracy and two-time Oscar winner Frederick March were teamed in a film version directed by Stanley Kramer.

Henry Drummond is the Darrow character; Matthew Harrison Brady is the fictional Bryan. Their courtroom clash — Drummond even puts Brady on the witness stand — makes for great theater.

"There's an exchange where Drummond asks Brady if he thinks a sponge has the capacity to think," Mannen said. "If the Lord wishes a sponge to think, it thinks," Brady says, so Drummond asks if a man should be allowed to think too. Brady agrees he should, so Drummond says, "Then my client should have the same privilege as a sponge."

"The play is about respecting other ideas, and about looking at ideas intellectually, not just with emotion," he said.

In the local production, Drummond is played by Jud Harmon, a CSI alumnus who resides turned last year from a one-year-

'THE NATIVITY STORY'

The greatest story, badly told

BY CHRISTY LEMIRE
The Associated Press

If her name weren't at the top of the credits, you'd never believe Catherine Hardwicke directed "The Nativity Story."

Gone is the vibrant energy of her 2005 skateboarding adventure, "Lords of Dogtown," as is the visceral intensity of her debut film, the junior-high drama "Thirteen."

Working from a thoroughly researched script by Mike Rich ("The Bookie," "Finding Forrester"), Hardwicke depicts the birth of Christ in such a lifeless, suffocatingly earnest manner, you'd swear she made the movie specifically to be shown in Sunday school classes — or perhaps on the Hallmark Channel.

It is an innovative approach, though, to portray Mary and Joseph (Keisha Castle-Flugher, the youngest person ever nominated for a best-actress Oscar for her performance in 2002's "Whale Rider," and Oscar Isaac) as a confused, newly married couple trying to comprehend the fact that they're about to become parents of the Messiah. (Guess there wasn't a "What to Expect When You're Expecting the Son of God" book for them to follow.) The gospels of Matthew and Luke address Christ's infancy, but little has been known, or shown, about mom and dad before that night in the manger. Most in the audience will walk away feeling that they've learned a thing or two.

And the scenery in Southern Italy (the same town where parts of "The Passion of the Christ" and "The Gospel According to St. Matthew" were shot) can be striking in its bright, gritty realism. Much of the action also was filmed in Morocco, including Mary and

Keisha Castle-Flugher plays Mary in 'The Nativity Story.'

Joseph's 100-mile trek from Nazareth to Bethlehem.

Hardwicke's history as a longtime production designer is evident in the film's attention to detail. But on a larger scale, her tone is too often didactic and just downright boring. Shohreh Aghdashloo, Claran Hinds, Shaun Toub and Hiam Abbas are among the eclectic international cast that's been amassed.

"Blessed are you among women and blessed is the fruit of thy womb," Aghdashloo says in an example of the film's clunkily literal dialogue as Elizabeth, Mary's cousin.

Both are surprised to learn in visits from the angel Gabriel (Alexander Siddiq) that they're pregnant: Elizabeth had seemed too old and Mary had just become Joseph's wife in an arranged marriage to a man she barely knows and doesn't love (and had made a vow of chastity for their first year together).

While the very serious Mary is hiding out for a while with her cousin, King Herod (Hinds, singularly evil and scheming) has begun his paranoid search for the Messiah, based on an Old Testament prophecy. He instructs his troops to kill anyone who might be this child, but also hopes to find him through the Roman census, which forces citizens to return to their birthplaces.

Having returned to Nazareth obviously pregnant, Mary has been ostracized by nearly everyone — except Joseph, who believes her, which makes her realize that maybe he's a good guy after all. She willingly agrees to accompany him to his hometown of Bethlehem on a donkey, across the desert, through Jerusalem, on the verge of giving birth.

And of course, once they arrive in town, there's — let's all say it together — no room at the inn.

Schlepping through the desert at the same time are the three Magi (Nadim Sawalha, Eriq Ebouaney and Stefan Kaliphal), who ostensibly were meant to provide a touch of comic relief with their banter about the stars and planets-aligning.

In their silken robes, the wise men — like everyone else in "The Nativity Story" — feel like participants in an elaborate high school production, one that looks authentic but has no soul.

Movie nuggets

• "Bobby" / C A promising premise and an all-star cast get fritted away in a movie that means to use Robert F. Kennedy's assassination as both a kaleidoscope of late '60s culture and a lens to view current events. Writer-director Emilio Estevez is earnest in his attempt to glorify RFK and look back on the hope the presidential candidate represented on the day he was gunned down in the kitchen of the Ambassador Hotel in Los Angeles. But Estevez spins so many subplots, and shifts the tone so much, while going back-and-forth between them that 20 main characters, with his movie too often winds up playing more like some campy imitation of "The Love Boat." Rated R (profanity, violence, sexual situations, drug use). 2 hours.

• "Borat: Cultural Learnings of America for Make Benefit Glorious Nation of Kazakhstan" / A- The comedian Sacha Baron Cohen stars in this hilariously, purposely offensive mockumentary in the gonzo guise of his most wickedly disarming character, Borat Sagdiyev, a visiting TV reporter from Kazakhstan. The most obvious part of Baron Cohen's comeditis genus is his improvised scenes with unsuspecting, real-life "co-stars," in which he always stays in character, never betraying the ruse. But the other, deeper part is the way he makes us squirm until we laugh, and laugh until we squirm, holding up a lighted mirror to our darkest fears and prejudices. Rated R (pervasive strong crude and sexual content including graphic nudity and language). 1 hour, 23 minutes.

• "Casino Royale" / A- Imagine you've never heard of James Bond — or M — or that mar-1-in or even the numerical progression 007. And then, a galvanizing new action hero appears (who isn't always heroic). In a kind of Bond Begins, Daniel Craig plays high-stakes poker with a bad guy who finances terrorists, romances luscious Eva Green and slowly acquires the cool, cold accoutrements. The best Bond since Sean Connery, Craig brings considerable acting chops to the role as well as a snewy sexiness reminiscent of Connery's sex-symbol contemporary Steve McQueen. Dangerous and hardy suave (yet), Craig does Bond different, he does him better and, hopefully, he'll do him for a good long time. Rated PG-13 (intense sequences of violent action, a scene of torture, mild language and nudity). 2 hours, 24 minutes.

• "Deck the Halls" / G While this comes decked out in bright lights, no amount of trimming can hide its lack of originality. Matthew Broderick, a straight man for the ages, plays optometrist and Steve Finck, sweater-wearing suburban family man who's about as Christmas and married to Kelly (Katielin Davis). He's thrown off his wits of yuletide adulation when car salesman Buddy Hall (Danny DeVito) moves in next door and quickly becomes obsessed with making his house visible from space, covering it with Christmas lights. The two quickly become rivals as their facing houses devolve into a battle-ground for a war not on, but about, Christmas. The sin of "Deck the Halls" is its regifting. The humor inherent in a man focused on covering his house with Christmas lights has already been memorably put to film in 1989's "National Lampoon's Christmas Vacation." Eventually, "Deck the Halls" pushes a message that Christmas could use some updating, but this holiday season, it might be best to stick with the old Christmas movie canon — like "Christmas Vacation." PG for some crude and suggestive humor, and for language. 95 minutes.

• "DeJa Vu" / C- Gives you the feeling that you've seen parts of this movie before. Only, the parts were all from better films. This hybrid time-travel, mystery/romance stars Denzel Washington as an ATF agent who travels back in time to save a young woman (Paula Patton) and 500 people killed by a terrorist bombing of a New Orleans ferry. The movie tries to fuse time-travel romances such as "Somewhere in Time" and "Time After Time" with some of the futuristic video technology of "Strange Days." But none of it really sticks. And the ending is a head-scratcher that bends the rules of time-travel fiction. Rated PG-13 (intense sequences of violence and terror, disturbing images, and some sensuality). 2 hours, 6 minutes.

• "Flicka" / C- Just say neigh. Mory O'Hara's 1941 classic has been reduced to a generic and often banal girl-to-a-generic and often banal girl-to-a-generic and often banal girl-to-a-generic (some mild language). 1 hour, 34 minutes.

• "Flushed Away" / B The folks behind Wallace & Gromit! leads in their trademark stop-motion animation for a computerized version, but their nimble Brit wit remains intact. A pet mouse's (voiced by Hugh Jackman) posh life literally goes in the toilet when he's flushed down under to a miniature London. Lags a bit after the first hour, but the voice talent (Kate Winslet, Ian McKellen) is so strong, the visuals so inventive and the jokes so clever, you won't mind. Rated PG (crude humor and some language). 1 hour, 22 minutes.

• "For Your Consideration" / B It seems almost surely and ungrateful to say "For Your Consideration," the newest bit of cinematic silliness from Christopher Guest, isn't as hilarious as "Best in Show" or "A Mighty Wind." Still, it is something of a comedown. The problem may be inherent in Guest's decision to go rooting around in his home turf. No one's ever looked very closely at the inanities of the dog-show world or folkie reunions or amateur theater's ("Waiting for Guffman"). But Hollywood? Been there, done that. Rated PG-13 (sexual references and brief language). 1 hour, 26 minutes.

• "The Fountain" / D Watching this metaphysically bloated triptych is a bewildering experience. And not only because the Into-the-mystic tale jumps between three, century-spanning time periods — with Hugh Jackman as a conquistador, reincarnated as a modern-day medical researcher, who finally becomes a futuristic avatar on an interstellar mission. But also because director Darren Aronofsky ("Pi," "Requiem for a Dream") had been such an indie cinema darling before getting bogged down in big-budget Hollywood projects that didn't pan out, including a "Batman" script. Earthy and radiant Rachel Weisz stars opposite Jackman in three different roles. But Aronofsky's version of spiritual wonder is finally more mind-numbing than soul-stirring. Rated PG-13 (some intense sequences of violent action, some sensuality and language). 1 hour, 36 minutes.

• "Happy Feet" / B- Happy kids will be wowed by the stunning visuals — animated glaciers crumble and CGI killer whales barrel into the sky. Happy parents will love the classics-filled soundtrack. But some may be put off by the gushy plot and unnecessary ethnic and sexual stereotypes. Our hero, Mumble (voiced by Elijah Wood), is a dancing fool in a tribe full of singing emperor penguins (among them, Hugh Jackman and Nicole Kidman). The outcast sets out to find his own music and discover what's causing a deadly famine. The film is inventive, colorful, fast-moving and slightly soulless. Rated PG (some mild peril and rude humor). 1 hour, 38 minutes.

• "Marie Antoinette" / B A bonbon with a melancholy aftertaste, this is the prettiest picture of the year. And one of the most thrillingly original. Sofia Coppola's Brechtian take on the brief reign (and life) of Marie Antoinette (Kristen Dunst) starts when she arrives at Versailles, all of 14, to marry Louis XVI (Jason Schwartzman) and ends with the Revolution literally crashing through the gilded doors. Mixing modern (the Cure, say) and period music, the movie is essentially "Mean Girls" in powdered wig. But beneath the artifice is a very human — and ultimately tragic — story, though not necessarily an emotionally fulfilling one. Rated PG-13 (sexual content, partial nudity and Innuendo). 2 hours, 21 minutes.

"Superman Returns"

"Superman Returns" answers a question about the Man of Steel we boys have wondered about for decades.

Is Superman gay —?

No, no, that's Batman.

The question is: What would happen if you shot Superman in the eye?

And the answer is: You'd have to get a new bullet. The one you fired would have pancaked flatter than a quarter and be spinning on the cement.

It happens in "Superman Returns," in a nifty little sequence where our Hero has stood up to an electric Gatling gun hurling wads of copper-coated lead at him at a rate of about 3,000 a minute. They bounce off into the gloaming, trailing neon incandescence. So the bad guy marches up to him, pulls out a .45 and issues a coup de grace. Bad mistake, dude. You are toast.

The much ballyhooed movie, far from great and far from short (2 1/2 hours), is still great fun. Best is its love for the traditions of the Big Guy: It reaches out to embrace all the previous iterations of the caped flyboy, even finding room for Jack Larson and Noel Neill to get giant, close-ups and dramatic scenes of the sort they never got in previous TV cameos. Neill, the ur-Louis Lane, plays a dying octogenarian who is swooned out of his fillings on her deathbed by Lex Luthor; and Larson, the ur-Jimmy Olsen, is a bartender who in a moment of stress actually hugs Sam Huntington, this movie's Jimmy Olsen. It's too bad George Reeves, the original TV tall-building leaper, isn't around to bask in a little after-glow.

Even the late, great Marion Brando is distinguished from the archives and called to deliver a warning to his son, though it's actually Lex and his minions who've penetrated the Fortress of Solitude and learn the lesson from Stanley Kowalski gone slumming in Richard Donner's 1978 incarnation. And the movie uses as its overture John Williams's blast of triumph that accompanied the big '70s and '80s versions, with additional music by John Ottman.

But the truly beloved figure of this trip to Metropolis is the late Christopher Reeve; he and his late wife, Dana, are the dedicatees at movie's end. More to the point, the young actor Brandon Routh seems chosen for the part not because he embodies Superman but because he specifically embodies Reeve's Superman, with dark good looks, a modest, even ego-less screen presence, a curiously muted sexuality and a sense of well-brought-up preppele's politeness and diffidence. He's a Superman who'd always call you Sir.

backyard anthill. Like the Old Testament God, and equally empowered by rage, he power-sucks their world, unleashing biblical torrents to sweep them away.

But down in the ant world, they don't like the volume equivalent of 40 days and 40 nights of H2O being dumped upon them at the whim of a small, angry child. A wizard figure out some chemical stuff that is capable of shrinkage on a massive scale.

Slipping into Lucas' bedroom, the ants squirt some bug juice down his ear canal — hello, 15mm boy!

The scuttling micro-beings barely recognizable from four feet up? Lucas discovers they're an ancient civilization — handsome, valiant, organized — where each gives according to his means and each receives according to his need. Why, it's like ... utopia. Everybody is happy, except when monster boy wets them.

Lucas quickly sees the error of his ways and, sorry, like them, he's a stalwart warrior. He has bonded, coming to care for his mentor Hova (Julia Roberts), and he joins a small squad that also includes Zoc (Nicolas Cage), Fugax (Bruce Campbell) and Krecia (Regina King).

Technically, the film is superb. The director is John A. Davis, and his usage of the medium is dynamic. He understands that the capacity to imagine and depict the amazing isn't enough; it still has to be a movie. He is best at the action sequences (some quite intense for small children) and has a particular genius for dramatizing near misses, as several times Lucas the lovable ant commando almost ends up scowled, nibbled, DD'T'd or pingered to death. The movie is an epic adventure with a rigorously moral point of view.

Wong directs another 'Messiah'

BY STEVE CRUMP
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — No, Carson Wong didn't know Georg Friedrich Handel.

But he sure knows his music. "How many 'Messiahs' is this for me?" said the 67-year-old Wong, who will direct the College of Southern Idaho Chamber Choir and the Magic Valley Chamber Orchestra in a performance of the classic holiday oratorio Sunday in the College of Southern Idaho Fine Arts Center auditorium. "I've lost count. Fifteen or 20."

Most of those came at the podium of the Magic Valley Chorale, which Wong conducted for 19 years before stepping down in 1999. The chorale — by long tradition — performs "Messiah" every two years, a practice that has continued under Wong's successor, Joe Casperian.

posting with the Idaho National Guard in Iraq. He's now the new artistic manager of the part-time theater.

Brady is CSI sophomore Dustin Holshey, a Gooding High School graduate who's a veteran of a number of school and community theater productions.

"They both have a lot of acting experience, and they're right for these roles," Mannen said.

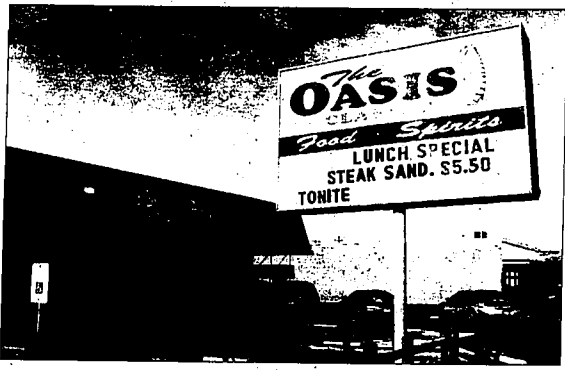

Jenz Hansen, a freshman from Jerome, plays the Scopes character. Berttram Cates, while Jean-Paul Archambeault, a sophomore from Mountain Home, is the sharp-tongued Baltimore reporter E.K. Hornbeck. Craig Bragg, chairman of the Fine Arts Department, plays the presiding judge at the trial.

"I thought I'd give his acting career a break," quipped Mannen.

Amanda Johnson plays Cates' love interest, Rachel, and Ben Herria, a freshman from Boise, is her puritanical clergyman father, the Rev. Jeremiah Brown.

"All of my students who tried out for this production got a part; it's that kind of play," Mannen said. "But this is the best group of students I've had in 12 years here; everybody works hard."

A reminder of Philadelphia at Twin Falls' Oasis Food, Spirits

BY STEVE CRUMP

About Oasis Food and Spirits

• 1007 Blue Lakes Blvd. N., Twin Falls — Burgers, sandwiches, salads and soup, $4-$8; daily lunch specials. Hours: 11:30 a.m.-1 a.m. Mondays through Saturdays; closed Sundays. Dan Willis, owner: 733-6654.

TWIN FALLS — The Oasis, a longtime fixture of Blue Lakes Boulevard North, has gone through several manifestations, but the cozy bar/restaurant has always been a place where everybody knows your name.

Its reputation for good hamburgers is well-founded, but I hadn't stopped by for several years. So I stopped by on a recent afternoon to see whether the pub fare on offer there is still noteworthy.

I sampled the in-house version of a Philly steak sandwich, dubbed Dan's Philly ($7.99). It was tender sliced beef with sauteed onions and mushrooms on a toasted hoagie roll, served with a choice of French fries, Tater Totz or potato salad on the side.

Philly sandwiches have become synonymous with cheese, but that's just part of the story.

My lunch was a local version of what Philadelphians call a "steak with onions" — not a "steak sandwich." A Philly steak is not really a steak at all; it's a sandwich made with shredded beef, cooked on a grill top.

In the City of Brotherly Love, you can also order a "steak" with raw onions, or with "sauces" (tomato sauce), or with hot peppers (medium-hot cherry peppers), or with cooked peppers.

There's also a "steak hoagie" — a sandwich with fresh tomatoes, raw onion, cheese, and herbs — and, famously, a "Philly Lean," which is a "steak" so juicy that you have to lean over the counter unless you want the contents all over the front of your shirt.

The "cheesesteak" is a separate dish. Although it, too, is made with sliced or shredded beef and served on a hoagie, it's invariably topped with one of three cheeses: American, provolone or Cheez Whiz.

Philly steak sandwiches were invented by Italians who settled in South Philadelphia at the end of the 19th century. The key ingredient is the roll — the word "hoagie" comes from Hog Island, an industrial and shipping area in South Philadelphia. The bread has a characteristic medium texture, and the interior is soft, with a yeasty taste.

The Oasis isn't an Italian sandwich shop, but it serves up a pretty good Philly.

Irish fiddlers play Hailey on Friday

BY KAREN BOSSICK
Special to the Times-News

HAILEY — In Ireland, Martin Hayes enjoys the kind of adulation many rock fans reserve for Mick Jagger.

In the United States many people see him as just another guy who plays a fiddle.

It's no secret that Irish or Celtic music doesn't get the same respect here that it does in Ireland, where Hayes is six-time all-Ireland fiddle champion and winner of the National Entertainment Award — Ireland's equivalent of a Grammy.

But that's OK, he says. "The fact that the music isn't as big here removes some of the sentimentality surrounding the music and helps me understand where the strengths and weaknesses of the music are. I still go back to Ireland four or five times a year where they're completely dedicated to this type of music."

That said, Hayes knows there are many Americans who can't get enough of Celtic music, as well as some who think it's part of a balanced musical diet along with a little helping of rock and roll, country, reggae, jazz and classical.

It's for those people that he and Dennis Cahill will perform "An Evening of Irish Fiddle and Guitar" Friday night at the Liberty Theater.

Courtesy of Brian Linnell Books
Martin Hayes and Dennis Cahill perform what they call "highland, heath and holler concerts."

Hayes cut his teeth on Celtic music, rather than nursery rhymes, in the Ireland of his youth. His father, P.J. Hayes, was leader of the "The Celtic Band. Musicians — and TV interviewers — were always at his house.

"I grew up in a complete universe of music. And Celtic music was the only music I understood and listened to," recalled Hayes, who has been called one of the most important musicians to come out of Ireland in the last 50 years. "I was completely dedicated to that type of music by the time I was 7."

Despite his Irish blood, Hayes moved to the United States 22 years ago — moving first to Chicago, then Seattle and just recently to Connecticut. It was in Chicago that he began collaborating with a Chicago guitar player named Dennis Cahill, who was born in Chicago to parents from County Kerry, Ireland.

If you go...

- What: Martin Hayes and Dennis Cahill will perform "An Evening of Irish Fiddle and Guitar."

- Where: Liberty Theater, Hailey.

- When: Friday, 7:30 p.m.

- How much: Tickets are $15 for adults and $5 for children. They're available at the door or by purchase in advance at the Sun Valley Center for the Arts, 191 Fifth St. E. in Ketchum, or by calling 726-9491.

They perform what they call "highland, heath and holler concerts." They created the score for "Photos to Send," a movie about Depression-era photographer Dorothea Lange. And next year they plan to take their music down under to Australia.

Cahill complements Hayes as if they were one, says Kathryn Mangut, director of performing arts for the Sun Valley Center for the Arts.

"Together they perform with mesmerizing precision coupled with gorgeous, expansive stylings," he added.

Indeed, Hayes and Cahill liken it to a three-way conversation between the two of them and the music.

Hayes and Cahill have taken traditional Irish music beyond the pub, releasing two albums of lilted instrumental music: "Live in Seattle" and "The Lonesome Touch."

The latter features songs like "Paddy Fyeh's Reel and "The Kerlfanken jig," "The Lament for Limerick" and "The Bucks of Gramore."

"They have recorded a new album, but it's not out yet.

"You could say it's different from everything we've done and the same as everything we've done," said Hayes. "It's a mixture of light and dark. It features some different instrumentation — Dennis on his mandolin, me on violin."

Hayes and Cahill frequently play old material that has never been heard in modern times. Some of the older manuscripts come from a library of music that Hayes collected as a child. Others come from friends in the music business who keep on the lookout for "lost" manuscripts.

The two musicians also like to improve on standard melodies, touching them up with a little jazz and other stylings.

But, while Hayes likes to experiment with a rock, fusion and other musical styles, he's always drawn back to traditional Celtic music.

"For me playing the other musical styles is like trying to talk in another language," he said. "I like trying to hop over to France once in awhile. But the reality is I would never express myself in French as well as I do in English."

Time for Three boasts wide repertoire

Times-News

BURLEY — Some bluegrass, a little Hungarian gypsy music, a smattering of jazz, a bit of country-western fiddling and a touch of classical and improvisatory music.

That's Time for Three, a Philadelphia-based string trio that's Mini-Cassia Community Concerts' second act of the season. Double bassist Itzhak Meyer and violinists Zachary De Pue and Nicholas Kendall will perform Thursday night at the King Fine Arts Center.

Founded in 2001 by three Curtis Institute of Music students intent on exploring repertoire that stretches far beyond the limits of convention, Time for Three burst onto the scene in July 2003 following a lightning-induced power failure at Philadelphia's Mann Center for the Performing Arts.

Prompted by fellow orchestra members to entertain the audience while technicians attempted to restore onstage lighting, Meyer and De Pue obliged with an impromptu jam session that included works as far afield from the originally scheduled symphony as "Jerusalem's Ridge," "Ragtime Annie" and "The Orange Blossom Special."

The group has performed more than 200 engagements in venues as diverse as its music, appearing as featured guest soloists with the Philadelphia Orchestra and opening for Ed Lang at Philadelphia's Kimmel Center.

Time for Three sets itself apart with the approach in which it presents its music: "blurring" genres," writes David Patrick Stearns of The Philadelphia Inquirer, ultimately "creating different dialects," according to Meyer. Its performances are free of conventional performance practice and instead draw from each member's different musical background. The threesome also performs its own arrangements of traditional repertoire and Meyer provides his own compositions to further complement the threesome's musical offerings.

In 2005, Time for Three made its Philadelphia Orchestra debut. During the 2004-2005 season, the trio played with the Philadelphia Pops under conductor Peter Nero. The ensemble has also been heard in such venues as the Isabella Stewart Gardner Museum in Boston, the 92nd Street Y in New York and at the Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C.

In the recording studio, Time for Three has made two discs. The trio's eponymous debut album was released in 2002. A second CD is scheduled for release this winter.

Beyond their work with the trio, the musicians of Time for Three have solo careers.

Kendall grew up in Washington, D.C., and debuted with the National Symphony Orchestra and the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra as the winner of their Young Artists competitions. In demand as soloist, he performed in Chicago, San Francisco, Cleveland, New York and Tokyo. Kendall is also a member of the DwyerString Quartet and a co-founder of the East Coast Chamber Orchestra.

A native of Bowling Green, Ohio, De Pue made his solo debut with the Toledo Symphony Orchestra in 1994. Born into a musical family with fiddling brothers, De Pue attended the Cleveland Institute of Music before entering the Curtis Institute of Music.

Recent highlights include performances at the Isaac Stern Music Workshop, the Angel Fire, La Jolla and Sarasota music festivals, and at the Chautauqua Institution and Interlochen Arts Academy. He's a tenured violinist with the Philadelphia Orchestra.

Meyer hails from Turnersville, N.J., and began studying the double bass at age 11, eventually entering the Curtis Institute of Music in 1999. Beyond his regular appearances with orchestras such as the Minnesota Symphony and the Philadelphia Orchestra, Meyer is also in demand as a composer, creating new works for Time for Three as well as for solo bass and string orchestra.

An accomplished jazz musician, Meyer was recently invited to tour with jazz guitarist Pat Martino. A co-founding member of the East Coast Chamber Orchestra, Meyer is also double bass professor at the University of Delaware.

The Festival of Lights Parade has been a holiday fixture of downtown Twin Falls since 1993.

Love a parade? Come downtown Friday night

Times-News

TWIN FALLS—Clear skies and cold temperatures are forecast Friday night when the 14th annual Twin Falls Festival of Lights Parade rolls up Main Avenue.

About two dozen entries are lined up for the procession, which starts at 6 p.m. near Krenge's True Value Hardware and travels northwest to the parking lot of Magic Valley High School.

The event typically attracts several thousand people to the downtown area on the first Friday night in December. Most downtown retailers plan to remain open for business during and after the parade.

The Festival of Lights Parade was the brainchild of former downtown businesswoman Maria Larson and then-Business Improvement District director Jeanne Wilson, who patterned it after a similar holiday parade in Pocatello, which was run by Larson's sister-in-law.

In conjunction with the parade, the Magic Valley Arts Council will host its annual Holiday Gallery Opening and Artist's Reception from 7 to 9 p.m. at the Full Moon Gallery and arts council offices.

Featured in the Full Moon Gallery will be new work by the gallery members. Janet Birrer has donated a painting, "Mountain Lake," to be raffled at the opening.

Raffle tickets can be purchased for $1 each or 12 tickets for $10, and guests who bring a can of nonperishable food to the gallery opening may exchange it for a raffle ticket.

All collected, canned goods will be donated to the South Central Community Action Partnership's food pantry. Money raised from the raffle will be used by the gallery for classes for area artists.

Also featured during the opening event will be Lorraine Gibson, performing holiday music on the organ.

Exhibited in the arts council's Galeria Pequena is abstract work by Twin Falls artist Ben Browne. Browne's work will be on display through the end of January.

Featured in the arts council office reception area is the artwork created at the Rock Creek Park Plain Air Painting event on Oct. 8. Featured artists include John Pitts, Al Cantu, Barbara Jensen Koch, Thml Aufderheide and Linda Aufderheide. The Rock Creek Plain Air Exhibit will be on display through the end of December.

All exhibits and the opening event are free and open to the public.

The arts council office is located at 132 Main Ave. S.

In 2004, Wong — a music professor at CSI — directed the school's Chamber Choir and the Magic Valley Chamber Orchestra, along with the Jerome All-Faith Choir, in another "Messiah." It was a production on a grand stage, with 125 voices.

For Sunday's performance, he's got 40.

"There's less room for error doing 'Messiah' with a smaller group," Wong said. "Each individual voice is important."

Wong has recruited a couple of veterans, bass Rob Newman and alto Camille Cox, to sing two of the solo parts, but the

"There's less room for error doing 'Messiah' with a smaller group. Each individual voice is important."

— Carson Wong, director

other soloists — most of them CSI students — are relative newcomers: Leigh Howard, Katie Hopkins, Jonni-Leigh Jones, Courtney Lafus, Lucel Jones, Janel Stewart, Chris Hess and Gene Conley.

Newman and Cox have sung "Messiah" before, which is a godsend for a young choir.

"We're rely rely a lot on their experience and their knowledge," Wong said.

Although "Messiah" was conceived and first performed for Easter, it has become tradition since Handel's time to sing the oratorio during Advent. Christmas concerts usually feature only the first section, plus the "Hallelujah" chorus.

Much of the libretto comes from the Old Testament, drawing heavily on the book of Isaiah. There are a few quotations from the Gospels, a quote from Job ("I know that my Redeemer liveth"), and the rest mostly from 1 Corinthians.

"The libretto was written by Charles Jennens, who conceived of the work as a three-act opera."

In the summer of 1741, Handel — a German living in England — began setting Jennens' words to music at his usual breakneck speed. In just 24 days, "Messiah" was complete.

The premiere took place in Dublin on April 13, 1742. Handel led the performance from the harpsichord, and Matthew Dubourg — an Irish violinist, conductor and composer — conducted the orchestra.

In many parts of the world, it is the accepted practice for the audience to stand during the "Hallelujah" chorus. Tradition has it that on first hearing the chorus, King George II was so moved that he rose to his feet. However, some historians doubt the king was present.
