HAILEY — My plan was to spend a full day — 24 hours — as an immate in the Blaine County lail.

I didn't make it.
With 21 hours down, I left my cell for a quick visitation with a coworker, and after getting out from behind the hars and hearing a familiar voice. I couldn't stand the thought of another three hours.

The problem wasn't my cell mates — who were nicer than I ever would have expected — or the quality of the food. It was the boredom.

I was fortunate. When I had had rough, all had to do was tell the jail staff I was ready to leave, gather up my jail-issue bedding and toderites, and I was back on the outside.

Law enforcement officials say the Blaine County Jail in the door was the magit as an irmate — provided I signed a release, clearing them of any lability in case something happened to me.

I arrived a the Blaine County Jail in-Italiey at 2 pm on Jan. It? They buzzed me through the first door and began treating me as any other inmate.

"Spread your legs out more — back up more by you have anything on your search?" the guad ealed.

After the brisking, he wiped his hands with santuare.

I was moved into the next hallway.

ahead and facing left. No, I don't have any tattoos, scars or distinguishing physical features to photograph.

The guard tells me to tell my cell mates that I'm in jail for a one-day sentence for driving under the inflations. I'm not to tell them I'm a reporter as they might hold me for ransom. That is sobering thought.

The rarting of keys is followed by a dull buzzing sound, and the door to my cell sildes open. Inside are five young men, all of whom are staring at me. Looking around I can see that the five steel bunks bolted the floor are already made up. I soon learn a guard walks by every 15 minutes, 24 hours a day, 365 days a year. You hear the keys jingling about 10 seconds before you see him or her. They usually stop to share a few words with the turnates, focusing on what's on TV, the card game in progress or the weather. I drop my rolled up mattress in a small space under the pay phone, sit on it and open my paperback. I'm not able to concentrate on the book. I'm just looking around.

centrate on the book, I'm just looking around.

My cell has two small morms, separated by a narrow hallowy with a small shower stall. One room has two beds and small table, the other has three beds, a table and a television — paid for by the inmaies. The rooms are small and smell of cleaning chemicals and body odor. The floor is green. The walls are white The relevision is on it doesn't go off until midnight when the guarts poil the plug.

I realize that five inmates socialize, watch TV, ear, sheep and shower within a few hindred square feet.

The next guard who comes by says the jails 24 beds are full and I'm left to deep on the floor. The beds are seet, the floors are concrete. It really makes no difference from a comfort standpoint.

A cell mate looks at me and asks me why: I'm in jail. When I say DUI, be points to himself and another cell mate and says, 'trafficking.'

states struggle with short-ages.

The Associated Press reported that a blood supply shortage in Ulah has caused several transplant surgeries at local hospitals to be put on hold. A nationwide shortage of O positive and O negative blood is partially to blame. But officials say Idaho donors are helping the state maintain adequate blood supplies.

There isn't a shortage here (in Idaho), but we climb that mountain every day to meet the need for blood," said Debi Mahler, a recruitment representative for the Idaho

Mahler said Idaho is not experiencing a blood shortage such as those in Utah and Oregon, but she said the state always struggles this time of year to maintain adequate supplies.

She said blood donations decline during winter

she said blood donators decline during winter because of the cold and flu season, as well as the onslaught of hazardous drivdecline orasing as well as the onslaught of hazardous driving conditions. The Red Cross in Portland, Ore., Is still trying to increase blood supplies after a winter storm last week prevented many donors from communing to donation centers. Transplant and trauma patients also are sapping supplies while the cold weather is keeping blood donors at home, ARUP Blood Services spokesman Lance Bandley said. ARUP is the sole provider of blood for several hospitals in Utah.

The current immunization boom could rival or even surpass the golden age of vaccine development between the late 1940s and early 1960s, experts asy, when scientists including Jonas Salk discovered inocula-

School district official recommends organizing planning committees as soon as possible for new high school

By Joshua Palmer Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - The clock

TWIN IALLS — The clock is ticking.

Dale Thornsberry, Twin Falls School Districts plant facilities director, is recommending that the school district organize a planning committee as soon as possible to help prepare for the new high school.

In a statement to Wiley Dolbs, superintendent of the Twin Falls School District, and the board of trustees. Thornsberry recommended that a committee be established by February.

"The committees would be advisory and provide written or oral reports to the Board of Thustees on a regu-lar or as-needed basis," he wrote in the statement. Included with the state-ment was a draft of 15 Issues that need to be addressed before the district can transi-tion into Canyon Ridge High School, which is expected to be completed by summer 2009.

JEROMI. — The City of Jerome is higher after a cou-ple of parcels of land near the interstate were annexed. The City Council annexed land bordering both sides of Interstate 84 near the free-way entrance on South Lincoln. The land was annexed last month at the request of the property own-ers.

Most people request annexation for the night to connect to city sewer and water. Said Travis Bothweiler, Ferome city administrator. Education budget includes increased funding for 'border contracts'

By Joshua Palmer Times-News writer

BOISE — The cost of transporting students is blurring state boundaries. When Tom Lupa, state superintendent of public instruction, presented his 2008 education budget for $1.38 billion to lawmakers on Tuesday, it included a 25 percent increase in funding to send Idaho students to schools in other states.

her states. Although less than 10 years ago it would seem strange to pay schools in Montana, Washington and Oregon to accept students from Idaho, the rising cost of fuel is making it a more cost-effective-method of educating students who live on the Idaho border.

"It's something that has been done in the past," said Melissa McGrath, public information officer for the Idaho State Department of Education. "If students live closer to schools in other states, and it's approved by docall' school boards, then the state will pay schools in other states to take in Idaho students."

The 25 percent increase in border contracts is more than the 4.2 percent increase for in-state student transportation costs. However, the actual cost increase is significantly less than what it would cost the state to transport some stustate to transport some students to in-state schools.

Idaho has struggled to rein in school transportation costs as the cost of fuel continues of rise. Last year the state spent more than $64.3 million on student transportation—
Luna requested an additional $2.7 million in his budget for 2008.

In 2003, Idaho lawmakers passed House Bill 463, which requires school districts to remain within a yearly truns-portation budget or face state-penalties. Last year, 22 school districts, including the View Falls School District, appealed the penalties after spending more than the state had bud-eated more than the state had budgeted.

The 25 percent increase in border contracts — an additional $200,000 to the existing $800,000 — will pay for an increase in the number of students attending schools in other states.

Officials did not say if that interpretain the continuer or its antended continuer or number would continue to rise as the cost of fuel increases.

Still, the nation's capital had the aroma of treachery, as former allies brutally turned on one another. Despite Ws attempt to salvage his presidency on Tuesday night by changing the subject and going all domestic-sensitive, Washington was more consumed with betrayal than substance.

At a critical hearing on Thesday, genators happily blew a chance to grill Lt. Gen. David Petraeus, W.s. choice to try to rescue Iraq, on whether those 21,500 additional troops will be cavalry to the rescue or lambs to the slaughter. Why dwell on the most consequential elements of U.S. strategy when they can linger over something even more repercussive: their own political reputations? Hillary Clinton, who dodged a recent important Iraq hearing by flying to Iraq, did not have any questions at all for the general. She simply

If the Senate sends the additional troops but conveys the belief they cannot succeed, McCain asked, what effect does that have on the morale of your troops?"

"It would not be a beneficial effect," the general replied. Lieberman also asked whether a Senate resolution expressing disapproval of The Surge would give the enemy in Iraq "encouragement" that he American people "were divided."

The general agreed: "That's

The general agreed: "That's the legislative branch might throw in W3 way. "Honorable people have different views, and they will voice their criticisms," chided John Warner, who presented a bipartisan resolution on Monday declaring that the Senate "disagrees with the plan't to augment our forces. He told Petraeus that as President Nixon's secretary of the Navy, he had sat where the general was, justifying another impossible war. COEUR D'ALENE —

Additional legislation to reduce property taxes in idaho is unlikely this year, two northern Idaho state lawmakers said, because budget requests have already eaten up most of the state's projected $200 million surplus.

Seven straight for Woods

By Dong Ferguson Associated Press writer

SAN DIEGO — Tiger Woods resumed his improbable purvait of Byron Nelson with a result that was all too predictable. Woods caught up to the pack with an eagle, bursed the hopes of his final challenger with a bindle and closed with a 6-under 66 on Sunday to win the Buck Invitational for his seven consecutive PtaC four victory, the second-longest streak in history.

Nelson set the record in 1945 with 11 in a row, a record long thought to be out of reach.

The way Woods is playing — no worse than second in stroke play anywhere in the world since July — that might no longer be the case.

Woods won six in a row in 2000, a streak that Pla Mickelson stopped at Torrey Pines. But against a cast of challengers short on experience and victories, the world's No. I player met little resistance in winning the Buick Institutional for the third straight year. Woods doesn't consider this a true winning streak because he lost once in Lurope and twice in Asia since September. But it still counts in the PCA Tour record books, and the only question is when it will resume. Woods was headed for the Dubai Devert Classic on Sunday night, and he was not sure if would play his next PCA Tour event at the Nisan Open on Feb. 15 in Los Angeles or the Accenture Match Play Championship in Arizona a week later. "To somehow sneak out with the win is a cool feeling." Woods said. He got some help from Andrew Buckle and leff Quinney, both of whom had at least a share of the lead on the back nine until stumbling in a span of about 15 minutes on a cool.

Anaretti won that NASA.An race in 1987.
Gainassi was asked if the win in the Rolex 24 bodes well for Montoya's move back to the U.S. after several successful but unfuffilling years in F1?
"It's a good start, I'll tell you that." said Ganassi, for whom Montoya won the CART title in 1999 and Indy in 2000.
Montoya gave his team the lead Sunday morning and Pruett kept it to the finish. This is the second straight year that Ganassi's team has won the grueling 24-hour event. Former IRL champions Dan Wheldon and Scott Dixon combined with NASCAR driver Casey Mears to win the 2006 race.

This was just a total team win," said Ganassi, the first team owner to win this race back-to-back since Al Holte in 1986 and 1987. "Al was somebody! wanted to be like when I was growing up and I'm going to think about this for a long time." for a long time.

Steps to Take When a Loved One Dies

fler a loved one dies, you'll have to cope with grief. And yet, if you have even partial responsibility for settling an estate, you have no choice but to focus on some financial, matters by handling these issues as efficiently as possible, you can help case some tright that meaning in your family facility. of the strain that everyone in your family is feeling deally, of course, you should learn as much as you can about your loved one's financial affairs while he or she is still alive. This may not be a comfortable conversation to have, but it's necessary if you have a good relationship, you should be able to ask sensitive questions, such as 10-you have a still? What about a living trust? Do you have a safe depositbox? What are the names of your brokerage and bank? The more you know about your loved one's situation, the better off you will be when it's time to deal with the estate.

When that day arrives, what steps should you take? Here are a few to keep in mind

- Find the will. Obvoorsh, it's a lot easier to locate a will if you learned its location while your loved one was still alive. When you do find the will, you may want to contact an attorney who is experienced in settling estates. Even a well drafted will might offer options that an attorney can help you understand. Althoughly our might want to work with the attorney who drafted the will, you are certainly not required to do so. If you do not have an attorney, ask friends or your financial professional for a referral. If you are the executor, you'll have to start the process of carrying out the will a instructions. If you aren't the executor, contact the person who has been named to this position.
- Inquire about probate. Contact your anomey or the state's probate court clerk to deter mine if probate is necessary. If it is, the executor or executriza should initiate price eedings right away, because probate can be time consuming.
- List assets. Ity to find the paperwork for the deceased's financial assets—bank accounts, securities, real estate, insurance policies, retirement plans, etc. Take special note of who is the beneficiary of these assets, the naming of a beneficiary can even supersede. instructions on a will - Notify relevant agencies. Notify creditors, banks, the Social Security Administration and other entities about the death of your loved one.
- File life insurance claims. An insurer doesn't automatically pay benefits upon the death of the insured. Contact the deceased's insurance company and file any required insur ance claims
- Open a check ant for the estate. It may seem like a strange job to do, but if you are the personal representative or executor, you might want to open a checking account in the estate's name. Use this account to pay am bills or deposit funds received while
- File tax forms. You may have to file state and federal estate and income tax returns. Your attorney and tax advisor can help you in this matter.

Settling the estate of a loved one will never be a happy task. But if done right, it can show respect for the memory of the deceased — and that s a worthy goal for which to strive

(a) True or forbir - If you have responsibility for setting someones estate, you should try to find out if they have a will, and where it is before they die. (2) True or Fahe- An immance company will automatically pay a life insurance benefit when someone dies.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

"Things without all remedy Should be without regard: what's done is done." — William Shakespeare

The attraction of a finesse is that it provides instant grafification. When we was and you make contract, you was and you make contract, you was and you make contract. But how much more done well. But how much more pleasurable to resist taking a losing finesse and, instead, to overcome anything that the Fates might have had in store for you. On today's deal from a team game, at both tables South played four hearts on the lead of the chub nine. Both declarers won in hand and, rather than playing for spade ruffs in hand, cashed the ace and king of hearts. But one declarer then took the diamond finesse and went down. The other declarer realized that if the diamond finesse was right, he had no need to take it. He cashed the ace and king of diamonds, exited with a third hert, then sat back and waited between the contraction of the contraction my s diamond losers on his two club winners.

The point of the deal is that if West has the diamond queen ready to eash, then declarer will still make the hand — he can pitch a spade loser on the diamond Jack. And if West started life with three small diamonds, South was never going to make the hand at that point in the deal, whatever he did.

ANSWER: Although a diamond lead could easily be right, my instincts are to lead a spade. Do clarer is quite likely to have a singleton. If so, a low spade rather than the jack may be the best way to set up spade tricks for your side. That way if dummy puts up an honor, you preserve all the useful intermediates in the suit for later on.

TWIN FALLS — It was a 1989 episode of the television surcom "Cheers" that got Chris Baldus inter-ested in beards.
"I was in college, and in one episode the guys had a beard-grow-ing contest," he said. "So my frends and I did too."

ing contest, 'he said. 'So my finends and I did too.'

His own result, Baldus recalls, wa less than spectacular — but a life-long habit was born. Now the news editor of the Imma-News, he has mostly worn a beard ever since. 'I come by it honestly. 'he said.' My uncle and my father-in-law both have beards.'

Baldus, who's 37, has been tinker-ing with his beard for years, by turns shawing it off and watching it grow back in various shapes and lengths. But he wondered what some styling might do. So we asked stylist Shanan Wall to work her magic.

Twe seen a tot of beards," said Wall, who works at Studio One Hair in Iwin I alls. "Some guys still want to have them trimmed. If they grow a beard for hunting season, for example, they like to have it trimmed up.

Baldus showed up at Studio One Hair on a recent aftermoon with a full beard, which he'd been working on for a month. Wall expertly shaped of the mean of the work of the state of th

But Ilmes-Neus readers can influence Baldus choice of facial hair by voting in our online poll, starting today, (Be advised as you consider your recommendation; Wall accented the pencil mustache with a makeup pencil.)
Baldus wife, Dawn, likes to see him in a beard. But his four young children couldn't care less.
"It's just Daddy," he said.
"Whisker on on whiskers."
There's an art to beard-trimming, wall says, and attention to details is important.
"But when guys ask me to trim their nose hair, I pretend that I didn't hear them."

Too soon for a prescription — the findings were based on a randomized, double-blind, placebo-controlled trial mooking more than 22,000 healthy made physicians. Over mearly five veras, asthma was diagnosed in 113 men in the aspirm group, compared with diagnosed in 113 men in the aspiring group, compared with 115 in the placebo group. The findings: appear consistent with those from an earlier study showing that women who frequently took aspirin had lower rates of new asthma.
