Buhl man shot by Boise police

The Associated Press

BOISE — A man who was shot and killed by police outside a grocery store has been identified as Theodore A. Hansen Jr., 31, of Buhl. Hansen was killed Monday after police said he drew a knife during an altercation with an officer. Ada County Coroner Erwin Sonnenberg said in a news release Wednesday that Hansen had no fixed address, but that family had been notified of his death. The shooting happened after employees at a Fred Meyer store called police to report Hansen was trying to pass a bad check. An officer confronted Hansen when he left the store as it was closing, police said. A second officer arrived while the two scuffled. He said he saw Hansen pull free and draw a knife from his waistband, police said. Hansen allegedly lunged at the first officer with the knife and both policemen opened fire, hitting him in the chest and the arm. In the past, Hansen had several encounters with the Twin Falls Police Department, including possession of methamphetamine, driving without privileges and resisting arrest, according to a press release issued Wednesday. Hansen died at Saint Alphonsus Regional Medical Center in Boise. In cooperation with the Boise Police Department, detectives from the Twin Falls Police Department are looking for two people — James D. Anderson, 46, and Aya M. Star, 41 — who may have information about the shooting and a series of forgery cases in the Boise area. Police say neither individual is a suspect at this time. Anderson, believed to be from the Twin Falls area, was last seen driving a '99 Ford Econoline van with Twin Falls license plates. Star was seen driving a white '87 Mercury Topaz with Twin Falls plates. Anyone with information should call the Twin Falls Police Department at 735-4357.

Power players

Magic Valley residents dominate aquifer advisory committee

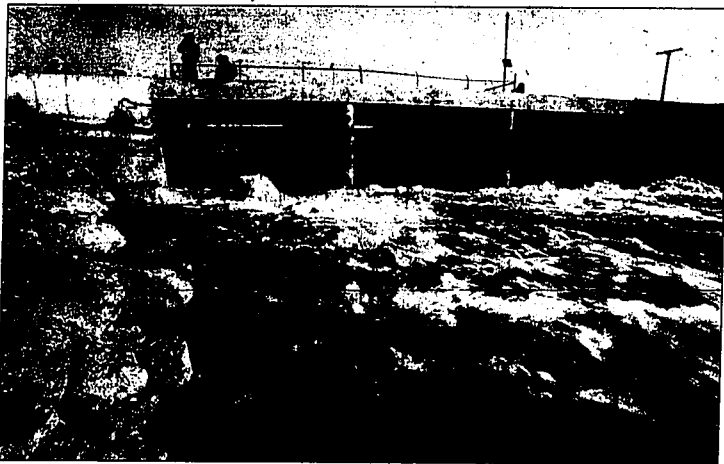

By Matt Christensen
Times-News writer

BOISE — About half the positions on an aquifer management committee will be held by Magic Valley residents, according to the Idaho Department of Water Resources. The IDWR board has finalized a list of advisers for its recently drafted aquifer management plan, and eight of the 16 positions will be filled by Magic Valley residents. Many of the same people also will be chief negotiators for Gov. Butch Otter's upcoming water summit in Burley, say officials at IDWR and the consulting firm that helped draft the list. The committee members will hold powerful positions — they're responsible for advising the water board and shaping Eastern Snake Plain Aquifer management policy. And committee members who attend the governor's water summit, scheduled for April 17 in Burley, could facilitate a landmark water deal. "All the members have been identified," said Hal Anderson, a senior administrator with the water board. Please see WATER, Page A3

Making the list

SEASON START

Water flows along the High Line Canal after the Twin Falls Canal Co. began feeding water Wednesday through its system that runs to nearly 5,000 irrigators in the area.

Canal company opens waterways; less water for irrigators this year

By Matt Christensen
Times-News writer

HANSEN — With the press of a button Wednesday morning, water whirled under enormous gates, dry canal beds became wet and Magic Valley's irrigation season officially began.

The Twin Falls Canal Co. opened its main waterway system to nearly 5,000 irrigators by lifting the gates at the Forks south of Hansen, where the company's two main canals diverge from the Main Line that stems from the Murtaugh Dam.

About a dozen canal company dignitaries watched as Jon Crane, the company's diversion dam operator at the Forks, pressed a black button to open the gates. Within seconds, thousands of gallons of water rushed over the dry and rocky bottom of the High Line Canal, one of two main arterials.

See more pictures of the Twin Falls Canal Co. opening day at magicvalley.com

TFCC director Vince Alberdi said the company has hosted the small spring ceremony for about a decade — ever since a former Times-News reporter suggested the company commemorate the beginning of the irrigation season like farmers celebrate the fall harvest.

"We had celebrations at harvest, but we never had anything to kick off the spring irrigation season," Alberdi said. "This symbolizes the bounty of the land, the cornucopia."

"But I don't know if we're going to have much of a cornucopia this year," he said. The water outlook for this season is bleak. Mountain snowpacks that supply irrigation water are less than 75 percent of average in many cases, and the region is receiving less precipitation than farmers need.

As a result, the canal company will provide less water to their irrigators this season: 5/6 of an inch instead of the 3/4 of an inch offered last year.

Alberdi has said the company could scale back to just a half-inch later this summer.

Nevertheless, it was smiles only across the faces of the farmers and company board members at the Forks: It's another year, another water season and, hopefully, a bountiful one.

Iran to free British sailors and marines

By Nasser Karim
Associated Press writer

TEHRAN, Iran — President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad defused a growing confrontation with Britain, announcing the surprise release of 15 captive British sailors Wednesday and then gleefully accepting the crew's thanks and handshakes in what he called an Easter gift.

British Prime Minister Tony Blair expressed "profound relief" over the peaceful end to the 13-day crisis. "Throughout we have taken a measured approach — firm but calm, not negotiating, but not confronting either," Blair said in London, adding a message to the Iranian people that "we bear you no ill will." The announcement in Tehran was a breakthrough in a crisis that had escalated over nearly two weeks, raising oil prices and fears of military conflict in the volatile region.

Burley youth praised for honesty

By Russ Wale
For the Times-News

BURLEY — It must have been overwhelming for 8-year-old Dawson Davis to stand before a room of uniformed police Monday and receive a special award for honesty.

The Burley youngster was in a local park playing with his brothers and sisters on Feb. 17 when he romped through a pile of leaves and kicked up some money — a considerable amount, said Cassia County Sheriff Jim Hignens. Dawson, the son of Drew Davis, of Burley, and Lila Davis, of Rupert, picked the cash up and took it to his mother, who turned it over to the sheriff's department. Idaho Code requires that any money turned in and not claimed be turned over to the state, Hignens said.

"We couldn't just give the money back to him, which I would have liked to (have done) to reward him for his honesty," he said. "So we decided to honor him in front of the entire staff and let him know what his honesty means to us."

Hignens told his officers in a department meeting Monday that the youngster displayed tremendous honesty in turning the money over to the authorities. When asked why he did so, Dawson quietly said, "Because it was the right thing to do."

Hignens presented Dawson with a certificate of honor commending his integrity and a Cassia County Sheriff's hat, shirt, letter opener and pen.

Sheriff Jim Hignens recognized 8-year-old Dawson Davis for his honesty in turning in a large sum of cash he found in February at a local park.

Police say homicides in Boise, Moscow are linked to same man

By Todd Dvorak
Associated Press writer

BOISE — The slayings of a University of Idaho student last weekend in Moscow and a Boise man whose body was found in a pond here Tuesday have been linked to the same man, police in both cities say.

Authorities say they are focusing their investigation on John Joseph Delling, who grew up in the same Boise neighborhood and attended the same high school as the victims.

Delling, 21, was arrested Tuesday by police in Sparks, Nev., on a stolen car warrant issued by Ada County and a first-degree murder warrant issued by Moscow police in the death of UI senior David Boss. The body of the 21-year-old history major was found early Saturday in the kitchen of his off-campus apartment.

Police have also identified Delling as the lead suspect in the death of Bradley Morse, 25, whose body was found Tuesday morning in a Boise city park pond near the Idaho Shakespeare Festival grounds.

Both victims died of two gunshot wounds to the head, authorities say, but no wound has been identified.

"We believe these two homicides are connected," Moscow Police Chief Dan Weaver told a news conference Wednesday. "We are confident John Delling committed the homicide of David Boss, although we currently do not have an identified motive."

Ada County Sheriff Gary Raney said people interviewed by detectives reported seeing Delling at the park Monday night — the same night Morse, a Boise State University student, was working a shift as a part-time custodian in a park building. When Delling was apprehended in Nevada, he was driving a car registered to Morse, Raney said.

"It obviously is a suspect," Raney said.

But for now, the similarities end there.

Authorities declined to speculate on motive or describe any recent relationship between Delling and the victims.

Investigators believe Morse was killed as Delling, 21, whose last known address was Antelope, Calif., made his way south from Moscow in northcentral Idaho. Delling also attended UI, but left school in 2005.

"There are some associations that you make, logical links to up there (Moscow)," Raney said. "There seems like there is something out there that we're trying to figure out what that is."

Delling was tracked down by detectives using cellular phone records. A telephone registered to Delling was used to make a call to Boss at 12:12 a.m. Saturday, about the time Boss was slain, Moscow Assistant Police Chief David Duke said. Police then worked with the telephone company Sprint to trace Delling to Sparks, in northwest Nevada.

Delling was being held in the Washoe County Jail, Raney said. It was not immediately known if he was represented by a lawyer.

Morse's body was found Tuesday by a parks and recreation employee, who followed a blood trail that originated from a nearby sidewalk. Evidence suggests Morse was killed after he closed down the park building at 9:30 p.m. Monday and his body was dragged to the pond, Raney said.

Morse was a senior computer science major who made the BSU Dean's List for his grades three times. BSU President Bob Kustra said, adding, "Bradley was an excellent student. We are shocked at this senseless act."

Investigators also are trying to piece together Delling's activities in Boise before and after Morse's slaying. Based on evidence, Raney speculated that Delling returned a rental car to the Boise airport after the shooting, then somehow returned to the park and left in Morse's vehicle.

Delling has a criminal record that includes a 2006 misdemeanor conviction for stalking in Boise and a 2005 conviction for misdemeanor battery.

Water

Anderson said the water board met Monday to finalize the positions.

Committee members represent municipalities, businesses, land developers, surface water users, groundwater users, spring users, hydropower interests, domestic well owners, conservationists and county assessors.

Sixteen alternates also were chosen in case a primary committee member cannot perform his duties.

The board's list was obtained by the Times-News early Wednesday, before IDWR publicly named members of the committee. IDWR is expected to make an official announcement, today or Friday.

Several people on the list were surprised to learn they had been selected, including Randy MacMillan, a vice president at Clear Springs Foods.

"No, nobody's contacted me yet," he said Wednesday afternoon. "But I'm flattered."

The list was largely compiled by CDR Associates, a Boulder, Colo.-based consulting firm that facilitated the aquifer management plan for the water board.

Committee members were nominated by stakeholders that participated in the aquifer plan framework process, said Jonathan Bartsch, a facilitator at CDR. Stakeholders worked with CDR to draft the aquifer plan beginning last fall, and the plan was submitted to the Legislature earlier this year.

But not every advisory committee member will be invited to the water summit, said Mark Wadish, a spokesman for Otter.

"There will be a nexus between that group and the group chosen by the governor," he said. "But it won't be identical, by any means. There will be some convergence, but it won't be identical."

Warbis said Otter is still finalizing his list for the water summit and could announce it in the next week.

Iran

The move to release the sailors suggested that Iran's hard-line leadership decided it had shown its strength but did not want to push the standoff too far.

Iran did not get the main thing it sought — a public apology for entering Iranian waters, Britain, which said its crew was in Iraqi waters when seized, insists it never offered a quid pro quo either, instead relying on quiet diplomacy.

Syria, Iran's close ally, said it played a role in winning the release. "Syria exercised a sort of quiet diplomacy to solve this problem and encourage dialogue between the two parties," Syrian Foreign Minister Walid al-Moallem said in Damascus.

The announcement of the release came hours after U.S. House Speaker Nancy Pelosi met with President Bashar Assad in Damascus, trying to show that a U.S. dialogue with Syria — rejected by the Bush administration — could bring benefits for the Middle East. The British sailors were not part of their talks, and it was not clear if the release was timed to coincide with the visit.

Iran's official news agency said the British crew was to leave Iran by plane on Thursday at 8 a.m. By Wednesday evening they had still not been handed over to the British Embassy in Tehran and the embassy said it was not clear where they would spend the night. Britain's ambassador met with the sailors and confirmed they were in good health, Britain's Foreign Office said.

Several British newspapers credited Blair's foreign policy adviser Nigel Stansfeld and Iranian chief negotiator Ali Faye Turley, 26, left, the only woman among the British navy personnel seized by Iran, meets with Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad, second right, in Tehran, Iran, Wednesday.

Larjani with laying the groundwork for an agreement during telephone contacts that began Tuesday night. Larjani had gone on British TV on Monday and signaled that Tehran was looking for a diplomatic solution.

British officials were told to pay close attention to Ahmadinejad's press conference but were unsure the release would come until they heard his words. The independent newspaper said, Ahmadinejad timed the announcement so as to make a dramatic splash, springing it halfway through a two-hour news conference.

The president first gave a medal of honor to the commander of the Iranian coast guards who captured the Britons and admonished London for sending a mother Leading Seaman Faye Turley, on such a dangerous mission in the Persian Gulf.

He said the British government was "not brave enough" to admit the crew had been in Iranian waters when it was captured.

Without immigration, big metros would shrink

By Stephen Olszewski
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Without immigrants pouring into the nation's big metro areas, places such as New York, Los Angeles and Boston would be shrinking as native-born Americans move farther out.

Many smaller areas, including Battle Creek, Mich., Ames, Iowa, and Corvallis, Ore., would shrink as well, according to population estimates released Thursday by the Census Bureau.

"Immigrants are filling the void as domestic migrants are seeking opportunities in other places," said Mark Mauber, a demographer at the Population Reference Bureau, a private research organization.

Immigrants long have flocked to major metropolitan areas and helped them grow. But increasingly, native-born Americans are moving from those areas and leaving immigrants to provide the only source of growth.

The New York metro area, which includes the suburbs, added 1 million immigrants from 2000 to 2006. Without those immigrants, the region would have lost nearly 600,000 people.

Without immigration, the Los Angeles metro area would have lost more than 200,000, the San Francisco area would have lost 188,000 and the Boston area would have lost 101,000.

The Census Bureau estimates annual population totals as of July 1, using local records of births and deaths. Internal Revenue Service records of people moving within the United States and census statistics on immigrants. The estimates released Thursday were for metropolitan areas, which generally include cities and their surrounding suburbs.

Among the findings:

- Atlanta added more people than any other metro area from 2000 to 2006. The Atlanta area, which includes Sandy Springs and Marietta, Ga., added 890,000 people, putting its population at about 5.1 million. Gaining the most after Atlanta were Dallas-Fort Worth, Houston, Phoenix and Riverside, Calif.

- On a percentage basis, St. George in southwest Utah was the fastest growing metro area from 2000 to 2006. St. George's population jumped by 40 percent, to 126,000. The next highest percentage increases were in Greeley, Colo., Cape Coral, Fla., Bend, Ore., and Las Vegas.

Parents of 'American Taliban' renew request for release

By Richard A. Serrano
Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — The parents of "American Taliban" John Walker Lindh, who is serving a 20-year sentence in the country's toughest federal prison, stepped up their request for his release Wednesday by noting that the first U.S. war-crimes tribunal in Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, recently resulted in a sentence of just nine months for an Australian detainee held in U.S. custody since late 2001.

"John has been in prison for more than five years," said his mother, Marilyn Walker. "It's time for him to come home."

This, said his lead attorney, James J. Brosnahan of San Francisco, "is a simple cry for justice."

Lindh left the United States when he was 18 to study Islam. In 2001 he was in Afghanistan, serving as a soldier for the Taliban army fighting the Northern Alliance. Soon after the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks that year, he was taken into custody by U.S. military forces and returned to the United States; the government contended that he had been trained at an al-Qaida terrorist camp.

He was immediately branded "American Taliban" by the tabloids, at a time when many angry Americans wanted revenge for the terrorist attacks. In a plea deal with federal prosecutors in 2002, all terrorism charges were dropped. In the end, Lindh pleaded guilty to being a soldier for the Taliban and carrying a rifle and hand grenades while doing so.

At the time, federal prosecutors said they believed the sentence was appropriate, given that Lindh had faced life in prison with no parole if convicted of conspiring to kill Americans and aiding al-Qaida.

Now 26, he sits inside the Federal Supermax prison in Florence, Colo.

Lindh's family and lawyers believe that with the passage of years, there is an opportunity for a renewed effort to persuade President Bush to reduce the 20-year sentence.

In addition, they said, the ruling last week that Guantanamo Bay detainee David Hicks of Australia will be set free after serving just another nine months has moved them to seek what they term equal justice.

High-tech mammograms don't detect more tumors, study finds

By Rob Stein
The Washington Post

Computer systems designed to make mammograms more accurate turn out to make them less reliable, according to the largest study to evaluate the increasingly popular high-tech versions of the common test for breast cancer.

The study of more than 429,000 mammograms found that "computer-aided detection" systems did not help radiologists find more tumors and significantly increased the number of false alarms.

The researchers and others said the findings, published in Thursday's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine, show that the expensive systems should undergo more scrutiny.

"The goal of these systems was to make mammography better," said Joshua Fenton of the University of California at Davis, who led the study. "Our study suggests that, if anything, they appear to be doing more harm than good."

The study highlighted how new, more expensive technologies can proliferate before enough research has been done to evaluate them, Fenton and others said.

"There's a tendency to say the newest technology has got to be better," said Russell Harris of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. "That's not necessarily the way it works. This appears to be an example of that."

The findings are the latest in a flurry of recent developments that have renewed widespread debates about breast cancer screening. The American College of Physicians this week challenged the long-standing recommendation that all women in their 40s undergo mammograms every year or two, saying that the risks may outweigh the benefits for many. Last week, the American Cancer Society recommended for the first time that women at greatest risk of breast cancer have annual MRI scans, triggering similar arguments over the sensitive but expensive technology.

Together, the developments underscore that breast cancer screening remains imperfect. But several experts stressed that they hope the debate will not dissuade women from having the exams, noting that for the first time, fewer women sought mammograms last year than the year before.

"No screening test is perfect," said Robert Smith, the society's director of screening. "But we should never lose sight of the fact that mammography is an important tool in reducing the toll of the disease."

Breast cancer strikes more than 212,000 U.S. women each year and kills more than 40,000, making it the second-leading type of cancer and No. 2 cancer killer among women. Proponents of aggressive screening argue that routine mammograms, and MRIs for those at high risk, help reduce the death toll by catching tumors at their earlier, most treatable stage.

Critics, however, question whether aggressive screening produces too many false alarms, resulting in unnecessary repeat exams, biopsies and treatment, as well as causing anxiety, pain and, for some, disfigurement.

Computer-aided detection systems use computer programs to analyze X-ray images, flagging suspicious areas for radiologists to scrutinize. The Food and Drug Administration approved the first system in 1998.

Each system costs about $150,000, and Medicare and many insurance companies tend to increase their payments to radiologists who use them by $20 per exam to help recoup the costs. (A standard mammogram typically costs $100 to $150.) Perhaps one-third of mammograms are now interpreted using these systems.

Obama nearly ties Clinton on first-quarter funds

By Glenn Thrush
Newswatch

WASHINGTON — Barack Obama raised an eye-popping $25 million in the first quarter of 2007, nearly tying him with Hillary Rodham Clinton and angling an astronomically expensive Democratic presidential primary.

The rise of Obama's national fundraising base has a microwave-popper quality, with donors appearing to magically materialize over the last 10 weeks. Clinton's $26 million, by contrast, seems to have been popped the old-fashioned way.

"His figures are really impressive... That this has happened so fast is surprising," said Sheila Krumholz, executive director of the Center for Responsive Politics, a Washington-based nonprofit that studies the effect of money on politics.

"It's not surprising that Clinton is able to raise this much, because she's relying on a donor base that her husband's campaign has been building since the 1990s," she added.

In an e-mail to supporters Wednesday, the freshman Illinois senator seemed to toss the gauntlet at Clinton, saying his success sent "an unmistakable message to the political establishment in Washington about the power and seriousness of our challenge."

On Sunday, Clinton's national finance chairman, Terry McAuliffe, predicted Obama would come close to matching her total, which shattered previous records.

Former North Carolina senator John Edwards reported $14 million in receipts, doubling his 2003 first quarter.

"We are thrilled with our historic fundraising success and congratulate Senator Obama and the entire Democratic field," said Clinton campaign manager Paul Solis Doyle in a statement Wednesday.

Clinton and her campaign staff spent much of the day in her Chappaqua, N.Y., mansion, attending a previously scheduled strategy session.

Obama entered the race in early February and wasn't even on many pundits' lists of 2008 contenders last fall.

In a measure of his appeal to national donors — many of them seeking an alternative to Clinton — Obama attracted more than 108,000 contributions for the quarter. That was twice the 50,000 Clinton reported.

One doctor prescribed all 11 drugs for Anna Nicole Smith

By Matt Sodesky
Associated Press writer

MIAMI — One doctor authorized all 11 prescription medications found in Anna Nicole Smith's hotel room the day the Playboy Playmate died of a drug overdose, according to documents released by the medical examiner's office Wednesday.

More than 600 pills — in a total of about 450 muscle relaxants — were missing from prescriptions that were no more than five weeks old, according to information obtained by The Associated Press through a public records request.

It was unclear if Smith took all of them.

Dr. Christine Eroshevich, a psychiatrist and friend of the starlet, authorized all the prescription medications in the Hollywood, Fla., hotel room where Smith was found unresponsive shortly before her death Feb. 8, the medical examiner's office said. Eroshevich had traveled with Smith to Florida.

Calls to Eroshevich in Los Angeles were not immediately returned Wednesday. Candis Cohen, a spokeswoman for the California Medical Board, would not comment on any probe into Eroshevich; she said investigations of doctors are not public record.

Dr. Joshua Perper, Broward County's medical examiner, said two other doctors also prescribed Smith drugs, but those medications were not found in her hotel room.

The type of drugs found in Smith's system were disclosed with the release of her autopsy report last week, but the remarkable quantity of drugs she had was unclear until Wednesday's release of additional records.

The powerful sleeping aid chloral hydrate, the medication blamed with tipping the balance in the toxic mix of drugs and causing her death, was prescribed Jan. 2. About two-thirds of the bottle was gone, according to the medical examiner's records. The records also show 62 tablets of the anti-convulsant drug Valium were missing from a prescription less than two weeks old at the time of Smith's death.

A probe by the Seminole Police Department agreed with Perper's assessment that Smith's death at 39 was an accidental overdose and that there was no foul play.

Most of the drugs were prescribed in the name of Howard K. Stern, her lawyer-turned-coproducer, and none were prescribed in Smith's own name, according to documents. Perper has said all the drugs were meant for Smith.

Information released by Perper's office shows eight of the prescriptions were issued under Stern's name; one under Eroshevich's name; and two were under the name of Alex Katz. It was unclear if Katz was an alias or the name of someone connected to Smith.

The records show Smith had three prescriptions for muscle relaxants in her hotel room: two for carisoprodol, prescribed Jan. 2 and Jan. 26, and one for methocarbamol, under the brand name Robaxin, prescribed Jan. 2. Some 415 of the carisoprodol pills were missing from their containers as well as 33 of the Robaxin pills, according to the documents.

Lunch policy leaves bad aftertaste at O'Leary

Give the Twin Falls School District a low grade this week for its ham-fisted way of making students pay for their hot ham and cheese sandwich.

Students at Vera C. O'Leary Junior High School who were behind in their school lunch payments got some cold treatment Monday afternoon. Those delinquent in their hot-lunch payments had their lunch trays taken, and the food dumped into the trash. Cafeteria workers then gave the students a cold sack lunch.

Overdue payment for school lunch is a perennial problem in local schools. Each meal is automatically deducted from a student's individual account, with the balance displayed after each purpose. Students who run a deficit are still given a lunch on credit.

When students run large deficits, the school struggles to pay for the food it serves. District officials said O'Leary's total deficit for unpaid lunches was at $600.

To help offset that need, the district has a generous and successful Free and Reduced Lunch Program. School officials do a professional job of respecting privacy and helping families unable to pay for lunch find a program that fits their needs.

Monday's actions, however, were not professional. First, the policy shamed students for their insufficient funds, which may be reflective of parents — not the kids. Humiliating a student isn't worth the price of getting those dollars back.

Secondly, throwing away food was unnecessary waste. If the district wants to give these students food for thought, hand over the sack lunch and leave it at that.

The students were in fact notified of the policy previous to Monday in a student bulletin. "If you have a balance, no matter how small, you will be given a sack lunch and given the full price," the notice read.

Because the cafeteria adds the cost at the end of the lunch line — not the start — it was only then that staff was able to hand over the cold lunch. Open-air food and salad bar items could not be returned, so they were tossed.

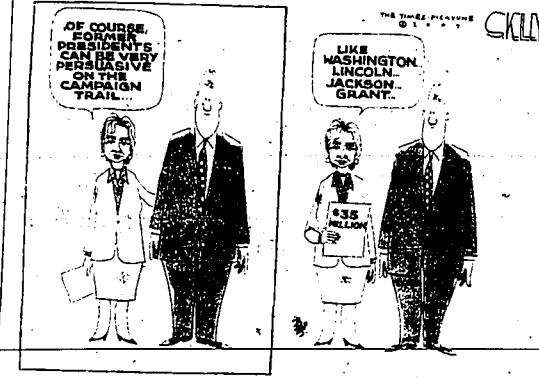

Mary Lu Barry, secondary programs director for the district, said that of those 150 notified, only 26 students had to take sack lunches, and only 15 of those students had "partial lunches" thrown out. (Packaged items like milk and cookies were saved.) As of Wednesday, the school's $600 lunch deficit had been reduced to $177, and only 58 of the 150 students were in a negative balance.

But when examined closely, the policy is still questionable. A $600 total deficit among 150 students breaks down to $4 per student. Maybe some students had larger deficits. But a negative balance of $4 can't accrue in just a few days. Not exactly a pattern of debtbeats.

The numbers are peripheral to the key issue of how the students were treated. Even the district must agree that its tactics were extreme.

"We need to balance the needs of the foods service department while preserving the dignity of the students," Barry said. "I doubt we'll be seeing this happen again."

Our view: A Twin Falls school tried too hard to collect on student payments for cafeteria lunches. What do you think? We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

Critics missing the truth about Clinton, McCain

Let me rise in defense of two of the frontrunners, Hillary Clinton and John McCain.

Neither one is my first choice for president. But that is not for any of the reasons popularized by think-tank fellows who were denied tenure at the university, or newscasters whose dinner theater gigs run out.

Hillary first. We are told that she won't do because, uh, because she won't do. She reminds myrna Blyth, on National Review Online, of girls in her high school who recopied their grade-point average every night. I never knew girls like that. Ms. Blyth, who used to run Ladies Home Journal, has refashioned herself as an upscale Ann Coulter. She whacks Hillary for comparing herself to John F. Kennedy. For Pete's sake, are there any politicians who don't?

But so it goes about Hillary. Her hair isn't right. Her suits aren't right. Her dining isn't right. Her dining isn't right. She reminds you of someone from high school. She thinks she is from Massachusetts. Her standing was down last week in the Gallup Poll. A lot of negative energy made that happen.

Hillary hates her so much that they find it hard to say why. Their jaws clench when they try. The loathing seems to have more to do with their own demons than with Sen. Clinton. They may mention the southern drawl Hillary seemed to acquire in Selma, Ala. Both Ms. Blyth and Kathleen Parker were Very Much Put Off by that. But a tin draw is hardly in a class with going to war without enough troops and staying in contact after there's nothing to win.

So finally, they say Hillary is too liberal. Often, they say she is a hard liberal in the same sentence in which they say she flip-flops. So let me point this out. Sen. Clinton has a liberal constituency compared with Alabama, but ideologically she is no liberal. She is a triangulator married to the master triangulator. That's someone who splits the political difference to try to pick up votes from both sides.

If you hate Hillary because she is a liberal, you hate her for no reason. You should be required to repeat the class in Know Thy Enemy.

Then there is Sen. McCain. He might remind critics of someone they flew with in combat if any of them had ever flown in combat. Fat and shaggy. The senator's suits are OK. The knock on him is that he talks out of both sides of his mouth. Imagine that. A politician who talks out of both sides of his mouth. Call the fire department.

In 2000, the press loved Sen. McCain because he could talk and would talk to them, two things his party's front-runner never learned to do. Liberals liked it when he called Pat Robertson and the Rev. Jerry Falwell "agents of intolerance." Of course, being loved by the press corps didn't help in the Republican primaries. This time, he would like to win. So, he talks nice to the political preacher men and outcasts at the Rev. Falwell's Liberty University.

Now, liberals who never were going to be able to vote for him because they don't vote in Republican primaries and he couldn't get past those primaries if the likes of them would vote for him wait that they have been two-timed.

And James Dobson, for one, still doesn't like him from last time. The senator didn't help himself by referring to the founder of Focus on the Family as "Reverend" when the title is "Doctor," as any family-values voter knows.

But if Sen. McCain wants to kiss up to the religious right, don't gape. We are in the seventh year of a president who doesn't talk to people he doesn't like. Where has that gotten us?

President Bush refused to talk to North Korea, and it got nuclear weapons. It is getting nuclear weapons.

He refused to talk to Hamas, and Israel isn't any safer. He refused to talk to Iran, and it is getting nuclear weapons.

He refused to talk to Hamas, and Israel isn't any safer. He refused to talk to Iran, and it is getting nuclear weapons.

LEGISLATURE

Valley moved forward in 2006 session

The 2007 Legislature accomplished positive things for the people of Magic Valley.

The College of Southern Idaho will be getting over $21 million to build a new nursing building and an extra $600,000 to enhance the nursing faculty and nursing instructor salaries at the college.

At the same time, the public budget for 2007-08 will increase by 5.5 percent and will cover a 3-percent salary increase for public school teachers as well as include a classroom supply budget for each instructor of $300. Higher education will see an 8.4-percent increase. It's the first time in 20 years the overall education budget increase exceeds that of Medicaid, which this year is 5.4 percent. Public schools in Idaho will be getting some $1.37 billion next year.

There's more looking up for Magic Valley. The Legislature has approved $10 million to go toward the state-of-the-art livestock research center. The main focus of the center is to be on energy projects and protecting the environment.

As the dairy center of Idaho — a state that raises fourth in the nation for milk production and is heading toward third place — Magic Valley will see a nice economic boost from this project.

And things are looking up for the irrigators in the Ritzfield and Shoshone areas as well as the folks in Blaine County as a result of legislative approval of the Wood River Legion.

Through a principal change in Idaho water law, now Big Wood Basin water rights holders who choose to leave water in the Big Wood River will lose their priority dates. As a result, the stream flow in the Big Wood River closest to Magic Reservoir will be maintained, and that will keep fish alive and help fill up Magic Reservoir.

In regard to building more capacity for energy in this state to satisfy the growing population, we now have a forward-looking energy policy. The new policy generated legislation to allow tax credits on the capital investments of distributors and retailers who intend to build infrastructure for biofuels.

Members of the Interim Energy Committee will return to Boise next summer to do more work on the energy plan. One bill which we remain interested in would disallow "exclusivity" in contracts that oil companies make with gas station owners. That clause prevents the owners from selling ethanol to their gasoline products. Getting rid of that clause will further encourage our local farmers to produce crops for ethanol in the local market.

Finally, you are thrilled that the Nature Conservancy donated over 300 acres known as Ritter Island near Hagerman and a $1 million endowment fund to the state of Idaho. The Department of Parks and Recreation will manage the preserve, ensuring that superb wildlife habitat will remain intact and the public will have access to the breathtaking scenery of the area.

LETTER

Be patient while waiting for valley's 'Best Burger' We would like to take this opportunity to express our heartfelt appreciation to those loyal customers who nominated the Foothill Cafe to be the home of the Magic Valley's best burger. We would also like to thank the Times-News staff on behalf of ourselves and all the participating restaurants for hosting the Burger Bracket contest. As many of you can only imagine, we have had overwhelming response by the public to experience our winning burger. Due to this response, some of you have had long waits and what we feel are below our standard of burgers. We are a small restaurant and, although we expected increased numbers of guests, we could never imagine the overwhelming response we received. We are currently working on solutions to the various problems we are experiencing and thank you for your patience and understanding at this time. We here at the Foothill Cafe pride ourselves on our quality of food and service, and it truly hurts us to think that any of our guests have received anything other than our best. For those of you who may have been disappointed with your dining experience with us, we invite you, on us, to again visit and experience Magic Valley's truly best burger. U.S. created the war and itself as the enemy "Weapons of mass destruction," he said, and we went. When we as a nation used extreme pre-emptive killing as a tactic of foreign policy, what was the result? Tens of thousands of Iraq civilians have died since the American and British-led invasion in March 2003. We brought on a religious civil war by destabilizing a country and now find it our duty to stay and try to hold the factions apart from fighting. Our guilt at unleashing the bloodshed keeps us there, our soldiers' bodies serving as a buffer between two religious groups fighting for control. Those with money and ability have long since fled the country. More than half a million that couldn't have left.

Who's left there that we're protecting? Then on the home front, we turned over our civil liberties in the name of security. Our top leadership feels that the end justifies the means. When someone pointed out the truth exposing the lack of basis for our actions, it was then "revealed" his wife was a secret agent, blowing her cover and making a point that you don't go against the administration. When eight maintained their integrity about how to administer justice, they were thrown out. We will "stay the course" we are told, but elections showed what we the people really want. Some say it was wrong to set deadlines on when to bring the troops home, that we are aiding an enemy. What enemy? That is a civil war that we unleashed. The only enemy is our own arrogance in telling other nations how they should conduct their business. Those weapons of mass destruction? Never found them. Perhaps the only mass destruction is how easily we give up our civil rights, thinking it will bring us more security. WILL WHITE Twin Falls

Other takes valid stand against Cuban embargo

I am new to Idaho and I am delighted to learn that Gov. Butch Otter is actively promoting trade with Cuba. I have just returned from a year of living in Cuba. I can attest to the fact that the United States' 46-year-old embargo against Cuba has achieved exactly the opposite of its stated goal — to cause the people to suffer to the point that the country becomes ungovernable. Instead, it has created an external bully against which Castro rallies the people behind him. Ironically, bringing freedom and capitalism to Cuba is the underlying rationale of U.S. policy; meanwhile the trade embargo has thwarted U.S. private enterprise and the ban on travel to Cuba violates all American freedoms, especially those of Cuban descent who struggle to maintain contact with loved ones on the island. There are bills now in Congress aiming to end the travel ban and the embargo (HR654, HR624, HR217). It would be nice if all Idaho's federal representation had the same acumen as Gov. Otter and Sen. Larry Craig, who co-sponsored the Travel Bill S721. Opening communication and allowing interaction between the peoples of both nations is the only way to effect the changes U.S. policies were intended to accomplish. DAWN GABLE Jerome

Indigestion over chocolate deity

KATHLEEN PARKER

Now would seem a good time for all good Catholics to calm down. Some are making life difficult for those of us who insist that religious folks in this country are relatively sane and civilized about their beliefs and supportive of the principles, including free expression, that allow us to worship (or not) as we please.

Especially problematic are those who've reportedly made death threats recently to express disapproval of the now infamous, anatomically correct chocolate Jesus.

Death threats? Isn't that what outraged Muslims do when cartoons hurt their feelings? I guess all God's children get guns.

Having now seen photographs of the chocolate figure, I can't say that I was deeply offended. It wasn't pornographic, and using chocolate as a medium isn't inherently disrespectful.

That said, no one should pretend that the sculpture was intended as a tribute to Christ. When invitations to view a nude chocolate Jesus during Easter week read "Come Eat Jesus," one can without hysteria infer that the purpose is to mock those who celebrate the passion of Christ and to trivialize the sacrament of communion.

The ploy is that those who felt mocked reacted with homophobic outrage, thus giving the offending camp the free publicity it craves.

Catholic League watchdog Bill Donohue led the usual pop rally and, after a few days of hue and cry, the exhibit was canceled by the hotel that housed the gallery where the exhibit would have appeared.

As religious skirmishes go, it was all fairly tidy. No explosives, no body parts, no lasting damage to civilization.

Donohue, however, might have done better to lead public rosaries of repatriation on the sidewalk outside the hotel rather than ranting on TV.

Thoughtful Catholic Christians who expect to be mocked and treated with contempt by the world, pray for the souls of blasphemers.

Thanks to his stagecraft, Donohue is now being compared to imams who issue fatwas against those who insult Islam. While the two share similarities in superficial ways, they are worlds apart in important ways.

Obviously, the common thread is religious sensitivity. Muslims and Catholics alike want their religious beliefs respected and are angered when non-believers ridicule them. Catholics have been under siege by the secular culture for years, confronted with everything from rock star Madonna's antics to "Piss Christ" to a Virgin Mary painting adored with elephant feces.

All were intended to provoke — gratuitously.

The Danish cartoon controversy that outraged Muslims, while provocative, was in essence an act of protest aimed not at taunting but at exposing the corruption of Islam by those who dress up murderousness in religious garb.

It was in direct response, in fact, to Muslim intimidation. At the time, Danes were so intimidated by Muslims following the murder in Amsterdam of film director Theo van Gogh that no one was willing to illustrate a children's book about Islam.

Say what you will about Donohue, but he's too cagey to issue death threats. Who needs bombs when you've got the media? Otherwise, he picks his battles intelligently.

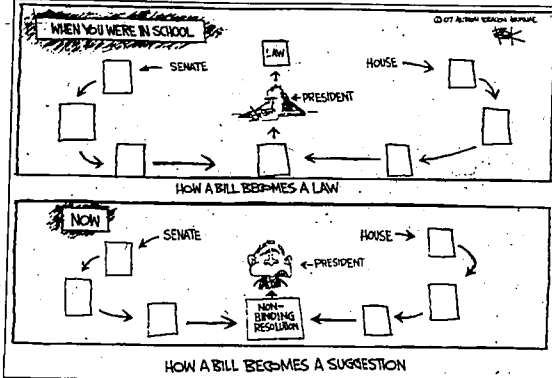

In this case, he didn't even go after the artist. He knows that free expression trumps outrage in America. But he also knows that money trumps everything, and so he went after the hotel. The result may feel like censorship, but playing the free market beats a beheading every time.

Even so, it would be nice if religious Westerners would stop handing ammunition to the enemy — not just to those who offend them, but also to the radical Islamists whose insanity is minimized by the inevitable comparison.

Those who taunt true believers, meanwhile, are like children trying to get a rise out of Daddy. A mature father knows to ignore the brats.

And the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob probably doesn't get his feelings hurt over a chocolate nose-thumbing.

Yet another plan to do away with the Electoral College

When it comes to persistence in pursuit of a political goal, no one can beat Birch Bayh.

It has been almost 40 years since the former Democratic senator from Indiana became the prime sponsor of a constitutional amendment for direct popular election of the president. The measure to abolish the Electoral College passed the House but lost in the Senate in 1970 and again in 1973.

Bayh, now a Washington lawyer (and father of Evan Bayh, currently representing Indiana in the Senate), has never abandoned the cause. This year, he has an unpaid but effective lobbyist in Arizona, helping persuade the Maryland Legislature to become the first in the country to endorse a plan that would — if it succeeded — achieve the direct election of the president, without the need for a constitutional amendment.

The National Popular Vote Plan, as it is known, has passed both houses of the Maryland Legislature and is headed for signature by Gov. Martin O'Malley.

The scheme, invented by John R. Koza, a Stanford professor, relies on the provision of the Constitution giving legislatures the power to "appoint" their presidential electors. If legislatures in enough states to make up a majority of the Electoral College — 270 electoral votes — pledge to commit those votes to the candidate editorial page and columnist E.J. Dionne Jr., to sign up for the plan.

The sincerity and stubborn persistence of Bayh and the others notwithstanding, this is a questionable proposition. No one knows what the abandonment of a federal principle — voting by states for the highest officer in the land — would mean for American politics and government.

When Bayh's constitutional amendment was being debated in Congress, the seemingly simple argument for direct democracy was tested by consideration of the many unintended consequences of switching to a national popular vote plan. Senators asked what it would do to rural and urban constituencies, small states and large, minority populations and the two-party system. In the final vote in the Senate in 1975, it was defeated by a coalition of Northern liberals and Southern conservatives in his own party as well as Republicans — all of whom found things to dislike.

Those issues need airing again before a change is made. They were not debated seriously in the Maryland Legislature and they are not likely to be in others. That's why this scheme for bypassing the amendment process is — despite its honorable sponsorship — a really dubious proposition.

David Broder's e-mail address is davidbroder@washpost.com.

winning the national popular vote, no constitutional amendment is needed. Bayh and other high-minded individuals, such as former Illinois Republican Rep. John B. Anderson, a one-time independent presidential candidate, support the plan, arguing that it is a perfect expression of 21st-century democracy, while the Electoral College is a relic of 18th-century thought.

All votes should count equally, no matter where they are cast, they say. Bayh told the Maryland legislators that Baltimore and Indianapolis voters are ignored by the presidential candidates now, because they are in states where one party dominates (Republicans in Indiana; Democrats in Maryland), while small-town voters in Ohio and Wisconsin are flooded with attention, simply because their states are closely contested.

What is worse, they say the Electoral College made George Bush a winner in 2000 despite the fact that Al Gore got half-a-million more votes, and that could happen again. Those arguments have persuaded a wide variety of other endorsers, including The New York Times

Bruins notch emphatic win

T.F. blasts Highland

By Eric Larson
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — When it came time to answer the Bruins' reply was loud.

Trailing 2-1 in the bottom of the fourth inning, the Twin Falls High School baseball team strung together eight runs en route to defeating rival Highland High of Pocatello 14-4 in six innings Wednesday afternoon at Bruin Field.

Only moments after it looked like the Rams had found an answer for Bruin starter Nick Yergensen's pitching to take a one-run lead, the Bruins unleashed an impressive offensive display that was capped off by right fielder Nate Robertson's two-run home run that went sailing well beyond the left-field fence, 330 feet away.

The win puts the 8-4 Bruins in first place in the Region Four-Five-Six standings with tonight's 5 p.m. rematch in Pocatello looming.

"I always feel that we're the best team on the field," Bruins head coach Mike Federico said. "Maybe once, a few years ago when we played Borah and they had all those kids. Is the only time I've felt that we're not better or as good as the other team on the field. So it reinforces the belief that I have in these kids that they can play."

It was timely situational hitting that kept the Bruins' rally going, as a Connor Watkins sacrifice fly plated Kasey Jeroux for the third run of the pivotal bottom of the fourth. Two batters later with Marcus Schaal and Layne Reeves on base, designated hitter Luke Schutte legged out a bunt single before the ball got away from Rams first baseman Jamey Couch, allowing two runs to score. In all, the Bruins collected seven hits on the inning, including three on two-strike counts.

"One person gets on, it's kind of contagious," Robertson said. "Everybody wants to get up to the plate and keep hitting."

The Bruins would also have an answer for Highland's two-run top of the sixth, as Schaal's two-RBI single capped a five-run half-inning and put Twin Falls ahead the requisite 10 runs to end the game early. Robertson filled up the stat sheet, finishing 3-for-3 with three runs scored, two RBIs a double, a home run, two stolen bases and a walk. Bo Folkings finished 2-for-4 with three RBIs and a pair of Watkins and Schutte at the bottom of the order in the key fourth inning.

"Most people don't see those little things," Federico said. "They see eight on the board and Nate's home run. But you know, Nate doesn't get an at bat if you don't have those other things on the side. I appreciate that."

Another thing to appreciate was Schaal's highlight-reel diving catch to rob Couch of a possible double in the sixth. Or the six hits Yergensen scattered and six strikeouts he threw to rebound from a subpar showing in his last start.

"Last game, I lost it mentally," Yergensen said. "I was flying open and I got mad. This time, I just took what I got and worked with the next pitch. Everything turned out fine for me."

The Rams were led at the plate by No. 8 hitter Nico Castaneda, who finished 2-for-3 with an RBI and a stolen base. Highland will look to rebound tonight, while the Bruins hope to enter the regional driver's seat with a series sweep.

Ex-Grambling coach Eddie Robinson dies

By Mary Foster
Associated Press writer

To his very last day, Eddie Robinson was always battling something.

There was the institutional racism that surrounded him, the piddling football budget he and his coaching staff subsisted on at predominantly black Grambling State and, ultimately, the Alzheimer's disease that took his life at age 88.

"I'd been fighting that battle for a long time," said former Grambling quarterback and Super Bowl MVP Doug Williams. "It was one of the many he fought in his lifetime."

Robinson died Tuesday night, not long after being admitted to Lincoln General Hospital in Ruston, La., Williams said.

He was diagnosed with Alzheimer's disease shortly after he retired in 1997 and had been in and out of a nursing home during the past year. And so ended the life of a beloved football coach who put a small school in remote northern Louisiana on the map and turned it into a virtual farm team for the NFL, during a career that spanned 57 years.

Robinson built a football powerhouse with a worldwide reputation, all the while struggling to get past years of segregation and discrimination against blacks.

His success at Grambling no doubt made him the first easily recognizable black coach in any sport.

"Today we mourn the loss of a great coach and a true American hero," Louisiana Gov. Kathleen Blanco said. "Coach Eddie Robinson became the most successful college coach of all time and one of the greatest civil rights pioneers in our history. ... Coach Robinson elevated a small town program to national prominence and tore down barriers to achieve an equal playing field for athletes of all races."

Robinson won 408 games, the most ever for any coach at the time of his retirement in 1997.

Bruins dominate T.F. invite

Both teams win over strong Class 5A fields

Times-News

TWIN FALLS — That's how to make a statement.

The Twin Falls boys and girls golf teams put the Idaho high school Class 5A ranks on notice with Wednesday's sweep of the Twin Falls 5A Invitational at the Twin Falls Municipal Golf Course.

The Bruin boys finished in 284 strokes, eight ahead of second-place Highland, while the Twin Falls girls scored a dominating 15-stroke win in 326 strokes. Those wins came over 14 other boys teams and eight other girls squads. The Twin Falls boys were led by Derek McDowell's first-place finish. After tying with Eagle's Connor McNecken and Idaho Falls' Andrew French at 70 during regulation play, McDowell carded a par on the first playoff hole to win medalist honors. McDowell birdied his last three holes to move into the playoff.

Cory Cook and David Seppi both shot rounds of 71 for the Bruins, while Jordan Hamblin carded a 72 and Casey Faught a 73. Timberline senior Carissa Simmons narrowly edged Twin Falls' Hannah McNeley for girls medalist honors, carding a 76 to McNeley's 77. The Bruins' overall depth was the key in the team win, as four Bruins finished in the tournament's top six. Rarek Fischer placed fourth with an 80, Abby McNeley carded an 84 to finish fifth, and Sara Federico's 85 was good for a sixth-place finish.

It's a power game at the Masters, with small hope for the little guy

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press writer

AUGUSTA, Ga. — Tiger Woods doesn't own the lowest score on the back nine at Augusta National, nor the most memorable. But that 30 he posted in the first round in 1997 sent him to a record-setting victory at the Masters that ultimately changed many things.

Starting with the golf course. There were two par 5s, and I could handle those," Woods recalled. "No. 17 was short at the time. No. 11 was short at the time. No. 14 was short at the time, only a 3-wood and a sand wedge."

With each hole description, his smile grew wider until he was in full laughter.

There is nothing short about Augusta National now except the distance between the practice green and the first tee. The course has been stretched more than a quarter-mile since Woods' first victory, and each change seems to reduce the number of realistic contenders.

"That explains why Woods and Phil Mickelson have won five of the last six Masters and are the heavy favorites when the 71st edition of this tournament begins Thursday.

The Masters

Where: Augusta National Golf Club, Augusta, Ga.

TV: Today, 2 p.m., USA

Prize: To Be Determined ($7 Million in 2008)

Field: 97 Players (Five Amateurs)

Defending Champion: Phil Mickelson

And maybe that's why some of the shorter hitters wonder if they're only here to smell the flowers.

The annual assumption is that only a dozen or guys can think about a green jacket, a familiar list of power players that range from Ernie Els to Vijay Singh, from Henrik Stenson to Geoff Ogilvy.

"It angers me a little bit when I hear that," Fred Funk said Wednesday. "But it's true. When I come here ... what's the name of that movie, 'One in a Million'? Ok, so I have a chance. But a medium to short hitter has to have a ridiculous short game to contend."

Woods and Mickelson probably have never had a conversation in the champions locker room like the one that took place early this week downstairs where the regulars hang out.

Paul Goydos hasn't been to the Masters in 11 years, and he was asking Scott Verplank what club he hit into a certain hole. Verplank never gave him a chance to say which hole, probably because it didn't matter.

"Wood," he replied. "Verplank qualified for this Masters by finishing among the top 16 a year ago. And he was quick to point out that Tiger Clark was the runner-up to Mickelson, and Chris DiMarco gave Woods all he could handle the year before that."

"It can be done," Verplank said. "But it does not put a handful of guys at a much greater advantage, and those guys all hit the ball farther than I do. I was playing a practice round with Davis Love III, and he's launching it 300 yards to the top of the hill on the first hole. I'm just striking I can see the green."

Steve Stricker was in weekend contention in 2001, the year Woods won his fourth, straight major. That also was the last year before club officials began super-sizing the golf course, and Stricker found himself in foreign territory when he returned for practice rounds this year.

Burley rips Wood River

By Chuck Henn For The Times-Herald

BURLEY — The Burley Bobcats had a strong arm on the mound, hot bats at the plate and a little good fortune in the infield as they took a 7-1 Great Basin Conference West victory over the Wood River Wolverines on Wednesday. "The kids played great," Burley coach Brett Graham said. "They did awesome today."

Garcia Hoskins threw an outstanding game from the mound, striking out 10 batters and walking only one. One defensive play that didn't seem all that routine came in the top of the third inning when Wolverines pitcher Kenny Cardona hit deep into right-center field. The Bobcats were able to throw Cardona out as they were tried to leg out a triple on the play.

Burley began to strike back in the fourth inning, with Steve Andreasson hitting a lead-off single and Dallon Belman drawing a walk. Then the Bobcats got a lucky break. Stephen Beck hit a grounder into the infield that might have resulted in a Wood River double play — had it not hit the infield umpire in the foot.

Instead, Burley was able to load the bases, setting things up for a two-RBI double from Hoskins. "You can't fault the umpire for being there," Graham said. Kace Redder followed up with a single, and pinch runner Greg Dayley scored on a throwing error that advanced Redder to third, then Tyler Owens hit an RBI single to bring Redder home.

Cardona pitched five innings in the loss, striking out four and walking one while giving up eight hits.

The two teams will go at it again at 4:30 p.m. today at Holley.

runs the first inning only to have Pocatello put four runs on the board in the home half of the inning.

"We started off slow," said Minico assistant coach Mike Hoey. "We jumped out and they came back. Then we started hitting the ball and our defense made the plays."

Minico sophomore center fielder, Chris Joyce picked up four RBIs and junior Cody Winnill added three going 4-for-5 with the game. Senior catcher Colby Andersen was 3-for-5 with a double and two RBIs and R.J. Salvi had two doubles. Dane Broadhead picked up his third win of the year.

Minico (9-4) hosts Pocatello today.

Jerome 14, Century 3, five innings

Jerome — It's all coming together for the undefeated Jerome Tigers. With newfound punch at the plate throughout the lineup, the Tigers have the perfect complement to their solid pitching and defense.

Wednesday, those factors combined in a 14-3 win over Century.

The game was tied at 1-1 heading into the third inning when Tucker Thompson's two-run home run help Jerome build a 5-1 edge heading into the fourth. That's when the Tigers really took over. Six runs came in the fifth, combined with three Century errors helped the Tigers score nine runs in the inning.

"We just kept putting the ball into play and (Century) booted it," Jerome coach Tom Bobrowski, whose team is 10-0 on the season. Travis Cooley improved to 3-0 on the mound, limiting Century to two hits in the game.

Mike Cummins and Brett Walgamot had doubles for Jerome. "Everybody one through nine in our lineup contributed offensively today," finally, said Bobrowski. The Tigers host Burley on Tuesday.

In Game 1, the teams battled evenly for three innings. But the Indians broke the game open with a seven-run fourth inning and touched Hornets pitcher Jayme Manning for four home runs. Bzdelik bolts Air Force for head job at Colorado BOULDER, Colo. — A fading, mostly empty arena. The likes of Bob Knight and Bill Self to compete against on the hardwood and along the recruiting trail. A program with no real history of success or much support.

Bring it all on, declared Jeff Bzdelik. He left Air Force to take over as basketball coach at the University-of-Colorado-on Wednesday, the latest in a series of career challenges he's undertaken up and down the Rocky Mountain range.

"I get excited by great, great challenges," said Bzdelik, who was 50-16 at Air Force after a 29-year stint as coach of the Denver Nuggets, whom he led to the playoffs for the first time in a decade in 2004.

Now, his biggest challenge yet. The 54-year-old Bzdelik replaces Ricardo Paton, who went 7-20 in his 11th and final season in Boulder.

"I think Donnie's ready," said Donovan, who coached at Marshall from 1994 to 1996 before moving on to Florida.

Jones might be better. Jones remains uncertain about his future. He said he hasn't been contacted about the Kentucky job since leaving the Georgia Dome after Florida beat Ohio State on Monday night.

Bellein clearly covered the job because he's going to pay his previous employer to leave — and he accepted an offer without visiting the Ann Arbor campus.

His contract with West Virginia had a $2.5 million buy-out clause — $500,000 for each year remaining on his deal — and he said his lawyers are taking care of that.

The BLM wants you

Bureau gathering public input for Jarbidge plan

By Matt Christensen
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Idaho Bureau of Land Management is preparing new management strategies for its Jarbidge region, most of which is in Magic Valley, and the agency wants your input on how to supervise the space.

Throughout April, the bureau will host stakeholder workshops where the public can hash out how to use the nearly 1.4 million acres of public land within the Jarbidge office's jurisdiction. Feedback from those meetings will be worked into a Resource Management Plan that will shape BLM policy for the next 20 to 50 years.

Whether BLM land may look different once the plan is finished is entirely up to the public, said Heather Tiel, a spokeswoman for the bureau. "I don't think there's a hard-and-fast answer to that," she said. "We're trying to flush out those answers now."

BLM has been gathering public input over the past year or so, said Almee Betts, RMP project manager, and although there's general consensus in many management areas, issues such as livestock grazing have received "a significant range of public opinion."

Grazing, in fact, is what started the RMP process. "The BLM agreed to a court-stipulated settlement agree-

Convicted murderer Brink requests retrial

By Cassidy Friedman
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Donald Brink wants a retrial.

A jury found Brink guilty of first-degree murder in the May 23, 2005, shotgun slaying of Brent "Spook" Lillevoed in a basement home at 236 1/2 Ramage St. He was scheduled to be sentenced March 30.

But Brink's March 19 demand for a retrial forced 5th District Judge G. Richard Bevan to reschedule Brink's sentencing to May 29 while the judge considers Brink's reasons.

Those reasons are:

- The boots Brink was wearing should be forensically examined for traces of blood. The state used Brink's footprint to pinpoint his distance from the victim when the shotgun fired. The defense asserts Spook had rushed Brink, meaning Brink could have shot him in self-defense.

- The judge and prosecutor illegally instructed the jury to only consider Brink's guilt for a lesser crime after it determined he had not committed first-degree murder.

- When Brink asked to fire his attorney and represent himself, Brink was told he would not be given access to the law library or other legal materials.

- The prosecutor perpetuated three types of misconduct. First, he told the jury that if Spook was killed by a gun, the defense's arguments are invalid, including that Brink was protecting himself. Second, the prosecutor reinforced the judge's statement to jurors that they could only consider a lesser offense after they found Brink not guilty of first-degree murder. Third, the judge let the prosecutor show gory photographs to make a point but not "simply to inflame the jury."

"In closing argument, he did just that," wrote the defense.

No day is set for when Bevan must rule on the defense's motion.

From Myanmar to Magic Valley

Refugee center will receive Burmese refugees

By Joshua Palmer
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — They will leave the jungles of Southeast Asia for a better life in the desert of south-central Idaho.

The College of Southern Idaho Refugee Services Center announced Tuesday that it will receive its first Burmese refugees. Although officials say the refugees will only consist of one family, they say that it could lead to more Burmese being relocated to the Magic Valley area.

"This is really one of two new groups that we are relocating," said Ron Black, director of the refugee services center. "We recently brought in some Burundi refugees and now we are hoping to bring in a Burmese family."

The refugee center has spent the past two weeks relocating 12 Burundi refugees from the Great Lakes region of Africa. The center now plans to do the same with the Burmese refugees living on the other side of the globe.

The Burmese refugees have been living in relocation camps in Thailand since 1996, when a military dictatorship took control of Burma, now called Myanmar. Burmese ethnic groups such as Karen, Karenni, as well as some Burman, were forced out of the country after the dictatorship alleged that they were a threat to the new government.

The family that will be relocated to the Magic Valley area speaks a marginal dialect called Karen. Black said the most difficult part of relocating the Burmese refugees will be to find an interpreter who speaks Karen. If the center cannot find an interpreter, it will have to pay for a telephone interpreter or hire someone from the Boise area.

The center receives $850 from federal grants for every refugee it relocates. Half the money is used to pay for the refugee's expenses for eight months, and the other half pays for the center's services. After eight months, the refugees do not receive financial help from the center.

"We really push to mainstream the refugees and make them part of the community," Black said. "It can be a little overwhelming because they have to learn everything from the language to how to use modern appliances."

Put on hold

Four murder suspect's trials postponed

By Cassidy Friedman
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Four friends charged with orchestrating the South Hills murder of a fifth member of their group had their trials postponed to a later date.

None of the defendants appeared with their attorneys Tuesday in district court.

Their four attorneys waived their client's right to a speedy trial within six months of the date they were charged.

A grand jury indicted Fredy Heredia-Juarez, James Roy John Jr., Michael Lee John and his girlfriend, Nicole Lea Baker, on first-degree murder and conspiracy to commit murder charges in the December deaths of 19-year-old Jessie Aaron Coates.

Heredia-Juarez and John Jr. had participated with Coates in a spree of local robberies when the group grew concerned Coates might "snitch" to police, according to a Twin Falls County sheriff's affidavit. And they are both charged with committing three counts of robbery with help from Coates.

- Baker's attorney, Tim Williams, agreed to pushing his client's trial back to Sept. 18. A pre-trial hearing is set for Aug. 21.

- John Jr.'s attorney, Marilyn Paul, agreed to having John Jr.'s trial delayed to May 22. His pre-trial hearing is scheduled for May 1.

- Lee John's attorney, Loren Bingham, agreed to delaying his client's trial until Oct. 16. His pre-trial is scheduled for Oct. 2.

- Heredia-Juarez's attorney, M. Lynn Dunlap, agreed to setting back Heredia's trial to June 26. His pre-trial is slated for May 15.

The rescheduled dates are tentative and may be changed if the prosecutor or defense need more time to prepare their cases.

Hispanics

 is projected to be $2.1 billion of the state's $40.9 billion this year, the report said.
 "Buying power" is tied to earning capability," Bob Fick, public affairs officer with Idaho Commerce and Labor, told the Coeur d'Alene Press "It's essentially your disposable income and how much money you're able to put into the economy. It's what people spend."
 The study found that the buying power of Hispanics, since 2000, has increased at an annual average of 2.7 percent, compared with an annual average of 1.7 percent for non-Hispanics.
 However, the study also found the per capita buying power of Hispanics in Idaho is only 51 percent of non-Hispanics.
 "Although Hispanics are becoming better off at a faster rate than non-Hispanics, the gap remains significant," Margie Gonzalez, executive director of the Hispanic commission, said in a statement. "Closing that gap further will require increasing the education and training available to Hispanics."

 The study noted that the U.S. Census Bureau in 2005 found that 54 percent of Idaho Hispanics over 25 did not have a high school diploma, compared with 13 percent of the overall population.
 The report found that 52 percent of all Hispanics in the work force were employed in service, agriculture, construction, maintenance and repair. Those mostly lower paying jobs account for 30 percent of Idaho's jobs.
 Management and professional services jobs make up 31 percent of Idaho jobs, but the report said only 13 per-

Idaho high court hears arguments in e-mail public records case

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — Idaho's Supreme Court has been asked to determine whether e-mail messages sent between public employees using public computers can be considered private and thus exempt from the state's open records law.
 Sitting here, the five justices heard arguments Tuesday from lawyers representing Kootenai County Prosecutor Bill Douglas and former Juvenile Drug Court supervisor Marina Kalani and a newspaper that wants to see nearly 900 e-mails between them.
 The court is expected to announce its ruling sometime later this year.

The case is an appeal from a July 2005 ruling by Idaho 2nd District Judge John R. Stegner favoring The Spokesman-Review, a newspaper of Spokane, Wash. He held that the public has a right to read the full contents of hundreds of e-mails exchanged between the prosecutor and Kalani.

 The newspaper sought the exchange of electronic letters as part of investigations into the demise of the juvenile drug court, and the nature of the relationship between Douglas and a subordinate. Douglas and Kalani both have said the e-mails contained only friendly banter.
 Kalani and Douglas both appealed Stegner's ruling. The newspaper argued the e-mails should be available to the public because they were generated by government employees at work, using taxpayer-owned equipment.
 Douglas, who later dropped out of the appeal, and Kalani were among those listening to arguments Tuesday.

Gregory D. Horne, a Coeur d'Alene lawyer representing Kalani, argued that 889 e-mails exchanged between his client and Douglas are personal in nature and therefore should not be released under the Idaho Public Records Act. As a government employee, Kalani has a constitutional right of privacy that should prohibit the release of the e-mails, even if they were sent on a government computer during the work day, Horne argued.

 The justices also were asked whether details of a cash settlement between Kootenai County and Kalani should be available as a public record.
 Tracy Leffoy, representing the newspaper, told the justices the settlement should be public. The Idaho Counties Risk Management Program, which defended Kootenai County and reached the settlement with Kalani, opposed release of the agreement.
 Risk management program attorney Phillip Collier, of Boise, argued that the public has no right to see such agreements, even if they involve public money.
 Leffoy disagreed. "The payment of public funds to a public employee should be a matter of public record," he said.

Micron posts $52M second quarter loss

BOISE (AP) — Micron Technology Inc. on Wednesday reported a second-quarter loss as slumping demand, lower prices and stiffer competition hurt the NAND flash memory and image-sensor businesses that it's been expanding.
 The Boise-based chipmaker lost $52 million, or 7 cents per share, in the three months ending March 1, compared with a profit of $193 million, or 27 cents per share, in the second quarter of fiscal 2006.
 Sales in the period rose to $1.43 billion from $1.23 billion a year earlier.
 Chief Executive Officer Steve Appleton said the company faced "challenging market conditions."

Appleton has been trying to free Micron from dependence on volatile dynamic random-access memory chips for personal computers by expanding into NAND and imaging products for cell phones, automobiles, music players, cameras and consumer appliances.

Organizers break ground on house for Shasta Groene

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — More than 50 people gathered for the groundbreaking for a new home for Shasta Groene, the lone survivor of a 2005 attack on a northern Idaho family.

The three-bedroom, two-bathroom house of 1,300 square feet will be held in trust for Groene, now 10, until she turns 25.

"This is huge," project organizer Midge Smock of Windermere Coeur d'Alene Realty told those who had gathered for the ceremony on Tuesday. "We're on phase two of Shasta's house. We still need money to pay for this lot, so send your money to Windermere."

Groene was kidnapped with her 9-year-old brother, Dylan Groene, from their Coeur d'Alene-area home.

Joseph Edward Duncan III is serving a life sentence after pleading guilty in state court to bludgeoning to death the children's mother, Brenda Groene, her fiancé, Mark McKenzie, and Shasta's 13-year-old brother, Slade Groene. Duncan, a Tacoma, Wash., native, has also been charged in federal court in Boise with kidnapping Shasta and Dylan and killing the boy. Federal prosecutors are seeking the death penalty.

The new home is being built in Coeur d'Alene, and organizers said they expect it to be finished, furnished and ready for Shasta by July 4. The house's location will allow her to continue going to school at Fernan Elementary, where she will be in fifth grade next year.

Smock, who is in charge of collecting money for the project, said about $50,000 has been raised, but that another $85,000 is needed.

She said the idea for the house came in a conversation she had with Steve Groene, Shasta's father, in September. "He said, 'You know, we're homeless,'" Smock recalled. "I said, 'What?' I was shocked, totally shocked. I just couldn't believe that our Shasta, who's gone through layer after layer of horror, doesn't have a home."

Todd Stam, owner of Aspen Homes and Development, is in charge of construction. "This has been an amazing project," Stam told The Spokesman-Review newspaper of Spokane, Wash.

"The whole community really stepped forward," added Fred Gillison, owner of Riverstone Stamp Concrete. Coeur d'Alene Mayor Sandi Bloom, one of those at the groundbreaking ceremony who helped cut the ribbon, said the amount of help from area residents didn't surprise her.

"It's what the community does," Bloom said.

Female wolf killed near Ketchum

KETCHUM (AP) — As Idaho awaits a federal decision on whether to remove its wolves from the federal-endangered species list, conflicts between the predators and ranchers in the central part of the state have re-emerged with the coming of spring. A rancher south of Sun Valley last month shot a wolf he said had been harassing livestock on private land, the state Department of Fish and Game reported this week. Federal rules allow ranchers to shoot wolves that are harassing their cattle or sheep. The rancher killed the wolf, a 90-pound female, on March 19.

He spent the next few days trying to secure away two others that remained in the area. On March 27, federal Wildlife Services agents confirmed the wolves had killed a calf on the same private land near Placabe. They're now trying to remove the wolf or wolves that did it. Idaho expects the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to remove wolves from federal Endangered Species Act protections by early next year, allowing the state to manage the predators whose numbers in Idaho now top 670. Counting Montana and Wyoming, there are 1,300 wolves in the region.

Pastor accused of sex abuse can keep working at church

POCATELLO (AP) — A youth pastor charged with sexually abusing a minor may continue to work at the church where the crime allegedly occurred, a judge said.

Joshua J. Robinson, 29, was charged in February with two counts of lewd conduct with a minor and one count of sexually abusing a minor, for allegedly abusing a teenager starting when she was 15 years old. Because of the charges, a no-contact order was issued directing Robinson to stay away from the girl. But last month, 6th District Judge Peter McDermott modified the order, allowing Robinson to return to his job as a youth pastor at Gate City Christian Church in Chubbuck. Robinson is still prohibited from contacting people younger than 18.

Jury convicts Idaho man of shootings on Highway 93

HAMILTON, Mont. (AP) — A District Court jury has convicted an Idaho man of shooting at vehicles traveling on U.S. Highway 93 in western Montana last fall, hitting one motorist in the knee.

Blaine C. Fadness, 38, testified Tuesday that he fired at passing vehicles in the Bitterroot Valley out of "stupid frustration" when drivers didn't dim their high beams.

"I never in my wildest nightmares thought I was going to touch a vehicle," Fadness said. "I had no intention of hurting anyone."

Jurors deliberated for less than an hour before convicting Fadness on all three felony counts of attempted murder.

Fadness, of Post Falls, Idaho, was arrested Sept. 11 while driving south on Highway 93 with an arsenal of weapons and ammunition in his vehicle. He was the lone suspect in the shootings, which damaged three vehicles.

"I never thought I was going to hit anything," Fadness said. "It was like throwing a snowball. You think it's going to fall short."

Kaye Eissen testified during the two-day trial that she was northbound on Highway 93, just south of Darby, when a bullet pierced her car door and struck her in the left knee.

She said she continued driving for about six miles because she was afraid the shooter would return.

Pete Franks told jurors he was returning from a bow-hunting trip when he passed Fadness' southbound truck and heard a loud noise. When Franks pulled over, he noticed a bullet hole in his driver's side door, just below the window.

William Lee said he was driving in the same area when he passed a truck and heard a noise. Two days later, he found a bullet hole in the rear passenger door of his sport utility vehicle and called police.

Travis Spindler, a firearms expert at the state crime lab, said the bullets came from a .22-caliber pistol equipped with a laser sight and silencer. Items that were found on the sent beside Fadness at the time of his arrest.

To prove the charges of attempted murder, Ravalli County Attorney George Corn had to convince jurors that Fadness was shooting with the intent to kill.

Corn said Fadness' intentions were obvious based on the precision of each shot and his familiarity with firearms. "He knows full well what he was trying to do when he fired that pistol," Corn said. "He was trying to kill people. The facts show that he acted with purpose."

Fadness, the only defense witness, told jurors that on the night of Sept. 11, he was on his way to a gun show in Nevada, where he was meeting an old friend.

He said the men planned to do some target shooting in the desert, which is why he had packed a cache of munitions, including two sniper rifles, three pistols and a stockpile of ammunition.

Fadness also was traveling with a radio tower capable of tapping into police frequencies, a night-vision monocular, binoculars, a GPS device and other scouting equipment.

His attorney, Dave Stenerson, said the weapons didn't prove Fadness was planning to kill anyone.

District Judge Jeffrey Langton scheduled a tentative sentencing date for May 23 and ordered Fadness to undergo a psychological evaluation.

Romney, self-described lifelong hunter, has hunted on only two occasions

By Gene Johnson
Associated Press writer

BOSTON — To hear Mitt Romney talk on the campaign trail, you might think the Republican presidential candidate had a gun rack in the back of his pickup truck.

"I purchased a gun when I was a young man. I've been a hunter pretty much all my life," he said this week in Keene, N.H., at a man sporting a National Rifle Association cap.

Yet the former Massachusetts governor's hunting experience is limited to two trips at the bookends of his 60 years: as a 15-year-old, when he hunted rabbits with his cousins on a ranch in Idaho, and last year, when he shot quail on a fenced game preserve in Georgia.

Last year's trip was an outing with major donors to the Republican Governors Association, which Romney headed at the time.

An aide said Wednesday that Romney was not trying to mislead anyone, although he confirmed Romney had been hunting only on those occasions in his life.

"Governor Romney's support for the Second Amendment doesn't come from the fact he knows how to handle a firearm. It comes from his appreciation of the Constitution and the rights enshrined in it, including the right to keep and bear arms," said campaign spokesman Eric Fehrnstrom.

He went on to cite the pro-gun measures Romney signed into law while serving as governor from 2003 to this past January.

Romney himself made several of the same points to the Keene audience, while also trying to offer some perspective on his hunting experience.

"I support the Second Amendment," he told the man who had asked about his views on the constitutional right to bear arms. "I purchased a gun when I was a young man. I've been a hunter pretty much all my life. I've never really shot anything terribly big. I used to hunt rabbits."

Romney added: "Shooting a rabbit with a single-shot .22 is pretty hard, and after watching me try for a couple of weeks, (my cousins) said, 'We'll slip you the semiautomatic. You'll do better with that.' And I sure did."

On the Georgia excursion, he said, "I knocked quite a few birds and enjoyed myself a great deal."

Expressing familiarity with and support for gun rights is key among Republican presidential contenders, who count gun owners, members of the military and the NRA itself among their potential supporters.

It helps explain why Romney joined the NRA last August, signing up not just as a supporter but a designated, "Lifetime" member, and why he has softened his gun control positions.

Romney told a Derry, N.H., audience, "I'm after the NRA's endorsement. I'm not sure they'll give it to me. I hope they will. I also joined because if I'm going to ask for their endorsement, they're going to ask for mine.

During a 1994 U.S. Senate campaign, Romney positioned himself as a moderate outsider, warning special interest groups to stay out of the race and saying he supported the Brady gun control law and a ban on assault rifles.

"That's not going to make me the hero of the NRA," he told the Boston Herald at the time. "I don't line up with a lot of special interest groups."

It's a theme he carried into his 2002 gubernatorial campaign. At the time, Romney pledged to do nothing to change the state's firearms statutes.

"We do have tough gun laws in Massachusetts. I support them. I won't chip away at them. I believe they protect us and provide for our safety," he said.

True to his word, Romney went on to sign one of the toughest assault weapons laws in the country.

Romney, though, also took steps to protect the rights of gun owners as governor.

The assault weapons ban won the backing of Massachusetts gun owners in part because it included provisions extending the term of a firearms identification card and a license to carry weapons from four to six years.

Make an attractive picture, Taurus

IF APRIL 5 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: This year you may be restless to make changes or test new objectives. The influence of a significant other could keep you from fulfilling your dreams this month. Get a new lease on life by launching your plans in late May or early June. In October, Lady Luck is smiling on your desires and anything you put into motion will bring you permanent bliss. Destiny calls by the beginning of the year. January is a good month to make a successful change of career or meet a soul mate.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Add some whimsical decorating touches to your home and turn it into your castle. A relationship matter that has been giving you doubts or worries will clear up.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Make an attractive picture. Shine your shoes, get a haircut or put together an outfit that tells the world you have arrived. Make yourself into a desirable package; no plain brown wrappers needed.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Some people consider you cleverness incarnate. You might make an inspired purchase today or make a good

HOROSCOPE

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): The very thing that has caused you a problem in the past might offer the solution in the present. Your perspective and intuitions are right on the mark.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You might finally understand what someone has been saying all along or an interesting idea that has been fuzzy might come into focus. Extend a firm hand in friendship.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your empathy for the underdog can win over detractors and give you the edge. You may need to give up or dispose of the bone of contention.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Behind every great man is a woman. But behind every happy woman is a great man. Because you a born romantic you are looking for the good in everyone — which means everyone sees the good in you.

of "I am angry," or says, "You're hurting me" by not doing what I tell you."

8. Hypersensitivity: Is easily insulted, claiming hurt feelings when he or she is really mad. Facts about the injustice of things that are just part of life.

9. Cruelty to animals or children: Kills or punishes animals brutally. May expect children to do things far beyond their ability (whips a 3-year-old for wetting a diaper) or teases them until they cry. Sixty-five percent of abusers who beat their partner will also abuse children.

10. "Playful" use of force during sex: Enjoys throwing you down or holding you down against your will during sex; finds the idea of rape exciting.

11. Verbal abuse: Constantly criticizes and says blatantly cruel things; degrades, curses, calls you an idiot. Threats may involve sleep deprivation, waking you with relentless verbal abuse.

12. Rigid gender roles: Expects you to serve, obey, remain at home.

13. Sudden mood swings: Switches from sweet to violent in minutes.

14. Past battering: Admits to hitting a mate in the past, but says the person "made" him (or her) do it.

15. Threats of violence: Says things like, "I'll break your neck" or "I'll kill you." They dismiss them that way, "Everybody talks that way," or "I didn't really mean it."

DEAR ABBY: My son, "Marshall," is in an abusive marriage. This week, while his military unit was training in another state, his wife had his cell phone turned off. Then she took a cash advance (over the credit limit) against the card Marshall uses while away from home, and canceled his ATM card so he would not have access to money. She did all this because she was angry with him.

Marshall had to leave his training early and fly home to straighten out the mess. Abby, she has locked him out of the house and made up allegations of physical abuse and reported them to his command. I have never met anyone so vindictive. This has happened repeatedly during their nine-year marriage.

They have two young sons. Marshall is miserable, so is hesitant to free himself from her control. He keeps saying she'll just do something worse. Even with her history, he doesn't see it as abuse.

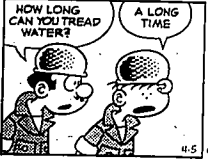

I have you a list of abusive characteristics in women you could print? Maybe if Marshall sees it, he'll recognize it for what it is. I'm afraid he'll eventually lose his job — or his life.

—WORRIED SICK IN CALIFORNIA
DEAR WORRIED SICK: It's been a while since I printed the warning signs of an abuser. Although they were originally intended to describe a male abuser, many of them apply to both sexes:

1. Pushes for quick involvement: Comes on strong, claiming, "I've never felt loved like this by anyone." Pressures the new partner for an exclusive commitment almost immediately.
2. Jealous: Excessively possessive; calls constantly or visits unexpectedly. Prevents you from going to work because "you might meet someone"; checks the mileage on your car.
3. Controlling: Interrogates you intensely (especially if you are late) about whom you talked to and where you were; keeps all the money; insists you get permission to go anywhere or do anything.
4. Unrealistic expectations: Expects you to be the perfect mate and meet his or her every need.
5. Isolation: Tries to cut you off from family and friends; accuses people who support you of "causing trouble." May deprive you of a phone or car, or try to prevent you from holding a job.
6. Blames others for problems or mistakes: It's always someone else's fault if something goes wrong.
7. Makes other responsible for his or her feelings: Says, "You make me angry," instead

ANSWER: It might seem natural to pass two clubs, but the best call is to give false preference to two hearts. This is not so much because you expect hearts to play better than clubs, but because you have enough to be happy to accept any invitation to game if partner can bid on now. Passing two clubs would end the auction and remove any chance of higher things.

Gunmen abduct 22 Shiite shepherds and steal thousands of sheep

By Kim Gansel Associated Press writer

BAGHDAD — Heavily armed gunmen on Wednesday abducted 22 Shiite shepherds who were tending thousands of sheep and had wandered into a dangerous Sunni area west of Baghdad, while six power plant workers were gunned down in northern Iraq.

The attacks reflected the spread of sectarian violence outside Baghdad as violence declines in the capital, where a U.S.-Iraq security crackdown is in its eighth week. The shepherds had traveled from the Shiite holy city of Karbala to a greener stretch of land in the vast area around Amariyah, some 25 miles west of Baghdad in the Sunni-dominated Anbar province. Karbala police spokesman Rahman Mishawi said.

A shepherd who escaped the attack said about 20 men with automatic rifles drove up in vehicles and opened fire on the group as their several thousand sheep were grazing. "I suddenly realized that we must be near Amariyah and that Sunnis were attacking us," he said, speaking on condition of anonymity for fear of reprisals. "Six of us were able to flee in our pickup but unfortunately they kidnapped 22 friends of mine and stole our sheep."

Jassim al-Wardi, a relative of one of the kidnap victims, appealed for their release. "They are peaceful people and very easygoing. What was their sin that could justify stealing their animals on which their daily life depends?" he said.

In all, at least 34 people were killed or found dead in Iraq on Wednesday, including the six Sunni Arab men killed in an ambush near the oil-rich business city of Kirkuk. The gunmen drove by in two cars and strafed a minibus in Manazhal as it was taking the men to work at a power station, local army commander Maj. Gen. Anwar Mohammed Amin said. Two of the six killed were engineers, he said.

The attacks came two days after a suicide truck bomber struck a police station in a Kurdish neighborhood in Kirkuk, killing 15 people, including a newborn girl and a U.S. soldier. Nearly 200 people were wounded.

Ethnic and religious tensions have been rising in Kirkuk after the government adopted a plan to relocate thousands of Arabs who were moved to the city 180 miles north of Baghdad decades ago in Saddam Hussein's campaign to displace the Kurds.

Police reported finding the bodies of nine bullet-riddled torture victims in Baghdad, the second-lowest total since the security operation began Feb. 14. The decline in such sectarian killings has been attributed to orders by Shiite cleric Muqtada al-Sadr that has kept Shiite militias largely off the streets.

U.S. military spokesman Maj. Gen. William Caldwell said al-Qaida in Iraq was trying to undo that deal—and "ignite a cycle of tit-for-tat violence," but he expressed cautious optimism they would not succeed. "There are encouraging signs that more people are buying into restraint instead of retribution," he said.

Caldwell said sectarian violence dropped 25 percent from February to March in Baghdad. But he was largely referring to execution-style killings and assassinations usually blamed on Shiite death squads and acknowledged the military remained "extremely concerned" about high-profile bomb attacks that have killed more than 300 people in the past eight days.

Disease fears emerge as Solomon Islands tsunami survivors refuse to leave refuges

By Mariah Foley Associated Press writer

MUNDA, Solomon Islands — Diarrhea has broken out among children huddled in camps of tsunami survivors in the Solomon Islands, a Red Cross official said Wednesday — the first worrying sign that thousands of people who lost their homes in the waves may be at risk of disease.

International aid was slow to trickle in to survivors, particularly in the hardest-hit town of Gizo in the western Solomons. At least 2,000 people spent a third unsheltered night on a hillside near Gizo following Monday's earthquake and ocean surge.

A New Zealand military transport plane unloaded an aid package of tarps, water and food rations in the town of Munda late Tuesday, following a shipment of similar supplies delivered earlier by a police patrol boat. Six doctors and 15 nurses reached Gizo on Wednesday.

An Australian air force transport plane left Sydney before dawn Thursday loaded with humanitarian relief supplies bound for the Solomons, a Defense Department official said.

On Wednesday, a supply boat left the capital of Honiara for the 10-hour journey to Gizo, but two others were delayed because provisions could not be found in the capital to fill them, chief government spokesman Alfred Malessila said.

Frustrations were starting to show among survivors, many of whom fled the tsunami with whatever supplies they could carry.

"There's no water to wash, no water to drink," said Esther Zekele, who fled the tsunami waves with her husband and children. The single sack of rice they brought to higher ground was half-empty, and no aid officials had come to their makeshift camp.

"We are just waiting, wondering why they haven't come," she said.

Getting aid to destroyed villages further afield could take at least two more days because of damaged roads, airstrips and wharves.

"We have not reached people as soon as we could ... because of the widespread nature of this particular disaster," said Fred Fakurui, chairman of the National Disaster Management Council.

Making things worse, many camps and other boats were washed away or destroyed, and fuel was contaminated with sea water, Western Province Premier Alex Lokopilo said.

At least 28 people were killed when waves up to 16 feet high smashed into the western Solomons following a magnitude-8.1 undersea quake. No significant tsunami waves were reported anywhere outside the impoverished islands, located north-east of Australia in the South Pacific.

Red Cross official Nancy Jolo said the risk of disease was rising — in the largest refugee camp located near Gizo.

"What we are experiencing right now in some of the camps is children starting to experience diarrhea," Jolo told Australian Broadcasting Corp. radio.

Fakurui said medical staff in Gizo had been overwhelmed by injuries and feared diseases such as diarrhea, cholera and malaria could break out because of the unhygienic conditions and lack of clean water and fresh food.

Keith Richards denies snorting his father's ashes

LONDON (AP) — Off the cuff or up the nose? That was the question Wednesday as Keith Richards said he was joking when he described snorting his father's ashes along with a hit of cocaine. "It was an off-the-cuff remark, a joke, and it is not true. File under April Fool's joke," said Bernard Doherty, a Rolling Stones spokesman, about Richards' quote in NME magazine. But the magazine said on its Web site that the remark was "no quip, but came about after much thinking" by the 63-year-old guitarist.

"He didn't offer the information, I had to ask him a couple of questions to get the information out of him," said interviewer Mark Beaumont. "He didn't come straight out with that."

In the interview, Richards was quoted as saying: "The strangest thing I've tried to snort is my father. I snorted my father."

He was cremated and I couldn't resist grinding him up with a little bit of blow. My dad wouldn't have cared ... it went down pretty well, and I'm still alive."

Richards' father, Bert, died in 2002, at 84.

In a statement posted on the Rolling Stones Web site, Richards said:

"The complete story is lost in the usual slanting! The truth of the matter is that I planted a sturdy English Oak. I took the lid off the box of ashes and he is now growing oak trees and would love me for it!!!"

"I was trying to say how tight Bert and I were. That if only I wouldn't take cocaine at this point in my life unless I wished to commit suicide."

Behind bars

Grupo Mazz co-founder begins long prison sentence

"Please, whatever you do. You stay alive and be somebody," said Tejano legend Joe Lopez before bidding farewell to music fans and colleagues of Grupo Mazz. Years spent sharing historic stages performing in front of sold-out arenas have ended for Lopez in a long sentence behind bars, leaving a former member of the group questioning his own future.

LATIN RITMO

Months shy of what some consider the greatest album release in the history of Tejano music, former lead singer of Tejano, Joe Lopez faced sentencing for sexually assaulting a teenage girl.

On Nov. 1, 2006, Tejano star and Grupo Mazz co-founder, Lopez, 56, stood in front of a jury that ordered a 20-year prison sentence for the molestation of a 13-year-old relative at his Rancho Viejo home on the charge of aggravated assault of a child. The jury also ordered 1 1/2 years for a second count of aggravated assault of a child, and four years for indecency with a child. The terms will run concurrently.

Lopez was convicted of the three charges on Oct. 20, 2006. Defense attorneys said prosecutors were not telling jurors that Lopez had a ruined named as "the most well-known sex offender in the state of Texas."

District Attorney Armando Villalobos countered that Lopez had not yet admitted to guilt. In addition, Lopez had a history of drug abuse, causing him to take advantage of people.

Lopez has continuously set a bad reputation for himself — personally and professionally — surrounding himself in drug abuse situations and, ultimately, leading to child molestation charges.

"Although, Joe is a good man and has been a great friend, times can change a man," said Jimmy Gonzalez, Lopez's former music partner, during a phone interview. "I have talked to Joe on several occasions after the incident occurred and he claims to be 'innocent.' As a friend, I have to respect his words."

Controversy and conflict have made it extremely difficult for respected record labels to work with the Tejano artist. Lopez, who had recently received a five-year contract with Corpus Christi based-Freddie Records, was dropped from the label's roster late December 2006.

However, before bidding his final farewell from the industry, Lopez finished his reign as one part of the original bad boys of Tejano music. He teamed for the first time in almost a decade with former friend and music partner, Jimmy Gonzalez, for a live album reunion.

"Having the opportunity to work with Joe helped bring back memories of what Grupo Mazz used to be back in the day," Gonzalez said.

It was back in 1998 that Gonzalez and Lopez made the decision to split, leaving unanswered questions concerning the future of Grupo Mazz.

Lopez went on to release two solo albums under EMI Latin-Television, including "A.B. Quintanilla III Presents Joe Lopez." Backed with "La Nueva Imagen de Grupo Mazz," Lopez soon learned that the sound differed to that of the original Grupo Mazz, leading fans to lose interest in the Brownsville, Texas, native.

"My music changed drastically. It wasn't that Joe Lopez-style music fans were used to," said Lopez in an August 2006 interview. "I went from doing vocals for Jimmy (Gonzalez) arrangements to working with an individual like A.B. Quintanilla III. I was honored that the production team worked hard to release this album. However, it just wasn't to my satisfaction."

Gonzalez also struggled to move along with his career. Eight months after the separation, he landed a five-year contract agreement with Freddie Records.

"After the split, I was lost, emotionally," Gonzalez said.

"Throughout my career, it was never about Jimmy Gonzalez y Grupo Mazz. Joe Lopez was the voice and representation since the beginning days of Grupo Mazz."

According to Gonzalez, it was his wife Lisa who pushed him forward.

"Lisa has always been great with me and my career. After she saw the stress I was putting myself in, she explained to me that the impossible was possible," he added. "I've been truly blessed with life and my career y Gracias a Dios (and thanks to God). I have been successful throughout the years and have managed to remain in the hearts and interest of music fans."

"Grupo Mazz Reunion The Last Dance," which hit stores earlier this month, has set an emotional value to the final chapter surrounding the legacy of Grupo Mazz. In addition to live recording performances by the duo, the album includes studio recorded tracks produced and arranged Gonzalez and Lopez.

"The wait is finally over," said Marc Martinez, promotions director with Freddie Records. "After years spent working to get the original bad boys of Tejano back on the same stage or even in the recording studio has finally paid off. This album will give Tejano fans nationwide the opportunity to witness one of the greatest reunions in la onda Tejano (in the world of Tejano)."

Esteban Gonzalez, a Burley native, worked as writer and co-founder of Tejano Y Grupo Nave in Corpus Christi, Texas, which covered the music scene. He has written about Gloria Esteban, Los Tigres del Norte and AB Quintanilla, to name a few.

Vivid Mayan textiles are a study in cultural evolution

The Associated Press

CHICAGO — As lingering winter gave way to the gray of early spring, some of the most vivid colors in Chicago were on museum walls: textiles from the Mayan people of Guatemala and southern Mexico.

For searing the eyes with bright, sometimes jarring hues, the exhibition "Arte Textil Maya" at the National Museum of Mexican Art wouldn't lose a trick to the fauvism of the early 20th century, or even the op art of the 1960s.

But the items on display aren't the signed creations of internationally known artists; they're the work of anonymous women, often woven with primitive back-strap looms.

There are skirts, ceremonial headbands and poncho-like women's blouses called "huipiles." Multi-use cloths, called "trajes," which can serve purposes as humble as covering food baskets or as exalted as altar hangings for religious rites, grace the exhibit. The textiles, created from the early decades of the 20th century to present day, come from the most related, but linguistically distinct, groups that make up the Mayan world.

"That world has made news recently, both through its royal past and its impoverished but activist present."

Met Gibson's violent film "Apocalypse" brought a version of the Mayan past to moviegoers, but drew the wrath of many archaeologists, including Mayan expert David Freidel of Southern Methodist University, who condemned it as a "big lie." And the modern Maya, after decades of repression, are making their voices heard — even to the point of purifying the Guatemalan ruins of Iximché after what they called a "polluting" visit by President Bush.

In the centuries that eluded between the storied past and present-day Mayan empowerment, generations of women patiently spun cotton, wool and rabbit fur into yarn. Then they dyed the yarn and wove it into complex patterns, which they further embellished with embroidery, brocade and applique.

"This exhibition gives us a way to link the modern era into the ancient civilization," said Cesario Moreno, visual arts director of the Mexican Fine Arts Museum. The works are from a collection assembled by Banamex, the parent company of Mexico's largest bank.

Stanford MBA students offer lesson in business and hope in New Orleans

By Ann M. Simmons
Los Angeles Times

"You know you have to come back. But when you looked at the devastation, you weren't quite sure how."

— Community Book Center owner Vera Warren-Williams on restarting her business after Hurricane Katrina hit

NEW ORLEANS — The Community Book Center, a longtime fixture on Bayou Road in the Esplanade Ridge neighborhood, was one of the numerous small-business casualties of Hurricane Katrina. The storm ravaged the store, the roof was ripped and at least 2 feet of water sat inside for several days, resulting in about $250,000 worth of structural damage and loss of inventory.

The owner's insurance wasn't nearly enough to cover the devastation, and she didn't have flood coverage.

"You know you have to come back," Warren-Williams said. "But when you looked at the devastation, you weren't quite sure how."

Help arrived in the form of a group of Stanford University MBA students, and their ideas have given her hope.

With the assistance of the Idea Village, a nonprofit that has provided scores of local businesses with technical support, contacts and capital, the students — 15 in all — have adopted several enterprises, among them the Community Book Center. Their mission is to show these businesses ways to grow and sustain in post-Katrina New Orleans. The storm physically destroyed or financially hurt more than 80 percent of the 12,695 small businesses that were in Orleans Parish before Katrina, according to local business officials. The few that have reopened are struggling to stay afloat with fewer customers, reduced profits and higher labor costs.

The MBA students believe they can use their college training to help the small-business owners maximize their potential in the face of post-storm challenges.

"Education is what you learn in the classroom," said Daryn Dodson, 27, who organized the student group. "It doesn't mean anything until you apply it practically."

Dodson began his master's program the week Katrina hit New Orleans. As he sat in his dorm room, watching the disaster unfold on television, he felt compelled to do something.

He started fundraising drives, including a "gumbo get-together," where he and fellow students raised about $7,000 and donated it to Habitat for Humanity.

"We sent the check, but it felt so empty," Dodson recalled. In December 2005, during winter break, the Washington, D.C., native took his first trip to New Orleans, visiting relief organizations, surveying the ruins and determining what assistance was needed. On spring break, he was back with two dozen other Stanford students helping to gut food-damaged homes.

The most recent trip, Dodson's fourth, brought him and fellow Stanford MBA students Sarah Chandler Mallari, Shara Tortora and Eugene Baah to the Community Book Center.

For Warren-Williams, it wasn't a moment too soon.

Student volunteers had helped her clean and gut the store shortly after the storm. Other volunteers tackled the mold while her husband's cousin, a contractor, fixed the roof. Community members, customers and local grassroots groups donated plywood, paint and other materials. The Idea Village provided technical assistance and a $5,000 grant, which Warren-Williams said she used to replace inventory.

Now Dodson and his group are helping her tap into the remaining customer base, for which all the surviving neighborhood businesses compete, and get the dollars flowing.

"Folks like Daryn and his team allow all of us to look beyond ... to look forward," said Tim Williamson, Idea Village's president. "It allows people like Vera to say, 'OK, I survived, now what's the plan going forward?'"

Warren-Williams said her store had operated more like a community service center than a moneymaking venture.

"The bottom line has not necessarily been profits but just providing a service," she said.

But with about 75 percent of her customer base gone, Warren-Williams knew things had to change.

"Now we have to be more business-minded, to think about profits, and think about other ways to diversify," she said.

This week, Dodson and his team met with the "Belle of Bayou Road," as Warren-Williams is known. The group huddled in the rear courtyard of the Community Book Center, which reopened in December but closed again recently for further renovation.

The Stanford team presented Warren-Williams with several recommendations, including creating a sign at the end of her street that would catch the eye of motorists and pedestrians on the adjoining thoroughfare.

DaimlerChrysler AG confirms it's in talks with potential Chrysler buyer

By Matt Moore
Associated Press writer

The Chrysler unit lost $1.5 billion in 2006.

BERLIN — DaimlerChrysler AG is confident a turnaround program at its Chrysler unit will return the beleaguered — American brand to profitability, but Chairman Dieter Zetsche said Wednesday the automaker is in talks with unidentified potential buyers.

"As announced on Feb. 14, we are open to all options for future collaboration with Chrysler," he told some 9,000 shareholders crammed inside Berlin's exhibition center. "The statement is still true today."

He said that the talks have been with "potential partners who have shown a clear interest" and "so far, I am satisfied with the process. Everything is going according to plan."

He would not elaborate on who was involved in the talks.

Zetsche stunned the automotive world on Feb. 14 when he said that continued losses and fierce competition in the United States meant that the German-American automaker was considering all options for its Chrysler unit, and did not rule out a possible sale, saying only that all options were being considered.

He did not disclose whether any decision to sell Chrysler had been made or if the company was any closer to a solution. Still, he did say a recovery plan that will cut 13,000 jobs in the U.S. and Canada was moving forward.

"The crucial factor was the unforeseeable shift in demand to smaller, more fuel-efficient vehicles which was triggered by increased gas prices — in the U.S.," Zetsche said. He noted that Chrysler's strengths have been minivans, pickups and sport utility vehicles, auto not known for their fuel efficiency.

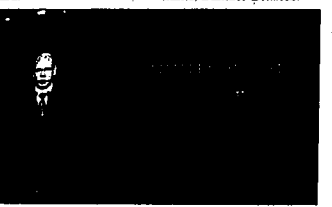

No clear front-runner has yet emerged to buy Chrysler, but Canadian auto-parts supplier Magna International Inc. reportedly has submitted a bid to buy the business for as much as $4.7 billion.

Cerberus Capital Management LLC and a consortium of investors led by Blackstone Group each have reviewed Chrysler's finances and are expected to make bids.

If DaimlerChrysler does sell off the U.S. unit, it will mark a significant change in fortunes since it bought Auburn Hills, Mich.-based Chrysler in 1998 for $36 billion.

Despite helping to keep the company afloat as little as two years ago when the Mercedes Car Group suffered massive quality control problems and declining sales, at least some of the company's more than 1 million shareholders have been pushing for a divorce — in both style and substance.

Shareholders Ekkehard Wenger and Leonhard Knoll have put forward a motion calling for the company to revert back to its original name, Daimler-Benz AG.

CEO of the DaimlerChrysler automobile company Dieter Zetsche speaks during the annual general meeting in Berlin, Wednesday.

Preying on those less fortunate: Predatory lenders hit moderate-income home buyers

By Dan E. Borzday
The Washington Post

One in 30 homeowners in Philadelphia has been hurt by predatory lenders who target people who live in moderate-income neighborhoods and whose homes are often their only asset, illustrating a problem that has captured the attention of federal and local legislators throughout the country.

The study by the Reinvestment Fund, a community-development group in Philadelphia, analyzed the sales and mortgage histories of 15,500 Philadelphia properties to discern patterns of predatory lending practices, which generally impose excessive or unnecessary rates and fees, often on unwitting borrowers, many of them minorities. The study is being released this week.

"The same kind of lending practices have taken place in many different parts of the country," said Mark Zandi, chief economist at Moody's Economy.com, who has reviewed the Philadelphia study.

The fund found that the likelihood of becoming victimized by predatory lenders is one in seven for borrowers who have refinanced their homes multiple times. Any mortgage creates a public paper trail that documents a borrower's financial situation.

"That public record becomes a mark that you are available and you have equity available and you can be marketed to," said Ira Goldstein, author of the 100-page study, which was funded by the Ford Foundation.

The group timed the study to coincide with debate on how to stem the national surge in mortgage delinquencies and foreclosures, both of which have risen to record levels in some parts of the country.

Lax lending in the first half of the decade allowed people to buy homes they otherwise could not afford. But when the housing market softened, people who had trouble making their monthly payments got stuck with houses they could not sell or refinance. The most vulnerable of homeowners were people with blemished credit or low incomes, known as subprime borrowers.

Generally, those people pay 2 to 3 percent more on a mortgage than the more creditworthy — prime — borrowers. Predatory lenders added to those already high costs by raising the rates even further and tacking on fees. A predatory loan may have high prepayment penalties, for instance, that strip the equity from a home.

Despite critics, Pelosi meets with Syrian leaders

By Peter Spiegel and Richard Brewster
Los Angeles Times

JERUSALEM — U.S. House Speaker Nancy Pelosi held a widely anticipated meeting with Syrian President Bashar Assad on Wednesday, bringing her a message that Israeli leaders were open to renewing long-dormant peace negotiations and drawing intensified criticism from the Bush administration and its allies.

The meeting was the highest-level contact between the U.S. and Syrian governments in four years and the latest in a series of moves by congressional Democrats to force the Bush administration toward a new course in the region. Her visit comes less than two weeks after passage of legislation that would force the White House to begin the withdrawal of American troops from Iraq.

Televised images of Pelosi and Assad were broadcast repeatedly across the Middle East and in the United States. As third in the line of succession to the U.S. presidency, the San Francisco Democrat's visits to markets and mosques offered viewers across the Middle East a contrast to the Bush administration's hard-line stance.

The Assad government seized on the visit as an opportunity to renew bilateral talks between the two countries and to criticize the Bush administration for its policy of trying to isolate the Syrian regime.

"These people in the United States who are opposing dialogue I tell them one thing: Dialogue is... the only method to close the gap existing between two countries," said Syrian Foreign Minister Walid Moallem. "We are happy that Mrs. Pelosi and her delegation had the courage and determination to bridge these differences."

Pelosi emerged from the meeting with Assad saying in a televised news conference that she had pressed him on Syria's support for Hamas, the militant Palestinian movement, and Lebanon's Hezbollah militia, both organizations included on the U.S. State Department's list of international terrorist groups.

But she also stressed a desire for direct talks with the regime which contrasts sharply with the administration's policy. "We came in friendship, hope, and determined that the road to Damascus is a road to peace," Pelosi said.

The White House and conservative critics seized on the comment about the road to Damascus to ratchet up their criticism of Pelosi.

"Unfortunately, that road is lined with the victims of Hamas and Hezbollah, and the victims of terrorists who cross from Syria into Iraq," said Gordon Jondree, a White House spokesman traveling with Bush to California. "It's lined with the victims in Lebanon, who are trying to fight for democracy there; it's lined with human rights activists trying for freedom and democracy in Syria."

The rhetoric was notably sharper than Bush's comment about the meeting in which he called Pelosi's initiative "counterproductive."

Pelosi's comments also sparked a flurry of statements in Israel. Pelosi met over the weekend with Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Olmert and carried a message from him. At her news conference, she said that Assad was "ready to engage in negotiations for peace with Israel." Her language prompted speculation that Olmert had changed Israel's stance on the conditions under which it would hold talks with Damascus.

Olmert's office quickly released a statement after Pelosi's remarks, reiterating his position that Syria must first renounce support for Hamas and Hezbollah, a condition Israelis believe would be difficult for Assad to agree to.

Pelosi has described her meeting with Assad as an attempt to breathe new life into recommendations made by the Iraq Study Group.

Asia's richest woman, Nina Wang, dies at age 69

By John Lee
Associated Press writer

HONG KONG — Nina Wang, a pigtailed Hong Kong businesswoman who turned her slain husband's fortune into a real-estate empire that made her one of the world's richest women, has died. She was 69.

Wang's spokesman Ringo Wong said Wang died Tuesday. He did not describe the cause of death, but Hong Kong media reported that Wang had ovarian cancer that spread to her liver and other organs.

Wang's rise to become Asia's richest woman, according to Forbes Asia, had the plot elements of a Hollywood movie — sex, greed, crime and courtroom drama.

Born Kung Yu-sam in Shanghai, Wang moved to Hong Kong in the 1960s with Teddy Wang, who founded the Chincham Group pharmaceutical company.

Teddy Wang was abducted in 1990 as he left Hong Kong's exclusive Jockey Club. The family paid a $33 million ransom but he was never returned.

Several of the kidnappers were caught and said that the 56-year-old Wang had been thrown into the sea from the sampan — a small Chinese boat — where he was held.

His body was never found and he was declared dead in 1999.

Nina Wang insisted that she believed Teddy Wang was alive and would someday return. He had been kidnapped seven years earlier and released for $11 million ransom.

In her husband's absence, Nina Wang built Chincham into a massive private property developer, with office towers and apartment complexes throughout Hong Kong.

Forbes magazine ranked her this year as the world's No. 204 richest person, with a fortune of $4.2 billion.

Wang captivated the public with her pigails and garish, girlish outfits. She was nicknamed "Little Sweetie," the Chinese name of a rice pudding character from a Japanese fairy-tale cartoon.

Remains are not from Joan of Arc: Rib bone turns out to be from Egyptian mummy

By John Lockwood
Associated Press writer

PARIS — A rib bone supposedly found at the site where French heroine Joan of Arc was burned at the stake is actually that of an Egyptian mummy, according to researchers who used high-tech science to expose the fake.

The bone, a piece of cloth and a cat femur were placed in and recovered after the 19-year-old was burned in 1431 in the town of Rouen. In 1909 — the year Joan of Arc was beatified — scientists declared it "highly probable" that the relics were hers.

But starting last year, 20 researchers from France, Switzerland and Benin took another look. Even they were surprised to find the rib bone came from an Egyptian mummy. Their best guess is that the fake was cooked up in the 19th century, perhaps to boost the process of Joan of Arc's beatification. She was canonized as a saint in 1920 by the Roman Catholic Church.

In medieval times and later,

French Dr. Philippe Charlier displays the supposed remains of 15th-century French heroine Joan of Arc, in February 2006 in Carcass, west of Paris.

powdered mummy remains were used as medicine "to treat stomach ailments, long or painful periods, all blood problems," Philippe Charlier, who headed the research team, told The Associated Press.

The team's assumption is that a 19th-century apothecary transformed "these remains of an Egyptian mummy into a fake relic, or fake historic remains, of Joan of Arc," he said.

"Now the mystery is why? Probably not for money," said Charlier. "Perhaps it was for religious reasons. Perhaps it was created to increase the importance of the process of beatification in 1909."

Tests dated the rib bone to between the 7th and 3rd centuries B.C., he said. The cat bone dated from the same period and also was mummified. The researchers also found pine pollen, probably from resin used in Egyptian embalming, he said.

They were unable to extract DNA from the remains, meaning they could not identify the sex of the mummy or the cat.

"The embalming products appear to have prevented the conservation of the DNA, and they are too old, so it didn't work," Charlier said. Even perfumers were called in as detectives. The researchers had their sniff of the remains, using their exceptional olfactory senses "so they could identify the smells, the vegetable matter in the embalming and guide our research," Charlier said.

The remains were supposedly recovered from Joan of Arc's pyre and conserved by an apothecary until 1867, before being turned over to the archdiocese of Tours.

Joan of Arc was tried for heresy and witchcraft and executed after leading the French to several victories over the English during the Hundred Years War, notably in Orleans, south of Paris.

The illiterate farm girl from Lorraine, in eastern France, disguised herself as a man in her war campaigns and said she heard voices from saints telling her to deliver France from the English.

Simple Landscape Tricks to Increase Curb Appeal

These days, the home-improvement industry is as big as it's ever been. Take a casual drive through a typical suburban neighborhood and you're liable to see a fair number of houses undergoing some sort of reclamation project.

Thankfully, the answer for a lot of people is right outside their windows. Improving the landscape of a yard doesn't have to be expensive. And such improvements can go a long way to increasing a home's curb appeal, making it more attractive to prospective buyers.

Think Foliage. Upon planting flowers, many homeowners are surprised at the impact those flowers have on the look and feel of their home. Flowerbeds around the perimeter of a house add to the color of a home, while also making it feel more welcoming to guests, including prospective buyers.

Plant Trees. If like many homeowners, you simply don't have the time to keep your lawn looking lush and green throughout the year, consider planting some trees around the property. This is not only environmentally friendly, but also friendly as well, as tending to trees is not nearly as time-consuming as keeping a lawn in great shape. Just make sure you consult with neighbors first if you plan on planting near property lines.

Work On Your Walkways & Surrounding Landscape. Unless you have young children, you and your guests will likely spend more time on walkways and patio decks than you will in the actual yard lawn. Take advantage of that by further lessening the time you spend on the actual grass as a means to keeping it in even better shape. For example, if you have a backyard garden you're especially proud of, install a concrete walkway that leads you and potential visitors back to the garden.

VIDEO GAME REVIEW

Kratos battles the Colossus of Rhodes in "Gods of War II" for PlayStation 2.

Sworded affairs: Kratos comes out swinging

BY LOU KESTER
 The Associated Press

Do kids really imitate the violence they see in video games? If you believe they do, then answer this: Why haven't we seen a huge surge in sword-related crimes over the last few decades?

I'd wager that far more games involve swordplay than gunplay. In role-playing games, for example, the sword is typically the default weapon; guns are usually reserved for weaker support characters. But in action games, too, from "The Legend of Zelda" to "Prince of Persia," you're more likely to attack someone with a pointy object than a ball of bullets. Heck, even in the "Star Wars" universe light sabers — really just fluorescent swords — far outnumber projectile weapons.

Sure, there are plenty of first-person shooters out there for cowards who would rather take out the enemy from a distance. But nothing matches the visceral kick of mano-a-mano, blade-to-blade combat.

• "God of War II" (Sony, for the PlayStation 2, $39.99) — When we last saw Kratos, the tattooed, muscle-bound hero of "God of War," he had defeated the Greek deity Ares and assumed his throne on Mount Olympus. But the rest of the gods aren't too happy with Kratos' interference with human events, so he's booted back to Earth. Armed with Athena's Blades, a nifty pair of daggers that he can whip at enemies, the dyspeptic hero sets out on a new mission of vengeance.

"God of War" surprised a lot of people with its compulsive gameplay and cinematic flair, but "God of War II" surpasses it in every way. It is a superb send-off to the reliable old PS2.

• "TMNT" (Ubisoft, for the Wii, Xbox 360, PlayStation 2, GameCube, $39.99) — The Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles should be in their mid-30s by now, but they aren't showing their age. Their new video game picks up their story at the same place as the movie, with the team divided.

For the most part, you'll be playing with one turtle at a time, and each has his own weapon

'GRINDHOUSE'

Stuntman Mike (Kurt Russell) uses his muscle car as a weapon in "Death Proof," which is Quentin Tarantino's half of 'Grindhouse.'

DENNIS PIERRE

Tarantino's epic homage to '70s schlock

BY CHRISY LEMIRE
 The Associated Press

If you've got a taste for blood and three hours to kill, "Grindhouse" is for you.

It's an epic homage to '70s B-movie kitch from longtime friends Robert Rodriguez and Quentin Tarantino, who each wrote and directed an entire feature-length film and asked buddies to pitch in with fake trailers in between. (The one from "Hotel" director Gill Haith is especially inspired. Dude is twisted, let's just say that.)

The name comes from the fact that theaters would grind out double and triple features of exploitation flicks, badly dubbed kung fu movies, salacious sex romps — the kind of giddy schlock Rodriguez and Tarantino grew up loving and since have made a career of copying.

Whether or not you prefer this particular flavor of cheese, and many film geeks do, it's worth seeing simply because there's nothing else like it. It's not just a movie. It's an event, one that demands your attention and perseverance. You can't get up to go to the bathroom or grab a soda in between features. You wouldn't want to anyway — much of the allure comes from the details, the filler, the scratched-up promos with their dated graphics and warbly sound.

'Grindhouse'

Starring Marley Shelton, Josh Brodin, Freddy Rodriguez. Rated R for strong graphic bloody violence and gore, pervasive language, some sexuality, nudity and drug use.

Starts Friday at Odyssey Theater in Twin Falls.

If nothing else, "Grindhouse" transports you to another place and time. Rodriguez and Tarantino have yet to create a truly original film, but they're masters of recreating genres. And while they've played this ground countless times before (between the "El Mariachi" trilogy, "Pulp Fiction" and the "Kill Bill" movies, "Grindhouse" represents the formidable strength of their combined knowledge and abilities.

The movie comes on like absolute gangbusters with the Rodriguez segment, "Planet Terror," about a plague that spreads through a small Texas town, turning people into pus-riddled, blood-spewing, zombie-like predators.

Marley Shelton and Josh Brodin (whose rugged looks are perfect for the era) play husband-and-wife doctors trying to stave off the infection at a hospital, while barely bothering to save their marriage. Meanwhile, a group of vigilantes tries to take back the town, led by Freddy Rodriguez as a gunslinger known as El Wray, and Rose McGowan as a go-go dancer named Cherry. (Anding of course, who loses a leg and gets a machine gun in its place.)

(McGowan's dramatically sexy features are ideal here: She's a girl who knows she's gorgeous but has enough of a sense of humor to play with her own image.) "Planet Terror" is a total blast — funny, gloriously gory and over the top. The intentionally trashed footage and supposedly missing reels add to the authentic charm — as if we truly are watching a movie that has barely survived being trucked from town to town and unspoiled over and over.

Then comes Tarantino's contribution, "Death Proof." And it's so typically verbose of him, it nearly kills all the momentum that had built over the previous two hours.

Kurt Russell simmers menacingly as a grizzled drifter named Stuntman Mike, who likes to stalk women with his muscle car. (Russell, the veteran of such John Carpenter films as "Escape From New York" and "The Thing," also exudes just the right vibe.) Among his targets are McGowan (again), Rosario Dawson, Tracie Thoms, Mary-Elizabeth Winstead and real-life stuntwoman Zoe Bell, who is truly a specimen to behold.

But first his potential victims talk. And talk, and talk. What Tarantino's trying to do is lure us in — place us in a comfort zone with these women through the rhythms of their discussions about sex and romance — just to yank us out of it with the film's climactic and truly dazzling car chase, which is a marvel of staging and timing.

Until then, though, it ends up feeling just plain boring — an unfortunately inelegant letdown after such a thrilling buildup.

Nevertheless, "Grindhouse" is still a must-see. Just to say you survived it.

Movie nuggets

• "Amazing Grace" / B
A seriously enlightening, and just plain serious, biography of William Wilberforce, the English man who led the crusade to abolish slavery in the British Empire in the late 1700s. The movie works in many ways — as Christian inspiration (Wilberforce's spiritual mentor wrote the hymn "Amazing Grace"), as love story, as a lesson for us today that even though the issues have changed, the things Wilberforce says here are still valid. Lon Griffith stars, but the supporters get all the red-carpet roles, including Albert Finney as the hymn writer and Michael Gambon as a witty politician. PG. 1 hour, 51 minutes.

• "Are We Done Yet?" / No rating
This picks up where the last story left off. Now married to Suzanne (Nia Long), Nick Persons (Ice Cube) has bought a quiet suburban house to escape the rat race of the big city and to provide more space for his new wife and kids Lindsey and Kevin (Aleiasha Allen and Phillip Daniel Bolden). But when his new home quickly becomes a money pit, and he finds himself at the mercy of a negligent contractor (John C. McMillen), PG

• "Breath" / C
Not even the great Chris Cooper can act in a vacuum, which is why this spy thriller (based on the true story of double agent Robert Hanssen) is only half as good as it should be. Cooper plays Hanssen, a turncoat arrested in 2001 for selling secrets to the Soviets. Alas, Ryan Phillippe, as the young agent assigned to flush him out, is just awful. PG-13. 1 hour, 50 minutes.

• "Blades of Glory" / B+
Gloriously funny, Will Ferrell does to ice-skating what he did to NASCAR in "Friday Night Lights." Name-crate athletes' rituals and clichés without ever making fun of the fans. Ferrell and Jon Heder play rivals with very different styles (the former is "Skating's Outlaw," the latter "Skating's Little Awesome Orphan"). Barred for life from ever competing in men's singles after a brawl at the World Championships, they team up to become the first same-sex duo in pairs skating. Some of the jokes come at you so fast and furiously, you won't care. This is what a dumb-and-dumber comedy should be: pure luscious lunacy. PG-13. 1 hour, 33 minutes.

• "Firehouse Dog" / No rating
 Rex, Hollywood's top-grossing canine, is known for his extreme athletic abilities and diva-like demeanor. But his luck runs out while shooting a commercial; an aerial stunt goes awry, leaving Rex's handlers to presume he's dead. But Rex is merely lost alone, fluffy and unrecognized in an unfamiliar city. Chased by animal control, he takes refuge in grubby abandoned lofts, a far cry from his former luxurious lifestyle. PG

• "The Hills Have Eyes 2" / No rating
 In this sequel to Wes Craven's 1977 thriller, military training in the desert is just about finished when some rabid mutant mutants show up and spoil the mood by dismembering the troops. Critic warning: Not shown to students for review. R. 1 hour, 29 minutes.

• "The Last Mimzy" / B-
 In a culture where an overhyped juggernaut like "TMNT" is being shoved down kids' throats, this family film's modest charms seem especially praiseworthy. The title alone will doubtless strike a chord with Lewis Carroll fans, but the plot is updated from a 1943 short story about two kids who discover a mysterious box. Inside are some toylike objects from the future — including a rag-doll rabbit named Mimzy — with a gentle, planet-occision. A sci-fi fantasy along the lines of "E.T.," the picture is, on its own low-budget terms, a small gem. And it has the funniest family breakfast scene this side of "Little Miss Sunshine." PG. 1 hour, 30 minutes.

• "Meet the Robinsons" / B+
 Disney's latest digital animation flick features some nice 3-D that's used more to enhance the story rather than just swoop-out-of-the-screen gimmicks. Little Lewis is an orphan, a sweet nerd and a ceaseless inventor who is contacted by both a bad guy and a boy his own age who have come from the future. He ends up going back to the future (yes, indeedly) and falls in with a family of eccentrics in a long, hyper-sequence kids will love but adults may find exhausting. Of course, he ultimately has to zip around and save the world, but the movie's final 10 minutes provides several surprising twists that make it more satisfying than the usual Disney fare. G. 1 hour, 42 minutes.

• "Music and Lyrics" / B-
 The song remains the same in this somewhat conventional romantic comedy, but Drew Barrymore and Hugh Grant hit all the right notes. And that's his reason not to see it. He plays an '80s pop star now content to work the has-been circuit (crui-ses, reunions). Then a pop diva asks him to write her a song, but where to find a lyricist? Enter Barrymore as his divy plant waitress, who has a way with words. Relax, go with it and you'll have a fine time. PG-13. 1 hour, 36 minutes.

• "Premonition" / C+
 Sandra Bullock is game (and good), but her movie's meta-games don't always work. She plays a woman whose husband (Julian McMahon) dies in a car crash. Or does he? One morning she wakes up and it's time for the funeral. The next morning, hubby is in the kitchen "drinking coffee. As Bullock pings-pongs back and forth between these two realities, she tries to change fate. The movie is fitfully fascinating as we — and she — piece together what's happening (the why is so lame, it's embarrassing). But the picture simply doesn't hang together, and you may leave the theater more frustrated than tantalized. PG-13. 1 hour, 38 minutes.

• "Reign Over Me" / B
 A worthy, emotionally acute, well-acted character-driven film tied to Sept. 11. Adam Sandler stars as a man whose lost his grip on life after losing his family in one of the planes that crashed. Don Cheadle is a successful dentist and old pal who sees the distressed Sandler trolling around Manhattan on his scooter and decides to rescue him. Or, at least try. The movie has a strange, meandering quality, almost as if we're inside Sandler's head, and it's too long. But the cast is excellent (Jada Pinkett Smith, Liv Ullmann, and so on), and director Mike Binder ("The Inside of Anger") has made a sincere, heartfelt film that's neither exploitative nor dumb. R. 2 hours, 4 minutes.

• "Shooter" / C
 Mark Wahlberg gets props for balancing out the utter implausibility of director Antoine Fuqua's crash-boom conspiracy melodrama, bringing a brooding anti-hero edge to the title character. Sgt. Bob Lee Swagger — a tough, crack Marine sniper, who is recruited by a shadowy ex-military man (Danny Glover) to help prevent a presidential assassination attempt, but instead winds up wounded and on the man from the FBI. Fuqua's film goes haywire as it mixes all manner of action conventions — car chases, gun battles, apocalyptic explosions, a pretty, grieving woman (Kate Mara), and an accidental sidekick (Michael Pena) — with a convoluted plot that bleakly suggests a cabal going back to the Kennedy assassination. R. 2 hours, 9 minutes.

• "300" / B
 Gerard Butler ("The Phantom of the Opera") stars as King Leonidas in this heavily computer-generated film based on the fabled story of Thermopylae, where in 480 B.C. 300 Spartans and several hundred other Greeks staged the equivalent of a steel-cage smackdown against hundreds of thousands (some accounts go as high as two million) of invading Persians. It's loose with historic facts and is a dark, fierce graphic novel-in-motion full of blood-splatters, female nudity, over-the-top creatures and rewritten history. Storywise, the film lasts about 15 minutes, but it's rendered in such persistent, occasionally arresting, slow motion, that "300" creeps toward two hours. It's often gorgeous (the stylized scenery sizzles with unnatural beauty), thrilling in the intensity of hand-to-hand combat and ultra-committed to the idea of comic book as art. R. 1 hour, 57 minutes.

"Charlotte's Web"

The new live-action rendering of E.B. White's perennial children's favorite, "Charlotte's Web," is so carefully spun that it's lifeless. Which is ironic because, since it was first published in 1952, the book the movie is based on has been a gentle introduction for children to the harsh realities of the cycle of life.

Adapted by Oscar nominee Susannah Grant ("Erlin Brockovich") and "Over the Hedge" writer-director Karey Kirkpatrick, the film is faithful to its source material and mercifully makes no attempt to update it with contemporary slang. The familiar tale of a runt pig named Wilbur who is saved from slaughter by a young girl named Fern (played by Dakota Fanning) and befriended by a spider with an appreciation for language is much the same as you would remember from reading it as a child or seeing the 1973 animated version.

The action takes place primarily in a barn on the Zuckerman farm, where Wilbur (voiced by Dominic Scott Kay) goes to live when he gets too big for Fern to care for and where he is surrounded by a menagerie of critters who initially have no use for the little porker.

It takes the observations of Charlotte (voiced by Julia Roberts), the titular arachnid, to make the others realize Wilbur's special qualities. Acting as a sort of de facto publicist seeking to keep her porcine pal from the smokehouse, Charlotte spins the words "some pig" into her web, gaining the attention of Zuckerman and the outside world.

The producers spared little expense in putting the voices of big-name actors into the computer-enhanced mouths of the animals. Besides Roberts, the vocal cast includes Robert Redford, Kathy Bates, Reba McEntire, Cedric the Entertainer, Thomas Haden Church and Andre Braugher. All that star power, how-

Dakota Fanning and her radiant pig in 'Charlotte's Web.'

Matt Damon, with Angeline Jolie, plays a young spy in a hurry in 'The Good Shepherd.'

"The Good Shepherd"

Robert De Niro hasn't directed a movie since 1993's not-all-that-A-Bronx-Tale. Yet he's done a remarkable thing with "The Good Shepherd." He's made a Mafia movie about the CIA. And he's done it so cleverly, with such confidence that the audience will stay with him, even through an often convoluted plot, he's made one of the best pictures of the year.

Using an agent's career as his focal point, De Niro shows us how the two groups operate in startlingly similar ways. The allegiance to the Family or the Company over any personal bonds. The theatrical gestures such as a severed finger in a coffee can or a deadly box of Swiss chocolates — both the handiwork of the CIA, not Mafia. And, of course, the cryptically coded language. "So-and-so sleeps with the fishes" (Mafia for dead) vs. "So-and-so says Sunday is a perfect day for a day at the beach" (CIA for the Bay of Pigs Invasion).

The failure of the Bay of Pigs in 1961 — the CIA's botched attempt to get rid of Fidel Castro — bookends the film as it jumps around the '30s, '40s, '50s and early '60s. When we first meet Edward Wilson (Matt Damon), he's a gray man in a gray overcoat wearing a gray hat. In other words, colorless, which is just how the Agency likes it. One of the chief planners of the Bay of Pigs fiasco, he's now on a short list of suspected leaks. Or as another agent puts it in even more code, "We have a stranger in our house."

The film then flashes back to Yale University, 1939, where Wilson is a boyishly ruffled puppy lover whose poetry teacher (Michael Gambon) admires Hitler, makes unwelcome passes and plagiarizes poems (to his young student, his worst sin).

In short order, Wilson is recruited by two ultra-secretive, ultra-powerful groups. One is Yale's prestigious Skull and Bones society, where America's future movers and shakers get chummy before they leave the university to run the world (John Kerry and both Presidents Bush are members) and marry suitably pedigreed blondes with finishing-school lockjaw.

The other is the Office of Strategic Services (OSS), which eventually morphs into the CIA. A fictionalized version of OSS founder "Wild Bill" Donovan (an impressive extended cameo by De Niro himself) thinks Wilson has the right stuff; that is, a suspicious mind, an outsize sense of loyalty and a knack for details. And a proper WASP bloodline.

One important detail Wilson forgets is safe sex. A quickie with a fellow Bonesman's (that's how they address each other) lively sister Clover (Angelina Jolie) results in her getting pregnant and him getting married to a woman he doesn't love. But for Wilson, that's not a bad thing. He doesn't want her or their oddly formal son (the calls Wilson "father") to interfere with his real family. Like Diane Kenton's character at the end of "The Godfather," Clover is effectively (and permanently) shut out of her husband's life.

"The Good Shepherd" shows us how the corridors of power open up quite early for a certain inner circle. And it does so in a wry, mostly appalled, look-at-this manner.

Sequestered on their private island on the St. Lawrence River, the Bonesmen indulge in ridiculous-looking rituals that suggest the nuttiest parts of "Eyes Wide Shut" (but without the sex). And, as the movie shows it, many of our nation's CEOs, Supreme Court judges and other power-elite insiders have a fondness for Broadway show tunes. When some silver-haired members get up on stage and wave their straw hats while singing "There is Nothing Like a Dame," you can't help but gasp, these guys are running our country!

The chicken-fried steak dinner at Buhl's Home Town Cookin'.

Home Town Cookin': The name says it all

BY STEVE CRUMP
Times News writer

BUHL — It was a quarter to two on a weekday afternoon when I settled into a booth at Home Town Cookin', a six-year-old eatery run by veteran Magic Valley restaurateurs Terry and Kay Sheaffer.

I ordered the chicken-fried steak dinner — chicken-fried steak being the truest Illinois test of a small-town restaurant — and the waitress came back in five minutes.

"Our cook is refusing to serve the green beans," she explained. "She says they're just not good enough."

When was the last time a cafe you visited declined to feed you anything second-rate?

Instead of extra beans, I was given the option of string beans, mashed potatoes or corn. I picked the former, and found that I barely finished half of my meal. There was enough on my plate to feed the Twin Falls Canal Company board of directors.

About Home Town Cookin'

1000 Burley Ave., Buhl
Steak, shrimp, specialty pizza; prime rib and cashew special; Friday nights, $6.99-$13.99. Hours: Mondays through Thursdays, 6 a.m.-8 p.m.; Fridays and Saturdays, 6 a.m.-9 p.m.; Sundays, 7 a.m.-6 p.m. Terry and Kay Sheaffer, owners. 543-2252.

But I came away feeling I'd discovered the last honest restaurant.

Many small-town eateries used to be the same way, but competition and rising costs have taken the edge off quality and service.

Not here. Before the chicken-fried steak — and included in the cost of the meal — came a large bowl of homemade chicken-wild rice soup so thick that it fork stood upright in it. With dinner came a scone made on the premises, topped with honey-butter.

And the steak? It was a steal for $10.99.

Chicken fried steak is a Texas concoction, based on the wiener schnitzel brought from Austria by immigrants. The battered-and-fried cube steak recipe spread quickly throughout the South and then the West, where it is now ubiquitous — and of widely varying quality.

The cut of meat, obviously, is critical. It's impossible to adequately season shoe leather.

Home Town Cookin's version was tender enough to eat with a fork, with a balanced mix of salt, pepper and other seasonings. And the white gravy tasted more of meat than of flour, which is another common pliff of chicken fried steak.

It was a delightful way to spend lunch. And I came away with enough leftovers to feed me for the rest of the week.

'Introducing' her true self

Joss Stone has difficult time facing crowd

Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — Joss Stone sometimes has trouble standing tough onstage. The reason she gets wobbly? Stage fright. The 19-year-old singer and songwriter, whose third album, "Introducing Joss Stone," makes its U.S. chart debut on Wednesday, learned a few years ago that the best way to avoid a crowd's scrutiny is to avert your gaze.

"I close my eyes a lot," Stone said recently as she unwound after taping a promotional appearance at a soundstage in nearby Burbank. "I don't want to know that everybody is staring at me, and judging me, whether they like my clothes or the color of my hair. So I go into another place. When I open my eyes, that's when I start giggling and everything, when I realize, 'Oh no, everybody's looking at me.'" Stone's nerves have been affecting her lately, and for good reason. "Introducing" is expected to debut at or near the top of the chart, with a record-company projection of first-week sales in the neighborhood of 100,000 copies. Yet it has been dogged by mixed reviews and growing skepticism about her integrity.

The album, which debuted in her native England at No. 12, along with a plummetering first single, is a painful disappointment in light of the artist's insistence that her two previous, multi-platinum efforts did not reflect her vision and that this is her first real artistic statement.

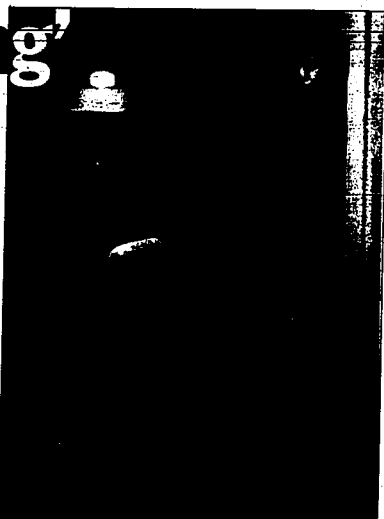

Add a sizzling from Fleet Street after she behaved nervously at the Brit Awards, online fuss over her new pink coil and alleged marijuana use, and cheap gossip about her relationships with male collaborators, and Stone is facing a savage spring. Success in the U.S. may be her revenge, but one thing is sure: The days of simple amazement at Stone's monumental chops are gone, replaced by the challenges of adulthood.

Are the criticisms of Stone fair? In both conversation and performance, Stone comes off as a big talent still discovering herself but getting sick of doing so in public. She's a hot-but-not girl, but it's more than just her youth and gender that set people spinning: The flap over "Introducing" brings up issues of race, authenticity and artistic license that have been debated since the dawn of pop.

Stone, whose birth name is Jocelyn Stoker, grew up in a privileged household — her father is a highly successful importer of dried fruit — listening to soul music. "Somebody told my mum that you get your pitch within the first three years of your life," she said. "She says that I got mine from Anita Baker, because she was playing her a lot." After school, Joss would put on Dusty Springfield's "Great Glee" and cook dinner for her family as the original big-eyed soul singer's voice wafted through the kitchen. Factor in her brother's penchant for old-school hip-hop, dad's jam fandom and her granny's fondness for Led Zeppelin, and it adds up to a smorgasbord of takes on black music, from both sides of the racial divide.

Unlike many artists who absorb these sources and then take time to make them into something new, Stone became a star in her mid-teens. She won an "American Idol"-style TV talent contest at 14 by singing Donna Summer's "On the Radio" and soon signed with a manager who brought her to Miami, where she recorded her debut under the guidance of soul singer Betty Wright. Stone's big voice and gift for channeling her sources gained her instant notice, and soon she found herself learning at the feet of the very people whose recordings had shaped her childhood reveries.

"I learn from Lamont Dozier, Gladys Knight, Patti LaBelle," she said, name-checking one great songwriter and two essential divas from soul's greatest era. "I sit around and soak up whatever they want to give me. I've had long conversations with them. My mom told me when I was young: Just be like a sponge. And that's what I'm trying to be."

The problem is, a sponge isn't an artist, especially as defined by Anglo-American pop culture, which values individualism over the upholding of tradition. The "gifted student" approach that Stone took on her first two albums — which have sold 914,000 and 1.2 million copies in the U.S., respectively — is now a weight around her neck. "Introducing," produced by veteran R&B auteur Raphael Saadiq, is Stone's attempt to break free of the vintage aura of her earlier work, which she feels was too uniform.

"When you listen to (the new) album, you're going to have to decide what you call it, because I don't know," she said. "L'Ess is More' is a reggae joint. 'Tell Me' has the Bob Marley thing too. 'Music' is more hip-hop, and 'Arms of My Baby' is actually a salsa-ish track."

TFHS actors put twist on 'Midsummer Night's Dream'

Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls High School's drama department will present Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream" this weekend in Roper Auditorium. The intermediate acting class production is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

"We have taken a very novel approach to our production," said James Haycock, drama instructor and the play's director. "Most productions are set in a warm, green and wooden setting. However, according to the text, the forest is cold, icy and dark. We have reflected this in the setting and costumes; the colors are dark, and their appearance is much more forbidding."

According to Haycock, the audience will be moving from place to place as the play progresses, and it will be close to the actors.

"A Midsummer Night's Dream" will be unlike any production ever brought to Twin Falls," he said.

The play is a romantic comedy written sometime in the late 16th century and first performed in 1604. It's the story of four young Athenian lovers and a group of amateur actors in a moonlit forest, and their adventures with the fairies who inhabit it.

Tickets are $5 for adults and $3 for students, and they're available at the door.

Saadig's approach, which he's been refining since his mid-1980s debut with the band Tony! Toni! Toné!, is retro-futuristic: He blends classic references (punchy horns, bubbly bass, sassy backing singers) with up-to-the-minute studio techniques to create a sound that is modern but not trendy. Enlailing like-minded (if somewhat predictable) souls like Lauryn Hill and Common as guests, Saadig has created an environment well-suited to a young singer trying to find herself within a daunting tradition.

"I think we both have a love for authentic real music," Saadig said by e-mail about the collaboration. "That does not mean just a live band jamming; it means that through those live musicians you create a song. ... The song, the players' dedication to the song — not the drum roll or guitar lick — each player playing a role actually makes it a record. We both hear that."

If there's one fault on "Introducing," it's that Stone's comfort level with that tradition remains too high. Throughout the album, she stings in a voice she learned from those soul albums: the lilts of coastal England never surfaces. Crafting a new self from beloved popular cultural sources, Stone is very much of her generation; it's her identity, her refusal to see that identity as artificial, that singles her out.

For Saadig, Stone's affinity for black music is simply part of the pop tradition. He sees her as operating in the tradition of legendary acts such as Elvis Presley, the Rolling Stones and the Beatles. "I can't answer why others might come down hard on Joss," he said, "except that they might be short of a history lesson."

and special technique. Sword-welder Leonardo, for example, can warp through solid obstacles, while Michelangelo can use his nunchucks as a helicopter. All of the boys are fairly acrobatic too, able to flip through the air or run along walls to solve environmental puzzles that resemble "Prince of Persia" Lite.

"TNMT" stumbles badly in combat, however. A couple of times per level you're surrounded by thugs, but they're so dumb and slow that it's generally easy to escape. It's understandable that Ubisoft would want to make "TNMT" easy enough for children, but the fighting here is a drag.

Sound bite: RECENT CD RELEASE

The Frames
"The Cost"
(And-1)

Some bands push forward a sound so obstinately that a little love is pointless: Swear by them or you're off the boat. The Frames are like that. The Irish group's epiphany-littered songs are extravagant in a way that makes hipsters nervous but are too stubbornly arty for even the Coldplay crowd. Its cult wondereers, will the Frames ever have a "Yellow?" With "The Cost," the band's sixth studio effort, the odds are unclear.

The breakthrough should have been 2005's "Burn the Maps," the band's enthrallingly dark, dynamic debut on the And-1 label. "The Cost" feels wearier. The tempos are more uniform, and the huge arcs of all those ballads, hoisted high by fiddle, abstract guitar fragments and Glen Hansard's scratchy tenor, feel surprisingly safe.

A stateside hit might come from a quieter place. Hansard has another group, Swell Season, with Czech pianist and singer Marketa Irglova. Its songs are more quietly romantic than grandiose; the Frames rework two on "The Cost": "When Your Mind's Made Up," especially, has a scallable hook and sentiment. The uninitiated might bite. If not, "The Cost" offers enough bravado for Frames fans who have their sea legs.

Buhl artist paints by heart

BY ARIEL HANSEN
Times-News writer

BUHL — Rosi Martinez-Eckert believes in the power of positive thinking. She has been visualizing an artist's studio with lots of windows and plenty of space to spread out, a studio much more inspiring than the small basement room where she paints today.

She has also been visualizing more sales for her paintings. If her efforts pay off — placing the paintings in galleries from Keetchum to Santa Fe, N.M., and expanding her Web site — this visualization may soon become reality.

Martinez-Eckert is opening her first one-woman show Friday at the Magic Valley

Arts Council's gallery, featuring paintings in oils and acrylics on canvas, many with natural themes such as flowers, birds and landscapes.

Words "Colorful... heartfelt." The first two words Martinez-Eckert used to describe her paintings came quickly and easily to her tongue.

"I think it's exciting, and I hope it comes across as exciting," she said. "I don't plan the sky's going to be this color or the ground's going to be this color. It just comes."

As for the third word? Martinez-Eckert described her process before arriving at the right term. As she used it, the word heartfelt means not so much "sincere" as "felt by heart" or "channeled."

"It's totally intuitive," she said. "When you paint like that, it has to come from somewhere outside yourself."

Time "It takes a time to get to where I am now. I've been practicing art for 15 years, studying theory, replicating masterpieces and experimenting with mediums. Stained glass was a favorite for many years before she turned to painting, and she created the glass in the interior studios of her Buhl farmhouse, set amid 5,000 acres that her husband farms.

Then she attended a class taught by her soon-to-be mentor, Norma Romero.

"I went, and she introduced me to oils," Martinez-Eckert said. "Oils, it's just where I am right now. I love the texture of them, and how they move on the canvas."

She paints at least three days a week, up to 10 hours a day, treating it as both a profession and a passion.

"You have to paint a long time before you can call yourself an artist," she said. But with all that practice under her belt, she's ready to take on the title. "It's not a hobby, it's more than a job. It's something I have to do."

Her technique, using very large brushes and lots of paint, gives her canvases an impressionistic look. This translates well to the flower images she has been drawn to in recent months, some of which have been compared to the works of Georgia O'Keefe.

"I've always admired her work," Martinez-Eckert said. "I hope I wow people like she wowed me."

Artists say "She's a natural," said her mentor, executive director of the arts council, said Martiniz-Eckert's work has garnered many positive comments from gallery patrons that have seen it.

"They just love it because of the use of colors," Madsen said. "Her work is just beautiful. It has a lot of energy, and through that energy it displays a lot of emotion."

Madsen said she has enjoyed seeing Martinez-Eckert's style and talent develop over the past few years, and is looking forward to giving her work wider exposure.

"I'm just really excited to share this with the community," Madsen said.

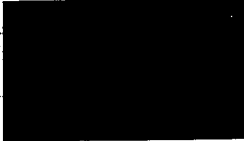

Martinez-Eckert is a member of the DRIPS — Dedicated Resourceful Inspired Painters' Society — a group of Magic Valley artists. Leslie Anderson is also a member of the DRIPS and works at The Outer Court Gallery at Big Wood Presbyterian Church in Keetchum, where the group's artworks have been displayed.

"She's fearless with her color," Anderson said.

"In her composition she likes to add little surprises that are not ordinary. She may have a great big daisy and have little teeny squares of other colors off in a corner, or something like that."

Anderson said patrons at the gallery often come away from Martinez-Eckert's works with smiles.

"I just think because they're so large and the colors are so vibrant... somehow it just brings them a sense of joy," Anderson said. "She is fearless in marketing her work as well. She's willing to put her work out there and see if it resonates with people."
