Many in the water community say you're diving into a mess. Talk briefly about the current state of Idaho water and how some of these problems arose.

Dr. Sure, throughout the Western U.S., each of the states is dealing with the concept of conjunctive management administration, where we recognize the diversions from groundwater impact surface-water sources, Idaho, in a similar way, is dealing with this issue throughout the state in various stages. Va. Tech gunman sent video manifesto to NBC

Associated Press writter

BIACKSBURG, Va. — Midway through his murderous rampage, the Virginia Tech gunman went to the post office and malled NBC a package containing photos and videos of him brandishing guns and delivering a snarling profanity-laced timede about rich brims; and their rhedonistic needs.

You had a hundred billion chances and ways to have avoided today. 23-year-old Cho Seung-Hoi says in a harsh monotone.
But you decided to spill my blood. You forced me into a corner and gave me only one-option. The decision was yours. Now you have blood on your hands that will never wash off.

NBC said the package contained a rambling and often-incoherent, 1,800-word video manifesto on CD, plus 43 photos.

the state to step in make decisions for the water users?

DT: We're in the process right now of assessing the computations relative to spring flows and mitigation plans for this year. When we complete this computational assessment we'll have a better idea of what is needed for 2007. There are really two courses that are possibilities. One is to develop a solution whereby we can avoid the necessity of curtallment and severe restrictions for this year. The other course is to enforce the orders and require curtailment where shortfalls occur. It's too early to say which course will be followed, though we're meaning the time that determination has to be made.

DT: The comprehensive aquifer management process DT: The comprehensive aquifer management process in the ESPA has great promise for developing solutions on a broad basis and for the long term. Presently, the concern is that this planning process will be hampered by short-term requirements in the ESPA. For development of long-term solutions we need to pursue processes like the CAMP effort in many basins throughout the state. This was the value in bringing representatives from bringing representatives from other parts of the state to the outer parts of the state to the water summit yesterday to present a snapshot of potential uses for the planning process. And in discussing the summit with some of the representatives from other areas yesterday, they felt their participation was worthwhile.

The difficult job of terminating pregnancies will become more complicated for physicians after Wednesday's Supreme Court ruling upholding the ban on so-called partial hirth abortions.

Doctors said they were not yet sure how they would abide by the federal law. The biggest uncertainty, they said, is that they don't know exactly what will qualify as an illiet procedure. There is nothing that we call by the name partial birth abortions and the call by the name partial birth abortion that they would be called the call by the name partial birth abortion clinics of the call by the name partial birth abortion clinics of the call by the name partial birth abortion clinics of the country of the called the call by the called the country of the country of the called the called the country of the called the called

For most singical abortions, doctors use instruments to remove a fetus in pieces, a procedure known as dilation and evacuation. Doctors begin by dilating the patient's cervix, which can take several days. If the woman has been through childbirth many times, sometimes the ferus will slide right unit. Autry said.

Nine out of ten abortions occur during the -first trimester. But if ultrasound examinations in the second trimester reveal that a fetus has a devastating genetic disorder, it might be too large for the surgical instruments, so Deci would not be an option. "Sometimes the pregnancy is a threat to the life of the woman," said Dr. Warren Hern, who runs the Boulder Abortion Clinic in Colorado. The Virginia Department of Emergency Management considers 'face identifications' by loved ones 'unreliable,' especially when families are under stress and prone to mistakes, according to a statement released late Wednesday.

Instead, investigators asked families to provide fingerprints for those believed dead and might request dental records, too, the statement said.

"We want to or on the side of caution," said Bob Spieldenner, a department spokesman who was at the inn Wednesday, "It is rustrating for the families, but we want to be right and not cause undue grief for them."

Some families said they were told early Wednesday that as many as 28 bodies could be identified and released by day's end. But Spieldenner said no ew identifications were likely until Thursday, when he expected to release a "significant number," though not a complete list.

line forming to see who may succeed him.

Perhaps it's jumping the gun, but rarely has a senatorial race in idaho harnessed this much early attention. And in the land of opportunity, it's never too early to set the odds. Starting with:

Sen. Larry Craig.— Barring any major disasters, it seems a fourth term would be a lock for the incumbent. But Craig, who will be 62 in July, said he doesn't want to grow old in the Senate. "A Strom Thurmond you do not have," he told the Times-News editorial board in February. "If I were successful in running for re-election, I'd be 69 at the end of the term." Craig said he's neither raising campaign money, nor organizing a Craig said ho's neither raising campaign money, nor organizing a campaign team at this point. His decision will come by summer. And yet, Craig is campaigning for presidential hopeful Mitt Romney, perhaps to shore up more conservative support for '08. Lt. Gov. hups to shore up more conservative support for '08.

Li, Gow, Ilm Risch — Risch told the Associated Press it was a "reasonable likelihood" that hed go for the Senate if Craig retires. In seven months as governor last year, Risch proved that he could wring every ounce of momentum from political opportunity, Risch also became a new kind of conservative — one who held true to Republican tenets, but with greener, environmentally minded leanings.

It's quite possible that the new Risch may be the very kind of candidate Republicans need to recover in Congress. If Craig retires, expect Risch to announce the same day.

Larry LaRocco — Democrats rediscovered some of their mojo with LaRocco in last year's campaign, even if he did lose to Risch, 58 to 39 percent, in the lieutenant governor's race. LaRocco says Democratic gains in the West foretell new promise for Idaho Democrats. He's also proved he has the chops to run against both Risch and Craig (whom he opposed for Congress in 1982).
Still, it's an uphill climb. Craig's Senate seat hasn't gone to a Democrat in almost 70 years.

Rep. Mike Simpson — Simpson's stature has grown in four terms in the U.S. House, but he's also weighing whether to run if Craig doesn't. 'It would depend on whether I could better serve Idaho by moving up the Appropriations ladder in the House, Simpson said, 'or whether it would be better to be a freshman senator.'

Expect Simpson to take the former route. Simpson's bipartisan skills would do serious good in the Senate.
But his importance in the House grows every year.
Robert Vasquez.— It's easy to consider Vasquez, a fierce immigration critic from Caldwell, the ranting uncle in the attic of state politics. But in a six-candidate primary for the 1st congressional district, Vasquez, came in a respectable third. The former Canyon County commissioner would not win. But he could definitely shake up the race.

Massacre could have been prevented

t wasn't my first thought on hearing of the massacre at Virginia Tech University. I Virginia Tech University, Initially, there was just shock and outrage, followed by the self-examination all of us do after a tragedy, as we ask our-selves if we might have done more to prevent such a sense-less loss of life.

The thought that came to me was not whether stronger gun laws might have deterred the shooter. It wasn't about better ways to alert students through e-mail or tea-messages, as worthy an idea as that may be. The thought was: What if just one student in either of the buildings where 23-year-old Cho Seung-Hui conducted his Cho Seung-Hui conducted his one-man massacre was, himself (or herself), armed and trained in how to use a weapon in self defense? Would that — more than any other suggestion or strategy — have made a difference?

The shooter had to know that the likelihood of him being confronted with force was very small. But suppose he had known that some students or faculty would be armed? Would that knowledge have deterred him from carrying out his evil deeds? Sounds crazy, you say? Am I advocating that everyone be armed and our college cam-puses be turned into potential

Self-defense is an ancient tradition, but these students never had a chance to defend themselves. chance to defend themselves. They were easy targets for a deranged man who then turned his gun on himself. Wouldn't it have been prefer-able if someone had stopped him before he could murder

This is the flip side of the gam control are the side of the gam control argument. Determence and self-defense can work better than fruitless attempts at pre-empting evil intent. Let's say that stronger gun laws had made it more difficult for the shooter to purchase a gun. Instead, he might have easily acquired a bomb and blown himself and the others up, as is frequently done in the Middle East. Would there then have been calls for more bomb control?

Laws don't deter people with criminal intent: otherwise our prisons would be empty. A criminal is now who violates the law. How does the gun control lobby propose to make law-breakers into law-abiders? If lawbreakers are not deterred from criminal pursuits by laws currently in place, why should more laws deter them?

Cody Winnill struck out inhe batters and the Spartans racked up seven hits in a 5-3 Great Basin Conference West victory over the Jerome Tigers on Wednesday at Warburton Field. The win avenged Tursday's 1-0 loss to the Tigers and gave Jerome (14-1, 3-1) its first ioss of the season. "Offensively I was pleased with where we're at," Minico coach Ben Frank said, "I thought Cody pitched a gem. He pitched really well for us." Minico (13-6, 2-2) got its runs on the board early against Jerome starter Trast Cooley. Colby Andersen and Matt Tracy had first-linning singles and advanced on a throwing error to set up R.J. But the Tigers weren't about to give up so easily, though. With two outs in the top of the fourth inning. Mike Cummins got things going for Jerome when he hit a grounder and reached first on a throwing error. Justin Praegitzer drew a walk and Logan Parker bunted, reaching lirst on a dropped throw to load the bases. Jerome's Buddy Green hit a grounder, but the Spartans committed another costly throwing error that allowed Cummins and Praegitzer to score. Dee Fleck was also able to get on base safely on another botched throw off his grounder, reaching second as Green crossed the plate.

"We did OK." Frank said. "We just had that one bad inning again, and that's hurt us all year. Every game we've lost has come down to us having one bad inning defensively where we let things snowball. We were fortunate to get out with just three runs. Every other aspect, I thought we played well.

Judge to interview jury in Hall case

BOISE (AP) — A district judge presiding over the murder trial of a Boise man will reinterview more than 30 potential jurors to determine whether they were influenced by a newspaper headline. Erick Hall, who is already on Idaho's death row, is charged in the rape and slaying of Cheryl Ann Hanlon, whose body was found in the foothills north of Boise in March 2003. March 2003 loothills north of Boise in March 2003.

Jury selection in Hall's first-degree murder trial began last week, and by Monday lawyers had picked 31 potential jurors.

House court bresday, proceed the based of the jury candidates to determine whether they were prejudiced by a headline printed Monday in the Idaho Statesman, which referred to Hall's previous conviction in the high-profile rape and slaying of Lynn Henneman in Boise in 2000.

Lawyers säid they were concerned because jurors are not supposed to know or consider any facts related to Hall's previous conviction in their deliberation of the Handon case. The school district administration and board of trustees are very much aware of the situation and are working on a constraint of the situation and are working on the situation and are working on a constraint of the situation and all situations. Lang said.

At District 93, officials have also used administrators and classroom aids. They're also working on a program called subfunder.

With that program cachers call in when they know they can't come in, and a computer scrolls through a list of substitutes making calls. Still, administrators say having more subs available would help.

Studies link hormone use to higher risk of breast, ovarian cancers

Associated Press writer

ATLANTA—Research on two continents signaled more bad news for menopause hormones, offering the strongest evidence yet that they can raise the risk of breast cancer and are tied to a slightly higher risk of ovarian cancer.

New U.S. government numbers showed that breast cancer rates leveled off in 2004 after plunging in 2003 — the year after millions of women stopped taking hormones because a big study tied them to higher heart, stroke and breast cancer risks. Experts said the leveling off shows that the 2003 drop in the cancer rate was real and not a fluke.

From 2001 to 2004, breast cancer rates fiel almost 3 percent—a dramatic decline, recent—a dramatic decline, recent — a dramatic decline, recent — mones. Those rates fell almost 15 percent among women ages 50 to 69, the group most likely to have been on hormone pills. At the same time, a study of nearly I million women in the United Kingdom showed that those who took hormones after menopause were 20 percent more likely to develop ovarian cancer or die from it than women who never took the pills. That study was published online by the London-based journal The Lancet.

For consumers, the new research doesn't change the advice to use the lowest does for the shortest time possible for hot flashes and other menopause symptoms that can't otherwise be controlled.
For cautious scientists, the new breast cancer numbers were more evidence of the hormone-breast cancer link.

"The story has gotten stronger," sald Dr. Peter Ravdin, a biostatistican at the University of Teas M.D. Anderson Cancer Center In Houston who led the research. Some were skeptical search amonths ago when Ravdin and National Cancer Institute researchers first reported the 2003 drum in the bresst cancer. researchers first reported the 2003 drop in the breast cancer rate. VIDEO GAME REVIEW

A scene from Tetris Evolution' by THO.

'Tetris' and its descendants are still puzzling gamers

RY LOUI KESTEM

The Accordated Press

When "Tetris" first appeared in the United States 20 years ago. it took many gamers by surprise. Even in an era when the pixilated "Super Mario Bros." was state-of-the-art, "Tetris" looked primitive. How could a game that consisted solely of arranging falling blocks be so addic-

And, yet, "Tetris" - the creation of Russian computer programmer Alexey Palitnoy - is unquestionably one of the most influential video games in the industry's history. It didn't make Palltnov rich, but its presence on the original Game Boy helped Nintendo establish its long-running dominance of portable gaming.

More importantly, "Tetris" inspired dozens. If not hundreds. of imitators. Any game that involves pattern or color matching, from "Beloweled" to "Lumines" to "Zuma," owes a debt to Pailtnov.

And I suspect that many of those older players who enjoy casual gaming on the Web probably cut their teeth on Tetris."

As console graphics get more elaborate and lifelike, how does an elegant gem like "Tetris" hold • "Tetris Evolution" (THO, for the Xbox 360, $29.99) - It seems almost wasteful to use an Xbox 360 and a high-def TV to play "Tetris." THQ tries to compensate for the game's visual simplicity by cluttering up the background with wacky videos, but they only distract from the action.

The real drawhere is the addition of Xbox Live support, which lets you challenge Tetrisheads all over the world. The standard goal is familiar - clog up your opponent's screen by clearing lines on your own -- but trying to work your way up the worldwide leaderboard is an addictive challenge.

"Evolution" adds some scoring twists to the classic formula: You may have a time limit, or you may only score points for clearing blocks in a particular area of the board. But there aren't enough new features to justify the $30 price tag: "Tetris Evolution" should have been a $10 Xbox Live download.

. "Puzzle Ouest: Challenge of the Warlords (D3 Publisher, for the Nintendo DS, PlayStation Portable, $29,99) — "Puzzle Quest" takes a familiar blockmatching game — "Beleweled."

CSI theater department explores 'Maebeth'

"Things without all remedy
"Should be without regard."
— Lady Macbeth

BY STEVE CHUMP Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Everybody has his — or her — reasons.

In William Shakespeare's "Macbeth," evil comes wrapped in the best of linentions: Macbeth doesn't set out to become a murderer; things just sort of work out that way.

See it online

For a video story with rehearsal highlights, visit Magicvalley.com.

"Stepped in so far that, should I wade no more," he says, "returning were as tedious as go o'er."

It's a dark lesson in an even darker play, one that has resonated throughout the subsequent history of theater.

"I'm just in a dark mood this year, I guess," said Laine Steel, College of Southern Idaho theater professor and director of "Macbeth" that starts its two-week run Wednesday. "First I directed "Sweeney Todd," and now this,"

Steel, in his 17th year of teaching drama at CSI, has directed a lot of Shakespeare.

"This 'Macbeth' is a pretty straightforward production," he said. "But I went with sort of a prehistoric Scotland look."

AMER COMMISSION IN THE PARTY IN

Adam Kroeger of Wendell plays Macbeth and Amanda Johnson of Kimberly his ambitious wife. Troy Cooper of Twin Falls is the unfortunate King Duncan, Jud Harmon of Twin Falls is the avenging Macduff, and Jean Paul Archambeault of Mountain Home plays the ghostby Banquo.

"It's a pretty good group of actors this year," Steel said. The Scottish play

 What: The College of Southern Idaho Theater Department will present William Shakespeare's "Macbeth."

Where: CSI Fine Arts Theater, Twin Fells.
 When: Wednesday and April 26-28 and May 2-5, 8 p.m.

 How much: Tickets, which are $8 for adults and $6 for students and senior citizens, may be purchased at the Fine Arts box office, Room 97, from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Mondays through Fridays. Tickets may also be reserved by phoning 732-779 at 273 2790.

a 41-year-old London superstar when "Macbeth" was first performed in 1605, reportedly with the new king of England, James I, in the audience.

Shakespeare was

That was a high-wire act on The Bard's part for two reasons: Shakespeare was widely known to have been a favortie of Queen Elizabeth I, who had James' mother, Mary Queen of Scots. murdered. And "Macbeth' is about the assassination of a Scottish king.—first performed in front of a Scottish king. Fortunately, King James loved

"Macbeth," regarding it as homage to his Stuart family and to a distant relative, Banquo, a Scottlah nobleman whom Macbeth has killed in the play.

"Macbeth" — which was based on historical accounts — has influenced playwrights ranging from Berthold Brecht to Arthur Miller.

As the story opens, Macbeth is a successful general who's just turned back an invasion of Scotland by armies from Norway and Ireland. He encounters three witches (played by Kelli Babbit, Staria Fenton and Tenaya PiZa), who make some unsettling predictions.

The king, Duncan, comes to visit Macbeths castle, where Lady Macbeth encourages her refuctant husband to murder the monarch, blame it on servants and seize the throne for himself.

Macduff, another candidate to be king, is immediately suspicious of Macbeth but is outmaneuvered. He flees Scotland, and Macbeth murders Duncan's family.

In England, Macduff and Malcolm. Duncanis son, plan an invasion of Scotland and an attack on Macbeth's Dunsinane Castle, but not before a guilt-stricken Lady Macbeth dies. Bolstered by the witcher prophecies. Macbeth confidently faces the invading army but is killed in battle by Macduff, who crowns Malcolm (Dale G. Laughlin) as the rightful king of Scotland.

Other cast members are Nell Glass as Lennox. Kevin Martkola as Rioss, Glass and Sean D.R. Hake as the murderers. Ben Berria as the Potree, PiZa as Lady Macduff, Jenz Hansen as Donabin, Tim Jones as Monteth, Jan Olsen as Angus, Anthony Woolf as Califhness, Hake as Stward, Jack Mikessell as Young Siward, Berria as Seyton, Glass as the sergeant, Emily Smith as a gentlewoman and Berria as the doctor.

Hannibal Lecter just won't go away

BY CHRISTY LEMBRE The Associated Press

We know you're thinking it. We were, too. So we may as well just acknowledge it, get it out of the way and move on as a group.

Yes. Anthony Hopkins is Indeed doing a version of his patented Hannibal Lecter shtick in "Fracture." So yes, you have seen him do this before. But he does it so richly and it's still so entertaining, you may as well Hopkins and co-star Ryan Gosling get lively challenging material to work with in the film from director Gregory Hoblit ("Primal Fear," "Frequency."). with a script from Daniel Pyne and Glenn Gers. They get to needle each other, spar with each other, and generally enjoy fantastically smart, zippy banter.

Gosling, the recent Oscar nominee for his subtly powerful subtle work as a drug-addicted teacher in "Half Nelson," more than holds his own with such a formidable screen presence. The difference in their demeanors -Hopkins quietly sadistic, Gosling buzzing with ambition - creates a really compelling dynamic.

"Fracture" is suspenseful and darkly stylish; Kramer Morganthau is a cinematographer on the film, which has some Hitchcockian touches and was shot in a vividly recognizable Los Angeles. But it also has an unexpectedly dry sense of humor. It's actually a lot funnier and a lot less stiff and self-serious than such a thriller might look.

Hopkins stars as wealthy LA. aeronautical engineer Ted Crawford, who shoots his much vounger wife, Jennifer (Embeth Davidtz), in the head after he catches her having an affair. We've watched him meticulously work through each step of the crime, then calmly, confidently admit to committing it.

Why would he do that? The eventual big-picture answer is, because he knows exactly how to get away with it; mad-genius types like Ted exist solely in the movies. More immediately, though, it's to terment the lieutenant who's called to his house to negotiate with him - the same guy who happened to be having the affair with Ted's wife. Looks like a pretty quick case for Gosling's character, hotshot prosecutor Willy Beachum, who's on the verge of leaving the district attorney (David Strathairn, solid and authoritative) for a high-paying corporate law gig. But Willy soon realizes that nothing turns out to be as easy as it initially seemed. Evidence disappears, the confession is tossed out, and Ted wants to represent himself in court.

And so this sly Southern boy, who's skated his whole life on his looks, arrogance and charm. finds he actually has to work hard at something for once.

Hopkins and Gosling don't even share that much screen time with each other, but when they do, it's exhilarating. Even the expectation of the first time they face each other alone in a jail interview room is delicious, Ultimately, though, "Fracture" isn't so much about the case itself as it is about the way it changes star-on-the-rise Willy. Will be develop a moral code and think of someone else besides himself for once? It's a legal drama that barely sets foot in the courtroom, but rather is more concerned with the journey its characters take, (Hoblit, by the way, also directed and produced episodes of "NYPD Blue," "L.A. Law" and "Hill Street Blues." which explains why "Fracture" has the slick pacing of a TV drama.) Some plot points here and there don't quite click into place. One of them involves a romance between Willy and his new boss at the private firm, played by Rosamund Pike as an Icy blonde in the Hitchcockian tradition (there's that word again). The relationship might have been hard to believe anyway, but it also transpires with dizzying speed. Then there's a bigger, climactic twist that we won't give away. Whether or not you can catch the potential problem with it. Ted Crawford, Mad Genius. probably should have.

Movie nuagets

• "Are We Done Yet?"/No rating The sequel to "Are We There Yet?" Now married to Suzanne (Nia Long), Nick Persons (Ice Cube) has bought a quiet suburban house to escape the rat race of the big city and to provide more space for his new wife and kids Lindsey and Kevin (Aleisha Allen and Philip Daniel Bolden), But when his new home quickly becomes a costly "fixer upper" and he finds himself at the mercy of an eccentric contractor (John C., McGinley), Nick's suburban dream soon becomes a nightmare, PG.

• "Blades of Glory" / B+

Gloriously funny, Will Ferrell does to ice-skating what he did to NASCAR in "Talladega Nights." Namely, eviscerate the sport's rituals and clich?s without ever making fun of the fans. Ferrell and Jon Heder play rivals with very different styles (the former is "Skating's Outlaw," the latter "Skating's Little Oroban Awesome"). Barred for life from ever competing in men's singles after a brawl at the World Championships, they team up to become the first same-sex dup in pairs skating. Some of the stuff gets a little too silly, but the jokes come at you so fast and furiously, you won't care. This is what a dumband-dumber comedy should be: pure inspired lunacy, PG-13, t hour, 33 minutes.

• "Disturbia" / B Better than a Generation Y rinoff of "Rear Window" has any right to be. Shla LaBeouf plays a troubled teen undergoing house arrest over the summer who starts to spy on two neighbors - Ashley (Sarah Roemer), the blond hottle who's just moved next door, and Mr. Turner (David Morse), who lives alone in a big house ... and who may be a serial killer. The movie peppers its plot with shrewd observations on teen interaction and is made with enough intelligence and texture to make up for its lack of originality. Oh sure, it falls apart at the end with some generic scenes of suspense and moviestyle peril. But LaBeouf, an increasingly interesting screen. presence, and Mnrse, a master at switching from charming to sinister, are nicely matched, PG-13.

• "Firehouse Dog" / B A dog star is born in this doggone good family film. A pampered Hollywood pooch learns what it is to be a real dog when he's lost and rescued by some hapless but well-intentioned firefighters. The filmmakers have actually put some time, thought and effort into a creating a strong story with interesting -- albeit a bit one-dimensional - characters, and there's a nice mix of six adult humor and the requisite body-function gags. The capable cast is headed by Bruce Greenwood. and the four Irish terriers sharing the title role have real star appeal, along with great enthusiasm. of-the-screen gimmicks. Little Lewis is an ornhan and a ceaseless inventor who is contacted by both a had guy and a boy his own age who have come from the future. He ends up going back to the future and falls in with a fam-Ily of eccentrics in a long, hyper sequence kids will love but adults may find exhausting. But the movie's final 10 minutes provide surprising twists that make it more satisfying than the usual Disney fare, G. 1 hour, 42 min-

· "Perfect Stranger"/C This is one of those movies in which nothing and no one turns out the way they originally seemed. And, maddeningly, that's true of the movie itself, as well. It begins life as a sleek, sexy thriller — a watchable guilty pleasure under the direction of James Foley ("Glengarry Glen Ross") with its fabulous-looking people and places - but eventually it collapses in a heap of plot twists that are annoyingly implausible. Rather than leaving you scratching your head wondering, "Hub, how'd they do that?" you're more likely to tear your hair out screaming, "No way!" Halle Berry stars as an intrepid investigative reporter for a very obviously New York Poststyle tabloid who suspects that a childhood friend was murdered by the head of a high-powered ad agency (Bruce Willis, tanned and trim). She assumes various identities, both online and in his office as a temp, to uncover the truth. But the truth is hard to come by, since everyone keeps gratuitously double-crossing each other. Glovanni Ribisi gets some laughs as the smitten tech geek who serves as Berry's guy Friday, R. 117 minutes.

• "Premonition" / C+ Sandra Bullock plays a woman whose husband (Julian McMahon) dies in a car crash. Or does he? One morning she wakes up and it's time for the funeral. The next morning, hubby is in the kitchen drinking coffee, As Bullock pingpongs back and forth between these two realities, she tries to change fate. The movie is fitfully fascinating as we piece together what's happening. But the picture simply doesn't hang together, and you may leave the theater more frustrated than iantalized, PG-13, 1 hour, 36 min-

"The Reaning" / C It's anyone's guess what Hilary Swank saw of worth in this contemporary horror thriller with biblical overtones. Swank plays Katherine Winter, a former minister who now spends her time debunking so-called modern miracles. So when a backwoods Louisiana town just off the bayou reports that its river has inexplicably turned the color of blood. Katherine and her hulking sidekick Ben (Idris Elba) pack their lab gloves and test tubes and head into Bible-thumping territory. The best that can be said of Swank is that she never lets on that she is slumming with this material, R. 1 hour, 36 minutes.

• "Reign Over Me" / B A worthy, well-acted film tied to Sept. 11. Adam Sandler stars as a man who's lost his grip on life after losing his family in one of the planes that crashed. Don Cheadle is a successful dentist and old pal who sees the disheveled Sandler tooling around Manhattan and decides to rescue him. Or at least try. The movie has a strange, meandering quality, and it's too long. But the cast is excellent (Inda Pinkett Smith, Liv Tyler, among others), and director Mike Binder has made a sincere film that's neither exploitative nor dumb, R, 2 hours, 4 minutes.

• "Shooter" / C Mark Wahlberg plays a tough. crack Marine sniper recruited by a shadowy ex-military man (Danny Glover) to help prevent a presidential assassination attempt, but instead winds up wounded and on the run from the FBL Antoine Fugua's film goes haywire as it mixes all manner of action conventions - car chases, gun battles, explosions, a pretty, grieving woman (Kate Mara), and an accidental sidekick - with a convoluted plot.

"Freedom Writers" PG-13

As a tenacious teacher, Hilary Swank transforms "Freedom Writers." Among the lessons to be learned from the inspiring. feel-good drama "Freedom Writers" is never to underestimate the persuasive powers of Hilary Swank, Even in writer-director Richard LaGravenese's formulaic adaptation of "The Freedom Writers Diary," a compilation of journal entries written by Long Beach high school students. Swank shows that in the right role her unusually disarming talent can elevate routine material.

As real-life teacher Erin Gruwell, Swank enters with collish enthusiasm, dangerous naivete and a toothsome smile that suggests maybe she isn't up to the task of turning a classroom full of hardened teens, emblitered by their hateful environment, into scholars.

Amid the schematic setup of Grawell attempting to win the must of the students while overcoming the red tape of the system, something fairly amazing happens, just as Gruwell the teacher starts to regain her balance after a rocky beginning. Swank the actor likewise kicks into gear, shrugging off the impediments of the stereotypical scenario and turning what might have been a routine, entirely have been a routine, entirely moving experience.

in scene after scene, it's a marvel to watch Swank determinedly making her case, shrewdly winning over the audience as Gruwell persuades her charges to give her a chance to turn them no to literature, history and the opportunity to share their own narratives. There is a raw guileiess quality to Swank that shreds any hint of condescension or exploitation.

Intoxicated with the possibility of the students succeeding, the character's growing confidence becomes tangible, playing over Swank's face like a kid learning to ride a bike. Initially charming but skittish, Gruwell emerges as a fighter, every bit as

Hilary Swank and her students rock on in 'Freedom Writers.'

Common and Jersey Piven reflect on their own safety in 'Smokin' Aces.'

resolute as Swank's Maggie Fitzgerald in "Million Dollar Baby."

The film itself, set in the aftermath of the 1992 Los Angeles riots, suffers from the over-famillarity one feels toward the whole dedicated-teacher-inspires-students-against-all-odds genre, compounded by fatigue for the telling of minority stories through a white protagonist. Almost evenly divided among Latinos, Cambodians and African Americans (plus one scared-todeath white kid), the class secthes with the racial tension that spills in from the streets outside. The school, epitomized by an obstinate department head (Imelda Staupton) and an Imperious honors instructor (John Benjamin Hickey), refuses to "waste" actual books on them. an attitude Gruwell can't abide.

The everyday violence experienced by the students is established as both the stimulus that divides them and the eventual basis for their bonding. Their distrust of the new teacher will be recognizable to anyone who has seen "Dangerous Minds" and any number of other movies and telellins featuring a crusading teacher and at-risk students.

Dramatically, the movie never veers from its predictable course, but Swank's performance renders the point moot.

There likely was a better, more original movie to be made focusing more on the Freedom Writers themselves.

But if this more conventional

But if this more conventional direction had to be taken, it's hard to imagine a more affecting version.

"Smokin' Aces"

"Smokin' Aces" isn't just pointless, fatuous and crass, it's also dated. Quentin Tarantino stopped doing this model about 15 years

The title does double duty as a plot description. The movie is literally about smoking that is, whacking) one Buddy 'Aces' Israel (Jeremy Piven), a Vegas magician who got in light with the mob and now is about to rat out his wisexup buddles to the FBI,

Holed up In a Lake Taboe penthouse, Buddy has become target numero une for a diverse group of would-be assassins, drawn to the bloody business of offing him by the $1 million mob boss Primo $5 parazza (Josephi Ruskin) has put on his head. Oh, and the old man also wants Buddy's heart brought to him, a seemingly superfluous bit of especially grouper described by superfluous bit of especially grouper anded on last-minute plot twist. Armong those circling Buddy are Among those circling Buddy are a couple of good-guy FBI agents (Ryan Reynolds and Ray Liotta) whose slippery boss (Andy Garcia with a slippery Southern accent) is being a little elusive about why they're doing this. After all, Buddy already has his own bodyguards.

Those with less benign intentions include a trio of face-Nazis, a mysterious litiman incown only as the Swede (oh, let's do some Coenbrothers borrowing, too) and singer Alicia Keys, who fares pretty well and looks very hor in the hudcrous role of a lesblan killer who may be persuaded by one of likuddy bodyguarts (hip-hop artist Common) to play for the other team.

It's all a mad, mad, mad, mad whit of bullets, bloodshed, the occasional breast and agonizingly lame jokes aimed at males who don't get out much. And even this particular demographic soon may realize they'd be a lot better off watching "Kill Bill: Vol. 2" on DVD one more time.

"Smokin' Aces" is an awkward pelvic thrust of a movie that wishes it knew more cool moves than it actually does. If you find yourself stuck in the same dark room with it, you'll wish it did, too.

Art is for the viewer at CSI student show

BY WILLIAM STUDERAKER Times News correspondent

TWIN FALLS --- Art will go public or be destroyed. Time (history) has a fine rake with which it combs the past. What will last is any person's guess. and so the winnowing of an artist's work is serious business,

The "2007 Student Show" (students of the College of Southern Idaho Art Department) is a juried exhibit. The work was selected by Dan Murphy, assistant art professor at Utah State University, and subsequently out on display for public viewing at the Jean B. King Art Gallery in the Herrett Center for Arts and Selence on the CSI campus through

As you approach the entrance. you get the impression that you're walking into a preservation hall, not a gallery. The east wall is stacked with work, hung as if to store it and at the same time display it.

Your attention, however, is diverted to the work on the wall Just inside the door. These are award-winning pieces, such as "Tree," an intaglio print by Dalia --- necessarily he visited later.

The Jean B. King Gallery in the Herrett Center for Arts and Science on the campus of the College of Southern Idaho in Twin Falls is open Tuesdays and Fridays from 9:30 a.m. to 9 p.m.: Wednesdays and Thursdays from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.; and Saturdays from 1 to 9 p.m. The museum is closed on Sundays and

'Fire Eyes,' digital art by Sandy Salas, is part of the College of Southern Idaho student show.

Here on the east wall, as a testimony to good art, the blackand-white photographs are a lens in the stratteraphy of this display.

Because of the volume of art on display, it's hard to view the show in linear fashion. You are driven in many directions.

Wandering seems to be the best method of viewing, Let the work that is attracting the eye be...

"Untitled," a charcoal-on-paper drawing by Brent Stark, is softly and precisely crafted. It has an lischer-like sense of duplicity. One hand is drawing another.

There are other works in the show that appear to be influenced by famous artists such as Picasso, Degas and Ruth Bern-ther the students are exploring the world of art on their own, or they are accepting the lessons ... taught th art history class by Professor Bill West.

In art, as in all creative genres, it is wise for a young artist to serve an apprenticeship. The best master may be a teacher who knows the paths into and out of art's history. Influences are expected, and "creative" afteration is expected.

And to this end, the wax resist by Randy Vankomen, "Frozen Surf," takes a popular figure the penguin (made popular by the recent movie "Happy Feet") - and a hallowed sport - surfing - and melds them in a way that is humorous, well crafted and creative.

Throughout the show there are demonstrations of the various genres within the realm of art, painting, photography. drawing, ceramics. A devotion to a single medium allows you to contemplate content, mood and symbology without struggling with materials. This is not to say that there aren't mixed-media pieces in the show. There are:

MV Arts Council gets grant to produce one-act original play

Times News

TWIN FALLS - The Magic Valley Arts Council received a grant to produce a one-act play titled "Nisel," written by local author and playwright Samantha Marshall.

The play was chosen to be part of the program for the upcoming Civil Liberties Conference and Symposium at the College of Southern Idaho and the annual pilgrimage to the Minidoka National Monument near Jerome on June 21-23. Performances will also be scheduled for the public

The money comes from the Idaho Commission on the Arts. the National Endowment for the Arts and Glaphia Foods

"Nisci" (Japanese for an American-born or second-generation Japanese-American) is based on the true story of how the playwright's grandparents met in a Twin Falls dance club during World War II while being interned at the Minidoka Relocation Center.

In addition to being a story of romance, the play addresses the prejudices and barriers experienced by the interned lapanese-Americans.

Following each performance will be a moderated panel discussion of local experts on the history of the Hunt Camp, memhers of Friends of Minidoka, former residents of the Hunt Camp and the playwright. It will focus on the prejudices of the time, the community support and involvement in the camp, and how this legacy continues to affect the community and individual lives.

The production will be accompanied by an exhibit in the theater lobby of photographs of the camp by Emily Hanako Momohara, a professional photographer and assistant professor of photography at the Art Institute of Cincinnati.

The play will be directed by Filer High School drama coach Tamara Harman, Open auditions are scheduled for May 7-8 from 6 to 7 p.m. in the CSI Fine Arts Center Room 119.

and they are estimable - evidence of excellent instruction.

Other evidence of good teaching by the college art faculty is apparent in the ceramics. There are intricate pots and hand-altered pieces - you might say beautiful pieces," if beautiful hasn't been reserved for swans and roses.

Also it is evident that drawing and strategies of color form the . bases of the students' conceptualizations

The works in this show keep the viewer in motion, but resistance is needed. Take your time. Certainly one piece may move you more than another, but all will have an audience.

These artists have gone public, and they seem willing to trust the rake of history. They are undeniably students who are studying art to become artists, and by so dolng they are creating not only works of art, but their own good fortune. They are exhibiting trust in their professors and in their winners

The "2007 Student Show" is demanding, but to turn a phrase attributed to Yogi Berra, "Just by looking, you'll observe a lot," essentially --- and weds it to a sweeping role-playing epic, a la "Final Pantasy Tactics." As in many a classic PPG, you begin by creating a character, male or female, in one of four classes: druid, knight, warrior or wizard. Then you take on a series of quests, but your battles take place on a puzzle grid.

Line up three or more skulls and you damage your opponent;

line up coins to collect money. If you line up colored cells you collect mana, which you can use to cast spells. The combat element adds some fresh strategy to the "Bejeweled" format: Should you match skulls to dish out easy damage, or collect mana to build up more dangerous spells? Or should you grab the bucks you need to buy more powerful ar-

KARAOKE Quartet prepares for Buhl performance

BUHL — Cascada de Flores, a four-member San Francisco Rev Area ensemble that specializes in Mexican and Cuban regional music and dance, will perform Friday night at the Eighth Street

The quartet celebrates the diversity of Mexican and Cuban folk music and specializes in the sound of the early 1900s, when the two countries' musical companionship first emerged through radio.

The foursome features the vocal duet of Arwen Lawrence de Castellanos and Sabra Weber and guitarists lorge Liceaga and lorge Milangos, who together perform on a number of traditional instruments, including caion (a kind of box drum played by slapping the front face with the hands), tres cubano, guitar-

JIVE struts its stuff in 3 shows this weekend

Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Fresh from an appearance at the All-Northwest Honor Festival in Portland, Ore, JIVE — the Twin Falls High School choral concert group — will bring a little song and dance to Roper Auditorium this weekend for JIVE Nieht 2007.

Three shows are planned: Friday night and Saturday afternoon and evening.

"Portland was a great experience for the kids," said lo Casperson, the choir's director. "We didn't get to sing at the event that we thought we would, but we sang at another event before about 500 people. We got a lot of positive comments."

The 26-member ensemble will present a blend of pop, rock and show tunes this weekend, vocally and in choreography.

"Technologically, we've come a long way since we started," Casperson said, "The kids now wear flesh-colored wireless mics, which gives us the oppor-

On Friday, the Herrett Center will sponsor an astronomy talk about future missions to the moon.

Celebrate Astronomy Day this weekend in Twin Falls

BY STEVE CRUMP Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Things are looking up Friday and Saturday at the Herrett Center for Arts and Science on the campus of the College of Southern Idaho.

On Friday, the Herrett will sponsor an astronomy talk about future missions to the moon; the talk is by Chris Anderson, production specialist and observatory manager at the Faulkner Planetarium, It's scheduled for 8:30 p.m., followed by telescope-viewing weather permitting - from 9:30 p.m. to midnight.

On Saturday, It's Astronomy Day - in honor of International Astronomy Day - with games, activities and some serious science. Admission is free.

"There are four lunar missions coming up in the next two years, by India, China, Japan and the U.S.," Anderson said, "It will be the most lunar exploration since the '70s."

India, China and Japan are relatively new space-faring nations, although they're progressing fast.

"It looks like China may be getting ready for a manned mission." Anderson said.

As for the U.S., NASA will launch its Lunar Reconnaissance Orbiter mission in 2008. designed to spend at least a year in low polar orbit around the moon where it will collect information about the environment,

The LRO payload --- six instruments and one technology demonstration - is expected to provide data to enable a human to return to the moon.

The last manned lunar mission was the three-man Apollo 17, launched by NASA on Dec. 7, Admission to Anderson's Friday lecture will be $2 for adults. $1 for students and $5 for families. Kids 6 and younger get in free. Admission to the telescope viewing is $1; it's free to those who attend the astronomy talk.

Saturday's schedule includes space and astronomy makeand-take activities, puzzles and coloring pages in the Rick Allen Room from 1 to 5 p.m. At the same time and in the same location, there will be water-bottle rocket construction with launch outdoors, and a look at "Mars in 3-D" in the Eccles Library. From 1 to 6 p.m., solar and daytime target ylewing are planned in the Herrett's Centennial Observatory, with a scale solar system model to be assembled on the CSI Fitness Trail off

North College Road. At 2 p.m., the Faulkner will screen the multimedia show "Far Out Space Places," That will be followed by "WSKY: Radio Station to the Stars" at 4 p.m., "Great Wonders of the Universe" at 7 p.m. and "Led Zeppelin: Maximum Volume 1" at 8:15

A star party will conclude the day's activities from 9 p.m. to midnight in the Centennial Ob-
