Gay and lesbian float · denied entry in

Western Days parade

By Joshua Palmer Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — It's the first float to be denied entry into the Western Days parade. While some say the decision was made in defense of conser-

Wild some say the decision was made in defense of conservative values, others say it was simply discrimination against gays and lesibains.

The Western Days Committee rejected a gay and lesibain group's request to participate in the annual Western Days parade that takes place today. The committee said it denied the float early by the Southern Idaho Gay, Lesbian, Biscaual and Transgender (GLBT) Community Center because it was inappropriate for a family event.

"This is a very conservative region with strong religious values," said Lisa Cuellar, chairwoman of Western Days Committee. "It's mothing, against the group itself, but we felt that it was in everyloxy's best interest not to allow their float in the parade."

In Denver, Speaker's doctors said that he could be in the hospital for up to two months, and that if antibiotics fail to and that if antibiotics tail to knock out the extremely drug-resistant infection, he may have to undergo surgery to remove infected lung tis-sue, about the size of a tennis hall.

Surgery to remove pieces of the lung was more common before the advent of sophisticated drugs in the 1960s. But it is coming back as a treatment because of the development of strains resistant to those drugs.

Speaker is the first infected person quarantined by the U.S. government since 1963. In the TV interview, Speaker, wearing street clother, vearing street clother, vearing and crew members now anxiously awaiting the results of

"I don't expect for people to ever forgive me. I just hope that they understand that I truly never meant to put them in harm," he said, his voice cracking. Health officials have contacted 74 of the 310 U.S. citi-zens who were on the May 12 Air France flight that Speaker and his fiance took to Paris, the CDC said. That count includes all 26 who sat in the five-row area around Speaker—the ones considered at greatest risk.

None is exhibiting symptoms, CDC officials said.

We commend Roady's for spending its money in such a public-spirited way in falsho, but does the company really have to put its name on this title! It sounds, quite frankly, crass and transparently commercial.

American forces.

And here's where the GOP caught a political break. As Republicans strove for 'peace with honor' in Iraq, Democratic Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, D-Nev, having cardior declared the war 'last,' went even further, pursuing his partisan vendetta against the 43rd president. In each instance, The New York Timer counseled the Democrats to vote in favor of 'sophisticated' open-horders liberalism, And, of course, Sens. Ilibary Rodham Clinton, D-N.Y., and Barack Obanta, D-Ill., each hungering for The Times' presidential endorsement, were cager to please. But the 'Reagan Democratis'—the folks who had elected populist Democrats such as Jim Webb and on Tisser to the Senate in 2006— Jon Tester to the Senate in 2006 — were not so pleased. So when the Republicans finally found their voice on immigration found their voice on immigration, the Beagan Democrats were re-Beaganized. Finally, Republicans were speaking about realism and the national Interest, always a win-net for them.

The Democrats tried to flight back, using the health care issue, but the GOP was ready with a response, pointing to moderate health plans enacted by Republican governors from Massachusetts to California, Timally, late in the 2008 campiagn.

Finally, late in the 2006 campaign, the Democrats attempted to enter-give their own small base, endorsing gay marriage and repeal of the Patriot Act.

It didn't work. The Republicans, nominating a ticket free of any close association with the outgoing administration, won a comfortable victory, And so, for the eighth time in 11 presidential elections, liberalism was defeated.

management agreement

Park Service, state reach bison

HELENA, Mont. (AP) — The National Park Service and the state of Montana agreed Friday to truck a renegade group of bison into Yellowstone National Park if the animals resist the latest bazing efforts — an effort aimed at preventing the slaughter of week-old bison raleys calves.

Gov. Brian Schweitzer announced the plan with Suzame Lewis, superintendent of Yellowstone National Park, Schweitzer said it was hammered out with the help of U.S. Interior Secretary Dirk

of U.S. Interior Secretary Disk. Sempthorne.

The plan would preclude sending the cows and calves to slaughter – an issue that had brought intense scrutiny from bison advocates.

A pardon has been granted, Schweitzer said.

The agreement received mixed reaction from boin sides of the debater ranchers who want the bison off their summer feed ground and worry they will transmit discuss to their livestock and those who want free range for the Yellowstone animals.

About 300 bison, including 100 calves born this spring, have been rouming on summer cardig grazing lands near West Vellowstone in recent weeks, despite several hazing attempts. On Thursday and Friday, state agents on horses and in a helicopter, pushed them back into the park.

About 280 were hazed back into the park on Fridays, and another 35 were pushed back into the park on Friday.

The hazing came after the Montana Livestock

Department

Department postponed a plan to them to slaughter.

Schweitzer said the park service agreed to hend its rules and allow them to truck the bison deep into the park should they come back out. He called if a "middle ground" agreement.

This is unprecedented that the bison were getting lazed back into the park and not staying them; the governor said. The park has never agreed to do this before, but we have not ever been in this situation before. Schweitzer said early reports, however, slowed the latest hazing effort may work, Many of the bison, hazed 7 milles into the park, appeared to be heading deeper into Yellowstone.

miles into the park, appeared to be heading deeper into Yellowstone. If the bison come out, however, they will be loaded into trucks and released in a capture facility near Cardiner near the park's northern border. The bison would be coaxed from there back into a different region of the park. It think we took a step in the right direction." Levis said at a news conference with Schwelzer. Lewis said more discussions are queeded on managing the bison. "Clearly, finding places for bison on the landscape outside the park remains a big goal," she said.

Teen's lawyer: Co-conspirator was lone stabber in Idaho slaying

POCATELLO (AP) — The defense strategy of a teen accused of killing his 16-year-old classmate emerged during the opening day of his trial, as attorneys for Torey Adamcik told jurors his alleged co-conspirator wielded the knife that cold jurors his alleged co-conspirator wielded the knife that ended Cassie D Stoddart's life. The 6th District Court trial of Adamcik, 16, is the second in Stoddart's slaying. Brian Draper, also 16, was convicted April 17 of first-degree murder and conspiracy to commit first-degree murder in the Inomicide on Sept. 22, 2006. Adamcik's lawyer. Aaron Thompson, told jurors during his opening statements Thursday that a videotape made by Adamcik and Draper made by Adamcik and Draper made by Adamcik who killed Stoddart. Thompson described Draper as a roubled teen with a police record and a fascination with the 1999 Columbine 11gh School massacre in Colorado.

killed Cassie."

Stoddart was housestiting for relatives when police say Draper and Adamck entered the home and stabbed her. They say Stoddarts boyfriend had left the bouse previously; otherwise, he also could have been killed, police say.

At Draper's six-day trial in April, jurors saw video footage of Stoddart starting at the high school on the morning of the of Studdart starting at the high school on the morning of the attack. It also shows Draper and Adamick discussing what appears to be a murder plan. The same video will also be the centerpiece of Adamick's trial. "We are making our plan for tonlight." Adamick says on the videotape.

"It's going happen tonight," Draper adds.

In the video, Draper talks of how he and Adamcik have tried several times to kill somehody before but "they" were not home. "Tonight, they will be alone, Draper says. "I'm sorry Cassie... She's going to die tonight."

Cassie ... She's going to die tonight."

Adamcik says, "We are listening to the greatest rock group ever, Pink Floyd, before we commit the ultimate crime murder."

Adamcik's lawyer, however, told jurors on Thursday that the videotape's renewed playing — and other evidence such as DNA on a T-shirt and glove — would tell the story of a lone killer.

"You will see he (Drapee) is obsessed with Columbine."
Thompson said. "You are going to hear that he had writing fantasizing about school shootings. All the evidence is consistent with one murderer and they already caught him. Ilis name is Brian Lee Draper." Prosecutors countered that jurors would hear a different story one in which a pair of troubled teems in a fewer of violence hatched a plan to kill Stoddart, then carried it out with tey efficiency and a lack of remorse.

"The videotape is a pretty compelling piece of evidence," Bannock County Prosecutor Mark Hiedeman told jurors. "Throughout the inperiod of the control of the counter of the co

Shrine games could be close again

Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Former rivals will work together and athletes from vastly different schools and playing styles will strap on the pads tonlying to the 30th Annual All-Star Shrine Football Games at Bruin Stadium. Every player is from the class of 2007 and this could mark the last time many of them ever play competitive football.

The 11-man South team will be highlighted by players from the Class 3A runner-up Bull Indians as Austin Laing. Eric Hernandez. Will Livers and others take to the grid-Iron. The North will hoast stars from the turnaround Jerome program and others from playoff participants Minico, Glenns Ferry and Goodling.

squad edged the North team 19-12 with a 10-yard touchdown run from quarterback Spencer Stoker with best than 90 seconds left. The with put the South up 11-5 for the series, which changed from the old East-West format in 1991.

The 8-man North team will be led by the Class 1A state champion coach Lane Kirkland with many of his stars from Carely's stellar 2006 run. The South team features numerous players from Hansen and Lighthouse Christian such as Ryan DeKruyf, who signed with Carroll College of Montana.

The 2006 version of the 8-man game was also a close affair as the North wond 24-20. The South was up 20-12 headed into the fourth, but the South rallied for two scores in the final quarter as the defense shut down the North.

First win lifts Mears' confidence

DOVER, Del. (AP) — Week after week, Casey Mears watched his Hendrick Motorsports teammates take turns celebrating in Victory Lane. He wondered when his time would come. Buried near the bottom of the points standings, Mears would have been thrilled with even a top 10 finish in the Coca-Cola 600 to take the heat off the miserable start to his first season with the NASCAR powerhouse team. While teammates Jimmie Johnson and Jeff Gordon are both NASCAR champions, and kyle Busch is in contention for a Nextel Cup title. Mears has merely been an afterthough.

While Johnson and Mears are best buds off the track, the two have little in common on it. Johnson is the defending Nextel Cupchamp and a former Daytona 500 winner. Gordon leads this year's points race and is a four-time Cup champ, and Busch is ninth in the points race.

"I know it's something he's proud of, but also solvened at the same time." Johnson

"I know it's something he's proud of, but also relieved at the same time," Johnson said after taking his qualifying run. "It reminds me a little bit of us winning the championship. We were close and didn't do it. When we finally did it, there was a lot of relief."

Mears knew winning wouldn't be as sim-ple as hopping into the cockpit. "People think that just because you sign with Hendrick Motorsports, all of a sudo everything's great and you should be able to win races right out of the gate," Mears said. The team was nowhere loss to great for Mears, who had to adjust to a Chevrolet after four years of driving a Dodge, Mears got a new crew chief, Darian Grubb, only 10 days before the season-opening Dayroina 500 and he finished no better than 20th in the first four races. "We're probably about 15 percent into 100 percent of our potential," Mears said. Mears isn't expecting a similar drop-off on Sunday at Dover International Speedway, where he's recorded one top 10 finish.

WASTINGTON — The country's economic health may be improving. Employers nearly doubled the number of jobs they added to payrolls in May, allowing the unemployment rate to hold steady at a relatively low 4.5 percent.

The fresh employment picture provided by the Labor Department on Friday showed job creation bounced back, with payrolls growing by 157,000 fast month. That was an improvement over the 80,000 new jobs generated in April, the fewest in two and a half years.

Paris offers free scuba diving lessons—looking up the Eiffel Tower

PARIS (AP) — The weather was nippy and overcast and the water just chest-high, but a new scuba-diving pool in Paris has something Ball, Belize and other diving hotspots don't: a terrific view of the Elife! Tower. To promote the sport, scuba instructors began offering free Irssons Friday — with wet-suits, scuba gear and even a biodegradable towel — at the foot of the French capital's famed landmark. "Through the water you can see the monument. It's magnificent," said New Zealand tourist Adrian Carter, one of the first to try it.

"This is better than the Eiffed Tower," said Carter, a 22-year-old computer programmer, his hair dripping from the 30-minute diwe — his first ever. The lessons include a safety lecture and a how-to demonstration in which instructors share this. One first-time diwer did a double-take when his guide told him to spit into his goggles to help keep them from fogging up.

The above-ground pool is under the Tower, between its four legs. It's small, at 50 feet by 50 feet, about haif the size of a basketball court. Just 4-feet deep, it's safe for beginners and children aged B and older, said the event's organizers, an umbrella group of scuba associations. School officials in Galesburg, a working-class town of 34,000 that is still reeling from the 2004 shutdown of a 1,600-employee refrigerator factory, said the get-tough policy followed a 2005 commencement where hoots, hollers and even afthoris drowned out much of the ceremony and nearly touched off fights in the audience when the unruly were asked to quiett down.

And i think that led us to saying we have to do something about this to restore some dignity and honor to the ceremony so that everyone can appreciate it and enjoy it."

In Indianapolis, public school officials this year started kicking out parents and relatives who cheer. At one school, the superintendent interrupted last month's graduation to order police to remove a woman from the gymnasium.

"It's an Important, solemn occasion. There's plenty of time for celebration before and after," said Clarke Campbell, president of the Indianapolis school board.

In Galesburg, the Issue has taken on added controversy with accusations that the students were targeted because of their race; four are black and one is Hispanic. Parents say cheers also erupted for white students, and none of them was denied a diploma.

By early next spring, joyful obse will restonate within a new facility to be built near the north edge of town.

The centenulal move from the two-story brick structure at 205 Madison St. E. is more than timely. While nostalgaruns deep, the new location promises double the space and a world of convenience. "No more stairs," said the Rev. William Lineberry, the church's pastor. He sees the absence of obstacles associated with a two-story, full-basement building as far outwelphing the anxieties that are linked with relocation.

The groundbreaking ceremony on the 4.5-acre site is scheduled for Sunday at 2 p.m. At a cost of $2.175 million. At a cost of $2.175 million, the one-level, 20,000 squarefoot church will consist of a large sanctuary with open ceilings and mobile seating to accommodate upwards of 350 parishioners.

'NO AGENDA BUT THE CHURCH'

St. Louis prelate aims to rein in the flock

ST. LOUIS - When it comes

ST.LOUIS — When it comes to expressing his views of church values, Roman Catholic Archbishop haymond Burke has a habit of making headlines, not always to the satisfaction of his flock.

Burke memorably declared that he would deny communion to Sen. John F. Kerry, Do-Mass., because the 2004 Democratic presidential nominee supports abortion rights. He fought unsuccessfully to keep singer Sheryl Crow, who supports embryonic stem cell research, from headlining an April fundraiser for the Cardinal Gleinnon Children's Medical Center, then resigned from the hospital foundations board in protest. Just this month, his office pushed St. Joseph's Academy, Catholic high school, to renege on its invitation to Sen. Claire McCaskill, Do-Mo. to deliver this year's commencement address because of her abortion-rights position. even

He tells his critics that he has archdiocses.

He tells his critics that he has "no agenda but the church."

Burke's decisions — and their very public nature—have rolled the church in St. Louis, home to more than 1500.000 Catholics, While some praise Burke for firmness in an era of moral laxity, others complain that the church under his direction seems out of touch. There are certain parallels with Benedict's own experiences. The pope recently questioned the propriety of pro-hoice legislators accepting Communion and told reporters that he agreed with excommunication for Mexican lawmakers who voted to legalize abortion.

In response, 18 Catholic members of Congress declared that "religious sanction in the political arena" violates American freedoms.

Widower wants wife's urn to stand as symbol of love

DEAR ABBY. My heautiful wife of 34 years passed away eight months ago. I miss her very much. Her dying wish was that she be cremated, which I respected. She asked that her ashes be scattered at sea, which I will do this summer.

Her ashes are in a beautiful urn in the shape of a vase. After her ashes are spread in the occan, would like by proper to use her urn as a vase? I would like to display it as a reminder of our love for each other and keep a dozen red roses in it at all times.

I have never seen a discussion of urns before in your column. Just what are you supposed to do with an urn that, and the summer of the summer

DEAR BUS DRIVER: Please accept my sympanity for the loss of your wife. I took your question to a wonderful woman named Lisa Carlson, the executive director of the Puneral Ethics Organization. Lisa assured me that it would be "absolutely proper" to use your wife's urn as a vase. Then she added that if you eventually get a girlfriend, you may want to be discreet about the "vase," and if you have children, you might consider passing it on to them: as a family heirloom after your own death.

DEAR ABBY Jeanne Phillips

DEAIR ABBY: What is the "proper" way to pass on baby clottles and baby items? I was blessed with a child later in life (I am 40). I will not be having more children.

I gave a lot of clottles to a friend and kept some for sentimental reasons, but my question is this tems like-the years, the tems like-the swing, withratting chair and exer-saucer were gifts. Do'l have to give them away since they were shover gifts to mo! Or is it OK to self them at a yard sale?

I have a friend who is expecting me to just give her

I have a friend who is expecting me to just give her all my stuff. Jun torn, Am I being stings? Or just frugal? Why am I so weeted about passing on my bably stuff? Help? — DANICA: When someone receives a gift, whether it be at a holiday or a shower, that item becomes the property of the recipient to do with as she (or he) pleases. I don't think you are being "weird" about your baby things, four trend is being presumptious to expect any-thing, and should be grateful for any items you give her without feeling entitled to more.

DEAR ABBY: I am a woman with friends of all ages, and I receive lots of phone calls. I like people and elrey hearing from them. However, several of the "regulars" who call me talk mostsop. As long as I listen, they're fine, But I'l try to launch into a subject that interests me, they tell me they're really busy and terminate the call.

How should I interpret this? I have tried laughingin off, but I feels like a put-down.

— FIELING USED IN THE SOUTH DEAR FEELING USED. IN Seems you're spending a lot of time on the phone. The people you have described appear to be in love with the sound of themselves. They appear to be in love with the sound of heir own voices, rather than calling to convers — which implies an exchange of information.

implies an exchange of infor-mation.

I don't think they are trying to put you down. It's just that in their "universe," listening to someone clese is too great an inconvenience. People like this are more interested in an addiency than a friendship, so budget your time accordingly.

Traffic stop yields more than a ton of pot — and 20 tons of candy

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Two men hauling more than 40,000 pounds of Jawbreaker candies also had some not-so-sweet freight, the Minnesota State Patrol said: nearly 1½ tons of marillang.

Patrol said: nearly 172 tones of marijuana. Luis Rene Avila and Juan Carlos appeared in federal court Thursday on charges of intent to distribute marijuana. A search using a drug-sniffing dog turned up the load during a traffic stop Tuesday near St. Paul. The 41 boxes of marl-juana were surrounded by 28 pallets of boxes containing the hard candy, authorities said.

Kent Balley, acting special agent in charge of the Mitineapolis-St. Paul office of the Drug Enforcement Administration, said the marl-juana would be incinerated and the cardy probably would be destroyed as well.

"I initially thought about how we could give that away to kids forever and ever. But I couldn't take the risk." he said. "Even though they were in cellophane and they're boxed, that package has been sluting, somewhere for a month with a ton and a half of marijuann next to it."

Where women love each other,

men learn to smother their mutu al dislike." — George Eliot

Saturday, June 2, 2007

In today's deal North constructed an intelligent auction, first transferring to spades to show five cards in the suit, then jumping to four not-trump as a quantitative sequence, letting South advance with a maximum and three-card support. As it turned out, though, slam was nothing special, because of the wasted values in diamonds.

On the lead of the heart queen to dummy's ace, South advanced the spade queen from dummy and ran it, West contributing the 10. Since this particular West had never sacrificed a high card in his life, South played for the 10 to be singleton. He cashed the three top diamonds, then took the two top clubs and ruffed a club. At this point he led a heart to his king and played a third heart, putting west on lead.

In the three-card ending, dumy had the 19-98 of spades, de-

West on lead.

In the three-card ending, dummy had the J-9-8 of spades, declarer the doubleton spade ace and the 13th heart, while East had king-third of spades. When West perforce led a minor-suit card, declarer ruffed in dummy. East could overruff or underruff as he was the best fill but his tumps thick was could overrull or underrult as he saw fit, but his trump trick was just about to vanish into thin air! This maneuver is called a Smother Coup, and it is as unusual as it is elegant.

The hand was beautifully

The hand was beautifully played by South. Note that, at double-dummy, it was accepted. ble-dummy, it was essential that he not repeat the spade finesse at trick three. Had he done so, a psychic West might have pitch heart honor and set the slam.

ANSWER: Double, to show cards. The opponents have bid and sup-ported a suit, so all low-level dou-bles should be takeout here, just showing a little extra. It sounds as if the opponents have a fit, so you should too. Wherever partner goes, you will be happy.
