College of Southern Idaho President Jerry Beck, left, and Mike Mason, finance director, hold a map of the future CSI campus Thursday in a field where they hope to build a road that allows access to a new Health Science and Human Services facility. The property is off North College Road across from CSI.

TWIN FALLS — As soon as the College of Southern Idaho received a check for $21.1 million to build a new Health Sciences and Human Services building, it began discussions with the city of Twin Falls and a neighboring property owner to plan the first component — the road.

And that's where the problems began. "I'm in a tight spot," said Jerry Beck, president of CSI. "I have the city that wants us to do it one way, but in some respects our hands are tied so we have to look at other ways of doing this."

At issue is a new road that would divert traffic around an expanded CSI campus and its new health sciences building.

City engineers want the college to build a road that would create a city-block around the expanded campus before connecting with a proposed road that will separate the new high school and Wal-Mart. But to do that, the college wants an agreement with the Lazy J Ranch — a mobile

City engineers want the college to build a road that would create a city-block around the expanded campus before connecting with a proposed road that will separate the new high school from Wal-Mart. But to do that, the college wants an agreement with the Lazy J Ranch that would require Lazy J and CSI to share the cost of the road construction.

NEWSTRACKER

LAST WE KNEW: Gov. Butch Otter wrote the College of Southern Idaho a check for $21.1 million in April to build a new Health Sciences and Human Services building. THE LATEST: CSI has begun planning for the new building and campus expansion north of North College Road. WHAT'S NEXT: Officials must reach an agreement with neighboring property owners to build a road around the campus.

home park on the north side of the property where the health sciences building will be built — that would require Lazy J and CSI to share the cost of the road construction. According to a copy of the plan proposed by the college, the road would straddle the property line between the two parties and connect the future Cheney Drive. The college and mobile home park would each pay 50 percent of construction costs so that both could use the road for access. But attempts by the college to discuss the agreement have been delayed and likely will grow more complicated. Linda Wills, one of the three co-owners of the Lazy J Ranch, recently filed a lawsuit against the Idaho Transportation Department, which began the litigation process only last Thursday.

Mine near Elko might have bypassed pollution controls

Prevailing winds carry mercury to southern Idaho

BOISE (AP) — Officials are investigating whether owners of a Nevada gold mine intentionally bypassed pollution control equipment after tests last year showed much higher mercury emissions than expected. Prevailing winds carry the mercury to southern Idaho. High amounts of mercury can damage the human nervous system, particularly those in developing fetuses.

Officials with Queenstake Resources, owners of the Jerritt Canyon Mine near Elko, Nev., said that between 1998 and 2005 they voluntarily cut 97 percent of mercury emissions.

However, tests in 2006 that are part of Nevada's new mandatory mercury control program revealed mercury emissions near 1998 levels. The tests found the mine emits about 9,300 pounds of mercury per year.

Last month, the Idaho Conservation League told the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency that the test results mean the company might have deliberately routed emissions around equipment designed to limit mercury being released into the atmosphere.

"Companies like Queenstake are putting mercury in our air, and it's coming down in our lakes and streams and contaminating our fish, which are poisoning our families," Justin Hayes, program director for the Idaho Conservation League, told the Idaho Statesman.

The allegation is being investigated by the Nevada Division of Environmental Quality. They have asked the mine owners to retest its ore roasters.

"There are a number of serious questions raised, and we're looking into it," said Dante Pistone, a spokesman for the Nevada enforcement agency.

CSI dean of health sciences to retire

By Joshua Palmer
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — There were only four buildings on the main campus when he started working at the College of Southern Idaho.

Now there are about 20 buildings that house more than three times the number of programs offered in 1968 — the year Jim Palmer, dean of Health Sciences and Human Services, began his career at the community college.

Palmer

Next month, Palmer will retire as an instructor and administrator at CSI just before the college begins its plan to build a $21.1 million health and human services facility.

"Yeah, there has been a lot of change since I started here," Palmer said. "There have been the usual changes, like an increase in students and programs, but I think the biggest change is the reputation of the school as a leader in community colleges."

He said the college was only seven years old when he started and that its name was barely recognized throughout Idaho.

"I don't see the growth slowing down," Palmer said. "And I think the next dean should expect new collaborations between the college's departments to accommodate that growth."

He said the college has already approved a collaborative department that will include health sciences and biology.

As for Palmer, he said he will retire so he can work in his private practice and complete two books that he has been working on.

Bomb collapses overpass in Iraq, trapping U.S. soldiers

By Charles J. Hanley
The Associated Press

MAHMOUDIYA, Iraq — With a thunderous rumble and cloud of dust and smoke, a large concrete overpass collapsed on Sunday, wounding several U.S. soldiers guarding the crossing and blocking traffic on Iraq's main north-south artery.

There was no immediate U.S. Army confirmation on the number and severity of the casualties. An Iraqi civilian also was injured, said Donald Campbell, of the private security Armor Group International, who helped in the rescue.

Tonys have rock-tinged 'Awakening'

Los Angeles Times

NEW YORK — "Spring Awakening," the musical lauded for giving Broadway fresh impetus by using rock songs to intensify its tale of teenagers wrestling with their libidos in 19th century Germany, racked up eight Tony Awards on Sunday night.

Its haul during the 'Tonys' 61st annual ceremonies, televised from Radio City Music Hall, included best musical, best score — by composer Duncan Sheik and librettist Steven Sater — best book and best direction of a musical, by Michael Mayer, who deployed a cast of young unknowns in a show drawn faithfully from Frank Wedekind's 1891 play "The chorographer, modern dance notable Bill T. Jones, also won a Tony in his first Broadway outing.

"Musical theater rocks," proclaimed Sheik, a staple on the modern-rock touring and recording circuit since his 1996 hit, "Barely Breathing." He and Elton John ("Aida") are the only rockers to win Tonys for music written expressly for the stage.

"The Coast of Utopia" won seven Tonys, setting a record for a straight play. The previous record holders, "Death of a Salesman" (1949) and "The History Boys" (2006), received six apiece.

Stoppard's three-part epic is an account of a group of 19th century Russian reformers who confined themselves to ideas rather than the violent upheaval later fomented by the Bolsheviks, their 20th century successors, it was Stoppard's fourth Tony for best play, beginning with "Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead" in 1968; Arthur Miller and Neil Simon each won three Tonys.

"I feel a bit nostalgic," Stoppard said. "It was a different planet in 1967. They had little ashtrays clamped to the backs of the seats, and the author got 10 percent of the gross."

"Among the awards for Stephen Sondheim was Jack O'Brien's for best direction of a play — the third Tony in five years for the artistic director of the Old Globe Theatre in San Diego.

The best musical review was "Company," the 1970 Stephen Sondheim-George Furth show that was retitled with the actors doubling as the show's onstage band — the device director John Doyle previously used for another Sondheim standard, "Sunday in the Park with George."

"Journeys' End," J.C. Sheriff's 1920s drama about British soldiers in the trenches of World War I, won an expected Tony as best Broadway play of a play.

 from Inverness, Scotland, was among those in a passing Armor Group convoy who worked with a U.S. Army quick reaction force for some 45 minutes to pull trapped men from the rubble, scrambling over the fallen concrete. U.S. armored vehicles provided cover fire from their cannons after the bombing, which occurred in the area dubbed the "triangle of death" for its frequent Sunni insurgent attacks. The blast dropped one of two sections of the "Checkpoint 20" bridge crossing over the north-south expressway six miles east of Muthmoudiya. It appeared that a north-bound suicide driver stopped and detonated his vehicle beside a support pillar, said Lt. Col. Garry Bushi, an Army munitions officer who was in the convoy, which also carried an Associated Press reporter and photographer and arrived two minutes after the blast. A U.S. Army checkpoint and a tent structure, apparently a rest area, fell into the shattered concrete. The crossing was believed to have been closed to all but military traffic at the time. Armor Group security guards, all ex-military, and others in the convoy rushed to the ruins. They found a scene of confusion. "When that size blast went off, everyone was in shock," said one of the first atop the rubble, Jackie Smith, 53, of Olathe, Kan., a former lieutenant colonel now working as a civilian Army munitions expert. He said he saw what he believed was the engine block of a truck — apparently what remained of the suicide vehicle. Soon the outpost sergeant in charge was organizing a search for his missing men, Smith said. The Armor Group teams climbed up with first-aid kits, stretchers and other aid. With the Army's quick reaction force, they struggled to lift concrete shards off the men, pinned along the slope of what was once a roadway. At one point, a Bradley armored vehicle with a tow chain pulled a slab off a pinned victim to free him. Then a shout went up, "Morphine! Morphine!" and a black T-shirt-clad Briton administered painkiller to the freed man. "Another poor fellow looked crushed beneath a concrete slab," said Campbell of Armor Group. During the rescue, U.S. armored vehicles opened up with suppressing fire, possibly having spotted movement in the surrounding countryside, flat and baking in 100-degree-plus temperatures. Traffic was delayed for over an hour until a medevac helicopter landed to take aboard the wounded, and traffic slowly resumed under the remaining section of the span. Iraqi police said the overpass was a vital link across the highway for villagers in the area because the other spans have been taken over by U.S. forces.

Road

 Wills told CSI officials that she would not speak with the college about an agreement until the lawsuit was settled. Wills did not return phone calls from the Times-News, and a spokesman for ITD said he could not comment on the lawsuit. If CSI cannot reach an agreement with Wills, as well as the two other owners of the Lazy J Ranch, it will be forced to choose other methods of diverting traffic around the expanded campus. According to CSI officials, those could include: Building the road entirely on college property, and then charging the Lazy J Ranch a fee for use of the road. Allow traffic to keep using North College Road at a reduced rate of speed, even though it will cut through the center of the expanded campus. Building a road that would go around the expanded campus, but would not connect with the future Cheney Drive. Although the college will receive some of the $21.1 million from the Department of Public Works to build roads, that money can only be spent on roads and parking specifically used for the Health Sciences and Human Services building. The college will have to use its own money to pay for the road around the expanded campus. If the college can't reach an agreement with the Lazy J Ranch, it will pursue one of the three other options that are less costly. But that concerns city engineers, who say the other options do not serve the best interest of the community. "These people have some legal ways of pursuing their goals, and one of those ways is seeking financial compensation," said Jackie Fields, Twin Falls city engineer. "But CSI is using the taxpayers' money, and we (city of Twin Falls) want to ensure that any tax dollars that are spent are for the benefit of residents of the community." However, Beck said the college does not want to pay for a road that would be used freely by a private landowner. And if the college must pay for the entire road, it will charge Lazy J Ranch owners for use of the road. "I can tell you this much," he said. "Even if they want to use a one-foot stretch of that road, it will be the most expensive one-foot stretch of road they will ever pay for."

Mine

 The company denied the allegations. "The recent assertions by the Idaho Conservation League regarding bypassing the stacks are without basis and are false," the company said in the statement. In 2005, Idaho's mercury monitoring program found that mercury levels in the air south of Twin Falls rose up to 70 percent when winds blew from the southwest. The Jerritt Canyon Mine and four other gold mines are located upwind.

And at Salmon Falls Creek Reservoir near the Nevada border, the Idaho Department of Environmental Quality also found higher-than-normal mercury levels. Salmon Falls Creek Reservoir is a favorite area to fish for walleyes. Quota officials said they plan to spend $500,000 this year to upgrade pollution control equipment. "The health and safety of our employees and our communities is paramount in our operations," the company said in its statement.

UI official behind letter from NASA that criticizes employee

MOSCOW (AP) — A letter believed to have been sent by a NASA official to the University of Idaho criticizing a school researcher appears to have been drafted by the researcher's boss at the university in a bid to discredit the employee, according to school records.

Gary Maki, director of the university's Center for Advanced Microelectronics and Biomolecular Research, wrote a draft of the letter and sent it to a colleague at NASA with instructions that it be sent back to the school "close to the way it is" so he could take it to UI President Tim White and use it against the researcher.

Joseph Hass, the target of the letter, obtained the letter and an e-mail through Idaho's open records laws. He then gave the information to The Spokesman-Review newspaper.

In 2005, Hass provided information to a UI auditor that got Maki in trouble. The audit has led to an investigation by the state attorney general into possible wrongdoing at the research center involving possible theft, computer crimes, acceptance of rewards by state employees, and criminal nepotism.

The letter purportedly from NASA questions whether Hass had provided sensitive information to "unauthorized sources," including "foreign agents."

"There's kind of a veiled threat (in the letter) that if the university doesn't do something about me, they're risking their NASA funding," Hass told the newspaper.

Pen-Shu Yeh, a NASA program coordinator whose signature is on the letter, and Maki declined to comment to the newspaper and did not immediately return calls to The Associated Press on Sunday.

White told the newspaper he had seen the letter — sent some 10 months ago — but declined to comment on it because it involved a legal and personnel matter.

Hass, who has continued his job at the Center for Advanced Microelectronics and Biomolecular Research, and his wife, Martha, who used to work for UI, have filed a defamation lawsuit against the university.

They say they faced retaliation from their superiors and the administration and accuse officials of defaming them after they raised concerns in 2005 with the UI auditor. The school denies the allegations.

The audit concluded Maki and others at the center improperly and deliberately used university resources to help private companies. The audit said Maki and the others had a financial interest in those companies.

Hass said he has not been formally disciplined concerning alleged security breaches or other accusations in the letter.

Lieberman: U.S. should prepare to strike Iran

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Joseph Lieberman said Sunday the United States should consider a military strike against Iran because of Tehran's involvement in Iraq.

"I think we've got to be prepared to take aggressive military action against the Iranians to stop them from killing Americans in Iraq," Lieberman said. "And to me, that would include a strike over the border into Iran, where we have good evidence that they have a base at which they are training these people coming back into Iraq to kill our soldiers."

The U.S. accuses Iran of fostering terrorism and Tehran's nuclear ambitions have brought about international concern.

Lieberman, the Democratic nominee for vice president in 2000 who now represents Connecticut as an independent, spoke of Iran's role in the continued violence in Iraq.

"We've said so publicly that the Iranians have a base in Iraq at which they are training Iraqis who are coming in and killing Americans. By some estimates, they have killed as many as 200 American soldiers," Lieberman said. "Well, we can tell them we want them to stop that. But if there's any hope of the Iranians listening according to the international rule of law and stopping, for instance, their nuclear weapons development, we can't just talk to them."

He added, "If they don't play by the rules, we've got to use military force, and that would include taking military action to stop them from doing what they're doing." Lieberman said much of the action could probably be done by air, although he would leave the strategy to the generals in charge. "I want to make clear I'm not talking about a massive ground invasion of Iraq," Lieberman said.

"They can believe that they have immunity for training and equipping people to come in and kill Americans," he said. "We cannot let them get away with it. If we do, they'll take that as a sign of weakness on our part and we will pay for it in Iraq and throughout the region and ultimately right here at home."

To deal with Iran's nuclear ambitions, Democratic presidential hopeful Sen. Bill Richardson said tough negotiation is called for.

6 dead, toddler injured in Wisconsin shooting

By Todd Richmond Associated Press writer

DELANVAN, Wis. — Twin infant boys were among six people found shot to death in a rental house in southern Wisconsin, after a barrage of gunfire that neighbors thought was pre-Fourth of July fireworks.

A survivor, a 2-year-old girl, was shot in the chest and found in a van nearby.

Investigators refused to describe the circumstances of the shooting, but police said they don't believe anyone else was in danger, suggesting that it was either a murder-suicide or the shooter was in custody.

"What we have is a complicated death scene and we're investigating all the possibilities," said Kevin St. John, a spokesman with the state Justice Department, which is leading the investigation.

Officers, responding to a report of shots fired, stormed the 4-frame duplex Saturday night with weapons drawn, kicking in the door, neighbor Richard Heideman said. He saw two paramedics go in behind them and come back out minutes later.

"That's when I knew everybody was dead," Heideman said.

As the bodies were wheeled out, one onlooker dropped to his knees on a neighbor's lawn and threw his hands to the sky in prayer. Authorities have not released the victims' names, but Kay Macara said her 19-year-old daughter, Vanessa Iverson, was among the dead.

With tears in her eyes, Macara said her daughter went to the apartment the previous night to visit friends.

"My child," she said. "I want answers."

Also in the house during the shooting were the twin infants, their parents, and the mother's sister and her husband, said Sarah Iverson, Iverson's sister-in-law.

The 2-year-old sister of the twins, Jasmine, was in serious condition at University of Wisconsin Hospital in Madison.

The father of the children, 22-year-old Ambrolio Anacleo, was among the dead, said Marco Pastrana, Anacleo's cousin. He said the twin boys were 2 to 3 months old.

Prisons ban some books on religion, fearing terrorism

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Inmates at the federal prison camp in Otisville, N.Y., were stunned by what they saw at the chapel library on Memorial Day — hundreds of books had disappeared from the shelves.

The removal of the books is occurring nationwide, part of a long-delayed, post-Sept. 11 federal directive intended to prevent radical religious texts, specifically Islamic ones, from falling into the hands of violent inmates.

Three inmates at Otisville filed a lawsuit over the policy, saying their Constitutional rights were violated. They say all religions were affected.

"The set of books that have been taken out have been ones that we used to minister to new converts when they came in here," inmate John Okon, speaking on behalf of the prison's Christian population, told a judge last week.

Okon said it was unfortunate because "I have really seen religion turn around the life of some of these men, especially in the Christian community."

The government maintained that the new rules don't entirely clear the shelves of prison chapel libraries. Assistant U.S. Attorney Brian Feldman told U.S. District Judge Laura Taylor Swain that prison libraries limited the number of books for each religion to between 100 and 150 under the new rules. He said that number would expand after a new list of permitted books is made.

Feldman said the removal order stemmed from an April 2004 Department of Justice review of the way prisons choose Muslim religious services providers. Feldman said the review by the U.S. Bureau of Prisons concluded that prison chapel libraries were not adequately supervised.

The cost of garbage

Mini-Cassia commissioners looking at solid waste removal fees

By Laurie Welch
For the Times-News

RUPERT — Minidoka County Commissioners are looking at whether the uniform assessment fee collected for moving solid waste is fair for users and keeping up with growth.

Southern Idaho Solid Waste Executive Director Terry Schultz presented commissioners with information last week so they could compare fee assessment methods from neighboring counties in the Southern Idaho Regional Solid Waste District.

In the past 12 months the amount of Minidoka County's solid waste has increased 7 percent, Schultz said.

"That's a notable increase; something is going on here," he said.

In Minidoka County, private companies pick up residential and commercial trash and deliver it to the county transfer station at 400 W. 325 N.

The county produces a but 1,200 to 1,400 tons of garbage a month, which is then taken to the Milner Butte Landfill.

Both the transfer station and the landfill are operated by the SHSWD. The county paid the district $629,130 for trash disposal and received a $30,000 dividend back. The uniform assessment fee paid by residential users is $65 a year and $110 for businesses.

Last year, monthly gate fees for extra large loads averaged about $3,540. One way to make charges more equitable would be to have a scale of cost based on the business rate, Schultz said.

Jerome County has successfully implemented an equitable uniform fee. It consists of a county ordinance that requires waste disposal companies to be licensed in the county with their clients, the size of containers they use and how often they dump the container, Schultz said.

Jerome County assesses a flat fee for up to 9 cubic feet per month. Business users' waste is measured by the size of container and how often it is serviced. The method is a volume-based assessment so that if people recycle, they pay less, Schultz said.

Another fee assessment method is the tipping fee system, which would cost about $25,000 in start-up costs for a scale.

Shultz said the $1.8 million landfill debt will be paid off around 2012 and will result in a 17 percent reduction in the amount the county pays to dispose of its refuse.

Commissioner Dan Stapelman said he would like to review the county's balance to see if there is enough funding to keep rates the same until the debt is paid.

Still, it is important to stay on top of the fee assessments since the county is growing, Schultz said.

"I believe you can measure economic growth by the output. You have some growth going on here and it will be interesting to see if it sustains itself," he said.

Flight instructor, student, learn from each other while taking to the skies

By Chris Steinbach
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — John Ellis and Shelby Sommer learned from each other.

"He's an excellent teacher," Sommer, 26, said of Ellis. "He was really flexible and willing to give as much as I was willing to take."

Ellis, 71, a retired minister in the American Baptist church and a flight instructor since 1977, taught Sommer how to fly during two weeks in April.

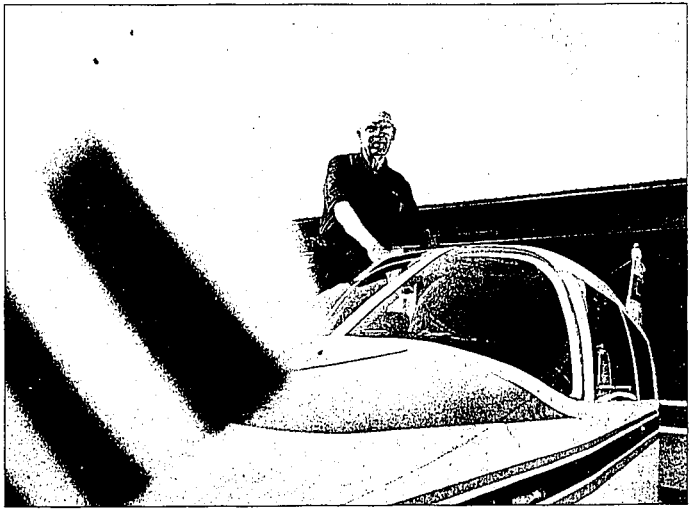

"I didn't think it was possible," Ellis said. "I was afraid I was beginning to grow (fraid) that seat."

Ellis, a member of the Magic Valley Aero Club, used the club's Piper Cherokee airplane to train Sommer beginning on April 16. On April 27, after 40.6 hours of training, Sommer passed his certification.

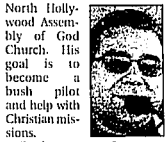

A minimum of 40 hours is required and it typically takes new pilots about 60 hours to pass, Ellis said.

Said Sommer, "It was (done) on limited time and a limited budget. I tried to get as much of it done as I could there."

Sommer, the son of Jim and Doris Sommer of Twin Falls, graduated from high school at the College of Southern Idaho in 1997, when he was 17. He lives in North Hellywood, Calif., where he is director of The Center Bible College, which is affiliated with the and three grandchildren — is active in the First Baptist Church in Filer. He has been flying since 1973. It was something he had wanted to do since he was a boy.

"One night I decided either I needed to make this dream come true or forget about it, so I decided to give it a shot," he said.

After some 2,300 hours in a plane, he can't remember how many pilots he has trained. "It seems like they come in waves," he said. "I do it for the joy of teaching people to fly."

Jim Sommer was impressed with how quickly his son learned under Ellis' tutelage.

"He made his first solo flight in under 10 hours," Jim Sommer said of his son.

"Most people require six months of instruction or more, flying a couple of times a week before they are able to take their test," he said. "John ... should be commended for his excellent instruction."

teacher and student were unable to fly for 2 1/2 days due to weather.

"While it isn't a record for the Guinness book, it is still the fastest known time from zero to pilot in the Magic Valley," Jim Sommer said.

Shelby Sommer said Ellis made the experience enjoyable.

"It was a lot more work than I expected," he said. "Some people may think it's too hard to do, (but) with teachers like John they can do it."

FILER — Dog lovers unite. The Snake River Canyon Kennel Club of Idaho will sponsor its annual American Kennel Club-sanctioned All-Breed and Obedience Dog Show on Tuesday and Wednesday at the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds.

The show draws some of the biggest names in the business and is becoming a regular stop on the dog show national circuit, said the show's chairwoman, Mary Stotz.

"If you watch dog shows on TV, you are you'll see some of them right here in Filer," Stotz said. "But instead of just seeing it on television, you'll be up close and personal."

Judging on conformation, handling and obedience will be held all on both days starting at 8 a.m. The Best in Show competition is usually

"We thought that this would be a real fun event. There are no punts awarded. It will be real fun to do and fun to watch," Sayers said.

New Burley plant almost ready to process all city waste

By Sven Berg
For the Times-News

BURLEY — There will be several weeks of testing and fine-tuning before the new wastewater treatment in Burley can operate at full speed.

One major challenge the plant is expected to face is increased industrial flows as more companies come to Burley, said Shane Jeff, a project manager for Voilta, the company hired to operate the plant. Because of their chemical makeup, industrial flows may require adjustments to the plant's processes as they mix with domestic flows.

Despite the slight delay before full on-line operation, the treatment plant's advanced methods are underway. As sewage is pumped into the plant, it passes through a filter that removes any solid objects larger than 6 millimeters in diameter — including napkins, plastic food wrappers or fabrics.

Sewage is then pumped into a grit-removing cyclone that uses centrifugal force to remove sandy content.

Once free of most solid particles, sewage flows into oxidation tanks where it is mixed with bacteria and alternately passes from oxic zones — areas where fine streams of oxygen are injected into the sewage — to non-oxic zones — where the mixture is starved of oxygen.

Some of the mixture of bacteria and wastewater then flows into a clarification pond, where the bacteria settle to the bottom as sludge. After several hours, the sludge is pumped back into the non-oxic zones.

Roping in the fun Team roping popular among family, friends

By Almee Durand

RICHFIELD — Horses and calves have been kicking up some dust recently at the Richfield Arena.

Local team ropers routinely have rodeo fun on Sundays, Wednesday and Friday in the summer and there is hardly a shortage of spectators or participants.

Large crowds usually turn out to watch novice and veteran ropers, both of whom show off their skills at roping calves.

"This is not a strength sport, just an accuracy sport," said Glen Hlatt, an old hand at the event.

coordination and forms strong relationships, Hlatt said.

"Team roping has become a family affair for Corey and Katie Connell and their three children, all who ride at the event."

"This is good family time and has really improved the kids' riding ability," said Katie Connell, who has also been operating the chutes at recent practices. With strong alliances between riders and their horses, as well as between the two team ropers, the event is worthwhile, said Sylvia Vaughn, a team sorter.

"It's fun, but you have to have a good horse," Vaughn said.

Bob Johnson, a rider whose family tradition in rodeo runs deep, likes to dazzle the crowds with his roping tricks.

"It's just a bunch of people coming out to have some fun," said Johnson. With the timeless combination of riding, roping and camaraderie, the event will unlikely have its dust settle any time soon.

OTHER VIEWS

Otter tones down his kill-the-wolves rhetoric

The Idaho Statesman, Boise

Gov. Butch Otter is seeking out some political cover on the wolf issue. More importantly, Otter is giving his Fish and Game Department the latitude to manage wolves based on science, not soundbites. This gives us reason for optimism, as the state gets ready to assume day-to-day wolf management. As the lead dog in state government, Otter sets the tone. His words resonate with wolf advocates, ranchers and hunters — and with game wardens, lawmakers and Fish and Game commissioners.

The Otter who spoke wolves last week with the Statesman's Rocky Barker was considerably more nuanced than the Otter we heard shortly after the election.

Otter says he doesn't want to see Idaho's wolf population plummet to a bare-bones number of 100 animals, down from a current population of more than 670. The federal government defines a "recovered" wolf population as 100 wolves, or 10 breeding pairs, but Otter realizes the state should maintain a larger wolf population in order to retain state sovereignty over wolves.

"I don't believe that you'll get down to 10 (breeding pairs), and I don't think our Fish and Game folks will let us get down to 10," Otter says.

Good plan. Now that wolves have moved into much of Idaho's backcountry, conflicts will only increase between these predators and ranchers and outfitters. The state needs the authority and flexibility to resolve these conflicts. The state needs to be able to use hunting as a tool to keep wolf numbers in check.

If wolves are controversial now, imagine the uproar if wolf numbers plummet — and the federal government has no recourse but to ban wolf hunting and reclaim control over the wild under the Endangered Species Act. This would represent a monumental failure — and no governor should want that linked to his or her legacy.

A few months ago, Otter sounded like he had wolf-kill on his mind. It wasn't his famous remark at a Statehouse rally. "I'm going to bid for the first ticket to shoot a wolf." It wasn't just Otter caught up, perhaps, in the heat of the moment. In a prepared statement for a Statesman editorial in December, Otter said: "The uninvited and unwelcome population of wolves in Idaho clearly has gotten out of hand. The federal government once again has proven itself incapable or unwilling to deal with a problem it created."

At least now, Otter isn't aggravating the problem by needing to the grandstand. It seems to recognize the need for balance, for good sound management. If his words are welcome to us, we can only imagine how they sound to the Fish and Game biologists and scientists who will manage wolves.

A shoot-from-the-hip polioles who doesn't usually shy from a good debate, Otter can't resist stirring things up. That can be thought-provoking and refreshing. It can also be too cavalier — as it was when Otter said his performance at the Statehouse rally provided wolf advocates "the best fundraiser they had gotten in a long time."

A governor's job is to bring reason, not rancor, to a delicate administrative task. On balance, Otter seems headed in that direction.

Their view:

The Idaho Statesman said that Gov. Butch Otter's kinder, gentler stance on wolves is a welcome change.

What do you think?
We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

Ignoring facts in our green bubble

Surely the most glaring contrast in American life today is the amount of words, speeches and magazine covers devoted to the necessity of going green, "combating climate change" and gaining "energy security" — and the actual solutions being offered by our leaders to do any of these things. You could very comfortably drive a Hammer through the gap between our words and deeds.

We are playing pretend — which, when you think about it, is really troubling. Here are the facts: Our worst enemies, like Iran, have been emboldened by all their petrodollars. The vast majority of scientists tell us that global warming caused by our burning of fossil fuels is a real danger. And with 3 billion new consumers from India, Russia, and China joining the world economy, it is inevitable that manufacturing clean, green power systems, appliances, homes, and cars is the next great global industry. It has to be, or we will not survive as a species.

And yet our president and our Congress still won't give us an energy bill that would create the legal and economic framework to address these issues at the speed and scale required. If you were President Bush, wouldn't you want to leave behind something big, bold, and important on energy. Just in case — you know, just in case — Iraq doesn't turn out so well?

I sure would. But the president still has not challenged Congress or the country to undertake a radical departure on energy. So we still have only "energy politics," not "energy policy." Like previous energy bills, the packages working through the House and Senate today represent more "the sum of all lobbies," as the energy expert Gal Luft, co-chairman of the Set America Free Coalition, puts it, not the sum of our best ideas.

Some lawmakers are pushing corn ethanol from Iowa, either because they hail from that area and are looking to give more welfare to farmers by wasting money on an alternative fuel that will never reach the scale of what is needed, or because they plan to run in the Iowa caucus. Others are pushing huge subsidies to turn coal into gasoline, because they come from coal states. Those who don't come from Michigan want higher mileage standards imposed on cars, while those who come from Michigan prefer to continue their assisted suicide of the U.S. auto industry by blocking tougher mileage requirements.

"The only green that they are serious about in Congress right now is the one with Ben Franklin's picture on it," Luft said. Yes, it is his picture that Luft expressed a desire last week to work with other nations to limit greenhouse gases. His one will — or one should — take him seriously unless his government first leads by example. What would that look like? It has to start with a clear, long-term price signal. That is, a carbon tax or cap-and-trade system with a binding, national ceiling on carbon dioxide emissions — which would set a price for dumping carbon into the atmosphere or driving a gas-guzzling car.

Get Washington to signal that gasoline is never going to retreat from a level of $3.50 or $4 a gallon — and that wind and solar subsidies will be there for a decade, not stop and start as they always have before; get Washington to commit to buying a fixed volume of solar and wind power for government buildings and Army bases for 10 years, with only U.S.-based manufacturers able to compete for contracts; get Washington to set a new fleet average of 35 miles per gallon for Detroit within 10 years — with no loopholes; establish government loan guarantees for any company that wants to build a nuclear power plant; and, finally, build a national transmission grid — a green power superhighway — so that solar energy from Arizona or wind from Wyoming can power homes in Chicago. Do all that and our private sector will take America from green laggard to green leader.

Unfortunately, Congress is brooding instead a hodge-podge of incrementalism. This is particularly disappointing in America's corporate icons — GM, GE, AIG, DuPont, PepsiCo — are "have all come out in favor of a national mandatory limit on carbon emissions," notes Fred Krupp, president of Environmental Defense. "But Democrats and Republicans in the Senate have not risen to their challenge."

We have a multigenerational problem that requires systemic, multigenerational response, and that can happen only if we get our energy prices right. Only that will guarantee green innovation and commercialization at scale. Anything less is wasted breath and wasted money — and any candidate who says otherwise is only contributing to global warming by adding hot air.

Lessons learned from 'The Price is Right'

Early in 2008, I flew to Las Vegas to watch the Super Bowl at the Stardust for Esquire magazine. We had a square room, plenty of cool free passes and carte blanche in the sports book. I sat next to the game, and my wife and I sped across the desert and I got in mind: to get to a taping of "The Price is Right." I wanted to see Plinko up close. I wanted to touch the wheel that contestants spin to advance to the Showcase Showdown. Most of all, I wanted to shake the hand of the vegetarian, karate-kicking television host from the Rosebud Reservation in north Dakota.

KEN KURSON

More important, watching "The Price is Right" taught me an enormous amount about money. Naturally, I loved the showcases, the cars and "Barker's Beauties." But what kept me coming back was the daily lesson in the principles of behavioral finance. If you wanted to know how to explain — or get trapped by — market inefficiencies and the often irrational behavior of competitors, "The Price is Right" was essential. When a member of "contestants row" would guess $990 after a contestant had guessed $900, I'd yell at the TV. "How can you leave yourself a flow of just 10 bucks?" I cringed when contestants would spin the wheel and inexplicably stick on $0 cents. I noticed how the guesses of some would influence the behavior of others; if a couple of "One Dollar" bids won in early rounds, contestants in later rounds would play defense, with generally lower guesses. Today, dozens of Web sites offer game theory available to the ever-evolving mix of estimation exercises on "The Price is Right." I'd calculate that the amount of sold financial education going on at these sites is fairly low — someone who needs a Web site to assemble game-show strategy probably isn't the "studying Web sites for mathematical advice" type — but just by making that estimate, I'm drawing on analytic skills I developed watching Barker's TV show. There's a concept in education called "authentic assessment," which refers to the idea that information is more compelling when it relates to the real world. Barker's show combined real prizes with ludicrous kitch. CBS has yet to announce who will fill the great man's shoes and how the show will change. That's the case with the show's "Cliffhangers" segment, which since 1976 has paired estimating the prices of everyday items with yodeling. Another game, Hi/Lo, has been said to have odds of 50/1 against a contestant. When I visited "Price" to see the show live, the host proudly showed me the sets and shared with me the large role he played in developing games, detailing the precarious balance of chance, understandability, visual appeal and novelty that added up to my classic game-name badge, and he and I chatted in his dressing room as he awaited his makeup. I doubt that many "Price" contestants or viewers at home give much thought to Pierre de Fermat or Blaise Pascal, brilliant mathematicians from centuries past who helped create probability theory. But Barker, with his odd, hand-held stick microphone and trademark plea to spay and neuter pets, brought their concepts into millions of homes for 35 years.

Legendary game show host Bob Barker, 83, waves to the audience during the final episode of "The Price is Right" with two of the show's models in Los Angeles on June 6.

Like most good teachers, he made the lesson as painless as possible. Here was this exceptionally bright man, who knew exactly how silly the games could seem and how goofy some of the contestants were. Yet Barker remained ever respectful, never playing for an easy laugh at a contestant's expense, never unbecomingly either sarcasm or disbelief at even an egregiously idiotic guess. Bob Barker's show taught me a lot about finance. Bob Barker taught me a lot about how a man should act.

Touting Kosovo, Bush gets feverish welcome

By James Gerstening
Los Angeles Times

TRIANA, Albania — President Bush urged quick action Sunday to turn Kosovo into an independent nation, as he drew an enthusiastic official welcome and a frantic, arraigning show of support from a street crowd during the first visit to Albania by an incumbent U.S. president.

It was a unusual day in the recent history of the Bush presidency: Bush, whose visits to Italy and Germany earlier on this trip prompted demonstrations against him and the Iraq war, could not suppress a satisfied smile as Prime Minister Sali Berisha called him "the greatest and most distinguished guest we have ever had in all times."

At the news conference with Berisha, Bush said that if diplomats' efforts did not succeed in changing the status of the ethnic Albanian Kosovo, "sooner rather than later, you've got to say enough is enough, Kosovo is independent."

"I have just cannot be contented with it," Bush said, insisting on the need for a deadline. "I'm worried about expectations... 'living in Kosovo.'" In Fushe Kruje, a town about 30 minutes from Tirana, the president was nearly mobbed by townspeople lining the two-lane main street. They whistled, cheered, applauded and shouted "BOSHI-Y BOSHUY!"

They grabbed his arms nearly up to his shoulders. They reached around him to pull him toward them from the back of his head. Secret Service agents held him around the waist to keep him from falling into the fevered crowd.

There is perhaps no place in Europe besides Albania where Bush would find such an excited welcome — from the top of government to those in the streets, and, indeed, to the streets themselves, as one is never named for him.

The reception, said some of those waiting to see him drive through Skanderberg Square in the center of Tirana, reflected support for the pro-democracy message Bush promotes, notwithstanding the criticism he engenders elsewhere for the Iraq war. That message is a vivid contrast to Albania's when for four decades it was a Stalinist enclave run by dictator Enver Hoxha. It reflected, as well, his support for Kosovar Albanians' effort to gain independence from Serbia.

Debtors often end up in prison in Dubai

The Associated Press

DUBAI, United Arab Emirates — Hussein Ali Mubarak sits in prison, surrounded by murderers and burglars. His crime: Defaulting on his bank loans.

More than 1,200 people in Dubai's central jail — about 40 percent of the prison population — have been convicted of not repaying money borrowed from banks so they could get married, buy a car or house, or invest in the stock market.

Jailing debtors — a practice more common in 18th-century England — illustrates the downside of this Persian Gulf city-state's frantic economic boom.

Surrounded by so much oil and real estate wealth, many residents subsist on the temptations of a lifestyle they cannot afford. Banks are willing to give consumer loans with virtually no collateral and because Dubai lacks a central credit-check authority and a personal bankruptcy court system, it's easy for people to get into financial trouble.

Last year, banks here granted $13 million in personal loans — many with only an undated, blank check as collateral.

The case of Mubarak, a 28-year-old Emirati, is typical. He was working 12-hour shifts as a crane operator in Dubai's port when he took his first bank loan to buy a car and furniture. Even though he fell behind in the payments, he still managed to get two more loans, from two different banks, each bigger than the one before.

He paid off one of the loans, but stopped making payments on the other two. After he ignored court summons, the bank deposited the blank check he had presented as his sole collateral. The check bounced and he was sentenced to three months in jail.

"I'll stay there longer if no one steps forward to pay his $44,700 debt."

"If they cannot pay, we can't free them," said Lt. Col. Abdulhilm Mohammed al-Hashimi of Dubai Central Prison.

In the United States, a similar case would head to bankruptcy court. But in Dubai, with no laws regulating defaults on personal borrowing, a person jailed for such an infraction is likely to remain there — even when their sentence is over — until a relative, charity group, wealthy businessman or even a member of the ruling family pays off the debt.

Atlantis docks with station amid heat blanket worries

HOUSTON (AP) — The crews of Atlantis and the international space station greeted each other with hugs and handshakes Sunday after the space shuttle arrived at the orbiting outpost.

But amid the smiles and salutations, engineers in Houston 220 miles below started evaluating whether a packed-back thermal blanket should be fixed by astronauts.

A decision likely will be made in the next day or two, and if the answer is to fix it, another decision will be made on whether it would be done during one of three scheduled spacewalks or during an extra, unplanned one.

Astronauts James Reilly and Danny Olivas planned to make the mission's first spacewalk on Monday to help attach a new 35,000-pound segment to the space station.

Engineers who had studied past damage to the blanket area, located on a pod of engines near the shuttle's tail, on other shuttle missions were uncomfortable with the safety margins of a piece of the blanket sticking out during re-entry into Earth's atmosphere with temperatures on the shuttle's heat shield can reach as high as 2,900 degree Fahrenheit during re-entry.

Temperatures at the blanket's location only reach 700 degrees to 1,000 degrees Fahrenheit.

"The concern is that if it sticks up, you get additional heating," said John Shannon, chairman of the mission management team.

Engineers were confident the loosened blanket was caused by aerodynamic forces during launch, not by being hit by a piece of debris during lift off.

"Since this wasn't an impact blow, we have high confidence that the structure beneath it is pristine," Shannon said.

The rest of the vehicle appeared to be in fine shape, NASA said. Sensors reported six hits on the wing during launch but engineers were not concerned about them.

LPGA CHAMPIONSHIP Pettersen avoids major meltdown

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press writer

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md. — With a major championship in her sights, Suzann Pettersen never flinched.

Not at the furious charge from 18-year-old Na On Min, who made four straight birdies to pull within one shot. Not at the relentless pressure from Kiekie Webb, who birdied the last two holes. And not at memories of a major meltdown 10 weeks ago.

Pettersen felt like a different person at the LPGA Championship.

And it showed. The 26-year-old Norwegian redeemed herself Sunday with a 5-under-67 for a one-shot victory over Webb and her first major. She played so close to perfection on Rocks that she had a birdie putt on every hole, only two of them longer than 12 feet.

There was no choke from this champion.

"I wasn't even close to being in those conditions that I was back then," said Pettersen, who blew a three-shot lead with four holes to play at the Kraft Nabisco. "I finally proved to all of you that I can actually put it all together and take a major. So now, I probably don't have to get that question again."

The only question now is how good she can get.

Webb described her feeling in those conditions as being more talent in her tiny finger than some players on the LPGA Tour, and Pettersen showed it on a demanding course, finishing at 14-under-274.

Suzann Pettersen, of Norway, celebrates winning the LPGA Championship Sunday at Bulte Rock Golf Course in Havre de Grace, Md. Pettersen shot a 5-under-par 67 to win.

Nadal wins third straight French Open

Federer's chance at career Grand Slam foiled again

By Howard Fendrich
Associated Press writer

PARIS — There it stood, so tantalizingly close. As Roger Federer tried in vain to solve Rafael Nadal in the French Open final, the silver Coupe des Mousquetaires — the only Grand Slam trophy missing from the No. 1-ranked player's collection — spat fire in the sun behind a baseline, 10 feet overhead.

So successful everywhere else, so superb against everyone else, Federer once more succumbed to Nadal at Roland Garros, one win short of a French Open title, one win short of a fourth consecutive major championship, one win short of a career Grand Slam.

Instead, it was Nadal who made a bit of history Sunday, showing true resolve on the biggest points to beat Federer 6-3, 4-6, 6-3, 6-4 and become only the second man since 1914 to win three consecutive French Open titles.

"Spin it any way you want — I'm disappointed to have lost, I couldn't care less how I played the last 10 months or the last 10 years. At the end of the day, I wanted to win that match," said Federer, who lost to Nadal in four sets in last year's final, too. "I couldn't do it. It's a shame. But life goes on."

Nadal saved a remarkable 16 of the 17 break points he faced, going 10-for-10 in the first set and 1-for-1 over the last two sets.

While Federer remains convinced he can win this event — "And, eventually, if I get it, the sweeter it's going to taste," he said — the real question might be how many French Opens will end as Sunday's did: with Nadal sprawled on his back.

San Antonio blows through Cleveland to take 2-0 lead

By Tom Winters
Associated Press writer

SAN ANTONIO — Two down, two to go. The San Antonio Spurs are halfway to a fourth title and a chance to state their case as an NBA dynasty.

And LeBron James, you're a witness. Tony Parker scored 30 points, Manu Ginobili led 25 and Tim Duncan added 23 as the Spurs schooled Cleveland in championship basketball for three quarters, overpowering the over-matched Cavaliers 103-92 in Game 2 on Sunday night to take a 2-0 lead in the NBA finals.

San Antonio was vastly superior in every way imaginable — until the last five minutes.

The Spurs, clicking on offense and digging their sneakers in on defense, built a 28-point lead in the first half and were embarrassing the Cavaliers, who are in their first finals but didn't show up until it was too late, getting within eight points in the final minutes.

The Spurs' Big 3 of Duncan, Parker and Ginobili combined for 43 points — 10 more than the Cavs — in the first half and as both teams walked off the floor of AFT Center, the arena's p.a. announcer Stan Kelly, summed up the first 24 minutes with a comment that would have been funny if it wasn't so painfully true for Cleveland.

"The Spurs' Big 3 of Duncan, Parker and Ginobili combined for 43 points — 10 more than the Cavs — in the first half and as both teams walked off the floor of AFT Center, the arena's p.a. announcer Stan Kelly, summed up the first 24 minutes with a comment that would have been funny if it wasn't so painfully true for Cleveland.

"Spurs by a bunch," he said. And at the same time, a fan held up a sign saying, "Bring Out LeBron."

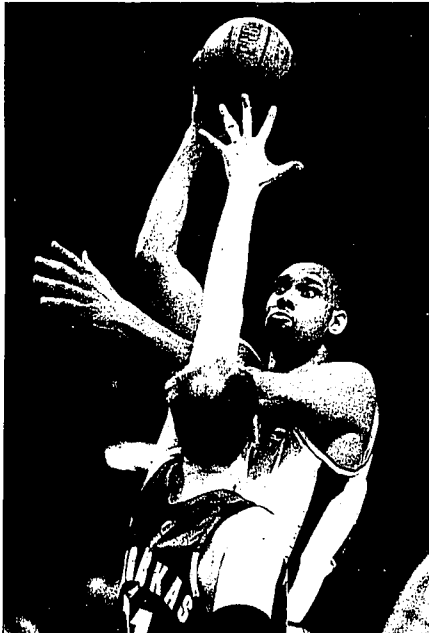

James, limited to 14 points in his finals debut, scored 25 to lead the Cavaliers. The Cavs' superstar got into early foul trouble and played less than three minutes in the first quarter, sitting when the Spurs ran away to their huge lead.

Down by 25 points at halftime and 27 after three, the Cavaliers went on a 22-4 run and eventually pulled within 95-67 on a three-point play by James with 4:53 left, a stunning turnaround for a team that looked done moments earlier.

But the Spurs, who got sloppy and perhaps disinterested, responded as they should always do.

Ginobili hit a 3-pointer as he was fouled by rookie Daniel Gibson. The four-point play made it 101-89 with 2:24 remaining. Duncan grabbed a rebound and scored inside to ball out the Spurs, who were outscored 30-14 in the fourth quarter.

"We knew it was coming," Parker said of the Cavs' comeback. "They are an NBA team and have LeBron James. They played very good in the fourth quarter. They made a big run, but in the end we made a couple of stops and got the win."

With two more victories, small-market San Antonio, often overlooked in the conversation of great teams, can join the Boston Celtics (16 titles), Los Angeles Lakers (14) and Chicago Bulls (10) as franchises with at least four championships.

"Four for Four" has become the popular catchphrase among San Antonio fans in these finals, and the Spurs are making it stick. Game 3 is Tuesday night at Quicken Loans Arena, which has never hosted a finals game and may only end up holding two unless the Cavaliers can put together four solid quarters.

Frustrated at being stuck on Cleveland's bench, James yelled something in the direction of coach Mike Brown and then rubbed his forehead

Gordon wins rain-shortened Pocono 500

By Dan Clifton
Associated Press writer

LONG POND, Pa. — This may be the surest sign yet that everything is falling into place this season for Jeff Gordon: Even the dark clouds hovering above him are bringing him luck.

With his brakes falling and Ryan Newman nipping at the No. 24's bumper, Gordon was begging for the skies to open and let that rain start coming and not stop until he was in Victory Lane.

"It's raining! It's raining! Throw the caution!" he said later, recalling the moment.

The caution came, the race was red flagged and Gordon showed again that nothing will slow him down.

Gordon used the rain and a smart call by crew chief Steve Letarte to win the rain-shortened race at Pocono Raceway on Sunday night and give the points leader his fourth win this season.

"We're having a heck of a year," Gordon said. "We're having so much fun going to the race track. Things are going our way."

Not quite like Sunday. The race was red flagged after 106 laps of the scheduled 200-lap, 500-mile race. With darkness falling, the cars went back to pit road and never came back after a final attempt to dry the track. The race had been delayed three hours by rain, starting close to the time the race usually ends.

With dark clouds closing in and Gordon's brakes on the friz, crew chief Steve Letarte called the car into the pits for an early service call. Gordon, relinquished the lead on the stop, but Letarte figured his driver would cycle back to the front after everyone else made their scheduled stops.

And he assumed it would start raining while Gordon was leading. It was a gamble, because the earlier pit stop had put Gordon off sequence with the rest of the field. If it didn't rain quickly, he'd have to pit much earlier than everyone else and would fall deep into the field after the stop.

But if it did rain in that short window, they'd be out front and inherit the win when the race was called.

Bobby Latham III deals win in Rocky Mountain Challenge Series race

By Linda Brittain
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — Bobby Latham III's day Saturday began as one he might want to forget. It finished as one to remember.

Latham, committed to his first full season in the Rocky Mountain Challenge Series, earned his first series victory by winning the race held at Magic Valley Speedway.

Latham, who began the night ranked six in the standings, hoped for a good run, but he and his crew had their work cut out as there were problems with the car as it was unloaded from the hauler.

"The car was too wide and we had to tear the entire front suspension apart and redo do the geometry," said Latham. Latham's victory capped an exciting race.

Nick Parker held the lead for the first 10 laps before Nick Gibson took over for the next 14. Then it was MVS owner and promoter Eddy McKean who charged to the front and led for 47 laps.

The next round saw McKean get loose in Turn 4 and John Newhouse frantically trying to avoid spinning. McKean found himself in the back for the restart.

With just 25 laps remaining in the race, Latham made his way to the front beyond Tom Hill.

Latham crossed the finish line 1.365 seconds over his nearest competitor. Hill finished second.

"Today there were so many highs and lows," said Latham. "When we got here we were down and wanted to go home. Then we ended up winning the thing. That was so hard. You don't know how hard that was."

Newhouse has had some tough luck this season and his third place finish could be the right confidence booster.

Dave Minagar of Boise, who entered the night leading in points, had a rough outing

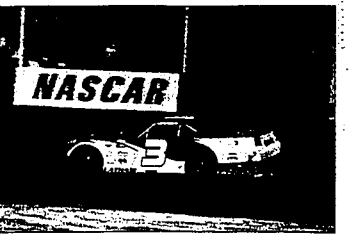

Saturday and placed 19th in the main event race.

Pepsi Premier

Steve Jones earned his fourth main event win of the season in the Pepsi Premier division.

Mike Greco was cruising with a nearly one-half track lead over Dan Peterson on lap 34 when a yellow flag came out. Peterson had hopped off the track in the Turn 3 and 4 embankment. This brought Jones underneath Greco up for the restart with Rob Vest now joining the front of the pack.

Bobby Latham III bottoms out in Turn 1 late in the Pepsi 125 at Magic Valley Speedway Saturday night. However it did not stop Latham from capturing his first win in the series this season.

"Rob (West) is really good in traffic and he's a good guy to follow through there," Jones said. "If he's in front of you just stay behind him. He makes all the holes, that's for sure. We got a lot of lucky cautious tonight."

Vest was pleased with his second place finish on the night but is still searching for his first trip to victory lane this season.

"The car was handling really well. Steve and I were side-by-side there for a long time until finally they messed up and we took off," said Vest. "He has a fast car and he knows how to get around here."

Greco finished third and Rick Fowble fourth.

NAPA Pony Stocks

Jonathon Gomez, who stayed with Kevin Grubbs during the first 14 runs of the NAPA Pony Stocks main event race, eventually earned the win after Grubbs spun out in turn 3.

Gomez kept his cool through four more cautions — the most spectacular one involving the No. 25 car of Bill

Miles as she flipped her car on the front stretch and landing right-side up.

His win Saturday night was especially sweet after a mechanical inhibition erased his victory the prior weekend. "I got in a little trouble and had to find some parts to put this car back out here this week," Gomez said from Victory Lane. "I'd like to thank everybody in the Pony Stock class for helping me with that."

Gomez said there was a notable difference between the earlier "win" and that Saturday. "I get to take the trophy home this time," he said.

Teen Bees

The Manker's Landscaping Teen Bees welcomed a new winner in Lane Albright who drove the "cow" car to the front of the herd in the 20-lap main event race.

celebrating in the red clay. "I always thought winning Roland Garros three times in a row would be impossible," said Nadal, the first to do it since Bjorn Borg in 1978-81. "I am really happy, but I am really sad for Roger. He is a friend and I know he is a great champion, whether he wins or loses."

The 21-year-old Spaniard is undefeated at the clay-court major, going 21-0 at a place where his relentless running makes it tough for foes to find space for winners.

He's full of energy, bouncing on the balls of his feet during the prematch coin toss, springing to the baseline for the warm-up. And then he really gets going. No matter the surface, but especially on clay, Nadal gets to nearly every shot, making opponents hit four, five, six terrific strokes to win a single point. It's quite demoralizing, sort of like hitting against a wall.

"He kind of wears you out or wears you down," Federer said. "He's the type of guy that's going to make you miss. So you can never really say you played great against him, for some reason."

Federer couldn't just make winners, he had to earn them, and that often resulted in a miss. Federer finished with 59 unforced errors — 32 more than Nadal. While Nadal consistently went at the backhand side, it was Federer's forehand, his best shot, that erred 29 times.

"(Nadal) kind of wears you out or wears you down."

— French Open runner-up Roger Federer

"I can't particularly say my backhand or my forehand was bad or my volley or my serving," Federer said with a sigh. "It was all OK. It was just a tough opponent."

Put simply, Nadal pushed Federer around on a muggy afternoon when the temperature touched 81 degrees at the start. The crowd greeted Federer's entrance with a standing ovation, then serenaded him with chants of "Robi-rob! Robi-rob!" during changeovers.

"I expected it," Nadal said. "He was fighting for something absolutely historical, and he is No. 1."

The second-ranked Nadal is No. 1 in their matches, though. He's beaten Federer every time they've played at the French Open, including in the 2005 semifinals.

Indeed, since the start of 2005, Federer is 4-7 against Nadal — and 199-7 against everyone else. Over the past eight Grand Slam tournaments, Federer is 0-2 against his nemesis — and 54-0 against anyone not named Nadal, with six titles.

"I'm not going to walk on the court thinking he is unbeatable. Maybe he's unbeatable for the others," the Swiss star said.

Mariners finish sweep of NL West-leading Padres

SAN DIEGO — Trevor Hoffman gave up an unearned run in the ninth inning and Seattle completed a three-game sweep of the NL West leaders.

Hoffman (2-3), who got his 500th career save on Wednesday night, started the ninth with the score tied at 3. Willie Bloomquist reached on a throwing error by rookie third baseman Kevin Koussamanoff, advanced on pinch-hitter Jose Vidro's sacrifice and stole third. Ichiro Suzuki was intentionally walked to bring up Jose Lopez, whose grounder to second scored Bloomquist.

The win went to Miguel Batista (7-4), who started Friday night and made his first relief appearance of the season when he started the eighth.

Tigers 15, Mets 7

DETROIT — Gary Sheffield contributed to one of Tom Glavine's worst outings with a homer and an RBI triple, helping the Detroit Tigers beat the New York Mets 15-7 on Sunday and win the series.

Brandon Inge hit a two-run single in the four-run ninth, giving him a career-best five RBIs and helping the Tigers surpass their previous season high of 14 runs.

Glavine (5-4) gave up nine earned runs for just the second time in his stellar career and for the first time in eight years.

Andrew Miller (2-0) allowed a three-run homer to David Wright in the first inning before settling down — giving up four runs, five hits and three walks over 5 1/2 innings. Miller made his second major league start in place of Nate Robertson, who is on the disabled list with a tired arm.

Athletics 2, Giants 0

SAN FRANCISCO — Marco Scutaro homered to break up a scoreless game in the eighth inning and Oakland shut out its Bay Area rivals for the second straight day to complete a two-game sweep.

Bart Bonin had a chance to tie the game with one out and one on in the ninth against Alan Embree and flew out to left.

Lenny DiNardo pitched six scoreless innings. Santiago Casilla pitched six in four as he faced and Embree finished Oakland's fourth shutout this month with his seventh save in eight chances. Oakland has won 10 of its last 13 games.

The Giants have lost 12 of 16.

Scutaro led off the eighth inning against Matt Cain (2-6) with a drive over Bonds' head and into the left-field seats for his third homer of the season. Shannon Stewart added an RBI against Brad Hennesey.

Bonds went 0-for-3 with a walk and has not homered in 32 at-bats since connecting for No. 746 on May 27 against Colorado. Bonds, who has only one home run since May 6, remains nine shy of tying Hank Aaron's career record of 755.

Yankees 13, Pirates 6

NEW YORK — Alex Rodriguez homered twice and drove in five runs, Bobby Abreu went 4-for-4 with three RBIs and New York won its sixth consecutive game.

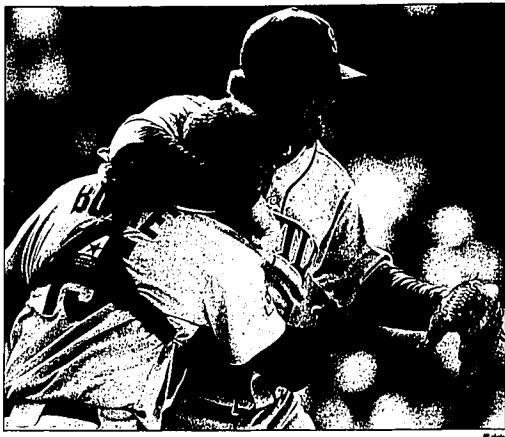

Rodriguez and Abreu each scored four times and Hideki Matsui hit a two-run double, helping the resurgent Yankees set a season high for runs in winning for the ninth time in 11 games. It's their longest winning streak since they won six in a row last September.

Sean Henn (2-0) repelled ineffective rookie Tyler Clippard and worked two scoreless innings for the win. New York's much-maligned bullpen came through, with four relievers combining for 5 1/3 shutout innings.

Reds 1, Indians 0, 12 innings

CINCINNATI — Alex Gonzalez's RBI single gave Cincinnati a 1-0 win in the second of consecutive extra-inning games between the two Ohio rivals.

Pinch hitter Chad Moeller

Seattle Mariners closer J.J. Putz, right, puts a headlock hug on catcher Jamie Burke after closing out the Mariners' 4-3 victory over the San Diego Padres in a baseball game in San Diego, Sunday. The Mariners swept the three-game series and Putz earned his 18th save in 18 tries.

started the rally with a one-out double down the left field line and Edwin Encarnacion was walked intentionally. After Josh Hamilton filed out, Gonzalez singled up the middle, driving in Moeller.

The teams played 23 innings in fewer than 24 hours. The Indians won 6-6 in 12 innings last night.

Marcus McBeth (0-1) got his first big league victory with two scoreless innings of relief.

White Sox 6, Astros 3

CHICAGO — Mark Buehrle pitched eight strong innings for his 100th career victory and Chicago snapped a five-game losing streak on Sunday.

Paul Konerko had three hits — including a solo homer — in eight days as Chicago won for just the third time in 15 games. Luis Tetero and Juan Uribe added solo shots during a three-run fifth.

Buehrle (3-3) did his part after falling in his first seven attempts at win No. 100, allowing six hits and a run while striking out four and walking one. It was his first win since April.

Wandy Rodriguez (3-6) allowed seven hits and five runs — four earned — in five innings. It was his third loss in four starts.

The struggling White Sox bullpen allowed away a five-run lead in the ninth, walking the bases loaded with one out before closer Bobby Jenks came in. Jenks allowed a run to score on a wild pitch and another on a groundout before striking out Luke Scott looking for his 17th save in 18 chances.

Royals 17, Phillies 5

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Mark Grudzielanek homered and drove in five runs and Kansas City scored its most runs in a game since 2005 to take a series from Philadelphia. Zack Greinke (3-2) got the victory with two innings of one-hit, five-strikeout relief. The right-hander struck out the side on 14 pitches in the seventh.

It was the most runs the Royals scored since a 17-0 win at home against the Texas Rangers on Sept. 4, 2005. For the Phillies, it was the most runs allowed since a 17-3 loss at Houston on May 13, 2002.

Grudzielanek was 3-for-5 and tied his career-high for RBIs. Tony Pena Jr. homered for the Royals, the first of his career.

Royals scored since a 17-0 win at home against the Texas Rangers on Sept. 4, 2005. For the Phillies, it was the most runs allowed since a 17-3 loss at Houston on May 13, 2002.

Blue Jays 11, Dodgers 5

LOS ANGELES — Roy Halladay settled down after a rocky start, Troy Glaus had two homers and Toronto hunted Los Angeles for its fifth loss in six games.

Halladay (6-2) allowed five hits and three runs in seven innings, in his third start since undergoing an appendectomy that sidelined him for three weeks in April. He struck out three and struck out two.

Halladay also had the first regular-season multi-hit game by a Toronto pitcher, and drove in the first run of his career with an RBI single in the second that snapped a 2-2 tie and put the Blue Jays ahead for good.

Glaus doubled and scored in the third, and hit solo homers leading off the fifth and sixth innings to give him 10 this season.

Jason Brett (1-3), gave up nine hits and six earned runs in four-plus innings in his second start since being sidelined 7 1/2 weeks because of bursitis in his right shoulder.

Cardinals 9, Angels 6

ST. LOUIS — Albert Pujols had two home runs and five RBIs for his 19th career multiple homer game and his second in eight days.

Pujols got his first Sunday against starter Jered Weaver in the third inning, driving a hanging breaking ball to left field to score So Taguchi and tie the game 3-3. His three-run homer in the fifth came against Weaver's replacement, Chris Boettche.

Weaver, who had won his previous four decisions and five of six, left after the third inning with tightness in the low back.

Boettche (1-1) had given up one home run in his previous 23 2/3 innings. He went two innings against the Cardinals, giving up three runs on two hits.

Todd Wellemeyer (2-0) gave up five runs, four earned, or seven hits over 5 2/3 innings. It was the longest outing for the converted reliever since the Cardinals put him in the rotation in place of Anthony Reyes.

Devil Rays 9, Marlins 4

MIAMI — Tampa Bay rookie Andy Sonnanstine struck out 10, including seven straight at one point, and got his first career victory.

Brendan Harris had a career-high five RBIs and Raul Casanova homered for the second straight day for the Devil Rays, who went 4-2 on its first winning road trip of six or more games since July 14-20, 2005.

Sonnanstine (1-0) allowed two runs and seven hits, walking none in seven innings in his second career start. He struck out seven straight, one shy of the American League record of eight. That mark has been achieved six times, most recently by Blake Stein of Kansas City on June 17, 2001.

Rockies 6, Orioles 1

BALTIMORE — Ryan Spillane pitched a career-high six runs, and Jason Hirsh won for the first time in nine starts for Colorado.

Hirsh (3-6), who was 0-5 in eight starts since April 22, limited Los Angeles to one run on five hits in his first career complete game. He struck out two and walked one as the Rockies won for the sixth time in eight games.

Spillhanes hit a solo homer in the ninth to starter Erik Bedard. In the fourth, he struck a two-run single the next inning to snap a 1-all tie. He capped his career day with a three-run blast off reliever John Parrish in the seventh.

Colorado's Willie Taveras singled in the second, extending his hitting streak to 15 games, the longest current streak in the National League.

Bedard (4-4) went five innings, allowing three runs, two earned, — on nine hits, walking three and striking out eight. The Orioles have lost seven of nine after a six-game winning streak.

Twins 6, Nationals 3

MINNEAPOLIS — Torii Hunter and Jason Bartlett each had three hits to help the Twins avoid being swept at home for the first time by a National League team since interleague play began in 1997.

Bartlett drove in two runs after going 0-for-6 in the first two games of the series and 3-for-24 over his last six games.

Boof Bonser (5-2) scattered nine hits over five innings, and the Twins bullpen worked four scoreless innings. Joe Nathan pitched the ninth for his 14th save in 15 chances.

Mike Baesik (1-3) gave up four runs over five innings and took the defeat for Washington. The Nationals left 11 runners on base, tying their nine-inning high for the season.

D-Backs 5, Red Sox 1

PHOENIX — Randy Johnson allowed one run in six innings and three relievers did the rest as the Diamondbacks beat Daisuke Matsuzaka to salvage the final game of a three-game series.

Carlton Fisk took the defeat home the eventual winning run in the sixth inning, and Eric Byrnes had three hits as Arizona moved within percentage points of first-place San Diego in the NL West.

The Diamondbacks broke the game open with three runs in the eighth. Reliever Mike Timlin's throwing error allowed two runs to score and Chris Young added an RBI single.

Facing a lineup without a left-handed hitter, Johnson (4-2) gave up four hits, walked three and struck out nine, throwing a season-high 113 pitches.

National League Braves 5, Cubs 4

ATLANTA — Willie Harris scored the go-ahead run on a wild pitch by Chicago closer Ryan Dempster with two outs in the eighth inning, giving the Atlanta Braves a testy 5-4 win over the Cubs on Sunday night.

The game got off to a scrappy start. Cubs starter Ted Lilly was ejected in the first inning after hitting Edger Renteria with a pitch, causing the benches and bullpens to empty.

Moments later, Renteria retaliated. He smacked Cubs second baseman Mike Fontenot in the face with his right hand while stealing second. The teams stayed calm after the play, and it was peaceful the rest of the night.

F1's first black driver scores landmark victory at Canadian Grand Prix

MONTREAL. — Lewis Hamilton's learning curve just got shorter — a bit shorter. The 22-year-old Englishman, the first black driver in Formula One history, added his first F1 victory to an already remarkable career start by winning the crash-filled Canadian Grand Prix on Sunday.

Hamilton started from the pole, also for the first time. Apart from losing the lead for three laps when he made his first of two pit stops, he led the way and was never challenged. The 22-year-old, still-puckered youngster has six consecutive top-three finishes in six starts, something no other first-year F1 driver has accomplished.

"This is history," Hamilton said, grinning. "The only one to get the Mercedes McLaren."

diver any competition during the 70-lap race on Circuit Gilles Villeneuve's 2.7-mile road course was BMW Sauber's Nick Heidfeld.

Austin comes from behind at St. Jude

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Windy Austin turned around a miserable early day with the perfect round on the right time.
Trailing by four strokes at the start of Sunday's play, Austin shot the best closing round on tour this year in winning the Stanford St. Jude Championship by five strokes for his first PGA Tour victory since 2003 and third overall.

includes bogey-free and earned an eagle and six birdies Sunday for a 13-under 267.
Haas cruises to win at Principal Charity Classic
WEST DES MOINES, Iowa — Jay Haas cruised to his third season's fourth win of the season, shooting a 2-under 69 to take the Principal Charity Classic by three strokes.

His 18-under 62 was the best final round of his career and best in the 50 years of this event. It also was the tour's lowest closing round since Fred Couples' 61 at the 2006 Nike Championship.
John Dally shot a 79 and finished 79th in the 80-player field. Playing on a sponsor's exemption and tied for eighth after the first 18, he shocked everyone Friday by aceing his wife, Sherry, with a bogey five by attacking him with a steak knife at his home near the course.

Haas, the only player with multiple wins on the senior tour this season, finished with a 12-under total of 201. He led the entire way and picked up his ninth career victory on the Champions Tour.
R.W. Eaks (64) and Brad Bryant (67) finished tied for second at 9-under 204. Mark James tied for third at a bunker.

Austin had never finished better than a tie for 44th in his previous trips to the TPC Southwind course. He has struggled this year, finishing five events with his only top-25 showing coming with a tie for 18th in New Orleans in April. He took home the $1.08 million winner's check, his first since the 2004 Buick Championship, with the best round of his career. Austin also won the 1995 Buick Open.
Austin finished the final 49 and quickly fell out of contention for the lead.

Eaks was one shot from tying the course record, set by John Bland in 2002, before missing a birdie putt on 18. He finished second for the third time this season, and his final-round 64 was the second-best of the tournament.

Spurs

with his hand as the Spurs blew through the Cavs for 40 minutes like a Texas tornado.
Parker, the Spurs' petite Frenchman, was magnificent.
He went 13-for-20 from the field, spun his way through the defense as well and made the Cavaliers look like shorts-wearing statues. Parker kept pushing the action in the third quarter, scoring 10 points to the delight of fiancee Eva Longoria and Spurs fans who are only ready to plan any parades just yet.
In the 2005 finals, the Spurs won the first two games against Detroit but had to go seven to win the title.
The Cavaliers can look to this year's finals for comfort. Miami lost Games 1 and 2 in Dallas before going home to Florida and winning three straight and then beating the Mavericks on their home floor for their first championship.
Rookie Daniel Gibson added 15 points, Drew Gooden had 13 and Sasha Pavlovic 10 for the Cavs, and went just 19-of-29 from the line and got zero points in 20 minutes from point guard Larry Hughes, who is playing with a foot injury.

After building a 12-point lead in the first quarter while James was out, the Spurs pushed it to 17 on a 3-pointer from a three-point play and whizzed through the lane for a layup that led to 46-20.
Then, with 30 seconds left before the half, Parker drilled a 17-foot jumper to make it 59-30. By then, most of America had probably already switched over to "The Sopranos" series finale to see if Tony got whacked.
He didn't. The Cavaliers did. As fans dressed in silver and black poured into the arena on a sultry night in south Texas, a mariachi band played to celebrate "Go Spurs, Go!" a chant that can be heard in the streets of the Alamo City even WICHITA, Kan. — Bryan Petersen's double in the bottom of the ninth inning lifted UC Irvine over Wichita State 3-2 and sent the Anteaters to the College World Series for the first time in school history.

UC Irvine (45-15-1) swept the best-of-three super regional with great pitching efforts, the latest by Wes Ehlridge. The right-hander, who held Wichita State to five hits in 1-2 innings, gave up a single to Andy Dirks to start the game and then retired 17 straight.
WSU (53-22) tied it with two runs in the top of the ninth, breaking a 2-1 23 scoreless inning streak, helped by a controversial call. After Derek Schermerhorn singled, Damon Siblett grounded to shortstop Ben Orloff and was ruled out in a close play at first. Shockers coach Gene Stephenson argued out to five hits in 1-2 innings, gave up a single to Andy Dirks to start the game and then retired 17 straight.

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — For the second straight year, Chad Hack honored to send North Carolina to the College World Series.
Hack's tiebreaking two-run shot in the seventh off reliever Will Arwood snapped a 4-4 tie in front of a capacity crowd at Boshamer Stadium that included men's basketball coach Roy Williams and football coach Bruce Davis.

Flack — whose two-run game-ending homer in last year's super regional at Alabama gave the Tar Heels their first CWS berth since 1989 — came through with another crucial shot in the postseason. His seventh homer of the season and first since May 19 came just in time for North Carolina (53-13), which snapped a nine-game homer drought and now will face Mississippi State in Omaha.
Dustin Ackley, Garrett Gore and Reid Frank drove in late innings runs for North Carolina, which was bounced from three straight NCAA tournaments by South Carolina from 2002-04 and clinched the first consecutive CWS trips in school history.
Closer Arwood Carignan (2-1) relieved Rob Wooten and worked four shutout innings. Arwood (2-2) pitched one inning, allowing two earned runs on three hits for the Gamecocks (46-20).

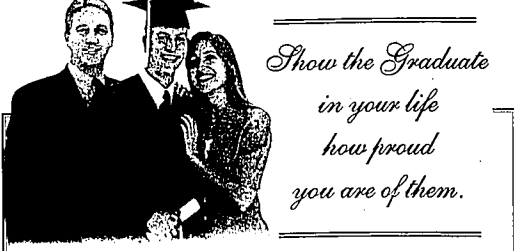

South Carolina forced the winner-take-all finale earlier in the day by holding off the Tar Heels' comeback bid and completing a suspended-game 6-6 victory.
In that game, which was suspended Saturday because of lightning and heavy rain, the Gamecocks nearly blew a six-run lead but the second straight game led homer and a key two-run double by Phil Disler to stay alive for one more game.

Oregon St. 1, Michigan 0
CORVALLIS, Ore. — Joey Wong's RBI single with two outs in the ninth inning spoiled Zach Putnam's bid for a no-hitter and led defending national champion Oregon State to a 1-0 victory over Michigan in the opening game of their super regional Sunday.
Wong hit a soft liner on a 1-2 pitch from Putnam into left field to score pinch-runner Braden Walls from second base as the three to the plate from Michigan's Derek Vanhousk was late.
Putnam (8-5) struck out eight and walked three, leaving after Wong's hit. He didn't allow an Oregon State baserunner until Scott Santusch's one-out walk in the sixth.
The Beavers (43-18) need one more win over the Wolverines (42-18) to reach the College World Series for the third straight year.

Louisville 20, Oklahoma St. 2
LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Isaiah Howes hit a grand slam and drove in six runs as Louisville pounded out 21 hits in routing Oklahoma State to earn its first trip to the College World Series.
The Cardinals (46-22), in the NCAA tournament for just the second time in school history will meet Rice on Friday in the first round of the College World Series.

Howes was 3-for-6 with three runs scored, Jorge Castillo drove in four runs, Pete Rodriguez went 4-for-4 with a homer, three RBIs and three runs scored, and Logan Johnson was 3-for-4 with four runs scored.
Louisville scored five times in the second inning to bust through, and scored five more in the fourth to put the game out of reach.
Rebel hitting led the Cowboys (42-21) with three hits, including a solo home run, and Wright also homered.
Arizona St. 7, Mississippi 1
TEMPE, Ariz. — Arizona State advanced to the College World Series for the second time in three years by completing a three-game sweep of Mississippi.
Josh Satow (13-3) scattered five hits and walked five in 7 2-3 scoreless innings for the Sun Devils. Brett Wallace homered and drove in three runs.
Arizona State scored twice in the second inning when CJ Retherford led off the inning with a home run and Wallace had an RBI double. Wallace had the big hit in a four-run fourth inning with a two-run homer. Tim Smith and Andrew Romine also drove in runs in the inning.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

Bobby Wolff

"It has long been an axiom of mine that the little things are infinitely the most important."
— Arthur Conan Doyle

In today's deal as declarer your target must be to avoid confusing the impossible with the merely improbable. You reach the small slam in hearts (well bid), and in a club lead must restrain yourself from claiming prematurely. You win your club ace, but when you play the ace of trumps, West shows out, discarding a spade. What now?

The 4-0 trump break should make you pause. If trumps had broken 2-2 or 3-1, you would have drawn trumps and played the ace and queen of spades, setting up the spade jack and eventually reaching it with the trump queen. As it is, you will have to set up your spade trick before drawing all the trumps; since you need to cross to dummy with the heart queen to enjoy the established spade trick. Suppose you draw three rounds of trumps and then play the ace and queen of spades. Not good enough! West will not give his partner a spade ruff. How can you avoid this sorry outcome — i.e., West being able to lead a third spade to allow East to ruff away one of your winners?

The answer is that after just one or two rounds of trump you must lead the spade queen from your hand. West has to win, or you will have 12 tricks on top. You take his club continuation, unblock the spade ace, and draw trumps ending in the dummy. You can then enjoy the club discard on the spade jack.

ANSWER: Lead a low heart rather than the 10. When you have a four-card suit of this sort, you will find that although leading the 10 may save a trick from time to time, it is far more likely to cost a trick when either dummy or declarer also has a four-card suit. However, with the seven or eight of hearts instead of the three, lead the 10 to the first trick.

Summer safety: learning to avoid injury

Children enjoy an afternoon swimming at Dierkes Lake Park near Shoshone Falls. The swimming area is cordoned off, with areas specifically designated for swimming and diving safety, close to shore where parents can keep an eye on their children.

Drownings, falls spike when warm weather hits

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Laura Baxter was gardening in the front yard, her three children just a few yards away. She went into the garage for just a minute, but when she came out, her 2-year-old was missing, and her oldest daughter didn't know where the little girl had gone.

"You can be watching your children and being with your children, but it just takes a second for them to get away," the Twin Falls woman said. "You turn your back and they're gone."

Most parents have a scare like this: one that ends when the child is found, safe and sound. Laura Baxter wasn't so lucky. Her daughter was discovered in an irrigation canal three blocks away, and hours of resuscitation failed to bring the girl back to life. She was taken off life support May 18, 1992.

"It can happen to the best parents," Baxter said. "You can do everything in your power, and you turn your back, and if there's water near, you could lose a child."

Baxter has since made it a mission to raise awareness of drowning dangers, particularly in the canals that crisscross Twin Falls. She raised thousands of dollars to fence canals in the city limits, and persuaded the city council to pass a law making it illegal to play in or around those canals.

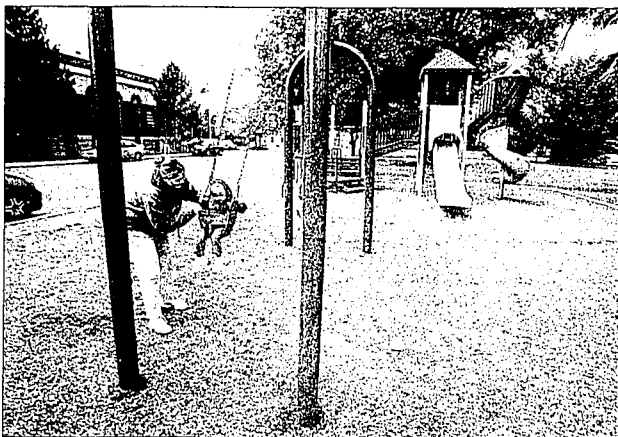

With warm weather hiring children into the water, summer is the time to make sure they understand how to stay safe while staying cool and having fun.

Swimming safe

The most important tip for parents, children, or any swimmer, is to realize that water can become dangerous very quickly.

"At all times, have your eyes on the kid," said Page Geske, director of Safe Kids Magic Valley. "Teach kids to swim with a buddy, whether they're at a pool or at Dierkes Lake."

It's a little hokey, but Geske uses

Jodi Bailey pushes her 2-year-old daughter, Jesalyn, Thursday at the City Park in Twin Falls. The ground beneath the play equipment is covered in wood chips, creating a safer surface for children if they fall.

"Everybody needs to watch everyone's kids."

and recommends a gimmick — a laminated card, imprinted with a pair of eyeballs, that she wears on a lanyard around her neck. If she has to go to the bathroom or get something from the car, she hands the lanyard to another adult. It's a physical representation of the handing off of responsibility.

"Parents, be aware of your surroundings," Baxter said. "Everybody needs to watch everyone's kids."

Teaching kids to be attentive to their own safety is also important. They should be taught to swim at an early age so they are comfortable in the water and aware of their personal limits. Teach them that swimming is safest in designated areas like swimming pools and cordoned-off areas of lakes.

For Baxter, who grew up swimming in pools and had lived in Twin Falls all her life, the dangers posed by the canals running through the city were never on her mind until her daughter was killed. Then she real-

Preventing falls

• Protect all windows above the first floor with window guards, and keep furniture away from windows.

• Don't let children play on balconies, high porches, or roofs.

• Supervise children on the playground to make sure they are using age-appropriate equipment. Check under the equipment to ensure it has at least 12 inches of rubber, mulch or sand.

• Make sure kids wear appropriate safety gear when playing, especially helmets to protect the skull in case of a fall.

• Strap children securely into grocery carts, and don't let them stand up in the cart.

contaminants and bacteria in the water can cause life-threatening illness, and the spring currents through the canals can be

Water safety

• PAY ATTENTION. Drowning can happen in seconds, so make sure you or someone responsible always has their eyes on your child when playing in and around water.

• Install safety devices like four-wall fences, anti-entrapment devices, and locking spa covers.

• Fit life jackets to children properly, and make sure the children wear them when boating or near open bodies of water.

• Teach children to swim at an early age, and make sure they understand the danger of diving into shallow or unknown waters.

strong enough to push a grown man off his feet.

"That water is totally unsafe to be in," Baxter said. "Make it part of your safety lesson for your children, like stay away from a hot stove, stay away from the road, stay away from the canal."

It is possible to drown in as little as one inch of water, so Geske suggests eliminating or protecting all sources of standing water in and around the home, from buying locking covers for spas to laying empty flower pots on their sides so they don't accumulate rainwater.

And, she said, a no-brainer — don't let children play in boats.

Be aware of the rules in the jurisdiction you are boating in, including whether all boaters must wear personal flotation devices or have them available in the craft. Even if the regulations don't specify it, consider having everyone in the boat wear a life jacket. Most parents won't drink alcohol and then drive their children, and the same absolute should apply to piloting a boat.

Although unintentional fatal injuries to children rise across the board during the summer — from bicycle accidents, pedestrian accidents, in a car and because of a fall — drowning deaths spike even higher. Nationwide, between 100 and 250 children drown each month during

The long and short of looking cool in shorts this season

The Washington Post

Looking grown-up in short pants? Not an easy task, and made even more difficult when attempting to look professional. Then again, how cool is it to sweat through your slacks? This, perhaps, is why designers used all sorts of tactics dressing up shorts for the spring/summer collections.

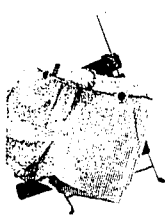

For men, that means using such fine suiting material as cotton poplin and lightweight wools in lean, sinewy cuts. Translation: hella knees, goodbye bulky, baggy cargos. The fashion-with-a-capital-F look is often topped with a blazer or matching jacket and face-up dress shoes, worn sans socks, natch.

As always, there are more varied selections for women — everything from bermudas to hot pants. But no incarnation is more ubiquitous than skinny short-shorts with nipped waists and high hemlines. What separates these from the ones donned by pigtailed girls at summer camp are embellishments: horn buttons, mod graphic prints and ribbon ties.

The resulting look — a juxtaposition of casual sophistication — offers relief from the heat to those willing to show off tanned and toned legs. And those with an open-minded office dress code.

Keep the community in mind, Taurus

IF JUNE 11 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: The year ahead offers exciting surprises. Some people have money, some have faith and some have luck. You may meet someone who acts as a guardian angel. Make permanent and truly blessed changes as the summer ends. Your popularity soars next spring — and in April you can make a romantic commitment, find the soul mate your heart has yearned for or get the job of your dreams.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Practice makes perfect. Whether you wish to be a body builder, a neat freak or an organizational genius, you've got all the right stuff. Get all those little ducks lined up in an orderly row.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Be community-minded. Your home or neighborhood could be the center for social functions or activity. Lend a helping hand to a new acquaintance or network close to home.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Dial for dollars. Develop a polished phone technique to approach strangers or distant connections with ease. You are a special someone one could make beautiful music together.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Listen to your intuitions where your piggy bank is concerned. Dream big and you might find just what you've wanted knocking on your front door. Don't limit your abilities or talents.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Everything in its place and a place for everything. Create the desired effect by taking determined action when necessary. You can achieve your dreams if you keep checking the rear view mirror.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Bewildered? You've tried the introductions. You might be floating on air due to the attentions of a special admirer who has popped into view. This relationship might be the real thing.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): All's fair in love and war. Others may pressure you to perform at the highest level and you're up to the challenge. There are extra goodies bestowed on those who obey the rules.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Give your public image and reputation some dedicated thought. Crack the whip to meet deadlines, knowing that others will understand the need for some prodding and pushing.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Get your sweet little nose back on that grindstone. Some extra effort and attention to details will surely pay off in the future. Don't be afraid to be as tough as nails when necessary.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Seek perfection. Ambitions are stirred under these stars. You can master your courage to the sticking point and get much accomplished if you concentrate fully on the task at hand.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Sing about beauty and truth. You don't need to see your smiling face on the cover of the Rolling Stone in order to achieve your dreams. Others may expect concrete accomplishment.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Ugly ducklings can turn into swans. The eyes of the beholder are where beauty lies. Burn the midnight oil to meet obligations, but know someone's willing in the wings with eyes only for you.

Teen's pledge of love is no laughing matter

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: Is 16 too young to know your true love? My boyfriend, "Miles," and I both feel that we're truly in love and want to spend the rest of our lives together. We realize that it will be a few years at the least before we can marry, but we're willing to wait.

My older sister laughs at me when I say that I know I'm in love. She says I am way too young, and I need to be older and more mature—like she is—to understand. She's 17 1/2, so she's really not that much older.

I have a large picture of Miles in our room, and when she has friends over, she points at it and says, "That's your true love forever," and they all laugh about it. Can you be truly in love at my age?

—JUDY IN BIRMINGHAM, ALA.
DEAR JUDY: Yes, it is possible to be truly in love at 16. However, at 16 you are still maturing emotionally and intellectually.

The problem with making a lifetime commitment at this age—although some people have done it—is that both of you are still "growing" as individuals. Not all people grow at the same rate, and their interests often diverge. Does this mean the couple is not truly in love? No. But it does mean that it's better to be older before making a promise to stay with someone "forever."

That said, your sister is wrong to belittle and ridicule your feelings. And for her to do so is a reflection of her own immaturity.

DEAR ABBY: I have been seeing a certain man for about eight months. We get along wonderfully most of the time. However, when we're out in public, he is very cold to me and standoffish.

Four months ago, we were at a trade show where he ran into friends of his and stood and talked for 15 minutes without ever introducing me. I finally walked off.

The same thing happened again on Mother's Day. Some friends of his approached, and they visited awhile. The difference this time was one of the men in the group noticed me standing there and interrupted the conversation to introduce himself, as did everyone else then. My so-called boyfriend never said a word.

As we were leaving, the main speaker at the clinic where we were stopped him and asked, "Is this your wife?"—which I am not, but I also am not as he introduced me. He replied, "No, this is my friend." (We are intimate.)

I do not like the way my boyfriend treats me in public, and I am tired of his being noncommittal. Am I being unreasonable?

—TIERED IN COMANCHE, TEXAS

DEAR TIERED: Your "boyfriend" either was never taught good manners, or he is so into himself that he has no concern for your feelings. Instead of introducing me, he was part of the pattern on the wallpaper and ignoring your presence. He should have immediately introduced you.

What happened at the clinic should be your wake-up call. Although you are in love and consider him to be your "boyfriend," he has stated publicly that he considers you only a friend. (With benefits!) If that's how you wish to be regarded, then continue seeing him. If not, give your ego an enormous boost and walk away. He's obviously still looking, and so should you.

Actors plan their own 'happily ever after'

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — In "Cinderella," the rags-to-riches heroine marries her prince. In real life, the actors who play them will have their own fairy tale wedding next month.

Cinderella and her prince — Samantha Butler and Walter Shattley — are starring in an Omaha production of Rodgers and Hammerstein musical.

When they met two years ago in Omaha at the same

Rose Theater, he kissed her hand. She was performing there in "The Bernstein Bears on Stage"; he was touring with the theater's "Bunnicula."

A long-distance phone romance began. They toured together in the Bernstein production and shared the Rose stage last June when she played Jasmine to his Aladdin in the musical "Aladdin."

Their wedding will take place July 14 in Memphis, Tenn.

Butler, 27, is from Memphis. Shattley, 29, is from Norman, Okla.

Just before Saturday's matinee, Butler said the couple probably won't have a honeymoon but will move to New York City, where they hope to have their own "happily ever after" ending.

"We're just going to audition for everything that comes across," she said.

Safety

The fall, winter and spring, in fact, children that number jumps as high as 750 in a month, according to Safe Kids.

Falling hard

Children fall a lot. As they learn coordination and their own limits, they trip, they jump off porches, they lose their grip on the monkey bars. Most of these falls result in a bruised elbow or a bloody knee, but some can be fatal.

"Kids are going to get scraped, they're going to get bumps and bruises," said Dr. Cheri Wiggins, rehabilitation specialist at Neurology of Twin Falls. "Kids are going to fall down, that's part of being a kid."

Like Geske and Baxter, Wiggins said the most effective way to keep kids from getting seriously hurt is to keep an eye on them.

"I'm not saying to hover over them and watch everything they do," she said. "It's important for parents to know where their kids are playing, to know what the risks are in those areas."

Though Geske, a parent, has netting put up around her trampoline at home, she still tries to be in charge when her children are using the toy. Anywhere a child might fall more than a few inches, she is especially vigilant.

"The trails around the canyon? That would be a quick and easy place you could have a kid fall, the toddler goes running ahead of you," she said.

Shopping carts are another place kids can fall and be hurt, particularly if they are not strapped in. Geske remembers one child who stood up in a cart, and when the cart toppled over, the child suffered a serious skull fracture.

Toddlers, who are naturally curious and clamor over everything, are at high risk for falls from windows. Screens only protect against bugs, so on every window that opens — especially those above the first story — consider installing window guards, sturdy metal lattices that are screwed into window frames.

Keep chairs, cribs and furniture away from windows, and don't allow children to play on balconies, high porches, roofs or near unprotected windows.

When looking for a park to play in, check underneath the playground equipment. Look for surfaces that are covered at least 12 inches deep with rubber, mulch or fine sand. "This will cushion a child's fall if they lose their grip on the jungle gym."

Obesity and medical diagnosis

The Washington Post

Can fat affect your medical diagnosis? Yes, according to a study in the journal Radiology. To investigate the effect of obesity on diagnostic imaging, investigators analyzed all radiology exams performed at Massachusetts General Hospital between 1989 and 2003. They found that 900 exams were inconclusive because of excessive body tissue. In 2003, about one in every 500 exams — up from 292 in 1989, or one in every 1,000, a trend that correlates with the growing obesity epidemic.

Obesity can lead to misdiagnosis, further testing and increased hospital stays for patients, assert the researchers.

TV and inactivity

The Washington Post

The more television you watch, the less active you will be, suggests a study in the American Journal of Public Health. Researchers asked 486 residents of low-income housing in Boston to use a pedometer to count the steps they took for five days, and also to record the number of hours they watched TV. Participants spent an average 3.6 hours a day in front of the TV; each hour they watched accounted for 143 fewer steps. Other factors that may have affected these participants, said researchers, include barriers to outdoor activities such as fear of street crime and poor maintenance of parks.

Dance fever: Exercise that really swings

By Paula Hunt
San Antonio Express-News

Put down that barbell and head to the barre.

Ditch the sneakers and put on your swankiest pair of slippers.

Get off that elliptical trainer and get ready to do the electric slide.

You're going dancing. Regardless of your gender, generation or fitness level, hitting the dance floor is a great way to get moving.

"It's better than going to the gym or taking up a new sport because it's easy, it's simple and it's fun," says Dr. Ilisa Beckford, creator of the fitness video "Tonne with Dr. Il" and medical director of the urgent-care center at the Twinsburg (Ohio) Medical Center.

"Research over the past 10 to 15 years has found that exercise only works if it's done consistently. So if people are happy and they enjoy what they're doing, they tend to stick with it much longer than just picking up an activity for the benefit of exercise."

The U.S. Department of Agriculture considers dancing a moderate physical activity, along with walking briskly, golfing (walking and carrying clubs) and bicycling less than 10 miles per hour. The recommendation for general health is for at least 30 minutes of this type of activity a day.

Wanda Deagen, who has been teaching ballroom dance since 1984, says even the most basic elements of dance can contribute to physical fitness.

"In ballroom dancing, it's all about form, so you're holding your body and your core so that you have your abdominals tucked under and you're dancing with a nice long back," she says.

All of the things that are good for your body posture-wise, stretching-wise, those are all the basics in dance."

Ballroom dancing, like most dance, is considered a low-impact exercise and provides the same kind of benefits as low-impact aerobics, says Beckford.

Other disciplines, including hip-hop with its jumps and turns, are considered high-impact.

"Regardless of the type of dance, you'll get benefits like an increase in flexibility, strength training and fat burning," says Beckford, who lost 80 pounds doing an hour of cardio dance five days a week.

"The more intense and high-impact, you're probably going to build more muscles, you'll burn more calories. But even with low-impact dance, the benefits in your bones are still going to be there, the impact on reducing your blood pressure is there."

Dance is good not only for the body, it's good for the mind as well.

A study in the June 2003 New England Journal of Medicine found that elderly people who engaged in activities such as dancing lowered their risk for dementia, including Alzheimer's disease.

About half the clubs that are members of the International Health, Racquet and Sportsclub Association offer dance-based classes. One reason for the popularity of these classes is that when we're dancing, we don't feel like we're exercising, says Elsa Williams, the group fitness coordinator at the Concord Athletic Club.

"With dancing, the perceived exertion is less than a hoot camp class where you might be working just as hard," she explains. "It's pleasurable and the mood is completely different from a typical fitness class."

If you want to try out a little time step or a grand tete but have been sedentary, Beckford recommends consulting a doctor before you start moving to the beat.

You don't want your first dance to be your last.

Elder Law Forum
Straight Talk on Elder Law and Estate Planning

HAND-IN-GLOVE

QUESTION: Do I need a will if I already have a trust?

Yes. The two work together. The trust manages your assets during your lifetime. At your death the trust specifies how trust assets are distributed. The will does not come into effect until after your death and serves two important roles.

Clean-up. Most people leave some of their assets outside the trust — either by accident or by design. The function of an accompanying will is to see that the assets existing outside a deceased person's trust are poured into the trust at death. That's why these accompanying wills are called pour-over wills.

Pay up. Another valuable will function is to name an executor for the estate. The executor makes sure that a notice to creditors is published in the newspaper. Your heirs don't want to deal with disgruntled creditors after they've received their inheritance.

The process of getting an executor appointed by a probate judge to do these tasks is quick, easy, and inexpensive. (In Idaho probate is not a four-letter word. It's a seven-letter word.)
