What to do with $20 million

Health trust to survey county on use of funds

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — When Magic Valley Regional Medical Center was purchased by St. Luke's in late 2005, one of the promises Twin Falls County walked away with was $20 million for a county health initiatives board. This week, the six-month-old Twin Falls Health Initiatives Trust took its first steps toward fulfilling its role as a source of funding for county health projects for years to come.

In a two-hour meeting Wednesday afternoon, the nine board members agreed to launch a series of community surveys to determine what to spend $700,000 on during the 2008 calendar year, said Board President Curtis Eaton. The board will take the rest of this year to distribute and review the surveys and find an investment manager for the bulk of the money.

The survey will be conducted in two stages, said Eaton, who is also the executive director of the College of Southern Idaho Foundation. A survey intended for health services providers will go out within the next two weeks, and a survey for county residents will be distributed by early fall. The board can give grants for projects in medical, wellness and related education fields.

State, counties exchange words on CAFOs

By Nate Poppino

GOODING — It's up to counties, not the state, to decide how to handle confined animal feeding operations.

That's the message commissioners from Gooding, Jerome and Twin Falls counties heard from the Idaho State Department of Agriculture Friday. For almost two hours, commissioners and Gooding County staff traded questions with three ISDA representatives about the operations, their nutrient plans and the regulation process.

ISDA Director Celia Gould, Dairy Bureau chief Marv Patten and Greg Ledbetter, administrator of the Division of Animal Industries, explained the state agency's inspection process and how violators are punished, and answered questions on topics from waste odor to pivot irrigation systems. They portrayed the agency as a place for assistance, not policy change. "If you're looking at us to change the policy, change the statutes, we're probably the wrong folks," Gould said.

The dialog was generally without conflict, the exception being Jerome Commissioner Diana Obenauer's

Afghan prison to take some Gitmo detainees

By Matthew Lee
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The U.S. is helping expand a prison in Afghanistan to take some detainees from Guantanamo Bay, while administration officials argue about whether to bring the most dangerous to the U.S. when the Cuban facility shuts down.

President Bush has made closing the prison in Cuba a priority, though the Afghan site is not meant to be a substitute, the White House said Friday.

"Everybody is working toward the goal to meet what the president has asked them to do, which is to do it as soon as possible," Deputy press secretary Dana Perino told reporters.

She said Bush's top aides are in active discussions about closing Guantanamo. Senior officials, meanwhile, have told The Associated Press a consensus is building on how to do it, including sending some high-value suspects to military facilities in the U.S. where they KETCHUM — A wildfire spread across at least 250 acres of the Sawtooth National Forest Friday after burning on private land made its way into the forest one mile east of Sun Valley.

Shortly before 5 p.m., a human-caused fire started what officials have dubbed the "Trail Creek Fire," said Julie Thomas, fire information officer for the Sawtooth National Forest. "She said it is likely one of the area's largest fires in recent memory."

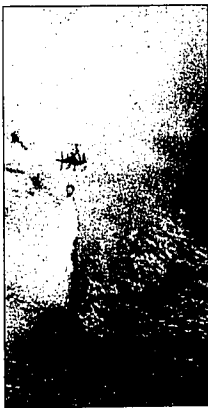

"It doesn't surprise us with the drought situation," said Thomas. "We pretty much knew if there was a start we'd have a wildfire."

"There were no injuries and foul play is not suspected," Thomas said late Friday night.

Two helicopters, four fire engines and 30 people were dispatched. During the early evening, retardant was sprayed, but the fire remained active Friday evening.

Crews included the U.S. Forest Service, the city of Sun Valley Fire Department and the Ketchum Rural Fire Department.

Thomas said they are expected to continue working Saturday and could be finished Sunday if there is little or no wind.

Moscow shooter had lithium in his system

By Todd Dvorak
Associated Press writer

BOISE — The gunman who killed himself and three others in a shooting rampage last month in downtown Moscow had small amounts of alcohol, marijuana and lithium in his system at the time of the attack, a toxicology report says.

Results of the report on shooter Jason Hamilton, 36, were shared by investigators with the Idaho State Police, the agency investigating the spree that stunned the small Idaho college town.

Hamilton, a janitor with a history of legal problems, killed his wife late on May 19 at their home before driving into town, where he opened fire at the gentling, the art of helping horses adjust to humans and enclosed spaces.

"The whole purpose of what we're doing here is to get the horse used to our world," said Johnson. "I don't think there's any such thing as a mean horse, just some people have more self-preservation instinct."

Eric Reid, a wild horse specialist and facility manager, said he was very happy with the turnout Friday. He said that although many people have more self-preservation instinct, they would learn about the process and what skills are needed to handle an adopted horse or burro.

"Even if we don't adopt very many, there's interest here," he said.

Ashley Hunt of Heyburn, echoing Reid, said she doesn't plan to adopt a horse, but it interests her.

"I kind of came over to look and see what we could find, and maybe my husband and I can get one," she said.

Saturday's proceedings at the adoption are from 7 a.m. to 9 p.m. Sunday, the last day of the event, runs from 7 a.m. until 10 a.m. All animals available for adoption have been vaccinated against common equine diseases.

The cost to adopt a horse or burro is $125 for the first animal and $25 for the second.

casings from the scene.

Idaho State Police Lt. Charles Spencer said Hamilton's autopsy revealed amounts of lithium below therapeutic levels.

The question still to be answered is whether the lithium, mixed with alcohol and trace amounts of marijuana, had any influence on Hamilton's deadly actions, Spencer said.

"So far, based on reports, we don't see any of those substances playing any role in the shooting," Spencer said. "That could change, but it all depends on what experts have to say about the presence of those chemicals in his system."

The report, issued this week, listed Hamilton's blood alcohol content at .033, below the Idaho legal intoxication threshold of .08. Investigators have not yet determined when Hamilton used marijuana.

Spencer said the lithium was prescribed, but there is no indication whether Hamilton had stopped taking the drug or was prescribed too small a dose to properly manage his mental health issues.

push for the agency to confront odor and pivot spraying, saying she wanted to avoid a "health catastrophe."

Asked about health risks from the practice, in which lagoon wastewater is recycled as irrigation water, Ledbetter said current studies don't show spraying as a problem.

"If livestock waste is truly a health hazard, we would see an epidemic (in farm workers)," Ledbetter said. "At this point in time, there's no data across the United States to support a health threat."

In terms of odor regulation, Patten said, the agency legally can study problems involving only water — not air, for example — and is hampered by a failure to create statewide regulations everyone in Idaho can agree with. Current law forbids odor in excess of that "associated with acceptable agricultural practices," which includes pivot systems and lagoons, Patten said.

"There will be odor any time manure is disturbed," he said. "It's very, very subjective."

Another source of odor is "banking" nutrient waste for use in later crop rotations. In response to commissioners' worries, Ledbetter said Idaho's standard limiting minerals such as phosphorus to 40 parts per million in the soil is much lower than standards in nearby states, and with increased monitoring current high levels should drop.

"We have two states to our west at 500 (ppm), and one to the east at 100," he said.

"Ours at 40 is erring way, way on the safety side."

The commissioners and Gould all said they felt the session was productive, and Gould suggested holding such meetings more often.

"We just wanted a chance to work together with the counties — give them accurate information and get information from them as to what their needs are," she said after the discussion.

The meeting came one day after Gooding County's new CAFO ordinance went into effect. The ordinance, approved after a June 4 public hearing, was portrayed by the dairy industry as a threat to its ability to operate. The county ranks eighth in milk production out of more than 3,000 American counties, according to a 2006 Boise State University study.

or what we don't have in those areas that we could consider for funding," Eaton said.

The trust board will also send out between 12 and 15 requests for an investment adviser next week. The plan is to invest the entire amount of the fund and use the income it generates for each year's projects. The trust has $15 million to start and will get $500,000 each year from the hospitals for 10 years.

"We will tell them that we want a conservative investment, but one that provides for some growth of the fund," Eaton said.

The board may not approve any grants until spring 2008 because members want to take their time to make sure the money is set up well for the future, Eaton said.

"This fund has the potential of really making a difference in some of the areas in Twin Falls County," he said.

could be prosecuted.

Officials say the administration is split, with Vice President Dick Cheney's office and the Justice Department vehemently opposed to any proposal that would bring detainees to U.S. soil, where they would be afforded more legal rights and might pose a threat.

Pressure to close Guantanamo has been mounting in recent months, with the administration suffering a series of legal setbacks and some in Congress threatening to mandate a shutdown.

Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice and Defense Secretary Robert Gates, among others, are in favor of the proposal to bring some detainees to the U.S. provided proper safeguards are in place, officials say. And Perino made clear that Bush is determined to see Guantanamo Bay shut down.

"America does not have any intention of being the world's jailer," she said, noting that the United States has announced plans to release about 80 of the some 375 detainees remaining in Guantanamo and hopes to transfer several dozen Afghans back to Afghanistan in the near future.

Washington is helping the Afghan government build a high-security wing at Pul-e-Charki prison complex just outside Kabul. The wing has 330 cells and can hold up to 660 people, including 65 Afghans held at Guantanamo Bay, according to Afghan officials.

But Gen. Mohammad Zahir Azim, the chief spokesman for Afghanistan's Defense Ministry, said none of those held at Guantanamo had been transferred to Afghanistan so far despite statements by U.S. officials that they would be sent back by the end of April 2007.

The Guantanamo Bay prison, set up in 2002 to house terror suspects captured in military operations, mostly in Afghanistan, has been a flash point for criticism of the Bush administration at home and abroad.

Human rights advocates and foreign leaders have repeatedly called for its shutdown, and the prison is regarded by critics as proof of U.S. double standards on fundamental freedoms in the war on terrorism.

Some of the detainees have come from countries that are U.S. allies, including Britain, Saudi Arabia and Australia. Each of those governments raised complaints about the conditions or duration of detentions, or about the possibility that detainees might face death sentences.

The Bush administration has transferred 405 detainees out of Guantanamo to more than two dozen countries. Most were later released by their home countries. Of the 375 who remain, the U.S. military says it wants to prosecute 90 and has cleared for transfer another 80.

The military says the rest, about 200, are either too dangerous to release or still have intelligence value.

A proposal gaining traction among Bush's top national security advisers would have some of the most dangerous suspects at Guantanamo transferred to one or more Defense Department facilities, including the maximum-security prison at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., and a Navy brig in South Carolina.

Perino declined to comment on the Fort Leavenworth option, which has been raised by lawmakers.

A scheduled high-level Friday meeting on the matter was canceled after AP reported it was scheduled. Perino said it had been determined late Thursday that the gathering "wasn't necessary at this time."

Commander foresees possible troop reduction in Iraq this next spring

By Pauline Jellinek
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The U.S. may be able to reduce combat forces in Iraq by next spring, if Iraq's own security forces continue to grow and improve, a senior American commander said Friday.

He denied reports that the U.S. is arming Sunni insurgent groups to help in the fight against al-Qaida.

Lt. Gen. Raymond Odierno, the top day-to-day commander of U.S. forces in Iraq, did not predict any reductions in U.S. forces but said such redeployments may be feasible by spring. There are currently 155,000 U.S. troops in Iraq.

Speaking to reporters at the Pentagon from his headquarters outside Baghdad, Odierno gave an update on the U.S. offensives under way in Diyala province northeast of Baghdad and in areas south and west of the capital. He said U.S. and Iraqi troops have made important progress.

"I think if everything goes the way it's going now, there's a potential that by the spring we will be able to reduce forces, and Iraq security forces could take over," Odierno said. "It could happen sooner than that. I don't know."

He also cautioned that, because the insurgents in Iraq have proven so resilient and adaptive, making any prediction is risky. "There's so many things that could happen between now and then," he said, referring to next spring.

Odierno also said it's too early to say how long the recent addition of almost 30,000 U.S. troops should be maintained. The overall U.S. commander in Iraq, Gen. David Petraeus, is due to report to Washington in September on what the troop buildup is accomplishing, and he has said he intends also to recommend a way forward.

Odierno said murders in Baghdad this week were down to 33, compared with 93 during the second week in January — before the start of a Baghdad security operation that prompted the American troop buildup. He reported that troops have found 128 weapons caches in June, compared with 25 in June of last year.

U.S. troops sweep into Iraqi neighborhoods

BAQOUBA, Iraq (AP) — Hundreds of U.S. and Iraqi troops, under cover of F-16s, fought their way into three neighborhoods of besieged Baqouba on Friday to help clear Diyala province, of entrenched insurgents. To the north of the city, American helicopters killed 17 al-Qaida gunmen trying to sneak past a checkpoint.

As the mission of 10,000 U.S. soldiers to take back the volatile and extremely dangerous province intensified in its fourth day, so have concerns about keeping al-Qaida fighters on the run. The terrorist fighters and their allies already have been run out of Fallujah and Ramadi in Anbar province, only to regroup in Diyala's capital of Baqouba and surrounding districts.

The U.S. ground forces commander, Lt. Gen. Raymond Odierno, said more than three-quarters of Baqouba's al-Qaida leadership fled before the Americans moved into the city this week. At the time, drone observer planes spotted fighters planting dozens of roadside bombs on the main highway into Baqouba.

Lt. Gen. Mick Bednarek, assistant commander for al-Qaida fighters remained. "They're clearly in hiding, no question about it. But they're a hardline group of fighters who have no intention of leaving, and they want to kill as many coalition and Iraqi security forces as they possibly can," Bednarek said Friday.

"It's 24-7 for us here, and it's probably the same for our adversary as well," he said. "It's house-to-house, block to block, street to street, sewer to sewer — and it's also cars, vans — we're searching every one of them."

An Associated Press employee in Baqouba reported heavy fighting as U.S. troops swept into three eastern neighborhoods in Friday's operation.

NATO blames Taliban for reported 25 civilian dead

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — NATO accused Taliban fighters Friday of provoking an airstrike that reportedly killed 25 innocents, including three infants and nine women, while a Dutch general charged that insurgents executed villagers during another battle.

The allegations come amid a new surge of criticism over civilian deaths during attacks by foreign forces, a debate that underlines how the five-year-old war against insurgents is also a struggle for hearts and minds among long-suffering Afghans and voters in NATO nations. President Hamid Karzai and others have long complained that civilian losses in NATO or U.S.-led operations are undermining the effort to stabilize Afghanistan and prevent a Taliban comeback. The deaths are "difficult for us to accept or understand," Karzai said Thursday.

NATO commanders are adamant that the militants — not foreign forces — deserve most of the blame for the toll among civilians, and said the overnight bloodshed in southern Helmand province was just such a case.

Key U.S. allies explore seeking a compromise with Iran

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Key U.S. allies are debating the idea of a nuclear compromise with Iran that would call for only a partial freeze of Tehran's uranium enrichment program — a stance that could put them at odds with Washington, officials said Friday.

The officials — U.S. and European diplomats and government employees — told The Associated Press that the deliberations among senior British, French and German decision-makers were only preliminary and that no conclusions had been drawn.

Germany was "supportive," France opposed and Britain noncommittal, they said. "Nothing is on paper," said one European diplomat, describing the tentative plan as a "freeze for peace."

With the United States continuing to insist on a full enrichment freeze, the talks could strain the U.S.-led attempt to show unity on the issue or even push Washington to settle for less than it has been demanding.

Turning Troubles Into Triumphs

Borrow a quarter and call the U.S. Mint

JEERS: To the United States Mint for releasing the new Idaho quarters as if they were a bad, direct-to-video movie.

On June 4, the mint started churning out the first of 550 million 25-cent pieces bearing an artist's rendering of an Idaho peregrine falcon. It did so unannounced, a spokesman explaining that the U.S. Department of the Treasury would get around to arranging an official announcement sooner of later.

See, thanks.

Sure we're a minor state, in the scheme of things, and of course the Idaho-designed image on the coin — a bird and the outline of the state's borders — looks a bit silly to a lot of Idahoans. But we've been waiting for 7 1/2 years for our turn in the limelight, ever since the federal government released the first commemorative quarter.

Couldn't the mint have at least put out a press release? To us, it seems like a two-bell-top operation.

CHEERS: To Fifth District Magistrate Thomas Borsen for sending Luis Salas to jail for nearby a year.

Salas, legally drunk at the time, deliberately ran over a dog in Jerome County and tried to hit another while the animals' horrified owners watched.

The 21-year-old Bliss resident was convicted of malicious injury, attempted malicious injury, DUI and failing to buy a driver's license.

The charges yielded sterner punishment than Idaho's animal cruelty laws would have. Those statutes are feeble compared with those in most states, providing for a maximum, first-offense punishment of six months in jail and/or a fine between $100 and $5,000.

Before 2006, Idaho's animal cruelty laws were even weaker. That year the Legislature passed and then Gov. Dirk Kempthorne signed legislation expanding enforcement and providing for seizure of mistreated animals.

Idaho's agricultural economy, and its cruelty statutes should realistically reflect the role of animals in the state's largest industry.

But deliberate, malicious injury to an animal is wrong, and it's always wrong. Our laws should reflect that.

JEERS: To the U.S. 9th Circuit Court of Appeals, for leaving Idaho County with the choice between retrying convicted murderer Mark Henry Lankford or slashing the county budget and laying off workers to pay for a new trial.

Lankford and his brother, Bryan, were both convicted in 1983 of killing a young Texas couple camping in the northern Idaho wilderness. U.S. Marine Capt. Robert Bravence, 27, and his wife, Cheryl, 25, were beaten to death near the Clearwater River, and each brother blamed the other for the crime.

But Bryan testified against his brother, and while Mark

Lankford was sent to death row, Bryan was sentenced to life in prison without parole.

In January, the San Francisco-based 9th Circuit Court ruled that although federal law would have allowed Bryan Lankford's uncorroborated testimony against his brother, Idaho law forbids it — and that meant that Mark Lankford's defense attorney denied his client the right to effective counsel when he told the jury they could consider the testimony.

Next week, the state of Idaho will ask the U.S. Supreme Court to vacate the 9th Circuit ruling. If the high court says no, it will be up to rural Idaho County to decide whether to free Mark Lankford or retry him.

The tab? $500,000 to $1 million for a county with 15,000 residents.

That's an absurd expectation by any court, and yet another sign that the 9th Circuit judges are far out of touch with much of the nine-state region over which they preside.

If the U.S. Supreme Court denies Idaho's claim, pity Idaho

County Prosecutor Kirk MacDonald. He gets to decide whether to put a cold-blooded murderer back on the street or send some of his fellow country employees to the back of the unemployment line.

CHEERS: To Castleford (population 274), a town with enough pride to want a centennial celebration worthy of the occasion.

So the community is holding a bean cook-off today — featuring a chili feed, bean-tasting and judging, and live entertainment — to raise the $1,000 needed to finishing paying for a fireworks show.

Castleford, which has struggled in recent years with problems ranging from too much arsenic in its drinking water to too little law enforcement in its streets, hopes to have the money in place in time for the community's 100th birthday in August.

It's not a wealthy town, but Castleford is rich in the values that count in an Idaho community.

Idaho State Police Association says thanks

As director of fund raising for the Idaho State Police Association, I want to thank the citizens of Idaho for their generous contributions during our summer fund raising campaign.

A portion of your donations go to help Trooper Chris Glenn and his family with living expenses as needed, to assist the families of those Idaho police officers that are killed or injured in the line of duty, the Idaho Peace Officers Memorial Fund, the Idaho Special Olympics, the cost of the fund drive and other charities and individuals as needed.

The ISPA established a fund raising center in Boise in January of this year. We hire Idaho residents to work in the center and make the calls. Callers are not ISPA Troopers and 100 percent of the donations go to the ISPA and not to some out-of-state fund raiser. We are legitimate and are registered as a nonprofit organization under Idaho Code 501(c) 5.

Your generosity and giving has made a difference in the lives of those that have received funds from the ISPA. You may check out our fund raising Center information at www.ispaonline.org.

Government must find the best use for our land

I have a few comments on your criticism of the governor about the public and state lands initiative and how these lands can be better managed.

First of all, there are two kinds of public and state lands. There are those lands that have scenic value and should be preserved for all kinds of recreation and then there is desert in Idaho that has no scenic value but has value to be developed.

The school sections out in the big desert are just non-performing assets of the state. It is the Land Board's duty to find the highest possible use for these lands for the benefit of the schools in the state. Look at what is happening in our Magic Valley. The finest farm land in the world north and south of Kimberly and around Twin Falls and Jerome are being covered by homes and asphalt and the 100,000 acres of BLM ground in the two counties that is not good for farms and has no scenic value but could be municipal and industrial is laying idle because of the state and federal policies of no cooperation. The schools could benefit if the state would trade the non-performing assets out in the desert for lands that could be sold or leased to the counties close to infrastructure.

The lands out in the desert would be more easily managed by the BLM. Let's look at this as an opportunity in which all could benefit and not as an opportunity to polarize the populace.

Western Days parade is a family event?

A couple of questions come to mind when I think of the Western Days Parade. First, and foremost, I keep reading how we need to keep the family values in Western Days. If it's supposed to be such a family event, then why do we have a beer garden in the park? Funny how no one has mentioned this.

Let's keep this a family event, but let's stand in the park and get drunk from noon till 8 o'clock, oh, and send the children to the five or six jumping balloons/slides and wagon train that cost $15 for an all-day pass or a dollar a day, and each so-called ride takes at least two tickets. Now that's what I call a family event. Not.

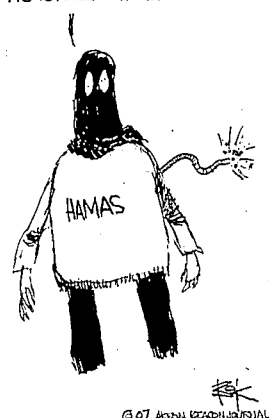

Secondly, a sign with a rainbow and a flag that says SIGLBT is not advertising sex. I am 70 years old and I had to ask what the acronym stood for. Saying that, I highly doubt that any child would have paid attention to the float. They are standing eagerly awaiting the candy that is being thrown.

My last question: What is Western Days all about? The two-to-three hour parade in my eyes is all about advertising. Let's see, we have almost every nursing, Nazca Car, the dance companies around Twin, car companies, banks, different churches and organizations, all advertising. Is that what Western Days stands for? If I'm wrong someone please tell me. SIGLBT are friends of mine. They are all the same as you and I, they feel the same, they cry the same, love the same, fight the same. And they also have families. They would help me in a pinch and give me the shirt off their back in order to help me in a time of need and I do the same for them. No one has the right to ridicule or pass judgment on anyone.

One last thought: They did not have to have their float in the parade. Hats off to SIGLBT, they have gotten more publicity this way.

IT'S ISRAEL'S FAULT...

afford to ignore the power — and voter access — that the Internet provides. But the savviest won't forget those other millions who are waiting tables, driving trucks and otherwise figure life is a daily battle to stonify themselves for long before a computer screen.

Of the hundreds of videos out there, Clinton and Gravel's — the best and worst of the bunch — are probably the most familiar, thanks to generous news coverage.

In Clinton's flick, the well-dressed senator sits in a diner booth flipping through the tabletop jukebox, just as Tony Soprano did in the series finale. In walks Bill Clinton, wearing a loosey-goosey and exuding the "yada of a truant adolescent.

For Americans familiar with the final installment of "The Sopranos," the video is oh-so-clever. Clinton orders carrots instead of the onion rings that Tony ordered. Bill says: "No onion rings?"

"I'm lookin' out for you," says the Mrs.

"So what's the winning song? ... My money is on Smash Mouth," says the former prez.

No cheating: Who or what is Smash Mouth? Even if you know, this pop reference is clearly aimed at younger folks who are the primary audience and producers of YouTube.

Translation: The Clintons are cool.

Beyond the entertainment value of seeing a former president playing Louie to the Godmother, the video's success is predicated on a community of coolness. But is it important that the leader of the free world be hip to Smash Mouth and other touchstones of popular culture?

It's all rather insider stuff and has not much to do with the real world in which most Americans dwell. That would not incidentally be the same world inhabited by one Mike Gravel, perhaps the oddest creature to grip a lectern since Ross Perot toured America with pie charts.

In his online videos, Gravel has fashioned a surreal blend of Jean-Paul Sartre and "The Blair Witch Project."

In one, we see Gravel's expressionless face too close to the camera, staring. In the background is a pond bordered by a path. Gravel says nothing for several long seconds, then turns, walks away, picks up a large rock and tosses it in the water.

Gravel, uh, makes a splash. Another video similarly places Gravel outdoors, this time showing the candidate silently collecting sticks, with which he lights a fire. Wow, that is, like, so symbolic.

For a candidate little known outside of Alaska, for which he served two terms as a U.S. senator, Internet buzz about his weird videos beats out his real-world record.

To be fair, candidates are as much victims as benefactors of the YouTube age, trapped between two dimensions of reality that are fundamentally in conflict. One reality pertains to Americans who have neither the time nor the urge to "get" the latest hip thing. The other concerns the very real phenomenon of a parasitic universe where younger, more technologically attuned Americans provide.

Candidates can't afford to ignore either, but ultimately, they're forced to present two different faces to two different audiences: the plugged and the unplugged, the hip and the un-hip.

The question is: Which is the true face? Which persona will lead the nation?

Can't be too cool to be so cool.

Firefighters gather to honor 9 who died in S.C.

A Charleston firefighter carries the helmet to its position in the receiving line outside of the North Charleston Coliseum on Friday.

NORTH CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Fire Capt. Ken Dannum stood sharply in his dress uniform, his eyes reddening, as the families of nine dead firefighters filed past him and into a packed coliseum for their memorial service Friday.

"These people are dealing with a mountain of grief," said Dannum, who worked the shift in Florence, Wash., and went 40 hours without sleep to make it to South Carolina for the ceremony. "If we can take on some of that, that's why we're here."

Dannum and a colleague from his city north of Seattle were among thousands of firefighters who traveled from across the country to mourn the Charleston firefighters killed in a furniture store blaze Monday night. It was the worst single loss of U.S. firefighters' lives since the Sept. 11 attacks.

"They traveled to a region that normally draws out-of-towners to its beaches and historical landmarks, but where city offices were closed Friday as piles of flowers and cards and remembrances of the slain men have grown over the past four days."

Some came in fire trucks that took part in a procession that wound its way past hundreds of onlookers, past the rubble of the Sofa Super Store and past the dead men's fire houses before arriving at the coliseum.

Dannum and Everett firefighter Tim Hogan came by plane, working a 24-hour shift back home before leaving, and waiting out a six-hour layover in Atlanta before getting to Charleston on Thursday.

They stood shoulder to shoulder with comrades from Virginia Beach, Va., Saginaw,

Texas, and Peoria, Ill. It was a trip they said they felt compelled to make to share the painful collective grief.

"It makes it a little hard, every one we do," Hogan said. "But the families deserve this. The fallen are fallen, they're looking down on us smiling right now. Their families ... we're here for them."

The Washington firefighters didn't care that they couldn't get in to the coliseum. It was filled to its 9,000-seat capacity, so they joined several hundred others who watched the service on screens in a nearby convention center and outside the arena.

Inside, a row of nine coffins sat before a row of nine large photos of the fallen firefighters: Capt. William "Billy" Hutchinson, 48; Capt. Mike Benke, 49; Capt. Louis Mulkey, 34; Mark Kelsey, 40; Bradford "Brad" Baity, 37; Michael French, 27; James "Earl" Drayton, 56; Brandon Thompson, 27; and Melvin Champaign, 46.

The ceremony started with somber classical music and bagpipers that led family members, each wearing a red carnation and preceded by an officer carrying a fire helmet bearing the number of their fire house.

The mayor called the men heroes. The governor wondered aloud whether questions about a higher purpose for the deaths would ever be answered.

"Who we are crucially depends on what we're willing to stand up for in life. In short, are we willing to walk the walk?" said Gov. Mark Sanford. "They walked their walk right into the company of angels and to heaven's gate."

New federal survey documents U.S. sex behavior, illegal drug use

By David Gray
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — It's a question that often prompts a boastful answer or a bushful one: How many sex partners have you had?

Now the federal government says it has authoritative statistics, documenting that men are far more likely to play the field than women. A new nationwide survey, using high-tech methods to solicit candid answers on sexual activity and illegal drug use, finds that 29 percent of American men report having 15 or more female sexual partners in a lifetime, while only 9 percent of women report having sex with 15 or more men.

The median number of lifetime female sexual partners for men was seven; the median number of male partners for women was four.

The survey, released Friday, is based on data collected from 1999 to 2002 for the National Center for Health Statistics, a branch of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

In previous versions of this survey, participants were asked questions in face-to-face interviews. The CDC believes that caused underreporting of behaviors which might be viewed negatively, although the new survey did not provide any comparative results from earlier reports.

This time, data was gathered from 6,237 adults, aged 20 to 59, in what are called computer-assisted self-interviews — a method designed to provide complete privacy and produce more honest answers.

"This is the first time we've used this technique," said Dr. Kathryn Porter, who served as medical officer for the survey. "The participants have a headset on, they hear questions, they touch the screen with responses. There's no one else in the room and they can take as long as they want."

Porter said the findings would provide grist for further studies, notably on the prevalence and patterns of sexually transmitted diseases.

Through the survey results were presented by the CDC without subjective comment, they will likely provide ammunition to various parties in the ongoing national debate over sex education, cohabitation and access to birth control.

Many of the conservative groups aligned with the Bush administration on social issues promote the goal of sexual abstinence until marriage. The survey found only about 11 percent of never-married adults had remained chaste.

Among the other findings:

- About 96 percent of U.S. adults have had sex.
- Sixteen percent of adults first had sex before age 15, while 15 percent abstained from sex until at least age 21.

Amusement parks shut down thrill rides after girl's feet cut off

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Six Flags Kentucky Kingdom to close down eight more thrill rides around North America on Friday after a teenage girl's feet were sliced off during a ride in Kentucky.

State inspectors were at the Six Flags Kentucky Kingdom to examine the Superman Tower of Power, where the accident happened Thursday. The ride lifts passengers 177 feet straight up, then drops them nearly the same distance at speeds reaching 54 mph.

It was unclear at what point in the ride the 13-year-old was injured, said Wendy Goldberg, a Six Flags spokeswoman. The girl was taken to a hospital, where her condition was not immediately available Friday. Six Flags shut down similar rides at parks in St. Louis; Gurnee, Ill.; and near Washington as a safety precaution, Goldberg said. She said Six Flags Over Texas, near Dallas, also has a Superman Tower of Power, but it is not the same ride.

Still no sign of miner

Loader pulled from beneath hole at Midas

By John Sents
For the Times-News

ELKO, Nev. — Newmont rescue crews recovered a loader that dropped more than 100 feet through an opening in the company's Midas mine, but the miner believed to have been operating it has yet to be found.

The crews from Newmont's Midas, Carlin and Twin Creeks mines have been working in shifts around the clock since Tuesday to locate the miner.

Listening gear and remote cameras — including a high-resolution camera and lights that arrived Thursday night from Tennessee — continue to be utilized in an attempt to locate the employee.

The loader was recovered by drilling roughly 200 feet below the area of subsidence and pulling the vehicle out. More than 1,700 tons of material have been removed from the area of subsidence and below since the loader fell into it around 7:30 a.m. Tuesday.

Speaking more than 60 hours since the incident, Mary Korpi, Newmont's director of external relations, said the company is still focused on the rescue effort and crews are driven to accomplish that goal.

"People are still very driven to see a positive conclusion to this. They have rallied around it," Korpi said. "They are still very driven."

Newmont has received support from the U.S. Navy's Fallon Air Force station, Lang Drilling, Barrick Gold and many others.

The ground subsidence occurred approximately 200 feet beneath the entrance to the underground mine. The area around it remains unstable and rescue crews are proceeding with caution.

The mine's operations remain suspended. All employees evacuated on Tuesday are unharmed.

"I commend the crews, support teams and employees who are working around the clock to reach our missing employee," said Brant Hinz, Newmont's vice president of North American Operations, in a statement. "Everyone has rallied around this effort."

Newmont continues to communicate with and provide support for the employee's family, according to a statement from the company.

Twin Falls murder trials pushed back

Defendants waive right to speedy trials

By Cassidy Friedman
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A local man and woman indicted in unrelated murder cases have agreed to have their trials set back from summer to fall.

Elizabeth Anne Miller, 22, was indicted for first-degree murder in the Jan. 12 smothering of 2-year-old Ashlyn Roger Lynn against a couch in Miller's apartment.

Miller waived her right to a speedy trial Thursday, and a judge pushed her jury trial back from July 24 to Oct. 23, or possibly a later date in November.

Miller's attorney, Twin Falls County Public Defender Marilyn Paul, filed several motions in late April, claiming the case against her client is predicated upon false testimony, an inconclusive autopsy and a violation of her due process rights. Paul also asked for a change of venue to find an impartial jury. The prosecutor argued that no legal basis exists for any of those allegations.

A judge will respond to those motions on Sept. 10.

Steel

Miller

James Steel, 24, was indicted on a second-degree murder charge in the shooting of 21-year-old Luis Carlos Ramirez in the early morning of Nov. 19 at a close range with a 9 mm semiautomatic pistol outside Phat Eddy's dance club.

Steel was headed to face a jury on July 11, until he signed a written waiver of his right to a speedy trial May 31.

A judge pushed Steel's trial back to Nov. 20.

Speed of summer

The 20 mph speed zones around Twin Falls schools will remain in effect during the summer since students still use the facilities for various activities. Punishment for speeding in a school zone can include a traffic safety summons — in which drivers are sent to a $50, three-hour, driver's safety course — or a $100 fine.

Drivers advised to slow down around schools in summer

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — School may be out for the summer, but that doesn't mean drivers can stop watching their speedometers. The 20 mph speed zones around Twin Falls schools are still in effect throughout the summer.

Twin Falls Police Sgt. Craig Stotts said the speed limits stay in effect because students still use the schools for things ranging from summer school to hot lunch programs.

"The whole intent of the speed zones around the school is to create a safety zone around those schools," he said.

The punishment for speeding in a school zone can range from a traffic safety summons, in which drivers are sent to a $50, three-hour course on basic driver's safety information, to a $100 city fine with $32.50 in court costs. Officers can also issue a lesser fine of $62 based on state code.

"That's up to the officer," Stotts said. "A lot of the citations that we issue in school zones depend on the severity of the speed and what not."

Twin Falls is not the only city with year-round school speed limits. Jerome, for example, maintains a 20 mph speed limit all year, with some zones marked as 24 hours a day and some that read 7 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The city uses the state fine of $62 for speeding.

And drivers will still have to slow down to 15 mph around schools in Rupert for the summer months, at least until after 4 p.m.

FILER — Have fun and help out the community during this weekend's Filer Fun Days.

The festivities got under way Friday with a fish fry and evening concert at the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds.

There is even more fun planned for today and Sunday.

"Like always, the Filer Fun Days are being sponsored by the Kiwanis Club, so proceeds from the event (except for the demolition derby and 4-H yard sale) are used by the club to help the community. Most of the money is used for the youth," said Ron Conrad, president-elect of the Filer Kiwanis Club.

"We have a really fun weekend planned out," he said. "We will have lots of food, an outdoor flea market with vendors and a parade."

The parade, "Dreams for the Future," will begin at 11 a.m. today at the fairground's main entrance. It will head west along Main Street and turn south at Stevens Street, then east along Sixth Street and Yakima Street before heading back to the fairgrounds.

The Filer Fun Days activities are happening in and around the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds

Today

7-10 a.m., Kiwanis Club Pancake Breakfast at Merchants Building No. 1.
7:30 a.m.-6 p.m., Vendors in the park.
8:30 a.m.-4 p.m., 4-H benefit yard sale in the park.
9:30 a.m., Parade sign-up at the main fairground entrance.
11 a.m., Parade.
11:30 a.m.-4 p.m., Carnival opens and Kiwanis Club lunch at the fairgrounds.
12:30 p.m., Bingo in Merchants Building No. 1.
12:30-4 p.m., Entertainment on the Free Stage.
1-5 p.m., Horseshoe competition.
4 p.m., Chicken Drop next to the fairground's Free Stage.
7 p.m., Demolition Derby at Shouse Arena.
8 p.m.-12 a.m., Street dance at the 300 block of Main Street.

Sunday

10:30 a.m.-12 p.m., Community worship services at the Free Stage.

Rupert hits the mute button

RUPERT — Following complaints by a number of residents, city officials said they will begin to crackdown on violators of Rupert's noise ordinance.

Several members of the public spoke at Tuesday's city council meeting, saying music played at high volumes on car stereos is especially disruptive to their privacy.

The city has had a noise ordinance in effect for several years, but Mayor Audrey Newerth said the difficulty lies in enforcing it.

"Our officers enforce that ordinance every chance they can. But they can't be everywhere," she said.

Council members said they would be open to re-examining the ordinance, but such action would be of little use if citizens do not report violations.

"I think we should revisit the ordinance — check its strength, check its timing," said Councilman Mike Brown.

Police Chief Randy White said if the volume of music has been turned down before police arrive on the scene, they cannot issue a citation unless the person who reported the incident is willing to sign the citation.

"A lot of people are hesitant to do that for a variety of reasons, the primary one being reprisal," he said.

Officials said residents who wish to read the noise ordinance should visit the city's Web site, <http://www.rupert-idaho.com>, or call City Hall for clarification of it. Noise ordinance violations can be reported to the Rupert Police Department at 434-2330.

"We welcome anyone to join and hope they just let their imagination run wild with the theme," said Bud Compher, parade chairman.

Those interested in joining the parade can sign in at the fairground's main entrance beginning at 9:30 a.m.

More than 20 Magic Valley 4-H clubs are using Filer Fun Days to raise money for two local youth in need of help. The clubs will host a yard sale in the fairground's park by the main entrance.

Leilani Metzner of Buhl is the leader of the Pigs and Kids 4-H Club and said money raised will be given to 4-H members Cody Otersberg of Twin Falls and Orin Parrot of Hollister.

"Cody is from our club and was just diagnosed with leukemia three weeks ago, and Orin... was injured in a four-wheeler accident. As the parent of a child traumatically injured, I understand what a strain this can put on the family. I just thought that by getting something together we could help these families out," Metzner said. "I would like to see enough raised so that each receives at least $1,000."

Sunday events include a community worship service and Filer Nazarene Men's group spaghetti lunch at the Free Stage, as well as the carnival and vendors in the park.

Billboard for former Mormon Web site comes down early

The Associated Press

IDAHO FALLS — A billboard in eastern Idaho advertising an organization for people who have left the Mormon church or who are thinking of doing so has been taken down after the business that owns the land complained.

Barry Smith, president of Dome Technology Inc. and an active member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, said his sons became concerned about the sign on Dome's property after the Post-Register newspaper ran a story two weeks ago.

The billboard along U.S. Highway 20 advertising www.postmormon.org came down more than a week before scheduled.

Copy of Declaration found at thrift store will be displayed

SAIT LAKE CITY (AP) — A Utah investment firm purchased a rare copy of the Declaration of Independence for $477,650 after a thrift-store shopper acquired it for $2.48.

It will be displayed June 29 at Grand America Hotel in Salt Lake City.

"It's symbolism for how we operate our company," said Corey Ann Garwick, marketing director at Bray-Conn Inc. "The principles that have brought our country success have also given us unparalleled success."

The copy was made in 1823 by William Stone at the request of John Quincy Adams, president from 1825 to 1829. Only three dozen are known to exist.

Michael Sparks found it in a thrift store in Nashville, Tenn., last year.

"This one was so beautiful I thought it was an engraving," he said. "I look for things that have quality to them."

Just two days earlier, it was removed from a couple's garage during a routine cleaning.

"It just doesn't pay to keep a clean house," Sparks said.

Border crosser deaths climb along with heat

By Arthur H. Rotstein
Associated Press writer

TUCSON, Ariz. — Temperatures have soared during the past weeks' run-up in the Southwest, and deaths among migrants crossing Arizona's desert regions are also up — a potential ill omen, a border county medical examiner says.

Authorities recovered the bodies of 12 suspected illegal immigrants during the past week, a period that saw temperatures top 100 degrees each day in southern Arizona, said Pima County Medical Examiner Dr. Bruce Parks. The office performs autopsies on many of the scores of illegal immigrants who die crossing into Arizona each year.

One was killed in a car crash, but four died of heat exposure, Parks said. He says the cause of death for the other seven is not yet certain.

"I expect that the majority of that, if not all of those pending, are going to turn out to be heat-related," Parks said. "That's quite a few in a week's period of time, and it doesn't bode well for the rest of the summer if that trend continues."

Arizona is the busiest location for illegal entries on the Mexico-U.S. border, and except for the last fiscal year, the harsh Arizona desert has taken an increasing toll in lives of undocumented immigrants. Pima County is at the center of migrant routes, and the medical examiner here also covers deaths in two nearby counties, Santa Cruz and Pinal.

Typically, the deaths spike during the hottest months, from May through August, when triple-digit temperatures are normal. Agents in the Border Patrol's Tucson sector recovered the remains of a record 72 illegal immigrants in the desert in July 2005. Nearly all died from heat exposure, Parks said.

The nine most recent discoveries of bodies occurred Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, according to agency spokesmen.

They included:

- The body of a Mexican man found on the Tohono O'odham Indian Reservation. The man died after he fell behind at least five other men who had been walking for 24 hours without water.
- Human remains believed

Mickey Atkinson

GOODING — Mickey Atkinson, 82, of Gooding, died June 19, 2007, in Twin Falls.

She was born June 10, 1925, in San Antonio, Texas, to William Vernon McCoy and Lillian Bertha Brockway. She was a member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

She married Tom Lake Atkinson July 24, 1961, in Los Angeles, Calif. In 1991, they moved to Gooding. She enjoyed crossword puzzles, playing electronic pocket games, her cat "Angel" and, most of all, spending time with her family and friends.

She was preceded in death by her husband; twin brother, Larry; and her parents.

She is survived by sons, Randall Atkinson (fiancee, Darlene Lypchuk) of Gooding and Vernon (Lana) Atkinson of Rexburg; and grandchildren, Colby, Caden and Caylee.

The funeral will be at 11 a.m. Saturday, June 23, at the Lyman LDS Chapel in Rexburg. The family will receive friends from 10 to 10:45 a.m. Saturday at the church.

Burial will be at the Sutton Cemetery.

Arrangements are under the direction of Flamm Funeral Home in Rexburg.

DEATH NOTICES

Levi C. Stinnett

HAILEY — Levi Creed Stinnett, 18, of Hailey, died Tuesday, June 19, 2007.

A memorial service will be at 11 a.m. Wednesday, June 27, at the Bellevue Community Church, with the Rev. Tad Walton officiating.

Arrangements are under the direction of Wood River Chapel in Hailey.

Gilbert Burdette Tinsley

TWIN FALLS — Gilbert Burdette Tinsley, 87, of Twin Falls, passed away June 21, 2007, at his home at Bridgeview Estates.

He was born Dec. 22, 1919, in Boise, Idaho, the son of Gilbert and Lucille Burt Tinsley. He grew up and attended schools in Boise and joined the Army in 1940. He served in World War II until his discharge in 1945.

On Sept. 2, 1951, in Portland, Ore., he married the love of his life, Elizabeth B. Gehlert. They were devoted to each other through the years, until Bee's passing in 2004. Gil worked throughout his life in the trucking industry, eventually retiring as a general manager.

He was a past member of the Twin Falls Elks Lodge, a longtime member of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and a member of the Rock Creek Community Church, Gilbert and Bee enjoyed traveling in their RV, traveling for over two years with no ties to bind them. They also enjoyed fishing and boating and spending time with their dog Sandy.

Surviving is his brother, Calvin Grant Tinsley of Lake Havasu, Ariz., and a sister, Roberta Ann Neely of Tyler, Texas, along with loving friends, Arden and Linda Stueman of Twin Falls. Preceding him in death were his parents; wife, Bee; and brother, Kenneth Tinsley.

He will be deeply missed by all who knew and loved him. A memorial service will be Tuesday, June 26, at 11 a.m. at the Rock Creek Community Church with Pastor Dale Metzger officiating.

At Gil's request, private inurnment will follow at a later date. Gil would recommend that no memorials be made in his name to the Alzheimer's Research, c/o Twin Falls Chapter, 4696 Overland Drive, Boise, ID 83705. Service and arrangements are under the direction of Park's Magic Valley Funeral Home of Twin Falls.

A crashing start to 2007 Idaho Regatta at Friday's qualifying

The crew in the P-38 Crackerbox ships along the Snake River during a qualifying run Friday afternoon for the Idaho Regatta. Racing begins at 11 a.m. today and Sunday at the Burley Municipal Golf Course Marina.

By Chip Thompson
For the Times-Herald

BURLEY — A dramatic crash during qualifying runs Friday afternoon assured race fans the 2007 Idaho Regatta would offer plenty of thrills through the week-end.

The P-144 Rebel Crackerbox boat crashed during a qualifying run, but the driver and rider did not appear injured. The names of the racers weren't immediately available, but the roster from an April 22 race lists the P-144 crew as driver Brett Marshall and rider Mike Sweeney. Sheriff's crews from Minidoka and Cassia counties pulled the racers from the water and brought them to be checked out by emergency medical workers on shore. The crews then retrieved the boat, which was submerged but apparently sustained little damage.

Crews in the P-144 pit said they hoped to have the boat ready for racing today. Crackerbox boats are one of the crowd favorites, and will be joined today and tomorrow by 13 Super Stocks, seven Pro Stocks, six K boats, six Grand Nationals and nine Competition Jets. There are 10 Crackerbox boats.

Mark Maier, chairman of the Burley Regatta Committee, said the Competition Jet class is dominated by local racers and he's pleased with the turnout.

"We have never had nine Competition Jets in Burley before," he said.

Crackerbox driver Dave Laws, from Huntington Beach, Calif., drives the P-24 boat. He said he makes the long trip to Burley because of the course, which is one of the longest he races.

"It's wide open," he said. "And it's a little mini vacation for me."

A proposed change in the course this year was trumped by drivers and owners, Laws said. The course will remain as it has been in past years.

Many Crackerboxes, which run maximum 314 cubic inch engines producing between 500 and 600 hp, come from northern California and Washington, so it is usually one of the best represented classes at the Burley race, Laws said. After a qualifying run, Laws said he and his rider, Nick Granger, were still in the testing phase due to a late arrival.

Because the Burley course is at a much higher altitude than most other courses, a lot of adjustments need to be made to carburetion and timing. Racing is scheduled to start at 11 a.m. today and Sunday and run until 6 p.m. both days at the Burley Municipal Golf Course Marina.

Rogers returns, leads Tigers to win

ATLANTA — Kenny Rogers, making his first start of the season after a blood clot was removed from his pitching shoulder, allowed two hits over six innings Friday night to lead Detroit past Atlanta 5-0.

The Braves were shut out for the third straight game, their scoreless streak stretching to 20 innings. It was the first time since 1988 that Atlanta has been the victim of three straight shutouts.

The 42-year-old Rogers pitched a vital role in Detroit's run to the World Series last year, but he needed surgery late in spring training when the clot was discovered in his left shoulder.

After two rehab outings in the minor leagues, Rogers breezed through a Braves lineup that's having trouble scoring. Rogers (1-0) gave up singles in the fourth and sixth innings.

The Tigers broke up a scoreless duel in the sixth with five runs, all on two-out hits, against John Smoltz (8-4). Magglio Ordonez went an RBI single. Carlos Guillen a two-run double and Ivan Rodriguez another double that made it 4-0.

Cubs 5, White Sox 1

CHICAGO — Carlos Zambrano matched a career-high with 12 strikeouts as the Cubs handed their crosstown rival its 20th loss in 25 games.

Alfonso Soriano homered off Mark Buehrle leading off the game and Aramis Ramirez, activated from the disabled list earlier in the day, added a solo shot two outs later.

Zambrano (8-6) struck out seven of his first nine batters and finished with 12 for the fourth time in his career. He allowed three hits and one walk in eight innings.

Paul Konerko homered in the seventh for the White Sox.

Buehrle (4-4) allowed two runs and four hits in seven innings.

Marlins 5, Twins 4

MIAMI — Hanley Ramirez hit a tie-breaking home run with two outs in the eighth inning to lead Florida to its third straight win.

Dan Uggla hit his 14th home run and had three RBIs for Florida, while Kevin Gregg pitched the ninth to earn his 14th save in as many chances.

Mets 9, Athletics 1

NEW YORK — Tom Glavine picked up his 29th victory by ending a five-start winless streak.

Glavine pitched into the ninth inning and added two hits and two RBIs. Shawn Green hit a solo home run and a two-run double, and Carlos Beltran homered and drove in two runs for the Mets, who won for the fifth time in 19 games in June.

Clayton Kershaw (6-5), whose previous win was May 19 against the Yankees, doubled and scored the go-ahead run in the second. He added a two-run single to cap the Mets' five-run sixth. Glavine allowed six hits, walked two and struck out five.

Lenny DiNardo (2-1) gave up six runs — two earned — and seven hits in 5-1-3 innings.

Nationals 4, Indians 1

WASHINGTON — A few days after earning a promotion based on a 43-game minor league hitting streak, Brandon Watson went 2-for-4 with two RBIs to lead Washington.

Watson got his first multi-RBI game in the majors with a fourth-inning single and a sixth-inning hit that he stretched into a double.

Dodgers 6, Devil Rays 3

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Luis Gonzalez homered and had two RBIs, and Russell Martin hit a two-run single to lead Los Angeles.

Gonzalez, who is from nearby Tampa, hit a solo homer in a two-run second and added an RBI triple in a two-run eighth that put the Dodgers ahead 6-3. It was his first home run at Tropicana Field since he hit the first one over at the stadium while playing for Detroit on March 31, 1998.

Blue Jays 9, Rockies 8, 10 innings

TORONTO — John McDonald's two-run single in the 10th inning tied it and Curtis Thigpen scored the winning run on catcher Chris Iannetta's throwing error to give the Jays the win.

Troy Tulowitzki's two-run homer gave the Rockies an 8-6 lead in the top of the 10th, but Toronto loaded the bases in the bottom half on three straight singles from Matt Stairs, Aaron Hill and Thigpen.

McDonald followed with a single to left off Brian Fuentes (0-1). Matt Holliday threw to the plate and Iannetta threw to third to try and get Thigpen but his throw sailed down the left-field line.

Brewers 11, Royals 6

MILWAUKEE — Corey Hart homered and drove in four runs and rookie Ryan Braun had four hits for Milwaukee.

Jeff Suppan struggled but won for the third time in nine starts to lead the first-place Brewers to their eighth win in nine games since being no-hit by Detroit's Justin Verlander on June 12.

Mark Teahen had four hits for Kansas City, which has lost three straight after winning four of five.

Rangers 11, Astros 3

ARLINGTON, Texas — Sammy Sosa hit career home run No. 601, the first of three Texas hit in an eight-run fifth inning. Kevin Millwood (4-6) won his second straight start after going seven games without a victory since April 13 with two stints on the disabled list.

Craig Biggio singled in the fifth inning for his 2,993rd career hit and Mike Lamb went 2-for-4 for Houston.

Orioles 7, Diamondbacks 1

PHOENIX — Brian Roberts tripled and homered and drove in three runs and Baltimore took advantage of three Arizona errors for a third straight win. The Diamondbacks swept the Orioles last weekend in Baltimore.

Daniel Cabrera (6-8) held the Diamondbacks hitless for five innings until Eric Byrnes led off the sixth with a double to left.

National League

Phillies 6, Cardinals 0

ST. LOUIS — Anthony Reyes lost his 11th straight decision, failing to make it out of the fifth inning of Philadelphia's 6-0 victory over St. Louis on Friday night.

Jiminy G. Sengstack (7-5) threw six scoreless innings and Chris Utley had three hits and an RBI for the Phillies, who had allowed 33 runs while losing three of their previous four games. Moyer's one-out single in the third inning was the first of six consecutive hits in a five-run outburst that broke up a scoreless game.

header with Buhl on Monday.

LETHBRIDGE, Alberta — A brilliant complete-game performance from Mitchell Dame lifted the Twin Falls Cowboys Class AA American Legion Baseball team to a 3-1 win over Team Alberta Friday at the Lethbridge Tournament.

Dame recorded seven strikeouts and no walks, while giving up just two hits and one earned run. He held Alberta scoreless through four innings.

Nate Robertson had a double and a RBI while scoring two runs and Kasey Jerome also knocked in a run in the win.

The Cowboys dropped their second game of the day, falling 6-4 to Butte, Mont. The loss saw Tyler Anderson go 2-for-4 with a RBI and Conner Watkins hit 2-for-3. Chance Elam took the loss, giving up nine hits with two walks and two strikeouts.

The 17-3 Cowboys take on host Lethbridge at 10 a.m. today. The tournament wraps up Sunday.

Beavers, Tar Heels set for CWS finals rematch

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — The message was simple. The task was much more difficult.

"Win two of three, or we're going home," Oregon State coach Pat Casey told his players on the eve of their final regular-season series at UCLA.

The Beavers won two of the "three games — and they're still playing a month later. The defending national champions have won 10 of their past 11 entering their College World Series finals rematch against North Carolina.

Games 1 and 2 in the best-of-three series are Saturday and Sunday, with a third game Monday, if necessary. It's the second time in the CWS 61-year history that the same teams have reached the finals in consecutive years. Arizona State and Southern California met in 1972 and 1973.

Casey said Friday he doubts the Beavers (47-18) would have made the 64-team national tournament if they had lost two or three against UCLA, the second-place team in the Pacific-10. The Beavers tied for sixth, but they impressed the selection committee with a 28-3 record in non-conference games.

"We've battled through some hard times," catcher Mitch Canham said. "We deserve to be right here right now."

Oregon State won a regional at Virginia, took two from Michigan at home in super regionals and beat Cal State Fullerton, Arizona State and UC Irvine at the CWS.

North Carolina (57-14) swept through its regional and won a three-game super regional over South Carolina, both at home. The Tar Heels split their first two games in Omaha, then had to beat Louisville once and Rice twice to get back to the finals.

The Tar Heels' performance in the face of elimination was as reminiscent, though not as dramatic, as Oregon State's run to the 2006 championship. The Beavers came back to win it all after losing 11-1 to Miami in the CWS opener.

North Carolina had won three games in three days after a 14-4 loss to Rice.

Oregon State, meanwhile, played three games the first seven days of the CWS.

"I certainly enjoyed the days off," Casey said. "You gotta do what you gotta do."

North Carolina coach Mike Fox, whose team won its bracket in three games last year, said he doesn't know how the longer pull to the finals will affect his players.

"There is something to be said for playing every day," he said. "Rest is important, as well. Just the fact we're here is OK at this point."

Two freshmen have drawn starts in the opener. North Carolina will send Alex White (6-6) against Jorge Reyes (6-3).

The Game 2 pitching matchup has the Tar Heels' Luke Putkonen (8-1) against Mike Scutars (11-1).

White was the loser against

Rice last Sunday, giving up five hits and six runs in 1 1/3 innings, his shortest start of the season.

Reyes allowed three hits and one run in six innings in Oregon State's win over Fullerton last Saturday.

North Carolina overcame losses in two of three games at Florida State and a bumblung 11-1 loss to rival North Carolina State to win its division in the Atlantic Coast Conference. The Tar Heels won the conference tournament by winning the first round, then the national tournament. They had to rally to win five of their first six games.

"We're just a tough bunch," Tar Heel reliever Andrew Carignan said. "We have to have the confidence in each other. We know how much of a challenge this is, but we've come together for it."

So have the Beavers, who began making plays for another national championship run the day they left Omaha last year.

Jerome takes two in American Falls tourney

AMERICAN FALLS — The Jerome Tigers won a pair of games Friday during the Marsh Falls tournament in American Falls, topping the Idaho Falls Rangers 8-1 before slipping past Shelley 7-6 in eight innings.

The Tigers clawed all the way out of a six-run deficit in the first inning to tie the game at 6-6 in the bottom of the sixth. Two innings later, Drew Reitsma scored the winning run off a sacrifice fly by Kenny Koopman. Reitsma had off the inning with a double and was advanced to third on a single by Nate Robertson.

The win over Shelley pushed Jerome to 11-0 on the season.

"The kids stuck together and chipped away at it," Tigers coach Lessee Koopman said.

Coach Koopman praised reliever Dee Fleck who came in with Jerome down 6-0 and had two outs recorded in the first inning, and proceeded to pitch 6 1/2 innings of shutout ball. Joe Rocha picked up the win in one inning of relief.

The Tigers won their first game of the day easily as a Justin Praegitzer two-run home run was part of his third RBI day. Joe Rocha added a double while Ken Koopman tripled in the win. The Tigers are back in tournament action at 12:30 p.m. today.

In the circle, Nellie Makings gave up just two hits.

"It was another great effort by the Sooners," said coach Jamie Carlton.

The Sooners played at 11 a.m. today with a spot in the 4 p.m. semifinals on the line.

Toms ties for lead at Travelers

CRONWELL, Conn. — David Toms shot a 5-under-par 65 Friday to move into a tie for the second-round lead at the bustling, rainy Travelers Championship.

Toms, who shares the lead at 8 under with journeyman Jay Williamson, who had a 66 for the second straight day in just his second PGA Tour event of the year.

Toms, who started on the back nine, went to 9 under after an eagle on the par-4 second hole, pitching in his approach from 84 yards. But after a 21-minute rain delay, he bogeyed the seventh to fall back into the lead.

Williamson closed his round by making birdie on the 17th and the 18th holes while playing into a 25 mph wind that gusts to more than 35 mph.

First-round leader Hunter Mahan followed up his 62 with a 1-over 71, dropping to 7 under.

Woods won't play in Buick Open

GRAND BLANC, Mich. — Tiger Woods has informed the Buick Open that he will not be playing in the tournament this year, organizers announced Friday.

On Monday, Woods' wife gave birth to the couple's fifth child.

The Buick Open is earlier this year than in the past, starting next Thursday and ending July 1 instead of in early August. Woods has played at the tournament about 60 miles north of Detroit the past five years — winning it in 2006 and 2002 — and eight times in his career.

He has had a sponsorship agreement with Buick since 1999 and agreed to a new deal in 2001 believed to be worth more than $40 million over five years. Buick has said the contract does not require Woods to play in specific PGA

Pair of Kims lead Wegmans

PITTSFORD, N.Y. — Rookie In-Kyung Kim shot a 5-under 67 to join South Korean compatriot Mi Hyun Kim atop the leaderboard after two rounds.

In-Kyung Kim, the 19-year-old native of Seoul, whose best finish was a tie for fourth at last month's LPGA Corning Classic, had six birdies at the tree-lined Locust Hill course but gave up the outright lead with a three-putt bogey on the last hole.

Eight-time tour winner Mi Hyun Kim (68) had five birdies through 11 holes but lost momentum with four holes to play when she was putted from 30 feet for her only bogey. Both moved to 7 under. Lorena Ochoa of Mexico, who tops the money list with $1.25 million shot a 71 to move to 4 under.

First-round leader Cristie Kerr picked up birdies on Nos. 2 and 3 to get to 8 under but struggled on the back nine with two bogeys and a double bogey to finish with a 75 for a total of 3 under.

Fash two up at BMW

MUNICH, Germany — Nicolas Fash took over the lead with a 65 that put him two shots ahead of Peter Hanson at 12 under par.

The two Swedes took advantage of the forgiving Munchen-Nord course a week after tangle with Oakmont's unforgiving fairways and slick greens in the U.S. Open.

For the second straight day play was delayed by thunderstorms, including a two-hour stoppage around lunchtime.

Wimbeldon draw tougher for women

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — The route to the women's final at Wimbledon is filled with all sorts of obstacles.

Top-seeded Justine Henin, seeking her first Wimbledon title to complete a career Grand Slam, could face two-time champion Serena Williams in the quarterfinals.

Three-time winner Venus Williams could face 2004 champion Maria Sharapova in the fourth round — and defending champion Amelie Mauresmo in the semifinals.

There's also the chance of another all-Williams final, with the sisters winding up in different halves of the draw.

Henin, coming off her third straight French Open title on clay, "I must still learn to trust myself more on this surface."

Friday's draw was kinder to Roger Federer, who is seeking to become the first player to win five straight men's championships since Bjorn Borg (1976-80).

Federer's main rivals in his part of the draw are Marat Safin, whom he could face in the third round, James Blake and Dmitry Tursunov. Federer could meet third-seeded Andy Roddick in the semifinals. Federer beat the American in the 2004 and 2005 finals.

Federer will open play on Monday against 85th-ranked Teymuraz Gabashvili of Russia.

French Open champion Rafael Nadal, who lost to Federer in last year's final, has a more testing path.

The second-seeded Spaniard faces a potentially tricky opener against Mardy Fish of the United States. Fourth-seeded Novak Djokovic, 2002 champion Lleyton Hewitt, 2002 runner-up David Nalbandian and 2006 semifinalist Marcos Baghdatis are all in Nadal's half of the draw.

Roddick faces Justin Gimelstob in an all-American first-round matchup and could meet No. 8 Andy Murray in the quarterfinals — if the British player recovers from a wrist injury that has sidelined him since May 15.

Mauresmo beat Henin in last year's final, and the two meet again Saturday in the final of the Wimbledon warmup at Eastbourne.

Henin, who lost to Venus Williams in the 2001 final, was drawn against Argentine qualifier Jorgelina Cravero in the first round.

Also in the top half of the women's draw with Henin and Safin are 1997 champion Martina Hingis, Jelena Jankovic and Anna Chakvetadze.

Gay breaks to 100-meter victory

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Perhaps no sprinter ever ran so fast with his face than Tyson Gay did Friday night.

The former Arkansas sprinter sliced through a headwind for a 9.84-second clocking in the men's one-sided 100-meter victory at the U.S. Track and Field Championships since electronic timing was instituted 32 years ago.

Gay broke the meet record in the second-fastest 100 ever run into a headwind. The only other faster was Maurice Greene's 9.82 at the 2001 world championships in Edmonton, Guy. Gay ran into a wind of 1.12 mph. Greene's was 0.45 mph.

"The best my body has felt in a long time," he said.

The time matched his personal best set a year ago, only that he had a tailwind. "I was trying to get the world record (9.77)," he said. "The wind conditions weren't too friendly. At the same time, that's basically my pr. I know I'm ready to run fast."

His time was easily the world's fastest this year and the fastest ever by an American in the United States.

Already this year, Gay has wind-aided runs of 9.76 and 9.79.

Gay, also entered in the 200, had what he called his best start ever.

"It made me a little anxious," he said, wondering just how fast he might go.

He sped away from the field in a breathtaking final 50 meters to win by 0.23 seconds. LSU's Trindon Holliday was second in 10.07. NCAA champion Walter Dix was third at 10.09.

Gay is still coached by former Arkansas assistant Lance Brauman, who is serving a prison sentence in Kansas for embezzlement, theft and mail fraud. Gay has a workout room from the coach and says the two talk regularly. Brauman has to make the call.

Gay was the 100 defending champion because last year's winner, Justin Gatlin, was stripped of the title for testing positive for steroids last April. The 24-year-old sprinter from Lexington, Ky., who now lives in Fayetteville, Ark., broke the meet record of 9.90 shared by former world record holders Greene and Leroy Burrell.

Tyson Gay reacts as he breaks the tape to win the men's 100-meter dash in a time of 9.84 seconds at the U.S. Track and Field Championships in Indianapolis, Ind., Friday.

Torri Edwards, also running into a headwind, added another chapter to her triumphant comeback by winning the women's 100 at 11.02 seconds.

Bernard Lagat successfully defended his 5,000 title, running down Matt Tegenkamp over the final 100 meters to win in 13:40.73. Lagat also is the defending U.S. 1,500 champion, the first double-winner in these events in the meet's history.

Kane is NHL's top pick

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — He, Canada? For the first time, Americans were taken with the top two picks in the NHL draft.

First, the Chicago Blackhawks, trying to rebuild a once-proud franchise after four consecutive losing seasons, selected Buffalo, N.Y., native Patrick Kane with the No. 1 pick Friday night. Then the Philadelphia Flyers picked left wing James van Riemsdyk, a member of the U.S. National Team Development Program from Middletown, N.J.

"It's good to have the No. 1 and No. 2 picks," said Kane, a 5-foot-9, 160-pound right wing who had 62 goals and 83 assists in 58 games last year for the London Knights of the Ontario Hockey League. "It's unbelievable. It's good to see the Americans start coming into the league."

With the third pick, Phoenix touted Kyle Tarris, the highly touted center who's already committed to play at the University of Wisconsin. The Los Angeles Angels selected defenseman Thomas Hickey with pick No. 4 — surprising many of the experts — and the Washington Capitals grabbed the top-rated defenseman, Karl Alzner, at No. 5.

scheme took on new significance.

"It's amazing. It's something I'll never forget," van Riemsdyk said. "It just shows how American hockey has taken huge strides. Two Americans going with the first two picks — it's an honor. I'm happy to be a part of it."

"Twice before Americans had taken two of the top three spots. In 1983 and 2005."

Rated the No. 2 skater in North America by the NHL Central Scouting Service, Kane is expected to give the Blackhawks a creative scorer and deft puck-handler.

The 6-3, 200-pound van Riemsdyk had 33 goals and 30 assists in 42 games for the U.S. Under-18 team a year ago.

Tennis great King looks at legacy of Title IX on 35th anniversary

NEW YORK (AP) — In 1972, America was at war in Vietnam, President Nixon signed Title IX into law and future soccer star Mia Hamm was born.

Billie Jean King testified before Congress on behalf of Title IX, and three generations later the result is more female athletes, doctors and lawyers. Saturday marks the 35th anniversary of the landmark legislation that bans gender bias in athletics and other educational programs.

"I keep thinking about women's teams sports," King said in an interview with The Associated Press. "I grew up with team sports and knew how vital it was that we have opportunity for girls to be in team sports. Title IX is what made the difference for girls to have that opportunity."

The law withstood attempts to weaken it in the 1980s and current efforts include the possibility of an e-mail survey to determine the sporting interests of female college students.

That aggravates King, whose life has exemplified the arc of progress for women and female athletes. Her fight for equal pay and equal rights for girls and women resonated with a generation during the 1970s and beyond. King testified in the fall of 1970, the year she became the first female athlete to win more than $100,000 in prize money in a single year. She didn't benefit from Title IX, growing up without organized high school sports in Long Beach, Calif., and with no college scholarship to look forward to at Cal State-Los Angeles.

Nobody worried about Billie Jean King or kids like me or girls having a scholarship," said King, who won the first of 20 Wimbledon titles at 17.

"You didn't hear any outrage, you didn't hear any outcry. I'm just using that as an example because that kind of sets the times."

King went on to win 39 Grand Slam titles, the most of any American-born woman. She's been a torch bearer ever since for Title IX.

King believes a ground swell of the civil rights movement, anti-war movement and the women's movement coalesced to make the law possible.

"I think civil rights probably helped make people think about equality a lot more," she said.

The 37 words of Title IX state: "No person in the United States shall, on the basis of sex, be excluded from participation in, be denied the benefits of, or be subjected to discrimination under any education program or activity receiving Federal financial assistance."

Like the civil rights movement, it took time for the idea of equity in athletics and other educational endeavors to take hold.

"The hearts and minds campaigns always take at least three generations or more," she said. "If you take surveys, most Americans believe in it, they want it. Most parents insist that their daughters and sons have equal opportunity."

The Title IX debate quieted after the Bush administration opted in 2003 not to change the rules after months of review. But a 2005 Title IX clarification by the Department of Education allowed schools to treat a lack of response to an e-mail survey as a lack of interest in sports.

NCAA president Myles Brand has voiced his opposition to the surveys, and recommended that member institutions not use it.

"Boys have never had to prove they've been interested in anything to get opportunity," King said.

Some universities, such as James Madison, which dropped seven men's sports and three women's sports this summer, contend cuts are necessary to comply with Title IX. The College Sports Council, a coalition of coaches and athletic groups, wants Title IX reform to avoid men's sports cuts, while advocates of the law say its original intent of expanding opportunities and equitable treatment needs to be enforced.

This week, the National Women's Law Center (NWLC) asked Congress to pressure the Office of Civil Rights (OCR) to live up to its Title IX enforcement responsibilities.

The center said the OCR identified only one athletic compliance review among 416 complaints between 2002-06.

"While women have made significant progress in education over the last 35 years, the job is not yet finished and the playing field is far from level," said Marcia D. Greenberger, NWLC co-president, who testified Tuesday at the subcommittee hearing on Title IX. "Women are still too often relegated to the bench when it comes to the facilities, equipment, coaching publicity and other support services that they receive."

King thinks the future emphasis on equity will move into the high schools.

"I think we should go to elementary schools," she said. "I think parents and taxpayers and teachers and everyone have to try to always get things equal."

"I keep striving for it every day. It helps more as you forward. I don't see how anyone can argue that fact, that you should always have equal rights and opportunities for all people."

Thunder Stocks roll toward chase at Magic Valley Speedway

By Linda Brittain

Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — The Magic Valley Pipe Thunder Stocks have only two regular-season races until their chase for the championship begins July 14. From there, only the Top-10 drivers will be eligible to compete for the track title.

An unfortunate event in the next two races for those drivers who are currently in the lower positions in the points standings may mean the difference in making the chase or driving for 11th place.

While the Thunder Stocks pack is tight all the way around in the standings at this point, Desi Ahrens and Shaun Wells, currently tied for 10th, may feel some added anxiety. But it's probably safe to say that Stacey Jensen and Jason Kessel, who now are tied for 12th, have even more motivation for doing well the next two outings.

"I know I just need to concentrate, be smooth on the track and make sure my mind is clear," Jensen said. "But I don't really feel any pressure. I just need to focus on what I have to do."

Jensen says another big factor in the racing game is the luck he receives from those at the track Saturday nights.

"I have people in the stands supporting me and people in the pits helping me out in case I need to be back on the track in a certain amount of time," he added. "With Louis (Lopez) helping me with the equipment I have a lot of confidence I can run in the top 10."

Lopez continues to be solid in the Budweiser Grand Nationals division as the races count down toward the end of the regular season for street stock cars as well.

Hot in the chase, it essentially becomes its own little season within a season. Lopez himself, for example, captured his second consecutive championship on the final night of racing last year after coming from behind in the standings.

Kenny Hatke is currently second in points but look for Jerry and Kris McKean to also do battle with Lopez along with Jonathan Gomez and Kent Jensen as they all will be fighting for positions the next few races.

The Intermountain Pro Trucks will be back at Magic Valley Speedway for their third appearance of the season tonight, with Kenny Vanderham leading the class in the standings followed by Alan Larson and series newcomer Jerry Rice.

Rice, who piloted a race truck just three times last season, placed fifth in the series' previous race at Rocky Mountain Raceway on May 19 and won the May 3 race at NVS.

Rice is hoping another good night is in store for the No. 4 truck this evening. "I'm pretty optimistic. I like racing here at MVS," Rice said. "But I need to focus on qualifying — that's where they're beating me. I've saved some new tires to qualify with so hopefully I can do better tonight."

The Pepsi Premier Series, with

Steve Jones leading the standings, will be at the track for another 50-lap main event tonight as Mike Greco races to guard his narrow two-point margin over T.J. Woodhall. Steve Fisher is still fighting for his first win of the season and has been hot lately, so look for the driver of the No. 23 car to give it all he's got tonight.

John Reeder and Jeff Peck are in a tie for the lead in the Qualo's Electronic Hornets division, with five races remaining on the schedule including tonight's event.

Cory Rutledge was the victor in the previous main-event race on June 2, but should have to start at the back of the field for tonight's main-event race.

MVS note: It will be a family affair for Louis Lopez tonight as five members of the family, including himself in Grand Nationals, wife Frances, along with her father, Bill Gilligan, in the Hornets and son Brian in the Thunder Stocks will be joined by Renee's brother Scott Gilligan from Stockton, Calif., who will be driving a Premier Series modified tonight.

Gates open at 4 p.m. Qualifying for the Intermountain Pro Trucks begins at 6:30 and the green-flag will fall on the first race at 7:05.

Larson keeps on truckin'

By Linda Brittain

Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — At just 23-years of age, Kevan Larson has already driven wide ranges of racing vehicles. Starting out in the older model Thunder Stocks car, he later climbed into a four-cylinder Pony Stocks car. But before long, he found that a race truck was in the cards — at least for now.

The truck turned out to be a good fit for Larson, he won two main events his first year, earned the Rookie of the Year award and also drove his way into second spot in the final point standings for the 2006 season.

Currently Larson is tied for sixth on the point roster after having some bad luck at Rocky Mountain Raceway in the May 19 main event when a minor part malfunctioned about halfway through the race.

"The center pin broke on the ball joint on the front-right wheel and I almost hit the wall," Larson said. "People said there were sparks going everywhere."

The approximately 10-cent part not only put Larson out of the race and handed him a hit in the point standings, it also meant that something else Larson wanted to accomplish that night was going to have to wait. His father Alan Larson, who was instrumental in getting him into the series in the first place, was in his sights just all on the track.

"That's what kills me," the younger Larson said. "I was catching him."

But tonight Larson hopes his hometown track will be kinder to him as he tries to work his way back up in the standings with just six races remaining on the schedule. "I had a little bit of a rocky start this year, but we can pretty good last time in Twin and I hope to have everything fixed and ready to go from the last little exhibition," he said.

Doing the repairs and getting the truck race ready at the shop last Wednesday evening, Larson said, was about the difference in the class of vehicle he has driven in the past and the race truck series he is involved in now.

"The Pony Stocks were fun because of the camaraderie with all the guys, but it's even the same in the trucks now. Most of them are older than me and I really look up to all of them — they're a pretty good bunch of guys. I think everybody helps everybody out pretty much, but you're not going to give out all your secrets obviously."

The Intermountain Pro Trucks series race at approximately 10 events throughout the season at Meridian Speedway and Rocky Mountain Raceway near Salt Lake City, Utah, as well as Magic Valley Speedway. The group has expanded over the years and Wayne Gunderson and Kelly Close, who are the backbone behind the group as the promoters, would like to see the class grow even more. They said the truck class offers a different experience for the drivers that most all have come to be fond of.

"In every meeting we've had they've wanted to keep it a traveling series," Gunderson said. "Plus, they like having a little bit of a break where they're not racing every week."

Larson can certainly relate to that statement, after having worked at his dad's farm equipment mechanic at Agri-Service in Twin Falls, turning around and working on a vehicle every night was not always something he looked forward to.

"That's a lot of what burned me out at the beginning," he said. "Going to work and then having to work on the truck. With this it's not quite as bad where you're not having to race every weekend. I really like having the break."

The Intermountain Pro Truck group has also expanded its staff this year with the addition of Mike Nelson, race director and Tom "Pappy" Kerz, pit technician. "They know what they're doing and they have taken a huge load off of us," Gunderson said. "That's where we want to get to — so we have a staff that will be able to take care of things so we won't have to worry about it so much."

Needless to say Larson doesn't need any convincing to stick with the program for at least a little while longer. He still has a race or two he'll want to win, plus catching up to dad in the standings would be nice, too. "Yeah, he's getting lucky or something," Kevan Larson said. "But to have both trucks up there in the top five, that would be a pretty good accomplishment. Especially as competitive as the trucks are getting, Kenny Vanderham is pretty consistent every week and Jerry Rice — I can't believe how far they've come. With Lou Anderson buying Ralph's (Kincheol) truck, I'm worried about him now too. I think it's an elite field of drivers."

With the crate motors the trucks in the division most often race in close quarters — and there is rarely any domination by one driver who may have more money to invest than his competitors.

"Most nights I qualify seventh or eighth and the leaders qualify just a fraction of a second faster than me," Larson said. "There's not a whole lot of difference between first and 10th. And you never know who's going to win a race."

For now Larson is very satisfied with the class he is racing in. But if the past is any indication don't be surprised to see him move to something else in the future. "Not really sure just kind of take it as it comes," Larson said. "I'd like to continue racing — it would be fun to get into something higher someday — but I'm having fun just doing what I'm doing. If it goes any further ... I don't know."

And there's not much doubt dad enjoys having him out there too. After all, he was the reason Kevan started racing in the first place.

"Dad started racing when I was 14 or 15," Kevan remembered. "That's how I got the bug. When this opportunity came up with the trucks I was happy to go along with it."

But the father-son rivalry also has some father-son pride involved as well.

"He's pretty good," Alan Larson said of Kevan. "If he wasn't good I wouldn't have put him in there."

Cars driven by Johnson, Gordon fail inspection

SONOMA, Calif. (AP) — Jimmie Johnson and teammate Jeff Gordon had an unexpected and unwanted day off Friday.

The cars of defending NASCAR Nextel Cup champion Johnson and series points leader Gordon failed inspection and were barred from all activity for the day at Infineon Raceway, including qualifying. NASCAR said the No. 24 and No. 48 Chevrolet, both owned by Hendrick Motorsports, had modifications to the front fenders that were deemed illegal during morning inspection.

The Hendrick crews were allowed to repair them and they can race in Sunday's Toyota/Save Mart 350, although starting from the rear of the 43-car field. Gordon, the four-time series champion, is the defending race winner.

"The cars have been repaired and I'm under the impression they will not receive an inspection sticker until tomorrow morning, which will allow the cars onto the racetrack," said Chad Knaus, Johnson's crew chief. "The guys on both teams have done a good job getting the cars repaired. They are race-ready now."

But the damage was already done. Doug Duchard, vice president of development for Hendrick, called the modification an honest mistake.

"We've been evolving and this was just the latest evolution of what we've been doing," he said. "Our understanding is that our cars fit the templates but that they were outside of what they would like to see within the templates."

Gordon came to Sonoma after his wife gave birth to the couple's first child, a daughter, on Wednesday.

"Well, obviously, nothing's going to ruin my day or weekend," Gordon said.

Delphi,
UAW reach agreement on wage cuts

The Associated Press

DETROIT — Struggling auto parts maker Delphi Corp. reached a tentative wage-cutting agreement Friday with its largest union in what may set the pattern for future pay in the U.S. automotive parts industry.

The deal, which still must be voted on by Delphi members of the United Auto Workers, was signed just before a 1 p.m. meeting between the UAW leadership and presidents of the union's locals.

Details of the agreement not released, but Delphi said in a statement it's a "significant milestone" in the company's quest to emerge from Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection. The union also said details are being withheld until a ratification vote by members.

The pact also is a requirement for Delphi to get up to $3.4 billion from private equity investors that it needs to escape from Chapter 11. The supplier has received $3.3 billion in the first quarter and $5.5 billion in 2006.

Union officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity earlier this week, because the deal had not yet been completed, said the pact would cut wages for longtime UAW workers from around $27 per hour to between $14 and $18.50.

It's also expected to include lump-sum payments to longtime Delphi workers who would either retire, return to former parent company General Motors Corp. or work for less money.

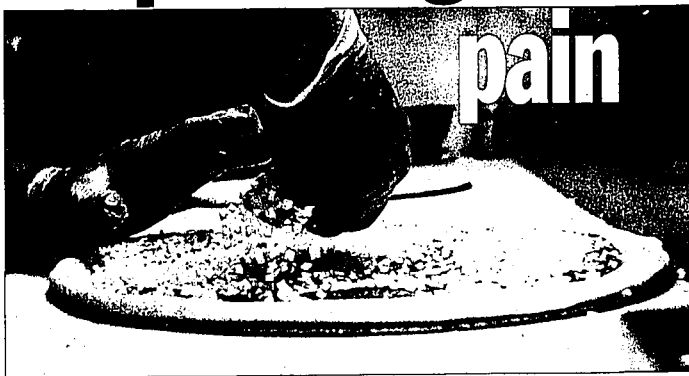

Industry analysts say it could become a template for other parts suppliers.

The pact, if approved, would end the threat of a strike that could have shut down production at General Motors Corp., Delphi's largest customer. It also would bring to a close two years of often-contentious negotiations in which the UAW threatened to strike and accused Delphi of leading a race to displace the middle class.

Troy-based Delphi, on the other hand, said it needed lower wages to compete in a global economy. The former parts arm of General Motors Corp., which was spun off as a separate company in 1999, filed for bankruptcy protection in October 2005 and asked for court permission to void its labor contracts.

The deal also must be approved by a U.S. Bankruptcy Court judge in New York. Delphi's statement said.

Sharply rising cheese prices has pizza restaurant owners watching the cheese on their pizzas like this one being prepared at Constanti Pizza in Concord, N.H. on Thursday. Restaurant owner Dave Constanti has avoided raising prices so far during the cheese cost increase.

Pizza makers hit with higher cheese costs raise prices for pies

The Associated Press

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Before the dinner rush, Larry Lewis was chewing over business strategy at the Fat Jimmy's pizzeria he manages. The store had absorbed sharply rising cheese prices as long as possible.

It was time to hike the price on pizzas and pass along some of the expense that had been eating into profits the past few months.

"We don't really have much choice," said Lewis, who competes in a pizza-heavy city that's the corporate home of large chains and features a large selection of pizza restaurants.

How big that price boost would be was still being tossed around. "It won't be a huge increase, but there will be an increase," Lewis said.

Like Lewis, pizza makers around the nation — from family-run pizzerias to national delivery chains — are feeling the pinch from escalating costs for an essential ingredient in a hotly competitive, $30 billion-plus industry.

Block cheddar cheese reached $2.09 a pound Thursday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange, up 78 percent from $1.17 a pound a year ago. At the end of 2006, the price was $1.33. Cheddar is the benchmark for mozzarella and other cheeses.

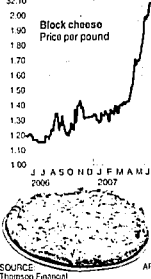

Industry observers attribute the price surge to strong demand coupled with higher milk prices.

Some big pizza chains, which use mountains of cheese, already have responded.

Both Pizza Hut and Papa John's International Inc. have raised the price of their cheese-only pizzas to the same amount as one-topping pizzas at company-owned stores.

The higher cheese prices have exacerbated pressure companies already face from higher wages and fuel costs, said Chris Sternberg, spokesman for Louisville-based Papa John's.

Papa John's uses about 100 million pounds of cheese each year, and the cheese typically makes up 35 percent to 40 percent of the food cost in making a pizza, he said.

And cheese-only pies cost the company more, requiring an extra cup of cheese, he said.

"So the customer is getting something of extra value for the price," he said.

Pizza prices at Papa John's restaurants vary by location. At a downtown Louisville store, customers were paying $12.50 for a large cheese pizza that used to be $10.99.

Three regulars at the tiny pizza parlor Pizzalano, a business that was seen briefly in the opening credits of 'The Sopranos' cable television series that has ended, have lunch Wednesday at the restaurant in North Arlington, N.J.

Customers had the option of adding an ingredient, such as pepperoni, at no additional cost.

Papa John's locked in cheese prices at a "reasonable level" through the third quarter, but cheese costs went up enough to prompt the higher price for a cheese pie, Sternberg said.

Dallas-based Pizza Hut, part of fast-food giant Yum Brands Inc., which is headquartered in Louisville, goes through 300 million pounds of cheese each year, spokesman Chris Fuller said. The chain's cheese-only pizza has 50 percent more cheese than a one-topping pie.

At Domino's Pizza Inc., spokeswoman Lynn Liddle said the Ann Arbor, Mich.-based delivery chain has seen plenty of ups and downs in the cheese market over the years. For the most part, she said, the chain has "managed to work around these peaks and valleys." But if the price of cheese and other items continues to rise, Domino's will have to boost its prices, she said.

Mom-and-pop shops are feeling the pressure, too. Constanti Pizza, a family-run chain of three shops based in Concord, N.H., has stood pat on pizza prices, but the escalating cost of cheese has changed some routines in the kitchen.

Veteran pizza makers used to casually eyeball the amounts of cheese heaped onto pizzas, but now everyone has to be more meticulous — tumbling cheese into measuring cups.

"We're not cutting back our cheese. We're just making sure that our employees are being very accurate," said owner Dave Constanti.

Treasury will work with small banks to reduce burden of money-laundering prevention

The Associated Press

VIENNA, Va. — All banks are required to watch out for terrorist financiers, drug lords and money launderers — but for small banks that can be a big burden.

Treasury Secretary Henry Paulson announced plans Friday to come up with ways to ease the pressure on the nation's smaller banks. Treasury will work with banking regulators to craft a plan that better matches potential risks at a given financial institution with its anti-money-laundering obligations, Paulson said.

The effort could bring some relief to small banks, which have complained about the burden and cost of complying with various federal provisions.

"We can take a very commonsense approach here," Paulson said in a visit to the suburban offices of Treasury's Financial Crimes Enforcement Network, dubbed FinCen. The agency, housed in a nondescript office building, collects information on dubious financial transactions and other things that law enforcers can study to track down criminals and make sure the nation's financial system is not abused by them.

Details have yet to be worked out on the plan Paulson mentioned, and it may take a year for a final plan to be implemented, said FinCen's director James Freis Jr.

Federal provisions aimed at helping the government catch criminals currently apply to both large and small banks alike.

The plan is to reach a sensible balance. For instance, "an institution with minimal to no international business that serves only a handful of customers does not need the same risk profile as a bank that does business around the world in many currencies," FinCen said in the statement.

Asked what kinds of activities might lower a bank's risk and thus its obligations, Freis said it was too early to say and that those details would have to be worked out. There will be "active discussions" on those matters in coming weeks involving regulators and industry, he said.

The American Bankers Association as well as regulators, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., and the Office of Thrift Supervision welcomed the effort.

So does the Federal Reserve. It supports efforts "to bring greater clarity and efficiency to this critical area of regulation," said Fed Governor Randall Kroszner.

The Bible in school? A worthy, if risky, idea

The Bible is a simple book. Interpreting what it means is the formidable challenge. Spin is the problem. Churches get away with that. Public schools cannot.

Still, the Georgia school system is wrestling with the idea of offering the country's first state-funded Bible classes. The bold idea is fraught with political, religious and cultural dangers but may be worth the effort.

Knowledge of the Bible, its people, stories, myths and history, is a great asset in understanding much of the world's literature, Middle Eastern history and philosophy.

STEVE GUSHEE

... teachers might be able to teach the book and not a faith. Some teachers will violate their trust. They must be stopped.

Shakespeare filled his works with biblical references. Abba is the anti-hero of Moby Dick. Ishmael tells the story. Both are biblical characters. Biblically illiterate students would be hard pressed to grasp the poetry or prose of Western civilization.

To address that, the Georgia school system recently approved a curriculum for teaching elective high school Bible classes. The courses must be taught "in an objective and non-devotional manner with no attempt make to indoctrinate students," according to the authorizing legislation. Few schools have signed on. The courses fear inevitable lawsuits.

Sadly, no one can prevent a teacher bent on taking evangelical advantage of students. Still, responsible instructors can teach scripture without proselytizing, evangelizing or endorsing Christianity or any other religion.

"They need beware of three titillating temptations in biblical interpretation," according to Peter Gomes, author of "The Good Book, Reading the Bible with Mind and Heart" (William Morrow & Co. 1996, $25). Gomes is a professor of Christian morals at Harvard University.

He condemns worship of the Bible, reading the Bible literally and using the book to validate our current prejudice. The Bible is not an object of veneration, Gomes writes. Someone once recommended ritually burning the Bible in church annually to remind the faithful that it was not God.

Reading the Bible literally is comforting but lazy, misleading and prevents authentic interpretation, he argues.

Finally, he condemns interpreting the Bible in such a way as to sanction the status quo and bless the shortsightedness of the day in which we live.

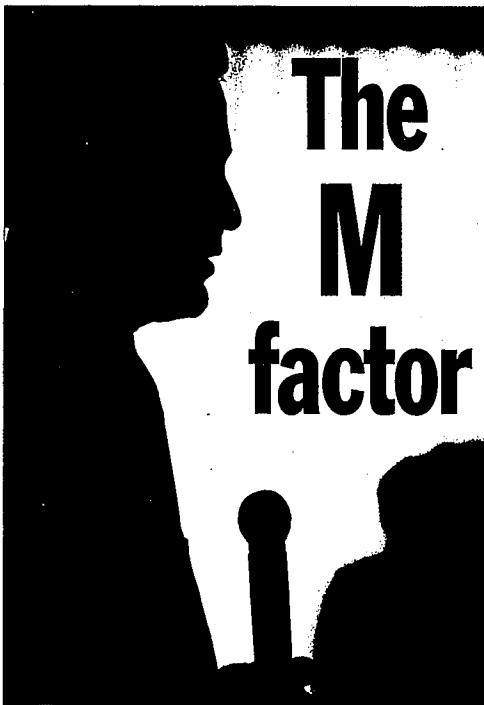

Wary of these pitfalls, educators might be tempted to teach the book and not a faith. Some teachers will violate their trust. They must be stopped.

Still, the goal — to help students discover one of the world's most influential books — is worth the risk.

Mitt Romney's presidential run has put the Mormon church in the spotlight even among Americans who know little about The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints.

Romney candidacy forcing Americans to come to terms with Mormonism

By Steve Arney

BLOOMINGTON, Ill. — Dentist Bruce Anderson had a patient who, he later learned, sneaked anti-Mormon literature into the office.

While Anderson was out of the room, the patient would give pamphlets to the dental assistant, fearing she would come under the influence of the dentist's church, the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Such prejudice against Mormons, Anderson suspects, stem largely from "a profound misunderstanding by teachers in other churches."

It's gotten a lot better over the years. Anderson's grandfather, John Taylor, was shot four times during the assassination of church founder Joseph Smith in 1844.

But full acceptance of the faith has a long way to go, as polls indicate. A Gallup Poll this winter found 24 percent of voters said they wouldn't vote for a Mormon candidate, all other things being equal.

This is meaningful as the country ushers in a presidential campaign in which a Mormon, former Massachusetts Gov. Mitt Romney, is a leading first-tier Republican candidate.

Political and religion experts say it leaves Romney with an obstacle to overcome.

And it tells Mormons like Kim Farah, a spokeswoman for the church, that boundaries remain too high. She said anti-Mormon sentiment is lower with interaction and that her church and its members need to engage in more of it.

For the record, the church is politically neutral and won't comment on Romney's politics — or those of U.S. Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, a Nevada Mormon, for that matter.

On religion questions, though, Farah said the church accommodates the interview

Past candidates

Former Massachusetts Gov. Mitt Romney is returning to old ground, not breaking new ground, as a Mormon candidate for president. Those who came before him:

- U.S. Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, sought his party's nomination in 2000.
- Romney's father, George, a governor of Michigan, sought the GOP nomination in 1968.
- The first Mormon to run for president was the founder of the movement, Joseph Smith. He announced his candidacy a few months before his death in 1844. At the time, he was mayor and militia leader of Nauvoo, Ill.

requests while offering the general public expansive material on beliefs, traditions and history at wwwlds.org.

Christian educator Robert Kurka encounters more general dialogue among traditional Christians and Mormons already, and he foresees more during the Romney campaign.

Kurka, who teaches religion movements at Lincoln Christian College and Seminary in Lincoln, Ill., offers a couple prefaces to those on his side of the debate, the side of traditional Christianity.

First, traditional Christians need not fear the Mormons.

"Rather than be paranoid of each other, it's good to put things on the table. I think we should relish this opportunity."

Kurka notes the energy in Mormon missionary and conversion work, enabling the church to grow to 13 million members with a majority outside the United States. But their missionaries aren't obnoxious or badgering in their zeal, he said.

Secondly, he said, inserting the word "cult" into the discussion is unhelpful. His class at Lincoln would be called Contemporary Religious Cults. He said it changed to Contemporary Religious Movements because the word cult became a pejorative synonymous with doomsday groups and no longer described the Mormons.

That said, Kurka added that the differences between traditional Christian belief and that of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints is so stark that a member of one camp would qualify as a potential religious "convert" to the other. He thinks Mormons and traditional Christians are in for some surprises when they examine each other's faith for the first time.

Among basic differences noted by Kurka and Farah are:

• Trinity. Traditional

Baby boomers return to faith, traditions long ago dismissed

Cox News Service

ATLANTA — Jerry Holland has been a religious skeptic, an atheist and a spiritual seeker.

Now he's become something he never would have envisioned when he was a restless teenager who read Charles Darwin in secret because he didn't want his Southern Baptist parents to know he was learning about evolution. Holland is now a Bible study leader.

The 62-year-old structural engineer has helped start a "Seekers and Skeptics" Bible study group at Community Christian Church in Fayetteville, Ga., to answer the kinds of questions he once had.

"That's one of the things that drove me away from church," said Holland. "Nobody wanted to listen to my questions."

Questions may have driven him from church, but they're also driving many of his generation back to the pews.

Holland is a baby boomer, part of the generation born from 1946 to 1964, which is known for both spiritual seeking and religious skepticism. It's the generation that protested the Vietnam War, challenged gender roles and flouted many forms of convention.

Now many of these seekers are returning to the religious rituals that shaped their childhoods, because of pressing questions about their own lives and the world.

The reasons for their return vary, but one stands out. They do it for their children. Says Jackson W. Carroll, co-author of "Bridging Divided Worlds: Generational Cultures in Congregations" (Jossey-Bass, $23.95).

"There is a certain tendency for people to take a vacation from religion during their late teens and on through college and maybe even the early years of marriage," Carroll said. "What tends to bring people into the church is the presence of children in the home."

That was the case with Theresa Otto, 46, who lives in Atlanta. She grew up in the Roman Catholic Church but drifted away in college. When she had her first child at age 30, Otto suddenly felt a longing to expose her daughter to the rituals of her childhood church.

"I loved growing up in the Catholic Church," she said. "I loved the sacraments. It made life so explainable to a child."

Otto eventually decided to raise her daughter in the church she now attends, Haygood United Methodist. She picked it because of another reason baby boomers cite for returning to church: getting involved in the community.

Boomers grew up in a highly mobile society in churches providing a place of belonging. When Otto moved to Atlanta with her husband, Jim, they joined Haygood's discipline group.

Boomers may return to church for their children, but some find that the reasons for participating change over time.

Angie Harwood, 51, was raised in the church while growing up in Decatur, Ga., but stopped attending at age 15 when her mother abandoned Christianity for Eastern religion. But when Harwood became a mother, she wanted to raise her daughter, Mandy, in the Roman Catholic faith. It's the faith Maria's father, who is divorced from Harwood, belonged to. She began attending Christ the King Cathedral in Atlanta and experienced her own spiritual awakening.

"There is a certain tendency for people to take a vacation from religion during their late teens and on through college and maybe even the early years of marriage."

— Jackson W. Carroll, author

"Within two or three years, it was something happening to me, even though I started it for Maria," said Harwood, of Atlanta.

Some boomers return to church because of a personal crisis. Donnie Verges attended church while growing up in Memphis but drifted away in college. He moved to Atlanta, married and started a corporate cleaning service. Then his business began to slump, he lost a friend and his marriage grew strained.

He went to church one Sunday and heard the pastor preach a sermon about not worrying. "It seemed like from that point on, I had a calm that came over me that I never had before," Verges said.

His marriage and his business improved. Now Verges is a member of St. James United Methodist Church in Alpharetta, Ga.

But even when boomers return to their faith, they often bring their generation's habit of questioning authority with them.

Russell Osmond, 61, a Mormon who lives in metro Atlanta, stopped attending church five years ago because of intellectual doubts.

Osmond returned to the church five years ago, but not because he had answered his questions. He learned to live with the contradictions and paradoxes of his faith, he said.

His need to belong to his faith community trumped his need to resolve his intellectual doubts. Today, he said, he feels a "palpable" sense of God.

"The human psyche needs something to believe in," Osmond said. "It's the nature of the beast."

Carroll, the author of the book on boomers' religious practices, said those who return to their faith don't return empty-handed. They often incorporate other religious beliefs.

"Boomers tend to be religious seekers," Carroll said. "They are open to religious experiences that come from a variety of religions."

Osmond embodies the "spiritual seeker" label. His return to the faith of his youth took place largely because of his discovery of Christian intellectuals such as C.S. Lewis and Francis Schaeffer.

"Skepticism, which initially led to his doubts, also helped. I found out that many scientists had abandoned their previous belief that the universe was without beginning and had embraced the theory of the 'big bang,' that the universe had a beginning. 'If there really was a big bang, there must be a 'big banger,'" he said.

Now Holland calls himself a Christian. His intellect and faith are no longer at odds, although the questions that have characterized his generation have not ended. "I feel most called to work with people and their doubts," he said. "It's supposed to be a question. My journey continues."

Anything but lazy

Part-time pastors juggle jobs, ministry to fill churches' needs

SALEM, W.Va. (AP) — For Danny Fleming, Sunday is no day of rest.

It starts before dawn, when the United Methodist pastor rises from slumber and gets ready for services. Some Sundays, he travels to two churches. On others, it's three. Every week, he spends 20 hours preparing his sermons and logs nearly 100 miles on his truck traveling to services.

And that's all before Monday morning, when he gets up for his full-time job with the U.S. Army in Clarkburg, where he supervises the maintenance and repairs of Army Reserve vehicles and equipment in northern West Virginia.

"I decided a long time ago you get out of it what you put into it," says the soft-spoken 58-year-old, after leading a small rural congregation in worship on a recent Sunday.

For many of the millions of Americans who depend on their pastors, ministers and spiritual leaders, a full-time minister is becoming an out-of-reach luxury. To keep small churches open — and to provide individual care at big churches — religious groups are increasingly relying on part-time, or bivocational pastors.

Worship is just one of the many expectations being placed on these part-timers. There are church council meetings, Bible studies, supper and other gatherings, and — most important — being there for believers.

"A bivocational minister can be a lot of things, but he can't be lazy," says Ray Gilder, national coordinator of the Southern Baptist Bivocational Ministers Association.

When such a hectic schedule is added to the demands of work and family, the results can tax even the hardest person.

"Sometimes it means I don't sleep," laughs the Rev. Alton

The Rev. Danny Fleming preaches at Big Isaac United Methodist Church in Big Isaac, W. Va. The part-time pastor jugs a full-time job with the U.S. Army in Clarkburg, W. Va., and ministers to two churches on some Sundays and three churches on other Sundays. He spends 20 hours preparing sermons and logs 100 miles a week on his truck.

Dillard, "but I make myself available."

Dillard, the married father of two teenagers, is the pastor of the African Methodist Episcopal Church's Allen Chapel in Charleston's east side.

He also works 12-hour shifts at Columbia Gas Works, sometimes sandwiching Sunday worship and a brief nap in between. On top of that, he presides over Wednesday night Bible classes and always has his cell phone in case his congregants need him.

"It's not easy, but it works about 90 percent of the time," Dillard says.

One expert says about a third of the pastors serving large Protestant denominations are part-time, with some — such as the Southern Baptist Convention — nearing 40 percent.

"It's a growing form of ministry, and I believe it's going to grow even faster and larger," says the Rev. Dennis Bickers, a former part-time pastor and now an area minister for the American Baptist Church in Indiana and Kentucky.

In many denominations, bivocational ministers were more common than full-timers up until the middle of the 20th century. Rising prosperity plus a push toward professionalism and seminary graduates meant more congregations employed full-time pastors, but that trend has reversed. The phenomenon also isn't limited to Christianity. Part-time rabbis are common, and a study by the Council on American-Islamic Relations reports that most American mosques have volunteer leaders with other jobs.

Southern Baptists appoint strategist for reforming gays

SA ANTONIO (AP) — The Southern Baptist Convention has created a new job of national strategist on gender issues, who will work with gays and lesbians who believe they can overcome their homosexuality.

Bob Stith, who served as pastor of Carroll Baptist Church in Southlake, Texas, for 37 years, started the new job June 1.

On June 13, at the SBC annual meeting in San Antonio, Stith said he hopes to bring men and women to "see Jesus in Jesus Christ." He hopes the ministry will help gays and lesbians "come to a place where this temptation doesn't dominate their life."

Stith and SBC officials are still working out the specifics of the job. With more than 16 million members, the Southern Baptist Convention is the largest Protestant denomination in the country. Several evangelical groups, including International and Focus on the Family, run programs teaching that homosexuality is a sin that can be overcome.

Archbishop of Canterbury holds out hope of keeping Anglicans united

LONDON (AP) — The spiritual leader of the world's Anglicans says schism over the Bible and homosexuality within the fellowship is not inevitable, and he's trying to "maintain as long as possible the space in which people can have constructive disagreements."

Archbishop of Canterbury Rowan Williams said he doesn't want to be pushed by "either extreme" in the debate as he tries to find a way the Anglican Communion can stay together.

Williams made the comments in a recent interview with Time magazine. The long-simmering debate over whether gay relationships violate Scripture broke wide open in 2003 when the Episcopal Church, the Anglican body in the U.S., consecrated the first openly gay bishop, Gene Robinson of New Hampshire.

Williams

Williams said the U.S. denomination would have been better off deciding first to approve ordaining clergy in same-sex relationships before consecrating himself. "As it is, someone living in a relationship not theologically approved by the church is elected as a bishop — I find that bizarre and puzzling," he said.

Catholic seminary for youth shuttered in Chicago

CHICAGO (AP) — For more than a century, Archbishop Quigley Preparatory Seminary has prepared teenage boys for the priesthood, largely unchanged as the city transformed around it from gritty industrial center to modern metropolis.

But another kind of change finally caught up with Quigley.

The 102-year-old seminary — a Gothic-style building in a tony Chicago shopping district — closes Friday because of a shrinking student body that has seen just one graduate ordained in the last 17 years.

It's the latest reminder that Roman Catholic preparatory seminaries have all but vanished in the United States, and highlights the church's struggle to find men willing to dedicate themselves to the priesthood.

"This is more or less the final nail in the coffin of the preparatory seminary," said R. Scott Appleby, a historian at the University of Notre Dame who has written extensively about the church.

"Historians of the Catholic Church will point to the closing of Quigley ... as a final landmark in a trend that has been building now for almost 50 years," he said.

As recently as the late 1960s, there were 122 high school seminaries in the U.S. with a combined student body of nearly 16,000, according to the Center for Apostolate at Georgetown University.

CHURCH NEWS

Tent meetings being held in Wendell

WENDELL — Berean Baptist Church in Wendell will host Gospel Tent Meetings featuring evangelist Steve Cody of Lenapah, Okla.

Cody has been preaching for more than 30 years, primarily in the Southwest. He was born and raised on a cattle ranch in Oklahoma.

Music will be provided by Jeff Gore, an ordained Southern Baptist Minister. Gore is a Texas cowboy who sings cowboy songs and writes cowboy poetry as well as Christian music.

The meetings will be at 7:30 p.m. Sunday through Wednesday in the Wendell City Park.

Cody will also preach at 11 a.m. Sunday at Berean Baptist Church, 175 2nd Ave. W. The church offers Bible study for all ages at 9:45 a.m. Sunday. A fellowship meal on the church grounds will be held following Sunday morning's service.

The church will also host a children's cowboy camp in the park from 10 a.m. to noon Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. Kids of all ages are invited for music, crafts, games, snacks.

For additional information, call Pastor Paul Kroeger at 539-5769 or 536-5275.

Congregation to use hand chimes for hymns

TWIN FALLS — The congregation will ring in the opening music and there will be special music by the Hallelujah Handbells at the 10 a.m. worship service Sunday at the First Presbyterian Church, 209 Fifth Ave. N.

Hand chimes will be distributed for the ringing of hymns, including "Joyful, Joyful We adore Thee," "For the Beauty of the Earth" and "What a Friend We Have in Jesus."

The Rev. Phil Price will speak on "What We Believe: Trinity" based on Matthew 28:1-20. Elizabeth Ha, daughter of Evan and Jung Ha of Twin Falls, will be baptized. Elizabeth and Sue Ha will also be welcomed into membership of the church.

Everyone is welcome to fellowship immediately following worship.

A picnic in City Park is planned for 5:30 p.m. Thursday, before the Twin Falls Municipal Band concert. Bring a picnic and chairs. The fellowship committee will furnish the room for beer floats.

This is a summer get-together for those who have been in Bible study classes throughout the year, but the whole congregation is invited. For more information, contact the church office at 733-7023.

Vacation Bible school starting in Jerome

JEROME — Jerome Bible Baptist Church will hold a vacation Bible school from 6:30-8:30 p.m. at 132 Second Ave. E. for children 4 years of age through sixth grade. The theme for this year is "Can You Hear Me Now?" For more information, call 324-2004.

Bible school planned at Church of Brethren

TWIN FALLS — Community Church of the Brethren invites children ages 3-10 to join vacation Bible school. It will be held from 6:30 to 8 p.m. Monday through Thursday at 461 Filler Ave. W.

The theme is "Nash's Ark," with lessons on listening to God, obeying God, and God's promises. Families are invited to attend from 6:30-7:30 p.m. Thursday. For more information, contact the church at 733-3789.

Jim Gentry sharing message on Book of Acts

JEROME — Jim Gentry will share the message "Lessons from the Book of Acts" during worship at 10:30 a.m. Sunday at the Jerome First Presbyterian Church, 262 E. First Ave. A Sunday school for all ages will begin at 9 a.m. Child care is provided for Sunday school and worship. For more information, call 324-2972, or stop by the church.

Mark Koffler to speak at Hollister church

HOLLISTER — Elder Mark Koffler of Twin Falls will be the speaker at the 11 a.m. Sunday worship service of the Hollister Community Presbyterian Church. The sermon topic will be "Your Call." The Old Testament scripture will be Genesis 12:1-4 and the gospel reading will be Mark 1:16-20.

Refreshments will be provided following the worship service. Visitors are welcome.

Metzger to give sermon at Rock Creek church

TWIN FALLS — "As Seen from the Solitary Broom Tree" will be the sermon presented by Pastor Dale Metzger at 10 a.m. Sunday at the Rock Creek Community Church, 131 Grandview Drive.

The scripture reading is 1 Kings 19:1-15. A sacrament baptism will be observed and special music will be provided by Amanda Barness and Carol Barness.

Beginning July 1, Sunday worship services will be held at the Twin Falls Senior Center at 530 Shoshone St. W.

Blake Walsh to speak on Christ during service

BUHL — Blake Walsh will speak on "One in Christ" for worship at 11 a.m. Sunday at the Buhl First Presbyterian Church. The scriptures are Galatians 3:23-29 and Luke 8:26-33. Nursery care is provided. A coffee hour will follow worship.

Training session for teen counselors planned

TWIN FALLS — A training session and rally for all teen counselors for the annual day camp will be held from 3-7 p.m. Sunday at the First United Methodist Church, 360 Shoshone St. E.

All adult volunteers are asked to join the teens at 5 p.m. for a light supper followed by a planning session with all combined staff from 6 to 7 p.m.

The week-long day camp runs from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. on July 9-13 at the church. The theme will be "Lift Off: Soaring to New Heights With God." Last year more than 75 children from El Milagro and South Park attended as well as about 20 teens and youth from throughout the area.

Worship services are scheduled for 8:30 a.m. Sunday in the Wesley Chapel and for 11 a.m. in the sanctuary.

A social hour will follow in the Friendship Room.

The first practice for the July 13 picnic pageant will be held at 7 p.m. Tuesday in the church's Fellowship Hall. Contact Noel or Dana Morfin, 734-6836 or 731-1116, for ways to help through mentoring or assisting in fund raising efforts.

Church scholarship recipients are Sadie Poppino, Linfield College; Meg McCarthy, Southern Oregon University; Cora Van Dyk, University of the Pacific; Randall Mitchell, Colby Mitchell and Rob Stroebel, all College of Southern Idaho. Continuing scholarships were awarded Alec Stew, University of Idaho, and Ashley Remy and Randi Knifel, both of CSI.

The Needle Weits will meet at 1:30 p.m. Wednesday at the church and the crafts group at 10:30 a.m. Thursday at the home of Nelda Ronk.

Christianity exposes one God in three persons — the Father, Son and Holy Spirit. Mormons espouse that Heavenly Father, Jesus Christ and the Holy Ghost are three distinct entities.

• Divine revelation. Traditional Christianity teaches that Jesus is the final revelation and therefore no other writing should be elevated to the status of the Bible. The Mormons use the King James Version of the Bible but have equally important additional writing. The Book of Mormon was published in 1830. The Book of Commandments in 1833 and The Pearl of Great Price in 1851. These latter writings contain material given to Smith through divine revelation and through texts shown to him by an angel.

• Salvation. Both lines of faith teach that Jesus made himself an atoning sacrifice for sins. Traditional Christianity teaches salvation and entry into heaven through grace — a gift. Mormons ask for more — faith and works.

• Afterlife. Mormon doctrine explores the afterlife at length. It espouses that the dead are reunited in heaven. Couples "sealed" in matrimony on Earth remain married for eternity (although divorce is allowed on Earth). Those who have not heard the Mormon Gospel here are given that opportunity after death. The Mormons teach that there is "pre-existence" — life before conception.

• Baptism. Mormons perform baptism by proxy for deceased people not baptized into the faith. They baptize believers starting at age 8.

• Missionary work. Traditional churches have varying degrees of enthusiasm toward evangelism and missions. Mormons expect males and strongly encourage females to undertake an extended missions journey. Currently, 53,000 Mormon missionaries are in the field.

• Public admittance. Services at Mormon meetinghouses are open to the public. However, temples are holy places open only to Saints in good standing. The church says temple rituals are "private," rather than "secret." All members dress in white during them.

Kurke notes an elevated stress on morality and value on family among Mormons compared to traditional Christians. Further, Barna Group, a California research group, finds in polling among Christian denominations that LDS church members are at the top or near the top in a number of polling categories, including church attendance, propensity to pray, Bible reading, Sunday school attendance and church volunteerism.

Barna's data also points to a continuing frustration for the Mormons, who have always contended they are Christians. Under the category "absolutely committed to Christianity," Barna lists Mormons as "NA."

Is it Christianity? A sect A domination? The LDS church's Farah points to the church's own description: It is Christianity restored, the church says.

The church teaches that Smith saw God the Father and Jesus near his home in Palmyra, N.Y., in the First Vision at age 14, in 1820. It further states that seven years later the angel Moroni showed Smith gold plates containing the Book of Mormon. The church was established the week after the publication of the English translation in 1830.

Many early church members moved to Kirtland, Ohio, and Independence, Mo. Met with sometimes violent opposition and angry mobs, the church settled in Nauvoo, Ill., on the Missouri border. Briefly, the Mormons were allowed a degree of home rule, and Smith became mayor and head of a militia.

Secular authorities summoned Smith to Carthage, Ill., after Smith called for the paper. At the jail in Carthage, on the second floor, on June 27, 1844, Smith and his brother Hyrum were shot dead while Taylor was seriously wounded and a fourth year that followed, much of the movement, led by Brigham Young, came to the new home in Utah.

A Gallup Poll found last winter the most common first reaction to the topic of Mormons is "polygamy" — a practice the church banned more than 100 years ago.

Plural marriages are practiced by some breakaway fundamentalist groups today, but the church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints punishes plural marriage with its most serious discipline: Excommunication.

For most Mormons, Farah said, polygamy is a relic of a bygone era and as the church engages those outside the faith, it has to address it because of the public's association.

God the mathematician: Renowned geneecist sees divine hand in evolution

Cox News Service

WASHINGTON — God loves mathematics.

That's what Francis Collins, director of the National Institute of Human Genome Studies, believes.

Collins, an evangelical Christian who oversaw the government's role in the successful effort to map the human genome, also thinks evolution guided the creation of all living things, including human beings.

Collins maintains there is no conflict between that view and his belief in God.

He dismisses "intelligent design," the idea some groups have used to challenge the teaching of evolution in public schools, as non-science.

"God, who is not limited in space or time, created the universe and established natural laws that govern it," he writes. "Seeking to populate this otherwise sterile universe with living creatures, God chose the elegant mechanism of evolution to create microbes, plants and animals of all sorts."

"The Language of God," (Free Press, $26), Collins describes his personal journey from atheist to believer.

He grew up in a mildly

"Seeking to populate this otherwise sterile universe with living creatures, God chose the elegant mechanism of evolution to create microbes, plants and animals of all sorts."

— Francis Collins

agnostic family and had decided he was an atheist by the time he entered the University of North Carolina medical school.

But in his third year of medical training, he said, a woman in her 70s who was hopelessly and painfully ill spoke of her religious faith and asked him what he believed.

"Boy, that was the question I would have wanted," Collins recalled in a recent conversation with young scientists at the American Association for the Advancement of Science (AAAS) here. Unwilling to add to her pain, he mumbled something about not being "really sure."

But the conversation haunted him for several days, he recalled, and "I suddenly realized that my position wasn't all that well considered."

He still believes the universe was born in the "Big Bang," which he describes as "an unimaginable singularity of energy about 13.7 billion years ago."

But conditions at this moment of creation had to be so finely tuned for chance to explain them, he says.

For example, within a few seconds of the original explosion, matter coalesced from energy, Collins says. Tiny pieces of stuff called quarks appeared, some in the form of matter and some as antimatter.

Original conditions seem likely to have produced these opposite quarks in equal numbers, but for some unexplained reason there was an extra matter quark for about every 1 billion pairs.

These extra quarks survived and went on to become protons, atoms, molecules, galaxies and, Collins believes, human beings.

Another mystery, he says, is the force of gravity. That it been weaker by a factor of one part in 100 trillion, matter could not have coalesced from the expanding ball of energy, Collins says. A little stronger and the whole thing would have collapsed back into the singularity too soon for a complex universe and life to have developed.

There are about 15 of these "constants" that underlie the elegant and beautiful formulas of physics, Collins said.

"If you tinker with any one of these constants, you come up with a universe that is incapable of supporting the kind of complexity that we take for granted," he said at the AAAS meeting.

"The simplest explanation is that this is not an accident, that these parameters have the value they have for a purpose," he said. He believes that purpose came from "a God who loves math and who is interested in having a universe exist in the first place."

RELIGION LETTER

Law of Attraction grants rewards to believers

There's a new religion that heretofore surely has been noted and written about. A new religion that is old. It is not unlike the old religions, with an omnipotent but beneficent godhead or Law. The Law of Attraction, that grants rewards to the believers. It has a flock that prays, or thinks positively, on whatever each member wants: wealth especially, but incidentally, "happiness and health." This new faith has a vaguely defined fountainhead called, "Abraham." There's a bible, a koran, a torah, a testament, called "The Secret" with an ancillary, not-unfamiliar text called, "Ask and It Is Given." It has ample prophets and prophetesses. It has an apostle, a salesperson, a Saul of Tarsus (alias Paul) that has a Damascus road vision of the Law, the Great Law of Attraction.

By this apostle's own account, the Law lifts this person "out of despair." This person spreads the good news, the new gospel: "don't worry, relax, think positively, think simply of your desires and they will be fulfilled by the Law — the Law of Attraction. The Word, The Secret, the revealed no longer secretive Secret, is your guide. Not unlike the old religions, one can fight and die to protect this new faith.

Mormon church, foundation at odds over Mountain Meadows monument

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Descendants of the 120-member Arkansas immigrant party slaughtered in southern Utah by pioneer Mormon settlers say their plan for federal stewardship of the Mountain Meadows mass grave site has been rejected by leaders of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Phil Bolinger and Scott Fancher of the Arkansas-based Mountain Meadows Monument Foundation say they got the news June 6 in a telephone call from Elder Marlin Jensen, who oversees the church history department.

"He told us that President (Gordon B.) Hinckley had turned us down. He doesn't think it's in the best interests of the church to allow federal stewardship in the meadows," said Bolinger, the foundation president who is related to 30 of those killed. "That really bit me bad."

Jensen declined an interview, but confirmed through spokeswoman Kim Farah that the church will not pursue federal stewardship of the site. A similar request was also rejected in 1999.

Descendants want the site in the hands of a neutral third party because they believe the institutional church is complicit in the murders.

"It's not right for the people who had complicity to the killings to be the grave owner," said Bolinger, who discussed the issue with Jensen on April 25 in Salt Lake City.

"I asked him, 'How do you do you think the Kennedy family would feel if the Lee Harvey Oswald family had control of the Kennedy tomb?'"

History hangs the Sept. 11, 1857, event on southern Utah Mormon leaders and a small band of Paiute Indians, leaving the culpability of then-church president Brigham Young up for debate. An upcoming book from church historians takes the same position.

Headed to California, the wagon train led by Capt. Alexander Fancher and John Baker arrived in the Utah territory at the same time the federal government was mounting pressure on the Mormon church for its practice of polygamy and disregard for federal oversight.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"The portrait of a blinking idiot."
 — Shakespeare

Do you like to see good players make fools of themselves? If so, read on!

Themistocles Papadopoulos, the favorite opponent of Victor Mollo's immortal Hideous Hog, was reputed to be the only man capable of false-carding with a singleton. Alas, for a number of declarers in the 1998 Cap Gemini, there were several opponents who seemed equally capable of the feat!

Six hearts would have been laid down if trumps had split; but when declarer laid down the ace of trumps, the nine appeared. Was that card a singleton, or a devious falsecard from J-9-x-x as a way of getting declarer to misguess trumps?

It is an awkward decision, and in fact only two out of seven declarers were prepared to pay off to this apparent "brilliance." The successful declarers led out the king of hearts and picked up a handsome swing for their side. The other five declarers were too embarrassed at the idea of insulting one of their colleagues. They misguessed by leading a trump to dummy's queen and went down.

Incidentally, if declarer had crossed to dummy with a spade at trick three and led a heart up to the ace, he would have been much more likely to believe the heart nine to be a singleton. If East dropped the heart nine from J-9-fourth, he might find his partner with the bare 10!

As the Hideous Hog said on another occasion: "Maybe if you didn't try to be so clever, you wouldn't end up looking so stupid."

ANSWER: Partner's double is responsive, for takeout. A double of a bid-and-rushed suit is never for penalties at a low level. So you should bid two hearts, your lower four-card major, knowing that partner will be able to correct to two spades or take some other sensible action if he does not have four hearts.

Woman nominates herself to be friend's bridesmaid

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne
Phillips

DEAR ABBY: I have recently become engaged. I was approached last week by an old friend, "Lindsay," who sat me down and asked me in a serious manner if she could be a bridesmaid in my wedding. I was taken aback by her question and responded awkwardly, saying I hadn't decided yet. She looked hurt, and I quickly changed the subject. Frankly, Lindsay is someone I hadn't considered asking to be in my wedding because we have grown apart over the years.

I will be selecting my bridesmaids soon, and I don't want to hurt her feelings even more. How should I handle this?

—BRIDE-TO-BE IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR BRIDE-TO-BE: As I see it, you have two choices. You can pretend Lindsay never asked you that question. Or, you can have a chat with her and explain that you and your fiancé have discussed who will be in the bridal party, and because you and she have grown apart over the years, you have decided to ask other people. Either way, she's not going to like it. But remember, she was presumptuous to put you on the spot in the first place, and you are under no obligation to ask her.

DEAR ABBY: I'm an attractive, single, successful, 27-year-old woman who has struggled with anorexia ever since I was 12. I have learned to live with it and feel no need to advertise it to the world. However, I find that many strangers, including a large number of people I associate with at work, feel a compulsion to comment on my weight (105 pounds and 5 foot 9), the size of the clothes I wear, or what I eat. It's as uncomfortable a subject for me as I imagine it is for people who are overweight, and I have no "pat" answer for them.

When work associates ask your size or your weight, or even go so far as to assume you have an eating disorder, is there a polite response to remind them of the inappropriateness of their question?

DEAR ANNOYED: Clearly, your weight issues are more obvious to those around you than you chose to believe. However, you are under no obligation to answer these intrusive questions if it makes you uncomfortable. When confronted, reply, "That's a very personal question (or subject), and I'd prefer not to discuss it." Then change the subject.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a female in my mid-20s, starting on a career as a professional musician. I play an instrument, the flugelhorn, that is played professionally by fewer females than males. I have also been gifted with good looks.

On many occasions when I've performed with a group, I have received compliments from band members as well as members of the audience, usually about my playing and my appearance. (I dress tastefully, not provocatively.) Do you have some creative ways of saying "thank you" to these nice people? I realize that just a simple "thank you" is always appropriate, but is there another way I can respond to show my appreciation for their kind words without sounding like I'm rejecting the compliment or I have heard it a thousand times?

—JESSE IN BURBANK

DEAR JESSE: Sometimes the more "creative" someone is, the more room there is for misinterpretation. When acknowledging a compliment, keep it simple. Just say, "Thank you," or, "How kind of you to say that."

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Saturday, June 23, the 174th day of 2007. There are 191 days left in the year.

Today's highlight:

On June 23, 1868, Christopher Latham Sholes received a patent for his "Type-writer."

On this date:

In 1757, forces of the East India Company led by Robert Clive defeated troops loyal to the nawab, or provincial governor, of Bengal in the Battle of Plassey, which effectively marked the beginning of British colonial rule in India.

In 1836, Congress approved the Deposit Act, which contained a provision for turning over surplus federal revenue to the states.

In 1931, aviators Wiley Post and Harold Gatty took off from New York on a round-the-world flight that lasted eight days and 15 hours.

In 1947, the Senate joined the House in overriding President Truman's veto of the Taft-Hartley Act, designed to limit the power of organized labor.

In 1956, Gamal Abdel Nasser was elected president of Egypt.

In 1967, President Johnson and Soviet Premier Alexei Kossygin held the first of two meetings at Glassboro State College in New Jersey.

In 1967, the U.S. Senate voted to censure Democrat Thomas J. Dodd of Connecticut for using campaign money for personal uses.

In 1969, Warren E. Burger was sworn in as chief justice by the man he was succeeding, Earl Warren.

In 1972, President Nixon and White House chief of staff H.R. Haldeman discussed a plan to use the CIA to obstruct the FBI's Watergate investigation. (Revelation of the tape recording of this conversation sparked Nixon's resignation in 1974.)

In 1985, all 329 people aboard an Air-India Boeing 747 were killed when the plane crashed into the Atlantic Ocean near Ireland, after a bomb on board exploded.

Ten years ago: Civil rights activist Betty Shabazz, the widow of Malcolm X, died in New York of burns suffered in a fire set by her 12-year-old grandson; she was 61. (Malcolm Shabazz pleaded guilty to arson and other charges and was placed in juvenile detention.)

Five years ago: Rival groups of Protestants and Catholics clashed on the streets of north Belfast, Northern Ireland, following a weekend of sporadic sectarian violence. Twenty-six North Korean asylum seekers left South Korea and Canadian diplomatic compounds in Beijing bound for South Korea, ending a month-long diplomatic standoff.

One year ago: Vice President Cheney denounced the revelation of an anti-terrorism program that tapped into an immense international database of confidential financial records. Transportation Secretary Norman Mineta announced he was leaving the Bush administration. Television producer Aaron Spelling died in Los Angeles at age 63.

THOUGHT

"Understanding is often a prelude to forgiveness, but they are not the same, and we often forgive what we cannot understand (seeing nothing else to do) and understand what we cannot pardon."

—Mary McCarthy, American author (1912-1989)

Wedding band lost in Long Island home returned to woman after more than forty years

NORTHPORT, N.Y. (AP) — A man who found a wedding ring that was lost almost four decades ago in a floorboard in his home tracked down the owner using the ring's inscription as a clue. The gold band had belonged to the late husband of 74-year-old Catherine Zenkus, who was to reclaim the ring Friday in a ceremony at Northport High School. "I just cried ... because my husband is dead 18 years," said Zenkus, whose husband was named John. "I was just shocked." The ring turned up in 2001 behind a baseboard heater in what is now John Fanuka's Northport home. Struck by the band's significance, he strove to find the couple. Noting the inscription — "Kitty Zenkus 3/31/51" — Fanuka consulted neighbors, searched online and phoned previous owners of the home. But he was stumped until the recent arrival of a piece of junk mail addressed to Kitty Zenkus. "I didn't put two and two together at first," he said. "I hadn't looked at the ring in five years ... and I ran upstairs and sure enough, it was Kitty." Internet search quickly led him to Zenkus, who said she and her family moved out of the house 30 years ago. Zenkus said the couple's toddler son, Anthony, had hidden the ring during the early years of their marriage.
