The water cop

Gene Schultz, a water inspector with the city of Twin Falls, notifies residents on Monroe Street that they were watering on the wrong day.

Water inspector keeps an eye on Twin Falls lawns

By Jared S. Hopkins Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Gene Schultz doesn't have a badge. He doesn't have a gun. And a quick drive around town with him reminds you he doesn't roll to the theme song from the TV show "Cops."

But Schultz upholds the law — water law.

Schultz modestly refers to himself as the city's water inspector. He simply drives around Twin Falls during irrigation season — April through September — looking for lawn sprinklers spraying water when they shouldn't be. When he spots one, he writes a ticket. Then he moves on.

"There's a drought going on and people need to conserve the water," he said. "That's my job — to educate people."

It's a routine he's worked since the city enacted a water conservation ordinance in 2004 that required, among other things, lawns to be watered before 10

"There's a drought going on and people need to conserve the water. That's my job — to educate people."

— Gene Schultz, Twin Falls water inspector a.m. and after 5 p.m. on alternating days of the week.

A retired architect, Schultz is from Twin Falls but lived mostly in California before returning three years ago. He performs the job like, well, a retired architect — with a seasoned, matter-of-fact method, careful not to disturb a mild-mannered personality.

"It gives me something to do and it's a service for the community," he said. "I think it's great."

There are 14,000 water accounts spread across the city. Exemptions are given to people with new lawns and subdivisions and businesses that receive approval for alternative watering plans.

Hiring Schultz — he's an hourly employee — appears to have paid off. Since mid-April, when he officially began duty, nearly 600 violations have been issued, an average of almost 10 per day. He's issued more than a dozen fines — $40 for a second violation, $80 for a third, and $120 for a fourth.

Tuesday morning was a smorgasbord of activity: A half-dozen violations. Warnings to new residents. A $40 fine. A warning to a confused babysitter. Schultz left tickets at empty homes where sprinklers were left on.

But the fun is not in seeing who violates the ordinance — but in hearing what they say when they're caught.

Just before 11 a.m. Schultz stopped in front of a quaint, tidy home with a deep green lawn.

City watering parks same way as homeowners

By Jared S. Hopkins Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Like front yards recently covered with fertilizer, city parks need water to survive, too. They are also held to the same strict standard — no watering between 10 a.m. and 5 p.m.

In 2004, the city of Twin Falls enacted a water conservation ordinance that requires, among other things, watering of lawns on designated days before 10 a.m. and after 5 p.m. It also mandates city land is watered just three days a week, including the city's 23 parks.

"The parks aren't as green as we'd like them to be because we are abiding by this water conservation policy," said Eli Roberts, the city's assistant parks and recreation director. "If we could have greener grass, we would."

An exception is typically made for maintenance crews or a park with newly seeded grass, as is the case at the 34-acre Sunway Soccer Complex. Roberts said. That facility is still at half-use.

Roberts said most watering at city parks is administered from 10 p.m. until 10 a.m. the next day. The parks that demand the most water are the three largest: the 17-acre Harmon Park, 20-acre Frontier Field and 13-acre Thomsen Park.

About half of the city's 23 parks — the larger ones — are on split schedules, which means that half the park is watered every other day.

Split scheduling means sprinklers are running almost every day — but in alternating areas. Roberts said the practice can lead to the misconception that a park is watered continuously.

Almost 75 percent of the city's 287 acres of parkland are watered through pressurized irrigation using canal water. Last year, the city installed a computerized irrigation-control system specially designed for conservation by using moisture sensors, according to Roberts. There are 30 such operating sites.

Table with 4 columns: Park Name, Area, Watering Schedule, and Notes. Lists parks like Ascension Soccer Fields, Cascade Park, Dierkes Lake Park, etc.

** Note: Split schedule means one half of the park is watered 3 days a week and the other half is watered the other 3 days.

DO YOU KNOW THIS MAN?

Terry Callison of Carson City, Nev., hopes someone in the Magic Valley will know who the pilot in this photo, which may have been taken in 1951 during the Korean War. Callison has about 500 35-millimeter slides he thinks may belong to the pilot or a member of his family. He thinks the pilot may have grown up in Wendell.

Trunk full of photos leads man on quest for unknown owner

By Chris Steinbach Times-News writer

RENO, Nev. — After sifting through too few clues, Terry Callison turned to the Times-News.

"This is a long shot, but we're just trying to do what we can," said Callison, of Carson City, Nev.

Callison, a soldier who retired as a captain after 20 years, served 24 years with the Nevada Department of Public Safety where he retired in 2003 as a lieutenant. Several years ago, he helped a friend move into a house in Reno, where they found a trunk in the basement filled with about 500 35-millimeter color slides. The photos tell the story of someone's family life and military career in the middle of the last century.

"We think he went to high school in Wendell," Callison said of the unknown owner of the slides.

Some of the slides are marked with first names. Others show scenes of what Callison thinks was then Idaho State College in Pocatello and a cemetery in Burley.

Other conclusions Callison has reached about the man

Want to help?

If you know anything about who may be the owner of 500 35-millimeter slides found in a trunk in the basement of a Reno, Nev., home, contact Chris Steinbach at the Times-News. He will put you in contact with Terry Callison, of Carson City, Nev., man who is trying to find the owner of the slides. Please see our search — although at 735-3255 or csteinbach@magicvalley.com.

- His name is Dave.
• He was an Air Force fighter pilot in 1951 during the Korean War who flew F8Bs and F8Es.
• He graduated from Idaho State in 1948 or 1949.

Callison hopes these clues will spur someone in the Magic Valley to help identify Dave or a member of his family.

Otherwise, Callison will have to put the slides in his own cold-case file — something the retired state police officer doesn't want to do.

"I usually had a little more to go on," he said of his investigations as a state cop.

Robot air-attack drone to be deployed in Iraq

'Reaper' packs bombs, missiles

By Charles J. Hanley Associated Press writer

BALAD AIR BASE, Iraq — The airplane is the size of a jet fighter, powered by a turbo-prop engine, able to fly at 300 mph and reach 50,000 feet. It's outfitted with infrared, laser and radar targeting, and with a ton and a half of guided bombs and missiles.

The Reaper is loaded, but there's no one on board. Its pilot, as it bombs targets in Iraq, will sit at a video console 7,000 miles away in Nevada.

The arrival of these outsized U.S. "hunter-killer" drones, in aviation history's first robot attack squadron, will be a watershed moment even in an Iraq that has seen too many innovative ways to hunt and kill.

That moment, one the Air Force will likely keep low-key, is expected "soon," says the regional U.S. air commander. How soon? "We're still working that," Lt. Gen. Gary North said in an interview.

The Reaper's first combat deployment is expected in Afghanistan, and senior Air Force officers estimate it will find in Iraq sometime between this fall and next spring. They look forward to it. "With more Reapers, I could send manned airplanes home," North said.

The Associated Press has learned that the Air Force is building a 400,000-square-foot expansion of the concrete ramp area now used by Predator drones here at Balad, the biggest U.S. air base in Iraq, 50 miles north of Baghdad. That new staging area could be turned over to Reapers.

It's another sign that the Air Force is planning for a

Water

 There were also about 10 sprinklers on full blast.
 The woman — perhaps sensing something was amiss — frantically ran outside before Schultz even finished filling out the ticket in his truck.
 She spoke first, apologizing profusely. The lawn, she said, just received chemicals it needed to be watered.
 Schultz nods. He understands. But it doesn't matter.
 "Back in his truck, Schultz said he understands she was sorry. But, he points out, she didn't refuse the ticket."
 "She was breaking the law," he said. "I would say she was taking a chance getting away with it. And she didn't."
 Her story might be true, but Schultz never knows. Earlier, one resident told Schultz she was taking a chance getting away with it. And she didn't.
 "You don't know if they're telling the truth or not," he said. "They give funny excuses. They forget. Or all of the above."

His favorite is when a man explained in detail how his sprinkler was powered by an outlet and batteries, but remained on after it suffered a "spark" and threw off the system off.
 "Spiking I'm not an engineer. I don't know what that means," said Schultz in disbelief. He wrote the man a ticket.
 Schultz doesn't make exceptions, no matter what you do — he's logged numerous businesses — or who you are — he's chided Twin Falls City Council members.
 "Water cops' alright," he said last week when pressured about nicknames. "That's what people know me as."
 Still, he said he has no agenda. He logs addresses, not names. And although residents call City Hall to report violators, he must see violations firsthand. He said most are made by new residents. No one is ever refused.
 Schultz insists that he doesn't need any help. But for next year the city will ask for at least one more water inspector, said Gretchen Scott, the city's management assistant.
 The extra manpower might help because the water ordinance also mandates that restaurants serve water only if requested by customers, and Schultz said he rarely checks. He said restaurants generally comply, and the violating 'sprinklers are more important.

 But another inspector might help on the weekends, when no one is monitoring sprinklers — a loophole Schultz concedes residents take advantage of.
 "How do you fine that, because the city doesn't work on the weekends?" he asked.
 Regardless of whether the city gives Schultz some assistance, he understands his job is not immune to danger. After Schultz issued a warning to a resident and walked back toward his truck, his back was struck with the cold piece of a sprinkler.
 "That's the hazards of the job," he said with a smile.
 After being sprayed, he promptly got back into his vehicle. There was more work to be done.

 extended stay in Iraq, supporting Iraqi government forces in any continuing conflict, even if U.S. ground troops are drawn down in the coming years.
 The estimated two dozen or more unmanned MQ-9 Predators now doing surveillance over Iraq, as the 46th Expeditionary Reconnaissance Squadron, have become mainstays of the U.S. war effort, offering round-the-clock airborne "eyes" watching over road convoys, tracking nighttime insurgent movements via infrared sensors, and occasionally unleashing one of their two Hellfire missiles on a target.
 From about 36,000 flying hours in 2005, the Predators are expected to log 66,000 hours this year over Iraq and Afghanistan.
 The MQ-9 Reaper, when compared with the 1995-vintage Predator, represents a major evolution of the unmanned aerial vehicle, or UAV.
 At five tons gross weight, the Reaper is four times heavier than the Predator. Its size — 66 feet long, with a 66-foot wingspan — is comparable to the profile of the Air Force's workhorse A-10 attack plane. It can fly twice as fast and twice as high as the Predator. Most significantly, it carries many more weapons.

 While the Predator is armed with two Hellfire missiles, the Reaper can carry 14 of the air-to-ground weapons — or four Hellfires and two 500-pound bombs.
 "It's not a recon squadron," Col. Joe Gausella, operations chief for the Central Command's air component, said of the Reapers. "It's an attack squadron, with a lot more kinetic ability."

Cardinal apologizes in clergy sex abuse case

LOS ANGELES — Cardinal Roger Mahony, leader of the nation's largest Roman Catholic archdiocese, apologized Sunday to the hundreds of people who will get a share of a $600 million settlement over allegations of clergy sex abuse.

"There really is no way to go back and give them that innocence that was taken from them. ... The one thing I wish I could give the victims, I cannot," he said.

"Once again, I apologize to anyone who has been offended, who has been abused. ... It should not have happened and should not ever happen again."

Mahony said that he has met in the past 14 months with dozens of people alleging clergy abuse and that those meetings helped him understand the importance of a quick resolution to what he called a "terrible sin and crime."

The settlement will not affect the archdiocese's core ministry, Mahony said, but the church will have to sell buildings, use some of its invested funds and borrow money. The archdiocese will not sell any parish property, he said.

"We gather today because this long journey has now come to an end, and a new chapter of that journey is beginning," Mahony told reporters.

5th 'Harry Potter' makes $330 million worldwide

HOLLYWOOD — The Harry Potter movie series keeps working box-office magic for Warner Bros. — thanks not to sorcery but to a loyal fan base and careful, consistent management of the franchise.

"Harry Potter and the Order of the Phoenix" got off to the best start in the series, grossing $140 million domestically in five days starting with Wednesday's opening, Warner Bros. estimated Sunday. Worldwide, the film conjured up $330 million.

In the film, Harry returns for his fifth year of study at Hogwarts. Meeting secretly with a group of students who call themselves "Dumbledore's Army," he teaches them how to defend against the Dark Arts.

PENNSYLVANIA

Groups fear power lines coming to national parks

GETTYSBURG — Apple trees have been planted, wood fences restored and power lines buried in recent years to transform the Civil War battlefield in Gettysburg to the way it looked when Union and Confederate forces clashed on farmers' fields in 1863. But preservationists now worry that the national military park in Pennsylvania's picturesque fruit belt soon may be in the shadow of high-powered transmission lines.

It is not just Gettysburg that worries them as a result of a 2005 law that gave federal regulators new authority over where power lines are built. They fear the law could place hundreds of national and state parks and other protected sites in the Northeast and Southwest in or near the path of massive power lines. "They're not little modest poles that you wouldn't notice," said Joy Oakes, senior regional director at the National Parks Conservation Association.

The law was enacted in response to power companies' complaints that local and state authorities, which historically have decided where power lines go, were reluctant to approve them — often because of residents' opposition. The statement, according to the companies, contributed to blackouts such as the one in 2003 that swept from Ohio to New York City. Using the law, the Energy Department this year proposed making two large swaths of land in the Northeast and Southwest "national interest" corridors. If the corridors are approved by Energy Secretary Samuel Bodman, federal regulators can order power lines built in them, regardless of state and local opposition.

DENTAL CARE FOR YOUR CHILDREN

Dental related illnesses result in over 51 million lost school hours in the U.S. each year. The good news is that by adopting a few simple dental habits, you can help prevent cavities and keep your children smiling and ready to learn.

You may know to brush twice daily and floss each day, but did you know to use a soft bristle brush and brush for two minutes each time? Also, until age 8 you should help your child brush. A good habit is to brush and floss with your child, as they will watch and imitate you.

Sometimes however, brushing and flossing is not enough. Ninety percent of children's cavities occur on the biting surfaces of their molars (back teeth). The molars naturally have deep grooves in them where even a toothbrush may not reach. An easy and painless way to help prevent these cavities is to have a dentist apply dental sealants, which fill in the grooves of the molars and are much less expensive than having a cavity filled. It is recommended that children be assessed for dental sealants when they are six years old and again when they are twelve.

But don't wait until a child is six before taking them to a dentist. In general it is recommended a child see a dentist by their first birthday. The dentist will establish a schedule of professional cleanings and check-ups, and assess your child's fluoride needs.

The final good dental habit is healthy snacking. You probably know that sugar is bad for the teeth, but did you know that it is actually the frequency of snacking that matters most? Eating a snack all at once is less harmful to the teeth than nibbling on it throughout the day. This also applies to sipping on a soda or sports drink throughout the day.

Parents play the most important role in helping children avoid cavities. By adopting these smart dental habits, you and your family can enjoy a lifetime of healthy smiles.

WASHINGTON

Bush rejects GOP effort to curb Iraq mission

WASHINGTON — The White House is holding firm on its Iraq strategy in the face of yet another effort to curb the mission, proposed this time by moderate Republicans as the Bush administration can ill afford to lose.

President Bush's national security adviser, Stephen Hadley, said Sunday the administration's "very orderly process" for reviewing its Iraq plans should be allowed to play out despite a hurry-up initiative from two respected GOP senators.

Hadley's reply was "No" when asked whether Bush could live with the proposal by Sens. John Warner of Virginia and Richard Lugar of Indiana. They want to give the president until mid-October to submit a plan to restrict the use of U.S. troops in Iraq to fighting terrorists and securing borders and U.S. interests.

Bush is sticking to his plan to take stock of progress in Iraq in September and decide on a course of action from there, without conditions, his aide said.

Hadley made the rounds of morning television talk shows to praise the initiative of the senators — and turn thumbs down on it.

"They've done a useful service in indicating the kinds of things that we should be thinking about," Hadley said. "But the time to begin that process is September."

"And the opening shot really ought to be to hear from the commanders on the ground who can make an assessment of where we are."

The Senate's Democratic leadership also is cool to the Warner-Lugar proposal, but for different reasons. Democrats favor tougher steps to restrict Bush's options, but need more Republicans to peel away from Bush before they can prevail.

TEXAS

Admirers say goodbye to Lady Bird Johnson

STONEWALL — Lady Bird Johnson arrived at her final resting place beneath a canopy of oak trees Sunday, beside the late President Lyndon Baines Johnson at the family's ranch in the Texas Hill Country.

Relatives and close friends of the Johnsons said a final goodbye to the former first lady near the banks of the Pedernales River.

Grandson Lyndon Nugent said Johnson made all her grandchildren feel special, whether she was taking them on hiking and camping trips or, especially in her later years, quietly visiting with them at the LBJ Ranch.

His mother, Luci Baines Johnson, reminded her children for more than three decades that it was important to spend as much time as possible with their grandmother, whom they called "Nini," because "she might not be here tomorrow," Nugent said. "Sadly, tomorrow has arrived," he said.

Buhl loosens its liquor ordinance for certain events

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

BUHL — The Buhl City Council loosened an ordinance last year to allow beer and wine sales at special events during the city's year-long 2006 centennial celebration.

But prior to and after the centennial year, such outdoor liquor sales were prohibited. So when the Buhl Chamber of Commerce asked the council for permission to host a beer and wine garden during the annual Trout Festival this September, the city was forced to make a decision to either grant special permits for special events or to go back to prohibiting alcohol sales at such occasions.

Before voting, the council expressed some concerns.

Councilman Kyle Hauser questioned the type of message that allowing alcohol sales for profit would send to the community's children, and Councilman Bob Vandewater questioned the ordinance's wording.

"I'm a little concerned with the definition of a special event sponsor," he said.

In the end, the ordinance passed unanimously after getting some legal clarification on how the council could control the granting of such permits.

"If there is a problem with the permit, you don't allow it," said City Attorney Bob Nungester. "You can have additional requirements applicable if the city deems it necessary."

After the city changed the ordinance it granted permission to the chamber to host a beer and wine garden for the Trout Festival.

The decision is a victory for the chamber. Officials there said it made $2,000 from last year's garden sales.

"We will not address it as a money-making thing but just as part of the festival," said Chamber Vice President Barbara Gletzen.

Salers show held in Filer

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

FILER — Saturday turned out to be a pretty good day for Melissa McCoy.

McCoy, 19, of Buhl is president of the Idaho Junior Nationals Salers Association Board, and her calf Sassy was named the Grand Champion Heifer Calf in the American Salers Junior Association's Junior National Show held Saturday.

"This is my second national show, but I have been showing cattle for about five years," she said. "One day I would like a small herd, about 20 head, of my own. If cows from your herd do well in national shows then their quality is pretty good and that's what I want to focus on — the quality of my herd."

The three-day event at the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds in Filer began on Thursday and drew showmen and Junior Association members from across the country, said association board member Lori Guthals, 21, of Missouri.

Activities are all geared toward teaching members more about the breed and helping them to network with other enthusiasts.

"As a member of the association, we are learning about the Saler breed, and most of us do it for the love of the animal," Guthals said. "This is a little smaller show than the one in Denver but we still had a pretty good turnout."

"Salers are favored over other breeds because of their calving ease (and) carcass cut ability."

The breed has origins in France but are making great strides in growth and is an influential part of the cattle industry.

"Salers are favored over other breeds because of their calving ease (and) carcass cut ability. They have more meat, and they are a handy breed. Salers don't need a lot of attention and take pretty good care of themselves," Guthals said.

Nine-year-old Tony Hunsaker, of Buhl, is also a Junior Association member and showed his yearling heifer, Sony.

Sony was named the Reserve Grand Champion Heifer Calf.

"I've been showing a couple of years and it's always a lot of fun," Hunsaker said.

Beating the heat ...

A swimmer plunges into Dierkes Lake on Saturday, as others lounge on the docks in the sweltering summer heat.

... or at least trying

By Matt Christensen
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Two air-conditioning units aren't enough to cool a house in Magic Valley this month.

At least not the home of Patrick and Stephanie Williams, who've blasted both their home air conditioners the past few days — thermostats set at 68 degrees.

The parents waded in Dierkes Lake Sunday afternoon with their 14-month-old daughter, Kaitline, seeking reprieve from a stuffy house and temperatures well-above average.

"We got here about 45 minutes ago and went straight for the water," Patrick said.

Dozens of others joined them in the cool lake on the 15th day in a row that daily highs were above 90 degrees. Magic Valley residents are vouching they'll endure the heat wave, and that means trips to chilly swimming holes, frosty ice-cream parlors and nippy movie theaters. Folks are doing what they can, said Patrick and Stephanie — and that includes hundreds of the air-conditionless who've sought comfort in cooler environments.

"We're probably selling more tickets than usual because of the heat," said Kaitlee Belleu, who worked the ticket counter over the weekend at the Orpheum Theatre downtown Twin Falls. "Yesterday especially, a lot of people were coming in just to beat the heat."

Uptown at Cold Stone Creamery, the line threatened to stretch out the door by mid-day. Folks said they were there just for the ice cream, not the air conditioning. It wasn't as hot Sunday as it was last week.

They're right. Highs Friday and Saturday hit 100 degrees. Sunday's high was predicted to hit 95 degrees.

Weather forecasters don't expect much relief anytime soon. Highs will be near 100 degrees again for the most of this week, according to the National Weather Service.

It's been a hot month. Idaho Power Co. set a record for energy consumption, wildfires fueled by ultra-dry grass ravaged south-central Idaho and temperatures hovered about 15 degrees higher than average.

Making things worse, there hasn't been any measurable precipitation in Twin Falls in July. Lawns are browning throughout town, and dry conditions in rural areas mean danger is high for more wildfires.

A silver lining: High temperatures mean higher sales at cooling businesses around town, including movie theaters.

As long as it's hot, "we'll probably stay busy," Belleu said.

Times-News staff writer Matt Christensen covers the environment. He welcomes comments at 735-3243 and at matt.christensen@lee.net.

Local libraries go high tech

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — It isn't your grandma's library any more.

At the College of Southern Idaho's library the card catalog has been replaced with an island of computer workstations. Paperbacks and bestsellers are giving way to downloadable audio books and DVDs.

Through the use of technology, students can search for a book title on a computer or access books and reference materials from the comfort of home. It's like going to the library without really having to go to the library.

As technology improves, the library is able to continually improve its services, said Stephanie Poppino, CSI reference librarian.

To do that, the library has amassed a large collection of material available online. The collection of various books and scholarly articles from psychology to law is perfect for students who need credible sources for research, as well as the Answer Express program, which gives students 24/7 live support to help them find the information they need, Poppino said.

"Students are swamped with information. A drawback to technology is anybody can publish anything online. A big part of what I do is help them judge which sources are credible," he said.

Even smaller libraries realize the need to be on the cutting edge of technology.

The trick, said Louise Nofziger, director of Children's Services for the Buhl Public Library, is to be able to balance a small operating budget.

"You have to stay up to speed or you are just going to be stuck behind forever," Nofziger said. "We have been extremely lucky to have gotten our computers through the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation," because we wouldn't have been able to afford them."

Technology has driven library professionals to be technologically savvy.

"We have a lot of people who come in to use the computer because so much business has to be done online anymore," said Library Director Cynthia Joppen. "A lot of those people don't know how to use a computer and we help them out."

Having computers at the library is helping draw in patrons that wouldn't otherwise come.

When the Sherburn Smith Memorial Wendell Public Library became a wireless hotspot last November, its patron numbers increased dramatically, said Director Jennifer Hamilton. In June of last year the library had 371 patrons. This year, 390 patrons visited the library. Computer use in June 2006 was at 154; this year the number reached 201.

"When I first started in 2005 we had just one computer and there were only about 14 computer uses that June," Hamilton said. "Right now we are getting our computer catalogue together. Our goal is to one day have the entire catalogue available online."

More of the library's patrons are requesting fewer print items, she said, and instead want downloadable audio books to listen to.

"I would say all in all, that by increasing our technology we are increasing the use of our facility," Hamilton said. "Like Wendell, the Twin Falls Public Library is trying to keep up with the demand of its visitors."

"I would say that a lot of people are coming in to use the computers, but once they get here they end up checking out books and other items," said Amy Mortensen, adult services supervisor. "We have broadband Internet but now patrons want wireless Internet. It's a never-ending cycle, but we do our best to keep up."

Ada graduated from Dawson County High School in 1937 and continued her education in Billings, Mont., at Eastern Montana Normal School. She taught at the Golden Valley School during the 1939-1940 school year.

Ada was active as a 4-H leader, Campfire leader, Cub Scout den mother and Boy Scout merit-badge assistant, and she was active in the women's group and the youth group of the Congregational Church.

In 1962, Ada moved to Portland, Ore., when Bob was transferred with Consolidated Freightways. While in Oregon, they were owners of the Playmate, a charter boat moored at Winchester Bay, Ore. She looked forward to being on the boat. Ada enjoyed looking for shells, and she participated in training to become captain of her own boat.

In 1971 they returned to Montana when Bob was transferred to Billings, Mont.

Upon Bob's retirement in 1982, Ada and Bob enjoyed fishing and camping and involvement in the Montana Old Time Fiddlers at South Park Senior Center in Billings, Mont. They traveled the state of Montana camping and attending fiddling jams. They were active in the Teamsters retirees group where Ada was famous for her ham and scalloped potatoes at the monthly potluck meetings. # Helping Hands Freedom Trail camp seeks help

Times-News

STANLEY — The organizers of the annual three-day Helping Hands Freedom Trail camp are looking for volunteers and donations for this year's camp, set for July 26-28.

The camp, about six miles west of Stanley at Elk Meadows, is meant for children and adults with special needs who may otherwise be unable to go camping on their own. The event began in the early 1990s and is now attracts as many as 100 campers with a support staff of nearly 200. Campers go on horseback and wagon rides, enjoy musical and other entertainment, and enjoy regular meals and evenings around the campfire.

This year's camp will also feature a talent show, karaoke and a dance, among other events.

"This is an opportunity for youngsters and adults alike, who could not otherwise participate in such activities, to enjoy the Idaho outdoors," said Harry Fitzgerald, one organizer of the event.

"The camp is put on" by Helping Hands Freedom Trails Inc., a nonprofit organization that owns the refrigerator semi-truck, special saddles, cooking equipment and other gear the camp uses. The group is looking for more wagons, gentle saddle horses and volunteers to help load horses, spot riders, cook and do other camp chores. Financial donations are also needed.

To help, contact Fitzgerald at (208) 673-6260, Lori Bird at (208) 436-4000 or Jeanne Miller at (208) 324-3022. Or, visit the group's Web site at www.hft.org. For campers, the camp costs $10 per person per day or $20 per person for three days as a group rate.

Crapo's bipartisan approach is smart for Idaho lands

Idaho Statesman, Boise

Sen. Mike Crapo has spent six years trying to bring together Idahoans from across the political spectrum, in hopes of passing an Owyhee wilderness bill.

By crossing party lines in the Senate, Crapo is showing he's serious about building the broad-based political coalition he needs to pass his bill.

From June 8 to 10, Crapo showed off the Canyonlands — and introduced his Owyhees coalition — to a powerful crowd, including staffers for Majority Leader Harry Reid, D-Nev., Energy and Natural Resources Committee Chairman Jeff Bingaman, D-N.M., and Idaho senior Sen. Larry Craig.

Now, Crapo's staff is working with Bingaman and Craig staff on language. Reid is "adding the notion that we should work together," Crapo told the Statesman editorial board Friday. Crapo isn't making guarantees, but he hopes to get a hearing in Bingaman's committee this fall.

"We are really making good progress in an area where, you know, it could have been just a dead end," Crapo said.

When the Congress switched from Republican to Democratic control last fall, Crapo's Owyhees bill looked doomed. It appeared that Idahoans' courageous effort at compromise would go for naught.

Credit Crapo for keeping the project alive, on behalf of the cowboys, conservationists and county commissioners who cut the deal. After all, the bill's collaborative approach should be one of its strongest selling points. As Westerners, Reid and Bingaman ought to know how hard it is to get locals to agree to protect 517,000 acres of wilderness and 384 miles of free-flowing wild and scenic rivers, while providing about $15 million in cash and federal lands to 15 ranching families. We expect the senators to take a close look at the final product, as we will, but we hope they respect the hard work and hard negotiations behind the deal's framework.

It's also encouraging to see Craig involved. Craig has been noncommittal about two Idaho wilderness bills, the Owyhees bill and Rep. Mike Simpson's Boulder-White Clouds legislation. Crapo needs Craig's support, just like he needs key Senate Democrats on his side.

Crapo could use across-the-board support from Idaho political leadership — so Rep. Bill Sali's nonchalant attitude is disappointing. A Sali aide went along on the Crapo tour last month, but Sali didn't seem to know that until the topic came up in a Statesman editorial board meeting. Out of respect for Crapo, Sali wants to study the bill further before taking a position. Sali spokesman Wayne Hoffman said later. That's reasonable, but Sali should be much more actively engaged in a public lands issue affecting his congressional district.

Under the Senate's filibuster rules, it takes a 60-person supermajority to move any bill. Crapo's wilderness bill needs bipartisan support all along — and wisely, he's pushing for yes votes from Democrats who control the bill's fate.

Their view:
The Idaho Statesman said that Idaho Sen. Mike Crapo's alliance with key Senate Democrats just might persuade Congress to approve an Owyhee wilderness bill.

Prison crowding could get worse

We've all seen Idaho grow over the past few years. More cars on our roads, more kids in our schools. But our state is growing in a way most people haven't noticed. That's because it's happening behind thick walls surrounded by razor wire. Idaho's prison population is booming, and if we don't do something about it now, we'll either be paying higher taxes or living in less safe neighborhoods. Maybe both.

By this Thanksgiving, the Idaho Department of Correction will pass the 20,000 mark. We'll have a population about the size of Eagle, Moscow or Post Falls incarcerated or under the supervision of an IDOC probation and parole officer. One out of every 36 men in the state will be under the department's jurisdiction. These figures put us in the top 10. We have the seventh-highest inmate growth rate in the nation. And if we don't do something about it, the internationally respected, South Carolina-based correctional consulting firm Carter Goble Lee predicts Idaho taxpayers will need to come up with an extra $1 billion just to build enough prison space and infrastructure to incarcerate 5,560 more offenders.

The answer is not to turn soft on crime. Nor should we lower our prison standards. Lacking up even more people in facilities that already exceed capacity will turn our prisons into graduate schools for criminals and result in even more angry, hardened offenders on our streets. I believe the answer is to make Idaho's justice system work as a system.

In addition to serving as director of the Idaho Department of Correction, I have the privilege of chairing a commission which is charged with evaluating every facet of the justice system. The panel is called the Idaho Criminal Justice Commission. It includes judges, sheriffs, educators, citizens and representatives from other sister agencies. We're working with experts from Boise State University and the University of Idaho to come up with hard data that shows where Idaho's criminal justice system is falling short. Our goal is to develop research-based options for possible policy adjustments while keeping Idaho safe.

READER'S COMMENT
Brent D. Reinke

We already know we can't build our way out of this crisis. There's just not enough money. IDOC's population has grown at a rate of 6.5 percent a year for the past 10 years, giving corrections an insatiable appetite for taxpayer dollars. We must find alternatives to incarceration. We must reach people in the early stages of their criminal careers before they become felons.

Still, Idaho's overcrowding challenges are very significant, and there's no way to get around the fact that we need more prisons. The Idaho Board of Correction has directed IDOC to bring a proposal to the board's September meeting on developing Idaho's next private prison.

There are no quick fixes. But in the months and years to come you'll see the Idaho Criminal Justice Commission and the Idaho Department of Correction working to set the table for the Idaho Board of Correction, Gov. Otter and the Legislature. We'll be trying to give policymakers the options they need to avert this crisis. We must have the courage to evaluate our current practices and make decisions on how we want our criminal justice system to look and act in the next decade.

Considering what's at stake — our families and our financial future — it behooves us to be forward thinking and take urgent action.

Brent D. Reinke is the Idaho Department of Correction director.

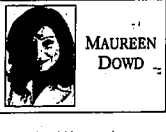

Bush: 'How I look on my mistakes'

There's not much lately that we like to import from China.

Certainly not the yummy steamed buns stuffed with shredded cardboard soaked in a caustic agent used to make soap. Or the tasty toothpaste laced with an antifreeze ingredient. Or the scrumptious seafood with a chemical kick. Or those pet foods with kibbles and bits of poison.

But there is one thing made in China we could use: mea culpa's of high officials.

Zheng Xiaoyu, a top regulator who helped create China's Food and Drug Administration, accepted $850,000 in bribes from drug companies and became enmeshed in the mistakes that flooded the market with dangerous drugs. Before he was executed Tuesday, he wrote a short confession titled "How I Look on My Mistakes."

MAUREEN DOWD

It is time for the lethally inept duo running the country to do some painstaking self-examination and confession. Just as the Communist Party helped the late Zeng compose his thoughts, I volunteer to ghost-write our leaders' self-scrutiny:

"How I Look on My Mistakes," by George W. Bush

The people trusted me with an important position. I didn't live up to expectations. I let Dick superize the executive branch and cast Democrats as winners and traitors. Why did I not suspect that Dick might be power-hungry when he appointed himself vice president? Why did I let him take over my presidency and fill it up with warmongers? I was so afraid to be called a wimp, as my father once was, I allowed Dick and Rummy to turn me into a wimp. I should never have allowed Dick to conspire with energy lobbyists and steer contracts to Halliburton. A tip-off should have been when Dick kept giving himself all the same powers that I had. Or when he outed that pretty lady spy.

If only I had kept my promise to go after the thugs who attacked us on 9/11, because now I've made Osama and al-Qaida stronger. I know my false claims about al-Qaida ties with Iraq led to Iraq's being tied down by al-Qaida. I see now that my bungled war on terror has created more terror, empowered Iran and made America less secure. Oh, yeah, and I'm sorry I broke the military.

I stained the family honor when I ignored the elders of the Iraq Study Group. I should not have worried that I would be seen as kowtowing to my dad's friends. The Oval Office is not the right place for a renegade ambassador.

I should not have picked that idiot Brownie, and I should have trusted the god of anyone besides that goof-off Chernoff to keep the nation safe. And what was I thinking when I said Harriet Myers should be a Supreme Court justice? That was loony. I'm sorry I made the surgeon general mention my name three times on every page of his speeches. That was childish. How could I have let Dick bring in his best friend, Rummy, my dad's old nemesis? Dummy Rummy let Osama escape at Toru Bora, messed up the Iraq occupation and aborted a mission to wipe out top al-Qaida leaders because he was protecting Musharraf, who was protecting my ass.

Even though I promised to get rid of dictators who helped terrorists, I ended up embracing a Pakistani dictator who helps terrorists. I'm embarrassed that the Iraqi parliament is taking a month-long vacation in the middle of my surge. Could I have set a bad example when I rode my bike in Crawford while New Orleans drowned?

I'm sorry I kept pretending Iraq will get better if we stay longer. It wasn't very nice of me to push the surge when I knew it couldn't work. I just wanted to dump the defeat on my successor. I wish Hillary the best of luck.

I'll had let the gym long enough to read about Algeria or even one of E. Lawrence's seven Pillars of Wisdom, than I might have not gotten bogged down in Iraq and let North Korea, China and Russia slide.

Being the Decider is so confusing. I regret stealing the presidency and wish I could give it back.

Camas County just giving itself away

It's the Camas County Good Ship Lollipop. Wrecked aboard. Things are cooking in Camas County from Camas roots to tossed salmon at the Seattle Pike Place Market; 20,000 newly rezoned areas in Camas County are being licked and lopped up like candy.

- Minimal red tape,
- weak rules and regulations,
- weaker-yet leadership,
- dubious administrative procedures,
- and a populus that doesn't know it's being screwed by massive land sales speculation and greedy profiteers. And that's today.

Who knows what the future holds? For sure, things are not what they appear to be. May 31, 2007, from Camas County was sent to the applicant of a residential subdivision next to Idaho's famous Centennial Farms. Our county official admitted to the applicant that Camas County's newly rezoned ordinances would allow him new freedoms: "It would be to your benefit to re-submit your subdivision now... I

Don't Let External Events Keep You from Investing

If you look for reasons not to invest right now, you could find them — global unrest, high gas prices and so on. Yet, if you wait until "things settle down" before investing, you'll have difficulty achieving your financial goals, because there will always be some external events that could keep you out of the market — if you let them. But the smartest investors look beyond today's headlines — and when tomorrow arrives, they are often rewarded for their patience and perseverance.
Want proof? Look at every major event of the past century that could have given investors the jitters, such as assassinations, wars and political crises. You will find that after just a few years — and in some cases, a few months — the stock market not only gained back the ground it initially lost, but moved to new heights.

For a dramatic illustration of this pattern, consider the aftermath of the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11, 2001. Immediately following this event, the stock market closed for several days. When it reopened, the Dow Jones Industrial Average immediately fell 684 points. By Sept. 24, the Dow was off 13.3 percent. Its worst weekly percentage loss in 61 years. For 2001, the Dow lost 7.1 percent, closing the year at 10,021. But if you fast-forward five years to 2006, the Dow had recoupled its losses several times over, closing the year at 12,463 — a 24 percent gain since the 2001 close.

In short, while it is true that past performance is no guarantee of future results, history has shown that the stock market has been resilient enough to overcome even the most cataclysmic of events. So don't head to the investment "sidelines" in reaction to troubling news. You may need to change your investment strategy in response to some events — but, by and large, they should be events related specifically to your individual situation or your existing investments. Consider the following scenarios:

- You move closer to retirement. During much of your working years, you're trying to build financial resources for retirement. Consequently, you'll need to invest a sizable amount of your portfolio in growth-oriented vehicles, such as stocks. As you move closer to retirement, and even during retirement, you'll still need some exposure to stocks, because you'll need their growth potential to keep ahead of inflation. However, you may want to work with your financial advisor to rebalance your portfolio to provide more income-producing opportunities, which may come from bonds, certificates of deposit or even dividend-paying stocks.
- You see a change in your existing investments. Many people sell some of their investments due to short-term price fluctuations. This is generally not a good idea, because long-term performance is what counts. However, if you notice other changes in your holdings, it may be time to make some moves. For example, if you own stock in a company whose management or business objectives have changed, or whose products or services no longer seem competitive, you may be better off by selling your shares and moving on to new opportunities.

You may find other reasons associated with your life or your portfolio to make changes — but don't be swayed by the events of the day. If you invest wisely, and keep on investing, the future can be bright.

Questions:
(1) True or False — The Dow Jones Industrial Average recouped its September 11th, 2001 losses and closed at a new high for 2006. (2) True or False — Heading to the investment "sidelines" when there is troubling news is always a smart move. Answers to last week's questions: (1) True (2) False.

PAKISTAN

Suicide bomber targets police recruits, kills 26

PESHAWAR — A suicide bomber blew himself up at a police recruitment center close to Pakistan's volatile tribal region Sunday, killing at least 26 people, injuring nearly 60 others and bringing the death toll in weekend attacks in the frontier zone to more than 70.

The surge in violence comes on the heels of last week's government storming of a radical mosque in the capital, Islamabad, a clash that left more than 100 people dead and raised the specter of a full-blown war between Islamic militants and the government of President Pervez Musharraf.

Adding to the likelihood of a prolonged period of strife, militants in North Waziristan, one of the tribal areas, announced Sunday that they were annulling a 10-month-old cease-fire accord with the government. That deal had already been in tatters, and had been widely criticized since its inception. But the insurgents' decision to scrap it indicated they wanted no impediment to an all-out fight with government forces.

The attack on the recruitment center occurred in Dera Ismail Khan, which is adjacent to the South Waziristan tribal region, also a militant stronghold. The police are in the midst of a recruiting drive, and witnesses said the center was packed with job applicants taking written examinations and having medical checkups.

The powerful explosion left the recruiting center's main reception area littered with charred corpses. About half the dead were police officers and the remainder new recruits, authorities said.

IRAQ

Aide says Iraqi leader's remarks misunderstood

BAGHDAD — Iraq's prime minister was misunderstood when he said the Americans could leave "any time they want," an aide said Sunday, as politicians moved to end a pair of boycotts that are holding up work on crucial political reforms sought by Washington.

In Baghdad, a car bomb hit a central square in a Shiite neighborhood, killing 10 people and wounding 25. Police said 22 bullet-riddled bodies were found across the capital Sunday, apparent victims of sectarian death squads.

The U.S. military said an American soldier from the 13th Sustainment Command was killed Saturday when a bomb exploded near his supply convoy near Baghdad.

Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki told reporters Saturday that the Iraqi army and police were capable of maintaining security when American troops leave.

"We say in full confidence that we are able, God willing, to take the responsibility completely in running the security file if the international forces withdraw at any time they want," al-Maliki said.

Those comments appeared to undercut President Bush's contention that the 155,000 U.S. troops must remain in Iraq because the Iraqis are not capable of providing for their own security.

On Sunday, al-Maliki's adviser Yassin Majid told The Associated Press that the prime minister meant that efforts to bolster Iraq's security forces would continue "side-by-side with the withdrawal."

Majid urged the United States to continue building up Iraqi forces so they would be ready whenever the White House orders a troop withdrawal.

ISRAEL

New president promises to pursue peace dream

JERUSALEM — Elder statesman Shimon Peres took office as Israel's ninth president Sunday, pledging to devote his seven-year term in the ceremonial post to his lifelong dream of Middle East peace.

Taking his oath of office before parliament, Peres, 83, said Israel must make peace with the Palestinians and Arab countries through measures small and large, including cooperatively digging a canal and lakes in the desert between Israel and Jordan.

"We must encourage peace here at home, with our neighbors, in the region," he said. The swearing-in capped a six-decade political career that has included international acclaim and a Nobel Peace Prize for efforts to create peace in the region. But Peres also suffered a string of embarrassing electoral defeats at home, where he was perceived by many as an unrealistic dreamer.

Peres has long been among the most dovish members of the Israeli leadership. He said in a half-hour interview with The Associated Press before his swearing-in that despite the constraints of his new job, he would not halt his efforts for peace with the Palestinians. He said that would require Israel to withdraw from significant pieces of territory captured in the 1967 Mideast War — a position still opposed by large parts of the Israeli public.

Fatah Palestinians accept clemency offer

JERUSALEM — Scores of battle-hardened Palestinians signed pledges to renounce violence against Israel and turned in their weapons Sunday, accepting the Israeli government's first collective offer of clemency in 14 years for gunmen listed as wanted terrorists. Israeli officials said the offer went out selectively, to 178 Fatah militiamen, in the expectation that they would join the regular Palestinian security forces and turn full attention to dismantling the rival Hamas movement, the Jewish state's intractable enemy.

By days end, Palestinian officials said they believed that all those on the clemency list had agreed to terms of the deal, which also aims to bolster a moderate Palestinian government in the West Bank and help advance peace talks between its leader and Israel.

They have deactivated themselves as terrorists, said Miri Eisen, a spokeswoman for Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Olmert. They are handing over their guns and, as part of a new security relationship, Israel will not pursue them any more."

SOUTH KOREA

North says it could go beyond reactor shutdown

SEOUL — North Korea said Sunday it is ready to permanently disable the nuclear reactor it just turned off if the United States lifts economic sanctions on the impoverished nation and strikes it from a list of terrorism sponsors.

Kim Myong Gil, minister at the North's United Nations mission in New York, said the country had shut down its only operating nuclear reactor after the arrival of promised fuel aid over the weekend. U.S. and South Korea officials said they were confident the North had halted operations at the Yongbyon reactor. Officials from the U.N.'s nuclear watchdog, the International Atomic Energy Agency, said they could not confirm the shutdown. Kim said his government would only disclose the full extent of the country's nuclear program and disable the reactor if Washington takes action "in parallel."

"We will discuss about the economic sanctions lifting and removing of the terrorism list. All those things should be discussed and resolved," Kim told the Associated Press.

Jones, Lopez hot on hot night at MVS

By Linda Brittain
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — Steve Jones and TJ Woodhall fought to the bitter end, but it was Jones who ended up capturing his eighth main event win in the Pepsi Premier Feature Division race at Magic Valley Speedway Saturday night. He crossed the finish line narrowly ahead of runner-up Woodhall.

Other main event winners on the hot mid-July night were Louis Lopez in the Grand Nationals division, Jason Todd for the Magic Valley Pipe Thunder Stocks and Lane Albright in the Manker's Landscaping Teen Bee race.

Feature Division driver Jones began the 50-lap main event mid-pack but was trapped in traffic behind the cars of Harold Wartluft and Mike Greco as they battled side-by-side for the lead for much of the race.

But Jones, as well as the No. 99 car of Woodhall — who had patiently worked his way through the pack — were ready to make their move as the laps wound down to the checked flag. At lap 44, Jones made his way past Greco. A caution at lap 48 set up a green-white checkered finish — which Jones and Woodhall quickly took advantage of, passing Wartluft on the restart and creating a battle of their own for the win. It was Jones' No. 3 however, that was lit up at the top of the scoreboard

With two laps remaining in the main event race, Pepsi Premier Division driver Steve Jones (No. 3) leads the field to the checkered flag at Magic Valley Speedway Saturday night.

A hopeful sign hangs from the upper deck as the St. Louis Cardinals play the Philadelphia Phillies in Philadelphia Sunday. The Phillies were trying to avoid their 10,000th franchise loss.

Major futility

Phillies become first team to lose 10,000th game

By Dan Geisler
Associated Press writer

PHILADELPHIA — It was the kind of game Phillies fans had seen thousands of times before.

Now, make it 10,000 times.

Bad starting pitching, brutal relief and hardly any hitting, Oh, and lots of booing.

Loss No. 10,000 came Sunday night when Albert Pujols hit two of the St. Louis Cardinals' six homers in a 10-2 rout of Philadelphia.

By the ninth inning, the boos turned to cheers as fans in the sellout crowd of 44,872 thumbed their noses at the dubious feat, standing and applauding. One held up a sign that read: "10,000 N Proud" as NL MVP Ryan Howard struck out to end the game.

From Connie Mack Stadium to the Vet and Citizens Bank Park, and at ballparks all over, the Phillies have cemented their place as the losingest team in professional sports. The franchise, born in 1883 as the Philadelphia Quakers and later called the Blue Jays in the mid-1940s, fell to 8,810-10,000.

Not even those lovable losers, the Chicago Cubs, come close to that sort of futility. Next on the losing list are the Braves, with 9,681 defeats. And it took them stints in three cities (Boston, Milwaukee, Atlanta) to reach that total.

The Phillies avoided the inevitable milestone for three games, but the Cardinals — the team that caught them 43 years ago for the NL pennant in one of the biggest collapses in baseball history — beat Philadelphia one more time.

Earlier, a banner hung from the upper deck that read "10,000 is not in the Cards." Turns out, it was on this night.

So the franchise that won only one World Series championship (1909) in 125 years, has 14 seasons of 100-plus losses, and once lost 23 straight games, now has the ugliest number of them all in a city way too familiar with losing.

After combining for 23 runs and 37 hits in the first two games of the series, the Phillies were held in check by Adam Wainwright (8-7). He allowed six hits over seven scoreless innings against the highest-scoring team in the National League.

Philadelphia, with a 46-45 record this year, fell five games behind the NL East-leading New York Mets. And for those counting, it was the 58th time the Phillies have lost 10-2, the Elias Sports Bureau said.

These Phillies had long grown tired of answering questions about 10,000 and most fans seemed rather detached from the number. After all, what's one more loss from a team responsible for countless more than 10,000 broken hearts?

"It's just another one as far as I'm concerned," said 81-year-old fan Ty Ayars, of Swedesboro, N.J. "They need pitching and until they get good pitching, they're not going to win a World Series any time soon."

Fans don't have to be old enough to remember the 1950 "Whiz Kids" to have suffered. Take fan Andrew Haines, 25, of Pittman, N.J., who still can't shake the image of Phillies closer Mitch Williams allowing the game-ending homer to Joe Carter that won the 1993 World Series for the Toronto Blue Jays.

"It's hard to be a Phillies fan," said Haines, wearing a Phillies cap. "They're the butt of a lot of baseball jokes, and having 10,000 losses isn't helping any."

The Phillies blew their chances against Wainwright to push back 10,000 until their seven-game West Coast road trip when even the die-hards would have trouble staying awake to watch it.

Windy City breakthrough

Stewart breaks winless streak at Chicagoland

By Chris Jenkins
Associated Press writer

JOLIET, Ill. — Tony Stewart finally broke through for his first victory of the season, holding off Matt Kenseth on several late-race restarts Sunday to win the NASCAR Nextel Cup Series race at Chicagoland Speedway.

Stewart broke a 20-race winless streak dating to last season thanks in part to a hard crash by contender Jimmie Johnson, who was running second behind Stewart with 45 laps left when his tire went flat.

Johnson walked away from the crash into the wall without any serious injuries beyond a sore elbow, but it left his car mangled and ruined his chance at a victory.

The accident jumbled pit strategies for the race leaders, most of whom only needed a splash of fuel to make it to the end when they pitted with 40 laps left.

After a quick pit stop, Stewart came out of the pits with the lead, ahead of Kenseth, Kurt Busch and Kevin Harvick. Kenseth pulled side-by-side to challenge Stewart on the restart.

Tony Stewart celebrates with his crew members in victory lane after winning the NASCAR Nextel Series USG Sheetrock 400 auto race at the Chicagoland Speedway, Sunday, in Joliet, Ill.

But Stewart held him off until another caution flag came out for a crash by J.J. Yeley 20 laps later.

Kenseth was glued to Stewart's back bumper when the race restarted with 18 laps to go — and Joe

Nemechek crashed two laps later, forcing Stewart to fend off the field to get another late restart. But Stewart squirmed away on the final restart with 12 laps to go, and Kenseth was able to mount another challenge in the closing laps.

Kenseth held off a charge from teammate Carl Edwards to finish second. Edwards finished third, followed by Kevin Harvick and pole-sitter Casey Menzies.

What was shaping up as a good day for Dale Earnhardt Jr. quickly fell apart in the final stages of the race. Dale Earnhardt Jr. was running third with 58 laps to go when he fell off the pace with an apparent power steering failure — remarking over his in-car radio how "funny" it was that he couldn't really steer his car.

Teammate Martin Truex Jr., who also had been running in the top 10, pulled off the track with engine problems three laps later and rolled back into the garage.

Earnhardt stayed on the track, but dropped out of the top 10 and finished 19th.

Sunday's victory broke a 20-race winless streak for Stewart, whose last victory came Nov. 5, 2006, at Texas Motor Speedway.

Stewart did win two non-points-paying events leading up to the season-opening Daytona 500 this year, and certainly has had his chances to win races this year at Atlanta, Bristol, Phoenix and Charlotte.

Meanwhile, Hendrick Motorsports' dominance in the first half of the season seems to be fading slightly. Hendrick drivers Johnson, Jeff Gordon, Kyle Busch and Casey Menzies won 10 of the first 14 races. But Hendrick has been shut out of victory lane for the past five races.

TOUR DE FRANCE Americans lagging behind so far

By Jimmy Kaszon
Associated Press writer

TIGNES, France — No more Lance. No more Landis. And their American successors are off to a lackluster start this year, jeopardizing an eight-year winning streak by U.S. riders at the Tour de France.

Denmark's Michael Rasmussen won the eighth Tour stage Sunday to grab the overall leader's yellow jersey that was won by Tour champion Lance Armstrong from 1999-05 and Floyd Landis last year.

Sunday's 102.5-mile trek from Le Grand-Bornand to Tignes was the second of three Alpine stages, and many contenders just want to stay within striking distance of the leader.

Levi Leipheimer is shaping up as the biggest American threat in a competitive field. The Discovery Channel team leader placed sixth in the 2005 Tour, ninth in 2004 and 13th last year.

Many riders expect the final shakeout in the three-week race to take shape in three tough stages in the Pyrenees mountains at the start of the third week and a time-trial a day before the July 29 finish in Paris.

"Levi's been planning to have his best form for the Pyrenees," Discovery spokesman PJ Iabac said. "Today, he said he stayed with the group he needed to."

After eight stages in 2006, three Americans — Landis, David Zabriskie and George Hincapie — were within 2½ minutes of the lead. At the same time a year earlier, five of the top 14 in the standings were U.S. riders.

NFL's online video policies debated

By Rachel Cohen
Associated Press writer

The satiric video posted on the Houston Chronicle's Web site tries to answer the question of how long — or short — is 45 seconds.

One reporter hovers nearby wielding a stopwatch as another poses a question to the Texans quarterback Matt Schaub. Before Schaub can answer, the timer calls out, "And we're done."

The two reporters dart away, leaving a puzzled Schaub to shrug his shoulders at the camera.

The scene poses fun at the NFL's policy limiting media organizations to 45 seconds of online video per day of team personnel shot on club property. The abrupt Schaub interview is one of several in the clip that combined aren't supposed to exceed 45 seconds.

Before last season, the NFL didn't have a policy governing online video for the simple reason that there wasn't anything to address. But as technologies evolve — along with the desires and expectations of fans — sports leagues and media organizations can disagree on appropriate uses.

"We have to walk a fine line," NFL spokesman Greg Aiello said. "We have to balance access to news coverage while also protecting our key business assets. We have to draw the line at what's new and what's video programming."

In the past, a clear line existed between print and television. Newspapers wrote as much as they wanted. The NFL governed what kinds of footage TV stations could show through contracts for broadcast rights.

Online video blurs that line.

"For newspapers, it's just a continuation of what we do in print," said Jim Jenks, the executive sports editor of The Philadelphia Inquirer. As past president of the Associated Press Sports Editors, Jenks met with NFL officials last fall to discuss the online video policy.

Mourning coming back for final season

By Tim Reynolds Associated Press writer MIAMI — Alonzo Mourning is coming back, one more time. Ending nearly three months of suspense about his future, the Miami Heat center said Sunday night at his annual Zo's Summer Groove charity game that he'll play again next season — a choice he kept secret to the end...

"It will definitely be my last year," Mourning said. "I will be coming back," Mourning said. This was the third straight summer Mourning considered retirement before choosing to keep playing. Next season will be his 15th in the NBA...

Mourning averaged 8.6 points last season for the Heat, and his 5.4 blocks per 48 minutes led the NBA by a wide margin. He started more than half of Miami's games last season while Shaquille O'Neal recovered from knee surgery, and the Heat clearly wanted him back — especially since his $2.8 million salary for next season makes the seven-time All-Star a bargain.

ORDINANCE NO. 197

AN ORDINANCE OF THE COUNTY OF TWIN FALLS, STATE OF IDAHO, ESTABLISHING A COUNTY WIDE TREE ASSESSMENT, PLANTING AND EDUCATION PROGRAM.

WHEREAS, the Twin Falls County Commissioners are aware that trees provide many necessary, useful and appealing qualities to a community heretofore called the Community Forest; and WHEREAS, the Twin Falls County Commissioners recognize that a Twin Falls County has grown and continues to grow outside city boundaries, and that old and new residential developments are dealing or will deal with future Community Forest issues; and WHEREAS, the Twin Falls County Commissioners further find that though there are Highway District and Power Company regulations concerning trees, there is lacking a committee and ordinance to inform and educate existing or new Twin Falls residents with regard to the Community Forest; and WHEREAS, the Twin Falls County Commissioners wish to foster collaboration with other agencies regarding the Community Forest;

NOW THEREFORE, BE IT ORDAINED by the Board of Commissioners for Twin Falls County Idaho, that Chapter 3, be added to Title 2 of the Twin Falls County Code as follows:

CHAPTER 3 COUNTY TREE REGULATIONS

2-3-1. Title: This ordinance shall be known as the Twin Falls County Tree Ordinance.
2-3-2. Authority: This Ordinance is adopted pursuant to the authority offered by Article 12, Section 2, of the Constitution of the State of Idaho and by Title 13, Chapters 6, 7, and 8 of the Idaho Code.
2-3-3. Justification: This Ordinance shall apply to all property in Twin Falls County located outside the designated boundaries of those communities with Tree City USA status, including Twin Falls, Kimberly, Buhl and Filer, but will not apply to land held under Federal Trust, State Trust, Historical Sites nor Indian owned land. As other city tree ordinances are approved within Twin Falls County, local authority and jurisdiction will take precedence within those cities.

2-3-4. Advisory Board:
A. The Board of County Commissioners will approve a volunteer citizen advisory committee, to serve at the will of the Commissioners. This Tree Advisory Board will consist of a minimum of five (5) persons having the following requirements:
1. A representative from the Pest Control Industry.
2. A representative from the Nursery and/or Landscaping Industry.
3. A representative from the east, west and north Twin Falls County.
4. A persons interested or experienced in horticulture or arboriculture will be preferred.
5. A representative of a civic group located in the County.

B. In addition to the Tree Advisory Board, input from the Twin Falls City Tree Commission, Master Gardeners and OSU Horticulture department is recommended.
C. Term: Initially appointed representatives will be placed on 2, 3, and 4 year terms. After the initial terms, each representative will then be eligible for another three (3) year appointment. When terms end, each new representative will be appointed for a period of three (3) years and may be re-appointed for an additional three (3) year period by the Twin Falls County Commissioners. All members serve at the pleasure of the Board of Twin Falls County Commissioners and may be removed by a majority vote of that body.
D. Duties:
1. To advise the County Commissioners on developing and maintaining a county-wide Community Forestry Program.
2. Develop a Community Forest Master Plan for Twin Falls County.
3. To educate and promote proper tree planting, care and pruning practices.
4. Create or collaborate on informational brochures to educate the public on appropriate community trees and their benefits.
5. Represent the county in distributing tree information and speaking before the public or the commissions of other counties.
6. Recruit volunteers for planting projects and promote Arbor Day activities throughout the county.
7. To hold regular meetings as required by the elected Chairman of the Tree Advisory Board.
8. To aid and advise cities within the county in obtaining and maintaining Tree City USA status.
9. Work in collaboration with other administrative agencies, including but not limited to, soil conservation districts, highway districts and public utilities.

E. The Director of Parks and Waterways of Twin Falls County shall serve as the liaison with the preparation, revision and implementation of the County Tree Ordinance and Community Forestry Master Plan.
2-3-5. New Development. New developments requiring platting, or any request for a change in zoning, are encouraged to be evaluated for existing and future trees and their impact to the proposed development. The Tree Advisory Board will be allowed to review all preliminary plans coming before the Parks and Waterways Department for comment. The Tree Advisory Committee or designees may visit the site to examine issues of tree removal, tree retention, water management and new tree plantings. The Twin Falls County Tree Board will develop minimum standards for the Community Forest based on International Society of Arboriculture ANSI300 Standards, which takes into account local soil and water issues for tree planting within the Community Forest Master Plan.
2-3-6. County Parks and County Property: The County Parks and all other county property with growing trees will be kept to the same minimum standards for tree care referenced the International Society of Arboriculture ANSI300 standards in Section 7 of this chapter. The Twin Falls County Commissioners will promote the education of a certified arborist to implement proper tree care programs and make recommendations for all county and Tree Board issues.
2-3-7. Tree Care, Encasements and Line Clearance: The Twin Falls County Tree Board promotes the application of all approved International Society of Arboriculture ANSI300 tree care practices, unless such practices are superseded by the needs of the Highway Districts or Idaho Power Company. Standards for tree selections and planting distances off of road easements refer to the area Highway District Regulations and literature. Standards for tree selections and minimum line clearance overhead power lines refer to Idaho Power Company Policy and literature.

2-3-8. Sites with Historic Trees: The Board will develop criteria to determine and distribute information on Trees of Significance or Historical Trees. The Board requests information on the location of Historic Trees scheduled for removal, pruning or areas construction prior to such action within the Right of Way area, by either the home owner, Idaho Power or the Highway Districts. The Board also requests the opportunity to send a representative to the site for the purposes of inquiring about the action, gain knowledge concerning the needs of the public or agency requirements and documenting the consequences to the tree(s). This will be used to build a database concerning Trees of Significance to add to the Community Forest Master Plan and emphasize local issues in future literature produced by the County Tree Board.
2-3-9. Arbor Day: In Idaho, the last Friday in April has been designated as Arbor Day. The County Board will, through grants, fundraise from local sources, and County Parks assistance, select a date, purchase trees, elect a site or location in the County, and host an Arbor Day event. The site will be selected through three initial criteria: (1) a city that does not yet have Tree City USA status, (2) a newly installed County park facility or trail, or (3) an area within the community where damage either accident or vandalism has left it devoid of trees. The Board of Commissioners for Twin Falls County will officially proclaim and observe this selected day as Twin Falls County Arbor Day.
2-3-10. Current Tree Issues: This Board will create or sponsor literature detailing appropriate and inappropriate trees for the entire county or local areas within the county. Since tree problems are often based on situational conditions and may change as the environment or the Community Forest changes, the literature will be updated at least yearly, and open to interpretation.

2-3-11. Amendments: Under the authority of the County Commissioners of Twin Falls County the County Tree Board reserves the right to alter and amend any and all portions to the Twin Falls County Tree Ordinance and future Community Forest Master Plans. All appropriate and legal steps will be followed for any such changes as pursuant to Idaho Law and Twin Falls County Codes.
2-3-12. Effective Date: This ordinance shall take effect and be in force from and after passage, approval and publication required by law.
DATED this 16 day of June, 2007

8 things you should know about unwanted hair

By Steve Crump
Times-News writer

1. It's normal. Unibrows? Ear hair? Nose hair? A mustache on a woman? Hairy moles? They're hardwired into humans.

"It's genetic, to a great extent, and usually determined by the level of testosterone," said Dr. Chris Scholes, a Twin Falls dermatologist. "Unwanted hair in the nose, ears, on the upper lip and chin with women, in a mole — those typically aren't part of a disease process."

Humans and their evolutionary predecessors were largely covered with hair up until about 150,000 years ago — the blink of an eye in the history of mammals. That's far too short a period for nature to sort out all the glitches.

"Age is a factor too," Scholes said. "You're more likely to have ear hair at 45 than you are at 25."

2. Nothing beats tweezers. A human hair isn't just a stalk of fur; it's a whole system, with roots and a sophisticated blood-supply network. So the more of the system you remove, the greater the chance that it won't come back.

"Plucking is effective," Scholes said. "It usually isn't people's first choice, but it works."

3. Laser hair-removal can be effective, but ... Not always, not always forever and not everywhere.

"(Body) cavities, like the nose and the ears, aren't good candidates for laser removal," Scholes said.

The method works by emitting a beam of light on the skin, which is then absorbed by the hair follicle. The follicle is killed and the hair no longer grows.

Only about 75 percent of the hair is actually removed. Laser treatment can provide effective, permanent hair removal if done correctly, but it's expensive — $200 or so to have an upper lip treated, between $400 and $800 per session to have a man's back hair removed — and repeat visits are necessary.

4. Depilatories have their place. But perhaps not on your head, where most types of unwanted hair show up. These creams, lotions, gels and sprays chemically dissolve hair. The key word here is "chemically."

"If you want to take hair off your legs, depilatories can be quite effective," Scholes said.

5. Shaving doesn't make unwanted hair grow back thicker. "That's an absolute, incontrovertible myth," Scholes said. "But if you shave it, the hair will come back."

6. Electrolysis works, if you have the time. This protracted but permanent hair-removal procedure involves tiny sterile needles or wires that are inserted into the hair follicle. An electric current kills the hair root and the loosened hair is removed with tweezers. Since each hair is treated individually, this method could take months or even a year depending on the size of the area being treated.

7. Wax on, wax off. This temporary — depending on how thick and fast-growing your hair is, results last about four to five weeks — technique removes hair by applying warm wax to the skin, and pulling it off, taking the hair out at the root.

And yes, it hurts. But it can be done at home or in a salon and is considered ideal for sensitive areas such as the bikini and face. Suggesting an ancient hair-removal method similar to waxing, uses a sugar-based product that's water soluble. There's also cold waxing, which uses pre-waxed strips, somewhat similar to tape.

Salon prices vary, but you can find bikini waxes for $30; chin, lip or brows for about $12; and leg wax (from the knee down) $30. Home waxing kits, available at drugstores and beauty supply shops, start at around $7.

8. Consider the scissors. "For unwanted hair in the nose ... or in the ears, trimming is probably the best approach," Scholes said. "It grows back, but you can manage it."

What a waist: the rise of belly-covering jeans

The Washington Post

Tired of pulling on your belly-baring, ankle-skimming skinny jeans each morning (and peeling them off after a steamy summer night)? Designers anticipated the cries for help, and the ubiquitous matchstick legs have been replaced by the recent rise of the high-rise. Wide-legged, high-waisted pants, that is.

The ubiquitous belly-baring skinny jeans have been replaced by the recent rise of the high-rise. From left: 80s Amendment "collar-it" jeans ($218), with Kenneth Jay Lane turtle belt ($130); Remy Hall paper-sack trousers ($246); Dittus "The Classic" ($165), with Streets Ahead patent belt ($85); Amelia pants by Karen Walker ($289), with embossed lizard belt ($245).

Silll smug — but only at the hips — they offer a bit of nostalgia during this inescapable "Summer of Love" revival.

Daniella Clarke, the designer behind the extreme low-slung styles of Frankie B., recently relaunched Dittos, a denim line popular in the early '70s, and is offering the signature waist-wrapping flares in a rainbow of candy colors.

What separates these from the dowdy "mom jeans" so reviled for their sometime appearances at Sunday morning soccer practice? Instead of camouflaging the body, these jeans accentuate it. While the rise does hover around the bellybutton, it's not topped with elastic. Plus, the glockite fit and curve-hugging stitching elongates the leg and makes for a fine rear view.

And it's not just jeans. For office-appropriate wide-leg wear, there's Remy Hall's cuffed trousers with a simple sack-waist. Or pants in lightweight cotton by New Zealander Karen Walker — one of the first designers to embrace the natural waist a few seasons back.

Kids' rough-and-tumble game poses threat to tiny grandma

DEAR ABBY: My friend "Nora" was very shaken by something that happened to her recently. While her six grandchildren were visiting, the oldest boy (age 13) shouted, "Let's take her down!" and all six of the children attacked her, knocking her to the ground, then groping and hitting her.

Nora is 73 and only 5 foot 2. Her oldest grandchild is 5 foot 7 and weighs 140 pounds. All of the grandchildren are large for their ages. The youngest, who is 7, weighs well over 70 pounds.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

obviously never taught by their parents the importance of behaving respectfully around adults, particularly elderly adults who can be fragile.

They could have caused their grandmother serious harm if the behavior went unpunished is extremely disturbing because if parents don't bother to teach their children right from wrong, their misbehavior could escalate.

While the incident you described might be considered "fun and games" when it occurs between children, when it happens with an adult it becomes assault and battery. In Nora's case, it could be considered elder abuse.

There are two ways to protect oneself from "delinquents" of any age, who act like this. The first is to avoid people who do not understand boundaries because their lack of judgment could sooner or later cause great bodily harm. The second is to notify the police and seek immediate medical attention.

DEAR ABBY: How do you tell people you just don't like them—and don't want to be friends anymore?

My husband, daughter and I are "friends" with a family we became acquainted with when our daughter was in first grade. That was three years ago.

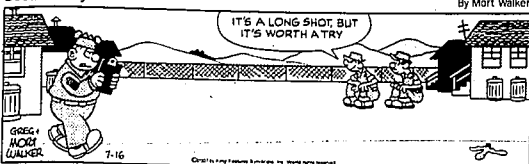

This family is annoying and loud, and we can't seem to distance ourselves from them. They constantly call for playdates and dinner dates. The kids get along well, and my husband and I do not like this couple, and prefer not to spend our social time with them. How do we distance ourselves without offending them?

—STUCK IN SAN ANTONIO

DEAR STUCK: Since when did an invitation to get together become a command performance? You are under no obligation to accept every invitation that is offered to you. The kindest way to extricate yourselves would be to simply not be available every time they want to get together. Cultivate other friendships for yourselves and your daughter.

Missing macaw reunited with owner

CLIFFSIDE PARK, N.J. (AP) — A pet macaw that flew away from its owners and went missing last weekend turned up alive and well in a most unlikely place — 80 miles away at the Jersey shore.

Robert Daly, 25, said he was driving near his home Thursday night when he spotted the large blue and gold bird, flying quickly by the side of the road.

He called police, who captured the bird and put it into a box. Officers who had seen news reports about the bird's disappearance notified the owner, Rosalie O'Hara, and the two were reunited Friday.

"I knew it was Sophie," O'Hara told The Record in Bergen County. "She did some little shakes and gestures, and I knew it was her."

Sophie had vanished last Saturday after O'Hara's husband lost his grip on the bird while the couple were out for a walk.

The couple had been looking frantically since then and posted a $5,000 reward.

O'Hara said she is mystified how the bird, which she had raised indoors from a chick, was able to survive so long in the wild, and travel 80 miles south from its home in Cliffside Park to the Jersey shore town of Seaside Park.

"I never thought I'd get her, I swear," O'Hara said.

O'Hara said she had contacted Daly to let him know he was entitled to the reward.

"Now would be a great time to go to the beach, an' it won't be crowded!"

Apple retains its touch for design

By Jura Koncius
The Washington Post

"Apple makes revolution accessible to everybody," says Paula Antonelli, curator of architecture and design at New York's Museum of Modern Art, hailing the glossy black iPhone as yet another milestone in product design. Like the iconic Apple products that preceded it, the glass-face iPhone, with its rounded-edge, slim silver frame and multi-touch display screen combining phone, iPod and internet access, is likely to influence the design of more-mundane household appliances such as refrigerators and microwave ovens. "The interface on this phone is not only easy to use and have fun with, it's universally understandable," Antonelli says.

The candy-colored translucent of iMac computers, beginning with Bond Blue in 1998, set off a wave of color in irons, vacuum cleaners and sewing machines. Three years later, the clean lines and click-wheel control panel of the iPod started showing up in ovens and ranges.

Apple simply sets the bar higher for everybody, Antonelli says. "It's been decades since we have seen a company with such design power."

LADY BIRD JOHNSON
A first lady's natural beauty

By Robin Chran
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The fashion industry loves a good clothes hanger, someone who wears a dress well and makes a point of being interested in the ebb and flow of styles. So it makes sense that Seventh Avenue has always had special affection for Jacqueline Kennedy and Nancy Reagan. Both women, during their years in the White House, knew how to make a statement with a frock in the days before designers had so many interchangeable starlets on whom they could hang their wares.

The impact a first lady could have on their business was significant. And even today, memories of Jacke Kennedy continue to inspire designers whenever they are trying to express a particularly American aesthetic of elegant informality.

Lady Bird Johnson was not a favorite within the fashion industry, but she should have been. Not because of her style but for her philosophy. She had an appreciation for beauty and its potential to instill pride in people, to comfort them and to bring them joy. Her focus was not on the rarefied world of museums and symphonies, but beauty in a far more democratic form: nature. The fashion industry should have championed someone who saw grace, allure and power in places that others took for granted.

With her death, much has been said about her dogged determination to see tulips and daffodils brighten the Washington landscape and to coax wildflowers to bloom along the country's highways. Notice that she was entranced by wildflowers, not painstakingly cultivated antique roses or finicky orchids. She marveled at the kinds of flowers that often fade into the background.

Designers should stand a little taller each time a tour of Washington intersection turns Technicolor in the spring. Lady

Bird made beauty — the kind that is simple, familiar and accessible — important.

She was in the unenviable position of having to follow Kennedy as first lady, a woman 17 years her junior and one who had a solid reputation as a fashion icon. Not much has been said about Johnson's attire or about her sense of style at least not much that has been particularly enthusiastic. Arnold Scarsi dressed first ladies from Mamie Eisenhower to Laura Bush, but Johnson barely receives a full sentence in "Scarsi: A Cut Above," one of those splashy cocktail-table books about the designer's work in which much attention is paid to his glamorous clients. In her obituary in Women's Wear Daily, Johnson's White House style is described as stately and it is noted that she trimmed down to a size 10, learned to use flattering makeup, but never managed to keep her stockings from sagging at the ankles.

But the fashion industry would do well to thank her for the way she looked at beauty. She might not have cut as stylishly iconic a figure as Kennedy or be remembered for the kind of James Galanos glamour that Reagan cultivated. But in a more general way, Johnson acknowledged that beauty comes in many forms and that everyone should have access to it. The fashion industry could not have asked for a better endorsement than that.

The industry might also try to do more to advance Lady Bird's belief in inclusiveness by broadening its range of sizes, celebrating ethnic diversity and not forsaking women for girls. Instead of focusing on the hothouse flowers of Hollywood, the industry should try to beautify the populace. It's just as noble to strive for pretty clothes that any woman can wear as it is to aspire to creating a single exquisite gown that only Cameron Diaz can fit into. It's not surprising that the fashion industry didn't see the link between Lady Bird's "beautification" project and its own goals. Fashion designers often see what they do as more rarefied than it is — more orchid than daisy. For them, success is frequently measured by which celebrity is wearing the clothes, how often and how well. In that regard, Lady Bird was of little help to the industry. But for fashion to thrive, it needs an environment in which simple pleasures are valued. Lady Bird Johnson cultivated such a climate. That was her gift to Seventh Avenue.
