Craig to stay in office 'for now'

Senator waiting on judge's ruling, which may not happen until next month

By Charles Babington Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Like Washington's lingering warm weather, Sen. Larry Craig is defying indications he would be gone by October.

withdrawing a guilty plea, overturning his previous statements of intent to resign by Sunday.

Craig said he will stay in office "for now," but people close to him said he will remain until the judge rules.

Craig, who originally had planned to seek a fourth term next year, pleaded guilty in August to disorderly conduct following a June 11 sting operation in a men's room at the Minneapolis airport.

Craig's comments Wednesday were greeted with chilly silence from Senate Republican leaders who have made clear they wish he would step down and let Idaho's GOP governor name a replacement.

McCConnell, R-Ky., told reporters he had nothing to add to previous statements in which he said he thought Craig made the right decision on Sept. 1, when he announced his intention to resign by the month's end.

"Today was a major step in the legal effort to clear my name," Craig said in a statement Wednesday. "The court has not issued a ruling on my motion to withdraw my guilty plea. For now, I will continue my work in the U.S. Senate for Idaho."

He later told reporters in the Capitol he had nothing to add.

Craig did not attend Wednesday's hearing in Minneapolis before Porter. His lawyer, Billy Martin of Washington, acknowledged the difficulty of getting the guilty plea withdrawn, saying it is "near impossible, and it should be."

Still, Martin's team pursued a dual strategy, arguing that Craig's conduct was not

Big Sky hearing closes

Case likely headed to court no matter county's ruling

HEROME — The fate of the controversial Big Sky Limited Partnership feedlot proposal is now in the hands of Jerome County commissioners.

After two days of often emotional testimony, commissioners must now decide whether to allow Don McFarland to build a controversial 13,000-animal feedlot in the county's eastern end.

The majority of county residents who testified Wednesday said the feedlot will jeopardize their health and threaten the integrity of the nearby Minidoka Internment National Monument.

On the Web: Check out moggievalley.com to see video of the Big Sky hearing.

The Big Sky hearing followed nearly a year of wrangling in Jerome County over confined-animal feeding operations. Concern sparked largely by McFarland's proposal led to a 6-month moratorium on CAFOs. The county's planning and zoning boards are in the process of reworking CAFO ordinances.

Filer opts to stop flow of Twin Falls students

By Nata Poppino Times-News writer

FILER — The problem Filer School District Superintendent John Graham said, is the district has two issues that appear to be one.

Administrators are hoping a $14.9 million bond levy scheduled for an Oct. 11 vote will relieve overcrowding at the district's three schools. But that same overcrowding has spurred another change: At a Sept. 19 meeting, the Filer School Board voted to close Filer Elementary to out-of-district students.

The closure and policies limiting Filer's middle and high schools to their current levels — out-of-district students can only make up 15 percent of the student population — mean the district, popular with Twin Falls families, is essentially closed to any new students from out of the area. Students now in eighth grade will be allowed to graduate from Filer High School, and Graham expects the district to completely shut itself off in the near future.

While that produced some complaints, Graham said, it was a necessary step for the district to handle an exploding population with nowhere to go. The superintendent said he knew of as many as 750 to 1,000 plots located to be developed for homes in his district, and the current 1,400 students just about fill the schools as things stand.

"We know the potential growth is huge out there," Graham said.

And Twin Falls definitely contributes to that growth. About 164 students — 12 percent of the district — come from outside Filer's district. As many as 95 percent of those are from Twin, Graham said. While he said the most common reason he hears for cross-districting is the small-school atmosphere Filer provides, that's not the only reason families cross the border.

"His grades went down, everything after he didn't get to play sports at Twin Falls High School," she said.

Kimberly was also one of the options Christy Woodman looked at for her son, Justin Prescott. A graduate of the Twin Falls system, Woodman said she thought that district was just too large and enrolled her son in

Hearing

And public health concerns have led to a joint county state study on odors and diseases related to dairies.

Those same concerns were the focus of much of the testimony given at the two-day hearings. Residents also complained that the feedlot, to be built less than two miles from a site where Japanese-Americans were imprisoned during World War II, would degrade the monument's historical significance.

But most of the back-and-forth at Wednesday's meeting involved procedural matters and interpretation of law. Members of the public scolded commissioners for allowing just four minutes of testimony to neighbors who'd live near the feedlot and refusing to accept audio tapes and other documents into the record.

At one point, Alma Hassel, executive director for environmental group Idaho Concerned Area Residents for the Environment, was led from the courtroom by a bailiff after refusing to yield the floor to commissioner Chairman Charlie Howell. She was not arrested, but did not return to the courtroom.

Closing arguments for the opposition were led by Jim Stewart, a member of the county's planning board whose father lives adjacent to the proposed feedlot. He said the civil rights of several residents were violated because commissioners declined to postpone the hearing after learning attorney Rich Carlson could not be present to represent them.

Stewart urged commissioners to decline the permit for the feedlot based on a county ordinance that says it's unlawful for property owners to cause undue burden on other property owners. The feedlot, Stewart said, would surely bother neighbors.

He also said the application for the permit was not complete until, after the county had passed the moratorium. Stewart said the application was missing a letter from the Valley School District, and that an incomplete application required commissioners to deny the permit.

The attorney representing McFarland, John Lohspeich, said commissioners must grant the permit because the application meets all conditions spelled out in county ordinances. Under the law, he said, commissioners could not consider the emotional testimony.

In a 5th District Court case in Gooding County earlier this year, Judge John K. Butler reversed a Gooding County Commission decision to issue a CAFO permit, because the applicant met the requirements of the ordinance, Butler said. In his ruling, he scolded commissioners for making an "arbitrary and capricious" decision based on emotional testimony — similar to the testimony given in the McFarland case.

But because laws in Jerome County differ from those in Gooding, it's unclear how a judge might rule in this case.

Jerome County commissioners will deliberate the application at 3:30 p.m. on Oct. 9, when they could make a final decision. The meeting is open to the public, but no more testimony will be allowed.

Meanwhile, they'll review the nearly 500-page case file — perhaps in vain. Most close to the case expect the losing party to file suit, and then a judge would decide.

Filer in fifth grade.

"I worked a small school district because I thought it would be a better district," she said.

But when she tried to enroll a younger son a few years later, Filer officials rejected him because they thought he needed special education schooling and they didn't have the room, she said. The decision was an early sign of the district's problems, and Woodman said she can understand the board's more-recent decision.

"I think it's about time that they finally cut this district off," she said.

Special-needs students from other districts have been referred for some time because the district is over the state percentage and doesn't have the space for more special-ed rooms. Graham said. Already, some special-education classrooms have been carved out of whatever space was available. Sandy Dahlin, a special-ed para-educator, has spent the last three years in a small room carved out of the library.

"It works OK, but it's in a pinch," she said, adding that there's definitely no more room to expand in the cramped space.

A two-way street

Cross-districting isn't unique to Filer. Even a large district like Twin Falls has 117 out-of-district students in it. Superintendent Wiley Dobbs said. The difference is that those students only make up 1.6 percent of an estimated total enrollment of more than 7,400 students in the district this year. Nearly half of the 117 out-of-district students come from Kimberly's ZIP code.

Students do have to be vetted before they're accepted, and both Twin and Filer have policies they follow to keep students disciplined in one district from running to another to escape their problems. Graham had heard of Filer's reputation as a destination for students who are elsewants, but said he didn't know where that came from. He said people never tell him that when they apply to come over.

"What their true reason, I can't decipher," he said. "Our principals do check to make sure they're not bringing students in who will be detrimental to the education process."

Phasing Twin Falls students out of Filer shouldn't be too hard to absorb, Dobbs said. The majority of such students attend Filer's middle and high schools, and the new Canyon Ridge High School should open right around the time Filer's new policies start making a difference.

The district has been aware of cross-districting for some time, he said. Initiatives such as smaller learning communities at Twin Falls High School, as well as the new high school, are meant to address the reasons students leave. That includes the limited slots on sports teams.

"Parents want those opportunities for their kids, and I certainly don't blame them," he said.

The challenge will now be providing them for students with one less option. Graham said the Filer board will revisit cross-districting this spring. Whether the Oct. 11 bond passes or not, he doesn't see the policy continuing.

"I am very confident that if this bond passes, the flood gates ... they will not be reopened."

criminal and that the state couldn't handle the plea properly.

They said the plea didn't have no signature or other indication a judge had accepted it.

Porter listened intently to Martin, peppering him with questions. Martin said Craig denies intentionally touching or talking to the arresting officer. "You should have either touching, or words," Martin said.

Prosecutor Christopher Henz said the timing of Craig's decision to withdraw claims was political.

Craig "sat and was able to think about it a thousand miles away at his apartment on the Potomac," Henz said at the hearing. "He called me about it and could have called others if he needed advice."

Minnesota law allows guilty pleas to be withdrawn if a "manifest injustice" is shown. The term is not defined in law, leaving it to judges to decide.

Dead

Bass also received a hospital bill from Gritman Medical Center in Moscow for nearly $5,000.

"It definitely freaked me out a little," Bass said, owner of a graphic design company called Zen Designs.

The man who died was Jeremy Charles Bass, 26, of Baker City, Ore. The late Bass had wrecked a four-wheeler along the Latah Trail near Troy and died at Gritman Medical Center of massive injuries.

The trouble began at the hospital, said Bass, who has since enlisted legal help from Lewiston attorney Robert Kwate.

Jeremy Lee Bass had been treated at Gritman Medical Center years before and was already in the hospital's system. So, when Jeremy Charles Bass arrived, the information became muddled.

The funeral home got some incorrect information from the hospital and the death certificate ended up with the correct name and hometown, but contained the wrong date of birth.

An amendment to correct the error had another small error as well.

The incident has been tough on Bass's wife, Amy, who is pregnant.

When news of the late Bass's death hit the newspaper, the couple's friends thought the worst. People were shocked when Amy Bass went to work at her waitress job in Lewiston the next day. Many avoided her, not knowing what to say.

She fielded telephone calls from friends offering condolences. She responded by posting a declaration of her husband's continued existence on the social networking Web site MySpace.com.

They worry about the baby and wonder whether they'll have trouble getting Medicare to help care for it. They need a line of credit to fix their drafty Moscow home before the baby arrives. He worries about being arrested for an invalid driver's license.

In Kwate's Lewiston office, Bass pondered the death certificate, a worried man.

"It just comes at a bad time," Bass said.

"When is it a good time to be declared dead?" Kwate asked.

"Preferably when it happens," Amy Bass replied.

If necessary, Kwate says he will ask the courts to step in. "Courts can declare people dead," Kwate said, noting cases where people have vanished. "If they can declare people dead, they can declare people alive."

U.S. rebukes Ahmadinejad, readies new sanctions

By Matthew Lee
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — The Bush administration moved Wednesday to cement international support for new U.N. sanctions on Iran over its nuclear programs and rebuked Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad for declaring the issue "closed."

A day after a defiant Ahmadinejad told the United Nations General Assembly that his country would defy further U.N. Security Council efforts to impose additional penalties, Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice and her top aides sought to marshal consensus on the move.

"I'm really sorry to tell President Ahmadinejad that the case is not closed," said Nicholas Burns, the State Department's No. 3 diplomat.

He was to meet with senior diplomats from the five permanent Security Council members and Germany to craft elements of a new sanctions resolution.

"We're going to keep going," Burns told reporters. "If Mr. Ahmadinejad thinks somehow that he has been given a pass, he is mistaken about that."

Burns' talks over dinner with diplomats from Russia, China, Britain, France and Germany will set the stage for a second meeting on Thursday and the one between Rice and the group's other foreign ministers on Friday when the resolution is expected to be further defined.

However, he said it is unlikely that the text of a new resolution will be agreed to this week.

As Burns spoke, Rice was assuring Iran's wary neighbors in the Persian Gulf of U.S. backing to improve their defenses against a "hegemonic Iran" through proposed multibillion-dollar arms sales, a senior State Department official told reporters.

In a meeting with the foreign ministers of the six-member Gulf Cooperation Council — Bahrain, Kuwait, Oman, Qatar, Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates — along with Egypt and Jordan, Rice heard deep fears about Iranian attempts to dominate the region, the official said.

The official, speaking on condition of anonymity to discuss a private diplomatic exchange, said all eight countries told Rice that "they are not going to surrender to Iranian hegemony."

The Bush administration is in discussions with the Saudis and its other allies in the Gulf to prepare arms sales packages worth about $20 billion despite concern from some in Congress that they could destabilize the region and hurt Israeli security interests.

The senior State Department official said specific details of the proposed sales were not discussed on Wednesday but that Rice told the Gulf ministers they could count on solid U.S. support.

The United States accuses Iran of trying to develop nuclear weapons, something Tehran adamantly denies, and has been encouraged in recent months by stronger statements on the matter from Security Council members, notably France.

Iran is already subject to two U.N. sanctions resolutions as well as a growing number of financial penalties from individual nations but China and Russia have been reluctant to agree to a new U.N. resolution.

Among ideas being considered for the new resolution are widening existing financial sanctions on Iranian entities and possible diplomatic measures, officials said.

Study: Drug Thimerosal doesn't raise risk of neurological problems in kids

By Alicia Chang
Associated Press writer

LOS ANGELES — A mercury-based preservative once used in many vaccines does not raise the risk of neurological problems in children, concludes a large federal study that researchers say should reassure parents about the safety of shots their kids received a decade or more ago.

However, the study did not examine autism — the developmental disorder that some critics blame on vaccines. A separate study due out in a year will look at that issue, said scientists at the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, who led the latest analysis and published results in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine.

"They found no clear link between early exposure to the preservative thimerosal and problems with brain function and behavior in children age 7 to 10. The results are in line with past research that found no connection between vaccines and neurological problems or autism.

Thimerosal (pronounced thih-MEEHR-ul-oh-saw) has not been used in childhood vaccines since 2001, although it is still in some flu shots. The new findings apply to children immunized before then, or exposed to the preservative through shots their mothers received while pregnant. Thimerosal was put in vaccines to prevent contamination from bacteria.

Some doctors say the CDC study could reassure parents worried about the safety of vaccines.

"It's good news for families," said Dr. Michael Goldstein, vice president of the American Academy of Neurology who works in private practice in Salt Lake City. "There's no evidence that these vaccines have caused injury."

The study involved 1,047 children who were exposed to varying levels of thimerosal while in the womb or after birth in the 1990s. The children belonged to four health maintenance organizations that are part of a federal project to study the side effects of vaccines. Their mercury exposure was determined through medical and immunization records and interviews with parents.

Each child was tested for speech and language skills, motor coordination and intelligence. Parents, teachers and trained specialists also rated stuttering, attention span and tic disorders such as head shaking, eye blinking and neck jerking. A total of 42 neurological problems were analyzed.

On balance, researchers did not find a consistent pattern between increasing thimerosal exposure and the risk of these problems. However, they said one finding merited further study: Boys exposed to higher mercury levels seemed to have more tic problems — a link seen in previous research.

"The doses of mercury that children were exposed to because of immunization doesn't cause neuropsychological damage," said Dr. Bruce H. Cohen, a Cleveland Clinic pediatric neurology specialist who had no role in the study.

The CDC study was overseen by an independent panel of scientists and statisticians who oversaw its design, reviewed results and contributed to writing the report.

Federal judge rules provisions of Patriot Act unconstitutional

By William McCall
Associated Press writer

PORTLAND, Ore. — Two provisions of the USA Patriot Act are unconstitutional because they allow search warrants to be issued without a showing of probable cause, a federal judge ruled Wednesday.

U.S. District Judge Ann Aiken ruled that the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act, as amended by the Patriot Act, "now permits the executive branch of government to conduct surveillance and searches of American citizens without satisfying the probable cause requirements of the Fourth Amendment."

Portland attorney Brandon Mayfield sought the ruling in a lawsuit against the federal government after he was mistakenly linked by the FBI to the Madrid train bombings that killed 191 people in 2004.

The federal government apologized and settled part of the lawsuit for $2 million after admitting a fingerprint was misread.

But as part of the settlement, Mayfield retained the right to challenge parts of the Patriot Act, which greatly expanded the authority of law enforcers to investigate suspected acts of terrorism.

Mayfield claimed that secret searches of his house and office under the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act violated the Fourth Amendment's guarantee against unreasonable search and seizure. Aiken agreed with Mayfield, repeatedly criticizing the government.

"For over 200 years, this Nation has adhered to the rule of law — with unparalleled success." A shift to a Nation based on extra-constitutional authority is prohibited, as we will as ill-

Pentagon seeks $190 billion for Iraq war, showdown looms

By Anne Flaherty
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — President Bush and Congress are headed toward another showdown on war spending, this time sparring over nearly $190 billion the Pentagon says is needed to keep combat in Iraq afloat for another year.

Sen. Robert Byrd, chairman of the Appropriations Committee, vowed Wednesday not to "rubber stamp" the request and said it was time to put Bush's policies in check.

"We cannot create a democracy at the point of a gun," said Byrd, D-W.Va., whose speech during a Senate hearing on the spending request was interrupted several times by cheers of anti-war protesters.

Sending more guns does not change that reality," Byrd said.

The tough rhetoric was reminiscent of last spring, when Congress passed and Bush vetoed a bill funding the war through September but ordering troop withdrawals to begin by Oct. 1. Democrats still lack the two-thirds majority needed to override a presidential veto.

If approved, Congress would have appropriated more than $760 billion for the two wars, having already approved of $450 billion for Iraq and $127 billion for Afghanistan.

Testifying before Byrd's panel, Defense Secretary Robert Gates acknowledged that America's "difficult choices" on the war "will continue to be a source of friction within the Congress, between the Congress and the president and in the wider public debate."

But Gates said he hoped Congress would be the money that is needed by the troops.

"Under some of the most trying conditions, they have done far more than what was asked of them, and far more than what was expected," he said.

Gates asked Congress to add $42 billion to the $147 billion already requested for the military. The money would pay for the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan in the 2008 budget year, which begins Monday.

Gates said the extra money was necessary to buy vehicles that can protect troops against roadside bombs, refurbish equipment worn down by combat and consolidate U.S. bases in Iraq.

More specifically, the request includes another $11 billion for 7,000 Mine Resistant Ambush Protected vehicles. This is in addition to the 8,000 MRAP vehicles already planned for fielding.

Congress has not yet approved the money but was on track this week to pass a stopgap spending bill that would keep the war afloat for several more weeks. This gives Democrats divided on whether to cut off money for the war, time to figure out their next step.

Since Gen. David Petraeus, the U.S. commander in Iraq, testified this month, Republicans have said they are willing to give his strategy more time to work. GOP members have blocked Democratic bills ordering troops home.

On Wednesday, the Senate passed its first war-related bill in months: a nonbinding measure suggesting Baghdad limit the power of its federal government and give more control to Iraq's ethnically divided regions.

During the hearing, Democrats and Republicans alike asked Gates whether more could be done to hasten political progress.

"I think the message has been sent to the Iraqi government that our military presence is going to — has begun to — shrink in Iraq, and the expectation of the commander in the field is that it will continue to shrink," he said.

Myanmar security forces shoot at monks and other protesters, killing at least 1 person

YANGON, Myanmar (AP) — Myanmar security forces opened fire on Buddhist monks and other pro-democracy demonstrators Wednesday for the first time in a month of anti-government protests, killing at least one man and wounding others in chaotic confrontations across the country.

Dramatic images of the protests, many transmitted from the secretive Southeast Asian nation by dissidents using cell phones and the Internet, riveted world attention on the escalating faceoff between the military regime and its opponents.

Clouds of tear gas and smoke from fires hung over streets, and defiant protesters and even bystanders pelted police with bottles and rocks in some places. Onlookers helped monks escape arrest by bundling them into taxis and other vehicles and shouting "Go, go, go, run!"

The government said one man was killed when police opened fire during the ninth consecutive day of demonstrations, but dissidents countered news of up to eight deaths.

Some reports said the dead included monks, who are widely revered in Myanmar, and the emergence of such martyr figures could spark public anger against the regime and escalate the violence.

As the stiffest challenge to the generals in two decades, the crisis that began Aug. 19 with protests over a fuel price hike has drawn international pressure on the isolated regime, especially from its chief economic and diplomatic ally, China.

The United States and the European Union issued a joint statement deploring the assault on peaceful demonstrators and calling on the junta to open talks with democracy activists, including detained opposition leader Aung San Suu Kyi, a Nobel Peace laureate.

State Condoleezza Rice said. The U.N. Security Council met in private to be briefed on developments and issued a brief statement expressing concern about the violent response to demonstrations.

U.N. Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon, who was sending a special envoy to the region, urged the junta "to exercise utmost restraint toward the peaceful demonstrators taking place, as such action can only undermine the prospects for peace, prosperity and stability in Myanmar."

There was no sign the government had any intention of backing down, and monks said the violence would not deter them from pressing on with the protest.

What's going on in Burma is outrageous," Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice said.

Despite veto threat, House votes to expand children's insurance

By Charles Bahington
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The House voted Tuesday to expand health insurance for children, but the Democratic victory may prove short-lived because the margin was so small to override President Bush's promised veto.

Embarking on a health care debate likely to animate the 2008 elections, the House voted 265-159 to expand the State Children's Health Insurance Program, or SCHIP, by $35 billion over five years. Bush says he will veto the bill due to its cost, its reliance on a tobacco tax increase and its potential for replacing private insurance with government grants.

SCHIP is a state-federal program that provides coverage for 6.6 million children from families that live above the poverty level but have trouble affording private health insurance. The proposed expansion, backed by most governors and many health-advocacy groups, would add 4 million children to the rolls.

The bill drew support from 45 House Republicans, many of them moderates who do not want to be depicted as indifferent to low-income children's health needs when they seek re-election next year. But most Republicans, under pressure from the White House and party leaders, sided with Bush, a move that Democrats see as a political blunder.

It hardly matters that the expansion would be expensive or a step toward socialized health care, Rep. Charles W. Stenholm, D-N.Y., said during the House debate. When lawmakers go home, he said, "the question is, Were you with the kids or were you not?"

To overturn a presidential veto, both chambers of Congress must produce two-thirds majorities. The 159 House votes opposing the SCHIP bill should give Bush enough cushion to sustain his veto, as House leaders expect few members to switch positions. The Senate appears poised to pass the SCHIP expansion by a large margin later this week, but a Senate bid to override a veto would be pointless if the House override effort falls short.

Despite the expected veto, congressional Democrats welcomed the SCHIP debate as a way to open a second political front — in addition to Iraq — on which they feel Bush and his allies are out of step with voters. Rep. Rahm Emanuel, D-Ill., said the president willingly pours billions of dollars into "the war but resists a significant expansion of a health program for middle-income children."

"It's no surprise the president finds himself isolated," Emanuel said at a Democratic event that included a Maryland mother who relied on SCHIP coverage when two of her children were badly injured in a car wreck. Some Republicans agreed that the debate over a greater government role in health care will resonate far beyond Capitol Hill this week.

"This vote is huge for the next president, regardless of who it is," Rep. Jack Kingston, R-Ga., said in an interview during the floor debate. "I don't think anybody underestimates the philosophical importance."

House passes stopgap spending bill to avoid shutdown

By Andrew Taylor
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The House Wednesday passed a bill to keep the government running until mid-November, with both Democrats and Republicans determined to avoid a shutdown.

The bill, which passed 404-14, also provides funding to continue Pentagon operations in Iraq and Afghanistan. The stopgap funding bill is needed because the Oct. 1 start of the 2008 budget year is looming with none of the 12 spending bills funding government agencies and departments having been signed into law.

Senate Democrats have been slow to bring the 12 spending bills up for debate; neither have House-Senate negotiations started on the four bills that have passed both chambers. The House has passed all 12 and is frustrated by the Senate's dawdling pace.

The situation is reminiscent of last year, when Democrats lambasted Republicans for their poor performance in competing Congress' budget work. But the roles have been reversed.

"In the words of Yogi Berra: 'It's deja vu all over again,'" said Jerry Lewis of California, top Republican on the Appropriations Committee.

The Senate is expected to pass the stopgap measure by the end of the week for Bush to sign it into law.

The administration has taken a hard line on Democrats' attempts to add $23 billion for domestic programs to Bush's $933 billion request for the immediately required one-third of the federal budget funded by the yearly spending bills. Veto threats hang over nine of the 12 bills and Democrats are struggling for a strategy on how to deal with them.

Democrats say the increases are modest relative to the cost of the war in Iraq and Bush's increases to the defense budget.

"The president would have the country believe that we ... are pouring money into the domestic budget," said Appropriations Committee Chairman David Obey, D-Wis.

"I would suggest that resorting to a presidential-cut is highly small potatoes compared to the $200 billion he wants us to spend in Iraq."

WSU computer nerds hope to auction selves to sorority girls

PULLMAN, Wash. (AP) — Looking to recruit more women, and perhaps date some sorority girls, the largest computer club at Washington State University hopes to "hold a nerd auction."

The idea is to trade their computer skills to sorority girls in exchange for a makeover and, possibly, a date.

"You can buy a nerd and he'll fix your computer, help you with stats homework, or if you're really adventurous, take you to dinner," Ben Ford, president of the Linux Users Group, said on its Web site recently.

Ford acknowledged that some of the groups' 213 registered members may not be ready for the auction block.

"The problem is that we're all still nerds. Let's face it, guys. If anyone's going to bid on us, we'll need some spicing up," he wrote. "And who better to help with that than sorority girls who like nothing better than a makeover?"

This all began as an effort to recruit more women into computer science programs, the Moscow-Pullman Daily News reported Tuesday. A public relations class decided to help by studying the social dynamics of the Linux group, which focuses on the use of the computer operating system. The students interviewed Ford and some others and created an online survey of LUG members, evaluating how they heard about the club, how they perceived the group and their reasons for being active or inactive.

"Our conclusion was that they need to promote themselves better, then specific ideas were presented to them," said professor Atom Lee, who taught the public relations class. "They made suggestions to work with specific groups such as sororities. Sorority groups tend to have a very good social network."

Ford initially was skeptical. "When they said we should have a social with a sorority," he said. "I thought that was a joke."

Ford, who has an undergraduate degree in computer science and is pursuing a master's in business management, said the idea of the nerd auction came to him in the shower.

"Here's the current plan: We'll choose a handful of brave nerds to take one for the team," Ford wrote. "The girls get to have their way with them and we'll document each makeover."

"We'll make a snazzy video and show it over dinner. After the dinner, we'll auction off the now stately nerds," a hopeful Ford wrote.

The plan is to have the auction open to the general student population and co-sponsored by a sorority.

Ford has spoken to several sororities, but so far none has committed to the project, which he wants to do in October or November. A call to the Center for Fraternity and Sorority Life at WSU by The Associated Press was not immediately returned.

Professor Carl Hauser has talked with LUG members about trying to increase the number of women in computer science at WSU.

"In our computer science program as well as in programs across the country, the percentage of women is at an all-time low," Hauser said. "Nobody understands what this is all about."

Idaho revamps license plate production

BOISE (AP) — It's a move that could mean more residents get a GR8PLB, proclaiming their dedication as a GUNLIF, SERVIT or HISTRY buff. Those who were just a BRONC can become a real BRONCO now, and VANDAL fans will no longer have to drop a vowel.

The state is ditching its embossed license plates for digitally printed and completely flat license plates, allowing specialized plate owners to squeeze on an extra letter or number.

"The numbers will be slightly narrower and about the same height, so you'll have a chance to add one more digit," Idaho Transportation Department spokesman Mel Coulter said. "A specialty plate was limited to five characters and now you can have six."

The printing switch should save money, Coulter said, because thinner aluminum can be used and county offices won't be stuck storing pre-printed licenses. Instead, the plates will be printed as they are ordered, and the Idaho Department of Correction inmates that used to run the heavy embossing machines will run the distribution center, mailing the new plates directly to drivers as the orders come in.

The embossed versions will still be issued until the state uses up its existing stock, Coulter said. It's not clear just how long that will take, but it will likely depend on just which of Idaho's 60 specialized plates a driver chooses.

The specialized plates each promote a specific group or cause, and are available for a higher fee than the state's standard red, white and blue "Famous Potatoes" plate. The additional money generally goes to the organization sponsoring the plate.

Four new specialty plates were unveiled this week, Coulter said. The National Rifle Association plate raises money for the Highway Distribution Account. The Breast Cancer Education and Screening plate promotes Idaho community health centers and helps pay for cancer screening. The Idaho Elks Rehabilitation plate supports the Idaho Elks Rehabilitation Hospital. And the Idaho Historic Preservation plate raises money for the Idaho Historic Society.

More specialized plates are expected to be added to the pool in coming years, Coulter said, and the new printing process is expected to improve the look of the new designs.

"For the sponsors of specialized plates, once their design is approved they can be printed with much higher resolution, so you'll get much higher clarity," Coulter said.

Craig dishonors Idaho by waffling on resignation

Once upon a time there was TV detective named Lt. Columbo, a man who refused to leave the room.

Time after time, he'd head for the door, turn on his heels, and proclaim, "Just one more thing..."

Idahoans know all about that. Exactly one month into the Larry Craig melodrama, the senator said Wednesday that he'd be staying in the U.S. Senate "for now" instead of resigning by Sept. 30.

He's hoping, of course, that a Minnesota judge will allow him to withdraw his guilty plea for disorderly conduct for soliciting an undercover policeman in the Minneapolis airport.

"The court has not issued a ruling on my motion to withdraw my guilty plea," Craig said in a statement. "For now, I will continue my work in the United States Senate for Idaho."

The senator's power is gone, he's been stripped of his leadership positions on committees and his Republican colleagues will barely speak to him.

They desperately want him, and the baggage with which he's saddled the GOP to go away.

So do most Idahoans. We need a second senator in Washington, D.C., not a feather in a hat.

What's left of the state's clout on Capitol Hill continues to wane. Sen. Mike Crapo and Rep. Mike Simpson are still relatively junior members of Congress, and Rep. Bill Sali has marginalized himself with his outspoken conservative politics.

In the meantime, the Senate is debating President Bush's budget, the Iraq war, legislation to toughen fuel efficiency standards, major changes in higher education policy and the farm bill — issues that will affect every Idahoan.

On Sept. 1, Craig said it was his intention to resign by the end of the month, then briefly changed his mind a few days later. By waffling again, he's breaking faith with his constituents — not to mention his loyal staff, which is suspended in limbo.

Most Idahoans only want this nightmare to go away, which won't happen until Craig leaves.

At this point, the only purpose of the senator remaining in Washington is to salvage his own ego. Whether Craig is exonerated or not, his effectiveness is gone.

So if Craig is truly dedicated to serving Idaho, he'll resign now.

Our view:
The only purpose of Larry Craig remaining in the Senate is to salvage his own pride.
What do you think?

America made its own problems in Iran

We just can't stop being nice to Iran. First, we brought Iraq and hand it over to the Shiites, putting in a puppet who leans toward Iran and is aligned with the Shiite militias bankrolled by Iran. Then, as Peter Galbraith writes in The New York Review of Books, President Bush facilitates "the takeover of a large part of the country by an Iranian-backed militia," with the ironic twist that "there is now substantially more personal freedom in Iran than in Southern Iraq."

And on top of all that, we help build up the self-serving doofus Iranian president, a frontman with a Ph.D. In traffic management, into the sort of larger-than-life demon that the real powers in Iran — the mullahs — can love.

New York's hot blast of nastiness, jingoism and xenophobia toward its guest, Mahmoud Ahmadinejad, only served to pump him up for his domestic audience. Iranians felt that their president had tied everyone in knots, including the "Zionist Jews," as Iranian state television said.

The New York Times reports that Nelson Tezval, a former head of the Revolutionary Guards, was on TV criticizing the rude treatment his president received. "It is shocking that a country that claims to be civilized treats him that way."

(It also raised his profile on the evening news here. Katie Couric dryly tells people that the term members who to pronounce his name with the mnemonic "I'm a dinner jacket.")

After the Bay of Pigs, JFK and his advisers worried that American foreign policy would no longer seem intelligent. W. doesn't even try for an intelligent foreign policy. He wallows in a willfully ignorant foreign policy. And this week, his irrational ways were contagious.

The New York Daily News headline, "The Evil Has Landed," was one of the milder imprecations. Consider this reasoned analysis from Greg Gutfeld of Fox News: "So the foul-smelling fruitbat Ahmadinejad spoke at that crack-hospital known as Columbia University today."

MAUREEN DOWD

The heavy-handed, small-minded reaction that played into the hands of the slipper "I'm a dinner jacket" is not excused by Iran wishing the U.S. and Israel gone.

The Soviet Union's stated policy for 70 years was the total eradication of American capitalism and democracy — backed up during the Cold War with actual nuclear weapons. But while challenging the politics and ideology of the Evil Empire, Reagan understood he had to engage Mikhail Gorbachev, not ignore or insult him.

Reagan was able to help the Soviet Union — and world communism — to fall apart. All W. has managed to do is destroy the country he wanted to turn into a democracy and make Iran more powerful than it was before.

In a sad testimony to how bullied up things are in Iraq, Prime Minister Nouri Kamal al-Malki told the Council on Foreign Relations Monday that civil war has been averted in Iraq — not — and that Iranian intervention has "ceased to exist." Gen. David Petraeus just said that Iran was providing "lethal" support to Iraqi militias.

The president's irrelevant U.N. speech was a bad omen for the schoolyard name-calling of Lee Bollinger. Even some in the anti-Ahmadinejad audience gasped a bit as Columbia's president gave the meager introduction in the history of introductions — one that only managed to elevate the creep sitting on stage with his thugs. Once you've made the decision to invite a tyrannical leader, you can't undo it by belittling him in public. Universities are supposed to be places where you can debate and hear dissenting voices; it would have been far better just to hand the mike to the students and let it rip.

Given the repressive and confused stance of some of our Middle East allies on women and gays, isn't it insane to get into a war of ideas on homosexuality in the Muslim world?

But is the one who hardened the Iranian resolve to get a nuclear weapon with his policy of negotiating with countries like North Korea that have nukes and including countries that don't, like Iraq.

W. and his advisers always act shocked that Iran is meddling in Iraq. Why wouldn't Iran inflate itself at the expense of its former foe and current enemy?

Even after the Iranian hostage crisis, America never really tried to comprehend the tribal politics in Iraq — or Iraq — or bolster the Arab speakers in the intelligence community.

As Galbraith wrote, Iran's nuclear program is about prestige. Iranians want to be seen "as a populous, powerful, and responsible country that is heir to a great empire and home to a 2,500-year-old civilization. In Iranian eyes, the U.S. has behaved in a way that continually diminishes their country" — from U.S. involvement in the 1953 coup that reinstated the Shah to W.'s branding them as part of the "axis of evil."

Wouldn't sticks and carrots — cultural fluency, smart psychology and Reaganesque dialogue — be a better way to bring the Iranians around than sticks and stones?

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Resident announces city council candidacy

With the election date of Nov. 6 quickly approaching, I am proud to announce my candidacy for a third term on the Twin Falls City Council.

Having served on the Twin Falls Planning and Zoning Commission in 1998-99, I was elected to City Council beginning in 2000. My campaign slogan at that time was "Representing you and your vision for Twin Falls in the 21st Century." That has remained my goal as I work to represent our diversified population.

Twin Falls has indeed "been discovered." Others now know what we have known for some time — that the Magic Valley is a great place to live and recreate. During the past four years, we have experienced record residential growth. Retail and commercial business has increased, with more on the horizon. The city budget for 2007-08 is now at $40 million.

Along with progress and growth comes "growing pains." As a City Council representative to the Twin Falls Comprehensive Plan Update Steering Committee, the Transportation Master Plan Advisory Committee and the Urban Renewal Board working with citizens and city staff input, I continue to be mindful that we must plan to today with our future in the forefront of our decisions. I remain committed to downtown revitalization in support of the businesses and for the enjoyment of residents and shoppers.

I believe that I have served the citizens of Twin Falls well and that I remain qualified to continue serving on the City Council. I ask for your vote of confidence on Nov. 6. If you have questions, concerns or suggestions, I welcome your calls at 736-8135.

For voting and registration information, call the Twin Falls County Election office at 736-4004.

DOE keeping its promises on cleanup at INL

A significant progress continues on cleanup of legacy environmental challenges at the Idaho National Laboratory, there are two points I'd like to emphasize:

1. The U.S. Department of Energy is keeping its promises to Idahoans. In the last 20 years, DOE has spent $1.5 billion or ahead of schedule, 632 of 636 cleanup milestones under agreements with its regulators; the other four milestones were subsequently met or restructured as a result of changed conditions.

2. DOE, its contractors and its regulators are working together to make substantial progress in the three areas of most concern to Idahoans: removing and shipping targeted buried waste, closing underground waste storage tanks and shipping stored waste out of state.

Taken together, these actions constitute continued focus and progress in our commitment to safeguard the Snake River Plain Aquifer, which underlies much of the INL.

Let me expand on my second point.

Under its contract with DOE, our cleanup contractor, CWI, is actively engaged in digging up targeted wastes contaminated with radioactive elements and hazardous chemicals that were buried at the INL's Radioactive Waste Management Complex between 1954 and 1970. CWI is committed to excavate targeted waste from 2.8 acres of the burial ground and has excavated more than 2,200 containers of buried waste so far. This waste is being characterized, repackaged and shipped to the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant, a permanent repository in New Mexico.

In addition, since 1996, about 250,000 pounds of organic chemicals have been removed from the burial ground using vapor vacuum extraction units, brought to the surface and destroyed.

These are "latent actions," taken to address concerns that outline its recommendations for addressing the remainder of the buried waste. Once we incorporate comments from the state of Idaho and the Environmental Protection Agency, the proposed plan will be issued for public review and comment, later this year.

If you'd like more information on the studies that formed the basis for this proposed plan, visit CWI's Web site at <https://idahocleanup-project.com/>.

Meanwhile, the INL site's Advanced Mixed Waste Treatment Facility is the No. 1 shipper of stored transuranic waste (plutonium-contaminated waste that was received and stored at the Idaho site between 1970 and the late 1980s) to WIPP for final disposal. Idaho has shipped more than 18,000 cubic meters of transuranic waste to WIPP. There is now more waste stored at WIPP from Idaho than from all other DOE sites combined. All of the stored waste will be shipped to WIPP over the next several years.

Finally, CWI has also successfully cleaned and has completed 65 percent (to date) of the grouting of 11 underground tanks that were used to store radioactive liquid waste at the INL. About 900,000 gallons of liquid waste remain in three other tanks.

A waste treatment unit is under construction to process that waste, and the remaining tanks will be cleaned and grouted in time to meet another DOE commitment — to clean and close all the waste tanks by 2010.

The Department of Energy recognizes that keeping its cleanup commitments is the key to establishing trust for all our work at the INL site, including our cutting-edge nuclear energy research.

We invite you to visit the site to see our progress firsthand. If you're interested in a tour, call our site office number at (800) 708-2880.

GOP finds another way to shoot itself in the foot

WASHINGTON — The spectacle Tuesday of 151 House Republicans voting in lock step with the White House against expansion of the State Children's Health Insurance Program was one of the more remarkable sights of the year. Rarely do you see so many politicians putting their careers in jeopardy.

DAVID S. BRODER

Roughly 6.6 million youngsters a year. The money was distributed through the states, which were given considerable flexibility in designing their programs. The insurance came from private companies, at rates negotiated by the states.

Governors of both parties — 43 of them — have praised the program. And they endorsed the congressional decision to expand the coverage to an additional 4 million youngsters, at the cost of an additional $35 billion over the next five years. The bill would be financed by a 61-cent-a-pack increase in cigarette taxes.

If ever there was a crowd-pleaser of a bill, this is it. Literally hundreds of organizations — grass-roots groups ranging from AARP to United Way of America and the national YMCA — have called on Bush to sign the bill.

But Bush insists that SCHIP is "an incremental step toward the goal of government-wide health care for every American" — an even-quality he is determined to provide. Bush's adamant stand may be peculiar to him, but the willingness of Republican legislators to line up with him is more significant. Bush does not have to face the voters again, but these men and women will be on the ballot in just over a year — and their Democratic opponents will undoubtedly remind them of their votes.

Two of their smartest colleagues — Heather Wilson of New Mexico and Ray LaHood of Illinois — tried to steer them away from this political self-immolation, but had minimal success. The combined influence of White House and congressional leadership — and what I would have to call herd instinct — prevailed.

Rep. Pete Sessions, R-Texas, argued that "rather than taking the opportunity to cover the children that cannot obtain coverage through Medicaid or the private marketplace, this bill uses these children as pawns in their cynical attempt to make millions of Americans reliant on the government for their health care needs."

In his new book, former Federal Reserve Board Chairman Alan Greenspan wrote that his fellow Republicans deserved to lose their congressional majority in 2006 because they let spending run out of control and turned a blind eye to misbehavior by their own members. Now, those Republicans have given voters a fresh reason to question their priorities — or their common sense.

Saying no to immigration reform and measures to shorten the war in Iraq may be politically defensible, because there are substantial constituencies who question the wisdom of those bills — and who favor alternative policies.

But the Bush administration's arguments against SCHIP — the cost of the program and the financing — sound hollow at a time when billions more are being spent in Iraq with no end in sight. Bush's alternative — a change in the tax treatment of employer-financed health insurance — has some real appeal, but it is an idea he let languish for months after offering it last winter. And, in the judgment of his fellow Republicans on the Senate Finance Committee, Bush's split is also complex and controversial to be tied to the renewal of SCHIP.

This promised veto is a real poison pill for the GOP.

Same-old, same-old politics distressingly threadbare

As I listen to the presidential candidates speak and engage in what passes for debate these days, I appear to see, if not all of them are simply talking about improving the old government model, rather than boldly proclaiming a new one. Carmakers, if they want to sell cars, produce "new and improved" models, not remarks of previous ones. So why do politicians continue to rely on a Model A version of government when it's outmoded and unfit for modern life?

CAL THOMAS

Presidential candidates should speak about what has worked in the past and could work again. The candidates — at least the Republican ones, if they remember what Republicans are supposed to stand for — should be talking about freedom from dependency and a return to self-sufficiency. Government doesn't need to be reformed under the present system; it needs to be transformed under a new one.

Last week, a small group of fellow journalists and I had breakfast with former Speaker Newt Gingrich. Talk about a man who has learned from his mistakes! Gingrich now heads American Solutions for Winning the Future, an organization whose Website describes it as "a unique nonpartisan organization designed to rise above traditional gridlocked partisanship, to provide real, significant solutions to the most important issues facing our country." It is thrilling to sit and listen to his ideas that are not longer based on partisan posturing and strategies to win the next election, but on proposals that would work and benefit all Americans, regardless of party affiliation. His idea of a new American dialogue that focuses on evidence and data and sorts out what works and what fails, he says. "Then we need to migrate government policies and government bureaucracies away from failure and toward success." Gingrich calls government at all levels "Incompetent" and makes no distinction about which party is running it.

Who could argue with that? Only those with a vested interest in the status quo, lobbyists and polarizers, for example.

Is there anyone who is satisfied with the way large and ever-growing, bureaucratic, impersonal government works? No matter who's running it, government doesn't work precisely because of its aforementioned traits. It costs more and delivers less than ever before. It has created a dependency culture that prevents — not helps — some of the disadvantaged from achieving their dreams, if they have any after relying too much and for far too long on government. "The solutions we need are bigger than the current political process can create," says Gingrich. Who can credibly disagree? And if you do disagree, can you give an example of what major problems government is fixing? Social Security? Education? Health care?

"We need an educational dialogue before we have a political debate," he says. Yes, we do, but who will give it to us if the presidential candidates are about patching and mending the current system? How many people understand basic economics and the principles behind capitalism? Who understands the history of their own country and the ideas that founded and have sustained it through domestic and foreign challenges? Are there politicians who will lead us to what we need rather than indulge us in the silliness of what we want, like our obsession with O.J. Simpson and other members of the cult of the depraved?

The public wants real change, says Gingrich, but the politicians — perhaps fearful of organized groups that could turn the image of a saint into one of a deviant — won't give it to them. The desire for change is not the exclusive property of conservative, white Republicans. Gingrich cites polls that show the yearning for change extends across all racial, ethnic and political groups.

Gingrich is trying to reach $30 million in three weeks to see if he should run for president. Whether he does, or not, his ideas are worth considering. They are precisely what the country needs. Candidates should be willing to talk about them and the rest of us ought to pay attention. We might if we are presented with something that actually works instead of the same old snake oil, which never does.

Citizenship is not about what government can do for us, but what we can do for ourselves.

That is an old model that increasingly looks like a classic car. And it is far more attractive and road-tested than the current government junk, which is ready for the junk heap.

Broncos host Southern Miss in key early season test

By Todd Drusk
Associated Press writer

BOISE — Last season, Boise State broke through the wall of small-conference programs fighting for the glory and big money that comes with playing in the Bowl Championship Series.

Thursday night the Broncos host Southern Miss, a team with every hint of marching down the same path by season's end.

While still early, the matchup is big for both schools' postseason aspirations. The nationally televised game marks the first meeting between two upstarts that have dominated their respective conferences in recent years and feature two of the nation's best young tailbacks.

"It's a program that I think everyone is trying to emulate if you're not a BCS school," Jeff Bower, the Golden Eagles' head coach, said of Boise State. "They arguably might be the best football team ... we face this year. I think there's a lot of things that make the game attractive."

The Broncos (2-1) began the season in the AP Top 25, but dropped out after losing at Washington Sept. 8. Boise State bounced back by beating Wyoming, but have yet to reclaim a spot in the polls.

The Golden Eagles (2-1, 1-0 Conference USA) hung tough against Tennessee before the Volunteers pulled away late in a 39-19 loss on Sept. 8. Southern Miss responded the following week, beating East Carolina in the league opener.

Both teams will play their first game after a 12-day rest.

For Boise State coach Chris Petersen, the time off was spent more on fundamentals than scheming new tricks to keep the speedy Golden Eagles off balance.

"We tried to focus a lot of the time on ourselves," Petersen said. "There are so many things certainly early in the season that you need to get cleaned up and corrected."

It's a safe bet that some of those drills were designed to open up the Broncos' rushing attack, which is off to a slow start — at least by past standards.

Johnson is averaging 97.3 yards per game and 4.7 yards per carry, well off last year's pace when he rushed for a school-record 1,713 yards and led the nation in scoring with 152 points, and lifted the Broncos to their stunning Fiesta Bowl upset over Oklahoma.

But with Taylor Thayer still getting comfortable at quarterback, opposing defenses are loading up to stop the stop the stop — a challenge Johnson says he relishes and ultimately plays into this year's ball control philosophy.

"Teams are preparing for us a little different than they did last year," Johnson said. "So you have to approach it with the mindset that not every play is going to be a hundred yards ... or a touchdown. There are going to be times you have

It's on: CSI hosts No. 2 SLCC

Top 10 battle for SWAC lead tonight

By Eric Larsen
Times-News writer

It doesn't get any bigger. At least not this early in the season.

A program steeped in tradition on one side of the court, a seemingly unbreakable volleyball machine on the other. Between the two forces: One net and only one chance to establish early dominance in the Scenic West Athletic Conference.

For the No. 10 College of Southern Idaho and No. 2 Salt Lake Community College programs that have combined to win 11 of the last 13 SWAC titles, tonight's match in Twin Falls represents a crucial step in two similar quests.

A 28-7 Golden Eagles team under second-year head coach Heidi Cartisser is looking to live up to those eight national championship banners hanging in the CSI gymnasium.

Meanwhile, a 30-1 Bruin juggernaut hopes to build its own legacy on a core group of sophomores who felt the sting of a first-round loss at last year's NJCAA Division I National Tournament.

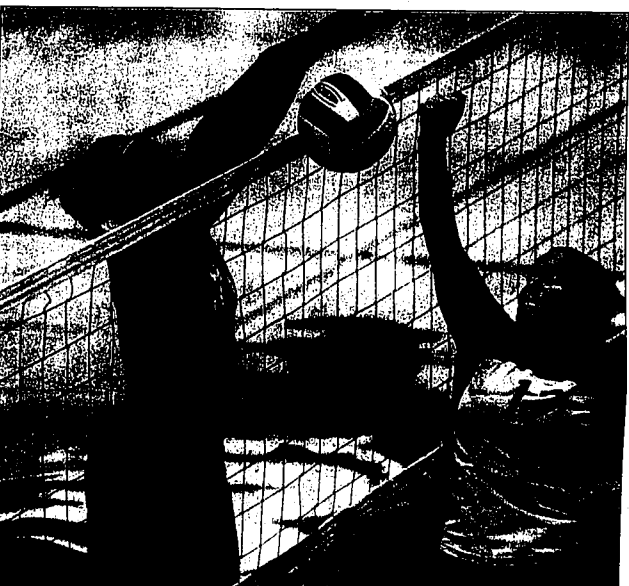

That defeat and the Bruins' ensuing consolation semifinal loss to the University of Arkansas-Fort Smith may be the reason SLCC has turned into such a power in 2007. Eight Bruin players return with big-match experience and a hunger for a national title that looks to be reachable at this stage of the season.

"I think it's to try and defend her and try and take her out of her game. This week of practice, our girls have done it and are excited to do it."

The Bruins have also been given a boost by the play of outside hitter Samantha Richard, who is averaging 3.23 kills per game and leading SLCC in aces with 46 after playing a reserve role as a freshman. With sophomore Michela Hanukova running their 5-1 offensive system, and sophomore Talita Santos in the middle, the Bruins are as dangerous a team as CSI has faced this season.

"We're going to have to push for every point and not let up," Cartisser said.

On the other side of the net, the Golden Eagles will look to pick up a College of Southern Idaho freshman Sautia Sanders, left, blocks a ball during a match earlier this season in Twin Falls. The No. 10 Golden Eagles host No. 2 Salt Lake Community College tonight.

3-0 conference mark and a redeeming payback for the two-game sweep they suffered to the Bruins during the first week of the season. Since, CSI has redefined its offensive system, returned former preseason All-America selection Pudge Finau, and played 28 matches, all on the road.

"I'm excited. It's our first home game and we're playing Salt Lake," freshman Eric Barton said. "It's going to be intense."

CSI will need more than exuberance over playing at home to beat SLCC tonight. After defeating regular SWAC bottom-feeders Colorado Northwestern Community College and the College of Eastern Utah last week, the Bruins have reaped the rewards of solid recruiting and strong play this season: National rankings, guaranteed winning records heading into the postseason, players in the running for all-America honors. Still, there is a feeling that both teams have much left to prove.

For as dominant as both are on the court, both Squads Parikh's haven't been able to win in the court of public opinion. The Golden Eagles, playing under their eighth national championship banners and the shadow of the Ben Stroud era, have gone 57-21 under second-year head coach Heidi Cartisser. But to hear the criticism of Cartisser's team is like listening to New Orleans fans lament the 0-3 Saints' recent downfall.

CSI vs. SLCC: Two teams, same goal

Forget about a national championship for a moment.

Save that discussion about ultimate goals and definitions of success for later. November when it'll really matter. By then, the top 10 teams from Twin Falls and Salt Lake City will probably still be around, striving for that same goal. Tonight's match between the College of Southern Idaho and Salt Lake Community College is but a shared goal, just not the ultimate one.

ERIC LARSEN

In a word, it comes down to this: respect.

Both No. 10 CSI and No. 2 SLCC have reaped the rewards of solid recruiting and strong play this season: National rankings, guaranteed winning records heading into the postseason, players in the running for all-America honors. Still, there is a feeling that both teams have much left to prove.

Coming Sunday

Results from Saturday's match against Snow College, along with the look at Megan Squads Parikh's haven't been able to win in the court of public opinion.

The Golden Eagles, playing under their eighth national championship banners and the shadow of the Ben Stroud era, have gone 57-21 under second-year head coach Heidi Cartisser. But to hear the criticism of Cartisser's team is like listening to New Orleans fans lament the 0-3 Saints' recent downfall.

Depending on who's talking, the Golden Eagles are too small, too inexperienced or feature too many Idaho players. They're not athletic enough, not dominant enough, not enough like Stroud's teams.

The Bruins, despite their 30-1 record and season split with No. 1 Western Nebraska Community College, haven't garnered a first-place vote in the NCAA Division I poll this year. They're 8-1 against ranked opposition this season and the only team to take a game from the top-ranked Cougars. They're closer to a No. 1B than the No. 2 team in the nation. Still, they've been a SWAC bridesmaid for the last decade, saw the 2004 season that saw a first-place CSI team forfeit 34 matches and the regular-season SWAC

Jerome volleyball continues winning

Times-News

The Jerome Tigers pulled out a 3-2 victory Wednesday over their Great Basin Conference West foe Minico on the road in Rupert.

The Tigers (7-4, 3-2) won 25-16, 23-25, 25-22, 26-28, 15-8, and are on a six-match tear after starting the season 1-6.

Jordan Burnham led Jerome with 19 kills. Chelsea Layne had a dozen blocks and seven kills and Jordann Hoffield had seven kills.

Jerome hosts Bull and West rival Burley in a tri-match next Wednesday.

BUTTE COUNTY 3, RICHLIEF 1
In Richfield, the Tigers played up a level against Class 2A Butte County, giving a game effort but coming up short in four games, 25-16, 25-22, 21-25, 25-20. No statistics were available.

"Butte County is an outstanding team," said Richfield coach Norm Rock. "They came to play, they're excellent and they have good athletes. We played up and we played tough for the experience, and hopefully we learned something for the (conference) tournament. I'm proud of the girls. We were a little bit didn't break. Butte County is by far the best team we've faced this season."

Richfield hosts a tri-match today against conference foe Carnus County and non-conference opponent Clark County.

JEROME 2, POCATELLO 2

Aubree Callen brought her season goal total to 23 with a two-goal performance Wednesday to lead host Jerome to a draw with Pocatello.

Jerome (3-9-2) is at Bull for the Tigers' regular season finale on Saturday.

BURLEY 2, MINICO 1

A 48th-minute free kick was all that separated Burley and Minico in a hard-fought game in Rupert on Wednesday, won 2-1 by the Orioles.

Ariel Belnap scored for Minico (4-11-2, 1-4-0 Great Basin) before a mad goal-mouth scramble resulted in Burley's equalizer. Just past the half-hour mark, the free kick proved to be the game winner despite the Spartans' best efforts to salvage a draw.

Minico closes out Great Basin Conference play at Wood River on Saturday.

Yankees clinch playoff spot

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — The New York Yankees clinched their 13th straight postseason appearance, beating Tampa Bay 12-4 on Wednesday night to assure themselves of at least a wild-card berth.

The victory, New York's 15th in 20 games, eliminated defending AL champion Detroit from postseason contention.

The Yankees are three games behind Boston with four games left, so New York's streak of nine consecutive AL East titles is likely to end. New York, 21-24 before play on May 30, went 70-34 after that. The Yankees have made the playoffs every year since 1995, and their streak is one shy of the record set by Atlanta from 1991-2005.

RED SOX 11, ATHLETICS 6

BOSTON — Mike Lowell drove in five runs and Boston cut its magic number to clinch the AL East to two.

Lowell had three of Boston's 17 hits and took over the team lead with a career-high 116 RBIs, two more than David Ortiz. He raised his batting average to a career-best .326.

The Red Sox, who remained three games in front of New York in the division, won for the fourth time in five games after a four-game losing streak.

DETROIT 9, TWINS 4, 5 INNINGS, RAIN

Detroit — Mike Ilesman hit a home run and an RBI single to lead Detroit to the rain-shortened victory.

The Tigers, the defending AL champions, needed help from Tampa Bay to maintain their remote chances of earning a postseason bid. But New York beat the Devil Rays 12-4 to guarantee Detroit would be relegated to watching the playoffs.

RANGERS 16, ANGELS 2

ARLINGTON, Texas — Michael Young reached 200 hits for the fifth consecutive season and San Diego hit one of Texas' five home runs as it completed a three-game sweep of AL West champion Los Angeles.

INDIANS 12, MARINERS 4, GAME 1

SEATTLE — Cleveland used a big third inning to back Kaisto, Carmona in the opening game of an odd doubleheader.

Cleveland was the home team for the first game in just the second doubleheader in Safeco Field history. The twinbill was the final makeup the teams were forced to play after their four-game series in April in Cleveland was snuffed out.

BLUE JAYS 8, ORIOLES 5

BALTIMORE — Matt Stairs and Adam Lind both had two RBIs during the most prolific first inning in Toronto history.

The Blue Jays sent 13 players to the plate and scored eight runs in the first. They got six hits—all singles, including two by Alex Rios. There were also three walks and a hit batter.

WHITE SOX 3, ROYALS 0

CHICAGO — Jon Garland threw his first shutout of the season and Jim Thome hit his 505th home run for Chicago.

Jermale Dye added a two-run homer for the White Sox, who moved out of a tie with the Royals for last place in the AL Central.

National League

NATIONALS 9, METS 6

NEW YORK — The New York Mets blew a five-run lead Wednesday night and lost again to Washington, cutting their lead over Philadelphia in the NL East to one game.

New York wasted two homers by Carlos Beltran and another from Moises Alou in the loss.

The Phillies, who beat Atlanta 5-2, haven't been in close to first place since they lost on opening day. It's the Mets' slimmest margin since they were a half-game in front before play on May 17.

PHILLIES 5, BRaves 2

PHILADELPHIA — Bryce Lohse pitched seven strong innings and Philadelphia improved its playoff hopes.

Lohse (9-12) allowed two runs and six hits, striking out five and becoming the first Phillies starter to go seven innings since Jamie Moyer on Sept. 14.

Pinch-hitter Shane Victorino hit a solo homer, Greg Dobbs had a two-run single and Philadelphia took advantage of third baseman Chipper Jones' "drowning error" to score three unearned runs off Tim Hudson (16-10).

Winters suspended over Bradley incident

NEW YORK — Umpire Mike Winters was suspended by Major League Baseball for the remainder of the regular season on Wednesday because of a confrontation with San Diego's Milton Bradley last weekend.

The Padres claimed Winters baited Bradley, who has a history of losing his temper. Bradley tore a knee ligament when his manager spun him to the ground while trying to keep him from going after the umpire during Sunday's 7-3 loss to Colorado in San Diego.

Winters was suspended because the commissioner's office concluded he had used a profanity aimed at Bradley, a baseball official said, speaking on condition of anonymity because the reasoning for the suspension was not announced.

The 46-year-old Winters became a major-league umpire in 1990, and worked the World Series in 2002 and last year.

Centers remained at four as second-place Milwaukee lost to St. Louis. A two-out RBI single in the fifth inning by backup catcher Matt Treanor put the Marlins ahead to stay. Miguel Cabrera added a two-run homer, his 34th.

Cardinals 7, Brewers 3

MILWAUKEE — Milwaukee wasted a chance to cut their NL Central deficit to one game, giving up a first-inning home run to Albert Pujols.

Chicago maintained a two-game division lead despite a 7-4 loss at Florida. Milwaukee starts a season-ending four-game series Thursday at home against San Diego.

Pujols' 32nd homer gave him 100 RBIs for the seventh straight season.

Pirates 5, Diamondbacks 1

PITTSBURGH — Adam LaRoche drove in three runs with two doubles and Matt Morris pitched effectively over seven innings as Pittsburgh beat Arizona for the second straight night.

Astros 7, Reds 6

CINCINNATI — Lance Berkman hit two of Houston's four home runs and Luke Scott drove in the winning run in the eighth with a single.

Hunter Pence and Carlos Lee also homered as Houston sent the Reds to their fourth consecutive loss. The Astros have hit four home runs in a game six times this season.

Idaho's Deonte Jackson may miss Hawaii game

MOSCOW (AP) — Idaho will be without its top running back Deonte Jackson when it hosts No. 19 Hawaii on Saturday.

Jackson, a freshman who leads the Western Athletic Conference in rushing, suffered a high ankle sprain against Northern Illinois last weekend.

Jackson has gained 537 yards on 100 carries in Idaho's first four games. Idaho's training staff will use "aggressive treatment" on Jackson's ankle, coach Robb Akoy said.

"If that progresses well later in the week, then an opportunity to play him might be there," Akoy said. "The only thing I know that's realistic thinking that I'm going to have him available this weekend."

If Jackson is out, veteran Jayson Bird will get more carries.

"I feel very comfortable with the pressure on my shoulders," said Bird, a junior from Shelley. "I hope I showed a little bit of it last weekend."

Bird had just 10 carries in Idaho's first three games, but got more action last Saturday when Jackson was hurt in the third quarter. Bird ran eight times for 52 yards and caught five passes for 72 yards.

No. 756 to get asterisk

NEW YORK (AP) — The ball Barry Bonds hit for his record-breaking 756th home run will be branded with an asterisk and sent to the Baseball Hall of Fame.

Fashion designer Marc Ecko, who bought the ball in an online auction, set up a Web site for fans to vote on the ball's fate, and Wednesday announced the decision to brand it won out over the other options — sending it to Cooperstown unblemished or launching it into space. Ecko said he believed the vote to brand the ball showed "people thought this was shrouded in a chapter of baseball history that wasn't necessarily the clearest it could be."

Ecko, whom Bonds called "an idiot" last week, had the winning bid Sept. 15 in the online auction for the ball that Bonds hit Aug. 7 to break Hank Aaron's record of 755 home runs. The final selling price was $752,467.

to cover up and take what you can get, and know that a four-yard gain in our scheme it a very good gain."

The Golden Eagles' offense is led by senior quarterback Jeremy Young and sophomore running back Damion Fletcher, who rushed for 1,692 yards last season, his 11th best in the nation. In its first game, Southern Miss has been hurt by turnovers, including three costly ones in the loss to Tennessee.

But Young is coming off his best game of the season, coming 18 of 28 passes for 237 yards and a touchdown, plus another two rushing TDs. In the 28-21 victory at East Carolina.

Lico Johnson, Fletcher is off to a slower start than 2006, averaging 101.3 yards per game. But Bower says Fletcher is the kind of player that thrives in an atmosphere when he's matching his skills with a runner like Young.

"They have to eliminate the big plays, which we did against East Carolina," Bower said. "We also have to stop the run. That will be the key going into the game."

Defensively, Bower's squad has struggled with giving up big plays, despite returning nine starters from last year. It's a major concern facing the Broncos and their history of big plays.

"They have to eliminate the big plays, which we did against East Carolina," Bower said. "We also have to stop the run. That will be the key going into the game."

SKYLINE 4, TWIN FALLS 2

For 66 minutes Twin Falls held firm against Skyline in a neck-and-neck affair, but it was the other 14 minutes that killed the Bruins as they allowed three goals in that stretch to drop a 4-2 decision in their home finale Wednesday.

Skyline got goals from Pedro Resendez in the 54th minute, Christopher Harker in the 57th and Oscar Ponce in the 68th to condemn Twin Falls (0-6 High Country) to its 12th defeat in as many games.

The trio of tallies came in the aftermath of central defender Dustin Hegstrom's dismissal in a second yellow card, though the Bruins were allowed to continue with 11 men due to the high school soccer rule delineating between a second bookable offense and a straight red card.

"(Dustin) played an outstanding game, and it just took us a while to get reorganized in the back without him," Twin Falls coach Trent Felton said. "But this is the closest thing to a blowout that there's been in the conference this year, everyone's really even."

Martin Arizmendi's 39th-minute strike canceled out Skyline's opener, which came in the 10th minute through Tamer Pasamehmetoglu. Art Cortez rounded out the scoring three minutes from time. Despite the loss, Felton seems confident in the growth of the team.

"Historically, we've been a team that builds through the season and strong at the end," Felton said. "We're always at our best at the end, and with the conference so even it's going to make for a very exciting conference tournament."

Twin Falls is away to conference leader Idaho Falls on Saturday.

Now, who are they again? District Health, er, Health District hopes name change will solve identity crisis

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

It's too bad Rene LeBlanc isn't the director of the South Central District Health Department.

That group got an award in 2005 from the Project Public Health Ready Oversight Council. It's displayed on a wall next to commendations for the South Central Health Department, South Central Health District and other groups.

But LeBlanc is the director of South Central District Health. No "department."

The health district's name has been a source of confusion for many years, he said, even after the word "Department" was dropped several years ago.

People think the agency is part of the local hospital or the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare — or, he said, they'll think it's one of the town's many private health clinics.

Even other state agencies can't get it right.

"To this day, you will find Health and Welfare referring to us as the District Health Department," LeBlanc said.

So over the next two years, the agency will undergo another change. Stationery, Web sites and the sign on its building on the College of Southern Idaho campus will identify it as the South Central Public Health District.

The new name, LeBlanc said, will jibe more with what the agency actually is — one of seven administrative public health districts set up by the Idaho Legislature to oversee local public health initiatives and issues, and definitely not a clinic.

"What I'm trying to do is distinguish us as being the discipline of public health," LeBlanc told the district's Board of Health Wednesday.

The district is trying to avoid a costly switch — Eastern Idaho Public Health District recently paid about $250,000 for all-new labels, forms and other printed matter, LeBlanc said. So changes will be made gradually as the district uses up letterhead and other supplies. In two or three years, the director said, he hopes the name change will end the confusion.

As a bonus, he said, it'll finally be grammatically correct.

Simpson, others optimistic about RECA progress

More education needed in both House and Senate

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

On July 16, 1945, at Alamogordo, N.M., the world's first atomic explosion — "Trinity" — shot radioactive debris seven miles high and sunk plutonium 13 inches deep into the ground around the site.

Above-ground atomic weapons testing in the United States would continue through 1962, spewing radioactive fallout from test sites in Nevada and New Mexico.

That exposure "is presumed to have produced an increased incidence of certain serious diseases, including various types of cancer," according to a status report on the Radiation Exposure Compensation Act (RECA) released Sept. 7 by the Government Accountability Office.

Although change may be on the horizon, Idaho downwinders currently are not covered under RECA, established in 1990 to compensate survivors of radiation exposure.

According to the GAO, the Radiation Exposure Compensation Program (RECA) has authorized payments totaling $1.2 billion for 18,110 claims since the program began processing them in April 1992.

Almost half the $1.2 billion was paid to claimants who lived downwind of the Nevada Test Site.

The 18,110 claims represent about two-thirds of the 26,550 claims filed since 1992. The remaining one-third were denied because RECA's eligibility criteria were not satisfied.

"In the end, it will be the downwinders that will be key and we're not going away."

— J. Preston Truman, director of Downwinders

RECA was amended in 2000 but changes still left Idaho uncovered even though four of the top five counties hit with radiation are in the state.

This past May, Rep. Mike Simpson, R-Idaho, and Rep. Jim Matheson, D-Utah, sent a letter to the House Judiciary Committee requesting a hearing on the expansion of RECA.

Support has come from all over Idaho. A letter dated Aug. 7 from Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter was written in support of such a hearing, and last month bipartisan legislation was introduced in the Senate by Sens. Larry Craig and Mike Crapo to amend RECA to include downwinders in Idaho and Montana.

"Honestly, progress has been slow on this issue because not many members understand it and because the states that are most involved are few in numbers and sparsely populated. I believe that is why a hearing in the House is so important," said Simpson. "It should help broaden the knowledge of decision-makers on the relevant committees and bring greater attention to the issue. That is a key first step in building a coalition of interested members large enough to give any future legislation a chance."

J. Preston Truman, director of the group Downwinders, remains optimistic that changes to RECA will happen.

"The progress that has been made both with the House request by Simpson and Matheson for a hearing, and the introduction of the bill by Craig and Crapo and the support of both Montana senators puts the whole thing in motion," Truman said. "In the end, it will be the downwinders that will be key and we're not going away."

Simpson said he will continue fighting for Idaho downwinders as well.

"The Committee is still reviewing our request for a RECA hearing, but I am optimistic we will get the hearing perhaps later this year, but more likely early next year. I am going to be speaking with the chairman about our request again soon," he said.

Jerome soldier to return from Iraq with Bronze Star

By Cass Friedman

As he was awarded a Bronze Star for valor on Saturday in Ayer, Mass., the farm boy who grew up in Jerome in the 1970s, tossing hay and milking cows at his grandparents' farm — in Shoshone, also had a second reason to rejoice.

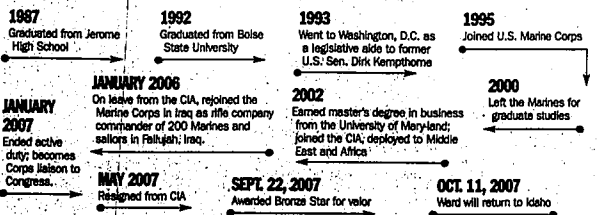

Finally, he was coming back to Idaho.

Watching Maj. Vaughn L. Ward accept his new decorations were 200 Marines and Navy sailors of Company C, 1st Battalion, 25th Marines, a reserve unit based near Hartford, Conn. Ward led the Marines and their Navy corpsmen through the most harrowing eight months of his and their lives. Ward, 38, took over the unit in March 2006 after his commander was killed in action.

Together, they survived daily battles in and around a military compound in Fallujah, Iraq.

"We endured 130 attacks in less than seven months — a couple times we were attacked three times in one day," said Ward. "We had 140 mortars fired into our compound. They blew up my trucks, they killed my generators. Four Marines were killed. About 60 were wounded. And Ward sacrificed three of his five married years.

"Sometimes it affects you mentally," he said. "(But) you're out there being a leader. You care more about what they're going through."

At the ceremony, Ward made sure to give his Marines all the credit.

Returning home from Iraq, the 1987 Jerome High School senior switched his Marines celebrated as heroes in Hartford. As they passed through the streets escorted behind a motorcade, trucks blew their horns and people waved American flags.

"The Marines... you couldn't have erased that smile from ear to ear," he said.

And while his daughter and wife flew to Hartford to greet Ward on that festive occasion, the soldier still wasn't home. His journey back to Idaho remained incomplete. It has continued that way. Despite several visits home, Ward has spent the past year stuck in a job on Capitol Hill, feeding out of sorts while watching acrimonious battles waged over the future of his service, the war and the country.

"Sometimes I think I'd rather be in combat than on Capitol Hill — with these senators going at it," he said. "It is so divisive. Some of the language is so spiteful. It's hard for a guy from combat to listen to it."

Constant danger gave Ward a simpler world in Iraq, where Americans fight for a common cause.

But the danger — the close calls — were often excruciating.

A sniper's bullet once grazed Ward, who was pacing outside a mosque while waiting for approval to raid it. "I will never forget the whine of the bullet," said Ward, who convinced himself the bullet had struck him. "I was feeling around my neck (thinking) it got me. My knees began buckling."

Marines rushed to help, but found him untouched. He never was wounded in Iraq.

On Oct. 11, Ward, his wife Kirsten and their 2-year-old daughter will complete the long circuit home when his plane touches down in Boise. He plans to settle there or in Twin Falls, depending on his job prospects.

That's happy news for his sister in Goshing, his father in Twin Falls, his grandmother or in Jerome and not least of all his mother, Ma Trammer, who lives in Idaho Falls.

Trammer has missed many nights of sleep between the Vietnam war, which killed her brother, the war in Afghanistan, where her nephew fought, and the war in Iraq, where Ward and another of her nephews have fought.

"It was hard for me," Trammer said. "It's a military family and it is a family that is extremely close. It's not like we want to send our kids out there. You know they are doing what they know they must."

And Ward said he will remain a Marine, attached to a Boise-area reserve company.

"These Marines went out and endured some pretty hellish times when we were there," Ward said. And then he chuckled and said showing the first sign of immodesty. "No other company commander received a Bronze Star."

U.S. soldier pleads not guilty to killing Iraqis, then planting weapons on them

Idaho sniper said they were told to 'bait' insurgents

By Katarina Kratorac Associated Press writer

BAGHDAD — A U.S. soldier pleaded not guilty Wednesday to charges of killing Iraqis and then trying to cover it up by planting weapons on their bodies.

Spc. Jorge G. Sandoval, of Laredo, Texas, has been charged with premeditated murder, wrongfully placing weapons with the remains of the Iraqis and obstructing justice. He faces a maximum sentence of life in prison if convicted.

Military prosecutors said the deaths occurred separately between April and June near Iskandariyah, a nearby Sunni Arab city 30 miles south of Baghdad.

The investigation began after military authorities received reports of alleged wrongdoing from fellow soldiers, the Army has said.

Wearing his military uniform, Sandoval sat flanked by two military defense lawyers during the opening day of his court martial on a U.S. base west of Baghdad.

"War in Iraq is hell," the defense attorney, Capt. Craig Drummond, said in his opening statement. "Battle lines are sometimes unclear. The enemy does not always show itself. The enemy of this war attacks, hides, then attacks again."

Sandoval faces five charges, including an April 27 murder of an unknown Iraqi male, placing a detonation wire on his body, premeditated murder of another Iraqi male with a 9mm pistol on May 11, placing an AK-47 rifle on his body and falling to ensure humane treatment of a detainee — the victim.

The prosecutor, Capt. Sarah Rykowsk, told the court it must decide "what was in the accused's mind when he shot an unknown man cutting grass" and killed another "with a 9mm pistol from a few inches away."

Spc. Alexander Flores, who was in the same squad as Sandoval on the day of the April killing, testified they were acting on orders of their platoon leader who said the suspect was "our guy" and ordered them to "move in," which they interpreted as "take the target out."

Sgt. Evan Veln of Hlghy, Idaho, and Staff Sgt. Michael Hensley of Candler, N.C., are also charged in the case. They are part of the Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 501st Infantry Regiment, 4th Brigade (Airborne), 25th Infantry Division, based at Fort Richardson, Alaska.

Vela's defense attorney, Gary Myers, claimed earlier this week that Army snipers hunting insurgents in Iraq were under orders to "bait" their targets with suspicious materials, such as detonation cords, then kill whoever picked up the items. He said his client was acting "pursuant to orders."

Judge declares mistrial in Phil Spector murder case

By Linda Deutsch
Associated Press writer

LOS ANGELES — A mistrial was declared Wednesday in the murder case against music producer Phil Spector when the jury reported for a second time that it could not reach a verdict on whether he killed actress Lana Clarkson more than four years ago.

The mistrial came after months of a trial in which jurors had to decide who pulled the trigger of a revolver — leaving no fingerprints — that went off in Clarkson's mouth about early Feb. 3, 2003.

shortly after the mistrial.

The prosecution did not immediately say whether it will seek a retrial. A hearing was set for Oct. 3.

The jury foreman told Superior Court Judge Larry Paul Fidler the split was 10-2 but did not say which way the panel leaned. A week earlier, the foreman had reported a 7-5 split.

The jury had met for about 44 hours over 12 days since getting the case Sept. 10.

After the initial deadlock, the judge withdrew a jury instruction that he decided mistated the law and issued a new 'one giving examples of what panelists could draw from the evidence, including the possibility that Spector forced Clarkson to place the gun in her own mouth.

Fidler polled the jury, and they agreed that a unanimous decision was not possible.

Prosecutors had charged Spector under a second-degree murder theory that did not require premeditation or intent. They called women from his past who claimed he threatened them with guns when they tried to leave his presence, and a chauffeur who testified that on the fateful morning Spector came out of his home with a gun in hand and said, "I think I killed somebody," while Clarkson's body sat slumped in a foyer chair behind him.

The defense countered with a scientific case, suggesting Spector did not fire the gun and offering forensic evidence that she killed herself — either intentionally or by accident. Gunshot residue on her hands, blond sputter on his coat and the trajectory of the bullet were the subjects of weeks of testimony from experts.

Tropical depression could threaten Mexico

MIAMI (AP) — A growing tropical depression raised the possibility of a storm watch for Mexico's gulf coast on Wednesday, while Tropical Storm Karen strengthened to near hurricane status in the open Atlantic.

The 13th depression of the season could strengthen into a named storm over the next day in the southwestern Gulf of Mexico, National Hurricane Center meteorologists said.

A tropical storm watch was likely for part of Mexico's gulf coast by late Wednesday, the center said.

At 5 p.m. EDT, the depression was centered about 225 miles east-southeast of Tampico, Mexico, and about 190 miles east of Tuxpan, Mexico. It was nearly stationary, and a slow, erratic motion was expected during the next 12 to 24 hours. Top sustained winds were near 35 mph.

Meanwhile, Karen was centered about 1,175 miles east of the Windward Islands, with top sustained wind near 70 mph, forecasters said. It was just 4 mph shy of being upgraded to a hurricane, but posed no immediate threat to land.

Karen was moving toward the west-northwest at about 12 mph.

Tropical storm-force wind extended up to 85 miles outward from the center.

Rotten meat coats Kentucky interstate after truck overturns in collision

SOUTHGATE, Ky. (AP) — A truck carrying rotten meat crashed and spread its pungent cargo across an interstate highway Wednesday, closing part of the road for much of the day.

"It was pretty atrocious," said Southgate police spokesman Sam Hodge.

A driver cut off a car on Interstate 471, causing it to swerve into the path of the truck, Hodge said. The car and truck collided, and both crashed into the median barrier.

The truck, operated by Griffin Industries, tipped over and spilled rotten hot dogs, hamburger and lunch meat across the road. Neither driver was injured, but a southbound stretch of the highway was closed for about six hours after the 9:30 accident.

A police dispatcher reached after business hours said no one was available to comment on whether anyone was ticketed.

Griffin Industries collects and recycles meat byproducts and other materials for use in such products as feed and fertilizer, according to its Web site.

"Most of the mess was cleaned up, Hodge said, but drivers will be able to identify the site by smell for a while.

"It's still there," he said of the aroma. "It should linger."

Animal deaths cause horse facility closure

By Scott Somner
Associated Press writer

RENO, Nev. — Federal land managers on Wednesday temporarily shut down the National Wild Horse and Burro Center in northern Nevada, where 130 wild horses recently have died from health problems that could pose a threat to workers and visitors.

The voluntary closure of the center in Palomino Valley about 20 miles north of Reno is a preventive measure because the salmonella bacteria found in some of the mustangs can infect people and domestic animals, officials said for the U.S. Bureau of Land Management said.

The center's 160 acres of corrals serve as a national holding facility for up to 1,650 animals the BLM routinely pulls from public rangeland to be vaccinated and marked while awaiting shipment under the agency's wild horse adoption program.

The problems apparently stem from about 1,000 unhealthy horses that were gathered in northwest Nevada's Jackson Mountains in early September. Many of them were extremely thin and weak due to a lack of food and water resulting from extended drought conditions, BLM officials said.

Consequently, those horses have had trouble adjusting to feed at the holding center.

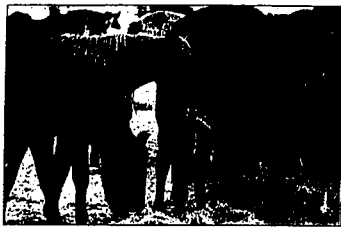

The deaths were attributed to poor body conditions combined with pneumonia and severe diarrhea related to salmonella, said Dr. Al Kane, a veterinarian for the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

"The pneumonia is blamed on dust and lack of moisture, compounded by wide fluctuations in fall temperatures from the 30s at night to high 70s during the day."

"The bacteria salmonella has been isolated from several horses and is contributing to the health problems and increased death loss," Kane said Wednesday.

"This bacteria is not uncommon in healthy horses and other livestock but can also cause illness or death under these conditions," he said.

The BLM's primary concern is to ensure the health and safety of employees who work at the facility and members of the public who visit the facility and could be exposed to the bacteria or carry it home to their animals

Wild mares from the New Pass area of central Nevada eat grass hay after being relocated to the Bureau of Land Management's National Wild Horse and Burro Center in Palomino Valley, Nev., in Oct. 27, 1999. Federal land managers have temporarily shut down the facility north of Reno, where 130 wild horses have recently died from health problems that could pose a threat to workers and visitors.

on their clothing, Kane said. The animals are being treated with antibiotics to combat the pneumonia but "there are no specific treatments that can cure these complications in horses," Kane said.

"The horses are being provided with good quality grass hay and fresh water, and most of the animals are slowly recovering."

"The BLM will evaluate conditions at the center in 30 days to determine if the temporary closure should be extended, officials said.

Sightings narrow search for escaped Utah inmates

MANILA, Utah (AP) — Authorities narrowed the search for two escaped killers on Wednesday after they were spotted walking near a highway about 40 miles from the county jail where they staged their breakout last weekend.

The men tried to solicit a ride on Utah 191, about halfway between the jail and Vernal, but the driver took off, said Sheriff's Detective Dick Hult Jr. of Sweetwater County, Wyo., who was in Utah to assist in the manhunt.

Authorities acting on a series of sightings Tuesday afternoon and evening stepped up the search Wednesday in the rugged area where mountains have been dusted by snow, he said.

The sightings had the men moving progressively south toward the oil town of Vernal. Duggett County Sheriff Rick Ellsworth moved his command post to a rest stop at the historic Stringham Cabin along the highway 34 miles north of Vernal. Upward of 60 local, state and federal authorities were involved in the manhunt, using airplanes, SWAT and dog teams.

Wearing jail garb, including orange pants, Juan Carlos Diaz-Arevalo, 27, and Danny Martin Gallegos, 49, were last seen around the cabin at 7:45 p.m. MDT Tuesday, Hult said.

"This is where those two guys tried to solicit a ride. They are still together, on foot, still wearing their jail clothing," he said.

Bison killed in Wyoming could set world record

JACKSON, Wyo. (AP) — A bison known as "Old Lonesome" stands to break an 82-year-old record as a hunter killed it in western Wyoming's Bridger-Teton National Forest.

The bison's horns measured 36 inches from tip to tip and 18 and 19 inches individually, giving the animal a hunting score of 140-2/8. The previous record, a bison killed in Yellowstone National Park in 1925, scored 136-1/8.

For the record to become official, the bison's head will need to dry for 60 days.

E.D. Riekens Jr., of Cheyenne, shot the bison near Spread Creek on Sept. 18.

"When I saw this guy, it was like I was looking at a dinosaur or a mammoth," Riekens said. "This guy was just so different and massive and huge. There was no question about whether I would hold off. It just had to be done."

Johnie Filbeck, who makes a business of helping people move the big game they've hunted, said he was familiar with Old Lonesome. He started calling the bison that name years ago, when he noticed that the ball almost always cracked apart from one of its horns.

"Old Lonesome ain't lonesome no more," Filbeck said. Riekens said he killed Old Lonesome with one bullet.

"I was getting closer and closer waiting for an opportunity," he said. "Finally, he gave me the perfect chance, and I didn't hesitate for a second. He was dead before I let go of the trigger, which is a good thing."

Riekens said he's got extra freezers ready to store the meat.

"I've got a long list of friends and family I'm going to share it with," he said. "We're going to have a big old barbecue."

The Jackson Bison Herd has grown to around 1,200 animals, damaging plants in Grand Teton National Park and the National Elk Refuge and reducing natural forage for elk and moose. Hunting began this year on the refuge, where managers ultimately hope to reduce the bison herd to 500.

Inside an old suitcase: Photos, mementos, mystery

By Darragh Johnson
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The suitcase — a valise, really — was no bigger than two briefcases, just an old, brown thing tucked into a first-floor crawl space.

The demolition guys found it. Guys whose job is to climb, destroy and trash. There is not a sentimental erector. They are workers who wield annihilating hammers: sledgehammers, jackhammers.

And yet, the suitcase stopped them. For a year, maybe longer, they kept it right by the job box where they stored their tools. In the 11-story downtown building they were gutting and turning into condos. Every morning when Paul Barnett reported to work, he made sure the suitcase was still there. Someday he and another guy told each other, they would find the owner and return it.

Not that it was worth much. Inside the mottled, fabric-covered case, whose handle was missing and whose latches had torn off or disintegrated long ago, was a pile of photo albums: baby pictures and family trips, black-and-white photos bordered by white scalloped edges.

There was a 1924 high school yearbook, and a 1919 letter releasing a man named Shaughnessy from active duty in the World War. It carried a snapshot of a little boy learning to ride a bike, and some 200 of a pretty woman

Colleen Corrigan discusses the long-lost suitcase full of mementos from her husband's family, at home in Washington. Demolition personnel found her case in the crawlspace of a building under renovation and set it aside, hoping to find the owner.

in a bathing cap and a wind-blown man posing at the beach, and a long, handwritten paper called "The Causes of the World War" that earned an A+ for Mildred Flynn in 1927 along with a professor's exultation: "This shows unusual ability." But the suitcase bore no tag. No definitive name or address anywhere. So Barnett, 42, kept his eye on the suitcase and promised that, soon, he'd do something more conclusive. Earlier this month, he came to work at the Woodward Building at 15th and I streets NW. The first floor had been cleared out. Everything was gone, including the suitcase.

Brian Shaughnessy, now 68, looks over photos taken on a trip with his father to Ireland that were unearthed in the long-lost suitcase. The items inside "don't mean anything to anybody else, but they mean a lot to me," says Shaughnessy, photographed at home in Washington.

"That thing got thrown away" some of the others told him — "pulling my chains," as Barnett calls it now.

"I had better not gotten thrown away," he remembers shouting. Nearly everyone at the Woodward building knew that the suitcase "meant a lot to me," he said. He had vowed to find the owners. "And if you say you're going to do something, integrity means everything."

So when some of the guys confessed that the suitcase was lying on a loading cart in the basement, Barnett raced down and started going through every piece of paper all over again. "There's no way," he worried, "we're going to find somebody who graduated from college in 1923."

But on several papers, the name Shaughnessy popped up. One was a Brian Shaughnessy, who was listed on a elementary school graduation program from 1952.

Googling that name, Barnett began calling the 20 numbers that came up. One after another, they had all been discontinued. Or no one was there by that name. Two numbers were attached to addresses on 15th Street, so he and a supervisor trudged up 15th, hopping — fruitlessly — through that grammar school kid.

The last number on his list was for a D.C. lawyer named Brian Shaughnessy. When a man answered the phone, Barnett told him he was looking for "my father's name."

"If your mother's name was Mildred and your dad's name was William, I've got some really important stuff that you'd probably want to see."

Brian Shaughnessy, 68, was born in Massachusetts and grew up in his southern Idaho hometown. He has a white mustache and hair around his head and lives in a Washington townhouse overflowing with Victorian furniture, bright glass chandeliers and his wife's growing collection of marble fireplaces.

His mother, Mildred Flynn, was a schoolteacher who took that "unusual ability" probed by a college professor and earned her master's degree. His father was a baker who never went past the fifth grade. William Shaughnessy wasn't much for pretty writing, but Brian Shaughnessy says proudly, "When he decorated a wedding cake..."

As soon as he got the call from Barnett, Shaughnessy arranged his schedule so he could rush down first thing the next morning. That Friday, he descended into the basement of the Woodward building, where his wife, Colleen Corrigan, used to own the Bikes 'n' Stuff store, and where she had stored the suitcase in an old crawl space in the back. Now, snaked with dust, there it was.

Shaughnessy left the Woodward Building. He had appointments all afternoon. But that night, he says, he stayed up until after 2 a.m., reading and rereading the suitcase head, reading and remembering and reliving.

Hazardous substances could lurk at home

By Abigail Goldman
Los Angeles Times

Parents scoured children's playrooms and retailers scurried to clear their shelves after manufacturers ordered a variety of toys this summer, saying millions of popular toys might have been made with lead paint.

But the risk of lead poisoning is as strong as ever, experts say. It's not that the biggest threat probably isn't in the toy box.

Children are at greater risk of lead poisoning from living in homes with old peeling lead paint, or one that is going through a remodel, than they are from most toys, according to federal officials. Toys with lead paint don't even pose the biggest threat among playthings.

Lead paint has been banned in the U.S. since 1978, but older homes typically have layers of this dangerous white covering. Children newer coats. In good condition and left undisturbed, the lead paint poses little threat. But after it's chipped or begins peeling dust, the danger grows.

"By far and away historically, the major concern about sources for lead has been your home," said Dr. Helen Binns, a pediatrician and pediatric and preventive medicine at Northwestern University's medical school.

"You may handle your toy for a few moments a day, but if you're in a home going through remodeling, you generate dust throughout your whole house," Binns said. "So you're exposed everywhere you go, not just when you're playing."

Lead paint on toys still poses some risk, health officials say. But when it comes to toys, the biggest dangers don't come from lead paint on a truck train or doll.

Instead, the deadliest playthings are among the oldest and simplest: balloons and small rubber balls or marbles.

"I think people don't always worry about the right things," said Dr. Gary Gardner, chairman of the American Academy of Pediatrics' committee on injury, violence and poison prevention.

He says that it's partly because there is so much for parents to worry about "is there child in a proper child seat? Do I have a smoke detector and a carbon monoxide detector working? Is their hot water heater turned down so that there isn't a scalding? Do I have a pool that isn't fenced on all four sides?"

It's hard telling parents to relax a bit. Gardner said. Although there has been fewer toys recalls this year than for the same period in 2006, the millions of toys devoted unsafe this summer struck a nerve with consumers and thus with manufacturers, retailers and politicians.

Part of the heightened concern stems from tinning. Last winter, thousands of pets were sickened or killed because of tainted Chinese ingredients used to make animal foods. Over the following months, toothpaste, tires, fish and other products imported from China also were recalled on safety grounds.

So by the time RC2 Corp. in June recalled 1.5 million Chinese-made Thomas & Friends wooden train toys because of lead paint, Americans had plenty of reasons to be concerned about Chinese products.

Those fears were amplified in August when Mattel Inc. — the world's largest toy maker — issued a series of recalls of Chinese-made goods.

The question for some in pediatric medicine is whether worry about imported lead paint obscures equal or greater perils much closer to home.

In 2005, the most recent year for which data are available, 20 children younger than 15 died from toy-related injuries, according to the federal Consumer Product Safety Commission.

Nine children — ages 15 months to 8 years old — died after choking on toys. Six of them died after swallowing beads that blocked their airways. One breathed in a balloon or part of a balloon. One died after swallowing a bead from a toy horse, and one choked on a toy dart.

Ball-shaped objects are particularly dangerous, said Dr. Gary Smith, director of the Center for Injury Research and Policy at the Children's Hospital in Columbus, Ohio.

"If you took the best engineers in the world and asked them to design a perfect plug for a child's airway, you couldn't do much better than a real rubber ball," Smith said. "It's airway-sealed, it's all-ways-shaped and it will wedge itself in so that it is very hard to dislodge and will completely block the airway."

Keep priorities straight, Capricorn

HOROSCOPE Jeraldine Saunders

CANCER (June 21-July 23): Strike a happy balance between business and pleasure. There is a vicious circle of needing to work hard to please loved ones, which leaves you with less time to spend with those you love.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Remain respectful and demure. Self-important or flamboyant ways could receive a cold shoulder from someone who prefers to remain aloof.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Defer a shopping spree. Temporary celestial aspects make this a poor day to sign agreements or spend money. Lunch dates with fascinating new hookups could fall flat or waste time.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Remain cautious like a cat. Felines can leap across amazing distances or fall from heights and land on their feet. With all your senses are on alert you can avoid potential pitfalls with ease.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Keep your book of ed-quite close to hand. Others in the immediate vicinity could seem slightly sensitive to unintended slights or expect you to follow decorum to the letter.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Maintain your momentum. Your teammates or competitors could set a swift pace. It's better to keep plugging away at a project on your own than to hang around the water cooler with friends.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Prioritize. Concentrate on the items that desperately need your attention. Avoid interruptions and much can be accomplished. Working behind the scenes is to your advantage.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Make a new friend. Community service may lead to advantageous publicity or build better business contacts. Attend the local art auction, make a donation or join a book club.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Allow others to carry their fair share of the load for a while. Pay attention to inspirational ideas that can make your money grow or your life easier.

"At my Uncle Max's wedding, Dolly was a flower girl and I was the ring bearer."

First date ends in fireworks but relationship fizzles out

DEAR ABBY Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: I'm 34 years old and have two wonderful kids ages 12 and 8. I am a single mother, employed part time. I live with my parents and need some advice.

I recently met someone. He is a 35-year-old firefighter who coaches football and has a child of his own. The night we met it was nice. We engaged in physical activity. He said he was interested in me, and I told him likewise.

He called me the next two days, and that was it! I had called him several times since the last time he called me, and everything seemed fine with him. However, we have not had a long conversation. He said he wanted to get to know me better, so I don't understand why he doesn't call me anymore.

I am mad because I wanted to stop calling, then I would appreciate it if he would just let me know. But he hasn't told me anything. I don't know if he's just not interested or what, but I really like this man and enjoyed his company, and wonder if he enjoyed mine too. Please help me understand what the problems are.

—LOST IN GUAM

DEAR LOST: The problem is you engaged in "physical activity" with him too soon. None of the mystery is gone, but the excitement of the chase is gone, and he is gone. While it might be nice of him to say goodbye, silence sends a message that speaks volumes. It's saying he is no longer interested.

DEAR ABBY: Over the years I have enjoyed reading the letters in your column about the kind, helpful things people do — the good deeds that brighten someone's day. I would like to offer one from my own family.

When my son was 5, he was a very active little boy. I was forever "losing" him in stores. I would usually find him hiding in clothing racks, etc.

One day I couldn't find him. After a frantic search, I finally found him in the women's restroom helping an elderly woman sit in a wheelchair with the doors. I began to scold him when she said, "Please don't do that. He was the only one who offered to help me." It was then that I realized what a wonderful little boy he was — and still is today as a grown man.

—NANCY IN SANTA CLARA, CALIF.

DEAR NANCY: Your little boy was indeed, kind and empathetic. However, the incident you have described happened many years ago. Today, I am sad to say, parents must impress on their young children the possible danger of wandering away with an adult they don't know.

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem I have never seen in your column. My jealous husband created a fictional online character and contacted me through a Christian support e-group. I began corresponding with the person in e-mail. This was a character designed to match all my preferences.

When he offered to meet in person, I refused, but he continued to improve the quality of the messages until I eventually expressed dissatisfaction in my marriage. That is when my husband revealed that HE was my fantasy friend.

Now neither of us is sure we can trust each other — after 18 years of marriage. Should I forgive and forget?

—BETRAYED IN CLEVELAND

DEAR BETRAYED: Yes, and so should he. From where I sit, this could be a golden opportunity to improve your marriage through marriage counseling. Maybe if your husband tries harder to be the man he knows you want him to be, he will have less to worry about in the future. (And you will have less to be dissatisfied about.)

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, Sept. 27, the 270th day of 2007. There are 95 days left in the year.

Today's highlight:

On Sept. 27, 1964, the government publicly released the report of the Warren Commission, which found that Lee Harvey Oswald had acted alone in assassinating President Kennedy.

On this date:

In 1779, John Adams was named to negotiate the Revolutionary War's peace terms with Britain.

In 1825, the first locomotive to haul a passenger train was operated by George Stephenson in England.

In 1854, the first great disaster involving an Atlantic liner occurred when the steamship Arctic sank with 300 people aboard.

In 1928, the United States said it was recognizing the Nationalist Chinese government.

In 1939, Warsaw, Poland, surrendered after weeks of resistance to invading forces from Nazi Germany and the Soviet Union during World War I.

In 1942, Glenn Miller and his Orchestra performed together for the last time, at the Central Theater in Passaic, N.J., prior to Miller's entry into the Army.

In 1957, "Tonight" hosted by Steve Allen, made its network debut on NBC-TV.

In 1956, Olympic track and field gold medalist and Hall of Famer Babe Didrikson Zaharias died in Galveston, Texas, at age 45.

In 1979, Congress gave final approval to forming the Department of Education, the 15th Cabinet agency in U.S. history.

In 1991, President George H.W. Bush announced in a nationally broadcast address that the United States had U.S. battlefield nuclear weapons, and called on the Soviet Union to match the gesture.

Ten years ago: The space shuttle Atlantis blasted off, docking hours later with its problem-plagued Russian Mir station to drop off American David Wolf and pick up Michael Foale.

Five years ago: President George W. Bush said the United Nations should have a chance to force Saddam Hussein to give up his weapons of mass destruction before the United States acted on its own against Iraq, but told a Republican fundraising event in Denver that action had to come quickly.

One year ago: President Bush hosted a peacemaking dinner at the White House for the bickering leaders of Pakistan and Afghanistan, Gen. Pervez Musharraf and Hamid Karzai. Republicans announced they would hold their 2008 presidential convention in the Twin Cities of Minnesota. A gunman took six girls hostage at a high school in Bailey, Colo.; he molested them and killed one girl before committing suicide.

Crossword gives woman a clue to marriage proposal

BOSTON (AP) — It was the crossword puzzle version of getting his marriage proposal plastered on a stadium jumbotron.

Artie Egmont and Jennie Bass were writing on a puzzle titled "Popping the question" in the latest issue of The Boston Globe's Sunday magazine. Bass spotted her slater's name and her best friend's name. But initially thought it was just a coincidence.

Then they got to 111 across: "Generic proposal". (Jen. + generic). The answer:

"Will you marry me?"

"We got to the 'Will you marry me?' clue, and I said, 'Will you marry me, Jennie?' I got up, got the ring, and got down on one knee and she said yes, she was elated."

It took her a minute to say yes, Egmont told the Globe.

Egmont, 29, of Cambridge, contacted the magazine this summer to ask if the people who create crossword puzzles would write a special puzzle for him.

Emily Cox and Henry Rathvon, a married puzzle-writing team who have been writing the Globe crossword puzzles for years, agreed.

The tricky part was writing an entire puzzle that would be a clue to the happy couple, but not obscure to all the other readers who do the puzzles.

Bass, 29, said there was no reason for her to suspect anything when they started doing the puzzle.

"Then he got up and came back with a box and it was pure elation," she said.

After Minn. bridge collapse, engineers worry that they are causing undue alarm

By Brian Bakst
Associated Press writer

ST. PAUL, Minn. — State Highway officials around the country want the government to stop scaring the public by using dire-sounding phrases such as "structurally deficient" and "fracture critical" to describe bridges in need of repairs.

In interviews and government documents obtained by The Associated Press, some engineers say the terms are making America's bridges sound sicker than they really are, and they would prefer less-alarming phrases, or perhaps a "Health Index" for the nation's spans.

The issue came up after the Minneapolis bridge collapse Aug. 1 that killed 13 people. The span, along with more than 73,000 other U.S. bridges, had been classified as structurally deficient, a term some engineers say sent shudders across the nation because it was widely misunderstood.

"People seem to think a bridge is within a hair's breadth of collapse when they hear these terms," Montana's chief transportation engineer Loran Frazier vented in an e-mail survey of his peers after the Interstate 35W disaster. "There seemed to be borderline hysteria regarding the bridges."

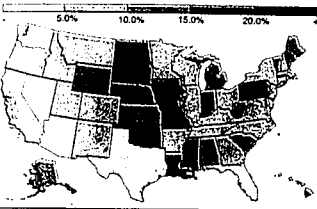

At least one highway-safety watchdog group argued that the terms are misleading and ought to be changed, and said there is little risk that new terminology would give the public a false sense of security about the nation's bridges.

Control over the labeling system rests with Congress and the Federal Highway Administration, part of the Transportation Department.

Deficient bridges a nationwide issue

About 12 percent of the nation's 607,363 bridges were classified as structurally deficient in 2006.

The department would not comment directly on the terms used to classify bridges' state of repair.

Such terminology is expected to be discussed next month at the American Association of State Highway and Transportation Officials' annual conference beginning Thursday in Milwaukee. The association conducted the survey, and the AP obtained the results as part of a government records request.

"I don't believe the industry understood how big of a problem it was until they started trying to explain it to the media and to the public," said Kelley Rehm, the association's program manager for bridges and structures.

About 12 percent of the nation's 607,363 bridges are classified as structurally deficient, according to 2006 figures from the FHWA.

The terms date to 1978, when Congress updated guidelines for replacing and rehabilitating bridges. The categories are important because they determine how federal money is doled out to states.

"A bridge is typically labeled 'structurally deficient' if regular inspections uncover significant deterioration such as advanced cracking in concrete or steel components. The rating often leads to weight restrictions and increased monitoring and maintenance."

The term "functionally obsolete" is applied to bridges that don't meet current design standards, generally because of changing traffic demands. Bridges built decades ago, for instance, sometimes carry narrower shoulders or lower clearance than today's structures.

"Fracture critical" is applied to bridges without multiple backup features, meaning that if one critical component failed, the entire structure could give way.

The Interstate 35W bridge was rated both structurally deficient and fracture critical. The cause of the disaster is still under investigation.

Potato farmers adapting to new food safety requirements

By Blake Nicholson Associated Press writer

MANDAN, N.D. — As potato farmers harvest this year's crop, many are being held for the first time to guidelines aimed at preventing a food safety scare similar to the deadly E. coli outbreak in spinach last year.

Besides watching the weather and keeping their equipment in good shape, many potato farmers must now also ensure that their fields have portable toilets and that their workers know the importance of washing hands, among other requirements.

Federal guidelines known as Good Agricultural Practices, or GAP, are aimed at reducing the risk of food safety hazards during the production, handling and processing of fruits and vegetables. The program is voluntary unless a processor is selling food to the federal government for such purposes as school lunch programs.

Until now, the guidelines have typically not been applied to potato farming since, unlike spinach and other fresh produce, potatoes are usually cooked before being eaten, thus reducing the potential for food-related illnesses.

Now, many food companies are demanding that potato farmers meet the same guidelines.

"Some of our big customers are saying we expect our growers and processors to be GAP-compliant," said Rick Phillips, spokesman for Boise, Idaho-based J.R. Simplot Co., a potato processor that contracts with growers in Idaho, North Dakota, Washington, Oregon and the Canadian province of Manitoba. "We think it will be something pretty well expected or demanded of the major food producers."

Farmers say they see the need to ensure food safety, but many are wary of too much oversight by officials who have never set foot on a farm.

Having portable water for field workers to wash their hands and other requirements are great "in theory," said Monte Benz, who is harvesting 3,000 acres of potatoes, onions and other crops near Steele and is still trying to figure out how best to meet the guidelines. "But in the real world, it doesn't work that easy."

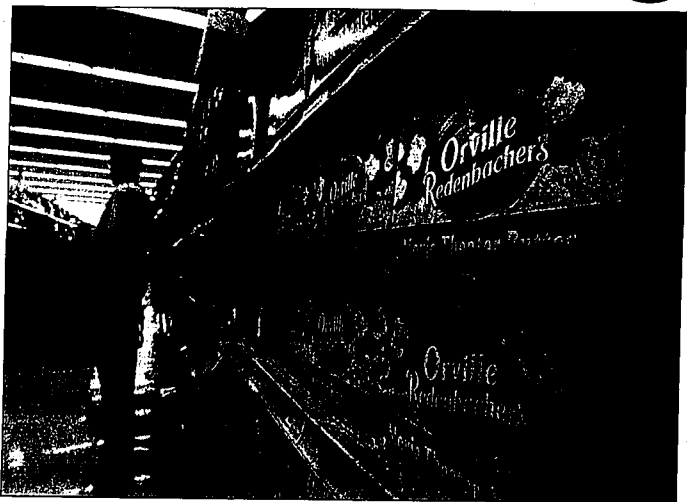

An E. coli outbreak traced to bagged baby spinach last year was blamed for the deaths of three people and for sickening hundreds more. The source of the bacteria was found to be California cattle ranch next to spinach fields.

John Keeling, head of the National Potato Council, said the potato industry, which includes more than 3,000 farms across the country, hopes to work with the government to tailor the new guidelines to potatoes.

Keeling said the industry is asking processors to adopt the same standards as other vegetable growers. "We don't want a situation where a farmer who grows for a couple of different processors has a different set of procedures" for each company, he said.

Some farmers worry about the cost of meeting GAP guidelines, particularly for inspections, which they must pay for.

Lethal flavoring

Orville Redenbacher brand popcorn is seen on shelves at a market in Omaha, Neb. The nation's largest microwave popcorn maker, ConAgra Foods Inc., said Wednesday it will change the recipe for its Orville Redenbacher and Act II brands over the next year to remove a flavoring chemical linked to a lung ailment in popcorn plant workers.

House Democrats order OSHA to regulate worker exposure to popcorn flavoring that can cause lung problems

By Jesse J. Holland Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — House Democrats on Wednesday ordered federal safety regulators to limit popcorn plant workers' exposure to a flavoring chemical linked to a lung ailment, saying further delay could cost lives.

The lack of an Occupational Safety and Health Administration standard on diacetyl "has endangered the health of employees," said Rep. Betty Sutton, D-Ohio. "That is why we have to act today. Workers should never have to choose between their health and feeding their families."

But the Bush administration and House Republicans think the Democrats' bill is premature, and Congress' interference with OSHA's work may cause more harm than good.

"We believe that it's important to give OSHA time to complete a scientific study of diacetyl exposure and to issue a recommended exposure limit for the use of that chemical," said Rep. Lincoln Diaz-Balart, R-Fla. "Without a complete study, Congress may push manufacturers to use different chemicals that could be even more directly responsible for diseases."

Diacetyl occurs naturally in foods such as butter, cheese and fruits, and the Food and Drug Administration has approved its use as a flavor ingredient. The concern is when workers inhale it in manufacturing settings — either in making the flavoring or adding it to food products ranging from popcorn and all flavoring manufacturing locations using diacetyl to limit exposure to the chemical; institute air monitoring, medical surveillance and safety labeling; and require the wearing of protective clothing and equipment for workers exposed to it.

"Two years after the legislation is signed, the rules would apply to everywhere diacetyl is processed or used."

OSHA has not acted, so today we will," said Rep. Robert Andrews, D-N.J.

UAW, GM reach tentative agreement

By Tom Krisher and Deean Durbin Associated Press writers

DETROIT — The United Auto Workers and General Motors Corp. agreed Wednesday to a tentative contract that ends a two-day national strike, the first against the automaker in 37 years — and puts responsibility for retirees' health care into the union's hands.

GM and the UAW confirmed that the deal creates a GM-funded, UAW-run trust to administer retiree health care. The two sides gave no other details, but a person briefed on the contract told The Associated Press that it also would give workers bonuses and lump-sum payments and would pay newly hired workers at lower rates. The person requested anonymity because the contract talks are private.

The union said the agreement with the nation's largest automaker was reached shortly after 3 a.m. The UAW canceled the strike about an hour later and some workers could return as early as Wednesday afternoon.

The contract must be reviewed by local UAW presidents and will then be subject to a vote of GM's 74,000 rank-and-file members. The agreement is expected to set a pattern for contracts at Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler LLC.

The deal means UAW workers will head back to their jobs at around 80 GM facilities across the nation. The union went on strike at 11 a.m. Monday when talks broke down, ending GM's production and causing layoffs and shutdowns at parts factories.

It was the first nationwide strike against GM during auto contract negotiations since 1970. The UAW last struck GM in 1939, when a 54-day strike at two plants shut down production across the country.

United Auto Workers President Ron Gettelfinger addresses the media at a news conference at the UAW Solidarity House to announce an agreement with General Motors early Wednesday in Detroit.

GM said in a statement that the deal will make it significantly more competitive and provides "the basis for maintaining and strengthening its core manufacturing base in the United States."

The company went into the negotiations seeking to cut or phase what it said is about a $25-per-hour labor cost disparity with its Japanese competitors.

VIDEO GAME REVIEW

The dragons in 'Lair' are majestic, but the gameplay is frustrating.

Enter the dragons ... don't get burned by 'Lair'

BY LOU KESTEN
The Associated Press

Back in the day — say, 550 A.D. — dragons were scary. They torched villages, hoarded treasures and kidnapped virgins, and one of them even took down legendary tough guy Beowulf. In Western cultures, at least, you didn't want to mess with a dragon.

Dragons got better PR in Asia, where they were generally seen as symbols of good luck and prosperity. Over the years, the kindly dragon has become more familiar, reaching its nadir with Peter, Paul and Mary's "Puff, the Magic Dragon."

The dragons in video games aren't that wimpy, but they've usually been somewhat domesticated. I still can't figure out why a flying, fire-breathing brute would let itself be dominated by a scrawny human, but in fantasyland an infinite number of dragons are apparently ready to do our bidding. Let's meet a few of them:

• "Lair" (Sony for the PlayStation 3, $59.99) — The dragons in "Lair" are some of the most majestic creatures ever seen in a video game. The developers at Sony's Factor 5 studio have lavished an unprecedented amount of attention on the beasts, carefully crafting them down to their individual scales. It's worth checking out "Lair" just to marvel at the way the sun shines through a dragon's translucent wings.

Sadly, the gameplay in "Lair" doesn't come close to its glorious visuals. You play a dragon-mounted soldier while defending your country against a jealous neighbor. Early on, you and your comrades are in the air fighting waves of enemy dragons, which is where this game's first major issue comes up: It's awfully hard to distinguish between good guys and bad.

A more significant problem is the game's control scheme. It depends on the motion-sensing capabilities of the PS3's Sixaxis controller — you tilt it to turn your dragon, or you lift it up and back to pull a U-turn. Unfortunately, the controls are stubbornly imprecise, making tight turns nearly impossible. Most of the challenge comes from getting your dragon to fly in the right direction, making "Lair" one of the most frustrating games in a long time.

• "Blue Dragon" (Microsoft, for the Xbox 360, $59.99) — Shu is a boy with a curious skill: When he gets into a jam, a blue dragon appears over his shoulder to do his fighting. Shu's buddies have their own animal familiars — a bird, a bat — and they join forces to build an evil mastermind and his minions.

Ketchum tosses thank-you party, featuring Miller, Willis, Carole King

BY KAREN BOSSICK
For the Times-News

KETCHUM—If you didn't feel the earth move under your feet during the recent Castle Rock Fire, Carole King intends to make sure you feel it Saturday night.

The Grammy Award-winning singer/songwriter, whose hits include "So Far Away," "It's Too Late" and "I Feel the Earth Move," is teaming up with the Steve Miller Band and Bruce Willis on Saturday night at the Kick Ash Bash concert.

"I'm really glad I could make it," said King, 65, who, like Miller and Willis, has a home in the area. "This event is about neighbors thanking neighbors. Well, I'm a neighbor and I'm coming to say, 'Thank you.'"

The concert runs from 7 to 10 p.m. Saturday on East Avenue in downtown Ketchum. Tickets are $25 for general admission and $200 for VIP admission, which includes a private meet-and-greet with Miller.

Firefighters who fought the Castle Rock Fire will be admitted free, their admission coordinated through the Ketchum Fire Department.

All proceeds will go to the Ketchum/Sun Valley Volunteer Firefighters Association and the

'THE KINGDOM'

Film raises complex questions, mainly comes up with pat answers

BY CHRISTY LEMIRE
 The Associated Press

Simultaneously a well-crafted action flick and a drama about global politics, "The Kingdom" wants to appeal to both the lowest common denominator as well as those seeking slightly more intellectual fare.

It moderately succeeds at achieving both.

Director Peter Berg ("Friday Night Lights"), working from a script by Matthew Michael Carnahan, rises some intriguing questions about cultural misconceptions and revenge, then comes up with answers that feel a bit too pat.

He's assembled a strong cast in Jamie Foxx, Jennifer Garner, Chris Cooper and Jason Bateman, then has them solve a complicated terrorist attack in a matter of mere days in a country where they're not exactly wanted.

The four star as FBI agents who secretly travel to Saudi Arabia to determine who was behind a massive, deadly bombing at an American oil-company compound in Riyadh. (A couple of their colleagues were killed while responding to the blast. This time, it's personal.)

Foxx, who's surely overqualified for this gig, nonetheless brings his trademark cool and charisma to the role of Special Agent Ronald Fleury, the team's leader who flings his last-minute access to the country by threatening to blackmail the Saudi ambassador to the United States.

Garner doesn't get to do much as the group's forensic specialist. As a woman she is treated with particular sensitivity, and in a moque scene he brusquely informed that she's not allowed to touch the bodies of Muslim victims. Which, in theory, she should have anticipated, since she's also supposed to be a linguistics expert.

Cooper provides the most substance as the group's veteran, bomb expert Grant Sykes, who stuns the local investigators with his down-home willingness to get his hands dirty—along with his face and entire body—while digging for clues at the center of the bomb's impact.

And Bateman, in a rare role that lets him show he's capable of more than comedy, co-stars as intelligence guru Adam Leavitt. Yes, he gets a few chances to crack wise and provide comic relief, but he's also the one who ends up in the most terrifying situation of all.

Our fantastic foursome run into bureaucratic roadblocks before they even leave the country; the attorney general, played by an overly pompous Danny Huston, prohibits them from traveling to Saudi Arabia out of concern for the sensitivity of Saudi royals, which they defy. Once they arrive, they find they've been assigned a baby sitter in Col. Al Ghazi (Ashraf Barhom from "Paradise Now," a real stand-out), whose job is to make sure that they're safe, which doesn't necessarily coincide with making sure they carry out a thorough investigation.

Jeremy Piven, as a U.S. State Department official, also wants them to leave as quickly as possible to avoid any potential international conflicts. Essentially, he's playing yet another version of Art of the State. "Espionage"—and by now, it has gotten seriously out of control, Piven has turned into a parody of himself. He has got to show he's capable of more.

Fleury and Al Ghazi form an unlikely bond, which conveniently allows Fleury to come full-circle from the loss of his friend at the film's start. Foxx and Barhom are so good together, though, they make this obvious device more tolerable than it should be.

What also keeps "The Kingdom" engaging throughout is that it's great to look at. (Mauro Fioresi, whose films include "Twining Day" is the cinematographer). Shot in the 115-degree heat of Arizona and on location in Abu Dhabi, it has a visual intensity and intimacy reminiscent of Michael Mann (who happens to be one of the producers), with a prolonged, climactic gun battle that's especially brutal.

By having Fleury and Co. annihilate everyone in their path with a seemingly unlimited amount of firepower, perhaps "The Kingdom" is trying to say that vengeance is blind. But it also happens to look pretty cathartic.

Movie nuggets

• "Balls of Fury"/C+ A flagrant steal of the Bruce Lee classic "Enter the Dragon," this goofball farce substitutes table tennis for kung fu, as a paddler infiltrates a crime king's lair. Co-writers Robert Ben Garant and Thomas Lennon are the perps behind "Ieno 911," and while this is slightly more sophisticated in its comic strategies, "slightly" remains the operative word. 1 hour, 30 minutes. PG-13.

• "The Bourne Ultimatum"/A- Matt Damon returns as amnesiac action hero Jason Bourne in the third installment of a smart, taut spy trilogy based on novels by Robert Ludlum. Director Paul Greengrass, who helmed "The Bourne Supremacy," delivers a kinetic adventure with political resonance, as Bourne finally discovers the origins of his memory loss. Joaquin Phoenix and Julia Stiles reprise their roles as allies while David Strathairn and Albert Finney join the cast as villains. 1 hour, 51 minutes. PG-13.

• "The Brave One"/B+ "The Brave One" is a canny, thoughtful and violent new film from director Neil Jordan ("The Crying Game"), asks if perhaps there is a killer lurking within each of us. It stars Jodie Foster as Erica Bain, a radio talk host who joins New York listening societies about "the safest big city in the world." Until one evening when she is mugged in a Central Park tunnel, beaten close to death, while her fiancé is killed. And after weeks in a coma, she unexpectedly finds a murderous urge within her. The New York locations help to accentuate the post 9-11 paranoia at work, but the film has a clearer antecedent in 1974's "Death Wish." If "The Brave One" draws the stable audience it deserves, look for it to trigger debate over the morality of Erica's actions. No matter which side you find yourself on, it is hard to deny that this is an urban thriller with something worth thinking about. 2 hours, 2 minutes. R.

• "Eastern Promises"/A- One of David Cronenberg's finest films, with Viggo Mortensen as a driver for the Russian Mafia in London, and Naomi Watts as a midwife determined to protect the life of a newborn infant. A diary leads her to the sealed world of the Russians, led by Armin Mueller-Stahl as the patriarch and Vincent Cassel as his son; the result isn't exactly a crime story, but a thriller about human nature. It.

• "Bvan Almighty"/C- This season's typical summer comedy — with Steve Carell as a new congressman being asked by God to build an ark for a pending flood — barely gets started before a big dog bites Carell in his privates and then places a little canine poop on his new lawn. Oh, those Hollywood filmmakers. Do they know how to get the mundane yucks started or what? "Evan Almighty," a sequel of sorts to "Bruce Almighty," in which Carell played Jim Carrey's TV news nemesis, rarely lifts its comedy quotient much higher. So, faster than you can say Steve Martin, it looks like Carell's promising film career has been reduced to the inane shenanigans of "Cheaper by the Dozen." 1 hour, 28 minutes. PG.

• "Feast of Love"/D That this is an overstuffed melodrama, better suited for broadcast as a TV movie of the week than as a theatrical release, is bad enough. That it comes from Robert Benton, a veteran whose output has slowly, steadily declined in quality since writing "Bend Sin and Clyde" and "Hillbilly" and directing "Kramer vs. Kramer," is just plain sad. But what's truly troubling is all the way the film, written by Allison Burnett based on the novel by Charles Baxter, regards women as idiots and objects. Every female actress gets fully, gratuitously naked at some point (except Jane Alexander, who manages to maintain some dignity alongside Morgan Freeman, who plays her husband). One (played by Selma Blair) abruptly leaves her husband (Greg Kinnear) for another woman — a stereotypical, soft-bellied-playing, predatory lesbian. Another (Alisa Davalos) consults a psychic about her blossoming romance with a fellow coffee house employee (Toby Hemingway) then goes into a tizzy of wedding and baby planning based on the forecast. The worst (Radia Mitchell) is involved with a married man (Billy Burke), then marries Kinnear's character for stability in their love, yet maintains the affair with this person who's quick to slap her face and call her the most profane word you can hurl at a woman. This is supposed to be a romantic comedy? Sounds more like the guest list for "Dr. Phil." R. 105 minutes.

• "In the Valley of Elah"/(Not Rating) A war veteran (Tommy Lee Jones) and his wife (Charlize Theron) search for their son, a soldier who has recently returned from Iraq but has mysteriously gone missing (Jason Patric). R.

ganized an Ash Bash festival to thank firefighters who worked on the blaze. So the Renaissance Fair was called off. The fair will return next August.

• "Mr. Bean's Holiday"/C A pleasant-enough trifle, a collection of amiable sketches strung together, as the near-silent king of British wit takes a praiseful-filled road trip from rainy London to the sunny beaches of the French Riviera. 1 hour, 30 minutes. At metro theaters. G.

• "No Reservations"/C Catherine Zeta-Jones and Aaron Eckhart co-star as rival chefs; she hates him as a rival, but inevitably they're drawn together, thanks partly to the matchmaking of her sister's orphaned child (Albigan Breslin). Also, the characters seem to feel more passion for food than for one another. Remake of the 2002 German film "Mostly Marbles." 1 hour, 44 minutes. PG.

• "Game Plan"/C Rating in this film's comedy, rough and tough football player Joe Kingman (Dwayne "The Rock" Johnson) can tackle anything on the field, but he's not sure how to handle the arrival of a girl who claims to be his daughter. PG

• "Stardust"/C+ A shooting star (Charlie Davis) falls into a forbidden kingdom, and Charlie Cox enters the kingdom to get it for his love (Sienna Miller). Also fighting for the star's woman: a wicked witch (Michelle Pfeiffer) and a dying king (Power O'Brien). Robert De Niro turns up as a cross-dressing pirate in an atypical. This fantasy is cluttered and too busy; funny, not boring, but "The Princess Bride" it's not 2 hours, 2 minutes.

The Community Education Center at the College of Southern Idaho will offer the self-enrichment class "You Can Take Better Pictures" from 7 to 9 p.m. Thursdays, Oct. 4 to Nov. 1. In Shields 208 on the Twin Falls campus.

Cost is $55, and Rod Marhis instructs the non-credit class. Organizers say the class can help you solve the mysteries of photography and take better pictures by learning to use all the right tools (meters, lenses, film and filters) and techniques. Through practice and critiques, students will learn how to take amazing pictures with their 35mm or digital cameras by using the right exposures and proper compositions. Each student is responsible for the purchase and processing of the film used for class.

"Knocked Up" R

The distinctive element in Judd Apatow's comedy has always been his love for what might be called the differently socialized (the term "loser" buys in too readily to a system that the writer-director clearly doesn't subscribe to), and "Knocked Up" follows happily in that tradition, with the opening sequence an exuberant tribute to the dumb life.

But if "The 40-Year-Old Virgin" mined all that was most pathetic and painful about its hero's predicament to create the kind of comedy that made you want to avert your eyes and scream, "Knocked Up" takes it surprisingly easy on Seth Rogan's character. Ben, even though he's young and beefy and could probably handle the criticism.

Ben Stone (Rogan) is an amiable slacker and dedicated sonner whose marshmallow physique underscores his even softer aspirations. Alison Scott (Katherine Heigl) is a savvy Vaykaly, recently promoted to on-camera talent on the E! network. Ben and Alison meet one evening at a nightclub where Alison has gone to celebrate a promotion with her older, married sister, Debbie (Leslie Mann).

When Debbie is prematurely called away on a child-related emergency, Alison decides to stay behind and keep drinking with Ben and his buddies—much to their surprise and, frankly, ours.

There once was a time, long ago, when to get these two together, you'd have had to manage them on the Blue Lagoon. And yet here, an ill-advised one-night stand leads to an unplanned pregnancy, an unplanned pregnancy leads to a decision to keep the baby, and a decision to keep the baby leads to the young odd couple, barely into their 20s, deciding to make the best of it and try to make the as-yet-nonexistent relationship work.

It's a promising premise, and Apatow takes it unexpected directions. But "Knocked Up" is so enamored of Ben and his insouciant charm that it falls to wonder what it must feel like for the girl. It's one thing to go with the idea that Ben and Alison dwell in different leagues, which after all is the point of the movie. It's another thing altogether for the heroine, who in true girl-on-pedestal form is beautiful, smart, successful, nice and pretty much cool with everything, never to get even the tiniest chance to wonder if maybe she might have done a little better. Alison's view of her future with Ben fluctuates according to what he does or doesn't do in a given situation, or how well or badly her sister and brother-in-law Pete (Paul Rudd) are getting along. But it's never measured up to her own hopes or dreams for a relationship. What her type is, we'll never know.

It should come as no surprise that a movie like this will be firmly entrenched in the boys'-eye-view. But if Alison weren't so pregnant, you'd swear she was stuck in the role of the sacrificial virgin. Ben lives in a post-college frat-house with his buddies (Jay [Jay Baruchel], Jason [Jason Segel], Jonah [Jonah Hill], Martin [Martin Starr] and Jodi [Charlyne Yi]), where they spend their days combing movies for nude scenes to catalog on their website and thinking up creative ways to smoke pot (fish bowl on the head, snorkeling mask, etc.).

Watching Alison slowly come around to the idea of mating with this guy for life, it's hard not to feel kind of sorry for her. Ben may have no job, no muscle tone and no clue when he's doing, but he may be the best thing that ever happened to Alison by virtue of the fact that he's pretty much the only thing that's ever happened to her outside of work.

That's not to say "Knocked Up" isn't funny—It's so consistently well written that it sometimes seems as if every one of Apatow's lines has been lovingly hand-crafted by stoned Thylean monks.

"Next" PG-13

When we first see Cris Johnson (Nicolas Cage) in "Next," a confusing thriller directed by Lee Tamahori, he's sitting on a in a dilly slapping a martini and looking strikingly like Richard E. Grant after a terrible night's sleep. Cris, we soon learn, is a sad-sack Las Vegas magician whose rather astounding psychic abilities (he has the gift of being able see what happens to him two minutes in advance) have failed to attract much of a paying audience. Consequently, he's reduced to supplementing his income at slot machines and card tables—a talent that has, not surprisingly, attracted the attention of casino security and a federal agent named Callie Ferris (Julianne Moore).

What the casino people want from him is obvious. What the feds are after is not. Early in the film we learn that a nuclear bomb belonging to the Russian Federation has gone missing and somebody intends to use it. Surely, a situation as grave as this would require the coordinated efforts of worldwide intelligence communities, so "Next" takes us directly to the heart of the operation: a top federal agent (Moore) who will stop at nothing to capture a clairvoyant magician who might be able to help locate the bomb.

This, needless to say, inspires little confidence in the system, not to mention the magician, especially since the magician in question just wants to be left alone to pursue his dream girl. Lis Cooper (Ble) is the apparition he's been doggedly stalking since his recently expanded fortune-telling abilities first alerted him to her imminent arrival in his life.

Granted, he's also worried that if he volunteers to help the authorities, he'll spend the rest of his natural life strapped to a chair with his eyelids pried open, watching newscasts to divine the location of missing children and tax frauds. You can see his problem. If this is how matters of national security are handled, we'd all do well to huddle up in a rustic motel with somebody cute, forget about saving the world.

with a single lightning strike 11 miles out Warm Springs Road.

Miller wasn't surprised when his assistant, Dave Niedrich, told him about the fire while he was playing in Minnesota.

"I had this funny feeling when I left last that something like this might happen," Miller said.

"From the plane I could see a fire up north and a fire down south. You see these and you know exactly what's in store."

But the anticipation of smoky skies didn't dissuade him and Kim when 11 inches of rain fell on Sparta, Wis., in three hours, cancelling their next gig.

"Kim said, 'We've got three days off to go home,'" Miller recalled.

The couple was not prepared for what they saw from their plane as it approached Friedman Memorial Airport.

The sky was orange and brown. Ugly smoke billowed at Ketchum's boundaries.

And from where Miller sat, it looked as if the fire was right behind his house.

"I do a lot of aerial photography and I've taken many aerial shots looking right up the valley toward my home so I knew exactly where it was," he said. "I thought, ohmigod! It was scary."

The Millers had come home just in time to be evacuated.

Miller grabbed the hard-drives containing his music and the guitar on which Les Paul had taught him his first chords. Kim grabbed photographs and the couple's Austrian shepherd Springer spaniels.

And they walked away from the home that had served as a refuge from touring for the past 27 years. Its spacious grounds offering them ample opportunity to cross-country ski and play with the dogs, its studios offering Steve a place to experiment with the latest technology.

"It was hard to leave a lot of the instruments and equipment. But I thought: I've got my doggies, my wife—I don't care how quickly you don't care about the rest of it," said Miller, who came to Sun Valley to ski in 1979 and ended up buying a home.

For the next couple of days Miller drove around town focusing his camera through the smoke and wondering just how firefighters would be able to turn back the monster that had been unleashed.

"I had no idea how skillful these guys were. I mean—what can 200 guys with shovels do?" he said.

Two days later, they were allowed back into their home, even as they surmised correctly that firefighters had yet to face some of their biggest tests.

Miller's assistant set up a video camera so Miller could go online and watch the progress of the fire while on tour.

And Miller felt town again, this time thinking he might never see his home again.

But, as he left, he noticed the infusion of firefighters that had begun pouring in with the decision to prioritize the Castle Rock Fire as the No. 1 fire in the nation.

"There must have been 300 tents in the fields south of town. I went, 'Wow! When did they get here? And how did they get here?'"

Miller vowed then and there that he wanted to do something on behalf of the firefighters, no matter what the outcome.

"They let's play!" he said two weeks later when Niedrich told him of townspeople's efforts to put together a celebration thanking the firefighters. The timing of the Kick Ash Bash was perfect, Miller said, since the band had just finished the main leg of its tour in San Francisco.

Niedrich just penned a song for the firefighters, which Miller will play at the concert. And Miller is jazzed about the opportunity to have Bruce Willis and Carole King—who also own homes in the area—to join him on stage as he and his band of 30 years parade through such hits as "Fly Like an Eagle," "Abracadabra," "The Joker" and "Rock'n Me."

Saturday's concert in downtown Ketchum will be among friends and neighbors.

"We're going to have some fun—a good community get-together to raise money for the firefighters. And if someone wants to donate more than the price of the ticket, that's OK, too," he said.

"This was a very big, big event in our lives. So this concert is really more than a Kick Ash Bash. It's a concert of thanks and gratitude, as well."

"We want to make this one huge party and hope that everyone who loves Sun Valley will join us."

Waller said. "That we got out of this with no lives lost and no structures lost was a miracle. It's time to celebrate and show our gratitude to all who worked so hard to keep our community safe."

This article originally appeared in the Wood River Journal, a newspaper published in Hatley that is affiliated with the Times-News.

About Steve, Carole and Bruce

The enigmatic Steve Miller has gone from being one of the first young white West Coast blues-rockers to one of the biggest-selling pop rock artists of the late 1970s.

His father, a Milwaukee, Wis., pathologist, was always bringing home musical guests like Charles Mingus for dinner and informal recording sessions on an early pro-quality tape recorder the elder Miller invested in following World War II.

Les Paul, who invented the electric guitar and multi-track recording, taught young Steve his first guitar chords at age 5.

Miller formed his first group, a blues band, at age 12—teaching his older brother to play bass so their mom didn't have to drive him to his gigs at frat parties. Boz Scaggs was the lead singer.

Miller studied literature at the University of Copenhagen, but sessions work with Muddy Waters and Howlin' Wolf took precedence over Shakespeare and Chaucer.

The Summer of Love in San Francisco gave birth to the Steve Miller Blues Band, and soon Capitol Records was signing Miller to the most lucrative music recording contract in music history.

By 1973, Miller's "The Joker" was knocking Jim Croce's "Time in a Bottle" off the top of the pop charts and the Steve Miller Blues Band was knocking the socks off rock fans with songs like "Abracadabra," "Rock'n Me" and "Heart Like a Wheel."

"Fly Like an Eagle," which reached No. 3 on the Billboard charts in 1976, stayed on charts for nearly two years. The album "Book of Dreams," released in 1977, sold 3 million copies and contained "Jet Airliner," one of Miller's most enduring songs.

In 1983, at age 50, he was still touring, playing to audiences nearly half his age.

Carole King, a Rock and Roll Hall-of-Famer, had a successful 20-year career as a solo artist, including "So Far Away," "It's Too Late," "I Feel the Earth Move" and "Sweet Seasons." But her legendary reputation rests mostly on her songwriting, much of it in partnership with Gerry Goffin. Their remarkable nine-year run includes "Loco-Motion," No. 1. A hit for Little Eva in 1962, "Chain of Fools," No. 1 for Bobby Vee in 1961; "Will You Love Me Tomorrow," No. 1 for the Shirelles in 1961; "Go Away Little Girl," a No. 1 hit for Steve Lawrence in 1962; "One Fine Day," which reached No. 5 on the Billboard charts for The Chiffons in 1963; "Up on the Roof," No. 5 for The Drifters in 1963; "Hey Girl," No. 10 for Freddie Scott in 1963; "I'm into Something Good," No. 13 for Herman's Hermits in 1964; "Don't Bring Me Down," No. 10 for The Animals in 1966; "A Natural Woman," No. 4 for Aretha Franklin in 1967; and "Pleasant Valley Sunday," No. 3 for the Monkees in 1967.

Best known as the action hero behind cinema's "Die Hard" series, Bruce Willis became a twice-over recording artist during the late '80s. His debut album, "The Fortune Teller," became a surprise seller after the single "Respect Yourself" hit the top five in early 1987. Willis had two other modest hits, and recorded another LP two years later, but has remained outside music for the most part, performing only occasionally to inaugurate several Planet Hollywood restaurants.

the Castle Rock Fire, one of the most significant natural threats this Idaho resort community has ever faced.

The fire started about 11 miles out Warm Springs Road when a tree, struck by lightning in the early morning hours of Aug. 16, exploded into flames that eventually crossed 48,520 acres of federal forest.

More than 1,700 firefighters spent the next three weeks successfully defending more than a thousand homes, as well as Sun Valley ski resort and its trophy lodges, despite some of the driest conditions on record and a devil wind that couldn't make up its mind which way it wanted to blow.

The blaze put a huge dent in retail business, as it prompted the cancellation of the annual Wagon Days celebration and all but deflated what are generally three of the busiest tourist weeks of the year.

In sharp contrast, Ketchum will be alive with activity all weekend long during the Kick Ash Bash.

Side Street Strutters Open Arts on Tour season

Times-News

The Side Street Strutters practically evade the French Quarter. Odd, because there is no French Quarter in Tempe, Ariz.

In 1983, a group of musicians attending Arizona State University formed an ensemble whose artistic focus was the musical traditions of early New Orleans jazz. They wanted to explore the nuances and creative challenges of this indigenous American art form, and in tribute to the quaint little side streets where jazz was first heard in New Orleans' French Quarter the band called itself the Side Street Strutters.

For almost 25 years, the Strutters — saxophonist Robert Verd, clarinetist Vince Verdi, trumpet Greg Vortoku, drummer Paul Johnson, tuba player John Noriega, trombonist Roger Bissell and pianist Mark Massey — have performed regularly at Disneyland, on television and in national and international tours.

They'll open the Magic Valley Arts on Tour season Thursday night in the College of Southern Idaho Fine Arts Center auditorium in Twin Falls.

Now based in Los Angeles, the Strutters' repertoire encompasses more than half a century of jazz styles ranging from the early New Orleans Dixieland and blues sounds of Louis Armstrong, Jelly Roll Morton and Fats Waller; the classics of Cole Porter, Irving Berlin and George Gershwin; and the swing sounds from the libraries of Benny Goodman, Duke Ellington and Count Basie. This season's other Arts on Tour acts include:

• Oct. 11 — "The McManus Comedies — A Fine and Pleasant Misery," a one-man show by actor Tim McManus based on the hit movie "Misery" written Patrick McManus. "Misery" includes classic McManus lore such as the deer on the bicycle, Rance Cmbre's famous toboggan run, and how to brush the taste of dog off your

Magical Valley Arts on Tour

Concert Thursday

The Side Street Strutters will kick off the Magic Valley Arts on Tour season Thursday with a 7:30 p.m. concert in the College of Southern Idaho Fine Arts Center auditorium in Twin Falls. Tickets are $17 for adults or $12 for children.

Full-season subscriptions for Arts on Tour are now available. Subscription prices, which include tickets for all eight Arts on Tour programs, are $142 for adults, $118 for children or $98 for seniors. For tickets or a season brochure, call 732-6288. Tickets can also be purchased at the CSI Fine Arts Box Office or online at www.csi.edu/artsontour.

Mini-subscriptions, featuring five to seven of the eight performances, are also available.

• Feb. 21 — Barrage, a high-octane fiddle-fest combining the traditional spectacle with a visual and aural fusion of music, dance and theater. The Chicago Tribune described as "STOMP! with strings attached." Tickets: $29 for adults or $19 for children.

• March 24 — For more than 27 centuries, Chinese acrobats have been thrilling audiences, making it the longest-running folk art form in history. In China, acrobats are revered in much the same way prima ballerinas and opera singers are in the West, and it takes years of rigorous training to achieve excellence. The Golden Dragon Acrobats mix award-winning acrobatics, traditional dance and ancient and contemporary theatrical techniques. Tickets: $21 for adults or $15 for children.

• April 15 — Imago Theater returns to Twin Falls in FROGG. Populated with escaped penguins, silent sloths, finicky frogs, devilish snakes and numerous other things, Imago's show features ingenious masks, movement, outlandish costumes and finger-snapping music create a carnival of the absurd. Tickets: $16 for adults or $11 for children.

• May 15 — Dance Theater of Oregon, formed in 1931 by New York artists Mary Skegel and Fanny Lehman-Siegel, is known for its daring and exuberant brand of dance theater. From technical to poignant, dramatic to off-the-wall, DOT's program combines modern dance, ballet and theater. Tickets: $13 for adults or $9 for children.

"Blue Dragon" is the first release from Mistwalker, the studio founded by "Final Fantasy" creator Hironobu Sakaguchi to develop Japanese-style role-playing games for Microsoft. Xbox 360 owners have been waiting for this sort of game, but they are bound to be disappointed by this initial effort.

Most of the game is spent exploring a desolate landscape, wandering between settlements until the main villain shows up to goose things along. The fighting is moderately entertaining, but the cliché-ridden plot is pure detritus and the characters are annoying. "Blue Dragon" is a perfectly serviceable RPG — small price indeed for a legend like Sakaguchi.

Taking a chance on Jerome

BY ERICA LITTLEFIELD
Times-News correspondent

In September 1907, people from across the U.S. came to the Magic Valley to take a chance on Jerome. They came to participate in a land drawing, a lottery that could give them the opportunity for a new start in a promising new community.

Exactly 100 years later, Jerome is celebrating those early residents and the city's history with the Jerome Community Founder's Day Celebration. Set for 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday at Jerome's North Side Park, it's the final event in the Jerome centennial celebration. Along with a presentation on the land drawings and Jerome history, there will be historical demonstrations, games, displays and live entertainment — all for free, except for the pony rides and the kid-train rides.

"We really wanted to take it back to the grass roots and let people see what it was like all those years ago," said Kellee Traugher, co-chairwoman of the Jerome Centennial Committee.

Traugher said the committee chose the date for the Founder's Day Celebration to coincide with the 100th anniversary of the land drawings, which started on Sept. 30, 1907. According to an article in North Side Golden Jubilee, a special edition of North Side News published in 1957, that day two choice lots at the corner of Main and Lincoln were auctioned off by I.B. Perrine from atop his stagecoach. After the auction, more town lots were drawn by a lottery.

The next day, Oct. 1, lots on the outskirts of town were also drawn by lottery. Each person who bought into the drawing was assigned a number. The numbers were written on small wooden cubes and placed in a butter churn. One by one the numbers were pulled out. W.P. Rice of Harrison, Mo., held the lucky first number and purchased 160 acres south of town for $521.

According to the North Side Golden Jubilee, more than 1,700 people vied for a piece of the undeveloped, sagebrush-covered land. After all was said and done, more than $2 million in land had been sold.

Dale Hopper, assistant curator at the Jerome County Historical Museum, said he admires the persistence of Jerome's early settlers.

"They had no water, they had nothing, but they still wanted to be here," Hopper said. "It's quite amazing that they showed up and went at it like they did."

As part of this weekend's Community Founder's Day Celebration, Diane Davis, superintendent of Magic Valley Christian School, will give a presentation on the land drawings and Jerome's early history.

Visitors to the event can also enjoy historical demonstrations like rug hooking, spinning, butter churning and rope making and play old-fashioned games like three-legged and gunny sack races.

Horse-drawn wagons will take riders on a tour through downtown.

Linda Helms, a member of the Jerome County Historical Society board, hopes people take advantage of the historical elements of the celebration and gain a greater appreciation for their community.

"We need to remember what it was like for our ancestors and how they lived," Helms said. "It's important for children to know the sacrifices that their ancestors made to make such a fine community."

City celebrates 100 years with Founder's Day Celebration

The first land drawing in Jerome occurred on Sept. 30, 1907. Everyone gathered as numbers were drawn out of a churn.

Jerome's land drawings continued on Oct. 1, 1907. Tests were set up on the North Park grounds to accommodate those who came to take part.

The Vawvers, who live in Kimberly, perform at various Magic Valley events. They started playing music and performing when Andy inherited a fiddle from his great-grandfather 10 years ago. Both brothers started playing the violin soon after that. Matt now plays the banjo. Andy plays the mandolin and both brothers sing.

Matt said he enjoys historical music because it reveals things about the time it was written in. He and his brother are always on the lookout for old music with historical or local significance.

Forum to focus on arts in the Wood River Valley

BY KAREN BOSSICK
For the Times-News

KETCHUM — Art matters, whether it's painting, dance, theater or some other form.

At least, that's what a new economic study by Americans for the Arts shows.

And that's why the Wood River Arts Alliance is inviting mayors, business people and other interested people to join them for a Community Forum on "Arts and Economic Prosperity" Oct. 4 and the next Tuesday.

The forum starts with breakfast at 9:30 a.m. and continues to 11:30 a.m.

Sam Gappmayer, executive director of Sun Valley Center for the Arts, will present the findings of the study, which Wood River Valley arts organizations participated in.

And State Rep. Wendy Jaquet will moderate a panel looking at what the community needs to do to keep the arts healthy.

"The arts bring a fabric of our culture together," said Hilarie Neely, treasurer and education chairwoman with the Wood River Arts Alliance. "Every place one lives needs a sense of place. We get a lot of that from the nature around us, but we usually participate in that as individuals.

"Whenever there are festivals or major arts programs, that's when you see the community coming together and celebrating. We're very lucky to have so much diversity in the arts in such a small community. Usually you see what we have only in bigger cities."

It's been two years since the Wood River Arts Alliance held its first meeting. And a lot has happened since then.

The city of Halley established an arts commission. The city of Ketchum approved the installation of sculptures along its new Fourth Street Heritage Corridor. Both the cities of Ketchum and Sun Valley have provided some funding to the arts alliance. And the alliance got a leadership grant through the Idaho Arts Commission that allowed the organization to hire Keith Moore as part-time executive director.

"Everyone's starting to work together," said Neely. "Ketchum allowed the Sun Valley Arts and Crafts Festival to set up in Adkins-Sons Park this summer, and they more than doubled their attendance in their new location. And the city of Sun Valley was very supportive of the Sun Valley Shakespeare Festival in its new location in Festival Meadows."

The Wood River Arts Alliance was founded in 1991 to promote vibrancy in the arts and cultural life of the Wood River Valley. Chaired by Claudin McCain, it is made up of 22 arts organizations and individual artists.

The alliance is collaborating on a Children's Arts Festival scheduled for Jan. 26 at the Community Campus. The festival, with the theme "Come Play With Us," will offer free performances and classes exposing children to all the arts forms offered in the valley.

To take part in the Oct. 4 forum, call 578-7720.

"This is my 24th year of teaching, and it's by far the most meaningful show I've done," said Gordon Smith, director of bands for the Jerome School District.

The piece, titled "Jerome Centennial Field Show," uses narration, props, marching formations and music to chronicle important aspects of Jerome's history, from I.B. Perrine and the land drawings, to the World War II-era Hunt Camp, to St. Benedict's Family Medical Center.

According to Smith, the piece took about a year to prepare. Smith said the music for the show is a mix of original music he composed and familiar songs such as "America the Beautiful," "Colonel Bogey March" and "Born to Be Wild."

Students in the band have had input on many aspects of the project.

Smith said the students learned about Jerome's history and had great ideas for the piece, like having a student ride a unicycle to represent Evie Knievel and his famous jump.

"It's almost like a love poem to the city," Smith said. "It's been a great way to get the kids involved with their community."

The band will take the piece to three marching band competitions over the next three weeks.

Beatles tribute act lifts the lid on concert season

Times-News

—You say want a Revolution? A Revolution it is, on Tuesday night at — of all places — Burley's King Fine Arts Center.

The four-man Beatles tribute will open the Mini-Caslin Community Concerts Association season. Tim Piper (playing John Lennon), Jim Nell (Paul McCartney), Greg Piper (George Harrison) and Mike Sarafian (Ringo Star) will arrive in Burley, but unfortunately the Fab Four down to the slick, collarless suits, Beatle boots and mop-tops.

Tim Piper was born and raised in New York City by showbiz parents, and was chosen to portray Lennon in the E! production "The John Lennon Story" in 1998. In the decade since, he's toured the world with Yesterday, Backstreet, Beatlemania Live, Imagine and other Beatles tribute acts. He also performs in Working Class Hero: A Tribute to John Lennon.

Nell, a Californian, is a recording engineer who runs his own studio; he has been a cast member of many original and tribute bands. Greg Piper has performed with various members of the original New York cast of Beatlemania, and has been a professional musician, singer and actor since age 11. Sarafian has toured nationally with such groups as Backbeat, The Fab Four and Beatlemania Live.

This season's other acts include:

• Nov. 14, 7:30 p.m., King Center — $50 is a journey through "The American songbook," featuring four singers backed by a three-man rhythm section. Their music includes show tunes, jazz standards, folk and rock.

• Score was conceived, written and directed by Matt Davoport. He has written and directed several original stage shows,

The Mini-Caslin Community Concerts Association will open its season Tuesday night with a performance by Revolution: a Tribute to the Beatles, at 7:30 p.m. in the King Fine Arts Center in Burley.

There is no reserved seating. Admission is by season membership and is available at the door at any concert. Generally, no individual tickets are sold at the door. Season membership prices are: $40 for adults, $20 for students and $110 for families. Family memberships include children living at home who are 5 or older.

Membership in the Mini-Caslin Community Concerts Association entitles a person to attend the five concerts offered this season in Burley, as well as those Community Concerts in Boise and Idaho Falls (see seating above), at no extra cost. There is no limit to the number of concerts, here or elsewhere, that members may attend. When membership "cards" are mailed in the fall to local members, a list of Idaho Falls and Boise performances is also included.

Pianist Angela Jia Kim has established a distinctive voice on the classical music scene, bringing the music of French masters and luminaries to the public with fresh poise. Kim has performed in New York City; Washington, D.C.; Chicago; San Francisco; Warsaw; and Montreal.

Her discography includes a 2005 album, titled "From Vienna to Paris," featuring the music of Schubert, Haydn, Schumann, Ravel and Liszt.

• May 2, 7:30 p.m., King Center — On Broadway! is a revue of show-stopping moments from the Broadway stage. A "grand staircase" is the centerpiece of the stage, and live musicians support eight singers and dancers.

The first act features favorite moments of song and dance from Broadway musicals such as "A Chorus Line," "Guys and Dolls," "42nd Street," "West Side Story," "The Sound of Music," "Oklahoma" and "Annie Get Your Gun." The second act celebrates today's popular musicals with song selections from "Wicked," "Mamma Mia," "Beauty and the Beast," "Hairspray," "Phantom of the Opera," "Les Miserables" and "Cats."

CSI theater considers the real 'Frankenstein'

BY STEVE CRUMP

No bolts in the neck. No green makeup. But maybe a suture or two.

That's how College of Southern Idaho theater professor Laine Steel and his cast are tackling "Frankenstein," a stage adaptation of Mary Shelley's classic 1818 novella that most people remember Boris Karloff's portrayal in the 1931 Hollywood film.

"It's almost farcical," Steel said. "That's not the book that Mary Shelley wrote."

Shelley's story was about independence — the dangers of meddling in nature and the perils of human pride.

"We wanted to get back to the original," he said.

"Frankenstein" begins its two-weekend run in the CSI Fine Arts Theater in Twin Falls next Wednesday.

Students were still working on Kevin Morkkola's makeup as of Tuesday. The sophomore's creature features will be something less than Karloff, Steel said.

"But it will suggest that he's been stitched together somehow," Shelley's tale is of a Swiss scientist, Shelley's Frankenstein (Anthony Sanchez), who manages to combine modern science with alchemy to build what he hopes will be a new race of creatures to which he would be a god.

The dissecting room and the slaughterhouse furnished many of my materials; and often did my human nature turn with loathing from my occupation, whilst, still urged on by an eagerness which perpetually increased, I brought my work near to a conclusion," Shelley writes of Frankenstein.

The creature was intended to be beautiful, but it revuls its creator, who flees. In retaliation, the

New Ritter Island State Park hosts Thousand Springs Festival

BY STEVE CRUMP
Times-News writer

New landlord, same party. The Nature Conservancy turned over its Thousand Springs Preserve at Hagerman to the state of Idaho last December—and a $1 million management endowment fund.

The 310 acres became Ritter Island State Park, containing two miles of riverfront and some of the most scenic springs and falls in the Thousand Springs area.

So this fall, the Southern Idaho Land Trust—which has been sponsoring the Thousand Springs Festival of the Arts as a fundraiser—is celebrating on the public's land.

"The festival includes artists from around the region, musicians, local food specialties and local wine, children's activities and regional history displays," said Julie Pence, SILT's executive director. "It is one of southern Idaho's most notable events."

Pence expects between 3,500 and 4,000 visitors and 150 volunteers.

There will be about 75 artists and artisans on hand, selling paintings, ceramics, glass, rugs, jewelry, wood and metal sculptures, pottery, candles, furniture and other items.

Now in a transition phase, the park is normally open only for a few hours on weekends, so the festival presents a chance for people to enjoy the scenery and learn the history of Ritter Island.

The Conservancy bought the property in 1986 from the Ritter family, which used it for a private hunting and fishing retreat. The island contains the home and historic barn built by Minnie Miller, a Salt Lake City busi-

The festival began in 1992 with the caretakers of Ritter Island at the time, Chris and Mike O'Brien. They used it as a fundraiser to help maintain the facilities on the island, which includes the largest intact springs along the Middle Snake River.

The springs burst out of the canyon walls in an area that provides habitat for a fish species found nowhere else, as well as other fish species, raptors, the Shoshone sculpin, as well as other fish species, raptors, waterfowl, herons, eagles and migrating songbirds.

COOKING CLASS SCHEDULE & EVENTS

CK Cooked a Little Lamb

With Chef Chris "CK" Kastner of CK's Real Food Restaurant in Hailey and Cheryl Bennett of Lava Lake Lamb

Tues., October 9th 7-9 PM $45.00.

Two of the Wood River Valley's greatest assets, Chef Chris Kastner of CK's Real Food Restaurant and Cheryl Bennett of Lava Lake Lamb are teaming up to bring you this top-notch cooking class. CK's is arguably the most critically acclaimed restaurant in Hailey and Lava Lake Lamb is now being served in the best restaurants in the biggest cities in the country.

Menu:

 Polenta & Roasted Peppers
 Rosemary-Marinated Leg of Lamb with Bruschetta

CK's Fresh Fruit Bundle

Chef Chris Kastner, aka "CK", has been in the kitchen since arriving in Sun Valley in 1976. Starting at the Sun Valley Inn as a dishwasher he'd already strong interest in cooking. After three years at the Inn he continued to refine his taste and craft by spending another 3 years at the Elkhorn Resort. After several more years learning the finer art of cooking with Chef Russell Armstrong at Chez Russell and at the well-known restaurant Trees in Corona Del Mar, Idaho was calling. Chris jumped at the chance to be a partner in the best restaurant in the state in 1985, Evergreen, where he cooked until September 2002.

Over the years, Chef Kastner has traveled to Europe to take classes, over eat and over drink in the name of research for Evergreen. In 2003 after 17 years as Chef/Partner at Evergreen Bistro, Chef Kastner embarked on a new bistro/trattoria style restaurant in Hailey called "CK's Real Food". Kastner was one of the first and most popular chefs to join Rudy's as a guest teacher.

Cheryl Bennett

Cheryl was born and raised in Idaho and comes from a family ranching background. She assists with the day to day operation of the business, as well as marketing our lamb and managing recreational opportunities on the ranch. Cheryl feels the job was made for her, saying, "Being part of Lava Lake allows me to work in the environment of my choice with a family business that truly cares about the land. I am excited to be involved in projects that not only enrich my life and my understanding of nature, but that I believe will preserve this landscape for future generations." Cheryl lives near the lambs with her husband and two young children.

Classic French for the American

Kitchen

With Chef Penny Moline
Wed., October 24th 7-9 PM $35.00.

Every professional chef learns French techniques during apprenticeship or school. It's one of the things that sets an amateur apart from a professional. In this class culinary arts instructor Chef Penny Moline will share some simple yet elusive techniques to bring your dishes to a higher level. The techniques you will learn in this down-to-earth-not-lusky class can be applied to a myriad of other dishes.

Menu:

Salade Verte with Vinaigrette
 Coq Au Vin

Mousseline Au Choclat

Chef Penny Moline is in her sixth year of teaching Culinary Arts at Davis Applied Technology College and as an adjunct teacher at Salt Lake Community College. After attending an American Culinary Federation Accredited program in Salt Lake City, she took pastry classes at Le Cordon Bleu in Paris. After working in Salt Lake City fine dining restaurants The Santa Fe Restaurant and Il Sassevo, she was Executive Pastry Chef at the only fine dining restaurant inside the media center during the 2002 Winter Olympics.

Blue Ribbon Pie

With Laura Fall-Sutton
Tues., November 13th 7-9 PM $40.00.
Laura put herself through college and medical school by cooking professionally. Today, her part-time passion is pie! Since she began entering pies into the Twin Falls County Fair in 2001, she's walked away with more ribbons and awards than we have space to mention. Let's face it, we know her as Doctor Pie! Get the dish (deep dish that is) on making great pie. Last year her pie class sold out very quickly and this year she's back with a host of new pies!

Menu:
Pies
Raisin Pie with Flaky Crust (this year's Best of Class!)
Caramelized Apple Pie with Flaky Crust
Pumpkin Pie with Absolutely Sinful Cereal Crust
Butterscotch Meringue Pie
Shaker Lemon Pie with Lattice Crust
Crusts:
Classic Flaky Pastry
Caramel Pastry
Food Processor Pastry
Absolutely Sinful Cereal Crust (Gluten Free!)
Laura Fall-Sutton, MD is a true foodie who was raised in a large family with European roots in Illinois. She grew up helping to prepare traditional German, Polish, English, Irish and American foods. Her mother often added Southern flare to those dishes, making them her own.

In her sophomore year of high school she began working in the kitchen of an upscale rehab center. She quickly worked her way up through the ranks as dishwasher, line cook, and then chef, until the medical profession lured her away from the stove. Once a resident of Twin Falls, she could often be found in the back-of-the-house at establishments like Metropolis in its heyday. These days, pie is her passion. In 2001 she entered her pies in the TF County Fair and walked away with "Best in Class" for her lemon Meringue Pie. Because "doctors are competitive" they teach you that in medical school", as she puts it, she's entered every year since. Earning blue ribbon after blue ribbon. Join us as she takes a moment away from her busy life to share her secrets.

Cristina's Soups for the Soul

With Cristina Ceccatelli Cook
Tues., January 8th 7-9 PM $45.00.
It's the dead of winter and we could all use some warmth. In honor of the publication of her new cookbook The Tuscan Table, Cristina Ceccatelli Cook will be making some of the most delicious soups featured in the book. Cristina will have copies of both of her cookbooks on hand to sign.
Menu:
Butternut Squash Soup with Pears and Leeks
Zuppa di Farro
For our delight, Cristina will also bring along some of her wonderful Italian breads and cookies

Cristina Ceccatelli Cook grew up in Italy on her family's estate in Tuscany. She is the founder and owner of Cristina's Restaurant, which she opened in 1993, five years after moving to the United States. She has authored a highly successful cookbook entitled Cristina's of Sun Valley and in September of 2007 her gorgeous new book The Tuscan Table was published. Cristina's Restaurant has been serving up seasonal and delicious fare for many years. She lives in Sun Valley, Idaho, with her husband, Steve, a local architect, and their son Christopher.

Stop in for a copy of the new cookbook Cristina's Tuscan Table and sign up for her cooking class.

Handmade Italian

With Chef Jon Mortimer, CEC of Mortimer's Restaurant, Boise
Tues., January 15th
7-9 PM $50.00.

Chef Jon Mortimer is back! Having run his long-time favorite restaurant "Mortimer's" in Boise he successfully opened "Franco Latino" in Eagle. In this class, Chef Mortimer will teach how to make fresh pasta along with other classic Italian dishes. Menu:
Fresh Handmade Pasta Dough
Pasta Al Forno
Chicken Picatta
Shrimp Trout Tortellini
Lemon Sauce
Zabaglione Caldo With Fresh Fruit
Jonathan R. Mortimer is an authority on Idaho cuisine and an acclaimed chef of Mortimer's T & B. Steaks restaurants in Boise, Idaho. After growing up in Idaho, graduating from the University of Arizona and the Hotel Maeger Culinary Academy, then traveling the world in search of new techniques, Chef Mortimer returned to his home state in the early 1990's to apply the cooking styles of the world to the foods indigenous to Idaho. Chef Mortimer is the author of the popular cookbook, The Idaho Table and is currently working on a book using Snake River Farms Kobe-style beef. In July 2005 Chef Mortimer joined the roster of chefs who have cooked at the James Beard House in NYC showcasing foods of Idaho. He and his wife Shara are the owners of Mortimer's Restaurant in Boise. In 2006 they opened the most awarded Franco Latino restaurant in Eagle.

Warm Winter Stews from

Start to Finish
With Chef Lynn Sheehan
Weds., January 23rd 7-9 PM $35.00.

Nothing says winter like a big pot of stew or chili simmering on the stove. This is Comfort food at its most glorious. In this class Chef Sheehan will baptize the old standards and cook up something new but just as satisfying. Menu:
Mussels Stewed with House-Made Chorizo, Red Onions & Wine
Braised Chicken Curry over Cous Cous Pearls
Papercelle with Local Rabbit, Pickled Olives and Vanilla
Red Wine Spiced Figs, Apricots & Prunes on Toasted Almond Pound Cake
Lynn Sheehan graduated with honors from the California Culinary Academy while building a high profile career in San Francisco's top kitchens. Her journeyman phase included positions at Siam, Masa's, Zola's, Citron, and Postor. Starting Sous Chef at Rubicon, Lynn was opening Executive Chef at MECCA and the last Exec. Chef at Vertigo.

Leaving San Francisco for the wine country, she restored the Historic Sand Rock Farm in the Monterey Bay Area into an award-winning country Inn, where she received national recognition for her creative breakfast fare. A search for new frontiers led her to Sun Valley in 2005. In addition to COA, her structured culinary education spanned training with Madeleine Korman in Napa, La Varenne in Burgundy, France, as well as internships at Chocolaterie Valrhona in the Rhone Valley and Restaurant L'Essentiel in the French Alps. Chef Sheehan was a featured California chef for VinExpo 2001 in Bordeaux, France. The James Beard House in New York City featured Sheehan in October 1999 in the James Beard Foundation's "Women and Wine" series with award-winning winemaker Mia Klein of Solene Winery. In 1997, Food and Wines from Spain chose Sheehan as one of six nationally known chefs to host on a gastronomic and viticultural tour of Spain. Chef Sheehan has taught cooking around the Bay Area and appeared on radio and TV. We know her for dynamic presentation and enthusiasm for creative cuisine will create an evening to remember!

Cheeseakes & Tarts

With Laura Fall-Sutton
Tues., February 5th 7-9 PM $40.00.
She put herself through college and medical school by cooking professionally. Now, when she's not taking care of her patients, her passion is baking at home! Since she began entering pies into the Twin Falls County Fair in 2001, she's walked away with more ribbons and awards than we have space to mention. From pies, she's a whiz at making scrumptious cheeseakes & tarts. Don't miss an opportunity to hear her secrets. Menu:
Pumpkin Cheesecake Tart with Caramel Sauce
Golden Glazed Lemon Cheesecake
Chocolate Nutcracker Tart
No Bake Chocolate Cheesecake
Rustic Fruit Tart
See Blue Ribbon Pie class for Laura Fall-Sutton's bio.

Heart Healthy Valentine

With Chef Joe Szewro
Tues., February 12th 7-9 PM $40.00.
"There is an underlying desire to have as much of this meal prepared ahead of time so that the remaining evening is not spent cooking while the love of your life waits alone in the dining room," says Chef Joseph Szewro, the new chef at St. Luke's MVMRC and former chef of some of the West's best hotels. Aside from learning techniques and tips that'll keep you out of the kitchen on Valentine's Day, you'll learn how to prepare dishes that will keep your sweetheart's heart healthy! You'll also learn basic cooking skills that you'll be able to use for other dishes. Menu:
Warm Goat Cheese Tart with Broiled Vegetables & Walnut Vinaigrette
Duet of Dijon Rack of Lamb
Parched Salmon with Hazelnut Pesto
Cream-Filled Crepes with Cinnamon Schnapps Sautéed Strawberries

Joe Szewro is currently the Executive Chef at St. Luke's Magic Valley Regional Medical Center. Joe has the ability to produce an endless variety of cuisines styles from this one kitchen as food is prepared for patients, public dining room, cafe and many of property catering events. This eclectic mix of cooking styles has drawn upon his experience from running kitchens in such diverse properties as the Westin Bonaventure in downtown L.A. to the Nugget Casino in Sparks, Nevada. The one common thread is that everyone enjoys good food and the opportunity to impress your guest is as close as their next meal.

A Treasure Valley native, Chef Randy King, embraces all aspects of Idaho life. An avid fisherman and hunter, as well as a budding gardener, Randy is partial to the fish, game, and produce of Idaho. He is a graduate of BSU, earning a degree in Philosophy as well as attending the Culinary Arts program. Randy's culinary adventures have taken him through kitchens throughout the Northwest including Portland, Seattle, and Sun Valley before landing his first Executive Chef position at Milford's Fish House and Oyster Bar. Having run kitchens at Richard's Restaurant in Boise's Hyde Park, the Grano Creek Country Club and Albertson's College, Randy now serves as Executive Chef of the Doubletree Riverside. He's won numerous awards including the Idaho Statesman's Critic's Choice Award and has been featured in several magazines and newspapers.

He has also been a featured Guest Chef for Beale's ABC channel on Thursday mornings. When not in the kitchen, Randy can be found teaching cooking classes, volunteering at charitable events, or scouring the farms and ranches of southwest Idaho for delicious ingredients.

The Marriage of Wine & Food

With Chef John Ash

Wed., March 12th 7-9 PM $80.00.

(Limited to 25 people)

We are proud to announce the return of celebrated chef John Ash (See John Ash's amazing bio below). For many of us the task of putting food and wine together harmoniously is a mystery! Too often wineries as well as wine professionals have over analyzed or oversimplified about wine and used jargon that is both unfamiliar and intimidating. As a result many of us have felt a certain angst about the subject and don't get outside of our comfort zone. John has long been an advocate of taking the fear out of wine and tonight's class is about learning the really simple basics about putting food and wine together.

It's divided into two parts. First we begin with an aroma challenge in which each of us will focus on our ability to identify flavors using the most important organ of taste - our nose! This is fun and interactive and fabulous prizes will be awarded to those who can most correctly identify familiar aromas. In the second part John will lead us through a food and wine pairing in which we'll taste several wines with foods and learn how they interact and affect each other. It'll be a fun, convivial evening and you should come away with a good understanding of how to successfully pair wine and food.

John Ash

of "America's Hot New Chefs". He founded his restaurant, John Ash & Company, in Northern California's wine country in 1980 and it continues to be critically acclaimed more than 25 years later.

Nationally renowned as a wine and food educator, John served for many years as the Culinary Director for Potzer Vineyards and is on the faculty of the Professional Wine Studies Program at CU, Graystone. He travels widely teaching both home and professional cooks.

John has written three books. His latest, John Ash Cooking On-or-On-Chef: Private Lessons from a Master Teacher, was published in 2004. It won a 2005 James Beard Award. He has authored two other books: From the Earth to Table- John Ash's Wine Country Cuisine and American Game Cooking. The former was awarded the IACP award for "Best American Cookbook" and the Julia Child Cookbook of the Year and nominated for the James Beard Foundation "Best American Cookbook". Chronicle Books will release a completely revised and updated version of From the Earth to the Table in April of 2007.

John writes regularly for the Los Angeles Times Syndicate and is a contributor to publications such as Bon Appetit and Fine Cooking magazines. He was featured for two years on the Food Network and has co-hosted a live food and wine radio talk show in Northern California for the past 18 years. John is a passionate voice for ethical sustainable food issues and serves on the Board of Overseers for the Chefs Collaborative, a national organization of chefs who support ethical agriculture. He is also on the board of advisors for Seafood Watch, an educational initiative of the Monterey Bay Aquarium.

From the Earth to the Table:

Recipes from the book
