Students at the College of Southern Idaho Monday afternoon were short on stature but high on curlosity. Those students — around 1,100 skthgmdeirs — came from 12-taen private and public schools, and converged on CSI for the fifth annual Science and Technology Expo at the college. From the science of flortrucks and fingerprinting, to histology and radiation, around 17 cxhibits were scattered across the CSI gymnasium. Some science-related toys that were too big to fit inside the large gym, such as firetrucks from Twin Falls Fire and flescue, whited outside.

The cxhibits were geared for students to experience hands-on learning in Fields like; plant science, harming in the control of the cxhibits were brought from hospitals, law enforcement and fire agencies, as well as the Discovery Center of Idaho, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, and the Idaho National Laboratory. And one curious student who spent time reading computer chips Inside a hard-drive at the expo said he learned a lot.

"We get to learn all this stuff," said Oregon Trail Elementary student Omar Masic, 12, while prodding at computer parts.

Schools chief seeks $1.47 billion budget, teacher merit pay

BOISE (AP) — Idaho's public school chief wants lawmakers to boost his fiscal year 2009 budget by B percent, including 559 million to mise teachers salaries and benefits under a proposed merit-based pay system. In all, Tom Luna is asking for 51.47 billion, up from 51.37 billion to more for 16.47 billion to money for teacher pay. Luna, a Republican, wants 53.5 million more for programs that give high school juniors and seniors college credit and another $4 million for math

Home loan lenders offer 'workouts' to borrowers to lower interest rates

By E. Scott Reckard

Los Angoles Times

Shortly after the new year, John and Mohar Briddenstein started to get anxious about their $427,000 adjustable-rate mortgage. The Interest rate would reset this year, and the Santa Maria, Califf., couple feared they would not be able to afford the higher payments.

When-they-got-the-loan-la-2005,-abro-ker had assured them they would be able to refinance before their payments jumped. But that was before home prices fell, loans became harder to get, foreclosure sale signs appeared down the block and John had to take five months off work to battle cancer. For eight months, they say, they pleaded with their lender, Countrywide Financial Corp. of Calabasas, Calif., to modify their loan — to no avail.

"Our loan adjusted this month — $800 more a month we are hit with." Mona, who works in a church office, said in September in an e-mail. "Why won't september in an e-mail. "Why won't well work with the homeownerf All we wanted was a fixed-rate loan."

In recent years, lenders have been reluctant to do "workouts": lowering the interest rate or changing other terms so that financially stressed borrowers can-payless and awort-foreclosure.

Countrywide, for example, says it modified the terms of 14,000 loans in 2006 — about 1 in every $85 of the 8.2 andlion mortgages for which it was the service, or bill collector, at the end of the year. Housing activists say lenders usually make changes at all.

But with foreclosures skyrocketing and government officials, including California Gov. Armold Schwarzenegger and President Bush, Johning housing advocacy groups in pressing lenders to be flexible. It's easier for borrowers to got a hearing these days.

Countrywide agreed late in September to ease the Breidensteins' loan terms, a change Mona attributed to the Los Angeles Times' asking the company to discuss the mortgage. Countrywide, the largest U.S. mortgage lender, said it was hard to medify loans, when borrowers are unemployed and when borrowers are unemployed and suggested that John's return to work as an alarm installer was the deciding facan alarm installer was the deciding fac-tor.

Workouts are controversial because they potentially let speculators off the hook for their bad decisions. They also are complicated by the fact that lenders like Countrywide sell many of their loans and can't modify them without permission from the investors.

Questions surround disposal of recalled lead-tainted items

Some recalled toys are being resold

What has happened to the millions of toys, lunch boxes and other products recalled recently because they contain hazardust levels of lead or lead paint? An expensive services and that worder services, environmentalists and others who mustion about weak oversight of the disposal process. Lead-laced products, they warn, could contaminate landfills or groundwater. Even worse, they say, is that some recalled toys and other goods get resoid — both in the U.S. and abroad.

There are so many recalls right now and nobody is in the U.S. and abroad.

"There are so many recalls right now and nobody is saying. "What's next?" said Charlie Pizarro, associate director for the Center for Environmental Health in Oakland, Calif. "There is no answer for how to dispose of them."

There is no single, nationally accepted procedure for dealing with such items from the time of recall to final, safe disposal.
The Consumer Product Safety Commission, the federal agency that oversees the recall of lead-tainted and other dangerous items, asks consumers to return the products to the company recalling them. Those companies are then bound by state laws regarding disposal of hazardous materials, an agency spokeswoman said.

al of hazardous materials, an agency spokeswoman said.

"You can't just throw it in the kitchen garbage can: there are regulations on disposal," spokeswoman Julie Vallese said. "The companies are well aware of state laws and state guidelines they need to follow."

But Jamie Cameron-Harley, a spokeswoman for the California Integrated Waste Management Board, which overseas municipal garbage dumps and recycling programs, says shes mystified about the ultimate destination of the lead-laced products — especially those returned to companies.

"Everyone says give them back to the manufacturer, but we don't know what the manufacturer does with it," she said.

In other cases, state agencies have urged consumers to bring lead-tainted items to local hazardous waste disposal sites or to state offices.

Two weeks ago, for instance, California hublic Employees thate its own recall of lead-contaminated lunch boxes handed out by the state Department of Public Health. Subsequently, the California Public Employees Retirement System found unsafe lead levels on some of the 600 similar lunch totes it gave away at orientation meetings.

But Pat Macht, a spokeswoman for the state pension system, said her agency hadn't been told what to do with any lunch totes it gets back. "Were walting for direction about how to dispose of them," she said.

Lead paint has been banned in the United States since 1978 because lead poisoning can cause brain and neurological problems, particularly in children.

According to experts, only a fraction of consumers actually return recalled products to manufacturers—mostly big-ticket items that would be expensive to replace. Mattel, which has issued dozens of recalls of toys in recent years, said that, historically, about 6 percent of recalled products are returned.

Several toy manufacturers were contacted for this article, but only Mattel would comment on its plans for returned lead-tainted products. The El Segundo, Calif.-based company said it was still evaluating how best to handle returned products from its recalls of 2.2 million toys possibly contaminated with lead paint.

It's up to Idaho Senate to reform day-care regulation eorge Sayler, a moderate Democratic state representative from northern idaho, has a modest proposal.

Operators of small day-care centers—those which care for 13 or fewer kids—should be licensed, he say, lust like larger facilities. And criminal background checks should be required for those who work there.

In most other states, such an idea would receive broad bipartisan support. But Sayler's bill never even got out of the flouse Health and Welfare Committee last winter.

So he's looking for a sponsor in the Idaho Senate, where a measure of common sense about child care reigns.
There's a fair chance that a majority of senators would agree that a state that licenses barbers and bean warehouses rightfully ought to check out the people tending its kids.
If so, the bill would go back to the House, where the troglodytes still dominate discussion of the issues of child care and early childhood education.

demands that parents work too much.

"It's gut-wrenching for me for where society has gone," he said. "We've come to a place where we are willing to put our children in a situation that we are not in control of."

Meanwhile, day-care supervision in Idaho is an embarrassment. The National Association of Child Care Resource and Referral Agencies last winter ranked it in a last-place tie with Louisiana.

Sayler said some conservative legislators object to tougher regulations as "a threat to the family, or a burden on small providers. I don't really hear concern from them about children."

He's right. Kids are of secondary importance to social conservatives in the House who are more interested in trumpeting their disapproval of

According to the Anne E. Casey Foundation, 23 percent of Idaho children — about 80,000 kids — live in single-parent households. A single parent with two children must earn $18.82 an hour — $39,137 a year — to meet basic family needs. The average hourly wage in Idaho in 2005 was $16.12 an hour, or $33,530

And so must most couples with children. It's simple economics.—
For communities who don't want the state intruding into child-care regulation, there's always the possibility of a local-option approach to licensing.
Perhaps the state's seven health districts, which already oversee sanitation and disease-control practices in day-cares, could administer new, more comprehensive regulations in regions that want it. Health district employees are in the day-cares regularly anyway; they would simply have expanded duties. As for the state Senate, the best thing it could do during the upcoming session would be to overwhelmingly pass a day-care licensing reform bill. That would show the social conservatives just how out of touch with their constituents the House really is.

Then I waited to feel the joit of moral surgeriority but it. waited to feel the joit of moral superiority, but it never came. I think I'd be a lot more into greening my house if it meant I could put a big "hybrid" sticker on my front door. Work on that, Ed.

The way to prove your masculinity? Try electrical outlets, bolt-action rifles and FIDTY the editors of Popular you are the kind of guy who could place an ad in Filthy man began running wires ourselves, which was good

The editors of Popular Mechanics magazine recently published a list of the 25 Things Men Need to Be Able to Do. After scanning the items, I came to the conclusion that it was a very poorly concived list because I can do almost none of the things on it. I didn't even know what some of the items meant. For example, "Farme a Wall," I suppose by this they mean

For example, "Frame a Wa I suppose by this they mean

"hang a picture frame on the wall," but if so, they sure say it in an odd way. Besides, ever since I hammered a big hole in the wall, all picture-hanging duties have been relegated to my wife.

Some of the items on the list were Just plain crazy, like "Fix a Dead Outlet." Unless you are the kind of guy who wears a tool belt around your walst at all times, you have no business poking around in an electrical outlet. Maybe the editors believe a man is not a man unless he has spent time in intensive care. Another welfd item was "Clean a Bolt-Action Rifle. This is only a short list on the elementary school. This doesn't include anything for the middle school, which is even older, yet at the bond discussion meeting, they said the only real repair there was to pave the west parking lot for $75,000!

I personally feel that a repair bond is a more reasonable solution. I don't feel that we take enough pride in the great school we already have. The school board has allowed it to become run down and out of shape (they can even keep the goat heads off the playgrounds). Jones gave back the five medals she won at the Sydney Olympics on Monday and agreed to forfelt all other results dating back to Sept. 1, 2006, inter punishment for her admission that she was a drug cheat.
The three gold medals and two bronzes were turned over to U.S. Olympic Committee and U.S. Anti-Doping Agency officials at her attorneys' office in Austin, Texas. They are en route to USCC headquarters in Colorado Springs, and the USOC will return them to the International Olympic Committee.

"We've done what we can," said Jim Scherr, the USOC's chief executive officer. "We caught the person who was not clean. We've got the medals in our possession, and we will return them to IOC." Jones won golds in the 100 and 200 meters, as well as the 1,600 relay. She won bronzes in the 400 relay and the long jump, it will be up to the IOC to decide what to do with the medals and whether to vacate Jones' results from Sydney — which could cost her relay tearnmates medals, too. Scherr and USOC chaliman Peter Ubberroth both said they would support the IOC nullifying the relay results, and encouraged the other Americans to give back their medals.

Cutthroats. Wildcats reach championship

The Filer Wildcats and the defending Community School Cutthroats will meet Wednesday for the Class 3A High Desert Soccet Conference girls soccet tournament championship. Filer defeated Buhl to reach the match, which will also be played for the top state tournament seed from District IV. The Community School will host Filer for the championship, while Buhl will host Gooding, in an elimination match. The winner of that game will face the losser of the championship game for second place and the second seed to state.

The Filer Wildcats pulled out another victory against the No. 2 Buhl Indians Monday, winning 5-3 to advance to the championship game.

A goal from Filer senior Lea Williams broke a 3-3 to to give the Wildcats the lead with barely 10 minutes left in the game. A Buhl handball in front of the goal in the final minute gave Filer's Rocio Culterrez a penalty left, which she made to cement the victory.

Cowboys edge Bills 25-24

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (AP) —
Tony Romo is nothing if not resilient. And because he didn't let four interceptions in the first half, two returned for touchdowns, destroy his night, the Dallas Cowboys pulled off a sunning comeback victory.
The Cowboys scored nine points in the final 20 seconds Monday night, with Nick Folks 5-yard field goal ast time capired giving them an improbable 25-24 win over the Buffalo Bills.
Romo, after being intercepted five times and also losing a furnible, drove Dallas (5-0) 80 yard and hit Patrick Crayton with a 4-yard TD pass with 20 seconds and hit Patrick Crayton with a 4-yard TD pass with 20 seconds remaining. But Nathan Jones recovered the onside kick and after two completions, Folk nalled his fourth field goal, shocking the sellout crowd that came to celebrate the first Monday night home game for Buffalo (1-4) in 13 years.

It was the second last-second loss on a field goal this season for the Bills; Denver did almost the same thing in the opener.

And the win kept the Cowboys as the NFC's only unbeatten team heading into a megamatchup with 5-0 New England next week in Texas Stadium.

This latest victory was one of the most incredible in the Cowboys' illustrious history. Buffalo made nearly all the big plays, including interceptions for TDs by George Wilson and Chris Kelsay and a 103-yard kickoff runback by Ternece McGee.

In position to clinch it, Trent Edwards' pass from the Dallas 11 was tipped by DeMarcus Ware and returned 70 yards by Terence Newman. Romo looked for tight and passing the production of the goal line and DiGiorgio at the goal line and DiGiorgio returned his first career pickoff 39 yards.

tions to Mitten and a 14-yarder to Owens before completing a 70-yard drive with a floater to the tight end for a 22-yard score early in the second period. It was a temporary reprieve. After Buffalo staged a superb 15-play, 73-yard drive to Rian Lindell's 24-yard field goal, Kelsay made his speciacular solo effort to give Buffalo a 17.7 lead. The defensive end deflected Romois pass high into the air at the Dallas 2, then caught it in the end zone. Moments later, Romo threw a weak sidearm pass that Greer picked off at the Dallas 43. The four first-half picks were one more than the total that Romo had thrown in the previous four games.

The Bills didn't capitalize, with Lindell missing a 54-yard field goal with 36 seconds to go in the half. That was enough time for the half. That was enough time lot the good Romo to emerge, and a 22-yard pass to Hurd set up Folk's 47-yarder to close the half at 17-10. Folk made a 22-yarder on the first drive of the third quarter, but McGee got his fifth career kicken down the middle of the field down the middle of the field.

U.S. sought radiological weapon to covertly kill leaders during Cold War

Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — These were cold calculations, at the outset of what came to be called the Cold War.

Could radioactive poisons be fashloned into a weapon to assassinate civilian or political leaders?

Could the highly toxic materials be inconspicuously dispersed in a room — perhaps in aerosol form— to kill "important individuals" Could the deed be done covertly, leaving behind no hint of 'U.S. government involvement!

The rampage raised questions in the remote northern Wisconsin community of 2,000 about how Peterson could have met requirements to become a law enforcement officer, especially after police acknowledged Monday that Peterson received no psychological screening before he was hired.

may lack a component vital for it to deliver oxygen to the itsues.

Nitric oxide, which helps keep blood vessels open, begins breaking down as soon as blood goes into storage, two research teams report in separate studies in this week's online edition of Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences.

In recent years, doctors have become increasingly concerned about levels of heart attack and stroke in patients receiving transfusnas and the new findings may help explain that.

"It doesn't matter how much oxygen is being carried by red blood cells, it cannot get to the tissues that need it without nitric oxide," said Dr. Jonathan Stamler of Duke University, leader of one of the research groups.

Blood vessels relax and constrict to regulate blood flow and nitric oxide opens up blood vessels cannot open, the red blood cells to deliver oxygen, the explained.

Several of the researchers, including Stamiler, have consulting and/or equity relationships with Nitrox/N30, a company developing nitric oxide based therapies. The second research team, led by Dr. Timothy McMahon, also at Duke, studied the changes in stored blood over time. Currently blood is allowed to be kept in blood- banks for up to 42 days. After that it must be discarded. An estimated 14 million units of red blood cells area administered to about 4.8 merca area deministered to about 4.8 merca demini million Americans annually

Stamler said in a telephone interview that the researchers knew that nitric oxide is responsible for opening up small blood vessels, but had not previously measured the amount of that chemical in stored blood. "Surprisingly, we found blood depleted profoundly by day one and it remained depleted through day 42," he said.

But if they restored the nitric oxide at any point, the red blood cells were again able to open blood vessels and deliver oxygen to tissues, they said.

exit from dummy by playing the ace and king of diamonds. West ruffed the second diamond, so South went down one in six spades.

South went down one in six spades.

The correct play is to ruff a heart in dummy at trick two, and then to foresee this position and avoid any chance that a defender will ruff in (unless he began with a void in a minor — far less likely than a singleton) by playing the club ace and then the diamond ace. At this point you lead out the ace and queen of spades. West wins the spade king, but no matter how that defender continues, declarer can return to hand be ruffing a heart if one is led, or by winning a minor-suit lead on the board and ruffing that minor high. Now he can pull West's last trump and claim 12 tricks, making his slam.

WEST James Kauder's book "Return of the Bridge Philosopher," published by Vivisphere, mentions to day's deal as one in which the author could have done better. It features the Dentist's Coup, an attempt to avoid running into a ruff by the defenders.

Consider how you might play in six spades on a heart lead. As Kauder describes it, he followed the line that would be adopted by 99 percent of bridge players. He won the heart ace, ruffed a heart, and led the ace and queen of spades. West won the spade king and thoughtfully returned the club queen to dummy's ace. Believing that West might hold a singleton club, declarer attempted to exit from dummy by playing the ★ K 3 2

ANSWER: It is tempting to bid two no-trump to invite game, but one no-trump is enough tere. Since you have no fit for the only long suit partner might have (diamonds), and your partner is more likely to have a minimum balanced hand than anything else, one no-trump looks sufficient. And remember, partner can bid on with extra shape or values.

foot wind turbine on his farm at a cost of $55,000. It produces 28 kilowatts of power; enough for his house, two shops and three water pumps. Jarolinek predicts it will take 10 years for bim to break even on his investment.

BURLEY — For LeRoy Jarolimeks neigh-bors, the most important feature of his wind turbine may be that it doesn't dominate the rural landscape. For Jarolimek, the most important feature may be 18s electric bill — or lack of one.

important feature may be f8s electric bill—or lack of one.

The turbine, at 120 feet tall, doesn't appear much bigger than the power poles that crisscross the farm, but it produces 28 kilowatts of electricity. That's enough to power one home, two workshops and three water pumps. Another good bet? Taking advantage of fed-eral help available to users of alternative ene-gry systems. The government offers tax breeks on some systems and direct purchasing assis-tance on others. It pays to do your homework when considering alternative energy.

Solar power is another alternative for creating electricity off the grid, or supplementing grid power, but system costs can make it prohibitive on small scales.

The time it takes for passive solar systems to break even is shorter than for photovoltaic solar systems, so families with limited funds to

The mysterious ways of squirrels

TWIN FALLS SCHOOL BOARD

Bids OK'd

New round of Canvon Ridge High School work totals $9.7M

By Andrea Gates Times-News writer

The Twin Falls School Board approved millions of dollars Monday night in bids for the new Canyon Ridge High School construction for the new Canyon Ridge High School construction project.

They also chose a neutral array of color schemes for the new school.

The bids totaling around sy,695,510 were broken into two sets of recommendations from Yuhi Falls School District Facilities Manager Dale Thornsberry. The bids involved numerous aspects of the construction such as hardware, lockers, food service equipment, tennis court and track surfacing, wood-work, flooring, painting, athletic equipment, bleachers, audience seating, a hydraulic elevator, as well as heading ventilation and air conditional control of the con cievator, as well as heating centilation and air conditioning.

Thornsberry told board members before they approved the bids, that more than $13 million had already been committed to the new high school project, which was part of the $49.7 million school bond issue voters passed in 2006.

Some electrical projects were broken into separate bids, Thornsberry said, which resulted in savings of around $600,000.

"We feel that's a real savings to us," he said. Several of the bids came in over budget, though, according to information from the district.

Color schemes for the new school were also agreed upon Monday night. School board trustees, Vera Redman and Lori Ward had a lot to say about the selection of the neutral, earth tone colors — including beige, tan and gray — slated for the new school.

No one interviewed was sure why the paper started. But it was owned by former Idaho Statesman publisher Margaret Cobb Alishie, who was described in a 1946 article in Time maggazine as the 'undisputed editorial queen of the picturesque Snake

Search gets under way in Washington's rugged Cascades for missing plane with up to 10 on board

YAKIMA, Wash. — A search began Monday in the rugged central Washington Cascades for a missing plane with up to 10 people from a skydiving company on board.

The Cessna 208 Grand Caravan left Star, Idaho, about 7 p.m. Sunday en route to Shelton, Wash, but did not arrive as scheduled, said Miklo Fergus of the Federal Avidido Fergus of the Federal Aviation Administration.

A hunter in the White Pass

A hunter in the White Pass area told police he saw a plane flying low and heard a crash about 6 pm. Sunday.

The plane is registered to Kapowsin Air Sports of Shelton. Ten people from the skydlving company Skydlve Snohomish were scheduled to en the plane, but it was unknown how many were actually on board, said Geoff Farrington, Kapowsin's co-owner.

largest county to watch the odometer.
Officers on road patrol in Davls County have been told to limit their driving to 75 to 100 miles during a 12-hour shift, through the end of the year, sheriff is Lt. Brad Wilcox said Monday.
"There are a lot of places a deputy can still maintain an active role." Wilcox said. "He can patrol a neighborhood on foot in the middle of the night or turn off his car and roll down his windows and listen."

listen."
Should crooks rejolce? "Absolutely not." Wilcox said. "It's ridiculous to think because we're trying to save money on gas, deputies are not allowed to respond to calls for service. That's just not going to happen." Wilcox said the sheriff's department spends more than $25.000 a month on gas. "Our fuel costs are way over budget," he said. "All of our fuel costs are way over budget," he said. "All of our fuel costs are way to be said to the said of the year. "Wilcox said it's like a kidney stone—" it'vill pass."
Deputies patrol unincorporated areas of Davis County as well as South Weber, West Point and Fruit Heights.
