Wal-Mart execs balk on Twin Falls redesign

Changes to building's interior remain unclear

By Jared S. Hopkins
Times-News writer

Touting its energy efficient standards, Wal-Mart officials talk increasingly about improving the environment. Sometimes, they forget to talk to each other.

On Sept. 24, Paul Smith, a local attorney representing Wal-Mart, told the Twin Falls City Council that construction for the store scheduled to be built along Pole Line Road would be delayed by three months as the company redesigned the store to make it more energy efficient.

The council asked a few questions, careful that any changes would not affect the requirements set in April when it amended a land-use agreement for the retailer to among other things, operate 24 hours a day.

But exactly what is being redesigned, if anything, remains unclear, Smith told the council. He was unsure what the company meant and did not present new building plans. He said the council would have to take his word.

"The basic look of the building is not changing," said Smith, who was hired by the Arkansas retailer after previous unsuccessful attempts to come to Twin Falls. "They just told me to tell you that internally it is going to be a better building."

But the company has no plans to redesign the building, according to Karianne Fallow, a company spokeswoman based in Boise. "I just confirmed that we are not redesigning the store," Fallow told the Times-News.

The city will still require the company to follow special rules pertaining to lighting, landscaping and signage requirements. Fallow said that all the "green" elements, like skylights, special light bulbs and white roofs were drawn into the plans.

"I think the inside was exactly how we submitted it to the city," she said. "If anything, there would be minor modifications but there's no full blown redesign."

So why did Smith assume their changes were being made? Mayor Lance Clow said the matter is irrelevant, and he was unsure why Smith even brought up the Major aquifer recharge scheduled for next week

20,000 acre feet set to flow on north side

By Matt Christensen
Times-News writer

The North Side Canal Co. will play host to an unprecedented aquifer recharge effort in the next two weeks, when more than 20,000 acre feet of water will rush through its system of canals before seeping deep underground.

At least that's the hope of groundwater pumpers, who are required to replenish the aquifer with thousands of acre feet of surface-water users say they've pumped out.

The recharge water is part of a deal, called a mitigation plan, between groundwater pumpers and surface users. The surface users say flows near Thousand Springs have declined, and the groundwater users hope the recharge water will flow through the aquifer to the springs.

But a recharge effort this large hasn't been tried through the North Side canals, and the company is uncertain the project will work. And if it doesn't, groundwater pumpers could again face well closures by Idaho Department of Water Resources Director Dave Tuthill, as they did earlier this spring.

"It's part of our mitigation plan so Dave (Tuthill) doesn't shut us off," said Lynn Tomingas, executive out-

"I thought maybe we've created a monster." — Vickie Dotson, who, with her husband Burl, grew up to 25 large pumpkins

GOOD GOURD!

First-time pumpkin gardeners Burl and Vickie Dotson stand Wednesday by one of their largest pumpkins in front of their Twin Falls home. Burl Dotson estimates that the total weight of the pumpkins from their garden is in the thousands of pounds.

Pounds of pumpkin pulled from couple's backyard patch

By Andrea Gates
Times-News writer

Lined in front of a modest home at the corner of Airport Road and Skyline Drive, a weighty array of pumpkins was the attention grabber of the day.

Children riding in a school bus Wednesday passed the Twin Falls home belonging to Vickie and Burl Dotson, and they stared "with their mouths open," Burl Dotson said.

What the children gawked at was born from the Dotsons' backyard — and a few giant pumpkin seeds, they say.

"We just decided to try some giant pumpkin seeds, and this is what we got," Burl Dotson, 48, said.

The seeds came five in a pack — which cost about $1 apiece — and grew into 20 to 25 very large pumpkins, he said.

The largest weighed around 350 pounds, while the smaller ones scale in at about 41 pounds, he said.

Burl Dotson does not know the exact weight of all the 20 to 25 pumpkins, but thinks their backyard birthed around 4,000 to 5,000 pounds of gourd.

After cutting the pumpkins from their backyard, the harvest was so heavy the married couple faced a challenge.

"We really couldn't carry them — we slid them off on the dolly," Vickie Dotson said. Vickie Dotson, 55, pecked over her wooden fence and pointed at the long twisty stems still littering the dirt where her pumpkins lived until Tuesday.

"I think at one point they get to the point where they stop growing," Vickie Dotson said. "That didn't happen till about three weeks ago."

As the pumpkins grew, Vickie Dotson had some Please see PUMPKINS, Page A3

Texas-sized prison issue

Mother of dead Idaho inmate to speak against private prisons

By John Miller
Associated Press writer

BOISE — The mother of an Idaho inmate who killed himself in a private Texas prison on March 4 plans to urge Texas lawmakers to stop accepting out-of-state prisoners at their for-profit lockups.

Shirley Noble, who in August filed a $500,000 negligence claim against Idaho in Scot Noble Payne's death, said she expects to speak Friday to the Texas Senate Criminal Justice Committee. Since 2005, Idaho has moved more than 500 inmates to Texas and Oklahoma to relieve overcrowding at home; Noble says the practice keeps prisoners like her son from family contact needed to rehabilitate them for their eventual return to freedom.

She also blames Idaho and The GEO Group, Inc., the Florida-based private prison company that runs the Dickens County prison in Spur, Texas, where her son slashed his throat — for neglecting to monitor deteriorating conditions that Idaho officials now concede may have contributed to his suicide. Payne, 49, a convicted sex offender, was kept alone for months in a cell with a constantly wet floor, bloodstained sheets and smelly towels.

"It's what I have found out about GEO, the filth, and people being taken away from their families," Shirley Noble told The Associated

IMP announces new plant in Jerome

Dairy processor to build state-of-the-art plant in Jerome

By Joshua Palmer
Times-News writer

Jerome officials released the name of the company Wednesday that will be valued at more than $70 million and will create more than 65 jobs.

Idaho Milk Producers (IMP) announced Wednesday that it plans to build a new plant in Jerome.

The state-of-the-art plant is actually expected to cost upwards of $80 million for phase one and is anticipated to be completed by the winter of 2008.

According to a press release from IMP the second and third phases are already in the planning stages. IMP plans to hire about 65 employees for the first phase.

"This is bringing great jobs with excellent benefits to Jerome," said Marlin Eldred, director of Economic Development for the city of Jerome. "These are the types of jobs we need to keep our economy flourishing."

The plant will produce milk protein powders, concentrated filtrated milk, lactose powder and cream as part of the first phase.

It is unknown when construction on the plant will begin, Jerome officials did not immediately return calls from the Times-News.

Tom Myers, president and owner representative of IMP, said the

MORNING BRIEFING

AROUND THE WORLD

WASHINGTON

Setting up showdown, House Democrats push their surveillance bill House Democrats pushed their government eavesdropping bill through two committees Tuesday with only minor changes, setting the stage for a confrontation with the Bush administration.

President Bush said Wednesday that he will not sign the bill if it does not give retroactive immunity to U.S. telecommunications companies that helped conduct electronic surveillance without court orders.

Bush said the bill, which envisions a greater role for a secret court in overseeing U.S. surveillance of overseas communications, would 'take us backward' in efforts to thwart terrorism.

The measure advanced by the House Judiciary and Intelligence committees' left out provisions including Bush wants Democrats also voted down Republican attempts to tailor the legislation more to the administration's liking.

SC weighs Bush, international court roles

Supreme Court Justice Stephen Breyer, with a bit of dramatic flair in the packed courtroom Wednesday, whipped out his pocket-size Constitution and began reading to the lawyer from Texas Ernest Medellin about international treaties.

Treaties 'shall be the supreme law of the land, and the Judges in every state,' Breyer said, pausing briefly, 'I guess that means including Texas, shall be bound there by.'

His Ite Joke aside, Breyer was probing a question at the heart of a complicated dispute over the role of international law and claims of executive power in the case of a Mexican on death row for rape and murder.

Why does Texas insist that it need not abide by the judgment of an international court, which by treaty the United States has agreed to follow, that ruled that Jose Ernesto Medellin must have a new hearing?

Despite his support for the death penalty, President Bush has intervened in the case on behalf of Medellin, Solicitor General R. Ted Cruz told Breyer and his colleagues that the international court ruling has no weight in Texas and that Bush has no power 'to order' its annulment.

The justices engaged in a spirited discussion of who gets the final say in whether Texas courts must give Medellin a new hearing because local police never notified Mexican diplomats that he had been arrested, in violation of an international treaty.

Study finds humans are to blame for increases in humidity

With global warming, the world isn't just getting hotter — it's getting stickier, due to humidity. And people are to blame, according to a study based on computer models published Thursday.

The amount of moisture in the air near Earth's surface rose 2.2 percent in less than three decades, the researchers report in a study appearing in the Journal Nature.

'This humidity change is an important contribution to the stress on humans as a result of global warming,' said Nathan Gillett of the University of East Anglia in the United Kingdom, a co-author of the study.

Gillett studied changes in specific humidity, which is a measurement of total moisture in the air, between 1973-2002. Higher humidity can be dangerous to people because it makes the body less efficient at cooling itself, said University of Miami health and climate researcher Laurence Kalkstein. He was not connected with the research.

Humidity increased over most of the globe, including the eastern United States, said study co-author Katharine Willmott, a climate researcher at Yale University. However, a few regions, including the U.S. West, South Africa and parts of Australia were drier.

House panel approves resolution recognizing Armenian genocide

A U.S. congressional panel defied President Bush on Wednesday and approved a measure that he said would damage U.S. goals in the Middle East.

The measure that would recognize the World War I-era killings of Armenians as a genocide had been strongly opposed by Turkey, a key U.S. ally that has supported U.S. efforts in Iraq.

The House Foreign Affairs Committee's 27-21 vote now sends the measure to the House floor — unless the Democratic leadership reverses course and heeds Bush's warnings.

At issue is the killing of up to 1.5 million Armenians by Ottoman Turks around the time of World War I.

Turkey denies that the deaths constituted genocide, and insists that those killed were victims of civil war and unrest.

Bush and other senior officials had made a last-minute push to persuade lawmakers on the Foreign Affairs Committee to reject the measure.

'Its passage would do great harm to our relations with a key ally in NATO and in the global war on terror,' Bush said hours before the vote.

The Foreign Affairs Committee's Chairman, Rep. Tom Lantos, D-Calif., warned of the potential fallout if the Ottoman Turks are cited as a Hungarian-born survivor of the Holocaust, supported a similar resolution two years ago.

IRAN

Ex-nuke negotiator lambastes Ahmadinejad's international dealings

TEHRAN — Iran's former chief nuclear negotiator delivered an unusually sharp rebuke to President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad's policies Wednesday, saying they are turning more nations against Iran and failing to fix the struggling economy.

The comments by Hasan Rowhani were the harshest yet against the hard-line president by a prominent figure in the Iranian leadership, and came after critics had grown muted in recent months as the government stirred up fears of conflict with the U.S. and warned against a no-fly zone.

The criticism echoed complaints early this year from conservative supporters of Ahmadinejad that his inflammatory rhetoric was needlessly goading the West in the confrontation over Iran's nuclear program and that he hadn't fulfilled promises to improve the economy. Rowhani was replicated as nuclear negotiator when Ahmadinejad came to office in 2005, but he remains a member of the Supreme National Security Council and sits on two powerful clerical-run bodies, the Experts Assembly and the Expediency Council.

Speaking to the pro-reform Moderation and Development Party, he did not directly mention Ahmadinejad, but was clearly referring to his policies. His comments were reported by the semi-official ISNA — and confirmed by The Associated Press by people who heard the speech.

MICHIGAN

Giuliani, Romney focus criticism on each other

ROYAL OAK — Rudy Giuliani and Mitt Romney squared off over war, taxes and spending Wednesday, focusing on each other as they sought to turn the quest for the GOP presidential nomination into a two-man contest.

The former New York mayor held no public events a day after squabbling with the GOP's incumbent governor over economic issues during a debate in Michigan. Instead, Giuliani dispatched aides and surrogates to accuse Romney of having a 'Lawyers Test' for going to war.

Romney retorted that it was Giuliani who had been the lawsuit king as mayor.

A night earlier, Romney said in answering a question on whether he would go to Congress to get authorization to take military action against Iran's nuclear facilities: 'I sit down with your attorneys and tell you what you have to do, but obviously the president of the United States has to do what's in the best interest of the United States to protect us against a potential threat.'

On Wednesday, Giuliani's campaign decided that it was to issue a statement from Robert Nutter, a retired Navy admiral who is a senior military adviser to the candidate.

University investigates whether noose on door came from students

Investigators on Wednesday were looking into whether a noose hanging from the door of a black professor at Columbia University was the work of disgruntled students or even a fellow professor.

A police official, who spoke on the condition of anonymity because details of the investigation have not been made public, stressed that investigators were looking into a variety of possibilities. One is that the noose was placed on Madonna Constantinescu's door by another professor with whom she was having a dispute at the university's Teachers College, the police official said.

The discovery of the noose, found Tuesday, followed by a letter from the noose, prompting plans for a protest rally and a meeting for upset students and faculty.

'This is an assault on African Americans and therefore it is an assault on every one of us,' university President Lee C. Bollinger said in a statement. 'I know I speak on behalf of every member of our communities in condemning this horrible act.'

Columbia planned a town hall meeting Wednesday afternoon for faculty and students to address the incident.

Bobby Brown recovering from mild heart attack in LA

LOS ANGELES — Bobby Brown spent a night in the hospital after suffering a mild heart attack, his attorney said Wednesday.

Brown had severe chest pains Tuesday night and was taken to two hospitals. He was admitted to Tarzana Regional Medical Center in the San Fernando Valley. 'This morning the doctor did diagnose him as suffering from a mild heart attack ... they attributed (it) to stress and diet,' said his attorney, Phaedrus Parks, in Atlanta.

His father and brother stayed with Brown and he was released Wednesday morning in good condition, Parks said.

'He is in great spirits, he's doing very well,' she said. 'He's speaking with family members.'

alarming thoughts. "I brought maybe we've created a monster," she said. In June the pumpkins looked big, Vickie Dotson said, and that was when the couple realized their patch was larger than normal. By mid to late July, though, the pumpkins just got "more and more massive," she said. Organic growing — with steer manure and vegetable peelings — was also an important factor in the plentiful patch, the couple said.

The Dotsons said they plan to grow big pumpkins again next year, but not quite so many.

"They really took up the back yard," Vickie Dotson said about her first time growing pumpkins.

For now, the couple wonder how tasty their big pumpkins will be — they are saving the biggest — and giving neighbors and friends the rest.

apparent redesign. As long as the company abides by the city-sanctioned agreement, it can do as it pleases, including making its interior energy efficient.

"Redesign could be a lot of things," he said. "The size of the box and the exterior facade is the same, but if they do something different with the interior walls or structure technique, that has no bearing on the approval."

Smith did not return phone calls Wednesday.

Smith's announcement preceded a City Council decision to split the 80-acre property into two nearly equal plots, one of which will contain Wal-Mart. The parties said construction schedules are different and that Wal-Mart will begin building first. No properties have been recorded with Twin Falls County.

The Sept. 24 council vote resulted in a two-phase development of Cheney Drive. Wal-Mart will install a traffic signal at Cheney and Washington Street. The road to be built will lie between Park View Drive and Washington Street North. Wal-Mart will be responsible for the eastern half of the road. The western half of the road, which will allow travelers to continue westward to the new St. Luke's Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, will be developed as part of the second phase. That timetable is unknown.

Additionally, it's unclear when Wal-Mart — or developers of the second phase — will begin construction. Residents will have yet to see whether the developments will pose problems for the new Canyon Ridge High School, which will open in 2009, and the hospital, which will open in 2010.

Snuff OK in Ark. State House, but water isn't

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — A lawmaker said Wednesday she'll try again to clean up the House rules that ban a cup of water on a desk but allow a day's worth of tobacco juice.

Rep. Pam Adcock said she will propose next week a ban on chewing tobacco from that chamber's floors or committee rooms. Adcock contemplated seeking the ban during a committee meeting earlier this year and said she would push for a state law in the 2009 session banning chewing tobacco throughout the Capitol.

"It's just going to be easier and quicker to get it done this way," said Adcock, D-Little Rock. A law banning smoking in nearly all indoor workplaces in Arkansas went into effect last year. It does not cover chewing tobacco.

Adcock said a ban on smokeless tobacco would be similar to other rules regulating legislators' decorum in the Capitol, including prohibitions on food and drink.

Press about her reasons for testifying. "They can't afford the fares to go visit. They can't afford the excess telephone bills."

After Payne's death, Idaho Department of Correction officials investigated and called Dickens the worst prison they'd ever seen. The state has until early November to respond to Noble's claim. She said she'll sue if Idaho doesn't settle.

Texas state Sen. John Whitmire, a Houston Democrat who chairs the Criminal Justice Committee, called Friday's hearing just as scrutiny of GEO in his state is intensifying. Texas closed the 200-bed, Coke County Juvenile Center, run by GEO, and canceled the state contract for the facility last week over shortcomings such as dirty bed sheets, feces-smear cells and insects in the food — despite the presence of state monitors.

According to a Texas state report, the company downplayed the conditions there; afterward, its lobbyists tried to pressure legislators to reinstate its contract. "I look forward to reports, good or bad, on how well out-of-state inmates are being monitored," Whitmire told the AP on Wednesday. Since Payne's death at Dickens, Idaho Department of Correction Director Brent Reinke has revamped his agency's monitoring of out-of-state prisoners.

But he missed a September deadline to send 56 prisoners who remain at Dickens to another GEO prison near the Texas-Mexico border, amid unresolved contract differences. Reinke said he still hopes to transfer them later this fall.

Idaho is expected to have nearly 10,000 prisoners by 2012, up from 7,500 now. A consultant this year said the state must spend $1 billion on new prisons over the next decade. So far, the Legislature has approved funding for 648 new beds, including 400 in a proposed drug-treatment prison. There are also separate plans for nearly 700 more beds, including about 400 south of Boise and 300 at a proposed prison for mentally ill inmates.

In addition, Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter favors a proposal in which private companies such as GEO or Tennessee-based Correction Corp. of America could build and run a new Idaho prison with space for as many as 2,500 inmates — including inmates sent here from other states to bolster the companies' profits.

Jimmy Carter claims U.S. tortures prisoners; rips Cheney as 'militant' things of that kind," Carter said. He said he also disagreed with positions taken by Democratic Sens. Hillary Clinton and Barack Obama, who have declined to promise to withdraw all U.S. troops from Iraq.

WASHINGTON (AP)—The U.S. tortures prisoners in violation of international law, former President Jimmy Carter said Wednesday, adding that President Bush makes up his own definition of torture.

"Our country for the first time in my life time has abandoned the basic principle of human rights," Carter said on CNN. "We've said that the Geneva Conventions do not apply to those people in Abu Ghraib prison and Guantanamo, and we've said we can torture prisoners and deprive them of an accusation of a crime."

Bush, responding to an Oct. 4 report by The New York Times on secret Justice Department memorandums supporting the use of "harsh interrogation techniques," defended the techniques Friday by proclaiming "This government does not torture people."

Carter said the interrogation methods cited by the Times, including "head-slapping, simulated drowning and frigid temperatures, constitute torture" if you use the international norms of torture as has always been honored — certainly in the last 60 years since the Universal Declaration of Human Rights was promulgated.

"But you can make your own definition of human rights and say we don't violate them, and you can make your own definition of torture and say we don't violate them," Carter said.

In an interview that aired Wednesday on BBC, Carter ripped Vice President Dick Cheney as "a militant who avoided any service of his own in the military."

Carter went on to say Cheney has been "a disaster for our country. I think he's been overly persuasive on President George Bush."

Cheney spokeswoman Megan Mitchell declined to speak to Carter's allegations.

"We're not going to engage in this kind-of rhetoric," she said.

In the CNN interview, the Democratic former president denounced the field of Republican presidential candidates.

"They all seem to be outdoing each other in who wants to go to war first with Iran, who wants to keep Guantanamo open longer and expand its capacity —

Court's indecision requires NYC to pay for child's tuition

By David B. Caruso
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — A multimillionaire who sued New York City over its refusal to pay for his learning-disabled son's private school education won by default Wednesday when the Supreme Court couldn't agree which side was right.

The justices split 4-4, leaving intact a lower court's ruling in favor of former Viacom and MTV executive Tom Freston. The potential tiebreaker, Justice Anthony Kennedy, did not participate in the case. The court gave no explanation for his absence.

On its face, the outcome means that New York City's Education Department will have to pay Freston a little less than $22,000 to cover a year's tuition at the Manhattan private school his son attended after he was diagnosed with mild learning disabilities in the late 1990s.

But the court didn't address the case's key question: Do the parents of special education students have a right to demand a private school education for their kids without giving public schools a try first?

The 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals held that parents who can prove that their child couldn't get an appropriate education in the public schools may sue for private-school tuition reimbursement, even if they never tried the public system.

Freston said in a news release that he believed the Supreme Court had affirmed that "children with learning challenges have a right, without jumping through hoops, to attend schools capable of providing them with an education that truly accommodates their individual requirements."

director for the Idaho Ground Water Appropriators, a group representing the groundwater pumpers. "This is new. There hasn't been a recharge effort this big."

The pumpers bought the recharge water from canal companies, among other sources, for about $20.60 an acre foot. They'll also pay the canal company for transporting the water.

The project could begin next week, a few days after North Side stops delivering water to its surface irrigators, said Ted Diehl, North Side manager.

The water will be released from Miller Dam at 450 cubic feet per second, a relatively low flow. Diehl and Tomingas said the water will then seep through leaks in the canal system and into the aquifer.

About a third of the water that flows through the North Side system during regular irrigation season leaks into the ground, Diehl said.

Project organizers expect the recharge effort to take several days, though no one is certain.

"I don't know what the answers are going to be," Diehl said. "We're just going to dig through and see what we get."

IDWR, which oversees the mitigation plan, declined to comment on the effort.

Suspended student opens fire at Cleveland school

Five hurt before gunman kills self

By Joe Miccia
Associated Press writer

CLEVELAND — A 14-year-old suspended student, dressed in black, opened fire in his downtown high school Wednesday, wounding four people as terrified schoolmates hid in closets and bathrooms and huddled under laboratory desks. He then killed himself.

The fellow student at SuccessTech Academy alternative school said the shooter, who was suspended for fighting two days earlier, had made threats in front of students and teachers last week. "He's crazy. He threatened to blow up our school. He threatened to stab everybody," Donelisha LeVert said. "He didn't think nothing of it."

Police Chief Michael McGrath said it appeared that the shooter used two weapons, but added that the coroner's office will need to finish its work to confirm that. Parents were angry that firearms got into a school equipped with metal detectors.

Mayor Frank Jackson said two adults and three teens were injured, including a 14-year-old girl who fell and hurt her knee while running out of the school.

Witnesses said the black-shirted shooter moved through the converted five-story downtown office building, working his way up through the first two floors of administrative offices to the third floor of classrooms. Antonio Deberry, 17, said he and his classmates hid under laboratory tables and watched the shooter move down the hallway. "I saw him walking past. He didn't see us, we saw him," Deberry said the shooter swore and shot several times.

The shooter was identified by an official close to the investigation as Asa H. Coon. The official spoke on the condition of anonymity because Coon's family was being notified.

LeVert said she hid in a closet with two other students after she heard a "Code Blue" alert over the loudspeaker. She said she heard about 10 shots.

Reneal Jackson, 15, said he saw the shooter running down a school hallway. "He was about to shoot me, but I got out just in time," he said. "He was aiming at me I got out just in time."

Coon had been suspended since Monday for fighting, said Charles Blackwell, president of SuccessTech's student-parent organization. He did not know how Coon got into the building Wednesday.

LeVert, the student, said Coon was a "gothic" who usually wore a trench coat, black boots and a dog collar. Blackwell said there was a security guard on the first floor, but that the position of another guard on the third floor had been eliminated sometime earlier.

Students stood outside the building, many in tears, hugging each other and on cell phones. Others shouted at reporters with TV cameras to leave them alone. Family members also stood outside, anxiously waiting for their children to be released.

Tammy Mundy, 38, who has a son and daughter at the school, told The Plain Dealer that her daughter called when the shooting started.

"She said, 'Mom they're shooting in here, kids are running out, I'm hiding in the closet,'" Mundy told the newspaper.

State Dept. may phase out Blackwater, other private security contractors in Iraq

By Matthew Lee
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The State Department may phase out or limit the use of private security guards in Iraq, which could mean cancelling Blackwater USA's contract or awarding it to another company in line with an Iraqi government demand. The Associated Press has learned.

Such steps would be difficult given U.S. reliance on Blackwater and other contractors, but they are among options being studied during a comprehensive review of security in Iraq, two senior officials said.

The review was ordered after a Sept. 16 incident in which Blackwater guards protecting a U.S. Embassy convoy in Baghdad are accused of killing 17 Iraqi civilians.

The shooting has enraged the Iraqi government, which is demanding millions in compensation for the victims and removal of Blackwater in six months. It also has focused attention on the nebulous rules governing private guards and added to the Bush administration's problems in managing the war in Iraq.

And it prompted Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice to order the top-to-bottom review from a commission headed by Patrick Kennedy, one of the State Department's most experienced management officials.

Kennedy has been told to concentrate on several key issues, according to the officials who spoke on condition of anonymity because the review is still under way. Among them:

- Changes to the rules of engagement under which State Department security contractors operate, particularly for approaching suspicious vehicles, which is at the crux of the Sept. 16 incident. Blackwater insists its guards were fired upon, although Iraqi witnesses and the Iraqi government maintain the guards opened fire with no provocation when a vehicle got too close.

- Whether Blackwater's secretive corporate culture, reputed to have encouraged a "cowboy-like mentality," has led to its employees being more likely to violate or stretch the existing rules than those of the two other private security firms, DynCorp and Triple Canopy, the State Department uses in Iraq.

- Whether it's feasible to eliminate or drastically curtail the use of private foreign contractors to protect U.S. diplomats in Iraq. And, if so, how to replace them.

The officials cautioned that no decisions have been made on what the review panel will recommend.

Judges, not elected officials, to resolve MV dairy conflicts

The more times change about feedlot regulation in the Magic Valley, the more they stay the same.

Two cases in point: Tuesday's decision by the Jerome County Commission denying a proposed 13,000-animal confined animal feeding operation near the Mindoka National Monument. And the lawsuit filed the same day by the Idaho Dairy Association and the Idaho Cattle Association seeking to overturn Gooding County's four-month-old dairy ordinance.

The Jerome commission's 2-to-1 vote to turn down Big Sky Limited Partnership's plan has an ostensible victory for foes of continued dairy expansion in the county. But the commission's decision, not to discuss the application before turning it down — as required by law — may give Eden businessman Don McFarland an advantage in challenging the county's action in court.

Meanwhile, CAFO operators' lawsuit against Gooding County, on the grounds that county commissioners overstepped their authority when they approved the dairy ordinance, means that Jerome County's own pending feedlot rules — likely to contain many of the same provisions — are potentially on shaky legal ground.

The upshot? McFarland may end up getting to build his feedlot and both counties could be back to square one on controlling dairy growth.

The dairy and cattle association's suit alleges that Gooding County's ordinance regulates matters which fall under state and federal jurisdiction and that the law's limit of five animal-units per acre is "arbitrary and capricious."

They claim that CAFO owners can't legally be limited in spreading manure on their own property and can't be prevented from feeding cattle within a mile of the Snake or Malad rivers, as the ordinance specifies.

And they say that the county's restriction on dairy owners selling their manure out of state violates the U.S. Constitution's Commerce Clause. Whether the Gooding commissioners were in solid legal ground in making these decisions is open to question. In May, 5th District Judge John K. Butler ruled that the commission did not obey its previous ordinance when it denied a permit to dairyman Edward Rosa a year ago for a 3,200-animal CAFO.

The mere fact that a large number of citizens oppose the siting permit is not a legitimate basis to deny a siting permit for a conforming use," the judge wrote.

Despite the advice of Jerome County attorney Mike Selb, it was clear Tuesday that Commissioners Joe Davidson and Diana Obenausner — who voted against the feedlot — had made up their minds before the commission opened its on-the-record discussion of the issue. Commissioner Charlie Howell, who voted to approve the permit, said little on the subject at Tuesday's meeting.

In any case, Selb has his work cut out for him. And whichever way the court rules, the case is likely to be appealed.

Maybe it's time to negotiate rather than litigate. One of the arguments against Big Sky is that the feedlot would disrupt the ambiance of the Mindoka National Monument, which is only now becoming a draw for tourists and others who likely would appreciate a more dignified place to contemplate the injustice of wartime internment.

Perhaps the National Park Service and other federal agencies should preempt the CAFO by offering to buy out McFarland or offer to swap his Hunt property for a parcel of equal or greater value taken from the abundant amount of federally controlled land in Jerome County. But that's a solution for only one of a growing number of flashpoints.

It is becoming increasingly apparent that seeking consensus — not confrontation — is the only way for CAFO conflicts to be settled in the Magic Valley. The model is Cassia County, whose commissioners involved dairymen in crafting an ordinance from the beginning.

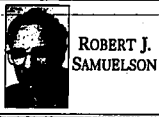

There are still disputes between CAFO operators and their neighbors in Cassia County, but at least there's a widely accepted, mutually agreed-upon process for resolving them.

And one that doesn't rely on lawyers.

Forgotten but not gone: Lessons from the crash of '87

WASHINGTON — The stock market crash of 1987 was a horrifying event to Americans who weren't shareholders. On Oct. 19, the Dow Jones Industrial average dropped 508 points, which was 22.6 percent and nearly twice the largest one-day decline during the 1929 crash. A comparable free fall today would be almost 3,200 points. Twenty years later, the crash of 1987 has changed the way we think. It has stripped us of the illusion that financial panics are a thing of the past. They remain a clear and present danger for the economy.

ROBERT J. SAMUELSON

Let's be clear. A financial panic is not just a big price decline.

Since World War II, there have been plenty of those. From early 1973 to late 1974, the stock market dropped roughly 50 percent (almost identical to the fall from early 2000 to late 2002). Nor is a panic simply the "popping" of a "bubble," though it might start that way. In a panic, fear takes control, and herd behavior swiftly triumphs. There's a stampede. People want cash — "liquidity," in finance lingo.

Americans thought they had immunized themselves against financial hysteria. Bank runs — depositors wanting their money — were the major form of panic, and Congress and dealt with them. In 1913, it created the Federal Reserve to lend to solvent banks. When that didn't prevent bank runs in the 1930s, Congress added deposit insurance so that a run on one bank would not cause a chain reaction. As for the stock market, the Securities and Exchange Commission, created in 1934, policed for the financial fraud that had often triggered panics. Finally, full-time portfolio managers for "institutional investors" (pensions, mutual funds, insurance companies) and investment houses dominated markets. Better informed, these professionals seemed less susceptible to herd behavior.

On Oct. 19, 1987, these comforting beliefs vaporized. General Electric fell from 50 to 41, Procter & Gamble from 84 to 61, IBM from 134 to 103 (all prices rounded to the nearest point). To be sure, stocks had seemed overvalued. Since recent lows in mid-1982, they had roughly tripled. The market's price-to-earnings ratio (P/E) was 22, up from 13 four years earlier. (The P/E is an indicator of stock value. If a company has earnings — or profits — of $1 per share and a stock price of $15, its P/E is 15.) Although stocks might go lower, few investors expected a collapse.

What's fascinating is that "20 years later, we don't know much more about the causes of the crash than we did when it happened," writes Matthew Rees in "The American magazine. In his recent memoir, former Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan takes a similar view. Still, as Rees' retrospective makes clear, three lessons stand out.

First, financial markets change constantly and, because what's unfamiliar is risky, they create new opportunities for miscalculation and mayhem. The unpleasant surprise in 1987 involved futures markets. Futures contracts (in effect, bets on some future price) on the Standard & Poor's index of 500 stocks were fairly new. As stock prices dropped, some investors sold S&P futures contracts — and their declines depressed stock prices even more. The two fed on each other.

Second, financial markets depend on computerized systems to provide prices and complete trades, and their breakdown can compound turmoil. Without accurate prices, many investors freeze or panic. In October 1987, the New York Stock Exchange's order system was overwhelmed. Delays often exceeded an hour.

Third, professional money managers fall prey to greed, fear and crowd behavior as much as amateurs. The SEC's post-crash study found that two-thirds of trading came from institutional investors and investment houses.

The crash of 1987 did have a happy ending. Early on Oct. 20, the Fed issued a one-sentence statement reaffirming its "readiness to serve as a source of liquidity to support the economic and financial system."

Translation: It eased credit.

It. Gerald Corrigan, head of the New York Fed, privately urged banks to maintain loans to brokers and securities dealers that helped avert a fire sale of securities supported by credit. Around noon, many big companies — General Motors, Ford, Citicorp — announced buybacks of their stocks. That propped up prices. The panic subsided; the market stabilized. On Oct. 20, the Dow rose 102 points.

Since the 1987 crash, there have been many financial upsets — the 1997-98 Asian financial crisis; the failure of the hedge fund Long-Term Capital Management in Russia; the popping of the stock bubble in 2000, and now the "sub-prime" mortgage debacle. None has turned into a full-fledged panic, and it's tempting to conclude that we've learned how to manage these problems.

Perhaps — but this may be wishful thinking. Global markets are more complex than ever. Financial innovations (again, "subprime" mortgages) repeatedly surprise, unpleasantly. Dependence on technology has deepened.

Herd behavior endures. The real legacy of 1987? Expect the unexpected.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

U.S. was ill-prepared for Afghanistan and Iraq

In 1917, we sent our brave young men to France to win the Great War, the "war" to end all wars.

Twenty-four years later, with Bob Hope, Jerry Colonna and Frances Langford to entertain the troops, we did it again. This time, Kate Smith popularized "God Bless America," and we won that war by 1945.

Five years later, we were back at it again in Korea. That barely ended (by negotiation) before we were again sending our new generation into the fray. Granada and Bosnia were hard to call war, but they allowed us to keep our men and weapons up to date.

So why were we ill-prepared for Afghanistan and Iraq? You'd think by now we'd realize our mission is to solve all the world's problems. At least that's what the politicians tell us, and we're apparently too stupid to realize that wars are started by rich, balding, posturing old men, but they're fought by young men (and now women) in the prime of their lives.

Most Americans probably agree that protecting one's home, family and country is one thing, but fighting and possibly dying for another country is another. World War II was a land, sea and air battle. However, since the late '40s, the CIA has had the ability to perform surgical strikes, taking out the leaders of an enemy nation by fast and aggressive action, while putting less than a half dozen men in harm's way.

If Washington officials told the truth, that we're fighting not for peace but for oil, we might respect them. If we were getting that oil for next to nothing as spoils of war, we might. VAUGHN PHELPS

'Little Women' production fantastic

Lori Henson has done it again! The Magic Valley Little Theater production of "Little Women" is nothing less than wonderful.

Lori has brought together extremely talented members of our community to entertain and impress us.

Tess Gregg, a College of Southern Idaho student, shines as Jo with her strong voice and excellent stage presence. This is a story most people are familiar with, but the musical itself is new.

So see it, you will never regret it. The sets are so well done, the casting is excellent and the show is a simple pleasure to watch. The duet between Serena Jenkins Clark (Meg) and McKay Nield (Mr. John Brooke) will give you goosebumps.

Craig should keep to his word and resign

Sen. Larry Craig should fulfill his stated intentions and resign for the benefit of his constituents. He has every right to attempt to prove his innocence and show us so, but as a private citizen, he now faces an ethics investigation and appellate proceedings in his criminal case, which will prevent him from fully and effectively engaging in the political process.

His loss of seniority further diminishes him and, as a result, the voters and the state of Idaho will suffer. Voters that pay the public servants' salaries deserve a congressman who is committed to their best interests and, sadly, Larry Craig clearly no longer appears to be that congressman.

For all the criticism leveled by Republicans at Republican Sen. Chuck Hagel, who was wounded in combat who opposes the Iraq war, he kept his word when he said two to three terms were enough in the Senate and he's now stepping down.

That's the rare sort of character George Washington demonstrated when he left office to avoid creating a precedent for a lifetime presidency. It's no surprise Congress has an 18 percent approval rating. The Republican Party of Idaho needs to call for Sen. Craig's resignation. MARK J. GUERRY

What Idaho newspapers are saying about ...

... Foster parents

Lewiston Tribune

Tom Cruise received $67 million for starring in "War of the Worlds." Foster parents in Idaho receive an average of $335 per month to take care of children.

Foster parents will never draw the same salaries as movie stars — or garbage haulers, for that matter — but the money they receive in Idaho is nonetheless pitiful.

the monthly reimbursements $274 for children as old as 5, $300 for children between ages 6 and 12, and $431 for teenagers.

Foster parenting is one of the most intense jobs imaginable. The burnout rate among foster parents is high.

A report by the University of Maryland's School of Social Work found that Idaho would have to double its current rates to meet the minimum costs of adequately raising a child.

The consequences of poor foster care are disastrous. When children's needs are neglected, society pays the cost of dealing with them as adults.

Tom Shanahan, a spokesman for the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare, says his agency will ask the Legislature to increase payments for foster parents when it convenes in January. Here's hoping legislators will listen ...

... ATV training

Moscow-Pullman Daily News

The state of Idaho needs to level the playing field for those who own and operate motorcycles and all-terrain vehicles.

As the number of ATVs has increased over the years, so too has the number of deaths and injury accidents.

Unlike motorcycles, ATV operators aren't required by the state to receive rider-safety education.

That makes little sense, considering ATVs often are ridden in off-road areas where the conditions are as unpredictable as the response times for emergency and rescue crews.

At least 89 Idaho residents have been killed in ATV-related accidents since 1982, one-fourth of whom were younger than 16 ...

Idaho is one of 20 states with no minimum age for ATV riders, and lawmakers say there's little support for increased regulations.

yet most fail to receive adequate education about safe riding practices.

According to a 2005 survey conducted by the Idaho Department of Parks and Recreation, about 65 percent of ATV riders taught themselves about safety, and just 25 percent say they received hands-on training from an instructor before their first excursion.

Those numbers are unacceptable. It's time the state require training prior to legal registration to ensure that riders — and their passengers — take proper safety precautions ...

... Bear baiting

Idaho Statesman, Boise

Hunters teach black bears to Dumpster dive. They introduce the predators to the wonderful taste of Twinkies.

Idaho allows hunters to put garbage in the woods — a half mile from a campground, picnic area or home — to attract bears for sport.

In the meantime, Fish and Game and federal wildlife officials plead with campers to properly store and secure food so they don't attract bears.

The contradiction doesn't make sense to us.

It's time to rethink how we treat wild bears.

Baiting bears for sport has long been a fight between those who think baiting is not fair chase and those who do. There's a new twist to the debate — the safety of non-hunters.

Idaho is one of only nine states that allows baiting bears — while prohibiting the use of bait to attract any of our game animal, including deer and elk and migratory birds. Why an exception, when bears present an increased risk to humans?

Not all bears who feast on bait pellets are harvested. Some are let go — having gained an appetite for what we eat — as a hunter awaits a trophy kill.

Baiting can habituate bears to non-natural foods. If a bear is attracted to human-generated food, it will be lured to campgrounds for dutch oven chicken.

We're sharing space with wildlife.

Bears like to eat, and they'll eat anything and everything. They have a tremendous sense of smell — according to some experts, the greatest sense of smell on Earth.

Black bears typically retreat when they see humans, but danger increases if a bear places its need for food ahead of its fear of people.

Severe drought conditions have dried up bears' normal fall food source, berries. With hibernation time nearing, bears are desperately scavenging for another meal.

Don't give them one, we tell campers. Why send a different message to a small, vocal group of hunters?

People are responsible for luring bears into human encounters. The No. 1 lure? Mom, did someone say people food?

Baiting bears creates nuisance bears. We should all stick to what wildlife officials recommend — and follow common sense to avoid conflicts with bears.

Using bait isn't using common sense.

Obama doesn't need to wear an American flag on his lapel

WASHINGTON — The much ado about Barack Obama's decision not to wear an American flag lapel pin was, well, symbolic.

To follow the headline that followed the non-story about a dated decision is to witness where acute partisanship has led us. From the hue and cry on the right, you'd have thought Obama had flushed a Bible down the toilet.

What Obama did might have escaped anyone's notice but for what he said when a reporter in Iowa recently asked him about the missing pin.

In the Age of Bush, the virtue is it is apparently essential that citizens flaunt their patriotism; crucial if they're running for public office.

Obama replied that he had worn a flag pin immediately after 9/11, but removed it when he felt it had become a substitute for "true patriotism."

He said he preferred to demonstrate his allegiance to the US of A by "speaking out on issues that are of importance to our national security" and by trying "to tell the American people what I believe will make this country great, and hopefully that will be a testimony to my patriotism."

One could argue that

KATHLEEN PARKER

Obama didn't say exactly the right thing, politically. When campaigning for president, it's probably best not to insult all those nice Iowans who have flagpoles in their front yards and flag pins in their lapels.

On the other hand, most honest brokers know exactly what he meant, and he's not wrong. Overused symbols lose their meaning.

There was a time not long ago when displaying one's political or religious affiliations — as well as one's affections — was considered a seriously bad form. Today it's bad form to be private, and votes swing on which candidate lays on the best kiccs.

From crucifix necklaces and fish lapel pins that declare "I'm a Christian" to colored rubber wristbands that convey solidarity with cancer victims and environmentalists, we've become a nation of exhibitionist symbolists.

Competitive caring is the new national sport in which the victor is judged not by acts of charity, but by the number of bracelets stacked on his wrist. We wear stickers after we vote or give blood — and plaster yellow ribbons on our SUVs — lest anyone doubt we support our troops.

By making symbols fashionable, we've rattled boasting as an act of redemption and elevated empathy to an existential concern. I care, therefore I am. I care more than you do, therefore I am more than you are.

I wear this lapel pin, therefore, my country 'tis of me, not thee.

But of course that ain't necessarily so. Sometimes those most publicly virtuous are the least. Some "values" conservatives have wide stances, for instance. Some greensies travel to global warming conferences in private jets. Some politicians wear flag pins just because.

Hypocrisy isn't inevitable, but neither is the wearing of symbols a guarantee of sincerity.

There's an obsessive-compulsive component to this ritualized belonging that is tied to another characteristic of our age — anxiety. We find relief by joining identity groups around what we fear. We create symbols and rituals as ways of organizing that anxiety and exercising control over the thing that controls us.

Buy a pink toaster and maybe breast cancer won't get us. Affix a fish emblem to our cars and maybe Jesus will get us home safely. Valium with adhesive backing.

The flag pays silent homage to all who came before, those American forefathers who spilled their blood so that a Barack Obama — biracial son of an American mother and a Kenyan father — someday could run for president of the greatest nation man ever conceived.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

All must fight the onslaught of sin in U.S.

Why did 9/11 happen? Why did Hurricane Katrina strike? Why are child kidnapping, child abuse, incest, rape, wife abuse, foul language, Satan worship, homicide, pornography, adultery, premarital sex, abortion, cohabitation, degrading music, filthy and violent movies, selfishness (the "me" generation), greed, phishing, shopping, materialism, homosexuality, gang warfare and drug abuse on the rise in our nation?

The United States of America. The most blessed nation in the history of planet Earth. Many citizens of this nation have forgotten the God who gave them life. That's why the forces of nature and Iraqi neighbors are given the power to inflict destruction upon the citizens of this nation. For everything that happens on this world passes before the all-penetrating eye of almighty God.

A popular song is titled "God Bless America." But can God bless America today? I am a Christian by religion; a member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Christians of all denominations must band together against the onslaught of sin that is sweeping our nation like a huge tsunami.

There are still good men and women in this nation. All that is required for the triumph of evil is for good men and women to do nothing. We cannot stand by and witness our nation destroy itself; we must take a stand for the good, the decent, the virtuous, the courageous, the valiant cause of truth.

One man can make a difference: Our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ stood alone, immovable, solid as a rock against evil, and the world has never been the same because of him.

One woman can make a difference. Joan of Arc. Leader during the Middle Ages of the French military at age 17. She died spiritually as well as militarily, exhorting them to prayer and devotion to God. She was captured by the English and burned at the stake for heresy at age 19. In 1920, she was made a saint by the Roman Catholic Church. Make a difference.

Palestinian negotiator says land swap could be element of peace deal

By Karin Lamb
Associated Press Writer

ABU DIS, West Bank — The Palestinians are ready to yield parts of the West Bank to Israel if compensated with an equal amount of Israeli territory, the lead Palestinian negotiator told The Associated Press in an interview Wednesday.

Ahmed Qureia, a former prime minister who has dealt with five Israeli prime ministers during 14 years of failed peacemaking, is trying again with No. 6, Ehud Olmert.

And he's full of optimism, saying the U.S.-hosted Mideast conference in Annapolis, Md., tentatively set for Nov. 26, is a "very, very, very important opportunity." If it fails, he predicts Israelis and Palestinians will perhaps suffer more than in the blood-soaked years following the unsuccessful Camp David summit in 2000.

Israelis and Palestinians are slowly rebuilding trust, making compromise possible, the 71-year-old Qureia said in his modest office in Abu Dis, a West Bank suburb of Jerusalem which has been sliced in half by Israel's separation barrier in the West Bank.

Qureia has logged hundreds of hours with Israeli negotiators since 1993, when secret meetings near Oslo, Norway, led to the breakthrough accord of mutual recognition between Israel and the PLO.

Today he heads a four-member team that first met earlier this week with Olmert's top aides. Ahead of the November conference, the two sides are trying to write a joint declaration of principles on the core issues of the conflict — borders, Jerusalem, settlements and Palestinian refugees.

The disputes have defied solution, but Qureia believes there could be enough common ground to come up with a general sentence or two on how to approach each issue.

For example, the Palestinians want the old Israeli-Palestinian frontier — before Israel captured the West Bank, Gaza and east Jerusalem in the 1967 Mideast War — to be the basis of border talks.

However, Israel will likely ask to keep chunks of east Jerusalem and the West Bank. In order to incorporate hundreds of thousands of settlers who have moved there since 1967, Palestinian leaders are increasingly promoting the idea of a swap, provided they get comparable land in Israel, even though it implies recognition that large Jewish settlements will remain in place.

Russian rocket carries U.S. woman to space station

The Associated Press

BAIKONUR, Kazakhstan — A Russian spacecraft soared from the Kazakh steppe toward the international space station Wednesday, carrying a Malaysian, a Russian, and Peggy Whitson, the American who will become the first woman to command the orbital outpost.

The Soyuz-TG rocket lifted off on schedule, rising into a darkening sky over the Russian-operated Baikonur launch facility. It was topped by a spacecraft that is to deliver Whitson, veteran Russian cosmonaut Yuri Malchenko and Sheikh Muszaphar Shukor, a Malaysian physician, to the space station Friday.

Applause broke out among space officials and other onlookers after the Soyuz TMA-11 spacecraft shed its rocket stages and entered orbit.

"Now they are stars in space, with their training, and with their beautiful machines, they will do good," former space station astronaut Michael Fincke said.

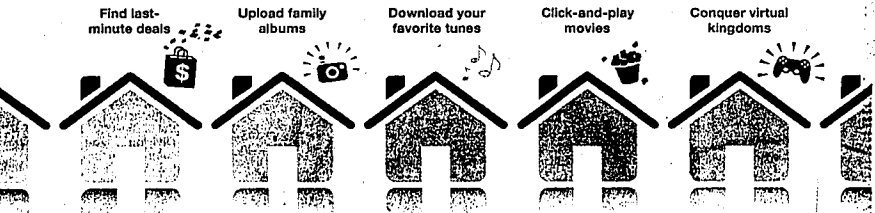

Whitson, of Beaconsfield, Iowa, is making her second trip to the station.

A day before the launch, a Russian space official presented her with a traditional Kazakh whip to "manage her crew."

But Fincke said Whitson, 47, would not need it to lead a successful mission. "She inspires people," he said.

Sheikh Muszaphar, a 35-year-old orthopedic surgeon, is to spend about 10 days on the station, performing experiments involving diseases and the effects of microgravity and space radiation on cells and genes.

His parents watched the liftoff from an observation area, praying and in tears.

Once the NL Worst, teams out West are young, talented

By Bob Baum
Associated Press writer

PHOENIX — It's the NL Worst no more.

The National League teams out West, the subject of ridicule just two seasons ago, are young, talented and they work cheap, at least relative to the rest of the major league baseball.

The Colorado Rockies and Arizona Diamondbacks, who open their NL championship series on Thursday night, are proof that success can be homegrown and that big money doesn't assure a winner — but some shrewd draft picks and a few smart trades can.

"The American League East will always have a few more dollars to spend," Arizona manager Bob Melvin said, "but I think the youth and amount of prospects in this division are pretty phenomenal."

In one sweet season, some have gone from prospects to stars. That's part of the reason that for the first time, a pair of West teams are matched up in the NLCS.

Colorado's 22-year-old Troy Tulowitzki, hit 24 home runs, most by a shortstop in NL history. He batted .291 with 99 RBIs while leading all major league shortstops in fielding percentage.

The Rockies, making their first NLCS appearance, also have two outstanding young pitchers in 23-year-old Ubaldo Jimenez and 21-year-old Franklin Morales. Closer Manny Corpas is just 24.

Rookie Jeff Baker's pinch-hit single drove in the go-ahead run in a Rockies' 2-1 victory that completed a three-game sweep of Philadelphia in the division series. It was Colorado's 17th victory in 18 games.

"It's been amazing," Rockies third baseman Garrett Atkins said. "Ubaldo Jimenez has been huge for us. There's no way we are where we are without him. Franklin Morales has done an unbelievable job as well as getting us here. Obviously you can't speak enough about Troy. He's been unbelievable on both sides of the ball."

The Diamondbacks, if anything, are younger. They start three rookies — center fielder Chris Young, third baseman Mark Reynolds and right fielder Justin Upton. Reynolds was called up from Double-A when Chad Tracy was hurt. Upton, considered one of the top prospects in the game, started the season at Class A Lancaster and is barely 20.

Michal Owings, the fourth pitcher in Arizona's rotation, is a rookie. Shortstop Stephen Drew and first baseman Conor Jackson are in their second seasons.

It would appear to have the makings of a great Mountain vs. Desert rivalry.

"I sure seems like a lot of people are talking about us developing one," Colorado manager Clint

FORGETTABLE FANTASY CLASS 3A DISTRICT IV TOURNAMENT

Desperate, but luckily not dumb

Editor's note: Forgettable Fantasy, a new weekly column by Times-News page designer Bill Wambeke, will offer a look at the experience of playing fantasy sports. It appears each Thursday in the Times-News.

For one week it looks like there's light at the end of the tunnel. After opening the season 0-4, my team scrapped together a 72-53 win on Sunday.

Vince Young was no help to me, throwing three interceptions. But Denver's lousy defensive effort let LaDainian Tomlinson have a breakout game. The Green Bay Packers' Greg Jennings also had a somewhat breakout game many had been expecting before he went down with an injury and missed the first couple games of the season.

It was a good thing for me that the team I played had a bunch of guys that played far below their expected totals.

Despite the win, I'm basically holding a fire sale of my team. I'm looking long and hard at any offer thrown my way. But while I'm desperate for another runner, I'm not dumb.

I was offered Patrick Crayton, Travis Henry and Devin Hester for Tomlinson and I went with Walker and Henry pretty much cancel each other out because they play on the same team (Broncos) and because Walker is injured and Henry could be suspended for breaking the NFL's substance abuse policy. While in the short term it would probably get me some points, in the long run Henry could be out for the season while Walker will eventually come back. While Hester gets yards returning punts and kickoffs, he hasn't been a viable option in the Bears' offense and has so many points as some second-string running backs. Needless to say, I rejected the offer.

Next week I've been fielding offers for players. No less than three to four phone calls a week are spent between my friends and I talking fantasy football. My wife thinks it's ridiculous. One of my friends has a child and two others are expecting their first child. But what do we talk about? What I'm willing to give up for a good No. 2 running back.

Cutthroats cruise

Community School routs Filer for district crown

By Jon Mertzler
For the Times-News

KETCHIKAN — Even the strong Sun Valley girls couldn't hinder The Community School girls soccer team. When the Cutthroats took the field for the Class 3A District IV title game against Filer on Tuesday, the result was about the same as every other time the Community School have played a conference foe this fall.

The Wildcats came to Ketchikan hoping to continue their inaugural season by upsetting the Cutthroats, but came away with an 8-0 defeat.

All but one of the Cutthroats' goals were scored in the first half, with three of them credited to Erica Eskman.

"We weren't going to be denied," Community School coach Kelly Feldman said. "The win is big, but more importantly I'm pleased with the level of play."

The Community School moved the ball extremely well and the Cutthroats' intensity level rose for the occasion of being district champions.

Hannah Hennessy started things off with a goal to open the game and was quickly followed by a goal from Eskman.

Minutes later Jesse Curran added the first of her two goals to put the Cutthroats well ahead in the first 10 minutes of the game. Nellie Brown and Maddie-Kate Currie also scored for Community School.

"They're just a better team," Filer coach Shane Hill said. "It's our first year and it's a learning year."

If Filer wins Friday against Buhl, the Wildcats will have an invitation to the Idaho state tournament. This is Filer's first year with a girls soccer team.

"With the win, however, the Cutthroats will enter the state tournament with a No. 1 seed and will have a chance for redemption after last season's first-round loss to Shelby.

According to Feldman, she believes that if her team plays the way they played Wednesday, they'll give any team trouble.

"The girls played really well and they're ready for state," she said.

BUHL 4, GOODING 3, OVERTIME
Gooding led Buhl 3-1 late in the second half. Then Autumn Yturbe took over.

Bruins earn win on senior night

By Diane Phillips
Times-News writer

Just another night for a volleyball match? Not really. Not when it's the last night of the regular season and the Twin Falls seniors are playing their last home match at Baun Gymnasium.

A few emotions were evident, but the focused and determined looks of the Bruins quickly replaced the tears as Twin Falls and the visiting Jerome Tigers took the court. After a good weekend at the Birch Tournament last weekend and beating High Country Conference foe Skyline Tuesday night, the Bruins appear to be heading in a positive direction. Twin Falls (15-12, 2-6) swept the Tigers 25-14, 25-18 and the Bruins are feeling good about their chances when they face Idaho Falls Tuesday at the High Country Conference Tournament begins.

"I actually did get a little emotional tonight," said Twin Falls senior Kelly Vriesman. "Standing out there with everyone brought up memories of all the years we've been playing together. We feel like we have a real shot in the tournament if we play like we did last night and tonight."

Assistant coach Nicole Rollins said, "They played outstanding. It was a fun match."

Twin Falls displayed a balanced attack on offense and defense especially from its talented senior class. The Bruins received another strong effort from Erica Ford as the senior delivered a team-high eight kills, 15 digs and four aces. Vriesman and fellow senior Amber Petersen combined for eight kills and four blocks. Senior Kelsey Bordewyk and freshman Chetzley Williams each added three blocks. Bordewyk added three aces and three digs. Senior setter Liz Williams dished out 16

CSI's weekend goal: 6-1 by Saturday night

Golden Eagles hope to bolster SWAC record against CEU, CNCC

By Eric Larsen
Times-News writer

The College of Southern Idaho volleyball team will save the niceties for another week.

Head coach Jeldi Carrisser and her No. 10 Golden Eagles have repeated the last two weeks anticipating tough matches and getting just that in going 2-2 during a four-game stretch against Division I and NAIA competition the region has to offer. This week, the 30-9 Golden Eagles expect to win, period.

In tonight's home match against the College of Eastern Utah and Saturday's meeting with Colorado Northwestern Community College, CSI plans to be dominant against a pair of teams that are a combined 1-9 in Scenic West Athletic Conference play.

The Golden Eagles are 4-0 this year against CEU and CNCC, and have swept each match, winning by an average of 15.2 points per game. CSI will need to show up against the 5-11 (1-4 SWAC) Golden Eagles of Price, Utah, and the 0-12 (0-5 SWAC) Spartans. From there, super-or talent should take care of the job.

"They'll be a different team coming in," Carrisser said of CEU. "We had more time to play. We're going to go with what we normally go with and hopefully we'll have a chance to put some other people in."

It may be a good week to give the CSI reserves some court time, but that will be contingent on the Golden Eagles starters playing well enough to control each game.

CSI's approach to the week could lead an improvement in CSI's complacency with a pair of mediocre wins, but for a squad with long-term designs to contend for a national title, finding a way to improve this week is vital.

With only five regular-season matches remaining on CSI's calendar, Carrisser is focused on making improvements for a postseason run in November. Time is very much of the essence for CSI, but with 37 days remaining to season's end, Carrisser isn't at all ready to wind things down yet. That includes the postponement of sophomore night, originally planned for Saturday, to the Oct. 23 home match against Albion State College of Idaho.

Spartans end Bobcats season

Minico keeps state hopes alive with tourney victory

By Zach Kyle
For the Times-News

BURLEY—The Minico Spartans girls soccer team topped the Burley Bobcats 4-1 in a loser-out Class 4A District IV Burley. The win sends Minico into a play-in game with a team from the Great Basin Conference East for a berth in the state tournament.

Minico controlled the game with its speed and constant pressure. Whenever Burley strung together several nice passes, a Spartans defender charging hard to the ball inevitably broke up whatever momentum the Bobcats had going toward the goal.

Minico took an early lead when a hard shot by Kelsie Halverson rebounded off Bobcats goalkeeper Meagan Warner and was tracked down by Ariel Belnap, who converted the goal from short range. Later in the first half, the Spartans' advantage grew to 2-0 when Halverson took a nice cross pass from Vicki Vega and one-touched it into the top right-hand corner.

The Spartans remained on the attack giving Burley few scoring opportunities. The Bobcats defense kept the score close with several key plays, including a Warner stop on a hard, low shot, and sweeper Diana Blauer catching up with a streaking Minico forward to prevent a one-on-one opportunity at the goal.

Bobcats didn't have many good looks at the net, but they didn't need one to pull within one goal. On a corner kick, Cinthia Rios managed to hook her cross past Minico goalkeeper Melinda Martinez and into the net, apparently untouched by any Spartan or other Bobcat.

The second half picked up where the first half left off, with Minico consistently beating Burley to the ball and creating scoring opportunities. After Belnap missed the net on a nice header and Warner blocked a hard Belnap shot, the Minico's Jane Blugman (14) kicks the ball as Burley's Kadi Bagavli (65) closes in Wednesday. The Spartans beat the Bobcats 4-1 in the loser-out game of the Class 4A District IV tournament.

Spartans scored again when Vega received a pass in the middle of the penalty area and struck the ball in the bottom right-hand corner for a 3-1 lead.

Burley continued to fight hard as the game was drawing to a close, but it couldn't get any traction up-field against the Minico defense. Near the end of the game, Blauer tried to clear a ball out of Bobcat territory, but it skipped off her foot and into the goal, bringing the game to its final score.

After the game, the Spartans ran down coach Dennis Haynes, and with the help of several members of the Minico boys team, doused him with water from a Gatorade cooler.

"We came out really aggressive, which kind of set them back," Haynes said. "We continued to keep pressure on them, which was the key. Remaining aggressive and working hard."

Burley coach Tom Schmitt was disappointed to see the Bobcats' season close the way it did.

"I really don't know what happened, honestly," Schmitt said. "We were missing one of our defenders today, but that's not really an excuse. It's always tough playing M because they are friends, family. They had a great fun base here today."

However, Schmitt was proud of his team's progress.

"Over the course of the season, I think the girls really stepped up to the plate," he said. "We've had a lot of firsts. We beat Preston for the first time, we beat Pocatello for the first time. We were hoping to move on today, but it didn't happen. They had some pretty good goals. We rearranged the defense, but we didn't get it done the way we wanted to."

Ex-CSI player named to preseason All-WAC team; BSU picked fifth

Times-News

Former College of Southern Idaho forward Reggie Lurry was picked to the Preseason All-Western Athletic Conference team by both the conference's coaches and media. Lurry, a senior, was named to the coaches' first team while teammate Matt Nelson was tabbed for the second team. The media only selected a first team, which also included Lurry.

Boise State was selected to finish fifth by both the coaches and the media, while Idaho was picked ninth.

Lurry is just the second Bronco player to earn preseason first-team All-WAC recognition, joining Cozy Karl—who was selected by both teams last season. As a junior, Lurry averaged 14.1 points and 8.1 rebounds per game. He scored in double figures in 26 of Boise State's 31 games, including four games with 20 or more points. He also grabbed double-digit rebounds 10 times with a career-high 18 against Idaho.

Both preseason polls picked the Aggies to win the WAC crown, just not the same Aggies. The coaches named Utah State as the preseason favorite for the league title, while the media went with New Mexico State. Other than the top two spots, the polls agreed with Nevada picked third and Fresno State fourth.

and San Jose State occupy the Nos. 6-8 spots between Boise State and Idaho. Utah State senior guard Joyce Carroll is the conference's preseason player of the year. He joins Lurry, Nevada's Marcelus Kemp and New Mexico State's Justin Hawkins and Fred Peete on the coaches' first team. The media swapped out Peete for Fresno State's Kevin Bell, but agreed with the coaches on the other picks.

The Broncos open practice on Friday and open the regular season on Nov. 9 against Utah Valley State College.

assists, picked up five digs and had one solo block.

"We realized we needed to step up our game and we did that," Belwayky. "Tonight was bitter-sweet but we are real excited and look forward to the tournament."

Playing the match against Jerome made Peterson nervous because "I guess we were expected to win, but practices have been intense and our spirits are up."

Jump serves by several of the Bruins caused Jerome numerous problems in serve receiving.

"We needed to come out and be competitive but instead we came out flat and had trouble with their jump serves," said Jerome coach Rick Burk. "Both of our teams have Improved and we wanted to see how far we had come."

Senior Jordan Burnham led the Tigers with six kills. Juniors Chelsea Layne and Jordann Hoeffel each had three blocks.

"This was the best atmosphere in this gym tonight and something the girls will remember," said Twin Falls coach B.J. Price. "I take my hat off to Rick. He is getting the program going in Jerome."

Both players and coaches agreed that the Bruins are peaking late but maybe it is right on time.

Jerome (8-8, 3-3 Great Basin West) travels to Pocatello tonight for its last regular-season match. The Tigers are the No. 3 seed in their district and will play No. 2 Wood River on Monday at Burley.

BURL 3, GLENNS FERRY 0

The Burli Indians capped off the regular season Wednesday with a senior-night victory, defeating Glenns Ferry 25-7, 25-11, 25-13.

Burli senior Leslie Hunter led with 14 kills and 11 digs. Elle Spencer had a dozen kills, and Mollie Bourner aced two serves and assisted 15 times. The Indians (12-6, 4-4 Sawtooth Central (Idaho Conference)) are finished until the District IV tournament begins on Saturday. Seeding has not been finalized as there are more SCIG games tonight.

BURLEY 3, POCATELLO 0

The Burley Bobcats defeated Pocatello Wednesday 25-12, 25-11, 25-10 to end the regular season.

Shaylyn Gard led with nine kills, Caril Parish had seven and Molly Mills had six. Kassi Krebs led on defense with seven digs, and McKenzie Baker had a pair of blocks.

The Bobcats (11-7) will host the Great Basin Conference West tournament, which begins Monday.

MINICO 2, POCATELLO 1

The Minico Spartans also defeated Pocatello Wednesday 23-25, 12-15, 10-15 to end their regular season schedule. Kendra Bailey led the Spartans with seven kills, while Bronna Phillips had six kills with three blocks.

The Spartans will play Burley during the first round of the Great Basin Conference West tournament, which begins Monday.

Jazz fall to Bucks in preseason opener

SALT LAKE CITY (AP)—Rookie Yi Jianlian's second exhibition game was a lot different from his first.

The first-year forward scored 12 points — and committed just four fouls — as the Milwaukee Bucks beat the Utah Jazz 90-81 on Wednesday night.

Michael Redd scored 17 points for the Bucks, who outscored Utah 18-9 in the fourth quarter.

Andrei Kirilenko, who last month said he wanted to be traded from Utah, received a mixed welcome from the fans in the Jazz's exhibition opener. The forward had 10 points, eight rebounds and four blocked shots.

Ronnie Brewer scored 17 points.

Yurube scored a pair of goals to tie the game 3-3 and force overtime. Just 30 seconds into the extra session, Yurube found the back of the net again to lift the Indians to a 4-3 win in Wednesday's Class 4A District IV loser-out game.

Yurube put Burli up 1-0 in the first half, but Gooding's Anabel Romero knotted the score.

In the second half, the Senators' Gentry Koyle sent a perfect cross to Tiffany Jackson, who headed in the score.

"Beautiful play," said Gooding coach Chris Thompson.

Hurdle said Wednesday. "We'll see how it develops, but I think it's very encouraging the NL West had the success it had this year. It's good for baseball, and I think it earned us — some respect around the league."

Despite the worst batting average in the league (.250), Arizona had the NL's best record (90-72). That's largely because of 32 one-run victories.

The Arizona kids were anything but in awe while polishing off the Chicago Cubs in a three-game sweep in the division series.

"I really don't know why,"

Young said. "You seriously treat it like another ballpark. Obviously it's a way bigger scale. These games mean a lot more. But when you're out there on the field, you're hyped up before. But after the first pitch it's like another ballpark game."

This could be the start of a big-time rivalry.

Melvin believes the success may serve as a model for others. Colorado has a new roll of about $54 million, with nearly $17 million going to one player — Todd Helton. The Diamondbacks have a payroll of about $65 million, but the 25 who are on the playoff roster earn about $30 million.

For a team that has won nearly 79 percent of its matches, talk about running a corner may seem out of place. However, that's been just what the Golden Eagles players and coaches have been focused on after last Saturday's four-game win over North Idaho College.

Carteriss committed a season-long service reception errors and five service errors in the win. Carteriss is focused on creating an environment for her team to reproduce that success against the nation's top-tier teams, starting with next Thursday's match at Snow College and the ensuing Saturday showdown at fine if we play like we did against North Idaho."

The brightest part of CSI's season to date has been its simple ability to win, regardless of how well the team has played. The Golden Eagles are still undefeated in match-deciding 15-point games.

"That's the amazing part," Carteriss said. "I don't feel like we've been amazing and we're still pulling off wins. I think that goes back to the athletic ability we have, the depth we have and being able to force it to be competitive in practice. If you're not performing this week, you're not going to be on the floor. That's been huge."

As the season nears its climax, CSI will now try to prove it can enjoy that type of big-game success against the nationally-ranked competition it is currently 6-6 against.

Suddenly talk-less T.O. tries new tactic: a note

IRVING, Texas (AP) — A new tactic for Terrill Owens: Instead of talking, he wrote a note.
Owens apparently knows the Dallas Cowboys' game Sunday against New England, a pair of 5-0 teams and multiple Super Bowl winners, doesn't need any extra hype.

is an image from video, a member of the media videotapes a message on Terrill Owens' locker during a news conference in the Dallas Cowboys' locker room Wednesday in Irving, Texas.

Even Owens apparently knows the Dallas Cowboys' game Sunday against New England, a pair of 5-0 teams and multiple Super Bowl winners, doesn't need any extra hype.
Nor does Tom Brady's Tony Romo, and more interestingly, Owens vs. Randy Moss in a matchup of the league's highest-scoring offenses.

Oakland is flourishing in his first season with the Patriots. Owens' postscript referred to his "get your popcorn ready" comment made when he signed with the Cowboys in the summer of 2006 — before he caught an NFL-high 13 TDs in his Dallas debut. Owens has 21 catches for 387 yards and three TDs this season.

what the challenge is... He's staying focused. He's anxious, excited about the challenge.
Moss is tied for the NFL lead with seven touchdown catches and has a league-high 551 yards (on 34 catches), even after being sidelined much of training camp with a hamstring injury — similar to Owens' first camp with the Cowboys last year.

Warner glad to be back as starter

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Kurt Warner knows how to persevere.
Whether it's defying the odds to go from NFL castoff to Arizona MVP or hanging in there with a good attitude after losing his job to a rookie — twice.

Arizona Cardinals quarterback Kurt Warner runs to a new position between drills at football training camp of Northern Arizona University on Aug. 6 in Flagstaff, Ariz.

grasping the offense Whisenhunt brought with him when he took the job this year.
"For whatever reason, it makes sense to me," Warner said. "It was easy to pick up for me, and I could visualize what I was supposed to do on a lot of plays. When you can do that early on in an offense, you can kind of take control of it and gain confidence in it."
Still, as expected, Warner was on the sideline when Arizona opened the season. He did what he could to mentor Leinart and tried to stay ready if needed.

Now Warner is back. The 36-year-old quarterback will start for the Arizona Cardinals against the Carolina Panthers on Sunday, replacing young Matt Leinart, who is out for the season with a broken collarbone.
Even though he's been playing behind Leinart, and helping the second-year pro without complaint, Warner believed all along that he was good enough to start.
"I think I've proven that through the preseason and even through the time that I've played in the regular season that a lot of people would see me as a starter," he said.
Even though he wasn't starting, Warner has seen considerable time on the field as the quarterback when coach Ken Whisenhunt goes to a "no-huddle" offense, a fact that Leinart didn't like.

Warner signed with Green Bay as an undrafted free agent out of Northern Iowa in April 1994 but was released four months later. Three seasons with the Iowa Barnstormers of the Arena Football League followed before he was signed as a free agent by the St. Louis Rams the day after Christmas in 1997.

Missouri could be next upstart in top 10 with win over Sooners

NEW YORK (AP) — There have been some unfamiliar names residing in the top 10 this season. Boston College, South Carolina and Kentucky have reached heights they haven't in years — and South Florida's never been there before.

Missouri could be next to make a big jump.
The 11th-ranked Tigers play at Oklahoma on Saturday, looking for their second straight 6-0 start. They're already ranked higher than they have been since 1991 when Missouri was No. 6.
Despite last year's 6-0 start, the season didn't end well for coach Gary Pinkel's Tigers, who finished 8-5.
In 6½ seasons under Pinkel, the Tigers are 42-35 and have been quite the tease. First with Brad Smith and now with Chase Daniel at quarterback, Missouri's had some potent offenses but is still searching for its first Big 12 North title.
Beat the Sooners and Missouri can start thinking even bigger than Big 12 championship. The Tigers would suddenly be a player in the national championship race.

Man indicted for manslaughter

Times-News

A grand jury indicted Antonio Peralto on voluntary manslaughter charges Wednesday after he was arrested on suspicion of fatally stabbing Roland Galvan in the backyard of a south Twin Falls home.

Late in the night of Oct. 2, Galvan, 50, went to that home in search of his girlfriend — whom he had lived with for about one year.

His girlfriend, Elizabeth Hilton, says Galvan was jealous because she was hanging out with Peralto, her niece's ex-husband. She also said she had a series of abusive boyfriends but that Galvan never got violent with her.

A scuffle erupted in the pitch black of night.

It ended with Galvan getting stabbed. Galvan attempted to drive away in his car but slammed into a wooden fence lining an alleyway behind the house. Galvan died from the stab wounds. Peralto was arrested and charged.

Grand Jury proceedings are held secretly. The jury's indictment establishes that a felony occurred and that Peralto was likely involved in it.

Simpson asks for more disaster money

Representative wants deadlines extended for relief programs

By Matt Christensen
Times-News writer

Rep. Mike Simpson is asking congressional appropriations committees to extend federal deadlines for disaster relief so Idaho ranchers can be compensated for money lost during this summer's wildfires.

In a letter dated Sept. 19, Simpson asked committee members to add several provisions to upcoming supplemental disaster and war legislation, despite the chance the additions could prompt a presidential veto or flunk from special-interest groups.

"As Congress looks to assist Americans impacted by floods, drought, fire and other natural disasters, it must not forget the incredible toll these conditions had on our citizens," Simpson said. "Idaho was ground zero this year for drought and wildfire and experienced some of the worst fire conditions in decades, including our nation's largest wildfire in southwestern Idaho.

Simpson wants deadlines extended to upcoming Idaho crops and animals destroyed this year by fire and drought.

There is no adequate safety net for Idaho farmers and ranchers under current deadlines, he said.

Simpson joined a bipartisan coalition of more than 40 lawmakers who seek assistance through the supplemental legislation, which is expected to go before Congress soon.

THE FALL FALLS FLOW

A view of Shoshone Falls Tuesday afternoon in Twin Falls. The falls are expected to more than double in size this month, from about 300 to 700 cubic feet per second, when Idaho Power Co. shuts down its hydropower plant at the falls for general maintenance. The flows could go even higher in the next few weeks when canal companies stop diverting water that would normally reach the falls. The shut down is expected to increase tourism, though the boost won't compare with last year, when unusually high flows brought in record revenue for the city.

Filer bond vote today

By Andrea Gates
Times-News writer

Polls open at 8 a.m. today for Filer residents to vote on a multi-million dollar double school bond initiative. The separate initiatives total $15.7 million.

One bond issue proposal involves an $800,000 high school athletic project for new bleachers, team rooms, a press box, concessions infrastructure, night lighting and restrooms.

The second bond issue — for $14.9 million — revolves around the erection of a new school for grades four through six, along with the addition of high school classrooms and some maintenance. The new building would be constructed on property already owned by the school district.

Filer School District Superintendent John Graham said the timing is on the district's side since the district's tax rate dropped between 2006 and this year. That reduction was the result of the district's maintenance and operation tax being 58 cents over to the state.

Compared to last year, the new tax levy rate would be almost $2 less per $1,000 of assessed property value if the bond issues pass, according to information from the Filer School District.

Changes in other tax rates, though, could also affect how much residents pay.

Where to vote:

- Filer High School, Filer
- Elementary School, Filer
- Middle School and Hollister Elementary School, Filer
- Elementary School, Filer
- Elementary School, Filer

"We're not trying to deceive people," Graham said. "We're showing this is the levy rate for our district."

If the $14.9 million bond is approved by voters, taxes would increase $0.67 for every $1,000 of assessed property value.

That means an annual tax surge of $33.50 for $100,000 of assessed residential property value — after the property tax exemption.

If the $800,000 bond is approved by voters, an annual tax increase of $4.50 would result for $100,000 worth of assessed residential property — after the tax exemption.

The bond issue election requires a supermajority of 66.6 percent of the vote, which is required by Idaho's Constitution. But the vote was not scheduled for an official election day, which could affect voter turnout.

Absentee ballots must be received by the clerk of the Filer School District Board of Trustees by 8 p.m. today.

Dwight aims to preserve role as leader

Dwight, who was first elected in 1999, faces Will Kezele on Nov. 6.

Eula Mae Appell

Eula Mae Appell, 90, of Richfield, died Tuesday, Oct. 9, 2007 at St. Luke's Magic Valley Regional Medical Center.

Eula was born Jan. 3, 1917, in Harville, Mo., the daughter of Charles and Thula Moore. She married Ed Appell on Nov. 16, 1937, in Gooding, Idaho.

Eula worked many jobs from the time that she was a youngling; the latest being at the Richfield Senior Center at which time she was 84 years old.

She was a very good grandmother who always wanted to know what each grandchild was up to. She kept busy making loop rugs, baby quilts and many kinds of crafts. Some of the grandkids have quilts that she made. She loved to play cards with her friends and family.

She is survived by her three children, Pete (Joy) Appell of Richfield, Iona (Bob) Kodesh of Wendell and Sharon McClure of Shoshone; her brother, Paul Moore of Richfield, Mo.; 10 grandchildren; 29 great-grandchildren and four great-great-grandchildren.

To our Mom, Grandmother and great-grandmother, may you rest in peace. We will miss you!

A special thanks to Brody Norman and his family for helping her through the years. Brody was one of the grandsons. The family would also like to thank Dr. Cole Johnson and his staff, as well as the Richfield Quick Response Team.

A graveside service will be held at 11 a.m. Friday, Oct. 12, at the Richfield Cemetery in Richfield, with Bishop Charles Tree conducting. Family members and friends are invited to call from 7 p.m. Thursday at the Demary Funeral Service, Shoshone Chapel.

The family would like to encourage that any memorials be given to the Richfield Senior Center.

Worren 'Tink' Majors

Worren 'Tink' Majors, 63, of Lubbock, Texas, died Tuesday, Oct. 9, 2007.

The funeral will be held at 3 p.m. Friday,

Oct. 12, at the Sanders Funeral Home Chapel, with Chaplain Randy Hamilton of Vista Care Hospice officiating. Burial with honors provided by the Lubbock Fire Department will follow at the Peaceful Gardens Memorial Park. The family will receive friends from 6:30 to 8 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 11, at the funeral home. Arrangements are under the direction of Sanders Funeral Home.

Worren was born Dec. 16, 1943, in Carlsbad, N.M. He married Lois Faye Edwards on Dec. 23, 1962, in Filer, Idaho. Worren graduated from Southern Idaho in 1966. He worked on the police department in Rupert, Idaho, before moving to Lubbock in June of 1969. From July 1969 until he retired in December of 1996, he was a member of the Lubbock Fire Department.

He is survived by his wife, Lois; son, Paul and his wife, Andy; Lubbock; three grandchildren, Christian, Kasee and Katie; a brother, Sonny Majors and his wife Yvonne; many nieces and nephews; and great-nieces and great-nephews. He was preceded in death by his daughter, Rhonda Majors; his parents; two brothers; and a sister-in-law.

In lieu of flowers, we ask that donations be made to Vista Care Family Hospice at Carillon, 1717 Norfolk, Lubbock, TX 79416.

Online condolences may be made at www.sandersfuneralhome.com.

Peggy J. Gonterman

Peggy J. Gonterman passed away Tuesday, Oct. 10, 2007, at St. Luke's Magic Valley Regional Medical Center from extended illnesses.

Peggy was born in Buhl on Nov. 5, 1932, to Chester and Veda Wigginton. She attended Buhl schools. On April 24, 1954, she married Lyde Gonterman, and they made their home in Castletford. Family and friends were very important to Peggy, and she dearly loved her children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren. She and Lyde had a love of farming, and they both enjoyed traveling and camping. She worked as a cook in the Castletford School for 20 years.

Her mother and father preceded Peggy in death. She is survived by her husband; four children, Keith (Jacquie) Rosenzant, Kit Gonterman, Jill (Darrell) Hollon and Terry (Teri) Gonterman; 19 grandchildren and 22 great-grandchildren.

The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Friday, Oct. 12, at Farmer Funeral Home, 130 Ninth Ave. N. in Buhl. A potluck will be held at 1:30 p.m. Friday at Jean's Park in Castletford for friends and family. For those who desire, contributions may be made to Castletford QRS.

Ronald J. 'Gus' Gerleman

Ronald J. "Gus" Gerleman passed away July 21, 2007.

Gus is survived by his wife, Arlene L. Littleton, Colorado; his children, Arlan and Erin Gerleman of Pocatello, Mike and Becky Gerleman of Plano, Texas, and Rhonda and Kent Knudwig of Morrison, Colo.; eight nephews; 12 grandchildren and four great-grandchildren. He was preceded in death by his parents, Al and Loretta Gerleman; his daughter, Ranae; and his grandson, Ryan.

Gus worked for the U.S. Post Office in Rupert, Idaho, for 31 years, retiring in 1988. He and his wife moved to Wyoming, where she taught school and he worked at the Saratoga Inn and as a driver for fishing guides on the North Platte River until they moved to Littleton, Colo., in 2001.

A full military honors service was held at Fort Logan National Cemetery in Denver, commemorating his Army and Air Force service of 33 years, and was followed by a "Friends of Bill" service at St. Gregory's Episcopal Church in Littleton, Colo. Memorial donations honoring Gus's service and devotion to the Association for Retarded Citizens (ARC) and to Alcoholics Anonymous may be sent in care of Arlene Gerleman, 6705 Santa Fe, No. 63, Littleton, CO 80120.

Ann Christine McBroom Edwards Witt

Ann Christine was born Dec. 13, 1911, in Cleveland, Tenn., the second child of Thomas Lafayette and Bertie Keenrick.

McBroom. She passed away two months short of her 96th birthday on Oct. 8, 2007, of natural causes.

When she was only 3, most of her family, including her grandparents and many other relatives, moved from Tennessee to Buhl, Idaho. As the family struggled through The Depression, Ann remained occupied with her education and graduated with honors from Buhl High School. She then moved to Boise to attend business school and later married Carl Trevis Edwards. They had two children, Carolyn Edwards Terteling-Payne and Arlen Edwards, both of Boise.

After World War II, when Ann became a single parent, she also became a high-achieving professional woman, working as executive assistant to the president of Manufacturing Company and later at Gate City Steel as director of personnel. Ann was a typical Scotch-Irish woman — she was frugal but generous, strong but tender-hearted, quiet but full of fun. When she wasn't working, she loved a great story, a warm fire, a cool drink on a warm fire, music and dancing, playing cards, and painting. Most of all, she treasured spending time with friends and family.

Through many years of raising her family, she was even surviving breast cancer in her mid-40s, as well as overcoming other challenges to her personal strengths, she never lost her commitment to her children, her drive to succeed and, especially, her big wide smile and her highly developed sense of humor, of whom you know your best admired her and considered her a very brave and inspiring woman.

ment to her children, her drive to succeed and, especially, her big wide smile and her highly developed sense of humor, of whom you know your best admired her and considered her a very brave and inspiring woman.

She is survived by her son, Arlen Edwards, and his children, Russel of Las Vegas, Ricky (Mark) Lovlorn and Sherry (Mike) Jackson of Boise; her daughter, Carolyn Terteling-Payne, and her children, David of Seattle, Tom (Julia) Stove (Chris) and Andy (Darci), all of Boise. Ann's great-grandchildren include Alex, Duskin, Brooke, Tommy, Darcy, Alyssa, Russel and Ben. Survived also by her daughter, Carolyn, side of the family, and Justin (Kristin), Michael, Samantha and John, as well as her great-great-grandchild, Emalyne, from her son, Arlen's, side of the family. She is also survived by her dear sister, Lois Bailey, and numerous nieces, nephews and cousins. Ann was preceded in death by her parents; her brothers, Eugene and Richard; her sisters, Betty and Iva Nell; as well as her husbands, Carl Edwards and Edgar Witt.

At her request, no formal service will be held in Boise, but a private family service will be held in Buhl at a later date. Arrangements are under the direction of Cloverdale Funeral Home.

The family suggests that memorials may be made to St. Luke's Health Foundation Endowment Fund or to the WCA Crisis Center.

The family also extends special appreciation to the wonderful angels from St. Luke's Hospice and all the marvelous caregivers at Willow Park Assisted Living, all of whom provided extraordinary compassion and tender care to our beloved mother during her last days.

A remembrance of her life will be held at 10:30 a.m. Saturday, Oct. 27, at the VFW Hall in Glens Ferry.

Born Oct. 23, 1938, in Chico, Butte County, Calif., to George and Laura Partridge. She lived on small farms around California until 1952, when the family moved into the small capital town of Carson City, Nev. Population of Carson City was less than 3,000 and had two paved streets at that time. Grace finished high school in Carson City and went to Healds Business College in Sacramento, Calif., where she got a job excelling race horses. She moved back to Carson City and worked as a secretary for the state of Nevada DMV. Grace married LeRoy Tingstrom on Nov. 1, 1958, and together, they had two children.

They moved to Idaho in January 1960, and she worked at several different ranches. In 1967, they moved back to Carson City, and Grace worked all the time in town. In 1970, they moved back to Three Creek and then moved to King Hill in 1983. Grace's greatest loves were her family and horses; she also loved cows and all other kinds of animals.

She enjoyed horse shows, hunting, fishing, camping and just being in the wide open outdoors.

Grace is survived by her husband, LeRoy Tingstrom of King Hill; her son, Andy and his wife, Lori Tingstrom of Florida; his daughter, Ellen Tingstrom of Sand Hollow; her sister, Ruth Partridge of Carson City; and several cousins. She was preceded in death by both of her parents.

Cremation was under the direction of Rost Funeral Home, McMurray Chapel in Mountain Home.

Kezele

the approach," he said. "Right now, nobody wants to make the big decisions. They all want to make the popular decisions."

He said that the council has done a "pretty good job" of managing growth, but does not predict almost 70 to 80 years. He said the city should have rejected a request by Wal-Mart to amend its 24-hour agreement to operate 24 hours, among other things.

Kezele said the property should be used for its original use as standard commercial property, which nearby residents had wanted.

"When we just work on the decision du jour — whatever the latest panic that we're working with — then we make decisions like that," he said.

He prefers the growth and traffic to be more balanced, with "hubs" of commercial and residential zones. He also said that revitalizing downtown should be synonymous with overall city growth.

"I'm pro-business. I'm pro-growth. But I'm for doing it measured, proper and with a long term vision," he said. "Right now the city plans a five-year plan with a 10-year wish."

Since January, Kezele has been chairman of the city's panel advisory commission, which works with the profit YMCA of Twin Falls that manages the city pool.

Besides growth and traffic, Kezele said the major concerns are water, public safety and quality of life. He has heartburn over paying for more studies, while the city has done little to improve the water amount or decrease arsenic. Without water, he fears a moratorium on building that will devastate the region's economy.

Kezele has made public safety a high priority and wants the city to improve the police department. He said the city does not properly fund police officers and that the number of property and violent crimes is too large.

Kezele, whose son, coincidentally was hit by a car in September, has promised to invest $15,000 of his own money to install a flashing light by Twin Falls High School, even if the city won't.

He'd like for the city to cooperate with other cities and hire a grant writer to receive more funding. He wants to see more parks and more public meetings. The council needs to be more transparent — with all city meetings and the solution might be making the positions full-time.

But Kezele said he wants to run a positive campaign and is not trying to pick a bone with Dwight.

"I do believe I bring a better set of business skills and experience to the table than she can bring, but the time and the money has been there, she's done a great job," he said. "You hear complaints but I'll let those people ... address those kinds of things."

park $150,000 specifically for park creation and upgrades.

"We went a long time without looking strategically where the parks are," she said. "But we've corrected that."

Kezele, whose son was recently hit by a car, has said that public safety is a high priority for him and would invest $15,000 of his own money for a flashing signal by Twin Falls High School.

Dwight agreed that a flashing light might be needed there but that a study needs to be completed before any changes can be made there.

"This town isn't really pedestrian friendly and I think we have more pedestrians than we used to."

Dwight said the City Council doesn't need to come to a full-time position, but the city should explore hiring a chief financial officer or assistant city manager.

She said the council has done its best to hire and retain city employees and account for a growing community. She points toward the city's recent decision to purchase the former South Central Head Start building on Hansen Street.

The city recently raised water, sewer and sanitation rates — and Dwight said it doesn't want tax hikes to continue. "Unless we look for alternative creative forms of funding you become stagnated," he said.

Public given opportunity to comment on Buhl city, Twin Falls County P&Z plans

T.E. County hosts meeting tonight

By Blak Koch
Times-News correspondent

BUIH — Following the recommendation of the Buhl Planning and Zoning Commission, the City Council approved an ordinance that outlines and updates a mutual agreement with Twin Falls County on how to deal with the city's area of impact.

The impact zone, which is a one-mile perimeter of city limits, extends by an additional mile along Highway 305 scenic byway on both the east and west corridors of Buhl.

"We both (city and county) have the same basic document that we have to have on file," said Buhl Planning and Zoning Clerk Randy Clark. "We've been in the process of getting our agreement together for a while, and after coming to agree with the language it is ready to go forward."

The public will have the opportunity to comment tonight at a meeting hosted by the county's P&Z commission. If the agreement is approved, a recommendation will be given to county commissioners for the last round of public comment before final approval. "We don't foresee any problems but that's why we have public meetings, to see if there are any details we overlooked," said Twin Falls County Planning and Zoning Director Bill Crafton. "Once the agreement is made official, it basically gives jurisdiction to the Buhl P&Z; their codes would go into effect for the impact zone."

Crafton said the documents "are very vital in allowing the community plan for integrated development within the impact zone, which serves as a transitional area between city and county oversight."

the change will be of benefit for those who want to develop their own land.

"Local businesses can now have a say about what is being developed within the impact zone," said Buhl P&Z Chairwoman Mimi Ford.

Open enrollment day scheduled for Ropes Challenge

The Ropes Challenge Course at the College of Southern Idaho will hold open enrollment day from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday. Normally, the course is reserved by specific groups such as athletic teams, business groups, leadership students, schools and others, which limits the ability of individual members of the general public to utilize the facility.

The course contains ground level and aerial elements, each of which is used by expert facilitators to help build teamwork, trust, communication and confidence. The "challenge by choice" approach that is used by all the coordinators allows participants to opt out of the activities with which they are not comfortable. The object of the course is to discover and develop new or hidden strengths in individuals and groups.

Open registration participants must pre-register with the CSI Outdoor Program office and the cost is $10 for adults or $5 for students.

Cassia County's Crabtree picked to be district judge

By Sven Berg
For the Times-News

Cassia County Magistrate Michael Crabtree has been named fifth District Judge by Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter, the governor's office announced Tuesday.

Crabtree will fill the judgeship vacated by Monte Carlson, who died June 3 after serving nearly seven years on the district bench.

Crabtree, 55, has served as magistrate since July 1999. Between 1991 and 1998, he and Carlson were law partners, according to a statement released by the governor's office.

Fifth District Trial Court Administrator Linda Wright said it has not yet been determined when Crabtree will take over responsibilities of the Fifth District judgeship. "That will be up to him," she said.

Crabtree could not be reached for comment Wednesday.

Wright said notice will be sent out today for candidates interested in filling Crabtree's magistrate position. Those interested will have until Nov. 2 to submit an application.

Dwight

We just need to move forward. We've got some good ideas on the horizon," she said. She admits that the city has been behind schedule on pressurized irrigation, but has been more aggressive in the "Right now the city plans a five-year plan with a 10-year wish."

Dwight dislikes the suburban "sprawl" and wants to see more "infill" keeping growth inward instead of outward, a recommendation from the comprehensive plan steering committee.

She said that managing growth must be done so that prospective homeowners are not denied the chance to purchase a home. The key, she said, is for developers and the city to continue to work together and agree on what she thinks impact fees — on which a study is expected to finish soon — are the way to go.

"If your growth didn't take place anymore and you stopped growing now then we're fine. But we're not done growing, so that's where the issue comes in," she said. "We need to be mindful again of how quick growth can impact those things. Because we went through those things recently."

The police department is understaffed, she said, and although the department is staffed well for city limits, it needs more officers during the day when population swells.

She said she wants to see more parks, but that the city has caught up to the demand — although the city has more

Arthritis Foundation program offers pain relief

The Arthritis Foundation Self-Help Program will be offered from 6 to 8 p.m. every Thursday, tonight through Nov. 15 in the Evergreen Room (across the hall from the Emergency Department) at Cassia Regional Medical Center in Burley.

This six-session arthritis self-help program is sponsored by the volunteers at Cassia Regional Medical Center and teaches the knowledge and skills needed to manage arthritis, organizers say.

Through small group discussion and easy-to-understand course materials, class members learn useful tips and techniques to take control of their condition.

Class addresses ways to reduce pain, lower stress, cope with fatigue and use medications wisely. The program is suited for both the newly diagnosed as well as those seeking more aggressive management.

Kathy Hines, registered nurse, and Daralyn Moss, Cassia Regional Medical Center volunteer, discuss the upcoming Arthritis Foundation Self-Help Program with Elaine Matthews and Debbie Porvosa.

Developed at Stanford University, the program will be taught by local Arthritis Foundation certified leaders, Daralyn Moss, licensed master social worker, and Kathy Hines, registered nurse. They have completed in-depth training on arthritis and the Arthritis Foundation Self-Help Program.

Pre-registration for the Arthritis Foundation Self-Help Program is required and seats are limited. Last spring's session was filled to capacity so the facilitators say they were eager to hold a fall session. Cost is $30 and includes textbook and other materials.

To sign-up or for more information: Audrie Willden at 1-800-444-4993 or Daralyn Moss 678-4131 or 215-1158.

The program is one of several arthritis health education and exercise programs in the Life Improvement series offered by the Arthritis Foundation to help people take greater control of arthritis. For a listing of programs in the area: Arthritis Foundation, 1-800-444-4993 or visit the Arthritis Foundation Web site, www.arthritis.org.

Weekend program for those suffering from loss of spouse

JEROME — When one is suddenly single again after the loss of a marriage we may think we are alone with the feelings of loneliness, isolation and grief. There is some hope with a program called Beginning Experience.

The program is being offered in a weekend format Oct. 19-21 at the Monastery of the Ascension near Jerome.

The program is presented by a trained team of widow and widowers who have also suffered a similar loss. Pre-registration is required. Deadline for registration is Sunday, Oct. 14.

Beginning Experience began in Idaho in 1984. The group schedules two weekends a year and have additional activities from time to time.

Beginning Experience is designed to create a space where divorced, widowed or separated folks can come together in a caring, supportive environment to reevaluate their lives and move on to the future with renewed hope.

The program is open to all faiths and not sponsored by any specific denomination, although most attendees and team do believe in God or a higher power.

The cost is $120 and partial scholarships are available.

Lodging and meals are provided at the Monastery. For more information: Margaret at 524-1989 (evenings), Patricia at 523-9051 (evenings), Marge at 377-3592, Anita at 436-4767 or Jacquies at 243-0575.

Livestock losses decline as feds kill wolves in Wyoming

JACKSON, Wyo. (AP) — Federal officials have been more aggressive about killing wolves that prey on livestock in Wyoming this year. They say livestock losses to wolves have declined as a result.

Mike Jimenez, wolf coordinator in Wyoming for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, said there were 44 cattle killed and 16 sheep killed by wolves this year. That's down from 123 cattle and 38 sheep killed last year. Jimenez said federal officials have killed 52 wolves so far this year, up from 44 killed in all of 2006.

"I looked at the data over the years, and what happens is we have some packs that chronically, year after year after year, cause problems," Jimenez said. "If we respond more aggressively, we can reduce livestock depredations."

Ed Bangs, wolf recovery coordinator for the lower 48 states, said Wyoming's wolf depredations "just died right off" in September.

Bangs predicted that aggressive wolf control would continue. He said that in areas with a lot of livestock such as the Upper Green River area and land between Meeteetse and Cody — only small numbers of wolves would survive. He said that could mean a pair or single animal, but not a pack.

Bangs said the policy might change if land uses change or tolerance levels change. Jim Magagna, executive vice president of the Wyoming Stock Growers Association, said he hadn't yet seen reports for September. He said many ranchers are still pulling stock off forest allotments.

"My general sense from what I know is it has been a little less severe than last year, but I could be proven wrong," Magagna said of losses.

Federal officials estimate there are about 180 wolves outside Yellowstone National Park in Wyoming in about 20 packs and 15 breeding pairs.

Investigation into Wash. plane crash begins

By Shannon Doherty Associated Press writer

YAKIMA, Wash. — Federal investigators on Wednesday picked through the wreckage of an airplane crash that killed 10 people in central Washington's rugged Cascades, hoping to determine what caused the plane to nosedive into dense timber.

A pilot and nine skydivers died in the crash Sunday evening as they were returning from a weekend skydiving trip to Boise, Idaho. Authorities have declined to speculate on what may have caused the plane to nosedive into the trees just east of the Cascade crest.

Investigator with the Federal Aviation Administration and the National Transportation Safety Board were expected to be at the crash site most of the day Wednesday, and possibly Thursday, said Debra Eckrote, the NTSB's Northwest regional director.

"They will try to document as much as they can from the crash, including readings from any intact control panels, the position and condition of airplane parts and any flight control documentation. After that, recovery of the aircraft itself will begin, Eckrote said.

The plane, a single-engine turboprop built in 1994, was reported missing early Monday. Searchers found it that evening after following the scent of fuel to the crash site, within 200 yards of its last radar ping at an elevation of 4,300 feet.

The plane was registered to Kapowsin Air Sports of Shelton, located near Olympia.

Geoff Farrington, Kapowsin's co-owner, said the family-owned company had never before lost a plane. He also said the plane had never experienced mechanical problems.

The FAA had warned in recent years that pilots should avoid flying the Cessna Gravon 200 in many key conditions after receiving reports that pilots had difficulty maintaining altitude and control of the aircraft during such conditions.

The skydivers were affiliated with Skydive Snohomish, a company that operates a training school and skydiving flights at Harvey Field in Snohomish County, about 20 miles north of Seattle.

Developer gets extra month to fix spawning beds

BAYVIEW (AP) — A northern Idaho developer blamed for destroying critical kokanee salmon spawning beds while building a marina on Lake Pend Oreille in April has been given an extra month to meet a deadline to complete habitat restoration.

Under a plan approved with the state, developer Bob Holland had until Oct. 1 to finish rehabilitation of the spawning grounds.

The habitat was damaged after crews working for Holland pounded steel pilings in the lake bed for the marina, scraped through spawning grounds and killed thousands of young fish in what the state said is one of lake's last remaining spawning areas for wild kokanee. At the time, Holland, owner of Waterford Park Developments LLC, did not have a permit to do the work.

The restoration plan includes removal of debris from the lake floor and requires divers to vacuum sediment from the gravel bed that accumulated during the illegal construction of Harborview Marina last spring.

Let your imagination be revitalized, Aquarius

HOROSCOPE Jeraldine Saunders

IF OCT. 11 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Your get-rich schemes and business ambitions require hard work and determined effort. However, next February and March you can instigate positive changes when your popularity soars and everything becomes magically easy as pie. That's the time to pop the "question or meet someone instrumental to your future success. If you wish to change careers or commit to a permanent relationship there will be nothing to be done.
ARIES (March 21-April 19): Reflection upon past experiences or relationships could occupy your time. It is a good time to visit old friends or familiar places. You may find that an old love is thinking about you, too.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Friendliness overcomes hostility. People will be impressed by your open and fun manner if you let these traits shine through. What is good for one person should be of benefit to everyone involved.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Tackle tough thoughts. Your critical eye can quickly find flaws in bookkeeping or other detail-oriented paperwork and projects. You will get results by being thorough and concise.
CANCER (June 21-July 22): You can be businesslike and act like the true professional without being unkind. That others the way you would like to be treated. A business acquaintance could turn into a true-blue friend.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Walk a mile in someone else's shoes without flinching. You may need to add and subtract when dealing with hard numbers but you can afford to be less precise when compassion is required.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A friend in need might be a friend indeed. A call on your sympathy might bring you closer to someone. You may have the solution to someone else's problem and win long-term loyalty.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You can never have too many friends. Joint ventures and common causes give you the opportunity to locate the very best people to accompany you happily along your life's present path.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Make yourself known. Share your views and improve the quality of your life by widening your circle of friends. Group activities and the dynamics of interaction can make a positive difference.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Handle your finances with efficient intelligence. Handle your relationships with the same type of Spartan ideals. You don't need to gush or go overboard to be kind and affectionate.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Pay attention to your finances today. Balance the checkbook and consider how the ends justify the means. Think things through with the aim of achieving long-term security.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your imagination is revitalized by contact with inspiring companions. Fresh insights will help you to understand the views of others. Understanding always brings eventual peace.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Invisible method of support will keep you from falling behind. You might never know who provided behind-the-scenes blessings but will see the results soon.

Man's marriage to his stepmom is illegal in several states

DEAR ABBY: Your response to "Smitten" in North Texas (Aug. 17), who was romantically interested in his deceased father's wife, was not entirely correct.

True, there is no blood relationship between the two, but a relationship of a romantic nature between them is akin to incest because of the previously established relationship of a stepmom/stepson. A more appropriate response would have been to advise "Smitten" to check the legality of such a relationship in the state of Texas with a family law attorney qualified to practice in that state.

—PAT IN RICHARD, W.VA.
DEAR PAT: Thank you for writing and pointing out, so gently, that my answer was off the mark. I'm afraid it's time to drug out the old wet noodle because after rereading the mail I have received from readers around the country regarding that letter, "Smitten" should definitely consult an attorney — and possibly a clergyman — before taking the relationship to the next level. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I wish to correct a flaw in your advice to "Smitten" in North Texas regarding a potential marriage to his now-former stepmother

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

(his father having passed away). You advised the young man to go ahead with the relationship should he wish. Under the current Texas Family Code, Chapter 6, Section 6.206: "A marriage is void if a party is a current or former stepchild or stepparent of the other party."

Therefore, under current Texas law, "Smitten" and his stepmother could not achieve a legally binding marriage. They would have to move to another state without such a provision to take that course of action.

—AWAITING MY BAR EXAM RESULTS IN OKLAHOMA

DEAR ABBY: Regarding your advice to "Smitten," be aware that some states, including Texas, outlaw marriage to your stepmother as incestuous. Others are Rhode Island, South Carolina, Tennessee and Oklahoma.

—CLEM IN WALLINGFORD, PA.

DEAR ABBY: If the young man's mother is alive, how would she receive her son's new mate, who used to be her ex-husband's wife? "Smitten's" mother could be an undue source of stress in his marriage and he should be alerted to that fact.

—OFFERING A WARNING IN HOUSTON

DEAR ABBY: "Smitten" may be in trouble regarding the Bible's prohibition stating that "You shall not uncover the nakedness of your father's wife; it is your father's nakedness." (Leviticus 18:8) A better suggestion would be to consult a knowledgeable eccumenical authority.

—MARLON IN ROSAMOND, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: I'm afraid this time you misled your readers. In all heavenly religions (including Christianity, Islam, Judaism, etc.) if a man marries a woman — providing having a sexual relationship between them — his son may NEVER enter wedlock with his stepmother in any way at all! You do not have the right to allow them to marry. To do so would be irreligious, unethical and sinful. You owe palliation to pious readers.

Homeland Security strategy leans on private sector

By Josh Meyer
Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — In a new homeland security strategy released Tuesday, the Bush administration warned that help from U.S. allies and the public is needed to thwart an attack on American soil that is being planned by a reconstituted al-Qaida.

Frances Fragos Townsend, assistant to the president for counterterrorism and homeland security, said Osama bin Laden's terrorist network continues to plot, recruit and organize from a haven in the lawless tribal regions of Pakistan. Townsend said al-Qaida is intent on infiltrating terrorists into the United States to launch attacks, possisibly with weapons of mass destruction.

"There's no question they're not only underway, they're ongoing and have been," Townsend said of such infiltration efforts. In a conference call with reporters.

In the "National Strategy for Homeland Security" issued by the White House's Homeland Security Council, the administration said such terrorists might use homemade bombs made with readily available materials, as they are doing in Iraq. It also concluded that more needs to be done to address the emergence of "homegrown extremism" and violent Islamic radicalization in the United States and worldwide, saying it has provided al-Qa da and other terrorist organizations with a ready pool of future recruits.

The 53-page strategy document largely echoes previous administration homeland security policies and statements. But it places strong new emphasis on the count-er-terrorism role played by the private sector, American citizens and U.S. allies overseas.

"To best protect the American people, homeland security must be a responsibility shared across our entire nation," President Bush wrote in a letter, dated Oct. 5, that accompanied the report.

One former U.S. government homeland security expert characterized the new strategy as an incremental step in the right direction.

"They are really trying to move the ball in the last few minutes of the last quarter of their administration, when it is a really hard ball to move.

They have a number of huge challenges that they have itemized in the document," said David Heyman, director of the Homeland Security Program at the Center for Strategic and International Studies, who previously led many government studies on the subject.

Happy birthday! German wins Nobel Prize for chemistry research

By Malcolm Ritter
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — A German scientist received a startling present Wednesday on his 71st birthday: a $1.5 million Nobel Prize to honor his groundbreaking studies of how chemical reactions take place on surfaces.

Gerhard Ertl laid the foundation for studies of modern surface chemistry, a field that will help scientists produce renewable energy more efficiently and create new materials for electronic devices, the Nobel committee said.

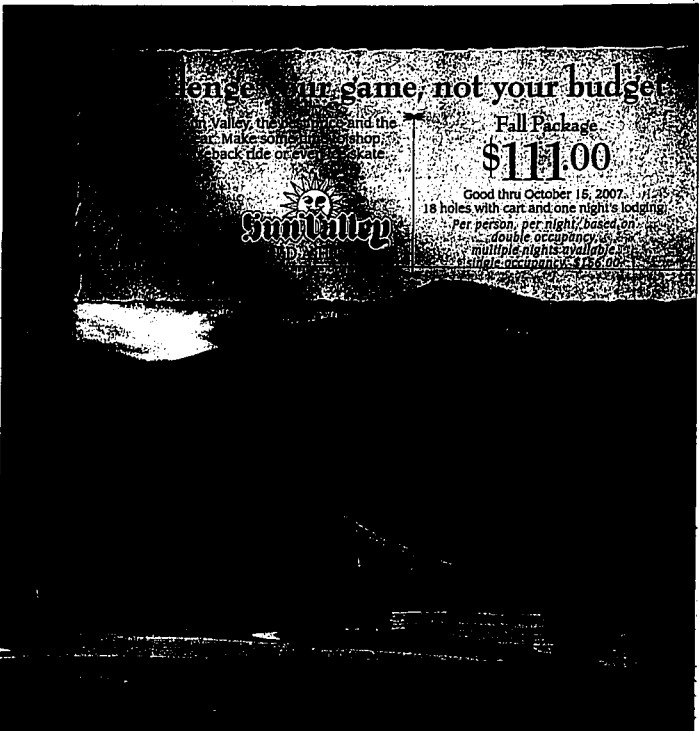

Surface chemistry is also important for many industrial processes, and key to understanding such diverse things as how pollution eats away at the ozone layer, fuel cells produce energy without pollution and catalytic converters clean up automobile exhaust.

Ertl showed how to get reliable results from technically demanding experiments and provided detailed descriptions of key chemical reactions, the Nobel committee said Wednesday.

Arenz family slips into Colombia after trouble in Panama

Editor's note
For the next several months, College of Southern Idaho Spanish professor Raquel Arenz and her children, Teresa and Carlos are traveling through Mexico and several Central and Latin American countries. They will regularly send stories to Magicvalley.com and the Times-News about the steps on their journey of a lifetime.

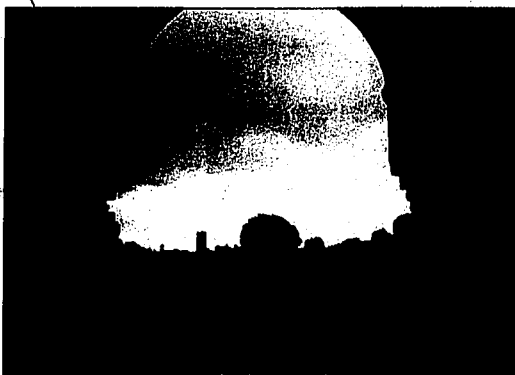

By Teresa Arenz from her blog

We made it! We are in Colombia! I don't know why Colombia seemed so unreachable, and so unattainable. Our entrance into Colombia was one of the easiest we have had, especially in comparison to Panama.

We barely slid into Panama — only by my mom's persuasiveness and everyone's prayers did we make it into Panama. I had a very required us to show them $500 per person and a return ticket out of Panama. We had neither of these things, and we went through a lot of hassle before the immigration official told us: that he was doing a "humanitarian act" and reluctantly stamped our passports and let us go.

Colombia, we breezed right through your borders

JOURNEY of a LIFETIME

Raquel, Teresa and Carlos Arenz made a stop in September to Panama City, where they reported that getting into the country was difficult.

and were welcomed with open arms. This is not what we were expecting.

Cartagena is a port town on the Caribbean coast. It was settled by the Spanish, and the Spanish brought black slaves. So today, there is a wide mixture of people, but more black people than we have seen so far. Colombians are beautiful. They are vibrant, loud and friendly. Walking down the streets you hear cumbias and salsas blaring from every restaurant and convenience store. When I walk alone, people stare, whistle, wink and call out. It's not because they think I am a beautiful woman, but I stand out as a "gringa." When I walk with Carlos and mom they are more subdued.

We have been told that Cartagena is one of the safest, prettiest and most expensive places in Colombia. I can see why. It has so much character and history. Mostly Europeans come to visit here, and they are welcomed by the Colombians. Americans on the other hand... You know what? I don't think we are liked in any corner of the world — maybe Costa Rica. People have treated us very nicely here, but they can't tell what we are, because my mom speaks perfect Spanish, and we use our Mexican passports.

We have asked various people what they think of Americans, and the answers were all negative. It is so hard to hear that your country is hated. I already knew this before, but traveling has taken me out of my safe cocoon and put the platter of steaming resentment right in front of my face.

La Alianza — The Alliance

Multicultural center nearing debut

By Pat Marcantonio
Times-News writer

La Alianza

For more information, e-mail patmar@magicvalley.com. Send contributions to La Alianza, c/o The Advocates, P.O. Box 3216, Halley, ID 83333

HAILEY — When Ruben Rivera first came to the Wood River Valley almost 30 years ago, speaking Spanish in public was frowned upon.

Things change. Now, a community advisory committee is preparing to open a multicultural center. Rivera is co-chairman of that committee.

La Alianza, which means "the alliance," will be located at the community center at 1050 Fox Acres Road, which is also home to the College of Southern Idaho Blaine Center and Blaine County Recreation. The school district also holds programs there.

The growing Latino population of the area is the reason for La Alianza's center, which will open Nov. 1, said Jenny Emery director of the CSI Blaine County Center.

The center is envisioned as a gathering place for all kinds of services, including immigration and legal assistance and referral, translation and interpretation services, and basic Spanish reading and writing skills classes through CSI. Plans call for it to become a clearing house/resource center and meeting place with training in leadership development, and community-wide education and diversity. Its mission is build cross-cultural alliances to improve the quality of life in the community through education, advocacy and direct services, as well as promote cultural understanding, advocacy for immigrants and work against discrimination.

Services are now offered at different places throughout the county. For example, CSI offers basic education and English as second language classes, and St. Luke's Regional Medical Center offers several outreach classes in Spanish. But La Alianza would provide Latino and other populations a gathering place. "Basically, it's a multicultural center to promote understanding between cultures and as an advocate for immigrants," said Rivera, systems administrator for the Blaine County School District.

Discussion about such a center has been going on for years, but last fall a group of community members got together to explore the establishment of an organization to create a center, Rivera said.

"Right now, we are targeting the Hispanic community because it is growing rapidly," he said.

Latinos are estimated to make up from 11 to 20 percent of the population in the county. And the quality of life and economy of the county depends on the intergration of this diverse population into all aspects of community life, a La Alianza background sheet reads.

The steering committee, made up of representatives from several community agencies and organizations, is now in the process of hiring an executive director for La Alianza. The executive director would be charged with — among other duties — developing and delivering services, working with volunteers, marketing and community programs, and serving as a leading advocate on issues affecting Latinos and the multicultural center.

The budget for the first one to two years is $75,000. So far, they have about $60,000 from charitable contributions, — other organizations, city and county governments.

Rivera is happy with the changes in the valley compared to when he first arrived those many years ago, when Spanish was not a language openly spoken.

"The last few years have changed. The new generation of Spanish-speaking population, you can see people working in the community, not just agricultural. I think the next generation will be even better to do that. We need to help this community become self-reliant," Rivera said. "It's a win-win situation for Anglos and Latinos."

"I think it's a real exciting and creative thing for the county," Emery said.

Rapid expansion

Jayco announces opening of third facility in Twin Falls

By Joshua Palmer
Times-News writer

Executives from Jayco Inc. said they didn't think they would be back in Twin Falls this soon to expand the company's recreational vehicle manufacturing operations, but that is exactly what they were doing Wednesday afternoon as they cut the ribbon on Jayco's third manufacturing facility in Twin Falls.

Of course, the expansion did not come without its challenges.

Economic development officials and Jayco executives raced against time to get permits approved by the city, which would allow the manufacturer to build its 300,000 square foot facility east of Twin Falls.

The problem was that city offices were already backlogged with permit requests from other developers and businesses.

Some say the city simply could not keep up with how fast it wanted to grow.

"It took longer than we expected for the permits to go through because there was so much happening at that time," said Dave Yoder, general manager of Jayco's western operations.

But Twin Falls City Mayor Lance Clow described the challenges under a different light.

"There are some who felt like they were at the end of their ropes," he said. "And, I'm sure there were some people who wished that I was hanging on the end of that rope."

However, after several months of determination and patience, as well as some prodding by economic development groups, Jayco was able to begin construction on its third facility more than six months ago.

The company has big plans for its production facilities in Twin Falls.

Yoder said Jayco plans to produce up to 30 RVs per day between its new and existing plants.

Company officials say the facilities will manufacture Jayco's top-selling trailer—the Pay Flight. But Jayco officials said it plans to release a new model in early December, which will be manufactured at the new plant in Twin Falls.

Jayco Inc. has hired the additional workers it needs for its expanded operations. However, the company will still be up against historically low unemployment rates in south-central Idaho.

With an unemployment rate of 1.8 percent in south-central Idaho, many employers are finding it difficult to hire skilled workers. Officials from the Idaho Department of Labor said the low unemployment rate will force businesses to increase wages and benefits in order to attract workers.

They say the reason that Jayco was able to hire enough employees for its expansion was simply because the company is known for its "excellent benefits and compensation."

David Yoder, the general manager of Jayco, approaches the podium Wednesday during the grand opening of the expansion building of Jayco Inc. Wilber Borstrager, chairman and CEO of Jayco Inc., left, was on hand to praise the Twin Falls extension for its contributions saying that more than half of Jayco trailers on the road are made in Twin Falls.

House bill would end private tax collection program

By Jim Abrams
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — House Democrats on Wednesday pushed through legislation to end a program that turns over smaller-scale tax delinquent cases to private collection agencies.

The White House threatened a veto by President Bush, saying collectors are bringing in needed money.

Opponents said tax collection is the government's responsibility, and the program, approved by Congress in 2004 and begun a year ago, is inefficient and exposes people to harassment by private collectors.

Defenders said it could bring in some $2 billion over the next decade from delinquent cases the Internal Revenue Service otherwise would ignore.

"Terminating this program would result in a loss of significant revenue over the next 10 years," the White House said in a statement warning of a presidential veto.

The bill passed 232-173 and now goes to the Senate. A Senate measure that effectively would cut off money for the program is part of a spending bill waiting action by the full Senate.

Idaho to host Korea-U.S. Economic Conference

BOISE — More than 150 delegates from the Korea-U.S. Economic Conference (KUSEC) will meet in Boise on Oct. 15 through the 16 for the fifth annual conference.

Korean political and business leaders will meet with counterparts from Idaho and five western states including Alaska, California, Hawaii, Oregon and Washington.

KUSEC is a private and non-profit organization approved by and registered with the government of the Republic of Korea.

The event will include a welcome dinner at Governor C.L. "Butch" Otter's ranch, business tracks in biotechnology, alternative and renewable energy and agricultural technology, site visits and one-on-one business meetings between Korean and U.S. business leaders.

Registration and agendas are available at <https://secure.meetingsystems.com/kusec/> or contact Aaron Davis at (208) 334-2470 ext. 2129.

Treading water Report: Idaho wages not enough for workers

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

Debra Maltos works full-time at Fred Meyer. She also has a part-time job as an aide for an after-school program, and her husband, Jose, works full-time as a machine operator for a factory.

To the casual observer, that should be a lot of money. But according to a new report released by the Idaho Community Action Network and the Northwest Federation of Community Organizations, it's not quite enough.

Maltos, her family and many other Idahoans are victims of circumstance, said ICAN co-chair Roxy Carr. The cost of living in Idaho and other northwest states has risen by at least twice as much as the average wage, she said, and health care costs have gone up by six times as much in some areas. Those changes combined mean more Idahoans are living paycheck to paycheck, if they get paychecks at all.

"I see a lot of our elderly and our young parents having problems with paying the rent and their food costs," said Carr, a resident of Twin Falls.

The latest version of the annual survey, which is done by the regional group with help from ICAN, says one-third of job openings in Idaho pay less than the living wage — $10.93 an hour — for a single adult. About 87 percent of them pay less than the wage needed for a single adult with two children — $23.44 an hour.

The researchers compile the report by studying the basic costs for a family in terms of food, housing, health care and other budget items, and calculating the salaries needed to pay for those items. The living wage for a single adult, for example, covers $511 per month for housing and utilities, $114 per month in possible health care costs and more than $3,000 in state and federal taxes.

The costs of health care and health insurance are the main reason the living wage has increased so much since 2002, research associate Gerald Smith said. According to the report, which he helped create, the living wage has gone up by $2 an hour for single adults and $3 an hour for a family of two working parents and two kids.

"As (health insurance) costs are being shifted to employees, more are not able to afford it, so they're falling into this gap," Smith said.

It's definitely a problem for Maltos, the food program coordinator for ICAN — a different organization from the Community Action Partnership of Idaho. Her troubles, she said, stem in part from a car accident she and her son were involved in during 2005. Care for her son's knee injuries helped push the hospital bill to $25,000. She can't find help through most federal programs or Medicaid, she said, because her family makes just a little too much to fall within the budget guidelines.

"I'm just a hair over everything," she said. "The report suggests several possible solutions, including opening up access to health care and increasing the number of jobs that pay a living wage. Though she supports raising the minimum wage, Carr said, she worries about the effect on small businesses and said reversing the trend won't be easy.

"It's just a no-win situation." Nate Poppino can be reached at 735-3297 or npoppino@magicalvalley.com.

Leavitt expresses confidence Dems won't override veto on children's insurance

By Hope Yan
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — President Bush's health secretary said Sunday he does not expect Congress to override a veto on children's insurance and warned that the popular program could be at risk unless Democrats restrain spending.

In an interview with The Associated Press, Health and Human Services Secretary Mike Leavitt said Bush would be willing to provide more than the $5 billion increase over five years he first proposed. He declined to say how much additional money was possible.

But in a warning to Democratic leaders, he has urged them to stick with their $35 billion increase. Leavitt said Bush would not waver despite attempts to override his veto last week.

An override requires a two-thirds majority in the House and Senate. The Senate approved the increase by a veto-proof margin, but the House fell about two dozen votes short of a two-thirds majority. The House has scheduled an override vote for Oct. 18.

Leavitt said the Democratic-controlled Congress, not the Republican administration, would pay the political price if the State Children's Health Insurance Program stalls due to gridlock. Congress has continued funding the program in its current level until mid-November as part of legislation keeping government agencies operating beyond Oct. 1, the start of the new budget year.

"I'm presuming the Democrats do in fact want the children's insurance program to be reauthorized," Leavitt said.

"The president knows bad policy when he sees it. He has ruled as clearly as possible that I want to reauthorize this program and I'm prepared to add to the 20 percent increase I've already proposed." But we need to have a serious conversation that involves all of the points of view," Leavitt said.

He added, "Once we agree on our priorities, then the proper number will arrive."

After his veto, Bush immediately signaled a willingness to compromise on a new bill, but congressional Democrats stood firm.

"You can't write another ounce of compromise out of this," Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, D-Nev., said last week. In the House, Speaker Nancy Pelosi is seeking support from 14 more Republicans to vote against the GOP president.

"It's hard to imagine how we could diminish the number of children who are covered," said Pelosi, D-Calif., in an interview broadcast on "Fox News Sunday." "The president calls himself the 'decider,' and I don't know why he would want to decide that one child has health care and another does not."

"I'm presuming the Democrats do in fact want the children's insurance program to be reauthorized."

— Health and Human Services Secretary Mike Leavitt

"So we take it one step at a time. And right now, we have the next 10 days to two weeks to try to peel off about 14 votes in the House," she said.

The program provides health insurance to children in families with incomes too great for Medicaid eligibility but not enough to afford private insurance.

Bush and Leavitt have decreed the spending increase primarily supported by Democrats as unnecessarily subsidizing middle-income people as part of Democrats' goal of government-run health care for every American.

Leavitt said the veto override effort was sure to fail and as a result would waste two weeks during which the administration could work with Congress on new legislation.

"We're prepared to have negotiations at any time the Democrats want us," he said. "Unfortunately they put it off for two weeks so they can play politics with children's health care."

But Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., said Congress had already made compromises, even noting that House leaders wanted $50 billion for the program but dropped it down to $35 billion to appease Senate Republicans.

Rangel said Bush would suffer the political consequences if the program were not reauthorized, adding that Republicans such as Sen. Charles Grassley of Iowa and Orrin Hatch of Utah were working to sway wavering House GOP lawmakers.

"We're almost convinced that if the moral thing is being done and you listen to the children's agency, the churches and the synagogues and the mosques, that we'll have those votes to override the president," Rangel said on "Face the Nation" on CBS.

Hungry 6-year-old trying to drive to Applebee's crashes car

BROOMFIELD, Colo. (AP) — A hungry 6-year-old grabbed his grandmother's car keys, positioned his child seat behind the steering wheel and tried to drive himself to an Applebee's restaurant.

He didn't get far. Unable to take the car out of reverse, the boy backed up 75 feet from her house into a transformer Tuesday, knocking out electricity and phone service to dozens of townhouses in this suburb north of Denver.

No one was injured and the boy, whose name was not released, got out of his car and told his grandmother what happened.

"He proceeded to start the car and started backing up," said Sgt. Colleen O'Connell of the Broomfield Police Department. "He went backward about 47 feet, hit the curb, then went backward another 29 feet."

Investigators couldn't figure out how the boy reached the accelerator. No charges will be filed. "I have five children of my own, so I know you cannot watch them every minute of the day," said nearby resident Nancy Hollis, whose power was knocked out by the accident.

OFFICIAL BALLOT SPECIAL GENERAL OBLIGATION BOND ELECTION SCHOOL DISTRICT OF CUMBERLY TWIN FALLS COUNTY STATE OF IDAHO October 18, 2007

QUESTION: Shall the Board of Trustees of School District No. 414 (Cumberland), Twin Falls County, Idaho, be authorized to incur the obligation school bonds of said District in the principal amount of up to $10,250,000 of which $1,000,000 in such bonds may be used by the Board of Trustees, the final installment to fall due not more than twenty (20) years after the date of the bonds...

NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE

On Tuesday, the 5th day of February, 2008, at the hour of 10:00 o'clock a.m., of said day at Alliance Title & Escrow, 1411 Falls Ave., E., Ste. 015, Twin Falls, in the County of Twin Falls, State of Idaho, Charles W. Fawcett, as Successor Trustee, will sell at public auction, to the highest bidder, for cash, in lawful money of the United States, all payable at the time of sale, the following described real property situated in the County of Twin Falls, State of Idaho, and described as follows:

LOT 5 OF BLOCK 1 OF GOLDEN SPUR SUBDIVISION, PLAT THEREOF, FILED IN BOOK 20 OF TWIN FALLS COUNTY RECORDS AT PAGE 15. OFFICIAL RECORDS OF TWIN FALLS COUNTY, IDAHO.

The Successor Trustee has no knowledge of a more particular description of the above-referenced real property, but for purposes of compliance with Section 60-113, Idaho Code, the Successor Trustee has been informed that the street address of 1102 Saddle Dr., Pile, Idaho, is sometimes associated with said real property.

Said sale will be made without covenant or warranty regarding title, possession or encumbrances to satisfy the obligation secured by and pursuant to the power of sale, conferred in the Deed of Trust executed by WAYNE F. KINDER, and CRISTINA H. KINDER, Husband and Wife, Grantor, to Charles W. Fawcett, Successor Trustee, for the benefit and security of WELLES FARGO BANK, N.A., as lender, recorded February 27, 2008, as instrument No. 2008-00482, Mortgage records of Twin Falls County, Idaho; and assigned to the Idaho Housing and Finance Association by Assignment of Deed of Trust recorded on February 28, 2008, as instrument No. 2008-00484, and re-recorded on February 14, 2008, as instrument No. 2008-02318, Mortgage records of Twin Falls County, Idaho. THE ABOVE GRANTOR IS NAMED TO COMPLY WITH SECTION 45-1508 (4)(a), IDAHO CODE. NO REPRESENTATION IS MADE THAT HE IS OR IS NOT PRESENTLY RESPONSIBLE FOR THIS OBLIGATION.

The default for which this sale is to be made is the failure to pay when due, monthly installment payments under the Deed of Trust Note dated September 8, 2006, in the amount of $131.00 each for the month of June through September, 2007, inclusive; and for each and every month thereafter until date of sale or reimbursement of the lender's payments as new due plus accumulated late charges, plus any costs or expense associated with this foreclosure.

The accrued interest at the date of 5.38% per annum from March 1, 2007. The principal balance owing as of this date on the obligation secured by said Deed of Trust is $28,255.23, plus accrued interest at the rate of 5.62% per annum from March 1, 2007. Assistant Controller/ Business Manager

The Times-News has a full-time opening for an assistant controller/business manager to join our management team in Twin Falls. This position supervises three accounting clerks and has regional management responsibilities with two additional daily newspapers and two weeklies.

The successful candidate will have a solid accounting background, computer experience with Excel, and management experience. A degree in accounting with at least five years of hands-on accounting experience is preferred. Candidates must be able to lead a team in a fast-paced, deadline-oriented environment. Strong organizational and time management skills are needed and the ability to work with associates of all levels.

This position maintains newsprint inventory system and processes including review of journal entries, physical inventory counts and usage reporting. Also manages accounts receivable processes including credit and collections, daily cash postings, customer aging and collection performance reports and coordination activities for the company's month-end close, including preparation of journal entries and account reconciliations.

We have an excellent benefits package that includes medical, dental, vision, 401(k) retirement, profit sharing, employee stock purchase plan, and paid holidays and vacation. The Times-News is part of Loop Enterprises, a publicly held company comprised of 51 dailies with a joint interest in another five dailies. We are an Equal Opportunity Employer and drug-free workplace.

VIDEO GAME REVIEW

Heroine Nariko is shown in an action scene from the new PlayStation 3 video game 'Heavenly Sword.'

'Heavenly Sword' swings onto PlayStation 3

BY MATT SLACK
The Associated Press

The hack-and-slash genre brings a certain mindless, yet simply satisfying, element to video games. Call it a quirk of gaming, but sometimes there's just an odd pleasure in pressing the same few buttons over and over again.

"Heavenly Sword" (Rated T, $59.99) brings this game style to the PlayStation3 with Hollywood-caliber production values. One of the most noticeable things about "Heavenly Sword" has nothing to do with action: this game has some of the best eyes in the business.

The action heroine, Nariko, shows quite an emotional range with her big brown eyes, slicing and dicing her way through hordes of armor-clad enemies with the game's paeonaise, the Heavenly Sword.

Nariko's haunting, beautiful looks are a stark contrast to the grim fact that this weapon is slowly draining her life.

The core gameplay puts you in control of Nariko, and she's a one-woman army who battles King Bohan and his relentless quest to obtain his weapon of ultimate power.

There are better action games like this, notably the "God of War" series for the older PlayStation 2, from which this game clearly borrows heavily. But "Heavenly Sword" benefits from lush graphics on the PS3 and looks amazing on a high-definition television.

The game offers some depth with combo moves and three ways to use the sword. When surrounded by enemies, switching stances between ranged, speedy and brute force attacks is a strategic decision.

There are some exciting interludes which you'll have to tap the buttons at the right time to slide and run down giant ropes and onto a tower of waiting enemies, for example.

It's like playing a movie at times, hardly a surprise with Andy Serkis, who played Gollum in "The Lord of the Rings" movies, once again plunging the memories of acting with a memorable turn as this game's devious King Bohan.

With his mad desire for the Heavenly Sword, Serkis creates one of video gaming's more memorable villains, showing more than the usual one-dimensional depth afforded most plucked bad guys.

Not everything is heavenly in "Heavenly Sword."

Nariko isn't alone in her quest to defeat Bohan, and occasionally you'll partake in missions as the elusive Kai.

Idaho treasures

Times-News

Idaho composers will share the spotlight with Idaho musicians as the Magic Valley Symphony opens its new season Sunday afternoon.

The first of four concerts of "musical treasures" is scheduled for 4 p.m. in the College of Southern Idaho's Fine Arts Center auditorium in Twin Falls.

Featured selections include "Portraits" by University of Idaho professor Daniel Bukvich. His work recalls the first decades of Twin Falls' history with interludes of music and images from the Clarence Bläbe collection of historical photos.

The "Oklahoma Elegy" of Randy Earles will also be heard. Earles, a native of Oklahoma and chairman of Idaho State University's Department of Music, captured the intense emotions of the 1995 terrorist bombing of the Oklahoma City federal building in his "Elegy."

Director Ted Hadley programmed four shorter selections, featuring symphony principals and last season's guitar soloist, Gary Garofano.

Flutist Jo Gerrish and oboist Janie Griffl, sisters who have performed a combined 71 years with the symphony, prepared a playful concerto by 18th-century Italian composer Antonio Salieri.

Concertmaster Lori Casperson will step forward with a violin romance by 19th-century Polish composer Henryk Wieniawski that she says is so beautiful "it must have been written for someone he loved very much."

Tuesday night, Magic Valley Symphony members rehearse for their upcoming concert at the College of Southern Idaho's Fine Arts Center auditorium.

Principal trumpeter Rick Spolcher will contribute the first movement of the fanfaillat trumpet concerto of Hummel.

Children are invited to "meet the instruments" one hour before the concert and during the after-concert reception. The Carma's Kids project will have all of the symphony instruments available for hands-on tryouts.

"Here is a concert for everyone: families, classical music purists, history buffs, even someone who isn't sure they like classical music," Hadley said. "We can all relate to this Idaho music and these musicians."

Clooney's dark knight of the soul

BY ANN HORNADAY
The Washington Post

George Clooney glides beardlessly through a long Manhattan night in "Michael Clayton," a nervy legal thriller in which he suppresses his congenial charisma in a fascinating anti-star turn. A throwback in the best sense of the word, "Michael Clayton," which marks the auspicious directorial debut of screenwriter Tony Gilroy (best known for the "Bourne" movies), harks back to the great films of the 1970s in its gritty urban realism, suave sense of style and moral complexity.

From its eerily hushed opening scenes in a Manhattan law office after hours to its pared-down narrative and sleek visual design, "Michael Clayton" proves the adage that less can be much more. In the tradition of such classics as "All the President's Men," "Kluge" and "Three Days of the Condor," it's a film that dares not to patronize or pander to its audience, but rather to assume viewers possess the intelligence to connect its twisty trail of dots.

It helps enormously to have Clooney as our guide in the title role, a "fixer" at a white-shoe law firm who, over the course of four days, finds himself entangled in an increasingly sticky web of corporate intrigue, personal financial straits, madness and murder. Clayton is weary, and not only because he's the guy high-powered clients call when they've 'been nicked for a DUI or some other problem, he's got his own problems, in the form of some unresolved family issues and a penchant for backroom poker games. Clooney, eschewing the glitzy, glamorous persona of the "Ocean's" movies and other slick bonbons, is in baggy-eyed "Syriana" mode here, moving through the days-long 3 a.m. of the soul with none of the cocky affectations that he often relies on.

Clooney is wrong for the role of Michael Clayton, a Queens boy with relatives "on the cops." He doesn't have the accent for it, or the blue-collar cred. But he's just the right star for "Michael Clayton," which depends on Clooney to keep filmmakers interested. And he has the chops to go head to head with an extraordinarily accomplished supporting cast. As Arthur Edens, a law partner whose work on a huge class action suit threatens to unravel the case, the great Tom Wilkinson delivers spoken arias with soaring, manic conviction worthy of Peter Finch in "Network." Sydney Pollack, as Clayton's ruthless boss, thoroughly accomplishes his goal in every scene he's in (it was crucial for Gilroy to find an actor who could convincingly dominate Clooney, and he found him). But the linchpin of "Michael Clayton" is Tilda Swinton, who, as one of the firm's clients, is the very personification of female ambivalence. Watching as her character, Karen Crowder, nervously prepares for a crucial presentation, carefully playing out her nyctons, is at once chilling and heartbreakingly.

chamber piece, as each character confronts his or her personal ethical edge. Gilroy has shot the film using long takes, a blue-gray palette and subdued, understated editing. But its formal elegance as much of the film is, it still bristles with spontaneity and muscular brio. The film's most memorable sequence, a quick, efficient assassination, is extraordinary not only because it transpires over the course of one tense take, but because it does so entirely in silence.

Such is the balance — between the brutal and the balletic, the star and the anti-star, the glamour and the grit — that Gilroy strikes throughout "Michael Clayton," whose clean lines and smooth surfaces are never ruptured by the wasted moment or gratuitous melodrama. In a word, it's a mature piece of work, and like a harbinger of the fall season, marks the annual return to the screen of intelligence, taste and class. Hallelujah, and hire the babysitter: It's grown-up time again at the movies.

Movie nuggets

• "The Brave One"/B+

This canny, thoughtful and violent new film from director Neil Jordan ("The Crying Game"), asks if perhaps there is a killer lurking within each of us. It stars Jodie Foster as Erica Bain, a radio talk host who roams New York collecting stories about "the safest big city in the world." Until one evening when she is mugged in a Central Park tunnel, beaten close to death, while her fiancée is killed, and after her name is coma, she unexpectedly finds a murderous urge within her. The New York locations help to accentuate the post 9/11 paranoia at work, but the film has a clearer antecedent in 1974's "Death Wish." If "The Brave One" draws the sizable audiences it deserves, look for it to trigger debate over the morality of Erica's actions. No matter which side you find yourself on, it is hard to deny that this is an urban thriller with something worth thinking about. 2 hours, 2 minutes. R.

• "Eastern Promises"/A- One of David Cronenberg's finest films, with Viggo Mortensen as a driver for the Russian Mafia in London, and Naomi Watts as a midwife determined to protect the life of a newborn infant. In a dizzy leader her to the sealed world of the Russians, led by Armin Mueller-Stahl as the patriarch and Vincent Cassel as his son; the result isn't exactly a crime story, but a thriller about human nature. Scenes of startling violence. 1 hour, 36 minutes. R.

• "The Game Plan"/C The game plan behind "The Game Plan" was obvious from the movie's trailer and poster: Look, The Rock's back, but now he's a lovable lug, a softie learning to embrace his paternal side and hang with the wee ones. Just like Vin Diesel in "The Pacifier." Dwayne "The Rock" Johnson's "Game Plan" aims to turn an action-movie bruiser into a benign father figure. And the same as Diesel, Johnson manages enough charisma to overcome an often awkward performance and at least provide a likable anchor for this lazily plotted, vacuously predictable tale of an egomaniacal football star dealing with a daughter he never knew he had. 1 hour, 50 minutes. PG.

• "Good Luck Chuck"/No rating "Good Luck Chuck" packages Dane Cook him as Charlie, an affable and affluence dentist who horn dogs around some but who cannot catch his heart how to live. The conceit of Josh Stolberg's script is simple: Every woman Charlie dates ends up marrying the next guy. His reputation as a natural good-luck charm ensured that the ladies beat a path to his door. The resulting one-night-stand montage runs 10 times longer, and with less wit, than the comparable sequence in "Wedding Crashers." R.

• "The Heartbreak Kid"/No rating Ben Stiller plays a commitment phobe who finally takes the plunge and marries a woman who seems normal. But immediately after their wedding, she shows her true colors, and they couldn't be uglier. While on their honeymoon, he finds another woman (Michelle Monaghan) who may be his true love. R.

• "The Jane Austen Book Club"/No rating The lives of six ordinary people take on contemporary parallels to the text in the Jane Austen novels they are reading as part of a community book club. PG-13.

• "The Kingdom"/C Director Peter Berg ("Friday Night Lights") uses very hip hand-held and ultra-close-up camera tricks to tell his film story of FBI cowboys who fly to Riyadh, the Saudi capital, hoping to avenge a massive act of terrorist brutality against a community of Americans. While such cinematography proved effective in this summer's "Bourne Ultimatum," here they seem to be trying to hide the emptiness of Matthew Michael Carnahan's screenplay. 1 hour, 50 minutes. R.

• "Resident Evil: Extinction"/No rating Milla Jovovich returns to her signature role as the zombie-but-kicking genetic hybrid, Alice, once again separated from her clothing as often as narratively possible and wielding guns, knives and kicks with aplomb. "Extinction" picks up several years after the T-virus from the earlier films has spread around the world, turning those infected into the walking dead, and even zombie dogs and a sky full of zombie crows dot the landscape. R.

• "The Seeker: The Dark is Rising"/No rating The story of Will Stanton (Christopher Eccleston), a young man who learns he is the last of a group of warriors who have dedicated their lives to fighting the forces of the Dark. Traveling back and forth through time, Will discovers a series of clues which lead him into a showdown with forces of the Dark rising; the future of the world rests in Will's hands. PG.

• "Sydney White"/No rating Amanda Bynes plays a teenager with the rugged soul of a plumber's daughter and the like aspirations of her late sorry-for-a-mom. At home, she wears plaid shirts and wields a wrench to the manner born, but she enrolls in the whitest university in the country and rushes at the blondest, most uptight house on campus. PG-13

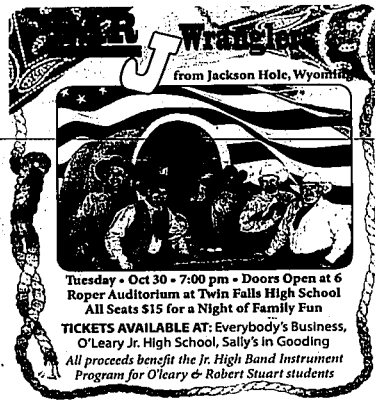

• "3:10 to Yuma"/No rating If "3:10 to Yuma" feels familiar, and it does, it's not just because it's a remake of the classic 1957 western. Almost every plot point — psycho gunslingers, savage Apaches, even doctors who say "that bullet has to come out" — is a trope that has been a genre standard for decades. But what's most impressive about this new version, starring Russell Crowe as a charismatic outlaw and Christian Bale as the downtrodden rancher who crosses his path, is that James Mangold directs it with such energy and passion that it's as if he didn't know it's all been done before. R.

"Reign Over Me"
R

Long live rock! (Cue accompanying first pump with Bie lighter aloft) Be it dead or alive... It's actually another song by the Who that inspires the life of writer-director Mike Binder's "Reign Over Me," but it seems appropriate to begin with a guttural, lung-clearing wail of some kind. From the opening, surreal scooter-eye view of Manhattan streetscapes accompanied by Graham Nash's "Simple Man" to its rising closing credits, "Reign" is an ardent man-to-love ode to rock in both its soft and hard forms.

Don Cheadie stars as Alan Johnson, a successful New York dentist, jolted out of a melancholia of indeterminate causes when he unexpectedly encounters Adam Sandler's Charlie Fineman, his college roommate with whom he's lost contact. That Charlie does not recognize him and appears to have suffered some type of breakdown only energizes Alan's desire to rekindle their friendship.

The oddly matched pair begins to hang out, with Alan drawn into Charlie's strangely cloistered world of vintage rock. He's got a music room where he plays along to vinyl records, and he somewhat incongruously drums in a local punk band. The music is a haven from any reminders of a life he lost.

Adam Sandler seeks a little adult counseling from buddy Don Cheadie in 'Reign Over Me.'

borrowed from late-model Bob Dylan, Charlie is one sad and scary cat. The tragedy that triggered Charlie's withdrawal from life in the first place hovers in the background like a dark cloud threatening a downpour.

One minute he's feverishly scaling the video game heights of Shadow of the Colossus, the next he's retreating into the safety of his iPod. It's a one-man frazzled world devoid of responsibility that's marvelously attractive to the reserved Alan.

A scattershot dramatist at best in terms of plot, Binder riffs his scenarios like rickety scaffolding, and you wonder how they remain standing. Like his "The Upside of Anger," with Joel Allen and Kevin Costner as well-matched suburban lushes, "Reign Over Me" depends on the interaction of its complexly drawn characters to remain compelling even when its plot veers into questionable territory.

Along with two excellent lead performances, the film has a fine supporting cast, including Liv Tyler, Saffron Burrows, Donald Sutherland and Binder himself. Binder's people are not anyone you'd ask over for dinner, but it's fascinating to watch them argue, negotiate and cajole one another in exasperatingly human ways.

The two men at the center of "Reign" are both treading water, and though their situations and reunion feel awfully contrived, there's an authenticity to the way Alan gravitates to Charlie and then tries to help him.

"In the Land of Women"

"In the Land of Women" feels like an eccentric but compelling memoir — which, in a way, it is. Written and directed by first-timer Jon Kasdan — a son of filmmaker Lawrence Kasdan — it's a quasi-autobiographical drama about the unusual relationship that grows between a mopey young man and two women, a mother and daughter, who have emotional issues of their own. Recovering from a breakup in hometown Los Angeles, Carter (Adam Brody of "The O.C.") volunteers to take care of his slightly deranged, hypochondriac grandmother (Olympia Dukakis) in suburban Detroit.

It isn't long before he befriends 40-something Sarah (Meg Ryan), a bored mom and frustrated wife who lives across the road. Their friendship becomes a sort of spiritual glue for both. She's sick, and her husband is sleeping around. But as Carter becomes increasingly involved — platonically again — with Sarah's teenage daughter, Lucy (Kristen Stewart), life becomes complicated.

What matters here aren't the narrative events, so much as the movie's emotional textures.

"Women" explores the wide, uncharted zone between tenderness and romance. The movie also refuses to descend into the cute smarminess of a mutual recovery drama, thanks to originally conceived characters. We're always wondering — and wonderfully surprised — by their choices. As Carter, Brody is particularly appealing. It's a nice start out of the career gate for Kasdan, who has claimed his father's 1991 "Grand Canyon" as a direct influence.

"You Kill Me"
R

There's your repentant hit man and then there's your unrepentant hit man. Frank Falencyk, played with a merciless glow by Ben Kingsley in the very black comedy "You Kill Me," clearly falls into the latter category.

An assassin in Buffalo, N.Y., for the local Polish mob run by his Uncle Roman (Phillip Baker Hall), Frank has allowed his drinking to interfere with his work, so Roman exiles him to San Francisco to dry out and get his act together. There's not a lot of enthusiasm for this reformation from Frank, but he comes to realize that it's a matter of choosing between his family and his drinking, and his role in the family depends on him being an effective killer.

Besides, he likes being a killer because, well, he's just so good at it.

Directed by John Dahl, the film is of a piece with his earlier, wonderful neo-noirs, "The Last Seduction" and "Red Rock West." If less successful in its overall execution. The screenplay by Christopher Markus and Stephen McFeely ("The Life and Death of Peter Sellers," "The Chronicles of Narnia") excels when wielding its deadpan humor and oddball moments, not so much when building interest in the ethnic gang show-down brewing in western New York City of God Neighbors.

Though it bears a passing resemblance to the recent Kevin Costner film "Mr. Brooks" in its depiction of a killer dealing with addiction and its mix of mordant humor and thriller elements, "You Kill Me's" approach has a very different tone. Deep down, it's about relationships and the most surprising and pleasing aspect is when it veers off into quirkily romantic, seriocomic territory.

In San Francisco, while working part-time in a mortuary and grudgingly attending Alcoholics Anonymous meetings, Frank meets Laurel (Tea Leoni), a TV ad sales whiz with attitude to burn and a forthrightness that bores deep into the hit man's soul. As things gradually heat up with Laurel, and Frank thinks carefully through the AA 12 steps, he lightens up considerably, with Kingsley allowing the screw to slowly crack like a chunk of ice exposed to the sun's rays.

Leoni and Kingsley make for an ambivalently caustic couple, taking full advantage of Markus and McFeely's sharp, off-beat dialogue. Leoni delivers Laurel's been-there, done-that lines with a weariness born of suffering many foils and much disappointment. Her effect on Frank is to take a flower — albeit a short, bullet-headed and murderous flower — bloom.

Peruvians in the spotlight

Trailing of the Sheep Festival recognizes country for contributions

BY KAREN BOSSICK
For the Times-News

KETCHUM — Their names are Roca, And Eduardo. And Francisco.

And they come from Peru, a country better known for its alpacas and llamas than for sheep.

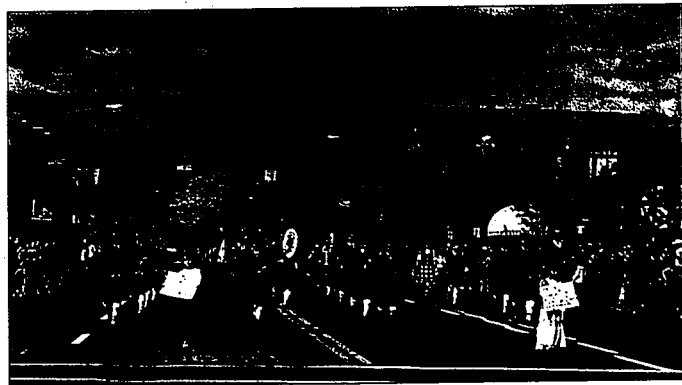

But these men are an indispensable part of Idaho's sheep industry, moving sheep on foot hundreds of miles through sagebrush and mountain meadows and protecting them from coyotes and wolves nearly six months of the year.

Now these men, who spend months with no one to talk to but the sheep, will get their moment in the spotlight Friday through Sunday as the 11th annual Trailing of the Sheep Festival celebrates the contributions of Peruvians to the sheep industry of Idaho.

"I'm excited that we're able to acknowledge them and their rich culture," said festival co-founder Diane Peavoy. "Not many people know much about Peru and Peruvians in the United States even though Peruvian shepherders have been coming here 20, 25 years. When I started to research the subject, I found there had been very little written about the subject, so I feel we're breaking new ground here."

Peavoy co-founded the festival 11 years ago with her husband, Flat Top sheep rancher John Peavy.

The reason? Newcomers to the wealthy enclave of Sun Valley were complaining about sheep trailing past their million-dollar condo windows and leaving doodads on the bike path that might smear on their black tires and rollerblades.

The couple decided to tackle the problem by insisting locals to come out and join the sheep as they trailed through town on their migration route.

Today that small parade has turned into a three-day festival, complete with a day-long folk-life fair featuring music and dance of the Polish Highlanders, Peruvians, Basques and Scots — any ethnic group that has had a hand in working with sheep.

There are wool-spinning demonstrations, sheep-shearing and dog-herding demonstrations, lamb tastings and woolly verse poetry.

And this year the festival will feature renowned Peruvian retablo artists Jeronimino Lazano and the Utah Hispanic Dance Alliance, which will present a theatrical rendition of the dance, music and folk costumes of Peru.

The highlights, though — as always — will be the struttin' of the mutton on Sunday, as 1,500 woolies parade down Main Street, which sits in the shadow of Sun Valley.

"I'm really excited about what they're trying to do this year," said Edwin Roman, a transplanted Peruvian who now owns a market specializing in Latin American imports in the Wood River Valley. "Until now they've always focused on the Basque culture. Now people will know that our people also are an important part of the area."

"A FINE AND PLEASANT MISERY"

Actor Behrens brings McManus' folderol to CSI stage

Times-Hews

Think of it as Idaho gothic. In 1992, Idaho writer Patrick McManus hooked up with actor Tim Behrens on a one-man show featuring some of the rustic ruminations from McManus' book hours.

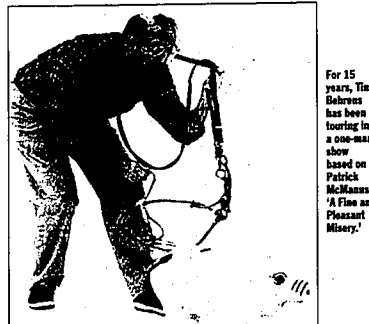

"A Fine and Pleasant Misery" Includes classic McManus lore such as the deer on the bicycle, Rancid Crabtree's famous toboggan run, and how to brush the taste of dog off your teeth.

The show is scheduled for Thursday night in the College of Southern Idaho Fine Arts Center auditorium in Twin Falls.

McManus is a 74-year-old Sandpoint native and a graduate of Washington State University. He writes mostly about his outdoor adventures from childhood with semi-fictional characters such as old woodsguard Rancid Crabtree, his childhood friends "Crazy" Eddie Muldoon and Retch Sweeney, and his dog Strange. The stories' humor is based on elaborate exaggerations of surreal adventures in the outdoors.

"His most recent work is 'Avalanche,'" the second in a series of mystery novels starring the character Sheriff Bo Tully.

Plenty to celebrate

BY BLAIR KOCH

Times-News correspondent

It looks like the Buhl Arts Council has plenty to celebrate back as the organization looks back on 19 years in the West End community.

By the end of the year Kathy Ruys anticipates that the arts council will take ownership of the Eighth Street Center, although she's not releasing details yet. "Right now the building is all to the left and in the very capable hands of the Buhl Arts Council," said Ruys, the center's owner.

Ruys, instrumental in the 1998 transformation of the historic First Presbyterian Church, built in 1907, into a place for community exposure to arts and culture, said it was a worthwhile project.

"I'm really glad I did it, but the time has come to hand the center off to the community," she said.

Buhl Arts Council leaders are optimistic but aren't counting their chickens before they hatch.

"Nothing is finalized yet," said arts council secretary Shirley Anderson. "We aren't in a position, yet, to say exactly what is going on. But we have great hopes for wonderful things to happen, and we have a very healthy financial picture right now."

When Ruys announced her intentions to sell the center a year ago, the arts council went through an ambiguous period, Anderson said, because the organization is housed at the center.

"Like any nonprofit organization you struggle by nature," said Terry Halbert, center general manager and arts council member. "When it became clear that Kathy would only be selling the center to the council, things calmed down a lot. I think the council has positioned itself to where some things of the past have been corrected and we are poised for the future."

Mike Youngman's acrylic 'Warrior Triptych' is on display at the Eighth Street Center gallery in Buhl as part of his 'Wild West' exhibit.

The council has diversified programs to appeal to a wider audience though its summer concert series where performers offer genres from bluegrass to gospel or mariachi, and by adding new programs to the center including quilting, horticulture and landscape, culinary opportunities and fly-tying.

"We received two grants to continue our youth ESCAPE program as well as a performing arts program," Halbert said. "We are also writing several grants for future programs."

Both grants are from the Idaho Commission on the Arts and give the council several thousand dollars to bring arts and music to Buhl and Castleford middle school students.

"Regardless of what happens in the near future with the center we still need our base public support to continue," Halbert said. "For now, we hope the community comes and celebrates the council's anniversary."

Twin Falls artist Dena McMurdie won second place in the annual, statewide juried contest hosted by The Art Museum of Eastern Idaho.

McMurdie's $750 award for her oil painting, Autumn Sunset, is sponsored by Bechtel BWXI Idaho. Idaho Paints Idaho, an exhibit featuring the competition's top 50 paintings, will be on display at The Art Museum of Eastern Idaho in Idaho Falls through Nov. 3.

Juror Dan Scott, assistant professor of drawing and painting at Boise State University, selected 25 of the 50 paintings to be part of the traveling portion of this exhibit, which will conclude at The Magic Valley Arts Council in Twin Falls from March 10 through April 19.

"The number of entries we receive each year continues to grow as does the quality of work," said Miyal Abe, Idaho Paints Idaho chairwoman.

"Encouraging exhibitions of Idaho artists is an important part of the mission of the museum, and this exhibition certainly gives Idaho artists the opportunity to showcase their work to a statewide audience."

Gregg Russell of Meridian placed first, and Patsy Parsons of Spirit Lake third. Jineen Griffith of Keitchum won a regional award.

Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — The hip-hop star known as will.i.am is a student of music history and a tech-head with a passion for living in the future.

So when asked recently about where his group, the Black Eyed Peas, will be in 20 years, his brow knitted in contemplation. Would the group be alive and well, like the survivors of the Red Hot Chili Peppers (who, by the way, inspired the Peas to take a name that belongs in a covered dish)? Or would they splinter and go their own ways, like a cheerier, West Coast version of the Pugees?

After chewing on the question, will.i.am nodded to himself.

"We will be going and we will be going bigger than ever, but it won't be the same. See, look, Fergie soloed, and she sold 5 million records. My solo record is getting ready to come out.

That's 2007, but 2027 is a totally different front. It's a different story. The front person for the Black Eyed Peas in 2027 ain't going to be the front person in 2020. It won't be Fergie, it won't be will.i.am, it's going to be A-l Pineda."

Pineda? He's another Peas member, the one who goes by a) p d e a p. But why exactly will he be trumping singing Fergie, whose album "The Dutchess" has spawned three No. 1 hits? Or will.i.am, whose "Songs About Girls" solo project hits stores Tuesday?

"The reason is China," the rapper said, launching into a long explanation of Pineda's superstar status in his native Philippines and how global-hungler patterns and the population for Pacific Rim pop culture will push Pineda to the front of the band. It may seem unlikely now, but in the 1970s who would have predicted that

Will.i.am goes solo for 'Songs About Girls'

Los Angeles Times

Hip-hop star will.i.am's 'Songs About Girls' debuted last month.

Phil Collins would be the biggest star from Genesis!

"They made a movie about him in the Philippines, his whole life story," will.i.am said. "They gave him like his own day: July 24 is the official Allan Pineda Day in the Philippines—I was there when the president gave it to him. I was like, 'Wow, dude, I never'd gotten to get no day.' Neil Armstrong, he walked on the moon and he doesn't have his own day. One giant leap for mankind, but he still got no day."

As giant leaps go, will.i.am makes one of his own with "Songs About Girls," his first formal, mainstream solo album. (He did release a soundtrack album to an Internet film and also did a solo collection on commission for, of all things, Zima.) The album has a long single in "I Got It From My Mama," a lusty club track that covers much of the same anatomical territory as "My Humps," that ubiquitous Peas hit that became one of the most popular and most reviled hits in recent memory. (Besides being labeled the "worst song ever" by plenty of critics, "My Humps" has the distinction of hymning "humps," "bumps" and "lumps" while describing a woman's curves yet somehow never mentions "rumps.")

For longtime observers of the Peas, "My Humps" seemed to crystallize how the group swapped its early cachet as a critical darling of the humanistic hip-hop scene for a run as a frothy, platinum-selling pop act perfect for the ring-tone era.

Will.i.am, sitting on the couch at his home in the Hollywood Hills, dismissed the naysayers.

"We are making the same kind of music we always made. Go back and listen to those early records," he said. "I don't know what people are talking about. Music changes, and now, what we do, it fits what people want to hear. But we didn't sell out or change."

Still, on much of the new album will.i.am seems to be searching for a bit more sophistication than "My Humps" has. He describes the overarching theme as a semi-autobiographical project detailing a relationship (and a relationship collapse) from his past.

"I look back and now I can see how it ended in a way I wished hadn't," he said.

But there's also "S.O.S.," a dramatic rap about the environment that the Peas debuted at the Live 8 concert.

The album has brass and soul flourishes too, which in spots recall the work of Earth, Wind and Fire and Stevie Wonder.

But there's also "The Donque Song," an ode to the female backside that goes again to the model of "My Humps." That song features Snop Dogg, but the album is otherwise fairly devoid of guest stars, a purposeful choice by will.i.am to avoid the now-clichéd practice of jammng as many big names as possible into the track listing.

"That was really important to me, working with melody and my singing, not just rapping, to try to create songs that last in your mind. I had people like Linda Arrie tell me, 'You sound good singing this, you can sing.' And I pushed myself to go to places that I never thought I could go vocally. I'm not Luther Vandross, you know, or Lionel Richie, but the execution of the idea is spot on."

RECENT CD RELEASE

Foo Fighters
"Echoes, Silence, Patience & Grace"
(Roswell/RCA)

"Echoes, Silence, Patience & Grace" shares much in common with the previous five Foo Fighters albums released by frontman Dave Grohl and Co. For one thing, it's very good. The man can write catchy foot-tapping rock songs all day long, tagging on anthemic choruses like afterthoughts.

But in a lot of ways this album is more complex and challenging than anything the band has done before. It's two discs of "In Your Honor," the 2005 double album that featured acoustic and electric discs, smashed together in an often pleasing fusion.

Sure, there are the rock songs that hit your soft spot like comfort food — "The Pretender" and "But, Honestly."

But the best pieces are the more introspective songs Grohl can surprise you with when you consider his punk and heavy metal roots. Grohl shows off his voice and his ability to write catchy hooks on these pieces.

The Foo Fighters put it all together on "Come Alive," a shape-changer that starts with a croon-along acoustic introduction and ends in head-banging bliss.

Grohl shows off on the acoustic guitar during lazy-afternoon reflections on "Strange Things Have Happened."

Then he tosses in an oddly pleasing acoustic instrumental interlude evocative of Timmy Regier's more reflective noodling before finishing with "Home," a strings-inflected song that serves as a melancholy good-bye.

Researchers analyze men's pickup lines

BY WILLIAM WEIR
The Hartford Courant

Even the most pickup lines — “You remind me of a parking ticket, because you’ve got FINE written all over you,” for instance — serve a purpose, according to a team of Scotland psychologists.

Researchers at the University of Edinburgh have conducted a study of opening lines uttered by would-be Casanovas, which appears in the psychology journal Personality and Individual Differences.

Why a study on pickup lines? More than just another opportunity for embarrassment in the pursuit of love, opening remarks at a bar reveal volumes about character and general fitness. And they reveal who the user is trying to attract.

Peter Caryl, one of the study's authors, figured this warranted a closer look.

Most people probably know that a bad pickup line will quickly end the conversation, he says, but “I don’t expect that most of them think they’re revealing anything about their genes or fitness by speaking to someone new in a bar.”

Pickup lines have long been a staple of pop culture, often mined for comedy. VH1 has a whole program dedicated to the craft with the reality show “The Pickup Artist,” in which a fellow named Mystery (the self-proclaimed world’s greatest pickup artist) coaches down-on-luck schlubos on meeting women.

But Caryl and his team in Edinburgh have the pickup line down to a science, literally. For the study, 176 females completed a survey to determine their personality type. They were then asked to rate the effectiveness of 40 vignettes, each one describing a scenario of a man trying to strike up a conversation with a woman.

Though there was plenty of overlap among the groups, extroverted women tended to prefer funny opening lines, non-conformist women resisted displays of wealth and appeals to their sense of culture. Chivalry appealed widely. A scenario in which a potential suitor chides drunken louts who cut in line won the hearts of female subjects in all personality categories.

An earlier study conducted by the researchers ranked the overall effectiveness of the same 40 vignettes, some written by the researchers and others culled from TV, movies and Web sites. Canned jokes and compliments did poorly, while remarks that reflected the specific situation or surroundings did best. Offering thoughts on a painting at a museum worked (though it helps to know something about art), as did asking for help in picking out a watch for a friend.

Opening lines with sexual innuendo — “What has 140 teeth and can hold back the Incredible Hulk? My fly,” for example — ranked toward the bottom of the list. But that doesn’t stop guys from using them. Caryl theorizes that these lines are the users’ way of zeroing in on more promiscuous women. If she’s still talking to you after your Incredible Hulk joke (which ranked 36 out of 40), it’s a better chance that she’s less faithful to her current partner and more likely to be up for a one-night stand.

Generally, the 60 males surveyed did well predicting which remarks would work best but overestimated the effectiveness of the risqué lines.

Social networking proves alienating for some

BY MONICA HESSE
The Washington Post

Jason Calacanis wishes he could be your Facebook friend, but he just can't. The Internet entrepreneur lives networked: the New Yorker magazine once wrote a profile of him called “The Connector.” When people want to get from point A to point B, he’s a and a half. But Calacanis is now has several thousand friends, with more requests “streaming in daily. It’s head, thro. So on his blog this summer, Calacanis, 37, declared a Facebook moratorium. In the future he’ll outsource his friend management to an intern.

While Calacanis may have burned out early, he predicts he won’t be alone: “Everyone’s going to face a level of this, too.”

And then ... chaos? Isolation? Abject misery? When we reach that point where a utility that is supposed to bring us closer to our friends actually makes us hate our friends — and the death grip that managing them has on our time — where will we go from there? “Everyone senses that social networking is really important,” says Duncan Watts, a Columbia University sociology professor and author of “Six Degrees: The Science of a Connected Age.” “But the big question has been: How do you convert networking into a Web site? So far it’s been done in an ad-hoc, slapdash sort of way.”

The problem, according to Watts’

Despite Newsweek’s assertion that Facebook “has already changed the way millions of us connect,” Watts says such sites are failing us because they do not do the thing that social networks are designed to do, namely, network. His web-savvy students spend their Facebook time keeping up with the infinitesimal details of their acquaintances’ lives through the egomaniacally titled NewFeeds. Call it staking, procrastinating or friend collecting. It doesn’t build real connections.

A history lesson: “Social network” is not a Facebook term or even — remember these? — a Friendster or Xanga one. Sociologist J.A. Barnes coined the phrase in 1954 to explain the friend-of-a-friend-of-a-friend connections that cut across traditional groupings of family or ethnic groups. These pathways have historically been the way people get jobs, find apartments, meet spouses and generally navigate the world. They are studied by the 1,200 members of International Network for Social Network Analysis (INSNA), who presumably, have great jobs and fabulous apartments. (Craigslist, of course, has taken over some of the traditional network’s roles, though not all.)

The bigger problem with Facebook et al., says Barry Wellman, a University of Toronto sociologist and founder of INSNA, is that current sites “assume that everyone in your life is on one happy network.” On MySpace, your work colleagues are given the same info as your Halo buddies. That’s not how life works, and pretending it does dilutes the meaning of our more powerful connections.

Part of the problem is a numbers game. Oft-cited anthropological research puts the maximum effective group size at 150, known as the Dunbar number.

Some groups — religious congregations, book clubs — splinter off when their numbers get too high for members to bond. Facebook does not. Facebook allows its users to spread their friend-network too. Do you want a lot of toasts? Or do you want a lot of butter on normal-size bread?
