Police payday blues

After getting biweekly checks since April, some want return to monthly pay period

Some of the newer police officers in Twin Falls are having trouble making ends meet since the city in April changed how often it pays employees, one sergeant often it pays employees, one sergéant said.

Some police supervisors worry the new payment schedule could impact retention and recruitment on the force. The city now issues paychecks blweek-ly, rather than once a month. For some of the 21 officers who have less than three years on the job, that means some months they bring home less money. With the blweekly plan, lower-ranking officers are paid as much, as $200 less than under the old plan, said Twin Falls Folice Staff $g_1, tohn Wilson. "We would like to see if anything can be done to help Twin Falls city police officers," Wilson said. Many of the younger officers are in single-income families, and they want to be paid once a month, just as in the past.

Fire Department.

"We are currently working with the fire department to address some of these issues," said Twin Falls Personnel Administrator Susan Harris.

We are currency working wan use and epartment to address some of these issues,* said Twin Falls Personnel Administrator Susan Harris.

Plans for the pay change were announced last November, and Implemented in April when officials explained the change to expulyores.

The growing complexity of our systems and compliance with various payroll requirements has led to the decision of moving to a biweekly pay period (every two weeks). Teads a Nov. 22, 2006, e-mail sent to city employees.

Elected city leaders did not vote on the change, Twin Falls City Manager Tom Courtney said.

"We were not in compliance with state labor law," Courtney said. "We have an obligation to comply. "We took steps to bring ourselves into compliance."

Harris agreed. "We made the change because of our interpretation of idaho code. When we read it we felt like we were not in compliance."

Courtney said state law mandates the city pay all wages that are due within 15 days of the end of pay period.

Some state officials, however, have dif-ferent interpretations of the law. Idaho law states that employers must pay employees at least once every calen-dar month, said Idaho Department of Labor Spokesman Bob Fiek. And city governments may oblige to conform to state labor law, Fick said. They can conform to state law, but they're not subject to state law, but they're not subject to state law, but they fre not subject to state law, but they from the state law, but she said.

said.
Police don't want to create a controver-sial situation for the city. Wilson said.
"We want to give young officers every reason to stay in Twin Falls," he said. "We see the monthly pay plan as a benefit."

Police: Boise woman pointed gun at officers before being shot

BOISE (AP) — A 30-year-old mother of three who led police on a high-speed chase was shot and killed by officers after she pointed a gun at them, and possibly fred a shot, authorities said Sunday.

Sarah Marie Stanfield, of Boise, died early Saturday after being shot by two deptutes following the car chase that began in southwest Ada County and ended about 45 minutes later seven miles from the Oregon border on the Internate 84. Stanfield was hit by eight builets, and died of multiple gunshot wounds to the chest, according to the Ada County coroner's report.

Stanfield visited her parents for the first time in about a year just three hours before she was shot, her parents told the idaho Statesman.

"She was sad that she hadn't seen her kids," Kathy Stanfleid, Sanh's mother, told the newspaper. "She mostly asked about the children. She kept saying. Tell the children! I owe them." Sarah Stanfleid has two girls, 11 and 7, and one boy, 5. They are being raised by their father and grandparents, one in Bolsand two in Sait Lake City.

Hold your water, or pay through the nose

I you're a town-dweller, when was the last time your monthly water bill went up 34 percent? That will happen starting in December in Castleford, southern Idaho's capital of high argenic in the drinking water. But something similar could soon take place in Castleford's much larger neighbor to east, Twin Falls. Finite water supplies combined with high levels of arsenic—and that describes Twin Falls as well as Castleford—are a recipe for stick-er-shock, since arsenic-takes.

In Castleford's case, the current cause of higher rates is an EPA requirement that the city hire a Class 3 water operator, as well as a backup operator. They II work on the town's $1.6 million water system and arsenic treatment plant, which was secured after years of lobbying federal and state agencies for emails.

grants.

Stateford is a textbook example of a municipality with limited alternatives. Because of uncertain water supplies and arsenic treatment requirements, there's simply no margin for error.

simply no margin for error.

To their credit, Castleforders have accepted that fact for a long time. Two years ago, a town of fewer than 300 residents approved a $106,000 revenue-only bond issue.

The same mentallty doesn't exist in Twin Falls, which uses about twice as much water per capita as the national average.

The same mentality doesn't exist in Twin Falls, which uses about twice as much water per capita as the national average.

Drive through any residential neighborhood during the summertime, and you'll see sprinklers running full tik — many in obvious violation of the city's alternate-day sprinkling ordinance.

Water rates in Twin Falls rose 7.5 percent last year and will increase 10 percent in the coming year. Although the city's three-year-old lawn-water restrictions and voluntary conservation efforts have slowed consumption, water use — 5 billion gallons a year—15 still high even by the standards of thirsty idaho, which has the second-highest per capita rate in the nation.

A study by J-U-B Engineers two years ago estimated that unless new drinking water supplies are secured, the city will run short by 2010.

Production from Twin Falls' four wells on the north side of the Snake River near Blue Lakes Country Club and from its four wells on Washington Street South is decilining.

According to the J-U-B study, the city will experience a 3.5 million-gallon shortfall within three years. By 2015, the deficit will be 73.8 million gallons.

The City of Twin Falls is likely to adopt a strategy that combines drilling new wells and building new treatment plants for surface water from the Snake River and other sources.

But the sun is setting on the era of cheap, plentiful municipal water all across the Magic Valley.

We gen conserve what we have and make smart decisions about how we use it in the future, or we can continue to squander water as if we lived in Seattle. Either way, we'll pay more. Question is whether we'll pay a lor more.

This letter is directed at one section of Mr. Lunab proposal for increasing teachers' salaries. The idea of teachers trading in their due-process rights for higher pay is one of the worst moves I have seen come from a state superintendent of education in a long time.

To offer poorly paid Idaho teachers more money if they would just give up their only security is really a cheap show and one that is conceivably institling.

Yes, Idaho teachers would like to earn more, but most teachers I know did not go into it for the money. Some say that this proposal would give school districts the tools to get rid of their ineffective teachers, I say that teachers need this protection for freedom in the classroom, freedom in the classroom, freedom from unhealthy teaching, and learning environments. A teacher who is making more money but who is under pressure to keep his or her job is not nocessarily a better teacher. Mr. Luna is wrong on this one.

Avoid These Frightening Investment Moves nce again, it's Hallóween. If you're an adult, you're probably more amused than frightened by the varlety of ghouls, ghosts and goblins you'll see running around this week. However, although Halloween itself may not be particularly ng, you can find some things in life that are truly scary—such as making bad

Here are a few of these alarming errors to avoid:

- Investing too little in your 401(k) If you have a 401(k) or similar employer-sponsored plan, you owe it to yourself to take full advantage of it. Your contributions are generally made with pre-tax dollars, so the more you put in each year, the lower your taxable income, Plus, your earnings have the potential to grow on a tax-deferred basis. Furthermore, you may have a dozen or more investment options within your 401(k), so you can spread your dollars around in a way that reflects your risk tolerance and retirement goals. At the very least, contribute enough to earn your employer's match, if one is offered. And try to increase your annual contributions every time your salary goes up.
- ignoring your iRA Even if you have a 401(k), you can still open an IRA. Many pe ignormg your IKA - Even II you have a 401(K), you can still open an IKA. Many people do this — but then forget about It. For 2007, you can put $4,000 fint on IRA, or $5,000 If you're $0 or older. A traditional IRA offers the potential for tax-free earnings, while Robt IRA can grow tax-free, provided you've had your account for at least five years and you don't take withdrawals until you are at least 59%. And you can fund an IRA with virtually any investment you choose.
- Investing too conservatively Many investors are so uncomfortable with the volatility of the stock market that they put much of their money in more "conservative" investments, such as Treasury bills, corporate bonds and certificates of deposit. It's true that these types of securities will, in general, offer more preservation of principal than stocks, but they will not provide much growth potential. So, if you've loaded up on these fixed-income vehicles, you could lose purchasing jower, over time. Over the long term, only stocks have historically outpaced the rate of inflation, the both of the provided provided in the provided provid although past performance is not an indication of future results. Consequently, if you are saving and investing for retirement, you will certainly need an appropriate amount of stocks in your portfolio.
- Chasing "hot" stocks If you follow a tip on a "hot" stock, you could get burned. Why? For one thing, by the time you buy the stock, it may already be cooling down. Even more importantly, it simply may not be appropriate for your individual risk tolerance and long-term goals.
- "Timing" the market if you could always "buy low and sell high," you'd unquestionably make a fortune as an investor. Unfortunately, no one can really predict when market highs and lows will occur—and you can rack up a lot of expenses buying and selling your investments in a vain attempt to "time" the market. You're much better off by buying quality investments and holding them for the long term, or at least until your needs change.

There's no trick to evolding all these investment mistakes—and if you do, you may just find your investment statement is not so spooky to read.

Red Sox breeze to World Series title, beating Rockies 4-3

DENVER — There's a new monster in baseball, and this one's in Boston, too. Overwhelming in every way, the Red Sox swept to their second tide in four years Sunday night. Jon Lester, Mike Lowell & Co. left little room for drama with a 4-3 win over the Colorado Rockies in Game 4.

Then again, no NL team could have blocked Boston this October.

This was hardly a repeat from 2004, when the Red Sax ended their 86-year championship drought by bearing St. Louis. Boston is a major league builty these days, playing in rarefled air before crowds who demand to win.

"This team's got a lot of heart," Red Sox captain Jason Varitek said. "We worked really hard. We just beat a very, very good team, an excellent team. We had to do the little things." At this rate, New England fans might get spolled. Munager Terry Francona's team

A slow start and a short week couldn't stop Peyton Manning and the Indianapolis Colts from Manning threw for 254 yards and two touch-downs and broke Johnny Unitas' team record for career scoring passes as the Colts dominated the second half against Carolina (4-3). Joseph Addai rushed for 100 yards and two touchdowns and caught a TD pass from Manning, who was outplayed early by 43-year-old Vinny Testaverde. But when Testaverde was lost at halfitme with an ankle injury, the defense shut down David Carr the rest of the way.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"We can make majors and offi-cers every year, but not scholars; kings can invest knights and barons, as Sigismund the emper-or confessed."

- Robert Burton

South opens one diamond rather than one no-trump be-cause of his playability in the red suits. He rebids two hearts over his partner's two-club response. When North rebids his clubs, South stops off in three no-trump. Note, since two clubs shows 10 plus (North is entitled to up-value his seven-card suit) and South's reverse shows extra values, the auction is traditionally played as game-forcing thereafter. A re-verse after a one-level response is forcing for one round, but not to Using fourth-highest leads, West's opening lead of the spade three implies a four-card suit west's opening lead of the spade three implies a four-card suit only, since South can see the spade two, it would be foolish for declarer to duck the first trick, which would risk a shift to hearts. So South wins his spade ace and must now try to bring the club suit in if he can. The right way to do this is to run the club jack at once, keeping communications intact with the dummy if the finesse for the queen loses. Playing the A-K of clubs, hoping to drop the queen, will cost the contract, since there will be no way to reach dummy's established club suit. As it is, East takes his club queen and can cash three spade tricks for his side, but declarer has the rest.

This is another example of the importance of giving up a trick

This is another example of the importance of giving up a trick early, rather than late. By giving up the first club trick, you retain an entry to dummy's six subsequent winners.

ANSWER: Leading declarer's ANSWER: Leading declarer's first-bid suit after an auction of this sort is often right. Dummy rates to be short in hearts, declarer has not repeated his suit, and your own holding in hearts suggests that this will be the right suit to attack if partner has any of the missing top three honors.

Get those skeletons out of your closet

-Where to bury your old clothes -

s your bedroom closet so crowded that you can't choose a shirt without pulling dozens of hangers of the barf leves shoes taken over the spare bedroom? Do you healtate to hang up a guest's coat because your hall close is already stuffed? It's time to take control. Get rid of everything that doesn't fit right and make you happy.

"You're going to part with the past and set yourself up for a fresh start," said Llyah Babayan, owner of Ooh La La!, a consign-ment shop in Twin Falls. Babayan also does ment shop in Twin Falls. Babayan also do: closet cleanIng, helping clients choose what to keep and what should go out the door. "We have to be objective when it comes to our closets." Her favorite tip? Turn all the hangers so they go over the har from back to front.

Babayan also recommends that clients refrain from trying on clothing when deciding whether to keep it.

"If you have to try something on, you probably haven't worn it in the recent time," she said.
So what should you do with it? Here's the undown on your four top opulous.

You love it, but it doesn't fit quite right

Have it tailored

Have it tailored

If an item doesn't fit properly, especially if it is too large, take it to a tailor. A good tailor can adjust that favorite dress that used to fit you like a glove, reminding you why you bought it in the first place.
Since local fees run from about $7 for hermming pants to about $50 for shortening a suit jacket, evaluate the value of the item you're considering having tailored.
"If you don't like it in the first place, it would almost be futile," said Carolyn Warner of Karalyn's Family Cleaners (163 Main St., Gooding: 934-5892). "If you had it fixed you wouldn't wear it."

A stain might be covered with an applique or other ornament. Straight tears can often be mended without the repair showing, but other tears must be evaluated case-by-case.

If you don't know a tailor, ask your local dry cleaners. Often, they have tailors on staff or can recommend one.

It's new, vintage or with a high-end label

Consign it

Consign it

For Items that are new, almost new or have vintage value, consider a consignment shop. The shop will try to resell your item and — if it success—pay you a percentage. At Ooh La Lai, the shop keeps 60 percent, so you might not get much formal dress could net you a pretty penny. Ooh La Lai (1341 Filer Ave. E., Twin Falls; 733-3331) resells only new or nearly new items, but other shops may specialize in vintage clothing and accessories or high-and labels.

Vintage Point (1952 Addison Ave. E., Twin Falls; 734-5500) buys items outright that are from the 1970s and older, for prices from $5 to $50. Call ahead if you have multiple items.

It's used, but in good shape, and you have spare time

Sell it yourself

Sell it yourself

Especially in spring and summer, garage sales are a popular way to unload clothing you no longer want. Sell other household items at the same time, and join with neighbors for a community sale that will draw extra shoppers.

This time of year, try eBay.com or other Internet auction sites. Many books are available to teach you the best selling techniques, and eBay has tutorials for new sellers. One trick? Use the sites "Search closed auctions" feature to find out how much buyers are willing to pay.

It shows you what that particular item has sold for for the last two or three months," said Bob Garner of Jerome, who sells mostly antiques, but some clothing, on eBay. "That gives you a good idea." Garner, who has been on eBay for a year but previously worked for auctioneers, said he rarely losses money on the things he sells. "When I do lose, I don't lose a lot," he said. "It never ceases to armaze me what people will buy."

It's used, and you want to help a charity (or have a party)

Give it away

Thrift stores, like Idaho Youth Ranch (various loca-tions, 732-0292) or Desertt Industries (722 Cheney Drive, Twin Falls; 734-9412) resell donated items to ben-Drive, Twin Falls; 734-9412) resell donated items to ben-felt charitable causes.

"We'd like them in the best shape that we can get them, of course," said Wayne Tongo, Deseret Industries store manager. "We use anything that's donated." Each store has different donation policies and proce-dures, so call ahead to find out which cause the items will support and what condition the store will accept them in. Most charitable stores offer donors receipts for tax pur-

Most charitable stores once unions receipe to the process.

Or perhaps you'd prefer to help a specific group of people. Refugees often need clothing, as they flee their countries with few possessions. Search the Internet for a charity that donates to refugees from whichever country you'd like to help, or call the College of Southern Idaho Refugee Service Center at 738-2166 or (800) 680-0274.

If you have formal dresses, you no longer want, consider Cinderella House, which donates the dresses to underprivilegeed did to wear to want consuder condensations, which considers the dresses to underprivileged girls to wear to prom. Take dresses to the Twin Falls Senior Citizen Center and say they re for Cinderella House, or call Rock Creek Community Church at 734-5268. Not as heartwarming, but perhaps more fun are clothes-trading parties with your friends. While this may not be the best way to rim down your closet, your best friend may have always admired that sweater you no longer wear. And the orphaned items no one wants can go to the thrift store the next day.

A short afternoon nap might give your heart a rest

The next time the boss finds you caning back in your chair, feet up, yes shut, tell her that you're napping or medical purposes.

Science won't definitively back you up yet, but the evidence is mounting that a short afternoon nap, for an otherwise well-restoch, chealthy person, is good for the heart. "I love to nap," says br. Robert Downey III, chief of sleep medicine at Loma Linda University American countrie Medicai Center in Southern California. "I recommend napping."

Bicycles and bones

Cyclists see bone density suffer

Cycling is terrific exercise, hitting the cardiovascular system and major muscle groups simultaneously — but it may not be the best thing for building strong bones. Compared with male runners male cyclists appear more likely to have lower-than-normal bone density.

have lower-than-normal bone density.
"You would think that cyclists are very healthy, because they spend all those hours training." says Pam Hinton, associate professor of nutritional sciences at the University of Missouri-Columbia and co-author of a study accepted for publication in the journal Metabolism. In other aspects they are — cardiovascular health and body composition. But in this one aspect, they're not doing so well."

In general, men may not be as much at risk for low bone density as women — especial-ly postmenopausal women. ly postmenopausal women.
But Hinton says they should be concerned, because osteopenia can lead to osteo-porosis and injuries such as porosis and managements.

Bone cells are surrounded by fluid that, when hit with an impact force, moves back and forth. That action signals to the bone cells to add more mass.
"You lose bone mass quickly if rou lose bone mass quickly if there isn't some kind of mechanical loading on the bone, Hinton says. That, she adds, best comes from movement involving impact — running, playing basketball or soccer, or doing plyometric exercises such — jumning

"When you're young, you should be maximizing your bone density," she says, 'and as you get older, exercise slows the rate of loss. So it's really important, no matter where you are in your life, to be doing some kind of bone-loading exercise."

Dr. Rent Allen and Dr. Shannon Widmier, of Pheasant Cove Dental, would like to adops sons why we are not contracting dentispreferred providers, with any of the many dental insurance programs.

Why do insurance companies promote PPOs?

The primary reasons are to sell their insurance and to limit their liabilities, the amount they have to pay on claims. Their interest is not better dental care, but rather maximizing profit, their own.

Yes. Dentists contracting with insurance companies daily discriminate against patients not on PPOs by offering discounts of 5% to 20% or more to PPO patients while requiring non-insured patients to pay the full fee. We believe that fees should be the same for all patients.
